TO THE RIGHT HONORABLE, EDWARD LORD DENNIE, BARON OF WALTHAM, &c.

RIght Honourable: There is no one Doctrine, reuealed in the Word of God, or diſpenſed by the Prophets and Apoſtles, of greater vſe and conſequence in the life of man, then is that, which preſcribeth a Forme of releeuing and rectifying the Conſcience.

The benefit, which from hence iſſueth vnto the Church of God, is vnſpeakable. For firſt, it serueth to diſcouer the cure of the dangerouſeſt ſore that can be, the wound of the Spirit. Which how great a croſſe it is, the Wiſe man reporteth out of a true experience, when he ſaith, that the Spirit of a man will ſuſtaine his infirmitie, but a wounded Spirit who can beare it? And his meaning is, that no outward griefe, can fall into the nature of man, which will not be with patience indured, to the vtmoſt, ſo long as the minde is not troubled, or diſmaied. But when once the Spirit is touched, and the heart, (which being well apaied, is the very fountaine of peace to the whole man,) ſmitten with feare of the wrath of God for ſinne; the griefe is ſo great, the burden ſo intollerable, that it will not by any outward meanes, be eaſed or aſſwaged.

Prou. 18.14.

Secondly, it giueth for all particular Caſes, ſpeciall and ſound direction; whether man bee to talke with God, in the immediate performance of the duties of his Seruice; or to conuerſe with man, according to the ſtate and condition of his life, in the Familie, Church, or Common-wealth. The want of which direction, of what ſore it is, to turne the actions of men, which are good in themſelues, to ſinnes in regard of the agents, S. Paul affirmeth in that generall Concluſion, Whatſoeuer is not of faith, is ſinne. Wherein he would teach vs, that whatſoeuer is done, or vndertaken by men in this life, whether it concerne the knowledge and worſhip of God, or any particular dutie to be performed, by vertue of their Callings, for the common good; whereof they haue not ſufficient warrant, and aſſurance in Conſcience, grounded vpon the Word, that it is to be done, or not to be done; to them it is a ſinne.

Rom. 14.23

Thirdly, it is of all other Doctrines, (beeing rightly vſed) the moſt comfortable. For it is not founded in the opinions, and variable conceits of men, neither doth it conſiſt, of concluſions and Poſitions, which are onely probable and coniecturall: (for the Conſcience of the doubting or diſtreſſed partie, can not be eſtabliſhed and rectified by them:) but it reſteth vpon moſt ſufficient and certaine Grounds, collected and drawen out of the very Word of God, which, as it is mightie in operation, pearcing the heart, and diſcerning the thoughts and intents thereof, ſo is it alone auaileable and effectuall to pacifie the mind, and to giue full ſatisfaction to the Conſcience.

Heb. 4.12.

And as the benefite is great; ſo the want of this Doctrine, together with the true maner of applying the ſame, is, and hath bene the cauſe, of many and great inconueniences. For euen of thoſe that feare God, and haue receiued to beleeue, there be many, who in the time of their diſtreſſes, when they haue conſidered the waight and deſert of their ſinnes, and withall apprehended the wrath of God, due vnto them, haue bene brought vnto hard exigents, mourning, and wailing, and crying out, as if God had forſaken them, vntill they haue beene reſcued by the Spirit of Chriſt, in the meditation of the word, and promiſe of God. But thoſe eſpecially, who haue not beene inſtructed in the knowledge of the truth, nor acquainted with the courſe of Gods dealing, with his diſtreſſed children, by reaſon of ignorance and blindnes in matters of Religion and pietie, when the Lord hath let looſe the cord of their Conſciences, & ſet before their eyes, both the number of their ſinnes committed, and the iuſt anger of God purchaſed thereby, what haue they done? ſurely deſpairing of the mercie of God, and their owne ſaluation, they haue either growne to phrenſie, and madnes, or elſe ſorted vnto themſelues fearefull ends ſome by hanging, ſome by drowning, others by embruing their hands in their owne blood. And if not in regard of griefe and trouble of mind, yet for want of better reſolution in particular caſes, within the compaſſe of their generall or perſonall callings, (though otherwiſe, men indued with ſome meaſure of knowledge and obedience,) they haue either abuſed, or elſe quite relinquiſhed and forſaken their callings, and thereby become ſcandalous, and offenſiue vnto others.

Pſal 6.6. and 22.1,2. Pſal. 119.49. 50,

Now then, as by theſe and ſundry other Inſtances of proofe, the matter it ſelfe appeares to be of great waight and importance, ſo it is moſt meete, that the beſt and fitteſt courſe ſhould be taken, in the teaching and inforcing of the ſame. In which regard wee haue iuſt cauſe, to challenge the Popiſh Church, who in their Caſe-writings haue erred, both in the ſubſtance and circum ſtances of this Doctrine, as ſhall appeare in the ſequele.

Firſt, becauſe the dutie of releeuing the Conſcience, is by them commended to the ſacrificing Prieſt, which though according to their owne Canons[b] he ſhould be a man of knowledge, and free from imputation of wickedneſſe, yet oft times it fals out that he is either vnlearned, or els wicked and lewd of conuerſation, and conſequently vnfit for ſuch a purpoſe.

Secondly, they teach that their Prieſts appointed to be comforters and releeuers of the diſtreſſed, are made by Chriſt himſelfe[c] Iudges of the Caſes of conſcience, hauing in their owne handes a iudicarie power and authoritie, truly and properly to bind or to looſe, to remit or to retaine ſinnes, to open or to ſhut the kingdome of heauen. Whereas the Scripture vttereth a contrarie voyce, that Chriſt onely hath the keyes of Dauid, which properly and truly openeth, and no man ſhutteth, and properly and truly ſhutteth, and no man openeth. And the Miniſters of God are not called to be abſolute Iudges of the Conſcience, but onely Meſſengers and Embaſſadours of reconciliation, whereupon it followeth, that they cannot be[d] the authors and giuers of remiſſion of ſinnes, but onely the Miniſters and Diſpenſers of the ſame.

Thirdly, the Papiſts in their writings haue ſcattered here and there ſundrie falſe and erronious grounds of Doctrine, much preiudiciall to the direction or reſolution of the Conſcience in time of neede, as namely, I. That a man in the courſe of his life, may build himſelfe vpon the faith of his teachers, and for his ſaluation, reſt contented with an implicite and vn-expreſſed faith. Which doctrine, as it is an onely meane, to keepe men in perpetuall blindneſſe and ignorance, ſo it ſerueth to no other purpoſe in the time of Temptation, but to plunge the heart of man into the pit of deſpaire, it beeing vncapable of comfort, for want of particular knowledge and vnderſtanding of the word and promiſe of God. II. That euery man ought to ſtand in feare and doubt of the pardon of his ſinnes, and that no man can be aſſured by the certentie of faith, either of the preſent fauour of God, or of his owne ſaluation. True it is, that in reſpect of our owne vnworthineſſe and indiſpoſition, we haue iuſt cauſe, not onely to doubt and feare, but to deſpaire and bee confounded before the iudgement ſeat of God. Yet that a man ſhould not be certainely reſolued by faith of the mercie of God, in and for the merit of Chriſt, is a comfortleſſe doctrine to a diſtreſſed ſoule, and contrarie vnto the ſauing[e] word of the Goſpell, which teacheth, that certentie floweth from the nature of faith, and not doubting. III. That euery man is bound in conſcience vpon paine of damnation, to make ſpeciall confeſſion of his mortall ſinnes, with all the particular circumſtances thereof once euery yeare to his Prieſt. This poſition and practiſe, beſides that it hath no warrant of ſacred writ, nor yet any ground of Orthodoxe antiquitie, for. 800. yeares. more or leſſe after Chriſt: it maketh notably to the diſturbing of the peace of Conſcience, in time of extremitie, conſidering that it is impoſſible, either to vnderſtand or remember all, many beeing hidden and vnknowne. And the mind beeing in this caſe informed, that forgiuenes dependeth vpon ſuch an enumeration, may thus be brought into doubt and diſtruſt, and will not be able to reſt by faith in the ſole mercie of God, the onely ſoueraigne medicine of the ſoule. Againe, the griefe of the mind, doth not alwaies ariſe from all the ſinnes that a man hath committed, neither doth the Lord ſet before the ſinners eies, whatſoeuer euill hath beene done by him; but ſome one or more particulars. And theſe are they, that doe lie heauie vpon the heart; and to be eaſed of them, will be worke enough, though he doth not exhibite vnto the Confeſſour, a Catalogue of all the reſt. IV. That ſome ſinnes are veniall, becauſe they are onely beſides the Law of God, not againſt it, and becauſe,[f] they bind ouer the ſinner onely to temporall, and not to eternall puniſhments. This concluſion, firſt is falſe; For though it be granted, that ſome offences are greater, ſome leſſer, ſome in a higher degree, others in a lower: Againe, that ſinnes in regard of the euent, beeing repented of, or in reſpect of the perſon ſinning, beeing in Chriſt, and therefore accounted iuſt, are pardonable, becauſe they are not imputed to condemnation; yet there is no ſinne of what degree ſoeuer, which is not ſimply, and of it ſelfe mortall, whether we reſpect the nature of the ſinne, or the meaſure and proportion of diuine iuſtice. For in nature it is an anomie, that is to ſay, an aberration from the perfect rule of righteouſneſſe, and therefore is ſubiect to the curſe, both of temporarie and eternall death. It is an offence againſt the higheſt Maieſtie, and conſequently, man ſtandeth by it ingaged to euerlaſting torment. Secondly, it is a weake and inſufficient ground of reſolution, to a troubled conſcience. For whereas true and ſauing ioy is the daughter of ſorrow, & the heart of man cannot be lifted vp, in aſſurance of Gods fauour, to the apprehenſion and conceipt of heauenly comforts, vnleſſe it bee firſt abaſed, and by true humiliation, brought to nothing in it ſelfe; The remembrance of this, that the offence committed is veniall, may in ſome caſes too much inlarge the heart, and giue occaſion to preſume, when haply there will be a reaſon to the contrarie. And if not that, yet in caſe of falling by infirmitie after grace receiued, the minde beeing foreſtalled with this erronious conceipt, that the ſinne is leſſe then it is indeed, becauſe veniall, may in the iſſue be leſſe quieted, and more perplexed. V. That a man may ſatisfie the iuſtice of God, for the temporall puniſhment of his ſinnes committed. To omit the vntruth of this poſition; How it maketh to the eaſing of the heart, or the aſſwaging of the griefe of minde in temptation, I appeale to common experience. For when a man, beeing aſſured of the pardon of his ſinnes, ſhall yet conſider, that there is ſomething more behind to be done on his part, how can hee in probability, rely himſelfe wholly vpon Chriſts ſatisfaction? How can he reape vnto himſelfe from thence any aſſurance of reconciliation to God, whom he formerly offended? If we may and muſt doe ſomething in our owne perſons,whereby to appeaſe the wrath of God, why hath our Sauiour taught vs for our hearts reliefe, wholly and onely to make the plea of pardon for our ſinnes? True it is indeede, that Popiſh Confeſſours doe teach their penitents,when they feele the wrath of God vpon them for ſinne, to ſtoppe the mouth of Conſcience,by performance of a formall humiliation,and repentance,yea to offer vnto God ſome ceremoniall duties in way of ſatisfaction. But when ſorrow ſeazeth vpon the ſoule, and the man fals into temptation,then it will appeare that theſe directions were not currant; for notwithſtanding them,he may want ſound comfort in Gods mercie, and runne into deſpaire without recouerie. And for this cauſe, vpon experience it hath beene prooued, that euen Papiſts themſelues in the houre of death,haue beene content to renounce their owne workes, yea the whole bodie of humane ſatisfactions,and to cleaue onely to the mercie of God in Chriſt for their ſaluation.

By theſe inſtances,and many more that might be alleadged to this purpoſe,it is apparant, vpon how weake and vnſtable grounds the Caſe-diuinitie of the Popiſh Church ſtandeth, and how indirect a courſe they take,for the reſolution and direction of the troubled Conſcience.

Now by the benefit and abuſe of this Doctrine, we ſee how neceſſary it is, that in Churches which profeſſe Chriſtian religion,it ſhould be more taught,and further inlarged then it is. And to this purpoſe it were to be wiſhed,that men of knowledge in the Miniſterie, that haue by the grace of God attained vnto the Tongue of the learned,would imploy their paines this way:not onely in ſearching into the depth of ſuch points as ſtand in bare ſpeculation, but in annexing thereunto the grounds and concluſions of practiſe,whereby they might both informe the iudgement, and rectifie the conſcience of the hearers. By this meanes it would come to paſſe, that the poore diſtreſſed ſoule might be releeued,pietie and deuotion more practiſed, the kingdome of Sinne, Satan,and Antichriſt weakened and impayred,and the contrarie kingdome of Chriſt Ieſus more and more eſtabliſhed.

What the Author and Contriuer of the Diſcourſe enſuing hath done in this behalfe, it is euident by the whole courſe of his writings,that he hath left behind him:all which,as they do openly ſhew vnto the world,how great a meaſure of knowledge and vnderſtanding,with other endowments both of nature and grace,the Lord had inriched him withall;ſo they doe carrie with them the ſweet ſauour of pietie and ſanctification, wherewith hee approoued his heart vnto God, and his life vnto men. Wherein alſo vpon occaſion,he hath propounded,and explained ſundrie notable rules of direction and reſolution of the Conſcience,as will appeare to the view of the learned and well aduiſed Reader.

To let paſſe all the reſt:this preſent Treatiſe giueth very ſufficient teſtimonie of his knowledge and dexteritie in that kind; which could not be attained vnto, without great paines, much obſeruation,and long experience. A labour which commendeth it ſelfe to the Church of God in two reſpects principally. One,becauſe his grounds and principles are drawn either directly, or by iuſt conſequence out of the written Word,and ſo are of greater force, to conuince the conſcience,and to giue ſatisfaction to the mind,either doubting,or diſtreſſed. The other, for that it is deliuered with ſuch perſpicuitie, and diſpoſed in ſuch order and Methode, as fitteth beſt for the vnderſtanding and memorie of any,whoſoeuer ſhall peruſe it.

Now this whole Treatiſe of the Queſtions, I haue made bold to preſent vnto your Lordſhip, and to publiſh abroad vnder your protection. Firſt, becauſe God, who vouchſafeth ſpeciall fauour to them that honour him,hath adorned your eſtate with Honour, your perſon inwardly with many rich graces of the Spirit,and outwardly with the profeſſion and practiſe of true Religion;a thing directly confirmed by your vnfained loue of the truth,and continuall fauors to the Teachers of the ſame,the Miniſters and Diſpenſers of the Goſpell. Secondly, becauſe as the Author of theſe Caſes,was himſelfe in many reſpects bound vnto your Honour while he liued; ſo his wife and children for his ſake,haue receiued much kindneſſe at your hands,ſince his death; a manifeſt proofe of the truth and ſynceritie of your affection towards him in the Lord. And in the laſt place,it was my deſire,by ſetting them forth vnder your name,to giue ſome teſtimonie of duty to your Honour,preſuming that as you loued the Author, ſo you will be pleaſed to patronize the Worke,and fauourably to interpret,of the paines and good intention of the publiſher. And thus crauing pardon for my boldneſſe,I humbly take my leaue,and commend your Lordſhip to the grace and fauour of God in Chriſt. From Emanuell Colledge in Cambridge.

Your Hon. in all dutie to be commanded,

Tho. Pickering.

To the godly and vvel-affected Reader whoſoeuer.

I Doe now at the length offer vnto thy view (Chriſtian Reader) the whole Treatiſe of Caſe-diuinitie, ſo farre as the Author proceeded in the deliuerie thereof before his death. If thou haſt beene longer held in expectation thereof, then either thy ſelfe deſiredſt, or was meete, I muſt intreate thy fauourable interpretation of my forbearance, partly in regard of many priuate diſtractions, and ſundry occurrents wherewith I was detained from this duty, and partly alſo in reſpect of my deſire to publiſh it in ſuch ſort to thy contentment, that it might afterward require no further filing or forbiſhing by ſecondarie Corrections.

Touching the Treatiſe it ſelfe, I haue dealt as faithfully as I could, keeping cloſe to the Preachers owne words, without any materiall addition, detraction, or amplification. His Methode remaines the ſame in the bodie of the diſcourſe, not admitting the leaſt alteration. Only it was thought conuenient to diſtinguiſh it into bookes, according to the ſeuerall diſtinct parts, the bookes into chapters, the chapters that were moſt capable of diuiſions, into Sections, and my meaning therein was, to helpe the memorie of the Reader, and to auoid tediouſneſſe the daughter of long ſome diſcourſes.

Now if in the peruſing, thou either find any thing amiſſe, or thy ſelfe haply not fully ſatiſfied in particular, then remember what is the Lot of learned mens workes which are Scripta poſthuma (whereof theſe latter times haue yeelded many examples) to be left after a ſort, naked & imperfect, when the Authors themſelues are gone, who might haue brought them to perfection. Conſider againe, that in regard of the weight of this worthie Argument, it were much better, kindly and thankefully to accept and inioy theſe labours, howſoeuer imparted, then by their ſuppreſſing to be wholly depriued of ſuch a benefit. And withall reſt with me in hope, that as himſelfe hath firſt traced the way, and walked by the bankes of this maine Sea, ſo others vpon this occaſion, will be incouraged to attempt the like courſe, or at leaſt to enlarge this worke by addition of more particulars. Meane while, not doubting of thy Chriſtian acceptance of my paines for thy good, I commend them to thy loue, thy ſelfe vnto God and the word of his grace. Eman. Coll: Nouemb. 20. 1606.

THE FIRST BOOKE OF THE CASES OF CONSCIENCE, CONCERNING MAN ſimply conſidered in himſelſe, without relation to another.

The Preface declaring the Ground and Order of the Treatiſe following.

Iſaiah, 50. 4.

The Lord God hath giuen me a tongue of the learned, that I ſhould knowe to miniſter a word in due time, to him that is wearie.

IN that part of the Prophecie which goes before, the holy Ghoſt ſetteth downe and foretelleth the Calling of the Gentiles, which was to beginne at the death of Chriſt, and from thence to continue vnto this day, and ſo conſequently to the ende of the world. In the former verſes of this Chapter, there is mention made of the reiection of the Iewes; I meane not a generall, but a particular reiection, namely then, when they were in affliction in the daies of Iſaiah. Now in this, and ſo in all other Prophecies of the like kinde, which intreate of this point; Chriſt himſelfe is brought in, ſpeaking in his owne perſon; and the words of this Chapter from the beginning, to this preſent verſe, and the reſt that follow, are the wordes of Chriſt the Mediatour.

In the verſes going before, he diſputes the caſe of their reiection: and the ſumme of the whole diſputation is, that either hee, or they themſelues were the cauſes therof; but he was not the cauſe, and therefore they themſelues by their ſins. The reaſon, whereby hee proues that they themſelues were the cauſe, is framed in this ſort. You Iewes cannot bring any writing or bill of diuorce, to ſhew that I reiected you: therfore I appeale euen to your own conſciences, whether you haue not brought this iudgement vpon your ſelues, by your iniquities, verſ. 1. On the other ſide, the reaſon why God was not the cauſe is: becauſe hee for his part called them in great mercy and loue: but when he called they would not obey, verſ. 2.

Now in the end of the ſecond verſe is contained an anſwer to a ſecret reply, that ſome obſtinate Iewe might make, after this manner: God hath not now the like power in ſauing and deliuering vs, as he hath had in former times: therefore wee cannot hope or expect any deliuerance from him, and how then ſhall we doe in the meane while? To this the Lord himſelfe makes anſwer, v. 2, 3, 4. that his hand is not ſhortned, nor his power leſſened in regard of greater workes, much leſſe in reſpect of their deliuerance; and though the preſent affliction which they endured, was great and tedious, yet they were not to bee ouermuch diſmaied in themſelues, but rather to be comforted, becauſe God had giuen him the tongue of the learned, to miniſter a word in ſeaſon to the wearie and diſtreſſed, and conſequently, that he had power to eaſe and refreſh that their wearineſſe and affliction.

In this text then, there is ſet down one principall dutie of Chriſts propheticall office, by alluſion to the practiſes of the Prophets in the old Teſtament, eſpecially thoſe which belonged to the ſchooles of Elias and Elizeus, who are here tearmed, the learned. And out of the words thereof, one ſpeciall [illegible] of inſtruction may be gathered, [illegible] That there is a certaine knowledge or doctrine reuealed in the word of God, whereby the conſciences of the weake may be rectified and pacified: I gather it thus. It was one ſpeciall dutie of Chriſts propheticall office, to giue comfort to the conſciences of thoſe that were diſtreſſed, as the Prophet here recordeth. Now as Chriſt had this power to execute and performe ſuch a duty, ſo he hath committed the diſpenſation therof to the Miniſters of the Goſpell. For we may not thinke that Chriſt in his owne perſon, miniſtred and ſpake words of comfort to the wearie, in the time of the Prophets, becauſe he was not then exhibited in our nature, and yet he did then ſpeake, but how? in the perſons of the Prophets. So likewiſe, becauſe Chriſt now in the new Teſtament, ſpeakes not vnto the afflicted in his owne proper perſon, it remaineth therefore, that he performes this great worke in the Miniſtrie of Paſtours and Teachers vpon earth, to whom he hath giuen knowledge, and other gifts to this end and purpoſe. There muſt needs therefore be a certaine and infallible doctrine, propounded and taught in the

A Scriptures, whereby the conſciences of men diſtreſſed, may be quieted and releeued. And this doctrine is not attained vnto by extraordinarie reuelation, but muſt be drawne out of the written word of God.

The point therefore to bee handled, is, What this doctrine ſhould bee? It is not a matter eaſie and at hand, but full of labour and difficultie: yea very large, like vnto the maine ſea: I will onely (as it were) walke by the bankes of it, and propound the heads of doctrine, that thereby I may, at leaſt, occaſion others, to conſider and handle the ſame more at large.

That I may proceed in order: Firſt, I am to lay downe certaine Grounds or Preambles, B which may giue light and direction to the things that follow: and in the next place, I wil propound and anſwer the maine and principall queſtions of Conſcience.

CHAP. I.

Of the two firſt Grounds of Caſes, Confeſſion, and the degrees of Goodneſſe.

THE Grounds or Preambles are eſpecially foure. The firſt, touching confeſſion. The ſecond, touching the degrees of goodneſſe in things and actions. The third, touching the degrees of Sinne. The fourth and laſt, concerning the Subiection and power of conſcience. C Of theſe in order.

The firſt Ground is, That in the troubles of Conſcience, it is meete and conuenient, there ſhould alwaies bee vſed a priuate Confeſſion. For Iames ſaith, Iam. 5. 16. Confeſſe your faults one to another, & pray one for another, thereby ſignifying, t[illegible] Confeſſion in this caſe, is to bee vſed as a [illegible]g moſt requiſite. For in all reaſon, the Phyſitian muſt firſt knowe the diſeaſe, before hee can apply the remedie: and the griefe of the heart will not bee diſcerned, vnleſſe it bee maniſeſted by the confeſſion of the partie diſeaſed; and for this cauſe alſo in the griefe of conſcience, the ſcruple, that is, the thing that troubleth the conſcience, muſt be knowne.

D Neuertheleſſe, in priuate confeſſion, theſe caueats muſt be obſerued. Firſt, it muſt not bee vrged, as a thing ſimply or abſolutely neceſſary, without which there cã be no ſaluatiõ. Againe, it is not fit that confeſſion ſhould be of all ſinnes, but onely of the ſcruple it ſelfe, that is, of that or thoſe ſinnes alone, which doe trouble and moleſt the conſcience. Thirdly, though confeſſion may be made to any kinde of man, (Confeſſe one to another, ſaith Iames,) yet is it eſpecially to be made to the Prophets and Miniſters of the Goſpel. For they in likelihood, of all other men, in reſpect of their places and gifts, are the fitteſt and beſt able to inſtruct, correct, comfort, and enforme the weake and wounded conſcience. Laſtly, the perſon to whom it is made, muſt bee a man of truſt and fidelitie, able and willing to keepe ſecret things that are reuealed, yea to burie them (as it were) in the graue of obliuion, for Loue couereth a multitude of ſinnes.

Sect. 2.

The next Ground is touching the degrees of Goodneſſe in humane things and actions. Goodneſſe in things is two-fold; vncreated, and created. Vncreated, is God himſelfe, who neuer had beginning, and who is Goodneſſe it ſelfe, becauſe his nature is abſolutely and perfectly good, and becauſe he is the author and worker thereof, in all things created. Created goodneſſe, is that whereby the creature is made good; and it is nothing elſe, but the fruit of that goodneſſe, that is eſſentially in God. Now the degrees thereof are theſe. There is a generall or naturall Goodneſſe in creatures, and a more ſpeciall or morall Goodneſſe.

Generall Goodneſſe is that, whereby all creatures are accepted and approoued of God, by whom they were both created and ordained. Thus euery creature is good, partly by creation, and partly by ordination. By creation it is, that the ſubſtance of each creature, as of the Sunne, the Moone, the Earth, Water, Meate, Drinke, &c. is good, hauing the beeing thereof from God. Hence alſo the eſſentiall properties, quantities, qualities, motions, actions, & inclinations of the creatures, in themſelues conſidered, with all their euents, are good. By the ſame generall goodneſſe alſo, euen the Diuell himſelfe and his actions, as he is a ſubſtance, and as they are actions, hauing their beeing from God, are good. Things againe doe take vnto them the condition of Goodneſſe, not onely by creation, but alſo by Gods ordination, whereby they are directed and appointed, to ſome certain vſes and ends. Thus the euill Conſcience, Hell, and Death are good, becauſe they are ordained of God, for the execution of his iuſtice, howſoeuer in themſelues, and to vs they be euill.

Beſides this generall and naturall goodneſſe, there is alſo a ſpeciall or morall goodnes, properly ſo called: & it is that which is agreeable to the eternall and vnchangeable wiſedome of God, reuealed in the Morall Law, wherein it is commanded; and things as they are therein commanded to be done by God, are good morally. Now of actions morally good, there be two degrees: for they are either good in themſelues alone, or good both in themſelues, and in the doer. In themſelues alone ſome things be morally good: for example, when a wicked man giues an almes, it is a good worke onely in it ſelfe, but not good in the doer, becauſe it is not done in faith, and from a good conſcience: and ſo are all the vertues of the heathen, morally good in themſelues, but they are not good in heathen men; for in them they are but (a) beautifull ſinnes. The next degree of goodneſſe is, whereby things & actions are both good in themſelues, and in the doer alſo. Of this ſort were the praiers and almes of Cornelius good in themſelues, and in him alſo, becauſe he was a beleeuer. Act.10.3.4.

Now oppoſite to things and actions morally good or euill, are actions and things of a middle nature, commonly termed Indifferent, which in themſelues beeing neither good nor euill, may be done or not done without ſinne; In themſelues I ſay, for in their circumſtances they are, & may be made either euill or good. And here wee muſt remember to put a difference betweene conueniencie, and inconueniencie, which ariſeth from the nature of indifferent things. Conueniencie is, when a thing or action is ſo fitted to the circumſtances, and the circumſtances fitted to it, that thereby it becomes a thing Conuenient. On the other ſide, Inconueniencie is, when a thing or action is done in vnmeete circumſtances, which bring ſome hurt or loſſe to the outward man, or ſtand not with decencie: and therefore doe make it to be Inconuenient. And by this that hath beene ſaid, we may diſcerne when an action is good, euill, indifferent, conuenient, or inconuenient.

CHAP. II.

Of the nature and differences of ſinne.

THE third Ground, is touching the degrees or differences of Sinne. And here we muſt firſt of al ſearch, what is Sinne properly, and what is properly a Sinner.

Sinne in his proper nature (as Saint Iohn ſaith, 1. Ioh. 3.4.) is an anomie, that is, a want of conformitie to the Law of God. For the better vnderſtanding wherof, we muſt know, that there were in Adam before his fall, three things not to be ſeuered one from the other: the ſubſtance of his bodie and ſoule: the Faculties and Powers of his bodie and ſoule: & the Image of God conſiſting in a ſtraightnes, and conformitie of all the affections, and powers of man to Gods will. Now when Adam fals, and ſinnes againſt God, what is his ſinne? Not the want of the two former, (for they both remained,) but the very want, and abſence of the third thing, namely, of conformitie to Gods will. I make it plaine by this reſemblance; In a muſicall inſtrument, there is to bee conſidered, not onely the inſtrument it ſelfe, and the ſound of the inſtrument, but alſo the harmonie in the ſound. Now the contrarie to harmonie, or the diſorder in muſicke, is none of the two former, but the third, namely the diſcord, which is the want or abſence of harmonie, which wee call diſſarmonie. In the ſame manner, the ſinne of Adam, is not the abſence either of the ſubſtance, or of the faculties of the ſoule and the bodie, but the want of the third thing before named, and that is, conformity or correſpondencie to the will of God, in regard of obedidience. But ſome may ſay, the want of conformitie in the powers of the ſoule, is not ſinne properly: becauſe in ſinne there muſt bee not only an abſence of goodneſſe, but an habite or preſence of euill. I anſwer, that this very want of conformitie, is not onely the abſence of goodneſſe, but alſo the habite or preſence of euill. For as this want enters in, and is receiued into mans nature, it is properly a want or abſence of goodneſſe; againe, after it is receiued into the nature of man, it continues & abides in the powers and faculties thereof, and ſo it caries the name of an habite.

It may be ſaid againe, that luſt and concupiſcence, that is, Originall ſinne, drawes the heart away from the ſeruice of God, and entiſes it to euill. Now to entiſe or draw away, is an action, and this action cannot proceede of a meere priuation or want. Anſ. We muſt conſider Originall ſinne two waies: firſt ioyntly with the thing or ſubiect, in which it is; ſecondly, by it ſelfe in his own nature. If we conſider it with his ſubiect, it is an euil inclination or action: but if we conſider it ſimply in it own nature, it is no inclinatiō, or action, but a want. And the like conſideration is to bee had of actuall ſinne. For example: In murther there are two things: one is the action of moouing the body, and of holding vp the weapon, &c. which is no ſinne properly, if it be conſidered as an action: becauſe euery action comes from God, who is the firſt cauſe of all things and actions. Againe, in murther there is a ſecond thing, namely, killing or ſlaying of the man, which is the diſorder or aberration in the action, whereby it is diſpoſed to a wrong vſe and end: and thus the action is a ſinne, namely, in reſpect it wants conformitie to the wil of God. The nature then of the ſinne lies not in the action, but in the manner of doing the action: and ſinne properly is nothing formally ſubſiſting, or exiſting, (for then God ſhould be the author of it, in as much as he is the Creatour and ordainer of euery thing and action,) but it is an ataxie, or abſence of goodneſſe and vprightnes, in the thing that ſubſiſteth. Whereupon it is well and truly ſaid in Schooles, In ſin there is nothing poſitiue, but it is a want of that which ought to bee or ſubſiſt, partly in the nature of man, and partly in the actions of nature. Thus we ſee what ſinne is.

In peccato nihil poſitiuum.

Sect. 2.

The ſecond thing to be conſidered, is, what is a Sinner properly: For the knowledge hereof, wee muſt conſider in euery ſin foure things: firſt, the fault whereby God is offended: then, the guilt whereby the conſcience is bound ouer vnto puniſhment: thirdly, the puniſhment it ſelfe, which is eternall death. Of theſe three, not the guilt or puniſhment; but the fault or offence, makes a man a ſinner.

1. Culpa.
2. Reatus.
3. Pœna.

Howbeit here is a further difficulty. When a man hath committed ſome offence, and the ſaid offence is done and paſt, it may bee ſome twentie or thirtie yeares: yet the partie offending, doth not therefore ceaſe to bee a ſinner. Now then I demaund, what is the very thing, for which he is named and tearmed ſtill a ſinner in the time preſent, the offence beeing paſt? The anſwer is, that euery actuall ſinne, beſide the three former muſt bee conſidered 4. Vacula. with a fourth thing, to wit, a certaine ſtaine, or blotte, which it imprints and leaues in the offender as a fruite, and that is an inclination, or euill diſpoſition of the heart, whereby it becomes more apt & prone to the offence done, or to any other ſinne. For looke as the dropſie man, the more he drinkes, the drier hee is, and the more he ſtill deſires to drinke: euen ſo a ſinner, the more hee ſinnes, the apter is hee to ſinne, and more deſirous to keepe ſtil a courſe in wickedneſſe. And as a man that lookes vpon the Sunne, if hee turne his face away, remaines turned vntill he turne himſelfe againe: ſo hee that turnes from God by any ſinne, makes himſelfe a ſinner, and ſo remaines vntill hee turnes himſelfe againe by repentance. Thus Dauid was a ſinner not onely in the very act of his adulterie and murther: but euen when the act was done and paſt, hee remained ſtill a murtherer and an adulterer; becauſe a new, or rather a renewed proneneſſe to theſe, and all other ſinnes, tooke place in his heart by his fall, and got ſtrength, till hee turned to God by repentance, vpon the admonition of the Prophet. The thing then, whereby a ſinner is tearmed a ſinner, is the fault together with the fruite thereof, namely, the blotte imprinted in the ſoule, ſo oft as men doe actually offend.

Vſes, The Vſe of this doctrine touching ſinne, 1 is two-folde. Firſt, by it we learne and ſee, what is Original ſinne, whereby an infant in the firſt conception and birth is indeed a ſinner. Euery infant muſt be conſidered as a part of Adam, proceeding of him and partaking of his nature: and thereby it is made a ſinner, not only by imputation of Adams offence, but alſo by propagation of an aptneſſe, and pronenes vnto euery euill, receiued together with nature from Adam. And thus ought we to conceiue Originall ſinne, not to bee the corruption of nature alone, but Adams firſt offence imputed, with the fruite thereof the corruption of nature, which is an inclination vnto euery euill, deriued togither with nature from our firſt 2 parents. Secondly, by this wee are taught to take heede of all and euery ſinne, whether it bee in thought, word, or deede: becauſe the committing thereof, though in reſpect of the acte it paſſeth away in the doing, yet it doth breed and increaſe a wicked diſpoſition in the heart, (as hath beene ſaid) to the offence done, or any other ſinne. Men deceiue themſelues, that thinke all the euill of ſinne, to be onely in the act of ſinning, and to go no further; whereas indeed euery offence hath a certaine blotte going with it, that corrupteth the heart, and cauſeth man to delight and lie in his offence, which lying in ſinne is a greater cauſe of damnation, then the very ſinne it ſelfe. This therefore muſt admoniſh vs to take heede, leſt wee continue in any ſinne, and if it fall out, that through infirmity wee bee ouertaken by any tentation, wee muſt labour to riſe againe, and turne from our ſinne to God, by new and ſpeedy repentance.

Sect. 3.

Thus much of Sinne it ſelfe. Now follow the Differences thereof, which are manifolde. The firſt ſort are to be gathered from the cauſes and beginnings of ſinne in man, which are three-folde; Reaſon, Will, and Affection.

The differences of ſinne in reſpect of Reaſon are theſe: Firſt, ſome are ſinnes of knowledge, ſome of ignorance. A ſinne of knowledge is, when a man offends againſt his knowledge, doing euill when he knoweth it to be euill: and this is greater then a ſinne of ignorance, for he that knoweth his maſters will, & doth it not, ſhall bee beaten with many ſtripes, Luk. 12. 47. A ſinne of ignorance is, when a man doth euill, not knowing it to be euill. Thus Paul was a blaſphemer, an oppreſſour, and perſecuted the Church of Chriſt ignorantly, & in a blinde zeale, not knowing that which he did to bee euill. Now by ignorance here I meane, an ignorance of thoſe things which ought to bee knowne; and this is two-folde: ſimple, or affected. Simple ignorance is, when a man after diligence and good paines taking, ſtill remains ignorant: this ignorance will not excuſe any man, if it bee of ſuch things as hee is bound to know: for it is ſaid, He that doth not his maſters will, by reaſon he knew it not, ſhal be beaten with ſtripes, though fewer.

And in this regard, euen the heathen which knew not God, are inexcuſable, becauſe they were bound to haue knowne him. For Adam had the perfect knowledge of God imprinted in his nature, and loſt the ſame through his owne default, for himſelfe and his poſteritie. And it is the commaundement of God, whereunto euery man is bound to performe obedience: that man ſhould know him, that is, his will and word.

But ſome may ſay then, how can any man be ſaued, ſeeing euery man is ignorant of many things which he ought to knou? Anſ. If we know the grounds of religion, and be carefull to obey God according to our knowledge, hauing withall a care and deſire to increaſe in the knowledge of God and his will, God will hold vs excuſed: for our deſire and endeauour to obey, is accepted for obedience it ſelfe. And the greater this ſimple ignorance is, the leſſer is the ſinne. For hereupon it was that Peter Act.3.9. leſſened, and (in ſome ſort) excuſed the ſinne of the Iewes, in crucifying Chriſt, becauſe they did it through ignorance: and ſo doth Paul his ſinne in perſecuting the Church, when hee alleadgeth, that it was done ignorantly in vnbeleefe. 1.Tim,1.13

But howſoeuer this ſinne by ſuch means may bee leſſened, yet remaines it ſtill a ſinne worthy condemnation. Affected ignorance is, when a man takes delight in his ignorance, and will of purpoſe be ignorant: not vſing, but contemning the meanes, whereby to get and increaſe knowledge: and that careleſſely and negligently, becauſe hee will not leaue ſinne which hee loueth, nor forſake the euill trade of life, wherein hee delighteth. This is the ſin of thoſe, whereof Iob ſpeaketh, who ſay vnto God, Depart from vs: for we deſire not the knowledge of thy waies, Iob 21.14. And of whome Dauid complaines, that they flatter themſelues in their owne eyes, and haue left off to vnderſtand and to doe good, Pſalm. 36.2,3. This ignorance is damnable and diuelliſh: it excuſeth no man, but doth rather aggrauate and increaſe his ſinne: yea it is the mother of many grieuous enormities.

a Ignorantia iuris,

Againe, ignorance is two-folde: of the (a) Law, or of the thing the Law requireth. Ignorance of the Law is, when a man knowes not the Law of God written, nor the law of nature. This ignorance may ſomewhat leſſen the ſinne, but it excuſeth no man: becauſe it is naturall, and euery man is bound to know the law. Ignorance of the thing the Law requireth, is the ignorance of the (b) fact: and that is, either with the fault of the doer, or without the fault.

Ignorantia facti,

Faultie ignorance is, the ignorance of a fact, which he might haue preuented. As when a man in his drunkenneſſe killeth another; in this fact, not knowing what he doth, he alſo knoweth not that he hath offended: and yet becauſe hee might haue preuented his drunkenneſſe, therefore he is faultie and ſinneth. Faultleſſe ignorance is, when a fact is done, which could not bee either knowne, or auoided before-hand. For example: if a man be lopping a tree, and his axe head fall from the helve, out of his hand, and kils another paſſing by; here is indeede manſlaughter, but no voluntarie murther: becauſe it was a thing that could not bee auoided, and did not fall out through his default. And this ignorance is excuſable.

The ſecond fountaine of ſinne, is the Will, from whence ariſe theſe three differences of ſinnes: ſome are from the will immediately, ſome beſides the will, and ſome are mixt, partly with the will, and partly againſt the will.

Sinnes proceeding from the will, are properly tearmed voluntarie; ſuch as the doer mooued by his owne will commits, though he know them to be euil. And here, the more free the will is, the greater is the ſinne: for will added to knowledge, makes the ſinne the greater. Vnder voluntarie ſinnes, are comprehended all ſuch, as proceede from ſtirred affection, as when a man tels a lye for feare, or ſtriketh another in anger: and the reaſon is, becauſe theſe offences, though they are not done vpon deliberation, but ariſe from the violence of affection, yet they doe not exclude Conſent. Hither alſo wee may referre, ſinnes committed by compulſion: as when a man is forced to deny his religion, his offence in deed and truth is voluntary, (though ſome otherwiſe thinke it to be a mixt action.) For compulſion doth not reach to the will, but to the outward man, and ſerues to draw forth a conſent: and when conſent is yeelded, he denies his religion voluntarily: for the will cannot be conſtrained.

Voluntas non cogitur

In the next place, ſinnes beſide the will are ſuch, as are neither directly from the will, nor againſt it. Of this ſort are the firſt ſudden motions vnto ſinne, conceiued in the heart with ſome inward pleaſure and delight: and theſe are truly ſinnes, though in reſpect litle ſinnes, condemned in the laſt commandement. And they are not from the will, becauſe they goe without and before conſent: neither yet are they againſt the will, becauſe then the heart would not take delight in them.

Here by the way, wee are to note, againſt the doctrine of the Papiſts, that all ſinnes are not voluntarie; for whatſoeuer wanteth conformity to the Law of God, is ſinne, whether it be with conſent of wil or no. But many ſuch deſires & delights, ariſe ſuddenly in the heart of man, which are not according to the Law of God, and haue no conſent or approbation of will. In like manner, when one man kils another, thinking that he killeth a wild beaſt: if the ſame man remembreth afterwards what he hath done, and is not grieued for the fact, in this caſe hee hath ſinned, becauſe his not grieuing, is offenſiue vnto God; though the fact were meerely beſides his will.

Mixt ſinnes are partly from the will, partly againſt it. Of this ſort are the workes of the man regenerate, which are done partly with his will, and partly againſt his will, being partly good, and partly euill. The reaſon hereof is this: There are in man after regeneration, two contrary grounds or beginnings of actions: to wit, naturall corruption, or the inclination of the mind, wil, and affections, to that which is againſt the Law, called the Fleſh; and a created quality of holineſſe, wrought in the ſaid faculties by the holy Ghoſt, tearmed the Spirit. And theſe two are not ſeuered, but ioyned and mingled togither, in all the faculties and powers of the ſoule. Now betweene theſe, there is a continuall combate, corruption fighting againſt grace, and grace againſt corruption. Hence it is, that there being euen in one and the ſame will contrary inclinations, there muſt neceſſarily flow from the man regenerate, contrary actions; the fleſh in euery action, willing that which is euill, and the Spirit on the other ſide, that which is good. This Paul confeſſed and acknowledged, vpon his owne experience, after his conuerſion, when he ſaid, To will is preſent with mee, but I finde no meanes [perfectly to doe] that which is good, Rom. 7.18. Againe, verſ. 22.23. I delight in the Law of God, concerning the inner man; but I ſee another law in my members, rebelling againſt the law of my minde, and leading mee captiue to the law of ſinne, which is in my members.

The third ground or fountaine of ſinne in man, is Affection, from whence doe proceede two kindes, namely, ſinnes of Infirmitie, and ſinnes of Preſumption.

Sinnes of Infirmitie are ſuch as proceede from the ſudden paſſions of the minde, and the ſtrong affections of the heart, as from hatred, griefe, anger, ſorrow, & ſuch like. Theſe ſins are commonly thought to be in all men: but the truth is, they are properly incident to the regenerate. For infirmitie cannot bee ſaid properly to be in them, in whome ſinne hath firmitie or ſtrength, & where there is no power of grace at all. Againe, the man that is regenerate, ſinneth neither when he would, becauſe hee is reſtrained by the grace of God that is in him: nor in what manner he would, partly becauſe he ſinneth not with al his hart, the ſtrength of his fleſh beeing abated by the Spirit, and partly for that beeing fallen, he lies not ſtill, but recouers himſelfe by ſpeedie repentance. An euident argument, that the ſins whereinto hee falleth, are not preſumptuous, but are ordinarily of weakenes and infirmity.

Sinnes of Preſumption are ſuch as proceede from pride, arrogancie, wilfulneſſe, and hautineſſe of mans heart. Againſt theſe Dauid praieth, ſaying, Let not preſumptuous ſinnes haue dominion ouer me, Pſal. 19.13. And of them there be three degrees.

The firſt is: when a man wilfully goeth on in his ſinnes, vpon an erronious perſwaſion of Gods mercy, and of his owne future repentance; this is the ſinne of moſt men.

Num. 15. 30.

The ſecond is, when a man ſinneth wilfully, in contempt of the Law of God: this is called by Moſes, a ſinne with a high hand, and the puniſhment thereof was, by preſent death to be cut off from among the people.

The third, when a man ſinneth, not onely wilfully and contemptuouſly, but of malice and ſpite againſt God himſelfe, and Chriſt Ieſus. And by this wee may conceiue what is the ſinne againſt the holy Ghoſt: which is not euery ſinne of preſumption, or againſt knowledge and conſcience: but ſuch a kind of preſumptuous offence, in which true religion is renounced: and that of ſette purpoſe and reſolued malice, againſt the very Maieſtie of God himſelfe and Chriſt, Heb. 10.29.

Sect. 4.

Now follow other Differences of ſinne in regard of the obiect therof, which is the Law. In reſpect of the Law, ſinne is two-fold: either of Commiſſion, or of Omiſſion. I ſay, in reſpect of the Law, becauſe God hath reuealed in his Law two ſorts of precepts: the one wherein ſome good thing is commaunded to bee done, as to loue God with all our hearts, and our neighbour as our ſelues: the other wherein ſome euill is forbidden to bee done, as the making of a grauen image, the taking the name of God in vaine, &c.

Now a ſinne of Commiſſion is, when a man doth any thing that is flatly forbidden in the Law and word of God: as when one man kils another, contrary to the law, which ſaith, Thou ſhalt not kill. A ſinne of Omiſſion is, when a man leaueth vnperformed, ſome duty which the Law requireth: as for example, the preſeruing of his neighbors life, or good eſtate, whē it lieth in his power ſo to doe. Theſe alſo are truly ſinnes, and by them as well as by the other, men ſhalbe tried in the laſt iudgement.

Mat. 25.42, 43.

Sinnes of Omiſſion haue three degrees. Firſt, when a man doth nothing at all, but omits the dutie commaunded, both in whole and in part, as when hauing opportunitie and abilitie, hee doth not mooue ſo much as one finger, for the ſauing of his neighbours life.

Secondly, when a man performes the dutie inioyned, but failes both in the manner & meaſure thereof. Thus the Heathen failed in doing good workes, in that the things which they did, for ſubſtance and matter were good and commendable, beeing done vpon ciuill and honeſt reſpects, and referred to the common good; yet in truth their actions were no better then ſinnes of omiſſion, in as much as they iſſued from corrupted fountaines, hearts void of faith, and aimed not at the maine end, and ſcope of all humane actions, the honour and glorie of God.

Thirdly, when a man doth things in a right manner, but failes in the meaſure therof. And thus the children of God doe ſinne in all the duties of the law. For they do the good things the law commandeth, in louing God & their neighbour: but they cannot attaine to that meaſure of loue, which the law requireth. And thus the beſt men liuing do ſin in euery good worke they doe, ſo as if God ſhould enter into iudgement, deale with them in the rigour of his iuſtice, & examine them by the ſtrict rule of the Law, he might iuſtly condemne them, euen for their beſt actions. And in this regard, when wee pray daily for the pardon of our ſinnes, the beſt workes we doe, muſt come in the number of them: becauſe we faile, if not in ſubſtance and maner, yet at the leaſt, in the meaſure of goodneſſe, that ought to be in the doing of them. We muſt alſo haue care to repent vs, euen of theſe our ſinnes of Omiſſion, as well as of the other of Commiſſion: becauſe by leauing vndone our duty, we do oftner offend, then by ſinnes committed: and the leaſt Omiſſion is enough to condemne vs, if it ſhould be exacted at our hands.

Sect. 5.

The next difference of Sinnes may be this: Some are Crying ſinnes, ſome are ſinnes of Toleration.

Crying ſinnes I call thoſe, which are ſo hainous, and in their kinde ſo grieuous, that they haſten Gods iudgements, and call for ſpeedie vengeance down vpon the ſinner. Of this kinde there are ſundry examples in the Scriptures, principally foure. Firſt, Cains ſinne in murthering his innocent brother Abell, Gen.4.10. whereof it was ſaid, The voice of thy brothers blood crieth vnto me from the earth. The next is, the ſinne of Sodome and Gomorrha, which was pride, fulnes of bread, abundance of idleneſſe, vnmercifull dealing with the poore, and all manner of vncleanneſſe, Ezech. 16. and of Gen.18.20. this, the Lord ſaid, that the crie of Sodome and Gomorrha was great, and their ſinnes exceeding grieuous. The third, is the ſinne of Oppreſſion, Exod. 3.7. & aliàs. endured by the Iſraelites in Egypt, at the hand of Pharao, and his taske-maſters. Exod. 22. 23.27. The fourth, is mercileſſe Iniuſtice in wrongful withholding Iam.5.4.4. and detaining the labourers hire.

B Now are they called Crying ſinnes, for theſe cauſes. Firſt, becauſe they are now come to their full meaſure & height; beyond which God will not ſuffer them to paſſe, without due puniſhment. Againe, the Lord takes more notice, and inquires further into them, then into others, by reaſon that they exceede, and are moſt eminent where they be committed. Thirdly, they call for preſent helpe of the afflicted and wronged; and conſequently, for ſpeedie exequution of vengeance, vpon the authors and committers of them. And laſtly, becauſe God is wont to giue eare vnto the cryes of thoſe, that endure ſo heauie meaſure at the hands of others, and accordingly to helpe them, and reward the other with deſerued puniſhment.

C Next vnto theſe, are ſinnes of Toleration, leſſer then the former: which though in themſelues they deſerue death, yet God in his mercie ſhewes his patience and long ſufferance, vpon the committers thereof, either deferring the temporall puniſhment, or pardoning both temporall and eternal to his Elect. Such a ſinne was the ignorance of the Gentiles before Chriſts comming: Act.17.30. which God deferred to puniſh; and (as we ſay (a) winked at it. (a) ὑπεριδών.

More eſpecially, there be three ſorts of ſinnes of Toleration: the firſt is Originall ſin, or concupiſcence, in the regenerate after regeneration, and the fruits thereof: for it is not quite aboliſhed by regeneration, but remaines D more or leſſe moleſting and tempting a man till death. And yet if we carrie a conſtant purpoſe not to ſinne, and indeauour our ſelues to reſiſt al tentations, this concupiſcence of ours, ſhall not be imputed vnto vs, nor we condemned for it. And to this purpoſe the holy Apoſtle ſaith, There is no condemnation to them that are in Chriſt. Rom.8.1. Yet ſaith he not, There is nothing worthie condemnation in them: for Original ſinne remaines till death, truly deſeruing damnation, though it be not imputed.

The ſecond kind of ſinnes of Toleration are ſecret, vnknowne, and hidden ſinnes in the regenerate. Pſal.19. For who can tell how oft he offendeth? ſaith Dauid. When a man that is the childe of God, ſhall examine his heart, and humble himſelfe euen for all his particular A ſinnes, which he knoweth by himſelfe: there ſhall yet remaine ſome vnknowne ſinnes, of which he cannot haue a particular repentance; and yet they are not imputed, when there is repentance for knowne ſinnes. As for example, Dauid repents of his murther and adulterie, and yet afterwards (erring in iudgement, by reaſon of the corruption of the times,) he liued to his death in the ſinne of polygamie, without any particular repentance, that we heare of. In like manner did the Patriarkes, who may not altogether be excuſed: yet they were not condemned thereof: neither were they ſaued without repentance for this ſinne, but God in mercie accepted a generall repentance for the ſame. B And the like is the caſe of all the Elect, in regard of their ſecret and hidden faults: for vnles God ſhould accept of a generall repentance for vnknowne ſinnes, few or none at all ſhould be ſaued. And herein doth the endleſſe mercie of God notably appeare, that he vouchſafeth to accept of our repentance when we repent, though not in particular as we ought to doe. Neuertheles, this muſt not incourage or imbolden any man to liue in his ſinnes, without turning vnto God. For vnleſſe we repent in particular, of al the ſinnes we know, not only our knowne offences, but euen our ſecret ſinnes ſhall condemne vs. Many ſinnes are committed by men, which afterwards in proceſſe of time are quite forgotten: C Others are committed, which notwithſtanding are not knowne, whether they be ſinnes or no. And in doing the beſt duties we can, we offend often, and yet when we offend, we perceiue it not: and all theſe in the regenerate, through the mercy of God, are ſinnes of Toleration, in reſpect of particular repentance.

The third kinde of ſinnes of Toleration, are certaine particular facts of men not approoued of in Scripture, and yet remitted in reſpect of puniſhment. Such was the fact of Zipporah, Exod.4.25 in circumciſing her childe, in preſence of her husband, he beeing able to haue done it himſelfe, and ſhee hauing no D calling, to doe that which ſhee did. For though the hand of God was againſt him, yet was he not ſicke, (as ſome would excuſe the matter) neither is there any ſuch thing in the text: but it is rather to be thought, that ſhee her ſelfe circumciſed her ſonne in haſt, to preuent her husband: for the deede was done in ſome indignation, and ſhee caſt the fore-skin at his feete. And yet becauſe this fact was ſome manner of obedience, in that the thing was done which God required, (though not in the manner that he required) God accepted the ſame, and ſtayed his hand from killing Moſes. 1. King. 21. Thus God accepted of Ahabs humilitie, though it were in hypocriſie, becauſe it was a ſhew of obedience: 2. King. 17. and for that deferred a temporall puniſhment, till the daies of his poſteritie. God

A ſent Lyons to deſtroy the Aſſyrians, that dwelt in Samaria, for their idolatrie: yet ſo ſoone as they had learned to feare the Lord after the manner of the God of Iſrael, though they mingled the ſame with their owne idolatrie, God for that halfe obedience, ſuffered them to dwell in peace.

Sect. 6.

The ſixt diſtinction of Sinnes may be this: Some are ſinnes againſt God, ſome againſt men. This diſtinction is grounded vpon a place in Samuel: 1. Sam. 2. 15. If one man ſinne againſt another, the Iudge ſhall iudge it: but if a man ſinne againſt the Lord, who ſhall pleade for him?

Sinnes againſt God are ſuch, as are directly B and immediately committed againſt the maieſtie of God. Such are Atheiſme, Idolatrie, Blaſphemie, Periurie, Profanation of the Sabbath, & all the breaches of the firſt Table.

Sinnes againſt men, are iniuries, hurts, loſſes, and damages, whereby our neighbour is in his dignity, life, chaſtitie, wealth, good name, or any other way iuſtly offended, or by vs hindered. And ſuch actions muſt be conſidered two waies. Firſt, as they are iniuries and hurts done vnto our neighbour: and ſecondly, as they are anomies, or breaches of Gods law, forbidding vs to doe them: and in this ſecond reſpect they are called ſinnes, becauſe ſinne is properly againſt God: and therefore by ſinnes againſt men, we are to vnderſtand, C iniuries, loſſes, or dammages done vnto them. In this ſenſe muſt that place in Matthew be expounded: Math. 18. 15. If thy brother ſinne againſt thee, &c.

Sect. 7.

The ſeauenth Difference of ſinnes, is noted by S. Paul, where he ſaith, 1. Cor. 6. 18. Euery ſinne that a man doth, is without the body; but he that commits fornication, ſinneth againſt his owne body. In which place it is implyed, that ſome ſinnes are without the body, and ſome againſt mans owne bodie.

Sinnes without the bodie, are ſuch ſinnes as a man committeth, his bodie beeing the D inſtrument of the ſinne, but not the thing abuſed. Such are Murther, Theft, and Drunkenneſſe: for in the committing of theſe ſins, the bodie is but a helper, and onely a remote inſtrumentall cauſe, and the thing abuſed is without the bodie. For example: in drunkenneſſe, the thing abuſed by the drunkard, is wine or ſtrong drinke: in theft, another mans goods: in murther, the inſtrument whereby the fact is committed. The bodie indeed conferres his helpe to theſe things, but the iniurie is directed to the creatures of God, to the body and goods of our neighbour. And ſuch are all ſinnes, adulterie onely excepted.

Sinnes againſt the body, are thoſe in which it ſelfe, is not onely the inſtrument, but the thing abuſed alſo. Such a ſinne is adulterie onely, and thoſe that are of that kind, properly againſt the bodie: firſt, becauſe the bodie of the ſinner is both a furthering cauſe of the ſinne, and alſo that thing which he abuſeth againſt his own ſelfe. Secondly, by this offence, he doth not onely hinder, but loſe the right power, and property of his bodie, in that he makes it the member of an harlot. And laſtly, though other ſinnes in their kind, doe bring a ſhame and diſhonour vpon the bodie, yet there is none that ſitteth ſo nigh, or leaueth a blot ſo deepely imprinted in it, as doth the ſin of vncleanneſſe.

Sect. 8.

The eight diſtinction of ſinnes is grounded vpon Pauls exhortation to Timothie, 1. Tim. 5. 22. Communicate not with other mens ſins. Sinnes are either Other mens ſinnes, or Communication with other mens ſinnes. This diſtinction is the rather to be knowne and remembred, becauſe it ſerues to extenuate or aggrauate ſinnes committed.

Communication with ſinne is done ſundry waies. Firſt, by counſell: thus Caiphas ſinned when he gaue counſell to put Chriſt to death. Secondly, by commaundement: ſo Dauid ſinned in the murther of Vrias. Thirdly, by conſent, or aſſiſtance, Rom. 1. 31. thus Saul ſinned in keeping the garments of them that ſtoned Stephen, Act. 22. 20. & 7. 58. Fourthly, by prouocation: thus they ſinne that prouoke others to ſinne: and hereof Paul ſpeaketh when he ſaith, Fathers muſt not prouoke their children to wrath, Eph. 6. 4. Fiftly, by negligence or ſilence. This is the ſinne of the Miniſter, when men are called to reprooue ſinne, and do not. Sixtly, by flatterie, when men ſooth vp others in ſinne. Seuenthly, by winking at ſinnes, or paſſing them ouer by ſlight reproofe, Eph. 5. 11. Thus Eli ſinned in rebuking his ſonnes, and thereby brought a temporall iudgement vpon himſelfe and his family, 1. Sam. 2. chap. and 4. Eightly, by participation, Eph. 5. 7. and thus they doe ſinne, that are receiuers of theeues. Ninthly, by defending another man in his ſinne: for he that iuſtifieth the wicked, and condemneth the iuſt, euen they both are an abomination to the Lord.

Sect. 9.

The Ninth diſtinction followeth. Some mens ſinnes (ſaith Paul) are open before hand, ſome follow after. 1. Tim. 5. 24. Which place by ſome is expounded thus: Some mens ſinnes are kept ſecret, till the laſt iudgement, and ſome are reuealed in this life, before that day. This I thinke is a truth, but not the meaning of the text. For in the 23. verſe, the Apoſtle ſpake of Ordination, giuing charge to Timothie, that he ſhould not ſuddenly admit any into Eccleſiaſticall offices, leſt he did partake with their ſinnes. Now in this 24. verſe, he rendereth a reaſon thereof, ſaying, Some mens ſinnes are open before hand: that is, ſome mens faults and wants are knowne, before their ordination to Eccleſiaſticall offices, and of ſuch the Church may know what to iudge and ſay. But ſome againe follow after, that is, they are not reuealed till after their Ordination: and thus Iudas his wickedneſſe did not appeare at the firſt, but was reuealed after he was called to be an Apoſtle.

And thus we ſee, what be the Differences of Sins touching all which, this muſt be held and remembred for a Ground, That euery ſinne, in what degree ſoeuer it be, is mortall of it ſelfe: and no ſinne is veniall in it owne nature. For the wages of euery ſinne is death. Rom. 6.23. And, Curſed is euery one, that continueth not in all things that are written in the booke of the Law, to doe them, Gal. 3.10. This ground muſt be holden againſt the Church of Rome, who in her Caſe-diuinitie, vſeth to pacifie the conſcience, by teaching men, that ſundry ſinnes are veniall.

Sect. 10.

Now though euery ſinne of it ſelfe be mortall, yet all are not equally mortall: but ſome more, ſome leſſe. For the better vnderſtanding whereof, it is to be remembred, that in ſinne there be ſundry ſteps and degrees, wherby one and the ſame ſinne, may be leſſened or increaſed, and ſo become more or leſſe hainous before God.

If it be asked, how can this be? I anſwer; that Sinne may admit aggrauation, or extenuation, ſundry waies: firſt, by the circumſtances, which are principally ſeauen.

The firſt, is the ſubiect, or perſon ſinning. For example: The ſinne of a publike perſon, is more hainous, yea more mortall, then the ſin of a priuate man, becauſe he is in eminent place, and his actions are more exemplarie and ſcandalous, then the actions of inferiour men. The ſeruant that knowes his maſters will, if he doth it not, is the greater ſinner, and ſhall endure a greater puniſhment, then he that neglects the ſame vpon ſimple ignorance, Math. 10.15 The Miniſter and Diſpenſer of the Word, if he be vnfaithfull and vnprofitable, his offence, and conſequently his puniſhment, is farre greater then other mens, Math. 5.13.

The ſecond is, the obiect or partie which is offended. In this reſpect it was that the Iewes did more hainouſly ſin in crucifying Chriſt the Sonne of God, the Lord of glorie, then did their fathers which perſecuted and killed the Prophets. Againe, the word of God teacheth, that the iniurie that is done vnto thoſe whome God tenderly loueth, is farre more diſpleaſing vnto him, then if it were done to others. He that toucheth you, (ſaith the Prophet, meaning the Iewes his choſen and beloued people) toucheth the apple of his eye, Zach. 2.8. The man that deuiſeth miſchiefe againſt his harmeleſſe brother that dwelleth peaceably by him, committeth a ſinne moſt odious vnto God and man, Prou. 3.29 Pſal. 7.4. He that is called and conuerted vnto God and Chriſt,

A and maketh not honeſt prouiſion for his owne which are of his family, is ſo notorious an offender, that Saint Paul holds him a denyer of the faith, and worſe then an infidell, 1. Tim. 5.8. The perſon that ſhall raile vpon the iudge, or ſpeake euill of the Ruler of his people, is a greater tranſgreſſour of Gods commaundement, then he that reuileth, or abuſeth an ordinarie man, Exod. 22.28.

The third is, the thing done in which the offence is committed. Thus to falſifie the word of God, and to prophane his worſhip and ſeruice, is much more abhominable in his ſight, then is the falſifying of the word of a man, or the abuſe of humane lawes and ordinances. Thus again, B the hurting and indamaging of the perſon and life of our neighbour, is a more odious offence, then is the diminiſhing of his goods and outward eſtate: and the hurt that redoundeth by our default vnto his ſoule, is more offenſiue euery way, then the wrong that is offered vnto his bodie.

The fourth, is the place where it is done. According to this Circumſtance, if a man ſhall either ſpeake or do any thing, that comes vnder the name of a breach of pietie or iuſtice, in publike place, as in the congregation, in open court, or generall aſſembly, and that with publike and generall ſcandall; he is a greater offendour, than if he ſpake or did the ſame at home, in his houſe or cloſet.

C The fift is the End; In regard hereof, he that ſtealeth from another, that whereby he may ſatisfie his hunger, and ſaue his life, being driuen to extreame neceſſitie, offendeth in a lower and leſſer degree, then the theefe that robbeth by the high way ſide, for this end, to enrich himſelfe by the loſſes of other men.

The ſixt is the Manner how? Thus he that committeth vncleanenes in the outward act, doth more grieuouſly ſinne, and with greater ſcandall, then if he onely entertained an vncleane thought into his heart. And he that ſinneth of ſet purpoſe and preſumption, or of obſtinate and reſolued malice againſt God, hath proceeded vnto a higher degree of ini- D quitie, then if he had fallen vpon ignorance, infirmitie, or diſordered and diſtempered affection. In like manner, the ſinne of the Iewes, in forcing Pilate by their threatning tearmes (as that he was an enemie to Cæſar, &c.) to the vniuſt condemnation of Chriſt Ieſus, was an higher degree, then the ſinne of Pilate himſelfe, who yeelding vnto their importunitie pronounced ſentence againſt him, Ioh. 19.11. The laſt is the time, which alſo ſerues to aggrauate the ſinne. For ordinarie diſobedience in the time of grace, and wilfull neglect of Gods calling in the aboundance of meanes, is a great deale more damnable, then the commiſſion of ſinne, in the daies of ignorance and blindneſſe, when the like meanes are wanting. 2.Pet.2.21.

The ſecond way to aggrauate ſinne, is by addition of ſinne to ſinne: and that is done ſundry waies: firſt, by committing one ſinne in A the necke of another; as Dauid ſinned, when he added murther to adulterie. Secondly, by doubling and multiplying of ſinne, that is, by falling often into the ſame ſinne. Thirdly, by lying in ſinne without repentance. And here it muſt be remembred, that men of yeares liuing in the Church, are not ſimply condemned for their particular ſinnes: but for their continuance and reſidence in them. Sinnes committed make men worthy of damnation; but liuing and abiding in them without repentance, is the thing that brings damnation. For as in the militant Church men are excommunicate, not ſo much for their offence, as for their obſtinacie; ſo ſhall it be in B the Church triumphant; the kingdome of heauen ſhall be barred againſt men, not ſo much for their ſin committed, as for their lying therein without repentance. And this is the manner of Gods dealing with thoſe that haue liued within the precincts of the church; they ſhall be condemned for the very want of true faith and repentance. This ſhould admoniſh euery one of vs, to take heed, leſt we lie in any ſinne: and that beeing any way ouertaken, wee ſhould ſpeedily repent, leſt we aggrauate our ſinne by continuance therein, and ſo bring vpon our ſelues ſwift damnation.

Thirdly, the ſame ſinne is made greater or leſſer foure waies: according to the number of degrees in the committing of a ſinne, noted by S.Iames, *Iam.*1.15. Temptation, Conception, Birth, and Perfection. C Actuall ſinne in the firſt degree of tentation, is, when the mind vpon ſome ſudden motion, is drawne away to think euill, and withall is tickled with ſome delight thereof. For a bad motion caſt into the mind, by the fleſh and the diuel, is like vnto the baite caſt into the water, that allureth and delighteth the fiſh, and cauſeth it to bite. Sinne in conception, is when with the delight of the mind, there goes conſent of will to doe the euill thought on. Sinne in birth, is when it comes forth into an action or execution. Sin in perfection, is when men are growne to a cuſtome and habite in ſinne, vpon long practiſe. For the often committing of one & the ſame ſinne, leaues an euill impreſſion in the heart, D that is, a ſtrong or violent inclination, to that or any other euill, as hath beene taught before. And ſinne thus made perfect, brings foorth death: for cuſtome in ſinning brings hardneſſe of heart; hardneſſe of heart, impenitencie; and impenitencie, condemnation. Now of theſe degrees, the firſt is the leaſt, and the laſt is the greateſt. One and the ſame ſinne, is leſſer in tentation, then in conception; and leſſe in conception, then in birth; and greater in perfection, then in all the former.

Sect. 11.

Now from this doctrine of the increaſing and leſſening of Sinne in theſe reſpects, we may gather, that all ſinnes are not alike or equall, as the Stoicks of auncient times, and their followers haue falſely imagined. For it hath beene prooued at large, by induction of ſundry particulars, that there are degrees of ſinnes, ſome leſſer, ſome greater: ſome more offenſiue and odious to God and man, ſome leſſe. And that the circumſtances of time, place, perſon, and manner of doing, doe ſerue to enlarge or extenuate the ſinne committed.

If it be here alleadged, that Sin is nothing but the doing of that, which is vnlawfull to be done, and that this is equall in all men that ſin: and therefore by conſequent, offences are equall: I anſwer, that in euery ſinne, men muſt not conſider the vnlawfulneſſe thereof onely, but the reaſon why it ſhould be vnlawfull: and that is properly, becauſe it is a breach of Gods law, and repugnant to his will reuealed in his word. Now there is no breach of a diuine Law, but it is more or leſſe repugnant vnto the will of the Law-giuer, God himſelfe. And many tranſgreſſiōs, are more repugnant thereunto then fewer: for the more ſin is increaſed, the more is the wrath of God inflamed againſt the ſinner vpon his due deſert.

If it be ſaid againe, that the nature of Sinne ſtands onely in this, that the ſinner makes an aberration from the ſcope or marke that is ſet before him, and doth no more then paſſe the bounds of dutie preſcribed by God, and that all are alike in this reſpect; The anſwer is, that it is a falſhood to affirme, that he which makes the leſſe aberration from the dutie commanded, is equall in offence to him that makes the greater. For the ſame ſinne for ſubſtance, hath ſundrie ſteps and degrees, in reſpect whereof, one man becommeth a more heinous offender then another. For example, in the ſeauenth commaundement when God forbiddes the committing of Adulterie, he forbiddeth three degrees of the ſame ſinne; to wit, adulterie of the heart, conſiſting of inordinate and vncleane affections, adulterie of the tongue in corrupt, diſhoneſt, and vnſeemely ſpeeches; and the very act of vncleanneſſe and filthineſſe committed by the body. Now it cannot be ſaid, that he which breakes this commandement onely in the firſt degree, is as great a tranſgreſſour, as he that hath proceeded to the ſecond, and ſo to the third. And therefore it remaines for an vndoubted truth, that Sinnes committed againſt the Law of God, are not equall, but ſome leſſer, ſome greater.

Sundry other Diſtinctions there are of ſinnes, as namely, That the maine ſins of the firſt Table, are greater then the maine ſinnes of the ſecond Table. And yet the maine ſins of the ſecond, are greater then the breach of ceremoniall duties, againſt the firſt table. But this which hath beene ſaid ſhall ſuffice.

The vſe of this doctrine is manifold. Firſt, by it we learne, what the heart of man is by nature: namely, a corrupt and vncleane fountaine, out of which iſſueth in the courſe of this life, the ſtreames of corruptions infinite in number, noyſome in qualities, hainous in degrees, dãgerous in effects. For from thence doe flowe all the differences of ſinnes before named, with their ſeuerall branches, and infinite many more, that cannot bee rehearſed. This muſt mooue vs humbly to ſue vnto God, and earneſtly to intreat him, to waſh vs throughly from our wickedneſſe, and clenſe vs from our ſinnes: yea to purge and to rinſe the fountaine thereof, our vncleane and polluted hearts. And when by Gods mercie in Chriſt, apprehended by faith, our hearts ſhall be purified, then to ſet watch and ward ouer them, and to keepe them with all diligence. Act.15.9. Prou.4.23. Secondly it teacheth vs, that miſerable mortall man, is not guiltie of one or more ſinnes, but of many and ſundry corruptions, both of heart and life. Who can vnderſtand his faults? ſaith Dauid, Pſal. 19.12. Now the allowance of ſinne being death by Gods ordinance, and God beeing iuſtice it ſelfe; anſwerably to the number of our offences, muſt we needes be liable to many puniſhments, yea to death it ſelfe, both of the body, and of the ſoule. This beeing our wofull eſtate, little cauſe is there that any man ſhould thinke himſelfe to be in good caſe, or preſume of Gods mercie, in regard of the ſmall number of his ſinnes: And much leſſe cauſe hath hee, falſly to imagine with the Popiſh ſort, that he can merit the fauour of God by any worke done by him, aboue that which the Law requireth; conſidering that it is impoſſible for him to knowe either the number, or the nature, or the meaſure of his ſinnes. Laſtly, the conſideration of this point, muſt be a barre to keepe vs in, that we be not too ſecure or preſumptuous of our owne eſtate: for as much as we learne out of the word of God, that in reſpect of the multitude of our corruptions, this our life is full of much euil, and many difficulties, that we haue whole armies of enemies to encounter withall, not onely out of vs in the world abroad, but within vs, lurking euen in our owne fleſh. And vpon this conſideration, that we ſhould be at continuall defiance with them, vſing all holy meanes to get the victorie ouer them, by the daily exerciſes of inuocation and repentance, and by a continual practiſe of new obedience vnto all the lawes & commandemẽts of God, according to the meaſure of grace receiued. And ſo much of the third Ground.

CHAP. III.

Of the ſubiection and power of Conſcience.

THe fourth and laſt Ground, is touching the ſubiection and power of Conſcience. Wherein wee are to remember two things: what Conſcience is; and what is the naturall condition of it in euery man. For the firſt; the name of Conſcience will giue light to the thing it ſelfe. For it ſignifieth a knowledge, ioyned with a knowledge; and it is ſo tearmed A in two reſpects. Firſt, becauſe when a man knowes or thinkes any thing, by meanes of Conſcience, hee knowes what he knowes and thinkes. Secondly, becauſe by it, man knowes that thing of himſelfe, which God alſo knows of him. Man hath 2. witneſſes of his thoughts, God, and his owne conſcience; God is the firſt and chiefeſt; & Conſcience is the ſecond, ſubordinate vnto God, bearing witneſſe vnto God, either with the man, or againſt him. Therefore it is nothing elſe but a part of the vnderſtanding, whereby a man knowes what he thinkes, what hee willes and deſires, as alſo in what manner he knoweth, thinketh, or willeth, either good or euill. Whereunto this muſt be added, that as conſcience knowes our thoughts, willes, & actions, ſo it teſtifies thereof vnto God, either with vs, or againſt vs. B

In the ſecond place, The naturall condition or propertie of euery mans conſcience is this; that in regard of authoritie and power, it is placed in the middle betweene man and God, ſo as it is vnder God, & yet aboue man. And this naturall condition hath two parts: the firſt is, the ſubiection of conſcience to God, and his word. Concerning which ſubiection we haue this rule: That God alone by his word doth onely binde the conſcience, by cauſing it in euery action either to excuſe for well doing, or accuſe for ſinne. And this God doth properly. For firſt, he is the onely Lord of the conſcience, which created it, and gouerns it. 2. Againe, he is the onely Law-giuer, that C hath power to ſaue or deſtroy the ſoule, for the keeping and breaking of his Lawes, Iam. 4.12. 3. And further, mans conſcience is known to none, beſides himſelfe, but to God: What man knoweth the things of a man, ſaue the ſpirit of a man which is in him? 1. Cor. 2.11. And it is God onely that giues libertie to the conſcience, in regard of his owne lawes. Vpon this it followeth, that no mans commaundement or law can of it ſelfe, and by it owne ſoueraigne power binde conſcience, but doth it onely by the authoritie and vertue of the written word of God, or ſome part thereof. And therefore, if it bee alleadged, that ſubie- D ction is due to the Magiſtrate for conſcience ſake, Rom. 13.5. the Anſwer is at hand; that ſubiection is indeede to bee performed to ciuill authoritie ordained by God, and obedience alſo to the Lawes of the Magiſtrate for feare of wrath, and for auoyding of puniſhment, but not for conſcience of the ſaid authoritie or lawes properly and directly, but for conſcience of Gods commaundement, which appointeth both Magiſtracie, and the authoritie thereof. This is it that bindes the conſcience immediately; that by vertue of a ſuperiour Law, whereby it ſtandeth in force, namely, the Law of God.

The ſecond part of the naturall condition of conſcience, is the power which it hath ouer man, to accuſe or excuſe him in reſpect of things done. And this is plaine by Saint Pauls

Concluſion, Rom. 14.23. Whatſoeuer is not of faith, that is, whatſoeuer man doth, whereof he is not certainely perſwaded in iudgement and conſcience out of Gods word, that the thing may be done, it is ſin. More plainely: a thing may bee ſaid, not to bee done of faith three waies. 1.Dubitante conſcientia. Firſt, when it is done with doubting, and vnreſolued conſcience, as in thoſe that are weak in knowledge. Of which ſort were ſome in the Primitiue Church, who notwithſtanding they heard of the doctrine of Chriſtian libertie; yet they were of opinion, that after Chriſts aſcenſion, there was a difference to be made of meates, and thereupon thought, they might not eate of ſome kinde of meates. Suppoſe now, that theſe perſons (by accident) ſhould haue beene drawn to eate ſwines fleſh, which themſelues had holden a thing forbidden: theſe men vpon this very fact had ſinned, becauſe that which they did was vpon an vnreſolued conſcience. So ſaith the Apoſtle, Rom. 14.23. He that doubteth, is cōdemned, if he eate, becauſe hee eateth not of faith. 2.Errante. Secondly, when a thing is done vpon an erronious conſcience, it is not of faith, and therefore it is a ſinne. Thus the Maſſe-prieſt ſinneth in ſaying Maſſe, though he thinke in his conſcience, the thing hee doth, is the ordinance of God. And thus Heretikes doe die Heretikes, though when they die, they be fully perſwaded their opinions be the truth. Againe, in the ſame manner, Put the caſe a man ſhould bee of opinion, that fornication, or theft, were things arbitrarie and indifferent, and hereupon his conſcience ſhould tell him, hee might take opportunitie, and commit either of theſe ſinnes: whether is this action in the partie thus perſwaded, a ſinne, or no? I anſwer, the caſe is plaine, that the fact is done vpon an erronious conſcience, and therefore muſt bee a ſinne in the doer. For the error of the iudgement cannot take away the nature of that which is ſimply euill. Sinne is ſinne, and ſo remaineth, notwithſtanding any contrary perſwaſion of the conſcience. The reaſon is, becauſe though the conſcience erreth, & is miſinformed, yet it bindeth ſo farre forth, as that if a man iudge a thing to bee euill, either ſimply, or in ſome reſpect, (though falſly) and yet afterward doth it, hee hath ſinned & offended the Maieſtie of God, as much as in him lieth. 3.Repugnante. Thirdly, when a thing is done with a repugning, or gain-ſaying conſcience, though vpon error and falſe iudgement of the conſcience, it is in the doer a ſin. Thus an Anabaptiſt, that holdeth it vnlawfull to ſweare, ſinneth, if hee taketh an oath: not in ſwearing ſimply, for that is Gods ordinance, but becauſe he ſwears againſt the perſwaſion of his conſcience.

CHAP. IIII.

Of the diſtinction of Caſes.

THus much touching the Preambles, or Grounds of this doctrine. Now it remaineth, that we come to the Queſtions of Conſcience.

Theſe Queſtions may bee fitly diuided, according to the matter or ſubiect of thē, which is man. Now as man is conſidered diuers waies, that is to ſay, either apart by himſelfe, or as he ſtands in relation to another, and is a member of a ſocietie: ſo the Queſtions of Conſcience are to be diſtinguiſhed: ſome cōcerning man ſimply conſidered by himſelfe: ſome again, as he ſtands in relatiō to another.

Man ſtandeth in a two-fold relation: to God, or to man. As hee ſtands in relation to God, he beares the name of a Chriſtian, that is, a member of Chriſt, or a ſonne of God, whoſe dutie is to knowe and to worſhip God, according to his will reuealed in his word. As he ſtands in relation to man, hee is a part of a bodie, and a member of ſome ſocietie. Now the Queſtions that concerne him, as a member of a ſocietie, are of three ſorts, according to three diſtinct kinds of ſocieties. For euery man is either a member of a Family, or of the Church, or of the Common-wealth. And anſwerably, ſome Queſtions concerne man as a member of a family: ſome, as he is a member of the church: ſome, as he is a member of the common-wealth.

In a word therefore, all Queſtions touching man, may bee reduced to three generall heads. The firſt whereof is, concerning man ſimply conſidered as he is a man. The ſecōd, touching man as he ſtands in relatiō to God. The third, concerning man as he is a member of one of the three ſocieties; that is, either of the Family, or of the Church, or of the Common-wealth.

QVeſtions of the firſt ſort, cōcerning man ſimply conſidered in himſelfe, as hee is man, are eſpecially three.

The firſt, What a man muſt doe, that hee may come into the fauour of God, & be ſaued?

The ſecond, How hee may bee aſſured in conſcience of his owne ſaluation?

The third, How hee may recouer himſelfe, when hee is diſtreſſed or fallen? Of theſe in order.

CHAP. V.

Of the firſt maine queſtion touching man.

I. Queſtion.

What muſt a man doe, that he may come into Gods fauour, and be ſaued.

FOr anſwer to this Queſtion, ſome Grounds muſt be laid downe before hand. The firſt is this; That wee muſt conſider and remember, how, and by what meanes, God brings any man to ſaluation. For looke how God ſaueth ueth others, ſo he that would know how to be ſaued, muſt vſe the meanes whereby God ſaueth them.

Sect. 1.

In the working and effecting of Mans ſaluation, ordinarily there are two ſpeciall actions of God: the giuing of the firſt grace, and after that, the giuing of the ſecond. The former of theſe two workes, hath ten ſeuerall actions. I. God giues man the outward meanes of ſaluation, ſpecially the Miniſtery of the word: and with it, he ſends ſome outward or inward croſſe, to breake and ſubdue the ſtubbornnes of our nature, that it may be made plyable to the wil of God. This we may ſee in the example of the Iaylor, Act. 16. and of the Iewes that were conuerted at Peters ſermon, Act. 2. II. This done, God brings the mind of man to a conſideration of the Law, and therein generally to ſee what is good, and what is euill, what is ſinne, and what is not ſinne. III. Vpon a ſerious conſideration of the Law, hee makes a man particularly to ſee and know his owne peculiar and proper ſinnes, whereby he offends God. IV. Vpon the ſight of ſinne, hee ſmites the heart with a legall feare, whereby when man ſeeth his ſinnes, he makes him to feare puniſhment and hell, and to deſpaire of ſaluation, in regard of any thing in himſelfe.

Now theſe foure actions, are indeede no fruits of grace, for a Reprobate may go thus farre; but they are onely workes of preparation, going before grace; the other actions which follow, are effects of grace. V. The fifth action of grace therefore is, to ſtirre vp the minde to a ſerious conſideration of the promiſe of ſaluation, propounded and publiſhed in the Goſpell. VI. After this, the ſixt is, to kindle in the heart ſome ſeedes or ſparkes of faith, that is, a will and deſire to beleeue, and grace to ſtriue againſt doubting and deſpaire. Now at the ſame inſtant, when God beginnes to kindle in the heart any ſparkes of faith, then alſo hee iuſtifies the ſinner, and withall beginnes the worke of ſanctification. VII. Then, ſo ſoone as faith is put into the heart, there is preſently a combate: for it fighteth with doubting, deſpaire, and diſtruſt. And in this combate faith ſhewes it ſelfe, by feruent, conſtant, and earneſt inuocation for pardon: and after inuocation followes a ſtrength and preuailing of this deſire. VIII. Furthermore, God in mercy quiets and ſettles the Conſcience, as touching the ſaluation of the ſoule, and the promiſe of life, whereupon it reſteth and ſtaieth it ſelfe. IX. Next after this ſetled aſſurance, and perſwaſion of mercie, followes a ſtirring vp of the heart to Euangelicall ſorrow, according to God, that is, a griefe for ſinne, becauſe it is ſinne, & becauſe God is offended: and then the Lord workes repentance, whereby the ſanctified heart turnes it ſelfe vnto him. And though this repentance bee one of the laſt in order, yet it ſhewes it ſelf firſt: as when a candle is brought into a roome, wee firſt ſee the light before we ſee the candle, and yet the candle muſt needes bee, before the light can be. X. Laſtly, God giueth a man grace to endeauour to obey his commaundements by a new obedience. And by theſe degrees doth the Lord giue the firſt grace.

The ſecond worke of God tending to ſaluation, is the giuing of the ſecond grace: which is nothing elſe but the continuance of the firſt grace giuen. For looke as by creation, God gaue a beeing to man and all other creatures, and then by his prouidence continued the ſame beeing, which was as it were a ſecond creatiō: ſo in bringing a man to ſaluatiō, God giues the firſt grace, for example, to beleeue and repent; and then in mercie giues the ſecond, to perſeuere and continue in faith and repentance to the ende. And this, if wee regard man himſelfe, is very neceſſarie; For as fire without ſupplie of matter, whereby it is fedde and continued, would ſoone goe out; ſo vnleſſe God of his goodneſſe, ſhould follow his children, and by new and daily ſupplies, continue his firſt grace in them, they would vndoubtedly ſoone loſe the ſame, and finally fall away.

The ſecond Ground for the anſwer of this Queſtion, is taken from ſome ſpeciall places of Scripture, where the ſame is mooued and reſolued. The men that were at Peters ſermon, beeing touched with the ſenſe of their owne miſerie, vpon the doctrine which had bin deliuered, as the holy ghoſt ſaies, were pricked in their hearts, and cried vnto the Apoſtles: Men and brethren, what ſhall wee doe? Act. 2. 38. Peter mooued by the Spirit of God, anſwers them, Repent, and bee baptized for the remiſſion of your ſinnes. The like was the caſe of the Iaylour, who, after that the ſtubbornneſſe of his heart was beaten downe, by feare of the departure of the priſoners, hee came trembling, and fell downe before Paul and Silas, and mooued this queſtion vnto them; Sirs, What muſt I do to be ſaued? Act. 16. 33. to whome they gaue anſwer; Beleeue in the Lord Ieſus, and thou ſhalt bee ſaued, and thine houſholde. The young man in the Goſpell ſues to Chriſt, and askes him, What ſhall I doe to bee ſaued? Mar. 10. 17, &c. Chriſt anſwers him, Keepe the Commandements. VVhen he replied, that hee had kept them from his youth, Chriſt tels him, that hee muſt goe yet further, and ſell all that he hath, and giue to the poore. And Iohn tels the Scribes and Phariſes, who came vnto his Baptiſme, and confeſſed their ſinnes, that if they would flie from the wrath to come, they muſt repent, & bring forth fruits worthy amendment of life, Mat. 3. 8. From theſe places then, I frame this anſwer to the Queſtion in hand. The man that would ſtand in the fauour of God, and bee ſaued, muſt doe foure things: firſt, humble himſelfe before God: ſecondly, beleeue in Chriſt: thirdly, repent of his ſinnes: fourthly, performe new obedience vnto God.

Humiliation.

For the firſt, Humiliation is indeede a fruite of faith: yet I put it in place before faith, becauſe in practiſe it is firſt. Faith lieth hid in the heart, and the firſt effect whereby it appeares, is the abaſing and humbling of our ſelues. And here wee are further to conſider three points: firſt, wherein ſtands humiliation: ſecondly, the excellencie of it: thirdly, the Queſtions of Conſcience that concerne it.

Touching the firſt point, Humiliation ſtands in the practiſe of three things. The firſt is, a ſorrow of heart, whereby the ſinner is diſpleaſed with himſelfe, and aſhamed in reſpect of his ſinnes. The ſecond is, a confeſſion to God, wherein alſo three things are to bee done: firſt, to acknowledge all our maine ſinnes originall and actuall: ſecondly, to acknowledge our guiltineſſe before God: thirdly, to acknowledge our iuſt damnation for ſinne. The third thing in Humiliation, is ſupplication made to God for mercy, as earneſtly as in a matter of life and death: and of theſe three things wee haue in Scripture the examples of Ezra, Daniel, and the prodigall ſonne, Ezra 9. Dan. 9. Luk. 15. 18.

The ſecond point is, the excellency of Humiliation, which ſtands in this; that it hath the promiſes of life eternall annexed to it. Eſa. 57. 15. I dwell in the high and holy place: with him alſo that is of a contrite & humble ſpirit, to reuiue the ſpirit of the humble; and to giue life to them that are of a contrite heart. Pſalm. 51. 17. A contrite and a broken heart, O God, thou wilt not deſpiſe. Prouerbs 28. 13. He that hideth his ſinnes, ſhall not proſper: but hee that confeſſeth and forſaketh them, ſhall finde mercie. 1. Iohn 1. 9. If wee acknowledge our ſinnes, hee is faithfull and iuſt, to forgiue vs our ſinnes, and to cleanſe vs from all vnrighteouſnes. By all theſe, and many other places, it is manifeſt, that in the very inſtant, when a ſinner begins truely in heart and conſcience to humble himſelfe, he is then entred into the ſtate of ſaluation. So ſoone as Dauid ſaid, 2. Sam. 12. 13. I haue ſinned, Nathan pronounceth in the name of the Lord, that his ſinnes were put away. And Dauid himſelfe ſaith, alluding to the former place, I ſaid I will confeſſe my ſinnes, and loe, thou forgaueſt the wickednes of my ſinne. Pſal. 32. 5. When the prodigall ſonne had but ſaid, I wil go to my father, &c. Luk. 15. 18. euen then, before hee humbled himſelfe, his father meetes him, and receiues him.

The third point, is touching the Queſtions of conſcience, concerning Humiliation, all which may be reduced to foure principall Caſes.

I. Caſe. What if it fall out, that a man in humbling himſelfe, cannot call to minde either all, or the moſt of his ſinnes? I anſwer; A particular humiliation indeed is required, for maine and knowne ſinnes: but yet there are two caſes, wherein generall repentance, will be accepted of God for vnknown ſinnes. One is, when a man hath ſearched himſelfe diligently, and by a ſerious examination, paſſed through all the commaundements of God, and yet after ſuch examination and ſearch made, his particular offences are yet hidden, and not reuealed vnto him, ſo as hee cannot call them to remembrance; then the generall repentance is accepted. For this is anſwerable to Dauids practiſe, who after long ſearch, when hee could not attaine to the knowledge of his particular ſlippes, then hee addreſſeth himſelfe to a general humiliation, ſaying, Who knoweth the errours of this life? cleanſe mee Lord from my ſecret faults; Pſal. 19. 21. and vpon this, he was no doubt accepted. Againe, when a man humbleth himſelfe, and yet is preuented by the time, ſo as hee cannot ſearch his heart and life, as he would: his generall repentance will be taken and accepted of God. The truth hereof appeares in the thiefe vpon the croſſe, who hauing no time to ſearch himſelfe, made no ſpeciall humiliation, yet vpon his generall confeſſion he was accepted. Now the ground of this doctrine is this; He that truly repents of one ſinne, in this caſe when he is preuented: is, as if he repented of all.

II. Caſe. What muſt a man doe, that findes himſelfe hard hearted, and of a dead ſpirit, ſo as hee cannot humble himſelfe as he would? Anſ. Such perſons, if they humble themſelues, they muſt bee content with that grace which they haue receiued. For if thou be truely and vnfainedly grieued for this, that thou canſt not be grieued, thy humiliation ſhall be accepted. For that which Paul ſaith of almes, may be truly ſaid in this caſe, that if there be a ready minde, a man ſhall be accepted according to that hee hath, and not according to that he hath not, 2. Cor. 8. 12.

III. Caſe. VVhether the party that is more grieued for loſſe of his friend, then for offence of God by his ſinne, doth or can truly humble himſelfe? Anſwer. A man may haue a greater griefe for an earthly loſſe, then for the other, and yet be truly grieued for his ſinnes too. The reaſon is, becauſe that is a bodily, naturall, and ſenſible loſſe, and accordingly ſorrow for it is naturall. Now the ſorrow for the offending of God, is no ſenſible thing, but ſupernaturall and ſpirituall; and ſenſible things doe more affect and vrge the minde, then the other. Dauid did notably humble himſelfe for his ſinnes, and hee did exceedingly mourne for the loſſe of his ſonne Abſolom, yea and more too then for his ſins, Would God I had died for thee Abſolom, O Abſolom my ſonne, my ſonne, &c. 2. Sam. 18. 33. Againe, I anſwer, that the ſorrow of the minde, muſt be meaſured by the intention of the affection, and by the eſtimation of the thing for which wee ſorrow. Now ſorrow for ſinne, though it be leſſe in reſpect of the intention thereof; yet is it greater in reſpect of the eſtimation

A of the mind: becauſe they which truly mourn for their ſinnes, grieue for the offence of God, as the greateſt euill of all; and for the loſſe of the fauour of God, as for the loſſe of the moſt pretious thing in the world.

IV. Caſe. Whether it be neceſſary in Humiliation, that the heart ſhould bee ſmitten with a ſenſible ſorrow? Anſ. I. In ſorrow for ſinne there are two things: firſt, to bee diſpleaſed for our ſinnes: ſecondly, to haue a bodily moouing of the heart, which cauſeth crying and teares. The former of theſe is neceſſarie, namely, in heart to bee deepely diſpleaſed with our ſelues: the latter is not ſimplie neceſſarie, though it be commendable in whomſoeuer it is, if it bee in truth; for Lydia B had the firſt, but not the ſecond. II. It falleth out oftentimes, that the greatnes of the griefe taketh away the ſenſible paine, and cauſeth a nummedneſſe of the heart, ſo that the partie grieueth not. III. Sometimes the complexion will not affoord teares: and in ſuch there may be true humiliation, though with drie cheekes.

Faith in Chriſt.

The ſecond thing to be done for the attaining of Gods fauour, and conſequently of ſaluation, is to beleeue in Chriſt. In the practiſe of a Chriſtian life, the duties of humiliation and faith cannot be ſeuered; yet for doctrines ſake, I diſtinguiſh them. In faith there are two things required, and to be performed on C our behalfe. Firſt, to know the points of religion, and namely, the ſumme of the Goſpel, eſpecially the promiſe of righteouſneſſe and life eternall by Chriſt. Secondly, to apprehend and applie the promiſe and withall the thing promiſed, which is Chriſt, vnto our ſelues: and this is done, when a man vpon the commandement of God, ſets downe this with himſelfe, that Chriſt and his merits belong vnto him in particular, and that Chriſt is his wiſedome, iuſtification, ſanctification, and redemption. This doctrine is plaine out of the ſixt of Iohn: for Chriſt is there propounded vnto vs, as the bread & the water of life. Therfore faith muſt not be idle in the braine, but it muſt take Chriſt, and apply him vnto D the ſoule and conſcience, euen as meate is eaten.

The Queſtions of Conſcience touching Faith are theſe. Firſt, how we may truely apply Chriſt, with al his benefits vnto our ſelues? For wicked men apply Chriſt vnto themſelues falſely, in preſumption, but few doe it truly, as they ought to do. I anſwer, that this may be done, we muſt remember to do two things. Firſt, lay downe a foundation of this action, and then practiſe vpon it. Our foundation muſt be laid in the word, or elſe wee ſhall faile in our application; and it conſiſts of two principles: The one is, As God giues a promiſe of life eternall by Chriſt, ſo hee giues commandement, that euery one in particular, ſhould apply the promiſe to himſelfe. The next is, that the Miniſterie of the word, is an ordinarie meanes, wherein God doth offer, and apply Chriſt with all his benefits to the hearers, as if hee called them by their names; Peter, Iohn, Cornelius, Beleeue in Chriſt, and thou ſhalt be ſaued. When we haue rightly conſidered of our foundation: the ſecond thing is, to practiſe vpon it, and that is, to giue our ſelues to the exerciſes of faith and repentance, which ſtand in meditation of the Word, and prayer for mercy and pardon: and when this is done, then God giues the ſenſe and increaſe of his grace. When Lydia was hearing the Sermon of Paul, then God opened her heart, Act. 16.12.

Secondly, it is demaunded: VVhen faith beginnes to breede in the heart, and when a man beginnes to beleeue in Chriſt? Anſwer. When he beginnes to bee touched in conſcience for his owne ſinnes, and withall hungers and thirſts after Chriſt, and his righteouſnes, then beginneth faith. The reaſon is plaine. As faith is renewed, ſo it is begunne; but it is renewed when a man is touched in conſcience for his ſinnes, and begins anew to hunger after Chriſt; therefore when theſe things firſt ſhew themſelues, then faith firſt begins. For theſe were the things that were in Dauid, when hee renewed his repentance.

Sect. 4.

Repentance.

The third dutie neceſſarie to ſaluation, is Repentance. In which, two things are to bee conſidered; the beginning, namely, a godly Sorrow, which is the beginning of Repentance, 2. Corinth. 7. and vpon this ſorrow a Change, which is indeed Repentance it ſelfe. In ſorrow wee conſider, firſt, the nature of it: ſecondly, the properties of it. Touching the nature of ſorrow, it is either inward or outward. The inward ſorrow, is when a man is diſpleaſed with himſelfe for his ſinnes. The outward, when the heart declares the griefe thereof by teares, or ſuch like ſignes. And ſorrow in this caſe, called a godly ſorrow, is more to be eſteemed by the firſt of theſe, then by the ſecond. The property of this ſorrow, is to make vs to bee diſpleaſed with our ſelues for our ſinnes directly, becauſe they are ſins, & do diſpleaſe God. If there were no Iudge, no hell, nor death, yet wee muſt bee grieued, becauſe we haue offended ſo mercifull a God, and ſo louing a Father. And as godly ſorrow will make vs thus to doe, ſo is it the next cauſe of repentance, and by this is repentance diſcerned.

The next thing in repentance, is the Change of the minde and whole man in affection, life, and conuerſation. And this ſtandeth in a conſtant purpoſe of the minde, and reſolution of the heart, not to ſinne, but in euery thing to doe the will of God. Hereupon Paul exhorteth them, to whome hee wrote, to continue in the loue of God, and in the obedience of his word. Act. 11.23. Barnabas when he came to Antioch, and had ſeene the grace of

A God, was glad, and exhorted all, that with purpoſe of heart they ſhould cleaue vnto God, or continue with the Lord. So the Prophet Ezekiel ſaith, If the wicked will turne from all his ſinnes, and keepe all my ſtatutes, and doe that which is lawfull and right, he ſhall ſurely liue, and ſhall not die, Ezech. 18. 21, In this purpoſe ſtands the very nature of repentance, and it muſt be ioyned with humiliation & faith, as a third thing auaileable to ſaluation, and not to be ſeuered from them. For a man in ſhew may haue many good things: as for example, hee may bee humbled, and ſeeme to haue ſome ſtrength of faith; yet if there be in the ſaid man, a want of this purpoſe and reſolution not to ſinne, B the other are but dead things, and vnprofitable, and for all them he may come to eternall deſtruction. Furthermore, wee muſt diſtinguiſh this kinde of purpoſe, from the minde and purpoſe of carnall men, theeues, drunkards, harlots, vſurers; for they will confeſſe their ſinnes, and bee ſorrie for them, yea and ſhed ſome teares, wiſhing they had neuer ſinned as they haue. In theſe men, indeede there is a wiſhing wil for the time, but no ſetled purpoſe. And it is a property of nature to auoid euill, but to haue a conſtant reſolution of not ſinning, is a gift of grace; and for this it is, that we muſt labour; otherwiſe our repentance is no true and ſound repentance.

C Sect. 5.

New obedience.

The fourth and laſt dutie is, to performe New obedience vnto God in our life and conuerſation. In this new obedience, three things are required. Firſt, it muſt be a fruite of the Spirit of Chriſt in vs: for when we doe any good thing, it is Chriſt that doth it in vs, Ioh. 15. 5. To this purpoſe Dauid praies vnto God, Pſalm. 143. 10. Let thy good ſpirit leade me forth into the land of righteouſnes. And Paul exhorts the Galatians to walke in the Spirit; and then marke what followes; and ye ſhall not fulfill the luſts of the fleſh, Gal. 5, 16. Secondly, this new obedience muſt be the keeping of euery commandement of God: for as S. Iames ſaith, Iam. 2. D 10. He that breakes one commaundement, is guilty of all: that is, he that doth willingly and wittingly breake any commandement, & makes not conſcience of ſome one, makes not conſcience of any, and before God he is as guilty of all, as if he had broken all. Thirdly, in new obedience, the whole man muſt endeauour to keepe the whole law in his minde, will, affections, and al the faculties of ſoule and body. As it is ſaid of Ioſiah, that he turned to God according to all the lawes of Moſes, with all his heart, 2. King. 23. 25. This laſt point added to the reſt, is the very forme and life of new obedience, and from hence it followes, firſt, that the repentant perſon, muſt not liue in the practiſe of any outward ſin. Secondly, that there muſt be in him, an inward reſiſting and reſtraining of the corruption of nature, and of the heart, that hee may truly obey God, by the grace of the ſpirit of God. The heart of Ioſeph was ready preſt, to reſiſt the euil requeſt of Potiphars wife, Gen. 39. 9, 10. And Dauid ſtaid his affection from reuenging himſelfe vpon Shemei, when he curſed him, 2. Sam. 16. 10. Thirdly, that he ought to ſtirre vp, and exerciſe the inward man, by all ſpirituall motions of Faith, Ioy, Loue, Hope, and the praiſe of God.

Now touching this point, there are two principall Queſtions propounded. Firſt, How may a man frame his life to liue in New obedience.

Anſw. Though all the bookes of the olde and new Teſtament, are direction ſufficient for a good life, yet a more ſpecial anſwer may be made out of the ſame, plainely and briefly. That there are three maine grounds or rules of New obedience. The firſt is laid downe by our Sauiour Chriſt, Luke 9. 23. If any man will come after me, let him denie himſelfe, and take vp his croſſe, and follow mee. The meaning is this; Euery one that will become a ſcholler in the Schoole of Chriſt, and learne obedience vnto God, muſt denie himſelfe, that is, hee muſt in the firſt place, exalt and magnifie the grace of God, & become nothing in himſelfe, renouncing his owne reaſon, will, and affections, and ſubiecting them to the wiſedome and will of God in all things; yea eſteeming all things in the earth, euen thoſe that are deareſt vnto him, as droſſe and dung in regard of the kingdome of Chriſt. Againe, hee muſt take vp his Croſſe, that is, hee ought alwaies to make a fore-hand reckoning, euen of priuate croſſes, & particular afflictions: and when they come, to beare them with chearefulneſſe. This done, hee muſt follow Chriſt, by practiſing the vertues of meekeneſſe, patience, loue, and obedience, and by being conformable to his death, in crucifying the body of ſinne in himſelfe. The ſecond rule is propounded by Paul, Act. 24. 14. To beleeue all thinges that are written in the Law and the Prophets: and that is, to holde and embrace the ſame faith, which was embraced by the Saints and ſeruants of God in auncient times, and which was written by Moſes and the Prophets. Againe, in all reuerence to ſubiect himſelfe to the true manner of worſhipping and ſeruing God, reuealed in his word: and not to depart from the ſame doctrine and worſhippe, either to the right hand, or to the left. The third and laſt rule is, to haue and to keepe faith & a good conſciẽce, 1. Tim. 1. 19. Now faith is preſerued, by knowledge of the doctrine of the Law and the Goſpell, by yeelding aſſent vnto the ſame doctrine, beleeuing it to bee true, and by a particular application of it vnto a mans ſelfe, ſpecially of the promiſe of righteouſneſſe, and life euerlaſting, in and by Chriſt. Againe, that a man may keepe a good conſcience, he muſt doe 3. things. Firſt, in the courſe of his life, hee muſt practiſe the duties of the generall Calling in the particular: ſo

A as though they be two diſtinct in nature, yet they may be both one in vſe and practiſe. Secondly, in all euents that come to paſſe, euermore in patience and ſilence hee muſt ſubmit himſelf to the good will and pleaſure of God. Thus it is ſaid of Aaron, that when God had deſtroyed his ſonnes, for offering vp ſtrange fire before him, hee held his peace, Leuit. 10. 3. And Dauid ſheweth, that it was his practiſe, when being afflicted, he ſaith, I was as dumbe, and opened not my mouth, becauſe thou Lord didſt it, Pſal. 39. 9. Thirdly, if at any time he falleth, either through infirmity, the malice of Satan, or the violence of ſome temptation, he muſt humble himſelf before God, labour to breake off his ſinne, and recouer himſelfe by repentance. B And theſe three bee the principall and maine grounds of New-obedience.

The ſecond Queſtion. Conſidering that all good workes are the fruits of a regenerate perſon, and are contained vnder New-obedience; How may a man doe a good worke, that may bee accepted of God, and pleaſe him?

For reſolution whereof, it is to be carefully remembred, that to the doing of a good worke, ſundrie things are required: Whereof, ſome in nature doe goe before the worke to be done, ſome doe accompanie the doing thereof, and ſome againe do follow the work, being required to be done, when the worke is done.

C Before the worke, there muſt goe Reconciliation; whereby the perſon is reconciled vnto God in Chriſt, and made acceptable to him. For it is a cleare caſe, that no worke of man can be accepted of God, vnleſſe the perſon of the worker be approoued of him. And the workes of men of what dignitie ſoeuer, are not to bee eſteemed by the ſhew and outward appearance of them, but by the minde and condition of the doer. Againe, before wee doe any good worke, wee muſt by prayer lift vp our hearts vnto God, and deſire him to inable vs by his ſpirit to do it, and to guide vs by the ſame, in the action which wee are about to doe. This did the Prophet Dauid oftentimes, as we may reade in the Pſalmes, but D eſpecially in Pſalme 143. 10. when hee ſaith, Teach mee to doe thy will, O God; for thou art my God, let thy good Spirit leade me vnto the land of righteouſneſſe. And oftentimes in the 119. Pſalm. Teach me, O Lord, the way of thy ſtatutes, verſe 33. Giue me vnderſtanding. 34. Direct me in the path of thy commaundements. 35. Againe, Teach me iudgement and knowledge. 66. Let my heart be vpright in thy ſtatutes. 80. Stabliſh me, according to thy promiſe. 116. Direct my ſteppes in thy word, and let none iniquitie haue dominion ouer me, 133.

In the doing of the worke, wee are to conſider two things; the matter, and the manner or forme of doing it. For the manner, it muſt be a worke commaunded in the word of God, either expreſſely or generally. For it is Gods reuealed will that giues the goodneſſe to any worke. Chriſt ſaith of the Phariſies, that they worſhipped him in vaine, teaching for doctrines, the commaundements of men. Hee therefore that will doe a worke, tending to the worſhippe of God, muſt doe that which God commaundeth. Now actions expreſly commaunded, are the duties of the morall Law; Actions generally commaunded, are all ſuch as ſerue to bee helpes and meanes to further the ſaid morall duties. And here wee muſt remember, that actions indifferent in the caſe of offence, or edification, ceaſe to bee indifferent, and come vnder ſome commaundement of the moral Law. To which purpoſe Paul ſaith, 1. Cor. 8. 13. If eating fleſh will offend my brother, I will eate no fleſh while the world ſtandeth; his meaning is, that though his eating of fleſh was a thing indifferent in it ſelfe, yet in caſe of offence, his mind was to abſtaine from it, as much as from the breach of the Law of God. Againe, if an action indifferent, comes within the caſe of furthering the good of the Common-wealth, or Church, it ceaſeth to be indifferent, and comes vnder commaundement; and ſo all kinde of callings and their works, though neuer ſo baſe, may be the matter of good workes. This point is to bee remembred: for it ſerueth to encourage euery man, of what condition ſoeuer he be, in the diligent performance of the duties of his calling; as alſo to confute the doctrine of the Popiſh Church, which teacheth, that onely almes-deedes, and building or maintaining of Churches and religious houſes, are the matter of good workes.

Now to the manner or forme of a good worke, there is required Faith. For as without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe God, Hebrewes 11, 6: ſo whatſoeuer work is vndertaken without faith, cannot in any ſort bee acceptable vnto him. What faith then is required in this caſe? I anſwer. Firſt, a generall faith, whereby wee are perſwaded, that the thing to bee done, may lawfully be done; and of this the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, when he ſaith, Whatſoeuer is not of faith, is ſinne, Rom. 14. 23. Secondly, a particular or iuſtifying faith, which purifieth the heart, and maketh it fitte to bring forth a good worke: for it giues a beginning to the worke, and alſo couers the wants and defects thereof, by apprehending and applying vnto vs, Chriſt and his merits. Againe, a good worke for the manner thereof, muſt be done in obedience. For knowing, that the thing to be done is commaunded of God, wee muſt haue a minde and intention to obey God in the thing we doe, according to his commandement. If it bee here demaunded, ſeeing workes muſt bee done in obedience, how, and to what part of the word wee muſt direct our obedience? I anſwer, to the Law. But how? not conſidered in his rigour, but as it is qualified, mollified, and tempered by the Goſpell: for according to the rigour of the Law, which commaunds perfect obedience, no man can poſſibly doe a good worke.

Furthermore, touching the maner, it muſt be done to good and lawfull ends. The ends of a good worke are manifold: Firſt, the honour and glorie of God. Whether ye eate or drinke, or whatſoeuer ye doe, doe all to the glory of God, 2.Cor.10,31. Secondly, the teſtification of our thankfulneſſe vnto God, that hath redeemed vs by Chriſt. The third is, to edifie our neighbour, and to further him in the way to life euerlaſting. Matthew 5. 16. Let your light ſo ſhine before men, that they may ſee your good workes, and glorifie your Father which is in heauen. The fourth is, to exerciſe and increaſe our faith and repentance, both which bee much ſtrengthened and confirmed, by the practiſe of good workes. Fiftly, that we may eſcape the puniſhment of ſinne, the deſtruction of the wicked: and obtaine the reward of the righteous, life euerlaſting. This was the ende that Paul aimed at in the courſe of his calling; to which purpoſe hee ſaith, From henceforth there is laid vp for mee the crowne of righteouſnes, which the Lord, the righteous Iudge, ſhall giue mee at that day, 2. Timothie c. 4. v. 8. Sixtly, that wee may bee anſwerable to our calling, in doing the duties thereof, and in walking as children of light, redeemed by Chriſt Ieſus. When Dauid kept his fathers ſheepe, he behaued himſelfe as a ſhepheard; but when hee was annointed king ouer Iſrael, God gaue him an heart and reſolution, to cary himſelfe as a king and gouernor of his people. Looke then as Dauid did, ſo ought wee euen by our workes to bee anſwerable to our callings. Seuenthly, that wee may pay the debt, which we owe vnto God. For wee are debters to him in ſundrie regards; as we are his creatures, as we are his ſeruants, as we are his children: In a word, as wee are redeemed by Chriſt, and our whole debt is, our dutie of praiſe and thankſgiuing.

After the worke is done, then comes the acceptation of it. God accepts of our workes diuers waies. Firſt, in that hee pardoneth the fault which comes from vs. Secondly, in that hee approoues his owne good worke in vs. Thirdly, in that he doth giue vnto the doers of them a crowne of righteouſneſſe and glorie, according to his promiſe, 2. Tim. 4. 8. Reu. 2. 10. We then, after wee haue done the work, muſt humble our ſelues, and intreat the Lord to pardon the want of our workes, and ſay with Dauid, Lord enter not into iudgement with thy ſeruant, Pſal. 143. 2. and with Daniel, Lord, vnto vs belongeth open ſhame and confuſion; but to thee righteouſneſſe, compaſſion, and forgiuenes; Dan. 9. 8, 9. And the reaſon is plaine, becauſe in vs there is no goodnes, no holineſſe, no righteouſnes, nor any thing that may preſent vs acceptable in his ſight: and for this cauſe Paul ſaith, I know nothing by my ſelfe, yet am I not thereby iuſtified. Great reaſon then, that we ſhould humble our ſelues before God, for our wants, and pray vnto him, that he will in mercy accept our indeauour, and confirme the good worke begunne in vs by his holy Spirit.

CHAP. VI.

Of the ſecond maine Queſtion touching aſſurance of ſaluation.

II. Queſtion.

How a man may be in conſcience aſſured of his owne ſaluation?

Before I come to the Queſtion it ſelfe, this concluſion is to bee laid downe as a maine Ground; That election, vocation, faith, adoption, iuſtification, ſanctification, and eternall glorification, are neuer ſeparated in the ſaluation of any man, but like inſeparable companions, goe hand in hand; ſo as hee that can be aſſured of one of them, may infallibly conclude in his owne heart, that he hath, and ſhall haue intereſt in all the other in his due time. This is plaine by the words of S. Paul, Rom. 8.30. Whome he predeſtinate, them alſo he called; whom he called, them alſo he iuſtified; whom he iuſtified, them alſo he glorified. In which place, the Apoſtle compares the cauſes of ſaluation, to a chaine of many linkes, whereof euery one is ſo coupled to the other, that hee which taketh holde of the higheſt, muſt needes carie all the reſt with him. Againe, amongſt theſe linkes, Faith is one, a principall grace of God, whereby man is ingrafted into Chriſt, and thereby becomes one with Chriſt, and Chriſt one with him, Epheſ. 3. 17. Now whoſoeuer is by faith vnited vnto Chriſt, the ſame is elected, called, iuſtified, and ſanctified. The reaſon is manifeſt. For in a chaine, the two extreames are knit togither, by the middle links; and in the order of cauſes of happineſſe and ſaluation, faith hath a middle place, and by it hath the childe of God aſſured hold of his election, and effectuall vocation, and conſequently of his glorification in the kingdome of heauen. To this purpoſe ſaith Saint Iohn, chap. 3. verſ. 36. He that beleeueth in the Sonne, hath euerlaſting life. And chap. 5. verſe 24. He that beleeueth in him that ſent me, hath euerlaſting life, and ſhall not come into condemnation, but hath paſſed from death to life. This is the Ground.

Now for anſwer to the Queſtion, diuers places of Scripture are to be skanned, wherein this caſe of conſcience is fully anſwered and reſolued.

Sect. 1.

The firſt place is Romanes 8. 16. And the Spirit of God teſtifieth togither with our ſpirits, that we are the ſonnes of God. In theſe words are two teſtimonies of our adoption ſet downe, The firſt is the Spirit of God dwelling in vs, and teſtifying vnto vs, that we are Gods children. But ſome will haply demaund. How Gods ſpirit giues witneſſe, ſeeing now there are no reuelations? Anſ. Extraordinarie reuelations are ceaſed; and yet the holy Ghoſt in and by the word, reuealeth ſome things vnto men: for which cauſe he is called truly the Spirit of Reuelation, Eph. 3. 5. Againe, the holy Ghoſt giues teſtimonie, by applying the promiſe of remiſſion of ſinnes, and life euerlaſting by Chriſt, particularly to the heart of man, when the ſame is generally propounded, in the Miniſterie of the word. And becauſe many are ready preſumptuouſly to ſay, they are the children of God, when they are not, and that they haue the witneſſe of Gods Spirit, when in truth they want it: therefore we are to put a difference betweene this carnal conceit, and the true teſtimonie of the Spirit. Now there be two things whereby they may be diſcerned one from the other. The firſt is, by the meanes. For the true teſtimonie of the holy Ghoſt, is wrought ordinarily by the preaching, reading, and meditation of the word of God; as alſo by praier, and the right vſe of the Sacraments. But the preſumptuous teſtimonie, ariſeth in the heart, and is framed in the braine, out of the vſe of theſe meanes; or though in the vſe, yet with want of the bleſſing of God concurring with the meanes. The ſecond is, by the effects, and fruits of the Spirit. For it ſtirres vp the heart, to praier and inuocation of the name of God, Zach. 12. 10. yea it cauſeth a man to crie and call earneſtly vnto God, in the time of diſtreſſe, with a ſenſe and feeling of his owne miſeries: and with deepe ſighes and groanes which cannot be vttered, to craue mercie and grace at his hands, as of a louing father, Rom. 8. 26. Thus did Moſes crie vnto heauen in his heart, when he was in diſtreſſe at the red ſea, Exod. 14. 15. And this gift of prayer, is an infallible teſtimonie of Gods Spirit; which cannot ſtand with carnall preſumption.

The ſecond Teſtimonie of our Adoption is our Spirit, that is, our conſcience ſanctified and renewed by the Holy Ghoſt. And this alſo is knowne and diſcerned; firſt, by the greefe of the heart for offending God, called godly ſorrow, 1. Cor. 7. 10. ſecondly, by a reſolute purpoſe of the heart, and endeauour of the whole man, in all things to obey God: thirdly, by ſauouring the things of the Spirit, Rom. 8. 5. that is, by doing the workes of the Spirit, with ioy and chearefulneſſe of heart, as in the preſence of God, and as his children and ſeruants.

Now put the caſe, that the teſtimony of the Spirit be wanting: then I anſwer, that the other teſtimony, the ſanctification of the heart, will ſuffice to aſſure vs. We know it ſufficiently to be true, and not painted fire, if there bee heate, though there bee no flame.

Put the caſe againe, that the teſtimonie of the ſpirit be wanting, and our ſanctification be vncertaine vnto vs, how then may we be aſſured? The anſwer is, that we muſt then haue recourſe to the firſt beginnings, and motions of ſanctification, which are theſe. Firſt, to feele our inward corruptions. Secondly, to be diſpleaſed with our ſelues for them. Thirdly, to beginne to hate ſinne. Fourthly, to grieue ſo oft as we fall and offend God. Fiftly, to auoid the occaſions of ſinne. Sixtly, to endeauour to doe our duty, & to vſe good meanes. Seuenthly, to deſire to ſinne no more. And laſtly; to pray to God for his grace. Where theſe and the like motions are, there is the ſpirit of God, whence they proceede: and ſanctification is begunne. One apple is ſufficient to manifeſt the life of the tree, and one good and conſtant motion of grace, is ſufficient to manifeſt ſanctification. Againe, it may be demanded, what muſt be done, if both be wanting? Anſwer. Men muſt not deſpaire, but vſe good meanes, and in time they ſhall be aſſured.

Sect. 2.

The ſecond place is, the 15. Pſalme. In the firſt verſe whereof, this queſtion is propounded, namely, Who of all the members of the Church, ſhall haue his habitation in heauen? The anſwer is made in the verſes following: and in the ſecond verſe, he ſets downe three generall notes of the ſaid perſon. One is, to walke vprightly in ſinceritie, approouing his heart and life to God: the ſecond is, to deale iuſtly in all his doings: the third is, for ſpeech, to ſpeake the truth from the heart, without guile or flatterie. And becauſe we are eaſily deceiued in generall ſinnes, in the 3, 4. and 5. verſes, there are ſet downe ſeauen more euident and ſenſible notes of ſincerity, iuſtice and truth. One is in ſpeech, not to take vp or carry abroad falſe reports and ſlanders. The ſecond is, in our dealings not to doe wrong to our neighbour, more then to our ſelues. The third is, in our companie, to contemne wicked perſons worthy to be contemned. The fourth is, in our eſtimation we haue of others, and that is, to honour them that feare God. The fift is in our words, to ſweare & not to change: that is, to make conſcience of our word and promiſe, eſpecially if it be confirmed by oath. The ſixt is, in taking of gaine, not to giue money to vſury, that is, not to take increaſe for bare lending, but to lend freely to the poore. The laſt is, to giue teſtimonie without briberie or partiality. In the fift verſe, is added a reaſon of the anſwer: he that in his indeauour doth all theſe things, ſhall neuer be mooued, that is, cut off from the Church as an hypocrite.

Sect. 3.

The third place of Scripture is the firſt Epiſtle of Iohn: the principall ſcope whereof, is to giue a full reſolution to the conſcience of man, touching the certentie of his ſaluation. And the principall grounds of aſſurance, which are there laid downe, may be reduced to three heads.

S.Iohns 1. Epiſtle.

The firſt is this; He that hath communion or fellowſhip with God in Chriſt, may be vndoubtedly aſſured of his ſaluation. This concluſion is propounded, Chap. 1. v. 3, 4. Where the Apoſtle tels the Church, that the end of the preaching of the Goſpel vnto them was, that they might haue fellowſhip, not onely mutually among themſelues, but alſo with God the Father, and with his Sonne Ieſus Chriſt. And further, that hauing both knowledge, and aſſurance of this heauenly communion, to be begun in this life, and perfected in the life to come, their ioy might be full: that is, they might thence reape matter of true ioy and ſound comfort, vnto their ſoules and conſciences. Now whereas it may be happely demaunded by ſome beleeuers, how they ſhould come to this aſſurance? S. Iohn anſwers in this Epiſtle, that the certaintie thereof may be gathered by foure infallible notes. The firſt is, Remiſſion of ſinnes. For though God be in himſelfe, moſt holy and pure, and no mortall man, beeing vncleane and polluted by ſinne, can haue fellowſhippe with him; yet God hath ſhewed his mercie, to thoſe that beleeue in him, and hath accepted of the blood of Ieſus Chriſt his Sonne, whereby they are cleanſed from all their corruptions. v. 7. If here it be asked, how this pardon and forgiueneſſe may be knowne? It is anſwered, y two ſignes. One is humble and heartie Confeſſion of our ſinnes vnto God; for ſo ſaith the Apoſtle, If we confeſſe our ſinnes, he is faithfull and iuſt to forgiue vs our ſinnes, and to cleanſe vs from all iniquitie. v. 9. The other is the pacified Conſcience; for beeing iuſtified by faith we haue peace with God: Rom. 5. 1. and, If our heart condemne vs not: that is, if our conſcience in reſpect of ſinne doth not accuſe vs, then haue we boldneſſe towards God, Chap. 3. v. 21. The ſecond note of fellowſhip with God, is the ſanctifying ſpirit, whereby we are renewed in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe: Hereby we know that he abideth in vs, euen by the Spirit which he hath giuen vs, Chap. 3. v. 24. The third is, holineſſe and vprightneſſe of heart and life. To this end the Apoſtle ſaith, If we ſay that we haue fellowſhip with him, and walke in darkeneſſe, we lie, and doe not truely: but if we walke in the light, as he is in the light, we haue fellowſhippe one with another, &c. Chap. 1. 6, 7. The fourth is, perſeuerance in the knowledge and obedience of the Goſpel. So the ſame Apoſtle exhorteth the Church: Let therefore abide in you that ſame doctrine concerning Chriſt, which ye haue heard from the beginning. If that which ye haue heard from the beginning, remaine in you, that is; if ye beleeue and obey it; you ſhall alſo continue in the Sonne, and in the Father, Chap. 2. 24.

The ſecond Ground. He that is the adopted ſonne of God, ſhall vndoubtedly be ſaued. This point the Apoſtle plainely declareth, when he ſaith: Chap. 3. 2. Beloued, now are we the ſonnes of God.—— And we know, that is, we are vndoubtedly aſſured by faith, that when Chriſt ſhall appeare in glorie, we ſhall be like vnto him; for wee ſhall ſee him as he is. That the latter part of theſe words, is thus to be expounded, I gather out of Chap. 2. 28. as alſo by comparing this text with that of S. Paul, where he ſaith: Col. 3. 26. When Chriſt which is our life ſhall appeare, then ſhall we alſo appeare with him in glorie. And againe, Rom. 8. 7. If we be ſonnes, we are alſo heires, euen the heires of God, and heires annexed with Chriſt, if ſo be that we ſuffer with him, that we may alſo be glorified with him. Now put the caſe, that the conſcience of the beleeuer, will not reſt in this, but deſires to be further reſolued, touching the certaintie of his adoption? Then I anſwer, that he muſt haue recourſe vnto the ſignes, whereby a ſonne of God may be diſcerned from a child of the diuell: and theſe are principally three. The firſt is, truly to beleeue in the name of the Sonne of God: for thoſe that haue God for their father, are made the ſonnes of God, by faith in Ieſus Chriſt. Gal. 3. 26. And this faith ſhewes it ſelfe by obedience. For hereby we are ſure that we know Chriſt, that is, that we beleeue in him, and apply him with all his benefits vnto our ſoules, If we keepe his commandements. Nay further, He that ſayes, I know him, and keepes not his commandements, is a liar, and the truth is not in him, cha. 2. 3. 4. The ſecond ſigne is, a hearty deſire, and earneſt indeauour to be cleanſed of his corruptions. Euery ſonne of God that hath this hope, purifieth himſelfe, euen as Chriſt is pure, cha. 3. v. 3. The third is, the loue of a Chriſtian, becauſe he is a Chriſtian; for hereby, ſaies the Apoſtle, are the children of God knowne from the children of the diuell: becauſe the ſonnes of Satan doe hate their brethren, (as Cain did his brother Abel) euen for the good workes which they doe. On the other ſide, Gods adopted ſonnes, may hereby know themſelues to be tranſlated from death to life, becauſe they loue the brethren, Chap. 3. 10, 11, 12. &c.

The third Ground. They that are aſſured, of the loue of God to them in particular, may alſo be certainely aſſured of their owne ſaluation. This doctrine followes neceſſarily vpon the Apoſtles words, chap. 4. v. 9. For thoſe whome God hath loued from all eternitie, to them he hath manifeſted his loue, by ſending his onely begotten Sonne into the world, that they might liue through him eternally. But how may a man be aſſured of Gods ſpeciall loue and fauour? The ſame Apoſtle anſwers, by two notes; The firſt is, the loue of our brethren, and that according to Gods commaundement, wherein it is commanded, that he that loues God, ſhould loue his brother alſo, 4. 21. And if any man ſay, I loue God, & hate his brother, he is a lyar. For how can he that loueth not his brother, whome he hath ſeene, loue God whome he hath not ſeene? 4. 20. Now that a man deceiue not himſelfe in the loue of his brother, Saint Iohn giues three rules; One, that Chriſtian brotherly loue, ſhould not be for outward reſpects or conſiderations, but principally, be- cauſe they are the ſonnes of God, and members of Chriſt: Euery one that loueth him which did beget, that is, God the father, loueth him alſo which is begotten of him. 5. 1. Another is, that it muſt not be outward, in ſhew onely, but inward, in the heart. Let vs not loue in word or tongue onely, but in deede and in truth. 3. 18. Laſtly, that it be not onely in time of proſperity, but when hee ſtands in moſt neede of our loue. For whoſoeuer hath this worlds good, and ſeeth his brother haue neede, and ſhutteth up the bowels of compaſſion from him, how dwelleth the loue of God in him? 3. 17. The ſecōd note of Gods loue vnto vs, is, our loue of God. For thoſe whom God loueth in Chriſt, to them he giues his grace, to loue him againe. And this louing of him againe, is an euident token of that loue wherewith he loueth them. So ſaith the Apoſtle. We loue him becauſe he loued vs firſt, 4. 19. If it be demaunded, how a man may be aſſured that he loueth God? the anſwer is, hee may know it by two things; Firſt, by his conformitie to him in holines. The child that loues his father, wil be willing to tread in the ſteps of his father: & ſo in like manner, he that loueth God, will indeauour euen as he is, ſo to be in this world, 4. 17. But how is that? not in equalitie and perfection, but in ſimilitude and conformitie, ſtriuing to be holy, as he is holy, and indeauouring to doe his will in all things. Secondly, by the weaning of his affections from the things of this world: yea from all pleaſures and delights of this preſent life, ſo farre forth, as they are ſeuered from the feare and loue of God. Loue not this world, nor the things that are in the world: if any man loue this world, the loue of the Father is not in him, 2. 15.

Sect. 4.

2, Tim. 2. 19. The fourth place, is in the ſecond of Timothie, 2. 19. The foundation of God remaineth ſure, and hath this ſeale, The Lord knoweth who are his, and let euery one that calleth vpon the name of the Lord, depart from iniquitie. In theſe words, Paul goeth about to cut off an offence, which the Church might take, by reaſon of the fall of Hymenæus and Philetus, who ſeemed to be pillars, and principall men in the Church; And to confirme them againſt this offence, he ſaith, The foundation of God, that is, the decree of Gods election, ſtands firme and ſure: ſo as thoſe which are elected of God, ſhall neuer fall away, as theſe two haue done. And this he declares by a double ſimilitude: Firſt of all he ſaith, the election of God, is like the foundation of an houſe, which ſtandeth faſt, though all the building be ſhaken. Secondly he ſaith, that election hath the ſeale of God, and therefore may not be changed, because things which are ſealed, are thereby made ſure and authenticall. Now this ſeale hath two parts: the firſt concernes God, in that euery mans ſaluation is writtēn in the booke of life, and God knoweth who are his. And becauſe it might be ſaid, God indeede knowes who ſhall be ſaued, but what is that to vs? we know not ſo much of our ſelues? Therefore Saint Paul to anſwer this, ſets downe a ſecond part of this ſeale, which concernes man, and is imprinted in his heart and conſcience: which alſo hath two branches; the gift of inuocation: and a watchfull care, to make conſcience of all and euery ſinne, in theſe words, And let euery one that calleth vpon the name of the Lord, depart from iniquitie. Whereby he ſignifieth, that thoſe that can call vpon God, and giue him thanks for his benefits, and withal in their liues make conſcience of ſinne, haue the ſeale of Gods election imprinted in their hearts, and may aſſure themſelues they are the Lords.

Sect. 5.

A fift place of Scripture, touching this queſtion is, 2. Pet. 1. 10. Giue all diligence to make your election ſure: for if you doe theſe things, you ſhall neuer fall. Which words containe two parts: Firſt, an exhortation, to make our election ſure, not with God, for with him both it, and all other things are vnchangeable; but to our ſelues, in our owne hearts and conſciences. Secondly, the meanes whereby to come to this aſſurance, that is, by doing the things before named, in the 5, 6, and 7. verſes, and that is nothing elſe but to practiſe the vertues of the morall Law, there ſet downe, which I will briefly ſhew what they are, as they lie in the text. 2. Pet, 1, 10

To faith; adde vertue] by faith, he meaneth true religion, and that gift of God, whereby we put our truſt and confidence in Chriſt. By vertue, he meaneth no ſpeciall vertue, but (as I take it) an honeſt and vpright life before men, ſhining in the vertues and workes of the morall Law. By knowledge, he meanes a gift of God, whereby a man may iudge, how to carrie himſelfe warily, and vprightly before men. By temperance, is vnderſtood a gift of God, whereby we keepe a moderation of our naturall appetite, eſpecially about meate, drinke, and attire. By Patience, is meant a vertue, wherby we moderate our ſorrow, in enduring affliction. Godlineſſe, is an other vertue, wherby we worſhip God, in the duties of the firſt table. Brotherly kindneſſe, is alſo that vertue, whereby we imbrace the Church of God, and the members thereof with the bowels of loue. And in the laſt place, Loue, is that vertue, whereby we are well affected to all men, euen to our enemies. Now hauing made a rehearſall of theſe vertues: in the tenth verſe he ſaith, If ye doe theſe things ye ſhall neuer fall, that is to ſay, If ye exerciſe your ſelues in theſe things, you may thereby be well aſſured and perſwaded of your election and ſaluation.

CHAP. VII.

Of the third maine Queſtion, touching diſtreſſe of minde, and generally of all diſtreſſes, and their remedies.

III. Queſtion.

How a man beeing in diſtreſſe of minde, may be comforted and releeued?

Anſ. Omitting all circumſtances (conſidering that much might be ſpoken touching this Queſtion) I will onely ſet downe that which I take to be moſt material to the doubt in hand.

Diſtreſſe of minde in generall. Prou. 18. 14

Diſtreſſe of minde (which Salomon cals a broken or troubled ſpirit) is, when a man is diſquieted and diſtempered in conſcience, and conſequently in his affections, touching his eſtate before God. This diſtreſſe hath two degrees, the leſſe, and the greater. The leſſe is a ſingle Feare, or griefe, when a man ſtandeth in ſuſpenſe and doubt of his owne ſaluation, and in feare that he ſhall be condemned. The greater diſtreſſe is, Deſpaire, when a man is without all hope of ſaluation, in his own ſenſe and apprehenſion. I call Deſpaire a greater diſtreſſe, becauſe it is not a diſtinct kind of trouble of mind, (as ſome doe thinke,) but the higheſt degree, in euery kind of diſtreſſe. For euery diſtreſſe in the minde, is a feare of condemnation, and comes at length to deſperation, if it be not cured.

In ſpeciall.

All diſtreſſe of minde, ariſeth from temptation, either begun or continued. For theſe two doe ſo neceſſarily follow, and ſo inſeparably accompanie each the other, that no diſtreſſe, of what kind ſoeuer, can be ſeuered from temptation. And therefore according to the diuers ſorts of temptations, that do befall men, muſt the diſtreſſes of the minde be diſtinguiſhed.

Now Temptations be of two ſorts; either of triall, or ſeducement. Temptations of triall, are ſuch as doe befall men, for the triall and proofe of the grace of God which is in them. The Temptations of triall are two-fold: the firſt, is a combate of the conſcience directly and immediately with the wrath of God; which being the moſt grieuous temptation that can be, it cauſeth the greateſt and deepeſt diſtreſſe of conſcience. The ſecond is, the Triall of the Croſſe, that is, of outward affliction, whereby God maketh proofe of the faith of his children, and not onely that, but of their hope, patience, and affiance in his mercie for their deliuerance.

Temptations of ſeducement be ſuch, as wherein men are entiſed, to fall from God and Chriſt, to any kind of euill. And theſe are of A three kinds. The firſt is, immediately from the Diuell, and it is called the temptation of Blaſphemies, or the Blaſphemous temptation. The ſecond is, from a mans owne ſinnes, originall and actuall, and this alſo hath ſundry branches, as we ſhall ſee afterward. The third proceedes from Imagination corrupted and depraued. Now anſwerable to theſe ſeuerall kinds of Temptations, are the ſeuerall kinds of Diſtreſſes. And as all temptations may be reduced to thoſe fiue, which haue beene before named, ſo may all diſtreſſes be reduced to fiue heads ariſing of the former temptations.

Sect. 2.

The Generall Remedie of all Diſtreſſes.

Before I come to handle them in particu- B lar, we are to conſider in the firſt place, what is the beſt and moſt ſure Generall Remedie, which may ſerue for all theſe, or any other kind of temptation, that is incident to man: and by this, the curing of any particular diſtreſſe, will be more eaſie and plaine.

This generall Remedie, is the Applying of the promiſe of life euerlaſting, in and by the blood of Chriſt. For no phyſicke, no art or skill of man, can cure a wounded and diſtreſſed conſcience, but only the blood of Chriſt. And that this is the ſoueraigne remedie of all other, no man doubteth. The maine difficulty is, touching the manner of proceeding, in the application of the promiſe. Herein therefore, three things muſt be performed.

C First of all, the partie muſt diſcloſe the cauſe of his particular diſtreſſe, that the remedie may the better be applyed. For the truth is, that the very opening of the cauſe is a great eaſe to the minde, before any remedie be applyed. Yet by the way, this care muſt be had, that the thing to be reuealed, be not hurtfull to the partie, to whome it is made knowne. For the diſtreſſe may haply ariſe of ſome confederacie in matters of Treaſon, by the concealing whereof, the partie to whom they are reuealed, may intangle himſelfe in the ſame danger.

Secondly, if the cauſe may be knowne, (for ſometime it is hid from the party diſtreſſed) then trial muſt be made, whether the ſaid par- D tie, be fit for comfort yea or no? For if he be found to be vnfit, the word of God ſhall be miſapplyed, and conſequently abuſed. His fitneſſe for comfort, may be found out, by ſearching whether he be humbled for his ſinnes, or not: for men may be in great diſtreſſe, and yet not touched at all for their ſinnes. This humiliation ſtands in ſorrow for ſinne, with confeſſion of the ſame vnto God, and in earneſt praier for the pardon thereof, with an heartie deſire of amendment of life. But if on the other ſide, the partie be vnhumbled, then the firſt and principall care muſt be, to worke in him ſome beginning of humiliation. This may be done in a friendly, and Chriſtian talke and conference, whereby he muſt firſt be brought to ſee, and well to conſider his owne ſinnes: ſecondly, to grieue, and to be ſorrie for them, at the leaſt, for ſome of the principall.

And touching this Sorrow, two things muſt be remembred: firſt, that the nature of worldly ſorrow muſt be altered, by beeing turned, and changed into ſorrow according to God. If a man be in ſome danger of his life, by bleeding at the noſe, experience teacheth, the counſell of the Phyſitian is, to open a veine, and let the partie blood in the arme, that the courſe thereof may be turned an other way: The like order is to be taken with men, that are troubled with worldly ſorrow in their diſtreſſe: and that is, to turne the courſe of their griefe, by cauſing them to grieue, not for worldly reſpects, or onely in conſideration of the puniſhment due vnto them for their ſins, but principally for the very offence of God, in, and by their ſinnes committed.

This done, a ſecond care muſt be had, that this ſorrow for ſinne be not confuſed, but a diſtinct ſorrow. The man that is in ſorrow muſt not be grieued onely, becauſe he is as other men are, a ſinner; but more eſpecially for this, and that particular ſinne, by which it comes to paſſe, that he is ſuch, or ſuch a ſinner; that ſo his ſorrow in reſpect of ſinne, may be diſtinct, & brought as it were to ſome particular head. And men in this caſe muſt deale with the partie diſtreſſed, as Surgeons are woont to doe with a tumor, or ſwelling in the body, whoſe manner is, firſt to apply drawing and ripening plaiſters to the place affected, to bring the ſore to an head, that the corruption may iſſue out at ſome one place: and then afterward healing plaiſters which are of great vſe to cure the ſame: Euen ſo confuſed griefe, muſt be reduced to ſome particulars: and then, and not before, is a man fit for comfort, when his conſcience is touched in ſpecial, in regard of ſome one or more diſtinct and ſeuerall offences. And he that is grieued for one ſinne truly and vnfainedly, from his heart; ſhall proportionally be grieued for all the ſinnes, that he knoweth to be in himſelſe.

The third thing required in applying this remedie is, the miniſtring and conuaying of comfort to the mind of him, that hath confeſſed his ſinnes, & is truly humbled for them: and it is a point of the greateſt moment of all. Where if the Queſtion be, how this comfort ſhould be miniſtred? the anſwer is, it may be done, by bringing the party troubled within the compaſſe of the promiſe of life. And there be two waies of doing this: the one falſe, and the other true.

The falſe way of miniſtring comfort.

Some thinke, that men may be brought within the Couenant, by the doctrine of Vniuerſall grace and redemption. But this way of perſwading a man that he hath title in the Couenant of grace, is both falſe, and vnfit. Falſe it is, becauſe all the promiſes of the Goſpel, are limited with the condition of Faith and Repentance, not beeing vniuerſall to all, but made onely to ſuch perſons, as repent and beleeue: therefore they are indefinite in regard of whole mankind, and to beleeuers onely they are vniuerſall.

It is obiected, that God would haue all men to be ſaued. 1. Tim. 2. 4.

Anſw. The Apoſtle is the beſt expounder of himſelſe, and he ſaith in the Acts to the ſame effect, The time of ignorance God regarded not, but NOW he admoniſheth all men euery where to repent. Act. 17. 30. In which words, Paul addes this circumſtance of time [now,] to limit this good will of God, to the laſt age of the world, after the comming of Chriſt in the fleſh, and not to inlarge the ſame to al the poſteritie of Adam. And ſo muſt he be vnderſtood in the place to Timothie, God would haue all men to be ſaued, that is, now in this laſt age of the world. And thus the ſame Apoſtle, 2. Cor. 6. 2. expounds a certaine prophecie of Iſay, concerning the acceptable time of grace. Now, ſaith he, is the acceptable time: behold, [Now] is the day of ſaluation, Eſa. 49. 8. meaning the time of the new Teſtament. And, Col. 1. 26. The myſterie hid from the beginning, is now made manifeſt to the Saints. And, Rom. 16. 26. The reuelation of the ſecret myſterie is now opened. All which, and many other places about the ſame matter, hauing this circumſtance of time [Now,] muſt needes be limited to this laſt age of the world. As for the note of vniuerſalitie, All, it muſt not be vnderſtood of all particulars, but of all kinds, ſorts, conditions, and ſtates of men, as may be gathered out of the former words: I would that praiers be made for all men, not for euery particular man: (for there be ſome that ſinne vnto death, for whom we may not pray,) 1. Ioh. 5. 16. but for all ſtates of men, as wel Princes as ſubiects, poore as rich, baſe as noble, vnlearned as learned, &c.

But the ſaying of Paul is vrged, 2. Cor. 5. 18. God was in Chriſt, reconciling the World vnto himſelfe: therefore the promiſe in Chriſt belongs to the whole World, and conſequently to euery one. Anſ. The ſame Apoſtle ſhall againe anſwer for himſelſe, Rom. 11. 15. The caſting away of the Iewes, is the reconciling of the world, that is, of the Gentiles in the laſt age of the world: for ſo he ſaid before more plainely, The falling away of the Iewes is the riches of the world, and the diminiſhing of them, the riches of the Gentiles. And ſo muſt that place to the Corinthes be vnderſtood, namely, not of all and euery man, that liued in all ages and times; but of them that were (by the diſpenſation of the Goſpel) to be called out of al kingdomes, and nations, after the death and aſcenſion of Chriſt.

Thus then the promiſe of ſaluation is not vniuerſall, without exception, or reſtraint: and therefore application made by the vniuerſalitie of the promiſe, admits ſome falſhood.

Secondly, this way of applying is alſo Vnfit. For the reaſon muſt be framed thus: Chriſt died for all men: but thou art a man: therefore

Chriſt

A Chriſt died for thee. The partie diſtreſſed will grant all, and ſay, Chriſt indeede died for him, if he would haue receiued Chriſt; but he by his ſinnes hath cut himſelfe off from his owne Sauiour, and hath forſaken him, ſo as the benefit of his death will doe him no good.

Sect. 4.

The grounds of comfort.

The right way of miniſtring Comfort to a partie diſtreſſed followeth. In the handling whereof, firſt, I will lay downe the Grounds, whereby any man that belongs to God, may be brought within the Couenant. And then, I will ſhew the Right Way, how they muſt be vſed, and applyed.

For the firſt, Recourſe muſt not be had to B all graces, or to all degrees and meaſure of grace; but onely ſuch, as a troubled Conſcience may feele and reach vnto. For thoſe that be the true children of God, and haue excellent meaſure of grace, when they are in diſtreſſe, feele litle or no grace at all in themſelues. The graces then, that ſerue for this purpoſe, are three: Faith, Repentance, and the true Loue of God, which is the fruit of them both. And that we may the more eaſily and truly diſcerne of them, and not to be deceiued, inquirie muſt be made, what be the ſeedes and beginnings of them all.

The firſt Ground of grace is this: A deſire to repent, and beleeue, in a touched heart and conſcience, is faith and repentance it ſelfe; though not in nature, yet in Gods acceptation. I prooue it C thus. It is a principle graunted and confeſſed of all men; that in them which haue grace, God accepteth the will for the deede. If there bee a willing minde (ſaith the Apoſtle) it is ac- 2.Cor.8.12. cepted, not according to that a man hath not, but according to that he hath. Againe, God hath annexed a promiſe of bleſſedneſſe, and life euerlaſting to the true and vnfained deſire of grace. Whence it is, that they are in Scripture pronounced bleſſed, which hunger and Math.5.6. thirſt after righteouſneſſe. And who are they but ſuch as feele themſelues to want all righteouſneſſe, and doe truly and earneſtly deſire it in their hearts. For hunger and thirſt argues both a want of ſome thing, and a feeling of the want. And to this purpoſe the holy Ghoſt D Reu.21.6. ſaith, To him that is athirſt will I giue to drinke of the water of life freely. Now this thirſtie ſoule, is that man which feeles himſelfe deſtitute of all grace, and Gods fauour in Chriſt, and withall doth thirſt after the blood of Chriſt, and deſires to be made partaker thereof. God is woont mercifully to accept of the deſire of any good thing, when a man is in neceſſitie, and ſtands in want thereof. The Lord (ſaies Dauid) Pſal.10.17. heares the deſire of the poore, that is, of them that are in diſtreſſe, either of body or minde; Pſal.145.19 Yea, he will fulfill the deſire of them that feare him.

It will be ſaid, that the deſire of good things is naturall: and therefore God will not regard mens deſires.

I anſwer, Deſires be of two ſorts; Some be of ſuch things, as men by the meere light of nature know to be good: for example, the deſire of wiſedome, of ciuill vertue, of honour, of happineſſe, and ſuch like: and all theſe nature can deſire. Others be aboue nature, as the deſire of remiſſion of ſinnes, reconciliation, and ſanctification: and they which ſeriouſly deſire theſe, haue a promiſe of bleſſedneſſe and life euerlaſting. And hence it followes, that deſire of mercie, in the want of mercie, is mercie it ſelfe, and deſire of grace, in the want of grace, is grace it ſelfe.

A ſecond Ground is this. A godly ſorrow wherby a man is grieued for his ſinnes, becauſe they are ſinnes, is the beginning of repentance, and indeed for ſubſtance is repentance it ſelfe. The Apoſtle Paul reioyced that he had in the worke of his Miniſterie, wrought this godly ſorrow in the hearts of the Corinthians, calling it ſorrow that cauſeth repentance not to be repented of. This 2.Cor.7.9. ſorrow may be diſcerned in this ſort: The heart of him in whome it is, is ſo affected, that though there were no conſcience, nor diuel to accuſe, no hell for condemnation, yet it would be grieued in it ſelfe, becauſe God by ſinne is diſpleaſed and offended.

If it be alleadged, that euery one cannot reach to this beginning of repentance, thus to ſorrow for his ſinne: then I adde further: If the partie be grieued for the hardneſſe of his heart, whereby it comes to paſſe, that he cannot grieue, he hath vndoubtedly receiued ſome portion of godly ſorrow. For it is not nature, that makes vs to grieue for hardneſſe of heart, but grace.

The third Ground is, that A ſetled purpoſe, and willing minde to forſake all ſinne, and to turne vnto God, (though as yet no outward conuerſion appeare,) is a good beginning of true conuerſion, and repentance. I thought (ſaith Dauid) I will confeſſe Pſal.32.5. againſt my ſelfe my wickedneſſe vnto the Lord, and thou forgaueſt the puniſhment of my ſinne. And to this is added (Selah,) which is not onely a muſical note, but, as ſome think, a note of obſeruation, to mooue vs to marke the things that are ſet downe, as beeing of ſpecial weight and moment. And ſurely this is a matter of great conſequence, that vpon the very vnfained purpoſe of confeſſion of ſinne, God ſhould giue a pardon thereof. Take a further proofe of this in the prodigall ſonne, whome I take not for one that was neuer called, or turned to God, (though ſome doe ſo, and ſeeme to haue warrant for their opinion:) but rather for him that is the Child of God, and afterward fals away. Now this man beeing brought by ſome outward croſſes and afflictions, to ſee his owne miſerie, purpoſeth with himſelfe, to returne to his father againe, and to humble himſelfe, and confeſſe his iniquitie: and vpon this very purpoſe, when he had ſaid, I will goe to my father, and ſay vnto him, father, I haue ſin- Luk.15.17.18. ned, &c. at his returne afarre off, his father receiues him as his child againe, and after acceptation followes his confeſſion. The like is to be ſeene in Dauid, who beeing reprooued by the Prophet Nathan, for his ſinnes of adulterie and murther, preſently made confeſſion of them, and at the very ſame time, receiued by the Prophet ſentence of abſolution, euen from the Lord himſelfe, wherein hee could not erre.

The fourth Ground, To loue any man becauſe he is a Chriſtian, and a childe of God, is a ſenſible and certaine note of a man that is partaker of the true loue of God in Chriſt. Hereby (ſaith S. Iohn) we know that we are tranſlated from death to life, becauſe we loue the brethren, 1. Ioh. 3. 14. Loue here is not a cauſe, but onely a ſigne of Gods loue to vs. And our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, Matth. 10. 41. He that receiueth a Prophet in the name of a Prophet, ſhall receiue a Prophets reward.

Now that wee bee not deceiued in theſe grounds; it muſt bee remembred, that theſe beginnings of grace (be they neuer ſo weake) muſt not bee flittering and fleeting, but conſtant and ſetled, not ſtayed or ſtopped in the way, but ſuch as daily grow and increaſe: and then they are indeed accepted of God. And hee that can finde theſe beginnings, or any of them truely in himſelfe, hee may aſſure himſelfe thereby, that he is the childe of God.

Sect. 5.

The true way of bringing a man within the couenant.

Hauing thus laid downe the Grounds of comfort: I come now to the Way, by which the partie in diſtreſſe may be brought within the compaſſe of the promiſe of ſaluation. This way ſtands in two things; in making Triall, and in Applying the promiſe.

Firſt then Triall muſt bee made, whether the perſon diſtreſſed haue in him as yet, any of the fore-named grounds of grace or not. This triall may be made by him that is the comforter, in the moouing of certaine Queſtions to the ſaid perſon. And firſt, let him aske, whether hee beleeue and repent? The diſtreſſed partie anſwers, no, hee cannot repent nor beleeue. Then wee muſt further aske, whether hee deſire to beleeue and repent? to this hee will anſwer, hee doth deſire it with all heart; in the ſame ſort is hee to make triall of the other grounds. When a man is in the fit of tentation; hee will ſay reſolutely, he is ſure to bee damned. Aske him in this fitte, of his loue to God, hee will giue anſwer, he hath none at all; but aske him further, whether hee loue a man becauſe hee is a Chriſtian, and a childe of God, then will hee ſay, hee doth indeede. Thus after triall made in this manner, ſome beginnings of faith and repentance will appeare, which at the firſt lay hidde. For God vſeth out of the time of proſperitie, by, and in diſtreſſe and affliction to worke his grace.

The ſecond point followeth. After that by triall ſome of the fore-ſaid beginnings of grace, bee found out, then comes the right Applying of the promiſe of life euerlaſting to the partie diſtreſſed. And that is done by a kinde of reaſoning: the firſt part whereof, is taken from the word of God; the ſecond, from the teſtimonie of the diſtreſſed conſcience; and the concluſion is the applying of the promiſe on this manner: Hee that hath an vnfained deſire to repent and beleeue, hath remiſſion of ſinnes, and life euerlaſting: But thou haſt an earneſt deſire to repent and beleeue in Chriſt, Therefore remiſſion of ſinnes, and life euerlaſting is thine.

Minor.

Concluſio.

And here remember, that it is moſt conuenient, this Application bee made by the Miniſter of the Goſpell, who in it muſt vſe his miniſteriall authoritie giuen him of God, to pronounce the pardon. For in diſtreſſe, it is as hard a thing to make the conſcience yeeld to the promiſe, as to make fire and water agree. For though men haue ſignes of grace and mercie in them, yet will they not acknowledge it, by reaſon of the extremitie of their diſtreſſe. In this manner, vpon any of the former grounds, may the troubled and perplexed ſoule bee aſſured, that mercie belongs to it. And this I take to be the onely generall and right way, of comforting a diſtreſſed conſcience.

Now that the promiſe thus applyed, may haue good ſucceſſe, theſe ſixe rules muſt neceſſarily be obſerued.

I. One is, that the comfort which is miniſtred, bee allayed with ſome mixture of the law; that is to ſay: the promiſe alone muſt not bee applyed, but withall mention is to bee made of the ſinnes of the partie, and of the grieuous puniſhments, due vnto him for the ſame. The reaſon is, becauſe there is much guile in the heart of man; in ſo much, as oftentimes it falleth out, that men not thoroughly humbled, being comforted either to ſoone, or too much, doe afterward become the worſt of all. In this reſpect, not vnlike to the yron, which beeing caſt into the fire vehemently hotte, and cooled againe, is much more hard, then it would haue beene, if the heate had beene moderate. And hence it is, that in the miniſtring of comfort, wee muſt ſomewhat keepe them downe, and bring them on by little and little to repentance. The ſweetneſſe of comfort is the greater, if it be delaied with ſome tartneſſe of the law.

II. Another rule is this: If the diſtreſſed partie, bee much poſſeſſed with griefe of himſelfe, hee muſt not bee left alone, but alwaies attended with good companie. For it is an vſuall practiſe of the diuell, to take the aduantage of the place and time, when a man is ſolitarie and depriued of that helpe, which otherwiſe hee might haue in ſocietie with others. Thus hee tempted Eue, when ſhee was apart from her husband. And in this regard Salomon pronounceth a woe to him that is alone, Eccl. 4. 10. But herein doth his malice moſt appeare, in that hee is alway readieſt, when a man is in great diſtreſſe, and withall ſolitarie, then vpon the ſudden to tempt him to deſpaire, and to the making away of himſelfe.

III. Thirdly, the partie in diſtreſſe muſt be taught not to reſt vpon his owne iudgement, but alwaies to ſubmit himſelfe, and be content to be aduiſed by others that are men of wiſdome, iudgement, and diſcretion. A thing to be obſerued the rather, becauſe the very neglect thereof, hath cauſed ſundry perſons to remaine vncomforted for many yeares.

IV. Fourthly, the party diſtreſſed, muſt neuer heare tell of any fearefull accidents, or of any that haue beene in like, or worſe caſe then himſelfe is. For vpon the very report, the diſtreſſed conſcience will faſten the accident vpon it ſelfe, and thereby commonly will be drawne to deeper griefe or deſpaire. The minde afflicted is prone to imagine fearefull things, and ſometime, the very bare naming of the diuell, will ſtrike terrour and feare into it.

V. Fiftly, the partie that is to comfort, muſt beare with al the wants of the diſtreſſed; as with their frowardneſſe, peeuiſhneſſe, raſhneſſe, and with their diſtempered and diſordered affections and actions: yea he muſt put vpon him (as it were) their perſons, being affected with their miſery, and touched with compaſſion of their ſorrowes, as if they were his owne, grieuing when hee ſeeth them to grieue, weeping when they doe weepe and lament.

VI. Sixtly, he that is the comforter, muſt not be diſcouraged, though after long labour and paines-taking there follow ſmal comfort and eaſe to the party diſtreſſed. For men will often bewray their ſtiffeneſſe in temptation, and vſually it is long before comfort can bee receiued: and why? ſurely, becauſe God hath the greateſt ſtroke in theſe diſtreſſes of mind, and brings men through all the temptations, that hee hath appointed, euen to the laſt and vtmoſt, before hee opens the heart to receiue comfort. The Church in the Canticles ſeekes for her beloued, but before ſhe can finde him, ſhe goes about in the city, through the ſtreets and by open places, paſſing by the Watchmen themſelues; and after ſhee hath vſed all meanes without helpe or hope, at length, and not before, ſhe finds her beloued, him in whom her ſoule delighteth, Cant. 3. 4.

Thus much for the generall Remedie of all Diſtreſſes, now I come to the particular Diſtreſſes themſelues.

CHAP. VIII.

Of the firſt ſpeciall Diſtreſſe, ariſing of a diuine temptation.

THe firſt Diſtreſſe ariſeth of a diuine temptation, which is a combate with God himſelfe immediatly. And this Diſtreſſe is, when the conſcience ſpeakes ſome fearefull things of God, and withall the party diſtreſſed feeles ſome euident tokens of Gods wrath.

Examples.

Examples hereof wee ſhall finde many in the word of God. One is, the example of righteous Iob, who hauing beene long in outward afflictions, was withal exerciſed with the apprehenſion of the anger of God, and in that ſtate he ſaith, Iob. 6. 4. that the arrowes of the Almighty were in him, that the venime thereof did drinke vp his ſpirit, that the terrours of God did fight againſt him. Yea further hee addeth, Iob 13. 26. that God was his enemie, and wrote bitter things againſt him, and made him to poſſeſſe the ſinnes of his youth. And at another time he complaineth, Iob 16. 9. that Gods wrath had torne him, that hee hated him, gnaſhed vpon him with his teeth, and had ſharpened his eyes againſt him: yea that he had taken him by the necke, and beaten him, and ſet him as a marke for himſelfe. In all which, and diuers other places it appeares, that his conſcience was exerciſed with the ſenſe of the wrath of God, which had now euen ſeazed vpon his ſoule.

Pſal. 6.

Another example wee haue in Dauid, who alſo was exerciſed with this temptation and trouble of minde, as the firſt words of the 6. Pſalme, and the whole tenour thereof doe euidently ſhew: For firſt, he deſires the Lord, not to rebuke him in his wrath, and afterward complaineth, that his griefe was ſo great, that his very fleſh conſumed, his bones were vexed, and his body brought to ſuch a ſtate, as no ſickneſſe could haue brought him vnto. And it is not vnlike, that the ſame Prophet did often fall into the like kind of diſtreſſe of mind, as may be gathered out of Pſalm. 77. and ſundrie other places.

Now as it fared with theſe, and diuers other ſeruants of God, in auncient times, ſo are wee not without ſome inſtances thereof in our daies. Amongſt many, that worthy man Maſter Luther, writes of himſelfe, that hee was in this particular temptation, and that he learned in it, the doctrine of the Iuſtification of a ſinner, by the meere mercie of God, without any merit of workes: and vpon the ſenſe and experience of the nature and properties of this diſtreſſe, hee wrote a notable expoſition of the ſixt Pſalme of Dauid, the ſcope and intent whereof, hee writeth to bee nothing elſe, but a ſoueraigne remedie of this, and the like diſtreſſes of the minde and conſcience.

The Occaſion.

If it be demaunded, what is the Occaſion of this kinde of temptation? I anſwer, that it ariſeth ſometimes, vpon the committing of ſome notorious ſin, which doth wound the conſcience, as in Cain, Iudas, and Saul, who for their great and capitall ſinnes, that ſtinged and wounded their conſciences, grew to a fearefull ſtate, and conſequently, periſhed in this temptation. Sometimes againe, it comes when there is no ſinne committed, but obedience to God performed: and then there cannot bee rendred any reaſon of it, either in man, or out of man, ſaue this, that God will haue it ſo to be. And the truth hereof is plaine by the examples of Iob and Dauid before mentioned.

The effects of the tẽptation.

The effects of this temptation are many, and very ſtrange. For outwardly it workes a change and alteration in the bodie, as it were a burning ague, and it cauſeth the intrals to riſe, the liuer to roule in the bodie, and it ſets a great heate in the bones, and conſumes the fleſh more then any ſickneſſe can doe. And that it is ſo as I ſay, beſide experience, it is cleare in the word of God. Dauid in this diſtreſſe affirmeth, that his eyes were eaten as it were with wormes, and ſunke into his head, Pſal. 6. 7. that his moyſture became as the drought in ſummer, Pſal. 32. 4. And Iob ſaies, Iob 30. 30. that his skin was blacke vpon him, his bones were burnt with heate; yea, that by means of this diſtreſſe, he was now full of wrinkles, and his leaneneſſe did riſe vpon him, Iob 16. 8. It is a principle which Phyſitians do holde, that the minde followes the temperature of the body, and is affected according to the good or euill conſtitution thereof: which though it be true, yet withall it is as manifeſt on the other ſide, that the body doth often follow the ſtate and condition of the minde: For a diſtreſſed heart, muſt of neceſſity make a fainting, and a languiſhing body.

The Remedie.

But the principall thing to be ſought for in this temptation, is the Remedie thereof; whereunto there be fiue things required, which are to be practiſed as occaſion ſhall be offered.

Firſt, choice muſt bee made of the moſt fit and preſent remedie, and that muſt bee vſed in the firſt place.

Now the moſt fit and preſent remedie is, to bring the partie troubled to the perſonall exerciſes of faith and repentance, by, and in himſelfe. For this end, hee muſt examine his conſcience moſt ſtraightly and narrowly of all the ſinnes of his heart, and life. Secondly, he muſt humbly confeſſe againſt himſelfe, all his knowne ſinnes: and withall acknowledge the due condemnation, that he thereby hath deſerued. Thirdly, he muſt crie to heauen for mercie, intreating the Lord moſt inſtantly for pardon, and for the reſtraint of his wrath due vnto him for his ſinne. Dauid beeing in this diſtreſſe, performed all theſe duties, as we may reade in the ſixt Pſalme: and he ſaith further of himſelfe, Pſalm. 32. 3. 5. that whileſt he concealed his ſinnes, the hand of God was heauie vpon him: but vpon his earneſt confeſſion, and deprecation, he receiued mercie. And if we reade the booke of Iob, we ſhall finde that the principall ſcope thereof is this; namely, to ſhew vnto vs, that Iob was throughly exerciſed with this temptation, and that in the ende hauing beene rebuked both by his friends, and by God himſelfe, his recouerie was made by humbling himſelfe when hee ſaith, Iob 39. 37. Beholde I am vile: again, Now I abhorre my ſelfe, and repent in duſt and aſhes.

Some may here demand, If it fall out, that the perſon himſelfe cannot performe any good duty of himſelf, by reaſon of his diſtraction in ſoule and bodie, what muſt then be be done? Anſ. If the partie can but ſigh, and ſobbe vnto God for mercie, and comfort: it is no doubt a worke of Gods ſpirit, and a practiſe both of faith, and repentance. Wee know not (ſaith Saint Paul, Rom. 8. 26.) what to pray as we ought, (namely, in our diſtreſſes,) but the Spirit it ſelfe makes requeſt for vs, with ſighs that cannot bee expreſſed: and therein lies our comfort. Thus Moſes at the redde ſea beeing in great diſtreſſe, Exod. 14. 15. and not knowing what to ſay, or do, ſighed and groned inwardly in his ſoule vnto the Lord, for helpe and protection: and his very deſire was in ſtead of a loud crie in the eares of the Lord.

The ſecond thing is, that triall muſt bee made, whether the party hath in him any tokens of grace, or not?

Theſe tokens are the ſmall beginnings of grace, which before I haue declared. As for example: a griefe becauſe wee cannot grieue for ſinne as wee ſhould: a ſerious will and deſire to beleeue and repent: a purpoſe to ſinne no more, and ſuch like. If theſe bee found in the partie, then by them, as by ſure pledges, hee may be aſſured of the fauour of God towards him: and where any of theſe be found, the ſaying of God to Saint Paul muſt bee vrged, 2. Cor. 12. 9. My grace is ſufficient for thee: and therewith muſt the diſtreſſed partie ſtay his minde. Yea we are to be content with any condition in this life, bee it neuer ſo miſerable, ſo long as wee are in the fauour of God, though he ſhould lay vpon vs euen the paines of hell, till the time of our death. So did Dauid, who when hee was purſued by his owne ſonne, vttered theſe words vnto God, Behold, if I pleaſe thee not, doe with mee what thou wilt, 2. Sam. 15. 26. And the like was the minde of Paul, who beeing aſſured of the fauour of God, was content for his glory, and the ſaluation of the Iſraelites (if it had beene poſſible) to bee ſeparated from Chriſt, and to endure the very pangs of hell, Rom. 9. 3.

The third thing in this cure is, to applie to the ſaid diſtreſſed partie, ſuch promiſes of God made vnto afflicted perſons, as are moſt large and comfortable.

For example, that the Lord is neare to them that are of a contrite heart, and will ſaue ſuch as be afflicted in ſpirit, Pſal. 34. 18. Againe, I came not (ſaith our Sauiour Chriſt) but to the loſt ſheepe of the houſe of Iſrael, Matth. 15. 24. Hee ſaies not, to the ſtraying ſheepe, but to ſuch as are now in the pit, ready to be drowned, or in the Lyons mouth, ready to bee deuoured. Againe, The Spirit of the Lord is vpon me, therefore hee hath annointed mee, that I ſhould preach the Goſpell to the poore: that is, to ſuch as are diſtreſſed in conſcience, and poore in ſpirit: hee hath ſent me that I ſhould heale the broken hearted, that I ſhould preach deliuerance to the captiues. Theſe and many other ſuch like promiſes, are in this caſe to bee vrged, and the partie mooued to endeauour to beleeue them, and to holde them, and reſt himſelfe vpon them, though he loſe all things elſe.

Fourthly, the partie muſt be brought to a ſerious conſideration of his owne life paſt, and of Gods mercifull dealing with him and others in this caſe in former times, and therewith is he to be comforted for the time preſent. For if aforehand hee hath receiued any tokens of the fauour and loue of God, by them he is now to ſtay and to ſettle his mind. The reaſon is plaine: the gifts of God are without repentance; whom he loueth once, he loueth to the end, and whom he chooſeth, hee calleth, iuſtifieth, and ſanctifieth, and will alſo in time glorifie. Dauid being in ſuch affliction, that hee could hardly thinke vpon God, yet he took this courſe, prayed to the Lord for comfort, communed with his owne heart, and called to remẽbrance how God had formerly dealt with him, Pſal.77.10. and with this meditation of the continuall courſe of Gods mercie in his preſeruation, hee confirmed his faith, and ſtaied his heart in his greateſt troubles.

Remoouall of doubts.

The fifth and laſt thing to bee done, is the remoouall of ſuch reaſons and doubts, as the partie diſtreſſed vſually makes againſt himſelfe, for his owne ouerthrow. For it is the manner of thoſe that are troubled in mind, to diſpute againſt themſelues; and commonly they are woont to alleadge three things.

Firſt, beeing inſtructed how to humble themſelues, and to depend on Gods mercie, they will grant, that all theſe indeed are good things, but they belong not to them; for they neither doe, nor can feele any thing, but the tokens of Gods anger, and that they are already entred into ſome degrees of condemnation.

This obiection may be taken away, by informing them of the manner of Gods dealing in all his workes. For commonly hee workes all things in his creatures, in, and by contraries, if we could know the whole frame of them.

Thus in the Creation euery creature had his beeing of that which had no beeing, and ſomething was made, not of ſomething, but of nothing. After the flood, the ſigne of Gods couenant, for the preſeruation of the world from deſtruction by raine, is the Rainbow, which indeed is a naturall ſigne of raine. When Elias was to prooue the Lord to be the only true God, againſt the idolatrous Prieſts of Baal, and that by burnt-offerings; he powred water vpon the ſacrifice, & filled a trench with water round about, and in this contrarie meanes was the ſacrifice burnt vp. Chriſt for the curing of a blinde man, tempers ſpittle and clay together, which in all reaſon, is a fitter meanes to put out the eyes, then to cauſe the blinde to ſee.

Thus in the worke of our Redemption, Chriſt giues life, not by life, but by death, and he ſends men to heauen by the gates and ſuburbes of hel: he ſhewes his greateſt power, in the greateſt weaknes; nay, his power is made perfect through weaknes, 2.Cor.10.19. He will not build vpon an olde foundation, but hee puls downe and deſtroyes all, that man may haue no hope at all in himſelf, but that all the hope he hath, may be in God. Firſt, he kils, and then he makes aliue, as Anna ſpeakes: firſt he woundeth, and then he healeth. He makes man to ſowe in teares, that afterward hee may reape in ioy. And he that knowes Gods dealing to bee this, muſt herewith reſt content & ſatisfied: becauſe in wrath God vſeth to remember his mercy: yea, his mercy is neuer ſweet vnto the palate of the ſoule, vntill it be ſeaſoned with ſome taſte of his wrath. The Paſchall Lambe was eaten with ſowre hearbes, to ſignifie, that we can feele no ſweetnes in the blood of Chriſt, till we firſt feele the ſmart of our owne ſinnes and corruptions.

Exod.12.18.

Secondly, theſe perſons vſe to alleadge againſt themſelues, that if they could feele any comfort at all, then they would ſtay their mindes, and yeeld to good perſwaſions, and exhortations.

To this the anſwer is; That there is a rule of grace, (which wee muſt follow) gathered out of the word of God, and the experience of Gods Children, contrarie to the rule of nature, and aboue the right of reaſon: and it is this, that in caſe of affliction we muſt not liue by feeling, but by faith.

This rule is grounded vpon the ſpeech of the Lord by the Prophet, the iuſt man ſhall liue by his faith, Hab, 2.41. When we haue neither light, nor ſenſe, nor any taſte of Gods mercie, but onely apprehend his wrath, euen then we muſt labour to lay hold of mercy in his word, and promiſe. Senſe and feeling are not alwaies fitte directions for the time of this life: For he may be the deare childe of God, that in preſent feeleth nothing but his wrath and indignation. This indeede is the true triall of our faith, when euen aboue and againſt reaſon, wee relie on the mercy of God, in the apprehenſion of his anger. So did Dauid, Out of the deepe, (ſaith he) that is, being now deeply plunged into the pangs of a diſtreſſed conſcience, haue I called vpon thee, O Lord, Pſal.130.1. And Iob in the like caſe, Lord, though thou kill me, yet will I truſt in thee. Abraham is commended by the holy Ghoſt, amongſt other things, for this, that he beleeued in God aboue hope, Rom.4.18. that is againſt all matter of hope, that might poſſibly be conceiued, vpon the conſideration of the ſtrength of naturall cauſes. The theefe vpon the croſſe, feeling nothing but woe, and ſeeing nothing in Chriſt but miſerie and contempt, yet he beleeued in Chriſt, and was ſaued. In a word, Chriſt himſelfe, when hee was forſaken of all men, and voide of al worldly comfort, and felt nothing but the depth of the wrath of God, in his agonie and paſſion, yet by the faith of his manhood, hee ſtaied himſelfe, and ſaid, My God, my God.

Thirdly, they vſe to pleade, that their caſe is deſperate, that neuer any was in ſuch a ſtate as they are, neuer any touched with the like diſtreſſe of minde.

Anſw. It is falſe: For the holy Ghoſt hath penned three notable places of Scripture, the booke of Iob, & two Pſalmes of Dauid, Pſal. 6. & 77. wherein are propounded vnto vs the examples of Iob and Dauid, Gods own deare ſeruants, who were in as great diſtreſſe, as euer they, or any other haue beene. And they may not thinke, that they euer could be able to endure greater paines then Chriſt, who notwithſtanding in the anguiſh of his ſoule vpon the Croſſe, cryed out, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me?

And thus much touching the firſt kinde of trouble of conſcience, called the diuine temptation.

CHAP. IX.

Of the ſecond Speciall Diſtreſſe, ariſing from outward afflictions.

THe ſecond kind of Diſtreſſe, is that which ariſeth from outward afflictions. By Afflictions I vnderſtand, al manner of miſeries and calamities in this life, from the leaſt to the greateſt, from the paine of the little finger, to the very pangs of death.

Now the Queſtion is, how the Trouble of minde, ariſing by afflictions, may bee remedied. For the anſwer of which queſtion, two thinges are required of the party diſtreſſed; Practiſe, and Meditation.

Sect. 1.

Practiſe in caſe of Affliction.

The Practiſe is that, which is to bee vſed in all diſtreſſes of minde whatſoeuer. And it is a diligent examination of the conſcience in regard of ſinne: an earneſt and hearty confeſſion thereof vnto God: and deprecation, that is, earneſt praier vnto him for the pardon of the ſame. Theſe three things beeing done truly and vnfainedly from the heart, are a preſent remedie againſt this trouble, and bring with them much comfort.

2. Chro. 33. 11, 12.

Dan. 9. 10, 11.

Lam. 3. 40.

Manaſſes the king of Iudah, that had committed much wickedneſſe, when hee was carried captiue to Babel, and there put in chaines, hee humbled himſelfe, acknowledged his ſinnes, and prayed earneſtly vnto the Lord; and the iſſue was good, for God was intreated of him, and gaue him deliuerance. Iob beeing long in outward affliction, humbled himſelfe in like manner, and at length receiued comfort. Daniel humbled himſelfe before God, for his owne ſinnes, and for the ſinnes of Gods people, making requeſt vnto God earneſtly for them; & euen when he was in the act of praying, the Lord ſent his angell Gabriel, to giue him notice of deliuerance. Laſtly, the Church of God, vnder the croſſe, performed the like duty: Let vs ſearch and trie our waies, & turne to the Lord, and God in mercy gaue an eare vnto her mourning & lamentation. By all theſe places it is apparent, that there is no better remedy in the world, for the minde of man grieued by meanes of outward afflictions, then the practiſe of the duties before named.

Sect. 2.

Meditations in caſe of Affliction.

The next thing vnto Practiſe, is the Meditation of the comfortable doctrines that are ſet downe in the word of God, touching afflictions. All which doctrines may bee reduced to fiue principall and maine grounds of comfort, and ſhall be laid downe in their order.

Grounds.
I
Gods prouidence.

The firſt Ground is, that all afflictions from the leaſt to the greateſt, doe come to paſſe, not by accident, chaunce, or fortune, but by the ſpeciall prouidence of God. I explaine it thus: In euery particular croſſe and affliction, there is the hand of Gods particular prouidence, and that in three regards.

Firſt, becauſe God decreeth, and fore-appointeth euery particular croſſe. Marke the words of Paul, Rom. 8. 18. Whom God hath foreknown, them he hath predeſtinate, to be made like vnto the image of his ſonne; and what is this image? nothing elſe but a conformitie vnto Chriſt in afflictions for this life, and in glorie for the life to come. Now if God hath decreed, that thoſe whome hee fore-knew, ſhould bee conformable vnto his Sonne in theſe reſpects, then hath hee alſo decreede the afflictions themſelues.

Secondly, God doth not onely barely permitte afflictions to bee, but alſo hee effecteth them, and brings them into execution, as they are croſſes, corrections, trials, & puniſhments. I make peace (ſaith the Lord, Eſa. 45. 7.) and I create euill, that is, not the euill of ſinne, but of puniſhment, which is euill in our ſenſe and feeling. For things are teamed euill two waies: ſome are euill indeed, ſome are euill not indeed, but in regard of our ſenſe, apprehenſion, and eſtimation; and of this latter ſort are afflictions, which God is ſaid to create. And to this purpoſe is the ſaying of the Prophet Amos, Shal there be euil in the citie, and the Lord hath not done it? Amos 3. 6.

Thirdly, as God cauſeth afflictions, ſo hee ordereth and diſpoſeth them, that is, he limiteth and appointeth the beginning, the ende, the meaſure or quantitie, and the continuance thereof. Yea he alſo ordereth them to their right endes, namely, his owne glory, the good of his ſeruants, and the benefit of his Church. Thus God is ſaid to correct his people in Ier.30.11. iudgement, that is, ſo as he will haue the whole ordering of the correction in his owne hand. Ioſeph tels his brethren, that when they intended euill againſt him, in ſelling him to the Iſmaelites for ſiluer, God diſpoſed it for good, Gen. 50. 19, 20. When Shemei curſed Dauid, hee forbade his ſeruants, ſo much as to meddle with him, and why? becauſe (ſaith he) the Lord bade him to curſe, and who then dare ſay vnto him, Why haſt thou done ſo? 2 Sam. 16. 10. And to this purpoſe the Prophet Dauid ſaith, I held my peace and ſaid nothing: why? becauſe thou Lord haſt done it, Pſal. 39. 9.

Here ſome will ſay, if Afflictions did come onely from God, it were ſomewhat, but oftentimes they come from men that beare vs no good will; and therefore no marvell though we be impatient. Anſ. When croſſes do come from men, God vſeth them as inſtruments, to execute his iudgements vpon vs; and in this worke, God is the chiefe doer, and they are as tooles, in the hand of the workman. And the Lord inflicteth them vpon vs by men, to trie our patience vnder the croſſe. Ioſeph, though he knew well the bad dealing of his brethren towards him, yet hee looked not to them alone, but to an higher cauſe, namely, the Lord himſelfe, who executeth his owne good will by them: God (ſaith he) diſpoſed it to good. And againe, Gen. 45. 5. & 50. 20. God did ſend me before you into Egypt for your preſeruation.

II. Gods commaundement. The ſecond ground is, The commaundement of God touching the Croſſe, and obedience vnto him therein. This commaundement is expreſſed, Luk. 9. 23. where we are commaunded to take vp our croſſe euery day, and follow Chriſt. Abraham was commanded, with his own hands to ſacrifice his onely ſonne Iſaac; and to this commaundement, (though otherwiſe a great croſſe vnto him,) hee addreſſeth himſelfe to yeeld obedience. And in the prophecie of Micah, the Church ſaith, Shee will beare the wrath of the Lord, that is, ſhe will performe obedience to him in the Croſſe, becauſe ſhe had ſinned againſt him. (Mich.7.9.) And Saint Peter ſaith, that God reſiſteth the proud, and giueth grace to the humble: therefore humble your ſelues vnder the mighty hand of God. (1.Pet. 5.5,6.) And this beeing the commandement of God, that we ſhould yeeld obedience to him, in euery affliction, we ought to bee no leſſe carefull to obey it, then any one commandement of the morall Law.

III. Gods preſence. The third ground is, that God will be preſent with his ſeruants in their afflictions. Vpon this ground, Dauid comforts himſelfe, becauſe God had promiſed to heare him, to be with him in trouble, and to deliuer him, Pſal. 91. 15. And in another place, Though I ſhould walke in the ſhadow of death, I would feare none ill: for thou art with me, &c. Pſal. 23. 4.

Now that wee may the better vnderſtand this doctrine, wee are to conſider what be the Ends, or effects of Gods being with vs in affliction, whereby he teſtifieth his preſence; and they are three.

A The firſt is, to worke our deliuerance from the croſſe: Call vpon me (ſaith the Lord) in the time of thy trouble, and I will deliuer thee, Pſal. 50. 15. This promiſe muſt not bee vnderſtood ſimply, but with an exception, ſo farre forth as it ſhall be for our good. For all promiſes of temporall deliuerance, are conditionall, and muſt be conceiued with this limitatiō of the croſſe and chaſtiſement, if God pleaſe to impoſe it.

Some may ſay, how if God will not deliuer vs, but leaue vs in the affliction, what comfort ſhall we then haue?

Anſ. In the ſecond place therefore we muſt remember, that God will temper and moderate our afflictions, ſo as wee may bee able to beare them. B Habbakuk praieth vnto God, in the behalfe of the Church, that hee would in wrath remember mercy, Hab. 3. 2. And Paul ſaith, that the Lord will not ſuffer vs to be tempted aboue that wee are able to beare, but will giue an iſſue with the temptation, 1. Cor. 10. 13.

Thirdly, put the caſe that God doth not moderate our afflictions, but ſuffer them to remaine vpon vs, not onely for ſome time of our life, but to the very death: yet then wil he teſtifie his holy preſence another way, namely, by giuing the partie diſtreſſed, power and ſtrength to beare his affliction. Vnto you it is giuen (ſaith Paul) for Chriſt, that not only ye ſhould beleeue in him, but alſo ſuffer for his ſake. (Phil.1.29.)

IV. Goodnes of afflictions. The fourth ground of comfort in affliction is, that euery afflictiō vpon the ſeruants of God, hath ſome ſpeciall goodneſſe in it. C Rom. 8. 28. We know that all things worke together for good vnto them that loue God. And in regard hereof, the croſſes which are endured by the children of God, are ſo farre from beeing preiudiciall to their ſaluation, that they are rather helps and furtherances of the ſame. Now this Goodneſſe is perceiued two waies. Firſt, by the fruit and effect of it, and then by the qualitie and condition thereof. In both which reſpects, afflictions are good.

Fruites of Affliction. Touching the fruites of Afflictions, becauſe they are manifolde, I will reduce them to ſeauen principall heads.

Conſideration. I. Afflictions do make men to ſee and conſider their ſinnes. D Ioſephs brethren for twenty yeares togither, were litle or not at all troubled for their wickednes, in ſelling their brother; yet vpon their affliction in Egypt, they began to conſider what they had done: Wee haue (ſay they) verily ſinned againſt our brother, in that we ſaw the anguiſh of his ſoule, when he beſought vs, and we would not heare him: therefore is this trouble come vpon vs. (Gen.42,21.) Manaſſes in the time of his peace, gaue himſelfe to witchcraft, and the worſhipping of ſtrange gods: but when he was captiue in Babylon, then was he brought to the ſight of his ſinnes, and moued to humble himſelfe before God for them. (1.Chro.33. 11,12.)

Humiliation. II. Afflictions ſerue to humble men in their ſoules before God. The young vnthrift in the Goſpell, called the prodigall childe, while his portion laſted, hee ſpent liberally, &

A was grieued for nothing: but when he came to Luk. 15. 17. &c. be pinched with hunger, and that through his owne folly, then he humbled himſelfe before his father, and returned home vnto him. Dauid ſaith of himſelfe, that in his proſperity he thought he ſhould neuer be mooued; becauſe the Lord of his goodneſſe had made his mountaine to ſtand ſtrong: but (ſaith he) thou didſt hide thy face, and I was troubled, then cried I vnto the Lord.

Amendment. III. They ſerue to worke Amendment of life. No chaſtiſing (ſaith the Author to the Hebrewes) for the preſent ſeemeth to be ioyous, but Heb. 12. 11. afterward it bringeth the quiet fruit of righteouſneſſe, to them that are thereby exerciſed: that is, afflictions and chaſtiſements that ſeaze vpon Gods children, doe leaue after them amendment of life, B as the needle paſſeth through the cloath, and leaueth the threed behind it. 1. Cor. 11. 31 When we are iudged (ſaith the Apoſtle) we are nurtered of the Lord, that we might not be condemned with the world. And Dauid confeſſeth, Pſa. 119. It is good for me that I haue beene afflicted, that I might learne thy ſtatutes. And the good Ioh. 15. husbandman purgeth and pruneth the vine, that it may bring forth more and better fruit.

Abnegation. IV. They cauſe men to denie themſelues, & to relie wholly on the mercie of God. Thus Paul receiued the ſentence of death in himſelfe, that he ſhould not truſt in himſelfe, but in God, that raiſeth the dead, 2. Cor. 1. 9.

V. The fift is inuocation. For afflictions Inuocation make vs cry heartily and feruently vnto God, C to bring our ſelues into his preſence, & there to abaſe our ſelues before him. Thus the Lord ſaid of the old Iſraelites, that when he ſlue them, then they returned, and ſought him early, Pſal. 78. 34. And elſwhere he ſaith of his Hoſ. 5. 15. children, that in their affliction they will ſeeke him diligently.

VI. The ſixth, is Patience. Affliction brin- Patience, Rom. 5. 3. geth forth patience, patience, experience, &c. As if he ſhould ſay, becauſe the loue of God is ſhed in our hearts, therefore in afflictions we are patient. Now whilſt we patiently beare the croſſe, we haue experience of the mercie and loue of God towards vs: and hauing once in D ſome notable deliuerance, tried and taſted the mercie of God, we doe by hope (as it were) promiſe to our ſelues, the ſaid fauour and mercie, for time to come.

VII. The laſt fruit, is Obedience. This Obedience the holy Ghoſt teacheth, to haue beene the fruit of the ſuffering of Chriſt, when he ſaith, Heb. 5. 8. Though he were the ſonne, yet learned he obedience, by the things which he ſuffered.

In the next place, afflictions are good in regard of their qualitie and condition, which is, that they are tokens and pledges of our adoption, Heb. 12. 7. when wee make the beſt vſe of them. If ye endure chaſtening, (ſaith the holy Ghoſt) God offereth himſelfe vnto you as vnto ſonnes: that is, hee comes to you in the croſſe, not as a iudge and reuenger, but a kinde and louing father; and the croſſe impoſed, is as it were his fatherly hand, wherewith he chaſtiſeth vs: and therefore Iob praiſeth God for his affliction, ſaying, God hath giuen, and God hath taken away, bleſſed be the name of the Lord, Iob. 1. 21.

V Partakers in the Croſſe. The fifth Ground of comfort is, that the partie diſtreſſed, hath partners in the croſſe. For firſt, he hath Chriſt to be his partner, becauſe he hath fellowſhip with him, in that he is afflicted, and is willing to obey God therein. Paul accounteth it happineſſe, to know the fellowſhip of Chriſts afflictions, & to be made conformable vnto his death, Phil. 3. 10. And Saint Peter exhorteth beleeuers to reioyce, in as much as they are partakers of Chriſts ſufferings, 1. Pet. 4. 13. Secondly, if the party afflicted repent, Chriſt communicateth with him in all his croſſes, and accounts them as his owne. B The Apoſtle in this regard, would haue no man thinke it ſtrange, no not when he is in the fierie triall, but rather to reioyce becauſe he is partaker of Chriſts ſufferings, 1. Pet. 4. 12. And Chriſt ſaith to Saul perſecuting his Church, Saul, Saul, why perſecuteſt thou me? Thirdly, he that is afflicted, hath other ſeruants of God, partakers with him in all his afflictions. The Apoſtle Peter wiſheth the Church of God to reſiſt Sathan by faith, knowing, ſaith he, that the ſame afflictions are accompliſhed, in your brethren that are in the world, 1. Pet. 5. 9.

Thus much generally of Afflictions, and of Comfort in them. It were a long & tedious C worke to ſet all downe in particular, together with their proper and diſtinct comforts: therefore I will paſſe them ouer, & ſpeake onely of three kinds of Afflictiōs, with their remedies.

Sect. 1.

Deferring of Deliuerance. The firſt is, the Deferring of deliuerance: a great affliction, if it be conſidered. And touching it, I propound one Queſtion, namely, How the mind of the partie diſtreſſed, may be ſtaied, when as the Lord deferres deliuerance.

For the anſwer hereof, three eſpeciall points are to be conſidered.

I. Firſt, that God hath in his wiſedome, ſet downe certen and vnchangeable times, for the accompliſhment and iſſue of all things D that are. There is a time appointed to euery thing vnder the ſunne. Eccl. 3. 1. The ſpeech of Salomon is generall, and the meaning of it is this. Whatſoeuer there is in the world, either done or ſuffered, or enioyed by man, whether it be of the number of naturall things, or of thoſe which are voluntarily vndertaken, or neceſſarily endured, God hath in his prouidence forced vnto them, a ſet time and ſeaſon, whereof dependeth the ſucceſſe of them all. And this time, himſelfe moſt freely ordereth and ruleth at his owne good pleaſure, which as no man can hinder or ſtay, ſo is it not in the power of any, to haſten or preuent.

This point, the H. Ghoſt in Scripture prooueth by two inſtances, of the threatnings and promiſes of God, which himſelfe accompliſheth, at ſome certaine & vnchangeable times.

When the old world in the daies of Noah, Gen. 6.3.

had growne to much impietie, and wickedneſſe, the Lord appointed a certaine ſpace of 120. yeares for their repentance and conuerſion, at the very end and tearme whereof, he brought the flood vpon them, and not before. For if we compare the particular circumſtances of time noted in the 7. of Geneſis, with that which S. Peter writeth, 1. Pet. 3. 20. we ſhall finde, that the inundation of waters came vpon the earth, at the very point of time before determined.

Ier. 25. 11.

Dan. 5.30.

Againe, God threatned by Ieremie, that the Iewes for their ſinnes, ſhould be led captiue, and ſerue the king of Babel 70. yeares. Now if we take the iuſt computation of time, it will appeare, that ſo ſoone as euer thoſe yeares were expired, the foreſaid threat was accompliſhed. And therefore Daniel, alluding to Ieremies prophecies, exactly ſetteth it downe, when he ſaith, The ſame night was Belſhazzar king of the Chaldeans ſlaine, that is, the very night wherein thoſe 70. yeares came to their full period.

And as there are ſet times, allotted by God for the execution of his threatning ſentences; ſo alſo hath he determined certenly the accompliſhment of all and euery of his promiſes.

Gen. 15.13.

Act. 7. 25.

An example hereof we haue in the Iſraelites, of whome the Lord ſaid to Abraham, that they ſhould be in affliction in a ſtrange land, 430. yeares, and then be deliuered. This promiſe of God was expreſſely fulfilled, as we reade in the booke of Exodus. For before the end and tearme of theſe yeares, they had no deliuerance at all: but when that time was expired, euen that ſelfe ſame day departed all the hoſts of Iſrael, out of the land of Egypt. And though Moſes, fourtie yeares before this time, tooke in hand the worke of their deliuerance; yet he did it without ſucceſſe, and vpon a certaine accident, beeing himſelfe conſtrained to flie into Madian, he liued there as a ſtranger with Iethro his father in law, til the ſaid time of foure hundred and thirtie yeares was accompliſhed; toward the end whereof, beeing called of God to that office, he proſpered, and not before. And in the ſame manner, hath God ſet downe a certen period of time, within which he will exerciſe his children more or leſſe, and at the end whereof, and not before, he will releeue and comfort them againe.

Now as the certentie of the accompliſhment of Gods threatning word ſerues to terrifie all wicked liuers from ſinne: ſo the vnchangeable performance of his promiſes, at the very time prefixed, and not before, teacheth the children of God ſundry things.

Firſt, that when they are in any diſtreſſe, & haue not preſent or ſpeedie deliuerance, according to their deſire, they ſhould waite the Lords leiſure, and expect with patience till the time come, which is appointed by him for their eaſe and releefe: and in the meane while ſtay their hearts, by hope and affiance in his mercie. The reaſon is plaine. God is ſure in his word, therefore though heauines may endure for a night, yet ioy will returne in the morning, Pſal. 30.5.

Hab. 2.2,3

Thus the Lord comforteth the Iewes in a particular diſtreſſe, as we may reade in the prophecie of Habbakuk, where the Prophet in the name of the Iewes, complaineth and expoſtulateth the matter with God, why his owne people ſhould be ſo lamentably afflicted, by a terrible and furious nation, & why they ſhould be ledde away captiues, by the Chaldeans the enemies of God? To this the Lord makes anſwer, that as he had certenly determined, that iudgement to come vpon them, ſo certenly had he appointed a ſet time, wherein they ſhould be deliuered. In the meane while, he bids them to comfort themſelues in this, that though the affliction ſhould reſt vpon them for a ſeaſon, yet vndoubtedly they ſhould be eaſed at the length: and therefore, that they ſhould in patience waite for the viſion, that is, the accompliſhment of the viſion touching their deliuerance.

Secondly, hence we learne, that we muſt not only beleeue the promiſes of God in generall, that God is true and faithfull in them, and that he is able and willing to fulfill them, euen as he made them: but we muſt beleeue them in particular, that is, with application to their proper and ſeuerall circumſtances, which are the particular meanes, places, and times, whereby, and wherein he hath giuen his word, as touching our freedome and exemption from the croſſe.

Verſ. 2.

Take an inſtance hereof in the Prophet Daniel, who knew well by the ſpirit of Prophecie, that the Lord had determined to bring vpon the Iewes 70. yeares captiuitie in Babylon. He knew alſo, that God had promiſed to put an end to that captiuitie, at the end and tearme of thoſe yeares. Now what did Daniel in this caſe? Vpon knowledge of the will of God in that point, during the ſaid time, he praied not vnto the Lord for deliuerance of his people: But when he vnderſtood that the time drew neere, wherein it was the will of God, that the Iewes ſhould returne out of captiuitie, then by faith applying the promiſe of God to that particular time, he beſought the Lord in praier and ſupplication, with faſting in ſackecloath and aſhes, and the Lord gaue eare vnto his praiers, and yeelded him a gracious anſwer.

II. The ſecond point is, that God, when he deferres deliuerance, doth it vpon great and weightie cauſes and conſiderations, beſt knowne to himſelfe.

The firſt whereof is, that thereby he might humble men throughly, and bring them to an vtter deniall of themſelues, and conſequently cauſe them, to learne patience in affliction, which they would not learne, if they might be their owne caruers, and haue ſpeedy deliuerance from the croſſe, at their owne wils and pleaſures.

Secondly, that beeing afflicted, they may acknowledg whence their deliuerance comes; yea, whence they doe receiue not onely that, but euery other good benefit which they inioy: namely, not from themſelues, or any creature, but onely from the Lord; and accordingly may learne to value and prize his gifts, at their deſerued excellencie. For it is a true ſaying, and often verified in affliction and want, that benefits eaſily obtained, are lightly regarded, and ſooner forgotten.

Thirdly, that by the continuance of the croſſe without intermiſſion, he may make them to diſtaſt the world, and conſequently draw them to the meditation of the life to come, wherein all matter of mourning ſhall ceaſe, Reuel. 21.4. And all teares ſhall be wiped from their eies.

Fourthly, the Lord deferreth deliuerance from affliction, that he might preuent greater euils and dangers, whereinto thoſe that are afflicted might runne, if they had their hearts deſire, and were eaſed, not at his will, but at their owne wiſhes. When the children of Iſrael came into Canaan, they were informed, that they ſhould dwell together with the Canaanites, and Moſes rendreth a reaſon thereof, Deuter. 7.22. Leſt (ſaith he) the wilde beaſts of the field multiply againſt thee. And for the preuenting of this euil, the Iſraelites muſt endure ſome annoyance by the Canaanites, Exod. 23.29. Euen ſo the Lord keepeth his ſeruants vnder the croſſe, for the preuenting of greater ſinnes and offences. This ſhould ſtay the mindes of men, and make them content to waite vpon God for deliuerance, when they are afflicted.

III. The third and laſt point is, that God alwaies hath and doth exerciſe his beſt ſeruants, with long and continued croſſes. Abraham was childles till he was 70. yeares of age, and at thoſe yeares the Lord promiſed him iſſue. But this promiſe was not accompliſhed till a long time after, when he was an hundred yeares old. Dauid had a promiſe to be king of Ieruſalem, and Iuda: but the Lord exerciſed him by many and grieuous afflictions, before he came to the crowne, in ſo much that he ſaies of himſelfe, Pſal. 119 82. that his eies failed with waiting vpon his God. Zacharie and Elizabeth prayed to God, both of them in their youth, and many yeares after for iſſue, but the Lord granted not their requeſt till they were old. Luk. 1.13.

To adde no more examples; by theſe we ſee the Lords dealing, euen with holy men and women, his owne deare ſeruants, that he doth not alwaies grant their requeſts, nor condeſcend to their deſires at the firſt, but as it were holds them off, and ſuſpends his grace and fauour for a time. And therefore if it ſhal pleaſe him, thus to deale with any of vs, we muſt from theſe examples be taught to poſſeſſe our ſoules with patience, reſting contented in his will, and waiting on his good pleaſure to the end.

To conclude this point, Suppoſe that the condition of Gods ſeruants be ſuch, as that they finde no end of their afflictions, but that they do continue euen vnto death, what ſhall they doe in this caſe?

Pag. 30.

Anſ. Beſides that which hath beene ſaid before, for the reſolution of this Queſtion, I anſwer further, that firſt, they muſt ſtill, euen vnto death, liue by faith, and ſay with holy Iob, Lord, though thou kill me, yet will I truſt in thee.

Secondly, they muſt ſtay and releeue their ſoules in the meane time, with theſe and ſuch like meditations.

I. That it is the will and pleaſure of God, that we ſhould through many afflictions, enter into the kingdome of God, Act. 14.22. Now it is the propertie of a true child of God, to reſt content in his fathers good will and pleaſure, euen when he is afflicted. Prou. 3.11. My ſonne— be not grieued at my corrections: that is, let it not be tedious vnto thee, be content to beare it. Our duty therefore is, meekely to ſubiect our ſelues vnto the hand of God, as the child doth vnto the correction of his father.

II. That though afflictions be long and tedious, yet God will at length giue a ioyfull and comfortable iſſue. For ſo himſelfe hath promiſed; Matth. 5. 4. Bleſſed are they that mourne, for they ſhall be comforted. Pſal. 34. 19. Great are the troubles of the righteous, but the Lord will deliuer him out of them all. Pſal. 37.73. Marke the vpright man, and behold the iuſt, for the end of that man is peace.

2. Cor. 4.17

III. Afflictions be they neuer ſo heauie, in regard of continuance, yet they are in no ſort comparable to thoſe eternall ioyes, that God hath prepared for them that loue him. This was Pauls meditation, who indured the croſſe, euen to his dying day. Our light affliction (ſaith he) which is but for a moment, worketh vnto vs an excellent and eternall waight of glorie. And elſewhere he profeſſeth, that he did not count the afflictions of this preſent time, anſwerable in value to the glorie, which ſhall be reuealed vnto Gods children, Rom. 8.18. Saint Peter tels them to whom he wrote, that in regard of their aſſured hope of eternall life, they ſhould reioyce, though now for a ſeaſon, they were in heauineſſe through manifold tentations, 1. Pet. 1.6. Laſtly, the Author to the Hebrewes, comforteth the Church by this reaſon, becauſe it is yet a very litle while, and he that ſhall come, will come, and will not tarrie.

Heb. 10.37

IV. Though God withholdeth his hand, in reſpect of deliuerance euen to death, yet his loue is conſtant and vnchangeable, and the croſſe which we vndergoe, cannot ſeparate vs from that loue, wherewith he hath loued vs in Chriſt, Rom. 8.35. And thus much of the firſt particular diſtreſſe of minde, ariſing of outward afflictions.

Sect. 3.

Temporarie death.

The ſecond particular diſtreſſe, is bodily and temporarie Death, which conſiſteth in the ſeparation of the ſoule from the bodie. And touching this affliction, it is demaunded, How any ſeruant of God, may be able to indure with comfort, the pangs of death?

1 Preparation to death.

For the anſwer hereof, two things are required: a preparation to death, and helps in the time of death.

Concerning preparation, there are three duties to be performed.

Pſal. 90, 12.

The firſt and moſt principall, is commended vnto vs in the booke of Pſalmes, where Dauid praies vnto God; Lord make me to know mine end, and the meaſure of my daies. And Moſes in like manner, Lord, teach me to number my daies, that I may apply my heart vnto wiſedome. In which places, is remembred a notable duty of preparation: to wit, that a man ſhould reſolue himſelfe of death continually, and beforehand number his daies. This is done, by eſteeming of euery day, as the day of his death, and accordingly doing alwaies that which he would do, if he were now to giue vp the ghoſt.

Account death preſent.

Secondly, in way of preparation, we muſt endeauour to diſarme and weaken death, who is as an armed man, that hath his weapons, whereby he ſeekes to deſtroy vs. And in this caſe, we muſt deale with death, as the Philiſtims dealt with Sampſon. They ſaw by experience, that he was a mightie man, and by his power and ſtrength had giuen them many foyles; and therefore they laboured to know, in what part of his body his ſtrength did lie. And after inquirie, finding it to be in the haire of his head, they neuer reſted, till they had ſpoiled him thereof. And queſtionleſſe, the time will come, when we all muſt encounter, with this ſtrong and powerfull Sampſon, Death. In the meane while, it is a point of wiſedome, to inquire wherein his power & might conſiſteth. When this ſearch hath bin made, we ſhall finde that his weapons, are our manifold ſinnes, and corruptions, both of heart and life. For as Paul ſaith, 1. Cor. 15.56. The ſting of death is ſinne. Therefore, that we may ſpoile him of this his furniture, we muſt exerciſe our ſelues in the practiſe of two duties.

Firſt, vſe all meanes for the cutting off of the locke of our ſinnes, whereby alone Satan hath the vantage of vs; and theſe meanes are the duties of humiliation, inuocation, and true repentance. We muſt therefore humble our ſelues before God, be inſtant in praier, for the pardon of our ſinnes paſt, and preſent, and in this point giue the Lord no reſt, vntill we haue obtained in our conſciences, the ſweete certificate of his fauour and mercie in Chriſt, whereby our mindes may be ſtaied and comforted.

This done, it ſtands vs in hand to turne vnto God, to be carefull to leaue ſinne, to entertaine in our hearts, a reſolued purpoſe and intention of new obedience, and conformitie to the will, and commaundement of God in all things. And this is the onely way in the world, to bereaue this our enemie of his armour, to pul the ſting out of the mouth of this ſerpent, and conſequently, euen in death to preuaile againſt him.

Thirdly, in way of preparation, our dutie is, euen before-hand (while we liue in this world) to endeauour, to haue ſome true taſt of life euerlaſting, and the ioyes of heauen. The due conſideration whereof, wil be of great vſe. For it will ſtirre vp in our hearts, a deſire and loue of perfect happineſſe in heauen, yea a feruent expectation of Chriſts comming to iudgement, and it will further cauſe vs to ſay with Simeon, Lord, now let thy ſeruant depart in peace: and with the Apoſtle, I deſire to be diſſolued, and to be with Chriſt.

Touching this ſpirituall ioy and comfort in the holy Ghoſt, theſe Queſtions of Conſcience are mooued.

I. Firſt, how may we in this life haue and nouriſh in our hearts, a true taſt of eternall happineſſe, and of the ioyes of the world to come?

Anſw. Firſt, by a ſerious conſideration of the euils that doe hinder, or preiudice our happineſſe: and they are principally foure.

One is, the Miſerie of our liues, in reſpect of ſinne; and the conſequents thereof. For there is no man in the world, be he neuer ſo righteous, that can truly ſay of himſelfe, I am cleane from my ſinne, Prou. 20.9. Yea euen the regenerate, that haue receiued grace to beleeue, to turne vnto God, and to liue according to the Spirit, doe finde by experience, corruption and rebellion in their minds, wils, and affections, which daily affordeth matter of ſinning againſt God: and on the other ſide, hindreth and quencheth al the good motions of the Spirit, that are in them. Againe, ſuch is the irreconciliable malice of Satan, that he takes vantage of mans corruption, and neglects no time or opportunitie, to intrappe the children of God, in the ſnares of his temptations. And hence it is, that man, by reaſon of his owne corruption, and the wicked ſuggeſtions of the Diuell, is at continuall ſtrife with himſelfe, hath daily occaſion of ſorrow, worketh out his ſaluation with feare and trembling, wading (as it were) euen while he liueth in a ſea of many miſeries.

Rom. 7. 14. 23. &c.

The ſecond euill, is the Vanitie of all things that are in the world. For whether we conſider the world it ſelfe, or the things therein contained, done, or ſuffered, there is nothing ſo ſure and ſteady, whereunto man hauing attained, can poſſibly reſt fully ſatisfied, and contented; or which in the end, will not prooue to be moſt vaine vanitie. And the truth hereof appeareth, in the experience of Salomon himſelfe, who (beeing king ouer Iſrael) wanted neither authoritie, nor abilitie, and opportunitie, ſpeciall knowledge and skill, of all worldly things in all eſtates and conditions. And hauing tried all for his purpoſe, carefully and curiouſly ſearched into them all, at length he concludes, that the iſſue of all was vnprofitable vanitie and vexation of mind, as we may reade in his Eccleſiaſtes.

The third euill is, the Changeable condition of our life in this world, whereby it comes to paſſe, that we are alway in a fleeting and tranſitorie ſtate. For we are (as Saint Peter ſpeaketh) but ſtrangers and Pilgrimes, that wander to and fro in the earth, as in a ſtrange countrey, and ſtill are making forward to our owne home. We haue here no abiding city. Heb. 13.14. The houſes wherein we dwell, are but Innes, in which we ſoiourne for a time; yea the bodies which we haue, are but tents and tabernacles, alway ready to be ſhifted; and our ſelues to be tranſlated into an other place.

Fourthly, by remembring, that Christ our Head, beeing now in heauen, and we his members vpon the earth, during our life, we are in preſence ſeparated from our Head, and conſequently, from that happie and glorious fellowſhip, which we ſhall enioy with him, and all the Saints our fellow-members, in the kingdome of heauen. This S. Paul noteth, when he ſaith, 2. Cor. 5.6. Whilſt we are at home in the bodie, we are abſent from the Lord: and therupon himſelfe deſired to be diſſolued, and to be with Chriſt. Phil. 1.23.

Hauing thus entred into the due conſideration of the fore-ſaid euils, we muſt in the ſecond place exerciſe our ſelues in the frequent meditation of the bleſſed eſtate of Gods choſen, in the kingdome of glorie: who beeing tranſlated out of this life, into the boſome of Abraham, are fully and perfectly freed from ſinne, from Satan, from vanitie and miſerie: haue all teares wiped from their eyes: doe behold the face of God; are made like vnto Chriſt in holineſſe and honour: and doe with him inherit the kingdome, prepared for them, from the foundations of the world.

Mat.25.34.

In the third place, hauing throughly conſidered of theſe things, wee muſt compare the eſtate of this preſent life, in the reſpects before named, with the eſtate of that, which is to come in the kingdome of heauen: and laying them in a paralell together, we ſhall finde the one infinitely farre to excell the other in regard of true ioy and comfort. And this will make vs, though liuing in the world, yet to vſe it, as if we vſed it not: to haue our conuerſation in heauen: to thinke with Paul, that to be looſed, and be with Chriſt, is beſt of all for vs: to haue a true and liuely taſt of the ioyes of the world to come, and accordingly with Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob, to looke for a citie that hath foundations, whoſe builder and maker is God.

1.Cor.7.31.
Phil.3.20.

II. Secondly, it is demaunded, how a man may truly diſcerne, whether this ioy of the Spirit bee in him yea or no? For anſwer hereunto, it is to be remembred, that there are ſundry properties whereby it differeth from carnall ioy. And theſe are principally fiue.

Firſt, this ioy is brought forth (as it were) of ſorrow for ſinne, and for the want of Chriſt. Ye ſhall ſorrow (ſaith our Sauiour Chriſt to his Diſciples, mourning for his departure,) but your ſorrow ſhall be turned into ioy. Theſe words are not onely meant of his Diſciples, but of all beleeuers, who vpon conſideration of their ſins, and the ſpirituall want of Chriſt Ieſus, doe mourne and lament. For not onely they, but all true beleeuers, are there oppoſed vnto the world. Againe, Math. 5.4. Bleſſed are they that mourne: that is, being touched with cauſes of exceeding griefe, doe withall mourne for their ſinnes: for they ſhall be comforted. On the other ſide, carnall ioy, as it hath his beginning from the fleſh, and ariſing of things pleaſing thereunto, ſo it ends in ſorrow and heauineſſe. In the end reioycing is turned into mourning, ſaith Salomon, Prou. 14.13. And, Woe be to you that now laugh: for ye ſhall weepe. Luk. 6.25.

Secondly, the ioy of the Spirit, is a fruite of righteouſneſſe: that is, it iſſueth and floweth from Chriſt knowne and beleeued, to be made vnto vs of God, wiſedome, righteouſneſſe, ſanctification, and full redemption. For from hence, followes peace of conſcience: and from peace, comes ioy in the holy Ghoſt. Contrariwiſe, the ioy of the fleſh, ariſeth onely from the ſudden feeling of ſome worldly delight: and therefore cannot bring any ſound peace vnto the conſcience of the man poſſeſſed of it.

Rom.14.17.

Thirdly, ſpirituall ioy is founded in the holy vſe of the Word, Sacraments, and Prayer: and in the practiſe of Chriſtian duties of mercie, loue, iuſtice, &c. The other is not ſo. For the world conceiues a ioy beſides the word, out of the exerciſes of inuocation and repentance: which ſtands in the practiſe of crueltie, malice, oppreſſion, iniuſtice, and all manner of impietie. And hence it is, that hauing ſpent their daies in ſuch matter of reioycing, at length in a moment they goe downe to hell. Iob. 21.13, 14, 15.

Fourthly, heauenly ioy is ſo fixed and rooted in the heart, that it cannot be remooued thence. Your ioy ſhall no man take from you, ſaith Chriſt. Iohn 16.22. It ſhall needs therefore be true and ſound, yea able to ſwallow vp all matter of griefe and heauineſſe: whereas the other is neuer ſincere, but with the ſweetneſſe thereof, hath alwaies mingled ſome bitterneſſe. Euen in laughter (ſaith Salomon, ſpeaking thereof) the heart is heauy. Prou. 14.13. When the face of the wicked man ſhineth, and his countenance is pleaſant, euen then is he inwardly ſorrowfull, and his mind is troubled.

Laſtly, the ioy of the Spirit is eternall, abiding in the minde of man, not onely for the terme of this life, but for euer in the world to come. So is not the reioycing of the world in earthly things: for it is fading and deceitfull, as the things themſelues be, wherein it is placed: it hath the beginning in corruption, and endeth with this preſent life. The example of the two rich men in the Goſpell, doe manifeſt this truth. And to this purpoſe, is the ſpeech of Zophar, in the booke of Iob, that the reioycing of the wicked is very ſhort, and the ioy of hypocrites is but a moment, &c.

Luk.12.20. and 16.22. Iob.20.5.

By theſe fiue properties, may we put a true difference, betweene earthly and heauenly reioycing, and conſequently diſcerne of them, euen in our ſelues. And if we perceiue this ioy of the Spirit, (rightly conceiued and grounded in the right vſe of the word and Sacraments; as alſo in the exerciſes of inuocation, faith, and repentance,) to take place in our ſoules and conſciences, wee ſhall finde it of force, to moderate and allay the very terrours of death. And ſo much for Preparation.

II. Helpes in time of death.

Now the helpes to be vſed in the time of death, are manifold: the ſumme of all may be reduced to two heads; Meditations and Practiſes.

Touching Meditations, we muſt in the firſt place, conſider Death in a double reſpect; one, as it is in it owne nature, and another, as it is chaunged and qualified by the death of Chriſt. Death in it owne nature, is a Curſe, or fore-runner of condemnation, the very gates and ſuburbes of hell it ſelfe: but beeing qualified by Chriſt, it is a bleſſing, an end of all miſeries, a full freedome from all daungers, a ſhort paſſage vnto ioy, an entrance into euerlaſting life, a quiet ſleepe, voide of all annoyance, by dreames and fantaſies: And the graue a reſting chamber, yea, a bed perfumed by the death of Chriſt, for the bodies of all the Elect, out of which when they awake, they ſhall be admitted and receiued into the preſence of God in heauen.

Secondly, we are to conſider, that there be three degrees of eternall life. The firſt whereof, is in this world before we die; and it is then, when we beginne to repent and beleeue in Chriſt, and to be aſſured in conſcience, that God the Father is our Father, Chriſt our Redeemer, and the holy Ghoſt our Comforter. For this is eternall life, to know God, and him whome he hath ſent Ieſus Chriſt. Ioh.17.3. The next degree is in death: for death cuts off al ſin, original and actuall; death frees vs from all worldly miſeries: death prepareth the bodie, that it may be fit to enter into eternall happineſſe together with the ſoule, which is alreadie in heauen. The laſt degree is, when bodie and ſoule re-united, goe both together into eternall and euerlaſting glorie.

Our third meditation is, that there is a myſticall vnion & coniunction, betweene Chriſt and euery beleeuer, and that not onely in regard of ſoule, but of bodie alſo; which beeing once knit, ſhall neuer be diſſolued, but is eternall. Whereupon the dying, dead, rotten, and conſumed bodie remaineth ſtill a member of Chriſt, abideth within the couenant, and is, and ſhall be euer, a temple of the holy Ghoſt. Thus Adam, and Abraham, which was dead, ſo many thouſand yeares agoe, yea euery true beleeuer, from them to the end of the world, ſhall ariſe at the laſt day in body to glorie, by the power of their coniunction with Chriſt. In the winter ſeaſon, we ſee the moſt trees void of leaues, buds, and bloſſomes: ſo as they ſeeme to vs to be dead, and yet neuertheleſſe there is a ſappe in the roote of them, which in the Spring will aſcend, and reuiue the decayed branches. Euen ſo it is with our bodies, which though they be corrupted, rotten, burnt, or eaten with wormes, or deuoured by wilde beaſts, ſo as they may ſeeme to be vtterly periſhed, yet there is (as it were) a ſecret and hidden ſappe in them, (by reaſon of their vnion with Chriſt) by which they ſhall be raiſed, reuiued, and quickened, beeing made like vnto the glorious bodie of Chriſt their head, with whome they ſhall reigne, and liue for euermore.

Helpes in practiſe are two; Firſt, he that wil beare with comfort the pangs of death, muſt labour that he may die in faith: and that is done, by laying hold of the promiſe of God, touching forgiueneſſe of ſinnes, and life euerlaſting by Chriſt. All theſe (ſaith the holy Ghoſt, Heb.11.13.) died in faith, namely, Abel, Enoch, Noe, Abraham, and Sarah, all laying hold on the promiſe of life by Chriſt. When Iacob on his death-bed, was bleſſing of his children, he brake forth into this heauenly ſpeech, O Lord, I haue waited for thy ſaluation, Gen.49.18. In which words it is plaine, that his faith reſted on the mercie of God, and by hope he waited for his ſaluation: and our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith: Ioh.3.14,15. As Moſes lift vp the ſerpent in the wilderneſſe, ſo muſt the ſonne of man be lift vp, that whoſoeuer beleeueth in him, might not periſh, but haue life euerlaſting. Out of which words the forenamed duty may be learned; that like as the children of Iſrael, beeing ſtung with fierie ſerpents, and that vnto death, were healed by looking vp to the braſen ſerpent erected by Moſes: ſo when we are ſtung with ſinne and death, we muſt euer remember by faith to looke vpon Chriſt. But eſpecially when we are dying, then it is our part, to fixe the eyes of our ſoules, by faith vpon him, and thereby ſhall we eſcape death, and be made partakers of eternall life and happineſſe. Notable is the example of Chriſt, who as he was a man, alwaies fixed his truſt and confidence in his Fathers word, eſpecially at his end. For when he was dying, and the pangs of death ſeazed vpon him, he cries vnto the Lord, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? and againe, Father, into thy hands I commend my ſpirit: which words are full of faith, and doe bewray what great affiance he placed in his fathers loue, &c. When Dauid in an extremitie, ſaw nothing before his eyes but preſent death, the people intending to ſtone him, at the very inſtant (as the text ſaith) he comforted 1.Sam.30.6

himſelfe in the Lord his God: but how? by calling to minde the mercifull promiſes that God had made vnto him, and by applying them vnto his heart by faith. And Paul ſaith of himſelfe, and the reſt of the faithfull, that they receiued the ſentence of death in themſelues, that they might not truſt in themſelues, but in God.

2.Cor. 1.9.

From theſe examples it followes, that they which deſire with comfort to beare the pangs of death, muſt die by faith; that is, they muſt ſet before their eyes, the promiſe of remiſſion of ſinnes, and life euerlaſting, and depend vpon it, wrapping (as it were) & infolding themſelues in it, as in a cloſe and warme garment, that will keepe them ſafe and ſure, againſt the winde and weather of temptation.

The ſecond practiſe in the time of death is, to die in obedience; which is nothing elſe but willingly, gladly, and readily, without murmuring to ſubmit our ſelues vnto Gods will, in bearing the paines of death. A moſt worthie preſident of this obedience, wee haue in our Sauiour Chriſt, when he ſaid vnto his Father, Not my will, but thy will be done; thereby ſubmitting his will to his Fathers will, touching the death which he then ſuffered. Yea when hee was dying, it is ſaid of him, that he gaue vp the Ghoſt: that is, hee did moſt willingly ſurrender vp his ſoule into the hands of God his Father. And this his example at the time of his departure, muſt bee a rule of direction vnto vs, vpon the like occaſion. Hence it is, that in the third petition of the Lords prayer, amongſt other things, we pray for obedience to the wil of God in ſuffering afflictions, yea euen in the laſt and greateſt, which is death it ſelfe. True it is, that obedience to God in death, is againſt corrupt nature; and therefore our duty is the more to inure our ſelues to the performing of it: and that which the bleſſed Apoſtle ſaid of himſelfe, I die daily, ought to bee continually our reſolution and practiſe.

If we ſhall inquire, how this may bee done? the anſwer is, when God layeth afflictions vpon vs in our life time; then by endeauouring to beare them with patience, meekeneſſe, and lowlineſſe. For euery affliction is (as it were) a pettie death: and if wee doe in it ſubiect our ſelues to the hand of God, we ſhall the better obey him in the great death of all: and thus doing, whenſoeuer God ſtrikes vs with death, we ſhall with comfort endure the ſame.

Sect. 4.

Satanicall moleſtation

The third particular affliction or diſtreſſe, is ſatanicall moleſtation, whereby both perſons, and places of manſion or abode, are either poſſeſſed, or otherwiſe moleſted by the malice of the diuell.

I. Touching this affliction: the queſtion of Conſcience is, How ſuch perſons as are poſſeſſed, or feare poſſeſſion, or elſe endure moleſtations by the diuell in their houſes, may haue their mindes quieted and ſtayed; and conſequently, in that caſe be remedied? And here two things are generally to be conſidered in way of anſwer.

Firſt, it is to bee remembred, that poſſeſſion is knowne by two ſignes. The one is, when the diuell is euidently preſent, either in the whole body, or in ſome part of it. The other, when hee hath rule of the ſaid body, either in whole or in part: ſo as the partie himſelfe hath not that vſe of his body which he would. As for example: when the diuell poſſeſſeth the inſtruments of the voice, as the tongue, and makes a man to ſpeake Latine, Greeke, Italian, or other tongues, which hee vnderſtandeth not. Both theſe things were found in them that were poſſeſſed in the time of our Sauiour Chriſt.

Secondly, wee muſt conſider, it falleth out oftentimes, that ſtrange diſeaſes doe ſeaze vpon men, ariſing from corrupt humours in the body; yea men and women may haue ſtrange paſſions vpon naturall cauſes vnknowne; and theſe will ſometimes haue ſtrange and extraordinarie effects in them, which the arte of Phyſicke neither can ſearch out, nor cure: and yet they are neither acts of witchcraft, nor real poſſeſſions. As when God laid extraordinary diſeaſes on the Corinthians, for the contempt of his word and Sacraments, 1. Cor. 11. 30. Like vnto which he worthily inflicts vpon men in theſe daies, for the ſame and other ſinnes.

Now to ſtay the minde in this caſe, theſe Rules are carefully to be thought vpon.

Firſt of all, it is to be remēbred, that though Satans malice and power bee very great and large: yet he cannot practiſe the ſame againſt the children of God, when, where, and how he liſteth. The malice which Satan doth beare to mankind, and principally to the members of Chriſt, appeares in this, becauſe hee is ſaid Reuel. 12. 10, to accuſe them before God day and night. And, as a roaring lyon, to walke about the world ſeeking whome he may deuoure, 1. Pet. 5. 8. Againe, the Scripture notes him to be a powerfull ſpirit, whoſe ſtrength farre exceedeth and ſurpaſſeth the might of any man or creature, that is not of an angelical nature, as himſelfe is, For he is tearmed a Prince of the aire, and the god of this world; his power reacheth euen to the ſpirits and ſoules of men, whereby hee worketh in the children of diſobedience, Eph. 2. 2. His principalitie is ſo great, that no ſtrength, no defence of man, is able to withſtand it, vnleſſe man take vnto himſelfe the whole armour of God, Eph. 6. 10.

Now although the diuell bee ſo malicious an enemy of mankinde, that he ceaſeth not to deuiſe whatſoeuer may be hurtful vnto them; and withall ſo powerfull in his attempts, that no man by his owne proper ſtrength, is able to reſiſt him: yet he cannot put the leaſt part of his power in execution, in what time, place, or manner he deſireth. The reaſon is, becauſe God hath determined his power, by certaine bounds and limits, which hee cannot paſſe: and they are eſpecially two.

The one is, his owne nature, whereby hee is a creature, and therefore finite. Hence it is, that he can neither know, nor do any thing that is beyond the reach or capacitie of his nature, or aboue the power and skill of a creature. For example, he cannot directly and immediatly know the deepe things of God, vnleſſe they be reuealed vnto him: nor yet the ſecrets of mans heart. None knoweth the things of a man, ſaue the ſpirit of a man which is in him: euen ſo, the things of God knoweth none, but the ſpirit of God, 1.Cor.2.11. Againe, he cannot do that which is truly & properly a miracle, the cauſe whereof is hidden and vtterly vnknowne, and which comes not within the power and order of nature. For this is proper vnto God, who onely doth thinges ſimply wonderfull, Pſalme 77.14.

The ſecond thing whereby Satans power is reſtrained, is the will of God. For looke as the ſea, being by nature, apt to ouerflow the whole earth, is kept in, and ſhut vp within the ſhore, (as it were) with doores or gates, that it cannot breake forth; and that by the Lord himſelfe, who hath eſtabliſhed his decree vpon it, Iob 38. So though Satan be by nature ſtrong, and his malice great, yet can hee doe nothing at all, no not execute his naturall power, to the hurt and preiudice of any man, without the will and permiſſion of God. Thus the euill ſpirit could not goe forth to deceiue Ahab, vntill the Lord had ſaid vnto him, Goe, and thou ſhalt preuaile, 1.King.22.22. Thus the diuell could not touch the bodie, children, goods, or friends of righteous Iob, whileſt he was fenced and fortified by the power and prouidence of God. But when the Lord, in regard of Iobs outward eſtate, had giuen leaue, and ſaid, Lo, all that he hath is in thine hand, then did hee exerciſe his power to the vtmoſt: yet ſo farre onely, as he was permitted, and no further, Iob.1.12.

The conſideration of this firſt point, that Satans power is determined by God, wil ſerue to ſtay the mindes of thoſe, whoſe perſons, houſes, or friends are moleſted by him. For hereupon it followeth, that God, who hath the diuell bound vp (as it were) in chaines, will not ſuffer his power to bee enlarged againſt his owne children, to their deſtruction and confuſion: but ſo farre-forth alone, as ſhall bee expedient for their good and ſaluation. Againe, that God beeing their Father in Chriſt Ieſus, they may in the time of ſuch affliction, haue acceſſe vnto him, and call vpon him, for the reſtraint of Satans power and malice, and conſequently, fot the deliuerance of them and theirs.

Pſal.91.10, 11.

A ſecond rule is this: Such perſons muſt haue recourſe to God in his word, in which hee promiſeth his preſence and protection, to his children, in their greateſt dangers. And namely, that there ſhall no euill come vnto them, neither any plague ſhall come neere their dwelling: becauſe he will giue his Angels charge ouer them, to keep them in all their waies. Againe, that he will be a wall of fire round about his people, Zach.2.5. that hee will extend peace ouer his Church, like a flood, Iſa.66.12. And that there ſhall be no ſorcerie againſt Iacob, nor ſoothſaying in Iſrael, Num.23.22. And yet if God ſees it to be good for his children, to bee tried by poſſeſſions or witchcraft, in this caſe the promiſe freeth them not. For all temporall bleſſings are promiſed conditionally; ſo far-forth as they may ſtand with Gods good will and pleaſure, and withall may make for the good of his children. Howbeit herein lies the comfort, that though ſuch calamities befall them, yet they ſhall turne to their good, rather then to their hurt. This point well conſidered by the way, bewrayeth the great preſumption of ſome, who are not afraid to ſay their faith is ſo ſtrong, that the diuell cannot touch them.

Thirdly, it muſt bee conſidered, that the beſt ſeruants of God haue been in their times moleſted by the diuell. Chriſt in his ſecond temptation, was carried by the diuel from the wilderneſſe, to a wing of the Temple of Ieruſalem, Matth.4.5. The children of Iob were deſtroyed by the diuell, and hee himſelfe was filled with botches and ſores. A certaine woman, euen a daughter of Abraham, that is, one following the faith of Abraham, was troubled with a ſpirit of infirmitie, eighteene yeares together, Luk.13.16. And the daughter of the woman of Canaan, was grieuouſly vexed with a diuell, Mat.15.21,22.

Fourthly, men in this caſe ought by faith to lay faſt hold vpon the promiſe of life euerlaſting, & wait the Lords leiſure, not limiting him in reſpect of time, or meanes of deliuerance. This was the practiſe of Iob, Though he kill me, yet will I truſt in him, Iob 13.15. And of holy Abraham, Heb.11.17. who did not limit God, but was content to doe with Iſaac what the Lord would: and though it was in likelihood, a meanes to bereaue him of all poſteritie, yet ſtill he kept himſelfe to the promiſe.

Laſtly, men muſt in this caſe, ſeeke, and ſue vnto God by prayer, either for deliuerance, if it may ſtand with his good will and pleaſure, or elſe for patience, that they may meekely and patiently beare that particular affliction.

II. In the moleſtation and annoyance of houſes by ſpirits, two things are to be remembred.

Firſt, men muſt not conſort together, and abide there, where it is certainely knowne, that the Lord hath giuen the diuell power and libertie; leſt in ſo doing, they tempt the Lord. Our Sauiour Chriſt did not of his owne priuate motion and will, betake himſelfe into the wilderneſſe, but by the direction of the Holy Ghoſt, Matthew 4.1. Paul in like manner, did not of his owne head goe to Ieruſalem, but vpon the motion of the Spirit, Act.20.22. In the light of theſe examples men are taught, not to caſt themſelues into any places of apparent daunger: much leſſe to frequent thoſe which God hath deliuered vp into the power of Satan. And this condemnes the raſh, and heady conceits of ſome perſons, who vpon confidence of their owne ſtrength, doe put themſelues into needeleſſe dangers, hauing neither extraordinarie calling from God, nor any ſufficient warrant out of his word.

If it bee asked, what men are to doe in this caſe? I anſwer. Firſt, that they ought rather to flie to God by prayer, and to draw neare vnto him in their hearts: and he in mercy will draw neare vnto them.

Secondarily, that which wee doe in meates and drinkes, is alſo to bee done in the houſes and places where we dwell. And what is that? We muſt ſanctifie them to our vſe, by the word and prayer. Noah at Gods commaundement, went into the Arke, abode in it, and came out againe: and when hee came forth of it, into the earth afterward, it is ſaid of him, Gen. 8. 20. that hee built an Altar, gaue thankes to God for his deliuerance, and praied the Lord to vouchſafe him the vſe of the earth, as hee had before.

Gen. 12.

Though Abraham had a promiſe of the land of Canaan, to him and his poſteritie for euer, yet he went not out of his countrey toward it, till the Lord commaunded him: and when hee was come thither, hee built an Altar for the worſhippe and ſeruice of God.

Gen. 13. 3.
Gen. 35. 7.

The like he did afterward at Bethel. And many yeares after did Iacob offer ſacrifice vnto God, in the ſame Bethel, when hee came to dwell there. And for this very ende, in the law by a ſpeciall ordinance, the firſt fruits of the harueſt were offered to ſanctifie the reſt of the corne. And ſo much touching the ſecond diſtreſſe.

CHAP. X.

Of the third ſpeciall Diſtreſſe, ariſing of the Tentation of Blaſphemie.

Tentatio fœda.

THe third kinde of trouble of minde, is that which ariſeth of the Tentation of Blaſphemie, which in regard of the vileneſſe, and vglineſſe thereof, is not amiſſe tearmed by ſome, the foule Tentation. And it is when a man is troubled in his mind, with blaſphemous cogitations, and thoughts, directly againſt the Maieſtie of God, the Father, the Sonne, and the Holy Ghoſt. As for example: to thinke that God is not iuſt, or mercifull; that he accepteth mens perſons: that he hath not knowledge of things that are done here below, or at leaſt, that hee doth not regard them: that God cannot doe this or that: that hee is iniurious to ſome men, and partiall to others, &c. Theſe, and ſuch like blaſphemous thoughts there bee, which are not fitte to bee vttered amongſt men, foraſmuch as they are moſt horrible, and execrable, as any can bee conceiued.

The cauſe & Danger.

That we may the better know this Temptation, let it bee conſidered, what are the forerunners thereof, and by what meanes it takes place in the heart poſſeſſed of it.

Sometimes it commeth meerely and onely of the ſuggeſtion of the diuell, which troubleth the phantaſie, euen of thoſe which are in that regard innocent, and caſteth into their hearts impure and vngodly thoughts. Sometimes againe it comes vpon men by an euill cuſtome: when as they willingly lend their eares to lewd and curſed ſpeeches, that immediately tend to the diſhonour of God, or the wilfull abuſe of his word, his iudgements, and mercies; and vpon the hearing, either giue their applauſe and approbation, though not expreſly: or doe not hinder or ſtay them, as much as in them lieth. Otherwhiles it creepes into the heart of man by degrees, when hee begins to waxe cold in Gods ſeruice, to make little conſcience of thoſe duties, that immediately concerne his worſhip, and conſequently inures himſelfe to the taking of the name of God in vaine, by often and cauſeleſſe ſwearing, forſwearing, curſing, &c. By theſe and ſuch like meanes, is this foule and horrible tentation conuaied into the minde of man.

Now the daunger of it, whether it ariſeth from theſe, or any other cauſes, is exceeding grieuous, ſpecially to thoſe that haue begun to chuſe the way of truth, and to applie their hearts to ſerue God, and to feare his name. For it bringeth forth ſtrange and fearefull effects; as namely, deſperation, and manifolde horrors and troubles of minde. Yea diuers perſons haue hereupon beene aſtoniſhed in ſuch ſort, that they haue bin mooued to make diſpatch of themſelues; beeing in their owne iudgement no better then the very firebrands of hell.

The Remedie,

Now for the Curing of this wonderfull trouble and diſtraction of Conſcience, two thing are to be done: to wit, Inquirie muſt be made into the next cauſes, whence this Tentation ſhould ariſe: and after that, the Remedie is to be applied.

For the firſt: Inquirie is to bee made, whether the preſent diſtreſſe, had his beginning from the thoughts of a mans owne minde, or from the ſuggeſtion of the diuell. For this is in all likelihood, the next way to miniſter comfort to the afflicted party.

It may bee ſaid, How ſhall a man diſcerne the thoughts that are from the diuel, from his owne thoughts? Anſ. He ſhall know them by ſundrie notes.

Firſt, by the entrance of them into the minde. For thoſe that come from the diuell, come ſpeedily, as lightning into a houſe: and they are after a ſort, forced into the minde by violence, ſo as the partie cannot auoid them; and they come into the mind againe & again, yea a thouſand times in a day, ſo as by their often comming, they weaken the memorie, dull the ſenſes, wearie & confound the braine. Theſe are thoughts that come from the diuel, and by him are conuaied from without, into the minde of man. And if ſuch cogitations, were from a mans owne ſelfe, they would not come with ſo great vehemencie and celeritie, but with leiſure: and they would riſe with more moderation, and leſſe violence. Yea further, the frequent vſe of them would not produce ſo many, and ſo fearefull effects as it doth.

Secondly, ſuch thoughts may bee diſcerned, to come from the diuell, by this ſigne; becauſe they are directly againſt the very light of nature, the ſparkes whereof are not quite extinct in vs by ſinne. For euery man thinkes reuerently of God by nature. But theſe cogitations are moſt wicked and diuelliſh, faſtning vpon God, things that are moſt vile and monſtrous: whereas commonly the thoughts that ariſe from our ſelues, are not againſt the light of nature, though they bee moſt corrupt.

The third ſigne is, that at the firſt conceiuing of them, the partie is ſmitten with an extraordinarie feare, his fleſh is troubled; and oftentimes, ſickneſſe and fainting doe follow. But the thoughts that men conceiue of themſelues, cauſe neither feare, nor faintings, nor ſickneſſe.

Fourthly, blaſphemous thoughts cannot come ordinarily from the heart of any, ſaue of thoſe alone, that are of reprobate mindes. But the parties that are thus diſtreſſed, are honeſt, ciuil, and ſuch as profeſſe the Goſpel, at leaſt in ſhew; yea ſometimes they befall ſuch as are the true members of Chriſt. Therfore it is manifeſt, that they come from without, euen from the diuell caſting them into the minde, and not from within a mans owne ſelfe.

In the next place inquirie muſt bee made, whether the partie doth approoue, loue, and like theſe and ſuch like thoughts, or no? To this hee will anſwer, if hee bee asked, that hee abhors them as the diuell and hell it ſelfe. Thus euen naturall men will anſwer, and that truly.

After inquirie thus made, the remedie is to be applyed. And the firſt and principall remedie pertaines to doctrine, and inſtruction: in which the partie is to bee informed of his or her eſtate; namely, that the foreſaid blaſphemies, are not his ſinnes, but his croſſes. For they are the diuels ſinnes, and he ſhall anſwer for them: and they are not ours, till we entertaine, receiue, approoue, and giue conſent vnto them.

For proofe hereof, let this bee conſidered, That vncleane thoughts which haue their reſidence in the minde of man, are of two ſorts: Inward, and Outward. Inward are ſuch as haue their originall from the fleſh, and ariſe of the corruption of mans nature, though ſtirred vp by the diuell. And theſe at the very firſt conceiuing, are our ſinnes, though they haue no long abode in our mindes: and they are directly forbidden in the tenth commaundement. Outward thoughts are thoſe, which haue relation to an outward cauſe or beginning: of which ſort are thoſe euill thoughts that be conueied into the mind by the diuell: and if we take no pleaſure in them, nor yeeld conſent vnto them, they are not to bee accounted our ſinnes, but the diuels, by whome they are ſuggeſted. The truth hereof appeares in Chriſts example, into whoſe mind the diuell caſt this blaſphemous tentation, thereby moouing him to infidelity, couetouſnes, and idolatry: which neuertheleſſe were not his ſinnes, becauſe his holy heart gaue not the leaſt approbation to them, but abhorred and repelled them, and therfore was free from any taint of ſinne, in or by them.

This diſtinction of thoughts muſt bee remembred. For hence it followes, that blaſphemous thoughts, not conſented to by vs, are not our ſinnes, but the diuels. Euen as in like caſe, when one wickedly diſpoſed, ſollicites another to treaſon, or murther: if the ſaid partie liſten not, nor yeeld thereto, he cannot bee holden guilty of thoſe crimes. Therefore men muſt not feare thoſe kinde of thoughts ouermuch: at leaſt, if they pleaſe not themſelues ouermuch in them: becauſe, though they bee indeede their croſſes, yet are they not their perſonall ſinnes, for which they ſhall incurre the wrath and diſpleaſure of God. Againe, they muſt let them goe as they come: they are not to ſtriue againſt them, for the more they labour to reſiſt them, the more ſhall they bee intangled with them.

The ſecond thing to bee vſed in way of remedie, for the ſtaying of the minde in this tentation, is, that though it ſhould bee graunted, that the fore-ſaid euill and blaſphemous thoughts are our ſinnes, yet we are to remember, that they may through the mercie and goodneſſe of God, bee pardoned: if they bee heartily and vnfeinedly repented of: yea further, that neither they, nor any other ſinnes (except that againſt the holy Ghoſt) do condemne him that prayeth againſt them, and is heartily ſorrie for them.

It was Pauls complaint, Rom. 7. 19. That he did not the good which he would doe, ſpeaking of the inward indeauour of his heart: and againe, that hee did the euill which hee would not, meaning in reſpect of the corruption of his nature. Now vpon this, that hee endeauoured to doe that which was agreeable to the will of God, that he loathed and deteſted the contrarie, and ſtroue againſt his corruptions, how did hee comfort himſelfe? Marke the words following, v. 20. If I doe that I would not: that is to ſay, if againſt my generall purpoſe, I ſinne againſt God; if I be ſorrie for it, if I be diſpleaſed with my ſelfe, becauſe I cannot obey God in that perfection I deſire, It is no more I that doe it, but ſinne that dwelleth in mee. From this example of Paul I gather, that if any man haue in his minde euill thoughts, and doth (as Paul did) grieue, becauſe he thereby offended God; if he doe abhorre them, and pray againſt them; hee ſhall not be condemned for them; they ſhall neuer bee laid to his charge. The party then that is troubled with theſe thoughts, may vpon theſe grounds ſtay his minde; and comfort himſelfe. For if hee ſhall not bee condemned for them, then let him not feare them aboue meaſure.

The third point to bee remembred is, that the partie muſt not be alone. For this Tentation beginnes, and is confirmed and increaſed by ſolitarineſſe; and the parties thus diſtreſſed, loue to be apart by themſelues from the ſocietie of others. And for that cauſe, in caſe they be lyable to this diſtreſſe, they muſt vſe to conuerſe with ſuch company, as may affoard them matter of ſpeech and conference meete for them, and may exerciſe their mindes with heauenly meditations in the word, and ſinging of Pſalmes, and ſuch like fitte and conuenient recreations. Our firſt parent Eue was tempted by Satan, when ſhe was apart from Adam: and our Sauiour Chriſt, when hee was alone out of companie and ſocietie, then did the diuell moſt maliciouſly aſſault him with ſtrong and powerfull tentations in the wilderneſſe.

The fourth point, to be remembred of the party troubled, is, that hee muſt as heartily and earneſtly repent him of thoſe his euill thoughts, as of euill words and deedes. For the truth is, becauſe men are looſe-minded, & haue no more care of their thoughts, then cõmonly they haue; therefore the Lord iuſtly ſuffers the diuel to plague and torment them, by conuaying into their hearts moſt vile and damnable cogitations. Furthermore, the ſaid party muſt labour to be renewed in the ſpirit of his minde, that is, to haue his minde inlightened by the Spirit, whereby hee may know and vnderſtand the will of God in his word. After repentance for euill thoughts, there muſt follow watchfulneſſe, and a carefull circumſpection ouer all his waies; but principally hee muſt haue an eye vnto his heart, the fountaine of all: Keepe thine heart with all diligence, ſaith Salomon, Prou 4.23. that is, aboue all things, ſee that thou counterguard thy thoughts, deſires, motions, and affections.

That the heart of a man may bee guarded, two rules are to bee obſerued. Firſt, that the word of God dwell plentifully in it, Col. 3. 18. by daily meditation of the commaundements, promiſes, & threatnings reuealed in the ſame. It is noted by Dauid, as a property of a bleſſed man, that he exerciſed himſelfe in meditation of Gods Law day & night, Pſal. 1. By this meanes the heart will be cleanſed, and purged from vncleane and polluted motions, and ſo guided and directed, that it ſwarue not from God. This rule is of ſpeciall vſe. For therefore do men hatch, & breed euill thoughts in their hearts, becauſe they are not taken vp with holy meditations: and hence it is, that the heart of man is made euen a prey vnto the diuell, becauſe Gods word is not lodged therein. Excellent was Dauids practiſe in this caſe, who kept the word of God in his heart, that hee might not ſinne againſt him, Pſal. 119. 11.

The ſecond Rule of the keeping of the heart, is to eſtabliſh our thoughts by counſell. It is the wiſe mans aduice in ſo many words, Prou. 20.18. wherein he would teach vs, that it is the propertie of a worldly wiſe man, in matters of waight, not to truſt to his owne wit, but to follow the direction and counſell of wiſe & skilfull men. And if this bee a ſound courſe in matters of the world, much more ought it to be taken in the maine matters of religion, and conſcience, concerning the heart and ſoule of man. And therefore by the law of proportion, it giues vs direction, not once to thinke or conceiue ſo much as a thought, but vpon aduice and direction taken at God & his word. Thy teſtimonies (ſaith Dauid, Pſal. 119.24.) are my delight, and my counſellers. And what benefit had he by taking ſuch a courſe? Surely by the word of God, which was his continuall meditation, he gat vnderſtanding, he became wiſer then the auncient; it made him to hate all the waies of falſhood: it kept him from declining from God, either to the right hand, or to the left. The ſame rule muſt be practiſed of vs, in the vſe of our ſenſes, our ſpeeches and actions, and then ſhall the heart bee kept cleane, and free from theſe temptations.

And ſeeing this temptation is ſo dangerous and fearefull, as hath beene ſaid, and doth often befal men; our duty is to mak conſcience of practiſing the fore-ſaid rules. And thus much concerning the third kinde of diſtreſſe of Conſcience.

CHAP. XI.

Of the fourth ſpeciall Diſtreſſe, ariſing from a mans owne ſinnes.

THe fourth Diſtreſſe of minde, is that which ariſeth from a mans owne ſinnes, or rather from ſome one ſpeciall ſinne committed. And this kinde of Tentation is two-folde: For either it is more violent, and leſſe common; or leſſe violent, and more common.

The violent Diſtreſſe.

The violent Diſtreſſe of minde, ſhewes it ſelfe by feare and terrours of the Conſcience, by doubtings of the mercie of God, by lamentable and fearefull complaints made to others.

Now Queſtion is mooued, How this violent diſtreſſe of minde, ariſing from our owne ſinnes, is to be cured? Anſw. That it may be cured by the bleſsing of God, three thinges muſt be done.

Firſt, that particular ſinne muſt be knowne which is the cauſe of this violent diſtreſſe. And here wee are to know by the way; that it is an vſuall thing with the parties thus diſtreſſed, to diſſemble and cloake their ſinnes: and therefore they will alleadge, that their trouble ariſeth from ſome euill thoughts, from wicked affections, and from the corruption of nature: whereas commonly men are not diſtreſſed in violent maner, for euil thoughts, affections, &c. but the violent diſtreſſe commeth from ſome actuall and odious ſinne or ſinnes done, which wound the conſcience, and are the cauſes of great diſtraction of minde: and they are many, which hauing been vpon occaſion before rehearſed, I will not now repeat them. Onely this muſt be remembred, that the greater ſinnes againſt the third, ſixt, and ſeuenth commandements, are the maine and proper cauſes of violent diſtreſſes: and the more ſecret the ſinne is, in regard of the practiſe thereof, the greater horror of Conſcience it bringeth; and open offences doe not giue ſo deep a wound vnto it, as ſecret and hidden ſinnes.

Quo occultius peccatum, cò maius iudicium.

Secondly, the particular ſin being knowne, Inquirie muſt bee made, as much as poſsibly may be, by ſignes, whether the partie diſtreſſed repenteth, yea or no. For except he hath repented, he cannot be fitted to receiue comfort: and vnleſſe hee be firſt fitted to receiue comfort, hee cannot bee releeued in Conſcience. Now if it bee found out, that the partie hath repented, then care muſt bee had in the next place, that his repentance may be renued for the particular ſinne committed.

Thirdly, hauing thus done, the comfort muſt bee miniſtred for the moderating or taking away of the diſtreſſe. And here remember by the way, that the comforts miniſtred, vſually and ordinarily, muſt no goe alone, but be mingled and tempered with ſome terrors of the Law: that beeing thereby feared with the conſideration of ſinne, and of the wrath of God due vnto the ſame, the comfort may appeare to bee the ſweeter. The miniſtring whereof, in caſe of this diſtreſſe, would not be direct and preſent, but by certaine ſteppes and degrees: except onely in the point of death: for then a directer courſe muſt be vſed. Theſe degrees are two.

Firſt, the partie is to be informed of a poſsibilitie of pardon, that is, that his ſinnes are pardonable, and though in themſelues they be great and hainous, yet by the mercie of God in Chriſt, they may bee remitted. Now put the caſe, that the afflicted apprehendeth onely the odiouſneſſe of his ſinnes, and the wrath of God due to the ſame, and in this fitte put off the pardon from himſelfe, and cannot be perſwaded that his ſinne may bee forgiuen, what then is to be done? Anſ. Then for the effecting of this firſt degree, certaine Grounds are to bee laid downe, whereupon aſſurance in that caſe may bee built vp in his heart.

Grounds of poſsibilitie of pardon.

The firſt Ground of poſsibilitie of pardon is, That the mercie of God is infinite, yea ouer all his workes, Pſal. 145.9. That the death of Chriſt is of infinite price, merit, and value before God. That God is much in ſparing, Iſa. 55.7. That with the Lord is mercie, and with him is plenteous redemption, Pſal. 130.7. That Chriſts ſatisfaction is not onely a (b) price, but a (c) counterprice, 1. Tim. 2. 6. able to ſatisfie for the ſinnes of all men, yea for thẽ that haue ſinned againſt the holy Ghoſt. For that ſinne is not therfore vnpardonable, becauſe the offence thereof is greater then the merit of Chriſt, but becauſe the partie offending, neither doth, nor can applie the merit of Chriſt vnto himſelfe. An ancient Father vpon Cains words, ſaith, My puniſhment is greater then I can beare. Thou lieſt Cain: for Gods mercie is greater then the ſinnes of all men. The mercy of God was very great to Manaſſes, to Salomon, to Peter, and to many others, though they were great offenders.

2.Chr.33.13
2.Sam.7.14,15.

The ſecond Ground. Men of yeares, liuing in the Church of God, and knowing the doctrine of ſaluation, ſhall not bee condemned ſimply for their ſinnes, but for lying in their ſinnes. Vpon this ground I ſay, that men diſtreſſed muſt bee grieued, not ſo much for committing of ſinne, as for lying and continuing in ſinnes committed.

A third Ground. It pleaſeth God many times to leaue men to themſelues, and to ſuffer them to commit ſome ſinne that woundeth conſcience. It is true and cannot be denied. But we muſt withall remember, that ſinnes committed doe not vtterly take away grace, but rather make it the more to ſhine and ſhew it ſelfe. For God in mercy turneth all things, euen ſinne it ſelſe, to the good of them that be his: and therefore ſinne committed, cannot either waſt, or extinguiſh grace receiued, but by diuine diſpenſation, ſerues to amplifie and inlarge the ſame, ſo as where ſin aboundeth, there grace aboundeth much more, Rom. 5. 20. And the Lord ſaid to Paul being in great extremity, 2. Cor. 12. 9. My grace is ſufficient for thee: for my power is made perfect through weakeneſſe. Hence it appeareth, that Gods grace is not vtterly loſt, but appeareth liuely in the time of diſtreſſe.

The fourth Ground is this: The promiſes of God touching remiſſion of ſinnes, and life eternall in reſpect of beleeuers are generall, and in regard of all and euery man, indefinite: that is, they do not define or exclude any perſon, or any ſinner, or any time; onely they admit one exception of finall impenitencie. Here a queſtion may bee mooued, How long he that miniſtreth comfort, muſt ſtand vpon the poſsibilitie of pardon? I anſwer, vntill hee hath brought the party diſtreſſed to ſome meaſure of true repentance: and this being done, then hee is to proceed to the ſecond degree of comfort.

The Second degree of comfort is, to teach, that the ſinne, or ſinnes of the partie diſtreſſed, are indeede pardoned. But it may be asked, vpon what ſignes may this comfort be applied? I anſwer, vpon theſe two. Firſt, if the partie diſtreſſed confeſſe, that he or ſhee is heartily grieued, that by their ſinne or ſinnes, they haue offended ſo louing and ſo mercifull a God. Secondly, if they profeſſe, that they deſire with all their heart, to be reconciled vnto God in Chriſt: and at leaſt doe deſire to repent for their ſinnes; and withall doe carrie in heart, a purpoſe to ſinne no more, but in all things, (as much as in them lieth) to performe new obedience vnto God, Luk. 15. 11. &c. Now for the better enforcing of this comfort, ſome texts of Scripture fitting this purpoſe muſt be rehearſed, as for example, Math. 9. 12, 13. I came not to call the righteous, that is to ſay, thoſe that iudge themſelues righteous, but ſinners, that is, thoſe which are grieued, becauſe in their owne conſcience, they are vile and hainous offenders, to repentance. Againe, Matth. 11. 28. Come vnto me all ye that are wearie, and heauie laden, and I will refreſh you. And Chriſt ſaith, it was the end of his comming, to preach deliuerance to the Captiues, and to ſet at libertie them that are bruiſed. Luk. 4. 18.

The Caſe of Recidiuation.

To conclude this point, there remaines yet a further queſtion to be reſolued, and that is this. A man after repentance for ſome grieuous ſinne, falles into it againe, and is diſtreſſed more then before: It is a caſe ſomewhat grieuous. For wee know, that if a man be recouered of an ague, and through diſtemper in diet or otherwiſe, makes a relapſe into it againe, his caſe is often deſperate, and he hardly ſcapeth with his life. In the ſame manner it is a dangerous caſe, if after repentance, men make a relapſe into the ſame ſin againe. It may then be asked, how ſuch perſons may be recouered after a relapſe?

I anſwer, though we finde not any one particular example in Scripture, of any one perſon, that was reſtored againe after a relapſe: yet neuertheleſſe there is ſome comfort for ſuch perſons. Vpon what grounds may ſome ſay? Anſw. Men that haue not ſo much as a drop of mercie, in compariſon of God, muſt forgiue their brethren often and many times, yea, as our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith to Peter, till ſeuentie times ſeuen times, if they returne and ſay, it repents them. Now God is infinite in all his attributes: He is much in ſparing: with him is plenteous redemption: and therefore hee will queſtionleſſe, vpon true repentance, often forgiue and forget, euen the ſame ſinne iterated againe and againe.

Now theſe perſons are to be releeued in this ſort. Firſt, they muſt haue their Conſciences ſetled in this point, that their relapſe is pardonable, though very daungerous. For proofe hereof, reade Eſay. 1. 18: where mention is made of diuers Apoſtataes, that were by God called to repentance, with promiſe of pardon if they turned vnto him. And in Luk. 15 the prodigall child, (by whome I vnderſtand one that after grace receiued, fell from his repentance and obedience to God) when he did purpoſe in his heart to returne againe, was pardoned, and receiued into fauour. In the 2. Cor. 5. 20. Paul ſaith to the Corinths, that were fallen away, We pray you in Chriſts ſtead that ye be reconciled vnto God.

Secondly, beeing thus ſetled in conſcience, they muſt againe repent them of their ſinnes.

Thirdly and laſtly, they are to be comforted, with the promiſe of remiſſion of ſinnes, after that ſome ſignes of renewed repentance for ſinnes paſt, haue beene giuen.

The *Mo*derate diſtreſſe.

The ſecond kinde of this Tentation or trouble of minde, which is more common & leſſe violent, befalles the Children of God: and it is a griefe of heart, more or leſſe, whereby men are troubled in reſpect of the want of grace in their hearts, and defects of obedience in their liues. Paul the deere ſeruant of God, was poſſeſſed with this trouble of minde, as we may reade, Rom. 7. 23. And indeede there is no child of God, but more or leſſe, one time or other, he feeles the ſtings of ſinne, and the buffeting of Satan, which cauſe griefe in his heart. But this griefe is a notable grace of God, and therefore they which want it, muſt labour to haue it, and they which haue it, muſt not ſeeke to put it out, but to keepe it in meaſure and order.

And the Grounds of comfort, whereby the heart may be ſtaied in this ſorrow, that it be not immoderate, may be theſe.

I. Ground. It is Gods will, that the worke of ſanctification, or regeneration, ſhould be imperfect in this life, and remaine vnfiniſhed till death. This point needes no proofe, it is manifeſt both in the word of God, and in daily experience. The reaſons for which God will haue it to be ſo, may be theſe.

Firſt of all, God giues grace, according to the meaſure, and manner of our receiuing of it, which in this life is imperfect. Some gifts of God in Chriſt, beſtowed on his ſeruants, as remiſſion of ſinnes by his death, and iuſtification by his obedience, are not put into vs, but are only applied and made ours by imputation. Some other gifts there be, which are infuſed and put into vs, as namely, ſanctification, regeneration, the loue of God and man: and by one of theſe two meanes, to wit, either by imputation, or infuſion, are all the gifts of God in Chriſt made ours. Yet before we can haue them, we muſt receiue them, and the meanes whereby we receiue them is faith, which God hath ordained, to be the hand of our ſoules, to receiue his benefits beſtowed on vs. Which faith becauſe it is weake and imperfect, in this life, therefore the gifts which we receiue thereby, are alſo imperfect. For though Gods benefits be like a bottomles ſes, yet the faith, whereby we lay hold of them, is like vnto a veſſell with a narrow necke, which though it be caſt into the great Ocean, receiues but a litle water at once, and that by degrees, droppe by droppe, according to the wideneſſe of the mouth. And hence it is, that though the gifts of God without vs, which are ours by imputation, be perfect; yet all ſuch graces as are put into vs are weake and imperfect.

Secondly, if any ſeruant of God, ſhould be perfectly regenerate, and made abſolutely holy in this life: then he ſhould fulfill the morall law, and ſo become a Sauiour to himſelfe: and by the tenour of the law haue life; and ſo ſhould not Chriſt be a Sauiour properly, but only an inſtrument, to diſpoſe vs to the keeping of the law, whereby we might ſaue our ſelues. But there is one onely al-ſufficient Sauiour, Chriſt Ieſus, and the beginning, the middle, & the accompliſhment of our ſaluation, is to be aſcribed to him alone.

Thirdly, it is the will of God, that his owne children, with whome he is well pleaſed in Chriſt, ſhould be brought to nothing in themſelues, that they might be all in all out of themſelues in Chriſt: being, as it were, emptied of ſelfe-loue, and of all confidence in their owne goodneſſe. But if ſanctification ſhould be perfect at the firſt, then a man ſhould not goe out of himſelfe, but would rather ſtay as he is, and reſt contented in his owne goodnes. For this cauſe Paul, after his exaltation, was buffeted by Satans temptations, that he might not be exalted out of meaſure, 2. Cor. 12. 7. but ſhould content himſelfe with this, that he was in the loue and fauour of God in Chriſt.

II. Ground is; To conſider, what makes a man profeſſing Chriſt, accepted of God: and how much he himſelfe muſt doe, for this end? The ſubſtance of all things to be done of vs for this end, that we may become the children of God, may be reduced to three heads.

Firſt of all, we muſt heartily bewaile our ſinnefull liues paſt, and ſeriouſly humble our ſelues in regard of our owne ſinnes, both of heart and life, and if by occaſion wee fall into any ſinne, we muſt not lie therein, but by ſpeedie repentance, recouer our former eſtate.

Secondly, in regard of the ſinnefulneſſe of our hearts and liues, in times paſt, we muſt reſt our ſelues on Gods mercie alone, flying to the throne of mercie for the pardon of them all.

Thirdly, we muſt indeauour in the courſe of our liues afterward to performe obedience to God in all his commaundements; that thereby we may ſhew our ſelues thankefull to him for his mercie, and profit in our obedience.

For proofe hereof, Firſt, conſider the examples of this practiſe in Gods children. All that Dauid, that worthy ſeruant of God could doe, after his ſinnes committed, to bring himſelfe againe into the fauour of God, whome he had offended, conſiſted of theſe very heads, which haue beene named, Repentance, Confidence, and Affiance in Gods mercie, & Performance of new obedience. And this his practiſe was verified, amongſt may other places, ſpecially in the 119. Pſalme, and in all the Pſalmes commonly called penitentiall. Againe, the Prophet Daniel was accepted of God onely for the doing of theſe things, Dan. 9. And in like manner was Paul, and the reſt of the Apoſtles, Rom. 7. 1. Tim. 1. 12. Againe, for further proofe, let it be conſidered; what it is that makes a man to become a Chriſtian, and ſeruant of God: not this, that he is pure from all ſinnes, and neuer ſlides or ſwarues from obedience vnto God; but becauſe when he ſinneth and falleth, he is grieued with himſelfe, and laboureth euery day, to mortifie his corruptions, which are the matter of ſinne, in his heart, and life, and ſuffereth not ſinne to reigne in his mortall bodie, but crucifieth the fleſh, with the affections and luſts thereof.

Yet here remaines a great difficultie. Many a good ſeruant of God, may, and doth truly ſay of himſelfe, I bewaile my ſinnes, and do in ſome ſort reſt on Gods mercie, and withall I endeauour to performe new obedience: but alas, here is my griefe, I can not doe theſe things as I would. In matter of ſorrow and griefe, I am troubled with hardneſſe of heart; in occaſions of boldneſſe and confidence, with doubtings: in endeauour to obey, with many ſlips, and ſundry falles. For the ſtaying and moderating of this griefe, theſe rules may further be remembred.

The firſt Rule. If there be in the minde, a purpoſe not to ſinne: in the will, a deſire to pleaſe God: and in the whole man, an endeauour to performe the purpoſe of the minde, and the deſire of the will: marke what followes vpon this: God in mercie accepteth the purpoſe & will to obey, for obedience it ſelfe. Yea, though a man faile in the very act, and doe not ſo well as he ſhould, the Lord accepteth the affection and endeauour for the thing done. Excellent is the ſaying of an auncient Father, God accepteth that which is his, and forgiues that which is thine. His is the grace whereby we are enabled to endeauour to obey in the want of obedience, and that he accepteth: ours is the ſinne and weakeneſſe in performance of the duty which he requireth, and that he doth in mercie forgiue. Herein appeareth the great goodneſſe of God vnto vs, and we can neuer be ſufficiently thankfull for the ſame. But yet that we may not here delude our hearts with conceits, and bleſſe our ſelues in vaine: we muſt know, that God doth not alwaies accept the will for the deede, vnleſſe there be a conſtant purpoſe in heart, a true deſire in will, and ſome reſolued endeauour ſutable in the life: Malach. 3. 17. God ſpares them that feare him, as a father ſpares his owne child.

Accipit ſuum, & remitti tuum.

How is that? Though the ſicke or weake child beeing commanded ſome buſines, goeth about it very vnhandſomly, and ſo the deede be done to litle or no purpoſe: yet the father accepts it as well done, if he ſee the child yeeld vnto his commaundement, and doe his endeauour, to the vttermoſt of his power. Euen ſo will God deale with thoſe that be his children though ſicke and weake in obedience.

But how, will ſome ſay, can God accept a worke of ours that is imperfect? Anſ. So farre forth, as the obedience is done in truth, ſo farre forth God accepts it, becauſe it is his owne work in vs: and as it is ours, he pardons it vnto vs, becauſe we are in Chriſt.

A ſecond Rule is laid downe, Rom. 7. 19. where Paul ſaith to this purpoſe, the good which I would doe, I doe not, and the euill which I would not, that doe I. In theſe words is ſet downe the ſtate of all regenerate men in this life: and the meaning is this: The good things which God hath commaunded, I doe them, but not as I would; and the euill forbidden I auoid, but not as I would. This we ſhall ſee to be true by comparing the voices of three kindes of men together. The carnall man ſaith, I doe not that which is good, neither will I doe it; and that which is euill I doe, and I would doe it. Contrariwiſe, the man glorified, he ſaith, That which is good I doe, and will doe it; and that which is euill I doe not, neither will I doe it: The regenerate man, in a middle betweene them both he ſaith; The good things commanded I doe, but not as I would; the euill things forbidden I auoid, but not as I would.

And this is the eſtate of the child of God in this life, who in this regard, is like vnto a diſeaſed man, who loues his health, and therfore obſerues both diet and phyſicke: and yet he often fals into his fit againe (though he be neuer ſo carefull to obſerue the rules of the Phyſitian) by reaſon of the diſtemperature of his bodie: and hereupon is faine to goe to the Phyſitian the ſecond time for new counſell. In like manner, Gods children haue indeede in their hearts a care to pleaſe and obey God; but by reaſon of ſinne that dwelleth in them, they faile often, and ſo are faine to humble themſelues againe before him, by new repentance. Againe, the ſeruants of God are like to a man, by ſome ſudden accident caſt into the ſea, who in ſtriuing to ſaue himſelfe from drowning, puts to all his ſtrength, to ſwim to the ſhore, & beeing come almoſt vnto it, there meetes him a waue or billow, which driues him cleane backe againe, it may be a mile or further, and then the former hope and ioy conceiued of eſcape, is ſore abated, yet he returnes againe, and ſtill labours to come to the land, and neuer reſts till he attaine vnto it.

III. Ground. He that is indeede regenerate, hath this priuiledge, that the corruption of nature is no part of him, neither doth it belong to his perſon, in reſpect of diuine imputation. Paul ſaith of himſelfe, Rom. 7. 17. It is no more I, but ſinne that dwelleth in me. In which words, he diſtinguiſheth betweene his owne perſon, and ſinne that is in him. For in man regenerate, there be three things, the bodie, the ſoule, and the gift of Gods image reſtored againe. Now touching the corruption of nature, that is in his perſon, and ſo may be ſaid to be his; but it belongs not to the man regenerate: it is not his, becauſe it is not imputed to him, and ſo indeede is, as though it were not in him. The Apoſtle, 1. Theſſ. 5. 23. praies for the Theſſalonians, that God would ſanctifie them throughout, and preſerue their whole ſpirit, ſoule, and bodie. Of which place (amongſt many) this expoſition may be giuen. The Apoſtle ſpeaking of men regenerate, and ſanctified, makes three parts in them: bodie, ſoule, and ſpirit: and by ſpirit, we are to vnderſtand, not the conſcience, but the gift of regeneration, & ſanctification, which is the whole new man in bodie and ſoule, oppoſed to the fleſh, which in a naturall man, is called the old man, Rom. 7. And the prayer which Paul makes in the behalfe of the Theſſalonians, teacheth vs in effect thus much; that though corruption remaine in the regenerate, after regeneration, yet in reſpect of diuine acceptation, he is accounted as righteous, and ſo continueth, his ſinne (by the mercie of God in Chriſt) not beeing imputed to him to condemnation. And ſo much for that point.

Now theſe Grounds of comfort, & others of the like nature, may ſerue to ſuſtaine and vphold the hearts of the children of God, when they ſhall be preſſed and troubled, in conſideration of their eſtate in this life, which cannot till death, be fully freed from much weakneſſe and manifold imperfections.

CHAP. XII.

Of the fift ſpeciall Diſtreſſe, ariſing from a mans owne bodie.

THe fift and laſt kinde of Temptation or Trouble of minde, ariſeth from a mans owne bodie.

Before I enter to ſpeake thereof, one Queſtion, in the meane time, muſt be anſwered, namely, How the body beeing an earthly ſubſtance, ſhould trouble or annoy the minde, conſidering that the minde is not bodily, but ſpirituall: for nothing can worke aboue it own power; and it is againſt reaſon, that that which is bodily, ſhould either alter or trouble a ſpirit. For anſwer hereunto, theſe things muſt be conſidered

How the body troubles the minde.

Firſt of al, the actions of man, though they be ſundry, yet they all proceed from one onely fountaine, and common cauſe, the ſoule, and are done by the power thereof. The body of it ſelfe, is not an agent in any worke, but as it were a dead inſtrument, in and by which the ſoule produceth all actions and workes.

Secondly, though all the actions of man come from the ſoule, yet the moſt of them are ſuch, as be performed by the body, and the parts thereof, and by the ſpirits that are ſeated in the bodie, as by inſtruments. Indeed ſome actions of the ſoule and minde, are done without the helpe of the bodie, but I ſay that the moſt of them, are wrought by the bodie, and ſpirits therein contained. And yet notwithſtanding the ſpirits in themſelues, are no agents at all: but the onely agent in any worke, is the ſoule it ſelfe. For example, the vſing of the outward ſenſes, as of ſight, hearing, taſting, touching, ſmelling, as alſo of the inward, as imagination, memorie, &c. all this is done by the braine, and the parts of the braine, as proper inſtruments. All affections both good and bad, come from the ſoule, but yet they are done and acted in, and by the meanes of the heart, and vital ſpirits. So alſo the powers of life and nouriſhment proceede from the ſoule, and yet they are done and wrought by the liuer, and other inward parts, as inſtruments whereby the ſoule nouriſheth the bodie. In a word, there is no naturall action in man, but for the effecting thereof, the parts of the body are vſed as it were the hands and inſtruments of the ſoule; & all this comes by reaſon of the vnion of the bodie with the ſoule, whereby they make one perſon.

Hence it followes, that when the bodie is troubled, the ſoule is alſo troubled. Now the body affecteth and hurteth the ſoule & mind, not by taking away, or diminiſhing any part thereof: for the ſoule is indiuiſible. Nor by depriuing it of any power or facultie giuen it of God: for, as the ſoule it ſelfe, and the parts thereof, ſo alſo all the faculties of the ſame, remaine whole and entire, without abating or diminiſhing. But by corrupting the action of the minde, or more properly, by corrupting the next inſtrument, whereby the mind worketh, and conſequently the action it ſelfe.

This may be conceiued by a compariſon. A skilfull artificer in any ſcience, hauing an vnfit toole to worke withall, though his skill be good, and his ability ſufficient: yet his inſtrument wherewith he worketh beeing bad, the worke which he doth muſt needes be an imperfect worke. Howbeit, the toole takes not away the skill of his workmanſhip, nor his power of working; onely it hinders him from ſhewing his skill, and doing that well, which otherwiſe hee ſhould and could doe well. In like manner, the bodie being corrupted, hinders the worke of the ſoule, not by taking away the worke of the ſoule, or the abilitie of working: but by making it to bring foorth a corrupt worke, becauſe the inſtrument which it vſeth is corrupt and faultie. And thus we muſt conceiue of all the annoyances of the ſoule by the bodie.

The Temptation followeth. The bodie cauſeth the trouble of minde two waies, either by Melancholy, or by ſome ſtrange alteration in the parts of the body, which oftentimes befall men: in what ſort we ſhal ſee afterwards. For troubles of minde thus cauſed, are more common, and as noyſome as the moſt of the former.

Melancholy.

Touching that which comes by Melancholy, ſundrie things are to be conſidered for our inſtruction, and for the Remedie of that euill.

1. And firſt of all, if it be asked what Melancholy is? I anſwer, It is a kind of earthy and blacke blood, ſpecially in the ſpleene, corrupted and diſtempered, which when the ſpleene is ſtopt, conuaies it ſelfe to the heart, and the braine, and there partly by his corrupt ſubſtance, and contagious qualitie, and partly by corrupt ſpirits, annoyeth both heart & braine, being the ſeates and inſtruments of reaſon and affections.

Eſca Diaboli.
Balneum Diaboli.

2. The ſecond is, what are the effects and operations of Melancholy? Anſw. They are ſtrange, and often fearefull. There is no humour, yea nothing in mans bodie, that hath ſo ſtrange effects, as this humour hath, beeing once diſtempered. An ancient Diuine calles it the Diuels baite, becauſe the Diuell beeing well acquainted with the complexion and temperature of man, by Gods iuſt permiſſion, conueyes himſelfe into this humor, and worketh ſtrange conceits. It is recorded in Scripture, that when the Lord tooke his good ſpirit from Saul, whereby he did carrie himſelfe wel in the gouernment of his people, and an euill ſpirit came vpon him, hee was in ſo fearefull a caſe, that he would haue ſlaine him that was next vnto him: how ſo? Surely, becauſe God in iuſtice withdrew his Spirit from him, and ſuffered Satan, to enter into the humour of choler, melancholy, or both, & by this means cauſed him to offer violence to Dauid.

Now the effects thereof in particular, are of two ſorts. The firſt, is in the braine and head. For this humour beeing corrupted, it ſends vp noyſome fumes as cloudes or miſts which doe corrupt the imagination, and make the inſtrument of reaſon vnfit for vnderſtanding & ſenſe. Hence followes the firſt effect, ſtrange imaginations, conceits and opinions framed in the minde: which are the firſt worke of this humour, not properly: but becauſe it corrupteth the inſtrument, and the inſtrument being corrupted, the facultie cannot bring forth good but corrupt actions.

Examples hereof are well knowne, I will onely touch one or two. One is called the Beſtiall or Beaſtlike Melancholy, a diſeaſe in the braine whereby a man thinkes him to be a beaſt of this or that kind, and carries himſelfe accordingly. And herewith haue all thoſe bin troubled, which haue thought themſelues to be * wolues, and haue practiſed wooluiſh behauiour. Againe, it is ſaid of Nebuchadnezzar, Dan. 4. 30. that he was driuen from men, and did eate graſſe as the oxen, that is, be-

haued himſelfe, and fed as a beaſt. Now ſome are of opinion, that his humane ſhape was taken from him, and that he was transformed into a beaſt, at leaſt that he had the ſoule of a beaſt in ſtead of an humane ſoule for a time. But they are deceiued. For there is no ſuch tranſportation of ſoules into bodies, either of men or beaſts. Others thinke, that Nebuchadnezzar was ſmitten in the braine with this diſeaſe of beaſt-like melancholy, whereby he was ſo bereft of his right mind, that he carried himſelfe as a beaſt. And this interpretation is not againſt the text: for in the 31. verſe of that chapter it is ſaid, that his minde came to him againe: and therefore in the diſeaſe, his vnderſtanding, and the right vſe of his reaſon was loſt. And the like is true in hiſtorie, by diuers examples, though it were not true in Nebuchadnezzar.

Againe, take another example, that is common and ordinary. Let a Melancholike perſon vpon the ſuddaine, heare or ſee ſome fearfull thing, the ſtrength of his imagination is ſuch, that hee will preſently faſten the thing vpon himſelfe. As if he ſee or heare that a man hath hanged himſelfe, or is poſſeſſed with a Diuel, it preſently comes to his minde, that he muſt doe ſo vnto himſelfe, or that he is, or at leaſt ſhall be poſſeſſed. In like manner, vpon relation of fearefull things, preſently his phantaſie workes, and he imagineth, that the thing is alreadie, or ſhall befall him. And this imagination, when it enters once and takes place, it brings foorth horrible and fearefull effects.

The ſecond effect or worke of Melancholy, is vpon the heart. For there is a concord and conſent betweene the heart & the braine, the thoughts and the affections: the heart affecting nothing but that which the minde conceiueth. Now when the minde hath conceiued, imagined, and framed within it ſelfe fearefull thoughts; then comes affection and is anſwerable to imagination. And hence proceede exceeding horrors, feares and deſpaires, euen of ſaluation it ſelfe, and yet the Conſcience for all this vntouched, and not troubled or diſquieted.

3. Thirdly, it may be demanded, whether there be any difference betweene the trouble of Conſcience and Melancholy? Anſ. They are not all one, but differ much. Affliction of Conſcience is one thing, trouble by Melancholy is another: and they are plainely diſtinguiſhed thus.

Firſt, when the conſcience is troubled, the affliction it ſelfe is in the conſcience, and ſo in the whole man. But in Melancholy, the imagination is diſturbed, and not the conſcience. Secondly, the conſcience afflicted, hath a true and certen cauſe, wherby it is troubled, namely, the ſight of ſinne, and the ſenſe of Gods wrath: but in Melancholy, the imagination conceiueth a thing to be ſo, which is not ſo: for it makes a man feare and deſpaire vpon ſuppoſed and fained cauſes. Thirdly, the man afflicted in Conſcience, hath courage in many other matters: but the melancholike man feares euery man, euery creature, yea himſelf, and hath no courage at all, but feares, when there is no cauſe of feare. Fourthly, imaginations in the braine cauſed by Melancholy, may be cured, taken away, and cut off by meanes of Phyſicke: but the diſtreſſe of Conſcience, cannot be cured by any thing in the world but one, and that is the blood of Chriſt, and the aſſurance of Gods fauour.

4. Fourthly, the way to cure Melancholy is this. Firſt, the perſon troubled muſt bee brought to this, that he will content himſelfe, to be aduiſed and ruled by the iudgement of others, and ceaſe to reſt vpon himſelfe touching his owne eſtate; and by this ſhall he reape much quiet and contentation.

Secondly, ſearch and triall muſt be made, whether he hath in him any beginnings of grace, as of faith and repentance, or no. If he be a carnall man, and wanteth knowledge of his eſtate, then meanes muſt be vſed, to bring him to ſome ſight and ſorrow for his ſinnes, that his melancholy ſorrow, may be turned into a godly ſorrow. If he want faith and true repentance, ſome good beginnings thereof muſt be wrought in his heart.

Thirdly, when he is brought to faith in Gods mercie, and an honeſt purpoſe not to ſinne any more; then, certaine mercifull promiſes of God, are to be laid before him: and he muſt be exhorted, to reſt vpon theſe promiſes, and at no time to admit any imagination or thought, that may croſſe the ſaide promiſes. Now the promiſes are theſe, and ſuch like. Pſal. 34. 9. No good thing ſhall be wanting to them that feare God. Pſal 91.10. No euill ſhal come neere the godly man. 2. Chr. 15. The Lord is with you, while you are with him, and if you ſeeke him, he will be found of you. Iam. 4. 8. Draw neere to God, and he will draw neere to you. And the beſt meanes to cauſe any man thus diſeaſed, to be at peace with himſelfe, is to hold, beleeue, and know the truth of theſe promiſes, and not to ſuffer any by-thought to enter into his heart, that may croſſe them.

Moreouer, though the former promiſes may ſtay the minde, yet will they not take away the humour, except further helpe be vſed. Therefore the fourth and laſt helpe, is the art of Phyſicke, which ſerues to correct and abate the humour, because it is a meanes by the bleſſing of God, to reſtore the health, and to cure the diſtemper of the body. And thus much touching the trouble of minde, cauſed by melancholy.

Strange alterations beſides melancholy.

The ſecond meanes whereby the body annoyes the mind, is, when it occaſions trouble to the minde, by ſtrange alterations incident to the bodie. When a man begins to enter into a Phrenſie, if the braine admit neuer ſo little alteration, preſently the mind is troubled, the reaſon corrupted, the heart terrified, the man diſtracted in the whole body. Thus from the trembling of the heart come many feareful imaginations and conceits, whereof a man knowes not the cauſe. The ſame is procured by the ſwelling of the ſpleene, by the riſing of the entrals, by ſtrange crampes, conuulſions, and ſuch like.

The remedie hereof is this. Firſt, it is ſtill to be conſidered, whether the party thus troubled, hath the beginnings of true faith & repentance, or no. If he hath, it is ſo much the better: If he hath not, (as vſually ſuch perſons are meere naturall men) then the firſt duty is, to vſe all means, to ſtirre vp in him ſome godly ſorrow for his ſinnes, to bring him to the exerciſes of inuocation, and to ſome confidence in Gods mercie for pardon.

Secondly, this beeing done, meanes muſt be vſed to take away the opinion conceiued, which will be done by giuing him information of the ſtate of his bodie, & what is the true & proper cauſe of the alteration thereof. This beeing knowne, the griefe or feare conceiued will eaſily be ſtayed. For take away the falſe opinion, and informe the iudgement, and the whole man will be the better.

Thirdly, the opinion beeing altered and reformed, it may be the alteration in the bodie will remaine: the partie therefore in that caſe muſt be taught, that it is a correction of God, and that God doth not barely ſuffer the correction to be inflicted, but is the very authour of it: and therefore the party is to be wel pleaſed, and to reſt himſelfe in that will of God.

A For euery preſent eſtate, whether it be good or bad, is the beſt ſtate for vs, becauſe it comes by Gods will and appointment.

And thus much touching the diſtinct kinds of diſtreſſes of mind: whereunto I adde this one thing further, that if we make examination of the eſtate of ſuch perſons as are troubled with any of theſe fiue temptations, wee ſhall not vſually finde them ſingle, but mixed together, eſpecially Melancholy, with terror of Conſcience, or ſome other temptations.

For the diſtraction of the minde will often breed a diſtemper in the body, & the diſtemper of the bodie likewiſe will ſometime cauſe diſtraction of mind. Againe, Melancholy will often be an occaſion, (though no direct cauſe) B of terrour of conſcience; & in the ſame manner the conſcience touched and terrified with ſenſe of the hainouſneſſe of ſinne, and the heauineſſe of Gods wrath, will bring diſtemper of body by ſympathie, and cauſe Melancholy.

In this Caſe, if Queſtion be made, what is to be done, I anſwer, that for mixt diſtreſſes, we muſt haue recourſe to mixt Remedies, vſing in the firſt place the beſt meanes for the rectifying of the mind, the principal grounds whereof haue beene before deliuered; and then taking the ſeaſonable aduice of the Phyſitian, whoſe calling and ſeruice God hath ſanctified for the cure and releefe of the body in caſe of extremitie.

And ſo much of the firſt ſort of Queſtions, concerning Man ſimply conſidered in himſelfe.

The end of the firſt Booke.

THE SECOND BOOKE OF THE CASES OF CONSCIENCE, CONCERNING Man as he ſtands in relation to God.

CHAP. I.

Of the order of the Queſtions.

Hitherto I haue ſpoken touching the firſt ſort of Queſtions of the Conſcience, which concerne Man ſimply conſidered in himſelfe as he is a man.

In the next place comes to be handled and reſolued the Queſtions concerning Man, as he ſtands in relation. Now man ſtanding in a two-fold relation; either to God, or to man: according to this relation, the Queſtions come to be conſidered in their ſeuerall places. And firſt, we are to treate of the Queſtions of Conſcience touching man ſtanding in relation to God; to wit, as he is a Chriſtian. All which for order C ſake may be reduced to foure heads.

I. Concerning the Godhead.
II. Concerning the Scriptures.
III. Concerning religion, or the worſhip that is due vnto God.
IV. Concerning the time of the worſhip of God, namely, the Sabbath.

CHAP. II.

Of the Godhead.

Touching the Godhead, there are two maine Queſtions.

I. Queſtion.

Whether there be a God?

BEfore wee come to anſwer the Queſtion, this one caueat muſt bee remembred, that it is a maine Ground and Principle in all Religions whatſoeuer, not to bee doubted of, or called into queſtion, That there is a God. Hebrewes 11. 6. Hee that commeth to God, muſt beleeue that God is. As for thoſe that are commonly tearmed Atheiſts, which denie that there is a God, they are to bee puniſhed with death, as not worthie to liue in humane ſocietie; and the greateſt torment that can bee deuiſed by the witte of man, is too good for them. For if thoſe bee holden as traitors to an earthly Prince, and are moſt deſeruedly adiudged to death, that reuile his perſon, and denie his lawfull authoritie: then they that call into queſtion the Godhead, are much more worthie to be eſteemed traytours to God, and conſequently to beare the iuſt puniſhment of their rebellion, death it ſelfe.

For this cauſe I doe not meane to diſpute the queſtion, whether there bee a God or no; and thereby miniſter occaſion of doubting and deliberation in that which is the onely maine Ground and pillar of Chriſtian religion: but rather my purpoſe is, in ſhewing that there is a God, to remooue, or at leaſt to helpe an inward corruption of the ſoule, that is great and dangerous, whereby the heart and conſcience by nature denieth God and his prouidence. The wound in the bodie that pluckes out the heart, is the moſt dangerous wound that can bee: and that opinion that taketh away the Godhead, doth in effect rend and plucke out the very heart of the ſoule. This caueat premiſed, I come to the point in hand, to ſhew that there is a God.

And for our better knowledge and aſſurance of this truth, we are to remember thus much, that God hath giuen vnto man a threefolde light: the one of nature, the other of grace, and the third of glorie. And by theſe, as by ſo many degrees of knowledge, the minde beeing inlightened by God, receiueth direction in the truth of the Godhead, both for this preſent life, and for that which is to come.

If it bee demaunded, in what order God hath reuealed this light vnto man: I anſwer, that the light of nature ſerueth to giue a beginning and preparation to this knowledge: the light of grace miniſters the ground, and giues further proofe and euidence: and the light of glory yeelds perfection of aſſurance, making that perfectly and fully known, which by the former degrees was but weakely and imperfectly comprehended. Of theſe three in order.

Sect. I.

Arguments from the light of nature, and Creation.

The light of nature is that light, which the view and conſideration of the creatures both in generall and particular, affordeth vnto man. From the light of nature, there are fiue diſtinct arguments, to prooue that there is a God: the conſideration whereof will not bee vnprofitable, euen to him that is beſt ſetled in this point.

I. The firſt is taken from the creation and frame of the great bodie of the world, and the thinges therein contained. Romanes 1. 20, The inuiſible thinges of him, that is, his eternall power and Godhead, are knowne by the Creation of the World, beeing conſidered in his workes. And out of this excellent frame of the world, the truth of the Godhead may bee ſundrie wayes prooued and maintained.

Firſt, I would aske this queſtion: This goodly frame of the world, had it a beginning, or no beginning?

Let either part, or both be taken. Let it firſt bee ſaid, it had no beginning, but is eternall, as the Atheiſt holdeth. Then I reaſon thus: If it had no beginning, the world it ſelfe is God, and all the creatures that are therein, from the greateſt and higheſt, to the leaſt and baſeſt; yea, euery droppe of water in the ſea, and euery corne of ſand by the ſea ſhore, are Gods. The reaſon is, becauſe according to this opinion, they haue their beeing of themſelues without beginning; and that which is a ſubſtance of it ſelfe, and hath no beginning, is very God.

Againe, if the world hath no beginning, then it hath alſo no ending. For that which is without beginning, is without ending. Now all things in the world are lyable to corruption, and conſequently are ſubiect to an ende. For whatſoeuer is corruptible, the ſame is finite: therefore the world had a beginning.

Now if it had a beginning; then I demaund, how it was made? did it make it ſelfe? or was it made of nothing? If it bee affirmed, that it made it ſelfe, then the world was before it was. If it be ſaid, it came from nothing, that alſo cannot be. For nothing brings forth nothing: and that which is nothing in it ſelfe, cannot bring forth ſomething: therefore it is abſurd in reaſon to ſay, that nothing brought foorth this world. And hereupon it muſt needes remaine for a truth, that there was ſome ſubſtance eternall and almightie, that framed this goodly Creature the World, beſides it ſelfe.

If a man comes into a large forreſt, and beholds therein goodly faire buildings, and ſundrie kindes of hearbes, and trees, and birds, and beaſtes, and no man: hee will preſently reaſon thus with himſelfe: theſe buildings are the workmanſhip of ſome man, they were not from all eternitie, they did not reare themſelues, neither did the hearbs, the trees, the birds, or the beaſtes build them: but of neceſſitie they muſt haue ſome firſt founder, which is man. In like manner, when wee conſider this world, ſo goodly a creature to beholde, though wee ſee not the maker thereof, yet wee cannot ſay, that either it made it ſelfe, or that the things therein contained made it, but that the Creator of it, was ſome vncreated ſubſtance, moſt wiſe, moſt cunning, and euerlaſting, and that is God.

Secondly, from this frame of the world, and the conſideration thereof, I reaſon thus: In the world there are foure ſorts and kindes of creatures. The firſt, bare and naked ſubſtances, that haue neither life, ſenſe, nor reaſon in them: as the Sunne, the Moone, and the Starres. The ſecond, that haue ſubſtance and life, but no ſenſe nor reaſon: as plants, trees, and hearbes. The third, that haue no reaſon, but both ſubſtance, life, ſenſe, and power to mooue themſelues: as the beaſtes of the land, and fiſhes of the ſea. The fourth are ſuch as haue all, namely, ſubſtance, life, ſenſe, and reaſon: as men.

Now theſe foure ſorts of creatures excell one another in properties and degrees. For the firſt of them which are meere ſubſtances, doe ſerue thoſe that haue life, as the trees and the plants. The trees and the plants ſerue the creatures that haue ſenſe and life, as the beaſtes and the fiſhes. The beaſtes and the fiſhes ſerue man, that hath ſubſtance, life, ſenſe, and reaſon. And amongeſt them all wee ſee, that thoſe which haue more giftes are ſerued of thoſe which haue leſſe, as the Sunne and Moone ſerue the plants, the plants and hearbs ſerue the beaſtes, and the beaſtes ſerue man, and that creature that hath moſt gifts is ſerued of all. Man therefore excelling all theſe muſt haue ſomething to honour and ſerue, which muſt bee more excellent then the other creatures, yea then himſelfe, and that is a ſubſtance vncreate, moſt holy, moſt wiſe, eternall, infinite, and this is God.

Thirdly, all particular creatures whether in heauen or in earth, are referred to their certaine particular and peculiar endes, wherein euery one of them, euen the baſeſt and meaneſt, is imployed, and which they doe all accompliſh in their kinde. And this is a plaine proofe, that there is one that excelleth in wiſedome, prouidence, and power, that created all theſe to ſuch endes, and hath power to bring them thereunto: and who is this but God?

Arguments from the gouernement of the world.

II. The ſecond ſort of arguments drawne from the light of nature, are taken from the preſeruation and gouernement of the world created; and theſe are touched by the Holy Ghoſt, when hee ſaith, Actes 14. 17. That God left not himſelfe without witneſſe, in that in his prouidence hee did good, and gaue raine from heauen, and fruitfull ſeaſons, filling our hearts with ioy and gladneſſe.

The particulars drawne from the gouernment of the world, are theſe:

Firſt, our foode whereby wee are nouriſhed, is in it ſelfe, a dead foode, voide of life: and yet it ſerueth to maintaine and preſerue life: whereas in reaſon, it is more fitte to choke and ſtuffe our bodies, then to feede them.

Secondly, our garments which wee weare, are in themſelues colde, and voide of heate, and yet they haue this vſe to preſerue heate, and to ſuſtaine life in the extremitie of colde. Therefore there muſt needes bee an omnipotent and diuine power, that giueth vnto them both ſuch a vertue, to feede and preſerue the life and health of man.

Thirdly, the raine falling, and the Sunne ſhining vpon one and the ſame plotte of ground, cauſeth it to bring forth in his ſeaſon a hundred ſeuerall kindes of hearbes and plants, whereby euery one hath a ſeuerall, and diſtinct flower, colour, forme, and ſauour: Whence commeth this? Not from the raine, for it hath no life in it ſelfe, and beſides it is in it ſelfe al one: nor from the Sunne, or the earth: for theſe alſo in their kinde are all one, hauing in them no ſuch power whereby they ſhould bee the authors of life; therefore the differences of plants in one ground, may conuince our iudgements, and teach vs thus much; that there is a diuine and heauenly power aboue and beſide the power of theſe creatures.

Fourthly, take an example of the bird and the egge. The bird bringeth forth the egge: the egge againe bringeth forth the bird. This egge conſidered in it ſelfe, hath in it neither life nor ſoule, and the bird can giue it neither; for all that the bird can doe, is to giue it heate, and no more. Within the ſhell of this egge, is made a goodly creature, which, when it commeth to ſome perfection, it breaketh the ſhell. In the ſhell broken, wee ſhall ſee the nibbe, the wing, the legge, and all the parts and members of a bird. Now let this bee conſidered, that the egge brought not forth this goodly creature, nor yet the henne. For the egge had no ſuch power or vertue in it ſelfe, and the henne gaue but her heate; neither did man doe it: for that which was done, was within the egge, and within the ſhell. It therefore was ſome other wonderfull power and wiſedome that made it, and brought it forth, that ſurpaſſeth the power of a creature.

Againe, let vs conſider the generation of the ſilke-worme, one of the leaſt of the creatures, and from it wee haue a notable demonſtration of a diuine prouidence. This little worme at the firſt, is but a ſmall ſeede, like vnto lin-ſeede: the ſame mall ſeede breedeth it and bringeth it foorth. The worme brought foorth, and growing to ſome biggeneſſe, at length weaues the ſilke; hauing wouen the ſilke, it windes it ſelfe within it, as it were in a ſhell: and there hauing lodged for a time, it conceiueth a creature of another forme, which beeing within a ſhort ſpace perfected, breaketh the ſhell, and commeth foorth a flie. The ſame flie, like a dutifull creature, bringeth forth the ſeede againe, and ſo continues the kinde thereof from yeare to yeare.

Heere let it bee remembred, that the flie hauing once brought forth the ſeede, leaues it, and dieth immediately: and yet the ſeede it ſelfe, though expoſed to winde and weather, and vtterly neglected of man, or any creature, at a certaine time within few moneth becomes a worme. Whence ſhould all this proceede, but from a Creatour infinitely powerfull and wiſe, who by his admirable power and prouidence, diſpenſeth life, beeing, and propagation, euen to the leaſt thinges in their particular ſorts and kindes?

III. The third ſort of Arguments from the light of nature, are taken from the ſoule of man. The ſoule is endued with excellent giftes of vnderſtanding and reaſon. The vnderſtanding hath in it from the beginning certaine principles, whereby it knoweth and diſcerneth both good and badde, things that are to bee done, and things that are to bee left vndone. Now man cannot haue this gift to diſcerne betweene good and euill, of, or from himſelfe: but it muſt needes proceede from another cauſe, which is, power, wiſedome, and vnderſtanding it ſelfe: and that is God.

Againe, the conſcience, another gift of the ſoule of man, hath in it two principall actions; teſtimonie, and iudgement; by both which the truth in hand is euidently confirmed.

Touching the teſtimonie of conſcience; let it bee demaunded of the Atheiſt, whereof doth conſcience beare witneſſe? Hee cannot denie, but of his particular actions. I aske then, againſt whome, or with whome doth it giue teſtimonie? The anſwer will eaſily bee made, by the heart of any man, that it is with, or againſt himſelfe. Furthermore, to whome is it a witneſſe? Neither to men, nor to angels: for it is vnpoſſible that any man or angel, ſhould either heare the voice of conſcience, or receiue the teſtimonie thereof, or yet diſcerne what is in the heart of man. Hereupon it followes, that there is a ſubſtance, moſt wiſe, moſt powerfull, moſt holy, that ſeeth and knoweth all thinges, to whome conſcience beareth record: and that is God himſelfe.

And touching the iudgement of conſcience; let a man committe any treſpaſſe or offence, though it bee done in ſecret, and concealed from the knowledge of any perſon liuing: yet Conſcience, that knoweth it, will accuſe him, terrifie him, cite him before God, and giue him no reſt. What, or where is the reaſon? man knoweth not the treſpaſſe committed: and if there bee no God, whome ſhall hee feare? and yet hee feareth. This alſo neceſſarily prooueth, that there is a iuſt and mightie God, that will take vengeance vpon him for his ſinne.

IV. The fourth argument which is from nature, is this: There is a ground or principle which is written in euery mans heart in the world, none excepted, that there is a God. Reaſons for proofe hereof may be theſe:

Firſt, the Gentiles worſhipping idols, made of ſtockes and ſtones, doe acknowledge herein thus much, that there is ſomething whereunto honour and ſeruice is due. For man by nature is proud, and will neuer yeeld to bowe the knee of his bodie before a ſtocke or a ſtone to adore it, vnleſſe hee thinke and acknowledge, that there is in them a diuine power, better then himſelfe.

Secondly, the oath that is taken for confirmation, which is commonly tearmed the aſſertorie oath, is vſed in all countreyes. And it is for the moſt part, generally taken to be a lawfull meanes of confirming a mans word, when it is bound by the oath taken. Iacob and Laban beeing to make a couenant, Iacob ſweareth by the true God, Laban by his falſe gods, and by that both were bound to ſtand to their agreement, and not to goe backe; therefore neither of them did, or durſt breake their oath. And among the Gentiles themſelues there are very fewe or none to bee found, that will falſifie their word giuen and auowed by an oath. Whereupon it is a cleare caſe, that they acknowledged a Godhead, which knoweth and diſcerneth their hearts, yea, that knoweth the truth, and can, and will plague them for their diſgracing the truth by lying.

Thirdly, wee are not lightly to paſſe ouer the vſuall tearmes and ordinarie ſpeech of all nations, who are woont vpon occaſion to ſay: it raines, It thunders, it ſnowes, it hailes. For, ſaying this, one while they reioyce and are thankefull, and otherwhiles they feare and are diſmaied. They ſay not, Nature or Heauen raines or thunders: for then they would neither reioyce, nor tremble. In that therefore they ſpeake this commonly, ſometimes reioycing, and ſometimes fearing, it may probably bee thought, that they acknowledge a diuine power, which cauſeth the raine to fall, and the thunder to bee ſo terrible.

Againe, for better proofe hereof, it is to bee conſidered, that ſince the world beganne, there could not yet bee found, or brought foorth, any man that euer wrote, or publiſhed a diſcourſe, more or leſſe, to this purpoſe, that there was no God.

If it bee ſaid, that ſome hiſtories doe make mention of ſundrie, that haue in plaine tearmes, denied there is a God, and that this is no leſſe daungerous, then if a treatiſe of that ſubiect ſhould be written, and ſet forth to the open viewe of all.

I anſwer, indeede in the writings of men, wee doe reade of ſome that did blaſpheme God, and liued as without God, and they haue alwaies beene properly and deſeruedly tearmed Atheiſts. Others haue denyed, that made and faigned gods, that is, idols, are gods. And amongſt the Heathen, that liued onely by the light and direction of nature, all that can bee brought is this, that ſome men in their writings haue doubted whether there were a God or no, but none did euer poſitiuely ſet downe reaſons to prooue that there was none.

V. The fifth and laſt argument from nature, is that which is vſed by all Philoſophers. In the world there is to bee ſeene an excellent wiſe frame and order of all things, One creature dependeth vpon another by a certaine order of cauſes: in which, ſome are firſt and aboue in higher place, ſome are next and inferiour, ſome are the baſeſt and the loweſt.

Now theſe loweſt are mooued of thoſe that are ſuperiour to them, and alwaies the ſuperiour is the cauſe of the inferiour, and that whereof the inferiour depends. Something then there muſt bee that is the cauſe of all cauſes, that muſt bee cauſed by none, and muſt be the cauſe of all: For in things wherein there is order, there is alway ſome firſt and ſoueraigne cauſe: and where there is no firſt nor laſt, there the Creatures are infinite. But ſeeing all creatures are finite, there muſt bee ſomewhat firſt, as well as laſt. Now the firſt and laſt cauſe of all is God, which mooueth all, and to whome all creatures doe tend, as to their ende, and which is mooued of none.

Notwithſtanding all theſe reaſons grounded in nature it ſelfe, it may bee ſome man will ſay, I neuer ſawe God, how then ſhall I knowe that there is a God? Anſwer. Why? wilt thou beleeue no more then thou ſeeſt? Thou neuer ſaweſt the winde or the aire, and yet thou beleeueſt that there is both. Nay, thou neuer ſaweſt thine owne face but in a glaſſe, and neuer out of a glaſſe, and yet this contenteth thee. Why then may not this content thy heart, and reſolue thee of the Godhead, in that thou ſeeſt him in the glaſſe of the creatures?

True it is, that God is a Spirit inuiſible, that cannot bee diſcerned by the eye of fleſh and blood, yet hee hath not left vs without a meanes, whereby wee may beholde him. For looke as wee are woont by degrees to goe from the picture to the Painter, and in the picture to beholde the Painter himſelfe: euen ſo by the image of God, which is written (as it were) in the face, and other parts of the creatures in the world, may wee take a view of the wiſdome, power, and prouidence of the Creator of them all, who is God himſelfe. And theſe are the principall proofes of the Godhead, which are reuealed in the booke of nature.

Arguments from the light of Grace.

The ſecond Ground of proofes, is taken from the light of Grace.. And it is that light which God affordeth to his Church in the writings of the Prophets and Apoſtles, and this giues a further confirmation, then nature doth. For the light of nature is onely a way or preparation to faith; But this light ſerues to beget faith, and cauſeth vs to beleeue there is a God.

Now in the holy Scriptures of the Prophets and Apoſtles, wee ſhall ſee amongſt the reſt, three diſtinct proofes of this point.

Firſt, expreſſe teſtimonies which doe in plaine tearmes, note vnto vs the Godhead.

Secondly, expreſſe Prophecies and reuelations of things to come, euen many hundred and thouſands of yeares before they came to paſſe. Yea, things that are to come are fore-tolde in the word of God, ſo, and in that very manner, that they ſhall bee in the time, wherein they are to bee fulfilled. Now there is no man able of himſelfe to know or fore-ſee theſe things to come; therefore this knowledge muſt reſt in him alone, who is moſt wiſe, that perfectly vnderſtandeth and beholdeth things that are not, and to whome all future things are preſent, and therefore certen.

Thirdly, the word of God reuealeth many miracles, which do exceed and ſurpaſſe whole nature, yea all naturall cauſes: the doing and working whereof, is not in the power of any meere creature in the world. As for example: the making of the Sunne, againſt his naturall courſe, to ſtand ſtill in the firmament; of the waters, which are naturally flowing, to ſtand as a wall, and the bottome of the ſea to bee as drie land. The maine end whereof is, to ſhew that there is an abſolute and almighty power, which is the Author of nature it ſelfe, and all naturall things, and ordereth both it & them, according to his pleaſure.

Arguments from the light of Glorie.

The third Ground of proofes is fetched from the light of Glory. And this is that light which God affoards vnto his ſeruants after this life ended, in the kingdome of heauen, wherein all imperfection of knowledge being taken away, they ſhal ſee God face to face, and haue a ful and perfect knowledge of the godhead.

To this purpoſe the Apoſtle ſaith, 1. Cor. 13.12. that in the world we know in part, & we ſee as it were in a glaſſe. The compariſon is worth the marking. For there hee compareth our knowledge of God, that we haue in this life, to a dimme-ſighted man, that can ſee either very little, or nothing at all, without his ſpectacles. And ſuch is our ſight and comprehenſion of God, darke and dimme, in that wee cannot beholde him as he is, but only as he hath manifeſted himſelfe vnto vs, in and through the glaſſe of the Word and Sacraments, and by the ſpectacles of his creatures. But the time will come, when the skales of our eies ſhall be waſhed off, and they ſhall be made as cleare as criſtall, when the imperfection and weaknes of our vnderſtanding ſhall be cleane remoued, and then wee ſhall be inabled to ſee God clearely and fully face to face. Thus the firſt Queſtiō is anſwered, that there is a God.

II. Queſtion.

Whether Jeſus the Sonne of Mary, be the Sonne of God, and Redeemer of the world?

By propounding this queſtion (as in the former) I meane not to make a doubt touching the godhead of Chriſt, which is one of the principall Grounds of our Religion: but to take away, or at leaſt, preuent an inward corruption of the heart in them that are weak in knowledge; whereby they may be brought ſometimes to make doubt and queſtion of the Diuinitie of Chriſt, and therefore haue neede to be reſolued in the truth hereof.

Now for the proofe of this point, that Chriſt is God. I will lay downe theſe grounds?

I. The ſumme and ſubſtance of the Bible A is to conclude, that Ieſus the Sonne of Marie, is the Sonne of God and the Redeemer of mankinde; and it may be concluded in this ſyllogiſme.

He that ſhall come of the ſeed of Abraham, and Dauid, & in time ſhall be born of a Virgin, that ſhal preach the glad tidings of the Goſpell, ſatiſfie the Law, offer vp an oblation of himſelf for the ſinnes of them that beleeue: ouercome death by his death & reſurrection; aſcend into heauen, and in fulneſſe of time come againe to iudge both the quicke and the dead, is the true Meſſias and Sauiour of the world.

But Ieſus of Nazareth the Sonne of Mary, is he in whom alone all theſe things ſhal come to paſſe.

Therefore hee onely is the true Meſſias and Sa- B uiour of the world.

The propoſition or firſt part of the argument, is laid downe in the olde Teſtament: The aſſumption or ſecond part, in the New: The concluſion is the queſtion in hand, the ſcope and drift of them both.

II. Ground. In Dan. 9.24. it was prophecied, that after the time of 70. weekes, that is, 490. yeares, the Meſſias ſhould bee exhibited.

By which prophecie it is manifeſt, that the Meſſias is already come into the world. For from that time till now, there are at the leaſt 2000. yeares, as may plainely be ſeene by humane hiſtories, and by the motions & courſe of the heauens. It is alſo plaine from hence, C that hauing beene exhibited and come in the fleſh, hee hath made ſatisfaction by his death to the wrath of God for ſinne. Hence it followes, that hee is the very true Meſſias, and Redeemer of the world, becauſe from that time there was neuer any to whome this title and the forenamed properties, might ſo truly agree, as to this Ieſus the Sonne of Dauid.

III Ground. Ieſus the Sonne of Mary did teach, profeſſe, and diſpute, that he was God, that he and his Father were one, and he took vnto himſelfe the honour of God, Ioh. 7. and 8. An euident argument that he was ſo, as hee profeſſed and preached himſelfe to bee. For neuer any creature chalenged to himſelfe the honour of God falſly; but was diſcouered and confounded.

D Adam for affecting and aſpiring to it, was caſt out of Paradiſe. And Herod for it dyed miſerably, Act. 12. And diuers Popes are recorded in Eccleſiaſticall ſtories, to haue taken this honour vnto themſelues: and there was neuer any ſort of men in the world, that had more fearefull iudgements vpon them, then they. But Chriſt chalenged this to himſelfe, and proſpered: and God did moſt ſeuerely reuenge his death both vpon Herod and Pilate, as alſo vpon the Iewes, and Emperours of Rome, that perſecuted the Church.

IV. Ground. Chriſt while he was on earth before hee aſcended into heauen, promiſed his Diſciples to ſend his ſpirit vnto them, ſo to aſſiſt them, that they ſhould be able to doe greater workes then himſelfe did, Ioh. 14.12. &c. Now when Chriſt was aſcended, the euent

A was ſtrange, and yet fully anſwerable to his promiſe. For the diſciples were but few, twelue in number, & al vnlearned, and yet they preached in the name of Chriſt, and by bare preaching (without humane eloquence, and the gifts of nature) conuerted many nations, yea, the whole world. And though theſelues were but weake men, and preached things abſurd to the corrupt reaſon of man, yet they wonne many ſoules to God, & conuerted the world.

The V. Ground is borrowed from the teſtimony of the Heathen, who haue recorded in their writings, the very ſame things touching Chriſt, which are reuealed in the Scriptures. Ioſephus a Iew, and an enemy to Chriſt, in his 18. booke of antiquities, Chap. 4. ſpeakes the B ſame things of Chriſt that Matthew doth, that he was a moſt worthy man, that hee wrought many miracles, and that hee aroſe from the dead. Others affirme, that hee was crucified vnder Pilate in the time of Tiberius, and that Tiberius would haue put him in the number of his gods. Againe, heathen writers report, that at his death, vnder the raigne of Tiberius, all the oracles of the world ceaſed, and that the great Pan (as they ſay) then died.

CHAP. III.

Of the Scriptures.

C The ſecond maine Queſtion, is touching the truth of Scripture:

Whether the Scriptures be the true word of God?

THe anſwer is, that they are. And the Grounds of this Aſſertion may be reduced to ſixe heads.

Sect. 1.

The firſt is taken from the cauſes, namely, the Author and writers of the Scriptures.

The Authors and pen-men of Scriptures.

Touching the Author, the Scripture referreth it ſelfe vnto God. Therefore hee alone is the true and vndoubted Author thereof, and none but hee. The ſufficiencie of the conſe- D quence, ſtands vpon theſe grounds:

Firſt, if God were not the Author of the Scriptures, there would bee no one booke in the earth ſo fabulous, & ſo full of errors as it, which to ſay is blaſphemy. For it ſpeakes ſuch things, as neuer any could ſpeake, but God.

Secondly, if it were not the booke of God, then all Gods will ſhould bee hidden, and God ſhould neuer yet haue reuealed his will to man.

Thirdly, if it had not beene the word of God, the falſhood thereof would haue beene detected long agone. For there hath beene nothing falſly ſaid of God at any time, which hee himſelfe hath not at ſome time or other, opened and reuealed. Euen as hee did detect and diſcouer the falſhood of the falſe prophet Hanani, Ier. 28. 16. And Gods heauie hand, no doubt, would long ſince haue beene vpon the miniſters & preachers of this word, if they had vniuſtly and wrongfully fathered it vpon him.

Againe, for the writers and penne-men of Scripture: Moſes, the Prophets, and Apoſtles in their writings, doe not ſet forth their owne glorie, nobilitie, or vertues: but all with one conſent, haue acknowledged directly and plainely their owne errours and faults; yea, ſuch faults as may bee diſgracefull to themſelues and their poſteritie, and yet they haue done it. A plaine proofe, that they were not carried by policie, & naturall reaſon, but were holy men, guided by the holy Ghoſt. For if they had beene guided by reaſon, they would neuer haue written that, which would haue tended to their owne diſgrace: but would rather haue commended themſelues, their name, ſtocke, and linage. Againe, humane authors in their diſcourſes, do commonly write of the praiſes and vertues of men, of whome they write: but the pen-men of Scripture, with one conſent, giue all to God; yea, when they ſpeake of commendation due to men, they giue it all to God in men. God is in their writings, the beginning, the end, and all.

The matter of Scripture.

A ſecond head of reaſons, is taken from the matter and Contents of the Scriptures, which are manifold. The principall are theſe:

Firſt, the Scripture doth that which no other bookes can doe. For it ſets out the corruption of mans nature by ſinne, the fountaine of this corruption; and the puniſhment of the ſame, both in this life, and the life to come: it diſcouereth ſinnefull mans particular thoughts, luſts, and affections, which neuer any booke hath done beſide it. No Philopher was euer able to make ſo true record, & ſo plaine declaration of the thoughts, motions, and affections of the heart. The reaſon of man cannot diſcerne them by nature, vnleſſe it receiue a further light by grace, then it hath naturally in it ſelfe. Yea the Scripture ſets down things that no mans heart can imagine, and yet are true by experience. For example: that it is an euill thought to thinke there is no God, man by nature cannot imagine, but yet it is true in experience, and by the light of the word. And therefore Dauid ſaith, Pſal. 14. 1. The foole hath ſaid in his heart, there is no God.

Secondly, the maine Contents of this booke, are ſundrie articles of faith, all which are farre aboue the reach of humane reaſon, and yet they are not againſt it, but at leaſt ſome of them may be prooued by it.

For example; that there is a Redeemer of the world, is an article of faith, aboue reaſon, yet not againſt the ſame. For in naturall vnderſtanding, God is not all iuſtice, and no mercie. But if there were no Redeemer, then ſhould God be al Iuſtice, without mercie. Now becauſe he hath reuealed himſelfe to be as well mercifull, as he is iuſt, reaſon concludes, there is a Redeemer. Againe, that this Redeemer ſhould be God and man, is aboue reaſon, yet not againſt it. For reaſon teacheth, he muſt be God, that he might ſatisfie the infinit iuſtice of God for ſinne; which none but God can doe. Againe, that he muſt be man, becauſe man hauing ſinned, man muſt be puniſhed for the ſinne of man.

Thirdly, in the Scripture there are ſundry predictions made before-hand particularly, which notwithſtanding were not to come to paſſe, till an 100, 200, 300. yeares after, and all theſe predictions in the ſame manner as they haue beene foretold, haue beene fulfilled.

Iacob in his Will foretold, that the ſcepter ſhould not depart from Iudah till Siloh, that is, the Meſſias came. This was verified, euen as it was foretold. For a little before Chriſts birth, the ſcepter was taken from the Iewes, and tranſlated vnto the Romane Empire. And Herod put the whole Colledge of the Iewes, called their Sanedrim, to the ſword, in which Colledge was the heire apparent of the kings blood.

Againe, Balaam, Num. 24. 24, foretold that Kittim, that is, the Grecians and the Romanes ſhould ſubdue Eber, the people of the Eaſt, and that alſo was afterward verified. For the Hebrewes and the Aſſyrians, were afterward ouercome by the Grecians, and Cilicians.

The Apoſtle Paul in his time foretold the deſtruction of the Romane Empire, and the reuealing of Antichriſt, 2. Theſſ. 2. 7, 8, &c. which propheſie was ſhortly after fulfilled. For Antichriſt grew from thoſe times by litle and little, till at length he came to ſit in the Emperours throne. Men indeede may foretell things to come, but things foretold by them are preſent in their cauſes, and ſo they know and foretell them, not otherwiſe: but God foretelleth ſimply, and the Scriptures foretell ſimply, therefore they are the word of God.

Fourthly, the Law, a part of the Scripture, is propounded moſt purely & perfectly without exception or limitation. Whereas in all mens lawes ſome ſinnes are condemned, but ſome be tolerated and permitted: but in Gods law euery ſinne is condemned, and none either forborne or excuſed.

Laſtly, the ſtyle and ſpeech of the Scripture is plaine and ſimple without affectation, and yet full of grace and maieſtie. For in that ſimple ſtyle, it commaundeth the whole man, body and ſoule; it threatneth euerlaſting death, and promiſeth euerlaſting life: and it doth more affect the heart of man, then all the writings in the world whatſoeuer.

Sect. 3.

Effects of Scripture.

The third reaſon to induce vs to receiue the Scriptures, as the word of God, is taken from the Effects: whereof I note onely two.

I. The doctrine of Scripture in the Law, A and ſpecially in the Goſpel, is contrary to the corrupt nature of man. Whereupon Paul ſaith, Rom. 8. 7. The wiſedome of the fleſh is enmitie againſt God. And yet the ſame word, beeing preached by the Miniſter appointed by God, conuerteth nature, and turnes the heart of man vnto it, in ſuch ſort, as in this laſt age it hath wonne a great part of the world, to the embracing thereof. Now in reaſon this is impoſſible, that a thing which is ſo flat againſt mans corrupt nature, ſhould notwithſtanding preuaile with it ſo farre, as to cauſe man to liue and die in the profeſſion & maintenance thereof. We are wont to reiect the writings of men, if they pleaſe not our humors; whereas this word of God, is of force to mooue and B incline our affections, though neuer ſo much cenſured, croſſed, and controlled by it. And this ſhewes that God is the authour thereof, from whome the word of creation came, to which euery thing at the firſt yeelded obedience.

II. The word of God hath this effect, to be able to miniſter comfort and reliefe, in all diſtreſſes of bodie or minde, yea in the greateſt and moſt deſperate troubles, and vexations of the conſcience. And when the helpes of humane learning and Philoſophie (which are of great vſe and force in other caſes) haue done all that they can, to the very vtmoſt, without effect or ſucceſſe: euen then the ſweet promiſes of the Goſpell, will reuiue and raiſe C vp the heart and giue it full contentment and ſatisfaction. Experience ſhewes this to be a confeſſed truth in particular caſes: and it teacheth, whence and from whom this word proceedeth, wherein theſe promiſes are contained, namely, from God. For when he ſets the conſcience vpon the racke, the Word that releeueth and refreſheth the ſame, muſt needes proceede, and come from him alone.

Sect. 4.

Properties of Scripture.

The fourth reaſon is taken from the properties of Scripture. I will name onely two.

The firſt is antiquitie, which moſt plainely D appeares in the hiſtory, though the doctrine it ſelfe be as ancient. The Scripture containes a continued hiſtorie, from age to age, for the ſpace of 4000. years before Chriſt, euen from the beginning. Humane hiſtories, that are of any certentie or continuance, beginne onely about the time of Ezra, and Nehemiah. As for thoſe which were written before, they are onely fragments, and of no certentie.

The ſecond property, is Conſent with it ſelfe, in all parts, both for the matter, ſcope, and end. The writings of men doe diſſent from themſelues, by reaſon of ignorance, and forgetfulneſſe in the authours. But the word of God agrees with it ſelfe moſt exactly, and the places that ſeeme to diſagree, may eaſily be reconciled; which ſhewes that holy men, by whome it was penned, were not guided therein by their owne priuate iudgement, but were directed by the wiſedome of the ſpirit of God.

Contraries

The fiſt reaſon is drawne from the Contraries. The Diuell and wicked men, are in iudgement and diſpoſition, as contrarie to Scripture, as light to darkeneſſe. I prooue it thus, Let a man reade any booke of Philoſophie, and labour to be reſolued of any one point therein, he ſhall neuer be tempted to infidelitie. But if the ſame man, reade the bookes of Scripture, & labour to vnderſtand them; he ſhal haue within himſelfe, many motions and temptations, not to beleeue and obey it. Now what ſhould be the cauſe thereof, but that theſe bookes are the word of God, which the Diuell laboureth to oppugne with might and maine?

Againe, conſider the ſame in the practiſe of wicked men. They wil not brooke the rebuke of their ſinnes, namely, their Idolatrie, blaſphemie, and other notorious crimes by Scripture; but will ſeeke the blood and life of him, that ſhall ſharpely taxe and reprooue them. And hence it was, that wicked Kings ſo perſecuted the Lords Prophets. Yea further, let it be marked, that theſe wicked men that are tainted with theſe horrible crimes, and cannot abide the word, nor teachers thereof to the death, haue commonly fearefull ends. Now the oppoſition of Satan and wicked men to the word, ſhewes the Scriptures to be a moſt holy word, and indeed the very word of God.

Sect. 6.

Teſtimonies.

The ſixt reaſon is taken from ſundry teſtimonies.

Firſt, of holy Martyrs, in the Old and New Teſtament, who haue giuen their liues for the maintenance of this word, and ſealed the ſame with their owne hearts blood; yea ſuffered the moſt horrible and exquiſite torments, that the wit of man could deuiſe, and that moſt patiently and willingly, not being daunted or diſmayed. The ſtories of Martyrs in all ages, confirme this truth, eſpecially of thoſe that ſuffered before, in, and after the times of tenne bloody perſecutions. And vnleſſe they had beene ſupported by a diuine power, in ſo good a cauſe, they could neuer, ſo many of them, haue ſuffered in ſuch manner.

The ſecond is, the teſtimonie and conſent of Heathen men, who haue recorded the very ſame things, at leaſt many of the principall that are ſet downe in the Bible. If this were not ſo, man ſhould haue ſome colourable excuſe of his vnbeleefe. And theſe things which they record, were not all taken out of the Scripture, but were regiſtred to memorie by Hiſtoriographers, that liued in the times, whē they were done. Such are the ſtories of the Creation, and Flood, of the tower of Babel, of the Arke, of Abraham and his poſſeſſions, of Circumciſion, of the miracles of Moſes, of the birth of Chriſt, and the ſlaughter of the young children, of the miracles of Chriſt, of the death of Herod, Agrippa, and ſuch like. And theſe we take for true in humane ſtories; much more then ought we to doe it in the word of God.

The third teſtimonie is, of Miracles. The doctrine of Scripture was confirmed by miracles, wrought by the teachers thereof, the Prophets and Apoſtles, aboue all power and ſtrength of nature, and ſuch as the Diuell can not counterfeit; as the ſtaying of the ſunne, raiſing of the dead, &c.

The fourth is the teſtimonie of the Holy Ghoſt, which is the argument of all arguments, to ſettle and reſolue the Conſcience, and to ſeale vp the certentie of the word of God.

If any ſhall aske, how this teſtimonie of the Holy Ghoſt may be obtained, and being obtained, how we may diſcerne it to be the teſtimonie of the Holy Ghoſt, and not of man: I anſwer, by doing two things.

Firſt, by reſigning our ſelues to become truly obedient to the doctrine taught. Ioh. 7. 17. If any man will doe my Fathers will, (ſaith Chriſt) he ſhall know of the doctrine whether it be of God. Secondly, by praying vnto God for his Spirit, to certifie our conſciences, that the doctrine reueiled, is the doctrine of God. Aske (ſaith our Sauiour Chriſt) and it ſhall be giuen you: ſeeke, and ye ſhall finde: knocke, and it ſhall be opened vnto you. For he that asketh, receiueth, Mat. 7.7,8 Againe, Your heauenly father will giue the Holy Ghoſt, to them that deſire him, Luk. 11.13, And, If any man lacke wiſedome, let him aske it of God, who giueth to all men liberally, and reprocheth no man, and it ſhall be giuen him, Iam. 1.7.

Sect. 7.

Obiections againſt the Scriptures.

Now hauing ſet downe the proofes of this point, before I come to the next Queſtion, ſome ſpecial Obiections againſt this doctrine are to be anſwered, and reſolued. For there haue not beene wanting in all ages, both Atheiſts, and others: who haue profeſſedly excepted againſt it, and of ſet purpoſe haue vndertaken to call the written word of God into Queſtion. Such were Celſus, Lucian, Iulian, Porphyrie, Apelles, and others. From whome ſome of latter times hauing receiued the poiſon of Atheiſme, and prophaneneſſe, haue not ceaſed as much as in them lieth, to oppugne ſundry parts and portions of holy Scripture. Their principall reaſons and exceptions, I will propound, and anſwer one by one.

Obiect. 1.

And firſt, they except againſt that which is written, Gen. 1.16. where it is ſaid, God made the ſunne the fourth day. Now, ſay they, the ſunne is the cauſe of the day; and therefore there could not be three daies, before the ſunne was created, conſidering that the effect is not before the cauſe, but the cauſe before the effect.

I anſwer, Firſt, we muſt put a difference betweene cauſe and cauſe. For of cauſes, ſome be the higheſt, ſome ſubordinate vnto them. The higheſt and firſt cauſe of all creatures, is God himſelfe, from whome all things at the firſt immediately flowed, without any relation to their cauſes in nature. And thus were the firſt, ſecond, and third daies created and appointed immediately from God, and diſtinguiſhed from the night, by an intercourſe of light, ordained by him for that purpoſe.

But the ſubordinate and inferiour cauſe of the day, in order of nature, was the ſunne, and that by the ſame appointment of God: and this cauſe was not ſet in nature, as the cauſe of the day, before the fourth day of creation; for then it pleaſed him to make it his inſtrument, to diſtinguiſh the day from the night; as alſo for other ends and vſes. And therefore it is no maruell, though the day was created before the ſunne, the inſtrumentall cauſe thereof: conſidering that it was created before the ſunne was ſet in the heauen, by the Creatour himſelfe.

Secondly, wee muſt diſtinguiſh of times: which are either of creation, or gouernment: and there is one regard to bee had of things while they were in making; and another after they were created. Now it is true, the ſunne is the cauſe of the day and the night, in the time of gouernment of the world, but it was not ſo in the time of the firſt making of all things. For in the three firſt daies of the world, there was a day and night without the ſun, by a viciſſitude of light & darknes, which the Lord made, and nature could neuer haue found out, had not the word reuealed it.

But ſince the creation, in the time of gouernment, the ſunne is but an inſtrument appointed by God to carrie light; and hee that made the light, can now in the gouernment of the world, if it pleaſed him, put downe the ſunne from this office, and by ſome other meanes diſtinguiſh the day from the night: therefore no maruell though he did ſo in the beginning.

The ſecond Obiection, is touching the light of the Moone. Moſes ſaith, Gen. 1. 16. it is one of the great lights which God made. Now, ſay they, in all reaſon, according to humane learning, it is one of the leaſt of the planets, and leſſe then many ſtarres.

Anſ. It is true which the holy Ghoſt ſaith by Moſes, and yet the Moone is leſſe then the Sunne, yea, then many of the ſtarres. For one and the ſame ſtarre, in a diuers and different reſpect, may be tearmed greater and leſſer. And in that place the Scripture ſpeakes of the Moone, not in regard of other ſtarres greater then it; but in reſpect of our ſenſe, becauſe it appeareth greater in quantitie, and really communicateth more light: yea, it is of more operation and vſe to the earth, then any of the ſtars in the heauen, ſauing the ſunne.

Obiect. 3.

The third Obiection. Moſes ſaith, Man and Beaſt were made of the earth, and Fiſhes of the waters. But all humane learning auoucheth, that the matter of euery creature, conſiſteth of all the foure Elements, earth, water, fire, and aire.

Anſ. Moſes ſpeaketh onely of two, which were the principall, and in them includes the other, becauſe they are impure, and mixt with the other ſince the fall. Againe, ſome learned men auouch that all creatures are made of earth and water onely, as being the two maine materiall principles of them all; & not of aire, nor of fire. And this accords with Moſes, and is no doubt, a truth, that he ſpeakes onely of the principall matter of theſe creatures: and yet the fire and aire, are, and may be called elements, or beginnings, becauſe they ſerue to forme, preſerue, and cheriſh the creatures.

The fourth Obiection. Gen. 3. it is ſaid, that Eue before her fall, was deceiued by the Serpent. Now this, ſaith the Atheiſt, is abſurd. For euen in the eſtate of corruption, ſince the fall, there is no woman ſo ſimple, that will either admit ſpeech, or ſuffer her ſelfe to bee deceiued by a Serpent; much leſſe would Eue, in the eſtate of her innocencie.

Anſw. Though Adam & Eue in their innocencie, had an excellent knowledge, yet they had not all knowledge. For then they ſhould haue bin as God himſelfe. But in that eſtate ignorance befell Eue in three things. For firſt, though Adam himſelfe was a Prophet in the time of his innocencie, yet both he and ſhee were ignorant of the iſſue of future things, which are contingent. Secondly, they knew not the ſecrets of each others heart. For to know the euent of things contingent certainly, and the ſecrets of the heart, belongs to God onely. Thirdl[illegible]ough Eue knewe the kindes of creatures, y[illegible] ſhee knew not all particulars, and all things that were incident to euery kind of creature, but was to attaine vnto that knowledge, by experience & obſeruatiō.

Neither may this ſeeme ſtrange: for Chriſt as he was man, had as much, yea more knowledge then our firſt parents had in their innocencie, and yet he knew not all particulars, in all ſingular creatures. For, ſeeing a fig-tree by the way as he went to Ieruſalem, he thought it had borne fruit, and yet comming towards it, he found none thereon. And in like maner, Eue might knowe the Serpentine kinde, and yet be ignorant, whether a Serpent could ſpeake. Beſides that, the naming of the creatures, which argues knowledge of them, was not giuen to Eue, but to Adam. And therefore it was not ſo ſtrange, that Eue ſhould bee deceiued by a ſerpent, conſidering that to know that a ſerpent could ſpeak, or not ſpeak, came by experience, which ſhee then had not.

It will be ſaid, that all ignorance is ſinne: but Eue had no ſin: and therefore ſhee could not be ignorant. Anſ. Ignorance is twofold; ſome ignorance (a) ariſeth of an euill diſpoſition, when as we are ignorant of thoſe things which we are bound to know, and this is ſinne properly. But there is another ignorance, (b) which is no ſinne, when as we are ignorant a Ignorantia prauæ diſpoſitionis.

b Ignorantia meræ priuationis, vel negationis puræ, of thoſe things which we are not bound to know. And this was in Chriſt: for he was ignorant of the fig-trees bearing fruit: & he knew not the day of iudgment, as he was man. And this alſo was in Eue, not the other.

Obiect.5.

The fift obiection, is about the Arke, Gen. 6.15. God commaunded Noah to make an Arke of 300. cubits long, of 50. cubits broad, and of 30. cubits high. This Arke, ſaith the Atheiſt, being ſo ſmal a veſſell, could not poſſibly containe two of euery ſort of creatures, with their foode, for the ſpace of a yeare.

The firſt author of this cauill, was Apelles the hereticke, that cauilled with Chriſtians about the Arke. And the anſwer is as ancient as the heriſie: namely, firſt that the cubite of the arke muſt be vnderſtood of the Egyptian cubite, which is, with ſome, ſixe foote, & with others, nine foote, by which meaſure the arke would be in length halfe a mile at the leaſt: And by this meanes, any man may ſee a poſſibilitie in reaſon, that the Arke might containe, and preſerue all creatures, with their fodder, and roome to ſpare.

The ſecond anſwer is, that as the Iewes had a ſhekle of the ſanctuarie; which was greater then the ordinarie ſhekle, ſo they had beſide the ordinary cubite, a ſacred cubit, the cubit of the ſanctuarie, whereof mention is made in the prophecie of Ezechiel, Chap. 40 and that was bigger by the halfe, then the ordinarie cubite. And by this meaſure, ſome ſay, the ark was made. But both theſe anſwers are only coniecturall, without good ground in the Scripture.

To them therefor[illegible] adde a third. In the daies of Noah, the ſtature of man was farre bigger then it is at this day, And looke as the ſtature of man was greate and large, ſo was the cubit proportionall thereto; containing the length of the arme, from the elbow to the longeſt fingers ende. And this beeing conſidered, that the Arke was built by that meaſure, & not by the ordinarie cubit, as it is now; it will appeare', that the Atheiſt hath greatly deceiued himſelfe, & abuſed that part of Gods word that declares the ſtory of the Arke.

Againe, the length of this veſſell, beeing 300. cubits, it is plaine that it was fiue times the length of Salomons Temple, which contained only 60. cubits. The breadth being 58. it was twiſe and a halfe the breadth of that, which was but 20. broad.

Beſides that, it is to be remembred, that in the Arke were three lofts or ſtories, one aboue an other: whereof each contained 10. cubits in height, and a chamber or floore of ſquare meaſure, 15000. cubits.

As for the creatures that were put into it: the Fowles of the ayre, though they were of many ſorts, yet the biggeſt ſort of them, being the Eagle and his kind, they could not take vp any very large place for their reſidence. The Water creatures, as ſom e fowles, the fiſhes, &c. kept the waters, and were not lodged in the Arke. And the beaſts of the earth, (ſuch beeing excluded, as were bred either by accidentall generation, as Mules; or by putrefaction as ſerpents, and other creeping things, which might afterward be reſtored in other creatures that were preſerued,) though for multitude and greatneſſe they excelled the reſt, yet (as ſome write) there are of them in all not aboue an 150. diſtinct kinds. And though there were as many more not knowne, yet in probabilitie, they could not be either many or great. And of thoſe that are great, there are thought not to be aboue 40. kindes.

Now though it be granted, that there were in the Arke 300. diſtinct kinds of beaſts, yet this number compared with the roome, it will eaſily appeare, that there might be allotted to euery kinde, in one onely ſtorie 50. ſquare cubits, which in all likelihood might well ſuffiſe them all one with another, ſpecially ſeeing all were not of an equall greatneſſe: and therfore ſome might haue that or more ſpace, & ſome leſſe. All theſe things duly conſidered, the veſſell beeing of ſuch capacitie, might comprehend all thoſe beaſts, and many more together with their prouiſion for a longer time then a yeare. Other doubts touching this hiſtorie, of leſſe moment, I omit, and paſſe to the next.

Obiect, 6.

The ſixt Allegation, is out of Gen. 21.9. where Iſmael is ſaid to mocke Iſaak when he was wained, at which time Iſmael was fifteene yeares of age at the leaſt. For he was borne when Abraham was 86. yeares old, Gen. 19. and Iſaak was borne, when Abraham was about an hundred, Gen. 21. 5. both which put together make 14. yeares, whereto one yeare beeing added, before Iſaak was wained, makes vp the age of Iſmael, as before. And yet afterward in that chapter, v. 14. Hagar is ſaid, to carrie the child in her armes, and to caſt him vnder a tree, when he and his mother were caſt out of Abrahams houſe; which argues him to haue beene but a little childe: whereas before he was ſaid to be 15. yeares old.

Anſ. A fooliſh cauill, which blind Atheiſts doe draw from the error of ſome tranſlation. For the text is plaine, that Iſhmael with his mother Hagar, by reaſon of extreame heate and drought, was almoſt dead, wandering in the wilderneſſe of Beerſheba: and beeing in this extremitie, ſhee carried him not, but, v. 18. ledde him in her hand, and ſet him downe vnder a tree, and there left him to die. For in thoſe countries, men for want of water, were at deaths doore: as we may ſee in the example of Siſera, Iudg. chap. 4. 19. and Sampſon, chap. 15. 18.

Obiect. 7.

The ſeauenth Allegation, Gen. 43. 8. Iudah Ioſephs brother cals his brother Beniamin a lad, or a boy, Send the boy with me, &c. and yet this lad (ſaith the Atheiſt) the yeare following, when he went downe into Egypt, with Iacob his father, is ſaid to haue tenne children, Gen. 46. 21. How can theſe two ſtand together?

Anſ. This cauill ariſeth from the groſſe ignorance of the Atheiſt, in the originall text. For Beniamin is called ieled, which word commonly ſignifies a child, but ſometimes alſo a young man. Thus Iſmael that was 15. yeares old, is called ieled, a lad, Gen. 20. 15. And ſo Gen. 4. 23. Lamech ſaith, I will ſlay a man in my wound, and [ieled] or a young man in my hurt; that is, if a man ſhould wound me, and a young man hurt me, I would ſlay him. Now it is not like, that a child could hurt Lamech. Neither muſt this ſeeme ſtrange: for the moſt valiant men that Dauid and Iſhboſheth had, are called hannegnarim, the boies of Abner and Ioab, 2. Sam. 2. 14. And the like phraſe is vſed in other languages. For the Grecians doe call young men by the name of [παῖδες,] and the Latines by the name of [pueri] boyes, or children.

Obiect. 8.

The eight Allegation. Exod. 7. it is ſaid, v. 19. that all the waters in Egypt were turned into blood, by Moſes and Aaron: and yet, v. 22. it is ſaid, that the Magitians of Egypt turned water into blood alſo: which ſeemes to imply an abſurditie, conſidering that all the waters were turned into blood before.

Anſw. Some anſwer thus: that the water which the Magitians turned, was newly digged out of new pits, and therefore they vnderſtand the former, of all the waters that were ſeene, and that they onely were turned into blood. Others anſwer more fitly, that the waters which the Magitians changed, were fetched out of Goſhen, from amongſt the Iſraelites, where the waters remained pure, & were not turned, as the other were. Either of theſe anſwers may ſatisfie, but ſpecially the latter.

Obiect. 9.

The ninth Allegation. Exod. 9. 6. Moſes ſaith, that all the beaſts in Egypt died of the murren, and yet, v. 25. in the ſeuenth plague, it is ſaid, the beaſts were killed with thunder, and haile, and lightening: both which cannot be true.

Anſ. Firſt we muſt put a difference between a common plague or iudgment, and an vniuerſall. A common plague is, when no ſort or kinde eſcapeth, but all ſorts are ſmitten: and ſuch was the murren. For no mans cattel were free, no kinde of cattell were ſaued. But the vniuerſall is when no particular of any kinde is exempted, but all deſtroied. Such was not this plague, but ſome eſcaped, and were reſerued for other iudgments that followed. The ground of this diſtinction, is this. The word [all] in Scripture is often taken indefinitely for many. Thus the Prophet Eſay ſpeakes, c. 66. 23. From moneth to moneth, and from Sabath to Sabath, ſhall all fleſh come to worſhip before me: that is, many or great multitudes. And ſo in the New Teſtament, Math. 4. 23. Chriſt healed all diſeaſes, that is, many, and of all kinds ſome. And in like manner the text before alleadged, muſt not be taken generally, to include all without exception, but indefinitely for many; or the moſt part of the cattell that were in the land of Egypt.

Obiect. 10.

The tenth Allegation. Exod. 10. 22. wee reade that one of the plagues was a palpable darkenes, and ſo great, that for three daies together, no man either ſaw an other, or roſe vp from the place where he ſate. And yet, v. 23. Moſes is ſent for: and called to come before Pharaoh. How ſhould this be, ſeeing no man could ſtirre from his place, nor haue any light to goe before him? for there was none to be had, the darkeneſſe was ſo palpable, and the aire was ſo thicke.

Anſ. I take it the word [Then] v. 24. is to be meant thus; that Pharaoh ſent for Moſes after the darkeneſſe was ended, not by candle or other light in the time of darkeneſſe. And this anſwer may very well ſtand without further exception.

Obeict. 11.

The eleuenth Allegation. Iudg. 16. 29. the Atheiſts make a mocke at the hiſtory of Sampſon, as fabulous, where it is ſaid, that all the Philiſtims came together in one houſe, to make ſport with him, and on the roofe ſate about 3000. perſons to behold him while he plaied: and yet there were but two pillars whereupon the whole houſe ſtood, and thoſe alſo ſtanding in the midſt ſo neere together that a man might reach them both with his armes. This, ſay they, is moſt abſurd, and impoſſible.

Anſ. Although the full reſolution of this cauill, belongs to them that haue skill in Architecture; yet thus much may be ſaid in way of anſwer: That the houſe might be capable of ſo many perſons, & they alſo that ſtood about might wel ſee and behold Sampſon. For firſt, the whole houſe was not ſuſtained by two pillars onely, but by many more, whereof two were the principall. For in likelihood the middle part whereon the building was knit together, from the bottome to the toppe, being the weightieſt of all, was ſupported by two maſter-pillars. The other which was more outward, and leſſe weightie, might be vpholden by leſſer proppes, which Artificers in that kinde call by the name of falſe-pillars. Hence it appeareth, that the two maine ones ſtanding ſo nigh together, being ſhaken, the whole houſe together with them muſt needs fall. Neither will this ſeeme ſtrange, that two pillars ſhould beare vp a building of ſuch capacitie, if we doe but conſider what is recorded of Curio the Romane, who deuiſed the frame of a great Amphitheater, two parts whereof were ſupported onely by two hinges; and yet was ſo large, that it cōtained the whole people of Rome. Secondly, old buildings in thoſe countries were made for the moſt part, with open roofe. Againe, they were full of windowes on euery part like vnto great gates: and that they might be the more fit for ſight from aboue, they were reared vp in ſome ſort after the manner of the Egyptian Pyramides, wider below, and narrower aboue towards the top. And by this meanes it is probable, not onely that they might containe a great company, but that all thoſe which ſtood about the ſides, and vpon the roofe, might very well behold what Sampſon did below; ſpecially conſidering that he ſtood in the middeſt of the Theater, betweene the two middle pillars.

Obiect,12.

The twelfth Allegation, 1.Sam.16.19.&c. it is ſaid that Dauid played before Saul, and that Saul knew him. But chap. 17.55. when he was to fight with Goliah, Saul knew him not. Here is a plaine contradiction in the Atheiſts iudgement.

Anſw. This ſort of men doe ſtill bewray their groſſe ignorance, both in the matter and in the order of Scripture. For the word of God doth not alway ſet downe things, as they follow in order of time iuſt one after an other: but ſometime it doth anticipate, putting ſuch things in former hiſtories, as are alreadie done and accompliſhed, which in regard of their euent ſhould be related afterward. Sometime againe it vſeth by recapitulation to declare things as following in order of time, which doe properly belong to a former narration. An example of the latter (to omit many other that might be brought) is the text alledged. For that part of the 16. chap. from the 9. verſe to the end, ſhould by order of hiſtorie follow the 17. as will eaſily appeare by comparing the place. And the like diſplacing of things ſaid and done, is elſe-where to be found in the Scriptures. Which being conſidered, the Atheiſts ſuppoſed Contradiction, falls to the ground. For Dauid was to fight with Goliah before he played before Saul, and though he was not then knowne, yet Saul after that time tooke better knowledge of him.

Obiect,13.

The thirteenth Allegation is out of 2. Cron.21 2, where the Papiſt playes the right Atheiſt, in going about to improoue the originall copies. There (ſaith he) Iehoſaphat is called king of Iſrael, when as indeede he was king of Iudah, and ſo is he called in the former booke of Chronicles. In like manner Ahaz is tearmed king of Iſrael, 2.Chron.28. 19. whereas the truth is, he was king of Iudah.

D

Anſ. After the death of Salomon the kingdome was deuided, and the tenne tribes were called Iſrael, and the other two Iudah and Beniamin did beare the name of Iudah. Now after the diuiſion, for ſome time the name of Iſrael common to both ſides, was giuen to either, and both were named after it. And in this reſpect Iehoſhaphat, and Ahaz may be tearmed kings of Iſrael. Againe, the name of Iſrael ſundrie times in Scripture, and namely in the Prophets, is taken onely for the two Tribes, which bare the name of Iudah after the defection. And thus alſo might Ahaz haue that name giuen vnto him, though he were king of Iudah. Furthermore, the word Iſrael, is ſometimes put for a true worſhipper of God, that is, for him that is a Iew not without, but within, not in the letter, but in the ſpirit, Rom.2.29. Thus our Sauiour ſaith of Nathaniel, Ioh.1.48. Behold a true Iſraelite in whome is no guile; that is, a man of an vpright heart, that ſerueth God in ſpirit and in truth. And in this ſenſe Iehoſhaphat might be termed king of Iſrael, becauſe he was a king and patron of all true worſhippers of God. For euen then the Iſraelites ſorted themſelues together, and the godly among them came to liue vnder him in Iudah, though the diſtinction of the kingdomes did ſtil remaine.

Obiect.14.

The fourteenth Allegation is out of Act. 7.16. where the Papiſts and Atheiſts alleadge the Scripture to be contrarie to it ſelfe, in that there it ſaith, Abraham bought a field of Emor, when as, Gen.33.19. the ſame field was bought by Iacob.

Anſw. 1, Some ſay that there is a fault, becauſe Abrahams name is put for Iacob. Yet not a fault of the Bible, but of them that wrot out the Bible. Neither doth this diminiſh the authoritie of Scripture, though the pen-men did erre and ſlippe in writing, ſo long as we may find out the truth by Scripture.

2. Anſw. That this field was bought twice: firſt by Abraham, and then afterward recouered by Iacob, that he might maintaine his fathers poſſeſſion.

3. Anſ. That Abrahams name is here put for his poſteritie, as Iſraels name is otherwhere giuen to his children, yea not only to his children, but alſo to his fathers, Iſaac, and Abraham. For Exod.12.40. it is ſaid, The abode of the children of Iſrael while they dwelt in Egypt, was 430. yeares, which cannot be true, vnleſſe the abode of Abraham and Iſaac be therein included. Now if the name of the ſucceſſour may be giuen to his aunceſtors, much more may the name of the aunceſtors be giuen to the poſteritie.

CHAP. IIII.

Of Religion.

THe third Queſtion concerning man, as he ſtands in relation to God, is touching Religion, where it is demanded:

VVhat is that Religion, that is due vnto the true God?

Anſ. The name Religion, is not alwaies taken in one and the ſame ſenſe. For ſometime it is vſed, to ſignifie the whole bodie of doctrine, reuealed in the written word, that teacheth and preſcribeth, whatſoeuer is to be beleeued or practiſed, as neceſſary to ſaluation. Otherwhiles it is put for the inward vertue of the minde, where the ſame doctrine is beleeued, and the duties therin required, practiſed, and performed to the Maieſtie of God. And beeing thus taken, it is called by the name of Pietie or Godlineſſe, in the Scripture. And in this ſecond ſenſe I take it in this place.

Now Religion or Pietie hath two diſtinct parts. The firſt is Knowledge of God, the ſecond, the Worſhip of God. Theſe two are notably deſcribed by Dauid, in his laſt will and teſtament, wherein hee commends vnto Salomon his ſonne before all other things, the care and loue of Religion and Pietie; the ſumme whereof he reduceth to theſe heads; the knowledge of God, and worſhippe of God. 1. Chron. 28. 9. And thou, Salomon my ſonne, KNOW thou the God of thy father, and SERVE him with a perfect heart, and with a willing minde.

According to this difference of heads, are the Queſtions concerning Religion to bee diſtinguiſhed, and theſe are principally two. Firſt, how God is to be knowne, and then how he is to be worſhipped.

I. Queſtion.

How God is to bee conceiued in our mindes, when we performe any ſeruice or worſhip vnto him?

For anſwer hereunto, this Ground is firſt to be laid: That we muſt not, neither can poſſibly know or conceiue God as hee is in himſelfe. For God in himſelfe is infinit, and therfore incomprehenſible in regard of vs. But we are to conceiue him ſo, as hee hath and doth reueale himſelfe to vs in his creatures, principally in his word. The truth hereof may appeare in this one example, (to alleadge no more) when Moſes deſired to ſee the glorie & Maieſtie of God, for a further confirmation and aſſurance of his calling, anſwer was made him by God, that hee could not ſee his face, but he ſhould ſee his backe parts, as he paſſed by him. The meaning of this anſwer is, that God would manifeſt his glory vnto him by his effects, by which, as by a glympſe or imperfect repreſentation, he might diſcern ſome part of his Maieſty, ſo farre forth as he was able in the infirmitie of fleſh and blood, to beholde the ſame. But the perfect and full ſight thereof, no creature was euer able to attaine vnto, it beeing reſerued for the life to come; when (and not before) they ſhall ſee him as he is in himſelfe face to face.

Exo.33.23.

This Ground being laid, the full anſwer to the queſtion I propound in foure rules.

I. Rule. When we are to pray, or to worſhip God, wee muſt not conceiue him in the forme of any earthly, or heauenly, bodily, or ſpirituall creature whatſoeuer: for thus not to conceiue him, is a degree of conceiuing him aright.

II. Rule. God muſt bee conceiued of vs, not by his nature, but by his attributes, and workes. By his attributes, as that he is infinite in mercy, iuſtice, goodnes, power, &c. By his workes, of creation, and gouernement of the world, of redemption, &c. Thus the Lord reuealed himſelfe to Moſes, Exod. 6. 14. I AM hath ſent me vnto you: that is, one which hath his beeing in himſelfe, and of himſelfe, that giues beeing to all creatures by creation, and continues the ſame by his prouidence: one that giues a beeing and accompliſhment, to all his mercifull promiſes. When the Lord appeared to Moſes, hee ſhewed not his face vnto him, but paſſed by him with a voice, The Lord, the Lord, ſtrong, mercifull, and gracious, long ſuffering, and plenteous in goodneſſe and truth, Exod. 34. 6. In which place, the Lord proclaimes his name by his attributes. So in the Prophecie of Ieremie, Ier. 9. 24. I am hee that ſheweth mercie, iudgement, and iuſtice in the land. The ſame Daniel confeſſeth in his praier, when he ſaith; Dan. 9. 4. O Lord God, which art great and fearefull, keeping couenant and mercie toward them that loue thee, and keep thy commandements. And laſtly, the author to the Hebrewes, Heb. 11. 6. He that comes to God, muſt beleeue that God is, and that he is a rewarder of them that ſeeke him.

III. Rule. God muſt not be conceiued abſolutely, that is, out of the Trinitie: but as hee ſubſiſteth in the perſon of the Father, Sonne, and the holy Ghoſt, ſo hee muſt be knowne & conceiued of vs. The auncient rule of the Church is, that the Vnitie muſt bee worſhipped in Trinitie, and the Trinitie in Vnitie.

By this doe the Proteſtant Churches, differ from all other aſſemblies of worſhippers. The Turke conceiues and worſhips a God, creator of heauen and earth, but an abſtracted god, which is neither Father, Sonne, nor Holy Ghoſt. The Iew worſhippeth God, but out of Chriſt, and therefore a feigned and idol god. The Papiſt in word acknowledgeth and ſo worſhippeth God, but indeede makes God an idol, becauſe hee worſhips him not in a true, but in a feigned Chriſt, that ſits at the right hand of the Father in heauen, and is alſo in the hands of euery Maſſe-prieſt, after the words of conſecration. But the Proteſtant knowes God as hee will be knowne, and conſequently worſhips him as hee will bee worſhipped, in Father, Sonne, and Holy Ghoſt.

IV. Rule. When we direct our praiers, or any worſhip to any one perſon, wee muſt include the reſt in the ſame worſhip; yea further, we muſt retaine in minde the diſtinction and order of all the three perſons, without ſeuering or ſundring them: for ſo they are named, and propounded in the Scriptures. The reaſon is, becauſe as they are not ſeuered, but conioyned in nature, ſo they neither are, nor muſt be ſeuered, but conioyned in worſhip. For example: the man that praies to God the Father for the forgiueneſſe of his ſinnes, muſt aske it of him for the merit of the

Mat. 28. 19.

Son: and by the aſſurance of the holy Ghoſt. Againe, hee that praies for remiſſion of his ſinnes to God the Sonne, muſt pray that hee would procure the Father to graunt his pardon, and withall aſſure it by his Spirit. He alſo that praies for the ſame to God the Holy Ghoſt, muſt pray that hee would aſſure vnto him the remiſſion of his ſinnes, from the Father, by, and for the merit of the Sonne.

CHAP. V.

Of the ſecond part of Religion touching the worſhip of God, and firſt of the Inward worſhip.

II. Queſtion.

How God is to be worſhipped and ſerued?

FOr the ful anſwer hereof, we muſt remember that the worſhip of God is two-folde; Inward, or Outward. Inward is the worſhip of the minde, the heart, the conſcience, will, and affections: for man by all theſe ioyntly and ſeuerally performeth worſhip and ſeruice to his Creator. The Outward is that worſhip whereby the Inward is teſtified outwardly in the ſpeech and actions. The former of theſe two, is the ſpirituall worſhip of the inward man, and the very ground and foundation of all true worſhip of God: for God is a Spirit, and therefore muſt bee worſhipped in Ioh.4.24. ſpirit, that is, in the minde, conſcience, will, and affections. Indeed all the worſhip of God is ſpirituall, euen that which we call outward; yet not of it ſelfe, but by vertue of the inward, from which it proceedeth.

Sect. 1.

Adoration. The heads of Inward worſhip are two; Adoration of God, and cleauing to God. For as they are two different actions of the heart, ſo they may fitly be tearmed two diſtinct parts of Gods worſhip. This diſtinction is in ſome part propounded by Moſes, where hee exhorteth the Iſraelites, to feare Iehouah their God, to adore him, to cleaue vnto him, and to ſweare by his Name, Deut.10.20.

Adoration, is that part of Gods worſhip, whereby a man, vpon a vile and baſe eſtimation of himſelfe, as beeing but duſt and aſhes, ſubmits and ſubiects his ſoule to the glorie and Maieſtie of God.

This hath two principall grounds in the heart, which if they be wanting, there can be no true worſhip of God. The firſt is, Abnegation or deniall of our ſelues, when wee eſteeme our ſelues to be meerely nothing. The ſecond is, Exaltation, or Aduancement of Gods Maieſtie, aboue all the things in the world. Examples of theſe we haue many in the Scriptures, as of Abraham: who called God his Lord, and himſelf duſt and aſhes, Gen. 18.27: Of the Angels, Eſa.6.2. whom in a viſion the Prophet ſawe ſtanding before God, with one wing couering their feete, which ſignified the abaſing of themſelues; and with another couering their faces, which betokened their adoration of Gods Maieſtie: Of Daniel, *Dan.*9.7. when he confeſſeth, To thee, O Lord, belongeth righteouſnes it ſelfe, but to vs ſhame and confuſion of face: Laſtly, of the woman of Canaan, who cals Chriſt Lord, & her ſelfe, a dogge. Mat.15.27.

Now in Adoration, there are foure Vertues; Feare, Obedience, Patience, Thankfulneſſe.

Feare is a great part of the worſhip of God, which I prooue by two places laid together. Eſa.29.13. Matth.15.8,9. wherein Feare and Worſhippe, are taken for one and the ſame thing: for that which Eſay cals Feare, Matthew cals Worſhip. Now in this Feare there bee two things that ſerue to diſtinguiſh it from all other feares.

Firſt, it is abſolute: for by it God is reuerenced abſolutely. Rom.13.7. S. Paul exhorteth to yeeld tribute, feare, and honour to the Magiſtrate, not for himſelfe, but for God, whoſe miniſter hee is. And our Sauiour ſaith, Matth. 10.28. Feare ye not them which kill the body, and are not able to kill the ſoule, but rather feare him which is able to deſtroy both ſoule and body in hell. As if he ſhould ſay, I allow and commaund you to feare men, onely for God, who hath ſet them ouer you, but feare God for himſelfe.

Secondly, it makes a man, firſt of all, to feare the offence of God, and then the puniſhment and iudgement. For it is not a feare of the offence alone, but of the offence & puniſhment together, and of the offence in the firſt place. If I be a Lord, where is my feare? Mal.1.6. And where it is ſaid in Matthew, Mat.10.28. But rather feare him that is able to caſt body and ſoule into hellfire; there is commanded a feare of God, in regard of his anger. We feare the ſword of man, and that lawfully; why then may we not feare the puniſhment of God? Rom.13.4. If it be ſaid, this is a ſeruile feare, to feare the puniſhment, and agrees not to Gods children: I anſwer, ſlauiſh feare is, when a man onely feares the puniſhment, and not the offence of God, or at leaſt, the puniſhment more then the offence.

The ſecond vertue of Adoration, is Inward Obedience of the hidden man of the heart. The Lord preferres this obedience before all ſacrifice, 1.Sam.15.22. This ſtandeth in two things. Firſt, in yeelding ſubiection of the Conſcience to the commaundements, threatnings, and promiſes of God, ſo as wee are willing that it ſhould become bound vnto them. Secondly, when the reſt of the powers of the ſoule, in their place and time, performe obedience vnto God. And by this meanes doe wee bring into captiuitie, euery thought vnto obedience of Chriſt, as Paul ſpeaketh, 2.Cor.10.5.

The third vertue of Adoration, is Patience; which is, when a man in his afflictions, ſubmitteth his will to Gods will, and quieteth his heart therein, becauſe God ſendeth afflictions. This was Dauids counſell, Bee ſilent before the Lord; and alwaies waite vpon his pleaſure, Pſ. 37.7. And his practiſe, when in trouble he reſigned himſelfe into the hands of God, & ſaid, Lord, if I pleaſe thee not, loe I am here, doe with me as ſeemeth good in thine eyes; 1. Sam. 15.26. This patience is a part of Gods worſhip, becauſe it is a kinde of obedience.

The fourth vertue of Adoration, is Thankfulneſſe to God, which ſhewes it ſelfe in two things. Firſt, in an acknowledgement of the heart, that our ſelues, and whatſouer we haue, is Gods, & proceedes from his bleſſing alone. Secondly, in a conſecration of our bodies, ſoules, liues, callings, and labours to the honour and ſeruice of God. Thus much of the firſt head of Inward worſhip, or the firſt action of the heart, ſtanding in Adoration.

Sect. 2.

Cleauing to God.

The ſecond Action of the heart in Inward worſhip, or the ſecond part thereof is Cleauing vnto God. Now we cleaue vnto God by foure things: by Faith, Hope, Loue, and inward Inuocation.

By faith, I meane true iuſtifying faith, wherby we reſt vpon Gods mercy for the forgiueneſſe of our ſinnes, and life euerlaſting: and vpon his prouidence, for the things of this life. Thus Abraham, beeing ſtrengthened in this faith, and relying by it vpon Gods promiſes made vnto him, gaue glory vnto God, Rom. 4.20. This ſauing faith is the very root and beginning of all true worſhip. For Loue, which is the fulfilling of the Law, muſt come from it, 1. Tim. 1.5.

The ſecond is Hope, which followes and depends vpon faith: and it is that grace of God, whereby with patience wee waite the Lords leiſure, for the performance of his promiſes, eſpecially touching redemption, and life eternall. If we hope (ſaith Paul) for that we haue not, wee doe with patience expect it, Rom. 8.25.

The third is Loue of God; which hath two effects in the heart. Firſt, it maketh the heart to cleaue vnto God, and to be well pleaſed with him ſimply for himſelfe. In this manner God the Father louing Chriſt, teſtifieth that he was well pleaſed in him, Mat. 3.17. Secondly, it mooues the heart to ſeeke by all meanes poſſible, to haue true fellowſhip with God in Chriſt. This the Church notably expreſſeth in the Canticles.

The fourth is Inward prayer, or Inuocation of the heart; and it is nothing elſe but the lifting vp of the heart vnto God, according to his will, by deſires and groanes vnſpeakable. Or, it is a worke of the heart, whereby it flies vnto God for helpe in diſtreſſe, & makes him a rocke of defence. When the children of Iſrael were afflicted, They remembred that God was their ſtrength, & the moſt high God their redeemer, Pſal. 78.35. Of this kinde of prayer Paul ſpeakes, when he ſaith, Pray continually, 1. Theſſ. 5.17. For ſolemne prayer conceiued, and vttered in forme of words, cannot alwaies be vſed: but we are to lift vp our hearts vnto God, vpon euery occaſion, that by inward & holy motions and affections, they may be (as it were) knitte vnto him.

Now to conclude this point touching Inward worſhip, wee muſt remember that it alone is properly, ſimply, and of it ſelfe, the worſhip of God: and the Outward is not ſimply the worſhip of God, but onely ſo far forth as it is quickned by the Inward, and grounded vpon it. For God is a Spirit, and therſore the true worſhip that is done vnto him, muſt bee performed in ſpirit and truth, Ioh. 4.24.

CHAP. VI.

Of the outward worſhip of God, and the firſt head thereof, Prayer.

Thus much of the inward worſhip of God. The outward is that which is performed by the body externally, either in word or deed. To this belong many particulars, which I will reduce to eight ſeuerall heads.

I. Prayer.
II. The hearing of the word preached.
III. The vſe of the Sacraments.
IV. Outward Adoration.
V. Confeſſion.
VI. An Oath.
VII. Vowes.
VIII. Faſting.

Touching Prayer conceiued and vttered by the voice, there are many Queſtions of Conſcience; the principall whereof are foure.

I. Queſtion.

Lawfull Prayer.

How ſhall a man make a lawfull, and acceptable praier to God?

Anſw. The word of God requires many conditions in making prayer to God: they may all be brought to three heads. Some of them goe before the making of prayer, ſome are to be performed in the act of praier, ſome after prayer is ended.

Sect. 1.

Conditions before praier.

Conditions to be obſerued before prayer, are three.

Firſt, he that would make ſuch a prayer as God may bee pleaſed to heare, muſt repent. Eſa. 1.15. God would not heare the prayers of the Iewes, becauſe their hands were full of blood: that is, becauſe they had not repented of their oppreſſion and crueltie. Ioh. 9.31.

God heares not ſinners: that is, ſuch as liue and lie in their ſinnes, and turne not vnto God by true repentance. 1. Ioh. 3.22. By this wee know that God heares our prayers, if wee keepe his commandements. I adde further, that the man which hath before time repented, muſt again renew his repentance, if hee deſire that his prayers ſhould bee accepted. For the very particular ſinnes of men, whereinto they fall after their repentance, doe hinder the courſe of their prayers, from hauing acceſſe vnto God, if they be not repented of. And for this cauſe, the worthy men of God, the Prophets in the olde Teſtament, doe vſually in the beginning of their prayers, ſtill humble themſelues, and confeſſe their ſinne; as wee may ſee in the example of Daniel, chap. 9.v.5,6,&c. and of Ezra, chap. 9.v.6,&c.

Secondly, before a man make a prayer, he muſt firſt (if neede require,) be reconciled vnto his brother. If thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there remembreſt that thy brother hath ought againſt thee, leaue there thine offering, and goe thy way, firſt be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift, Mat. 5. 23. When ye ſhall ſtand and pray, forgiue, if ye haue any thing againſt any man, &c. Mark. 11.25.

Thirdly, hee that is to pray muſt prepare himſelfe in heart and minde, as one that is to ſpeake familiarly with God.

In this preparation, foure things are required. Firſt, the minde is to bee emptied of all carnall & worldly thoughts. Secondly, there muſt be in the minde, a conſideration of the things to bee asked. Thirdly, a lifting vp of the heart vnto the Lord, Pſal. 25.1. Fourthly, the heart muſt bee touched, with a reuerence of the Maieſtie of God, to whome we pray, Eccleſ. 5.1. Be not raſh with thy mouth, nor let thy heart be haſty to vtter a thing before God. For the neglect hereof, the Lord threatneth to bring a iudgement vpon the Iſraelites, Eſa. 29.13.14.

Sect. 2.

Conditions in prayer.

The ſecond ſort of Conditions, are thoſe that are required in prayer, and they are in number eight.

I. Euery petition muſt proceede from a liuely ſenſe and feeling of our owne wants, and of our ſpirituall pouerty. For without this, no prayer can be earneſt and hearty; and conſequently become acceptable vnto God. For example, when we pray that Gods name may be hallowed, we muſt in making that petition, haue in our hearts a ſenſe of the corruption of our nature, whereby we are prone to diſhonour the name of God.

II. Our praier muſt proceed from an earneſt deſire of that grace which wee want: and this deſire is indeed praier it ſelfe. Moſes vttering neuer a word, but groning in the ſpirit vnto God, in the behalfe of the Iſraelites, is ſaid, to crie vnto the Lord, Exod. 14.15. We know not (ſaith Paul) what to pray as we ought, but the Spirit it ſelfe maketh requeſt for vs with ſighes that cannot be expreſſed, Rom. 8.26.

III. The petition muſt proceede from ſauing and true iuſtifying faith. The reaſon is, becauſe without that faith, it is impoſſible that either our perſons, or our prayers, or any other action wee doe, ſhould pleaſe God, Heb. 11.6.

IV. Euery petition muſt be grounded vpon the word of God, and not framed according to the carnall conceit and fanſie of mans braine. And this is the aſſurance that we haue in him, that if wee aske any thing ACCORDING TO HIS WILL, he heareth vs, 1. Ioh. 5.14. Now wee haue a double ground of our prayer in Gods word; a commaundement to make the prayer, either generall or particular; and a promiſe, that our requeſts ſhall be granted.

Here wee muſt remember two rules. Firſt, Things to bee asked are either ſpirituall, or temporall. Spirituall are ſuch as concerne God; whereof ſome are more neceſſarie to ſaluation, as remiſſion of ſinnes, faith, repentance, and ſuch like: ſome are leſſe neceſſarie, as hope, ioy in the feeling of Gods mercie in diſtreſſe, &c. Temporall things are ſuch as belong to this life, as meate, drinke, clothing, preferment, and ſuch like.

Now touching things ſpirituall, that are more neceſſary to ſaluation, wee are to pray for them abſolutely, without any exception or condition. But for things leſſe neceſſarie to ſaluation, and for temporal bleſſings, we muſt aske them at Gods hand with this condition; if it be his will and pleaſure, and ſo farre forth, as hee in his wiſedome ſhall iudge to bee moſt expedient for vs. Herein we muſt follow the example of Christ, who in his agony prayed to his Father to take that cup from him, yet with this condition, Not my will, but thy will bee done. The reaſon is this: Looke how far forth God commands vs to aske, & promiſeth that we ſhall receiue, ſo farre forth are wee warranted to aske, and may hope to receiue: Now God commands vs to aske, and promiſeth vs the firſt ſort of ſpiritual things, freely and ſimply, without any condition or exception. But the other ſort of ſpirituall things, that are leſſe neceſſary, and temporall bleſſings, hee promiſeth vs with condition, and therefore in like ſort ought we to aske them.

The ſecond rule is: Wee muſt not in our prayer, binde God to any circumſtances of time, place, or meaſure of that grace or benefit, which we aske.

V. Our praiers being thus framed, (as hath beene ſaid) are to bee preſented and offered to God alone, and to none but him. For firſt, none elſe can heare all men, in all places, at all times; and helpe all men, in all places, and at all times, but onely hee. Againe, the Spirit of God makes vs to pray, and in prayer to call him Abba, Father. Furthermore, all prayer muſt bee grounded vpon the word; wherein wee haue not the leaſt warrant, either expreſly ſet downe, or by conſequent implyed, to preferre our ſutes and requeſts to any of the creatures.

VI. Prayer is to bee preſented to God, in the name, merit, and mediation of Chriſt alone. For we our ſelues are not worthy of any thing, but ſhame, and confuſion. Therefore we cannot pray in our owne names, but muſt pray only in the name of Chriſt. Our prayers are our ſacrifices, and Chriſt alone is that Altar, whereon wee muſt offer them to God the Father. For this Altar muſt ſanctifie them, before they can be a ſacrifice of a ſweete ſmelling ſauour vnto God. Hence it is, that not onely our petitions, but all other things, as Paul wiſheth, are to bee done in the name of the Lord Ieſus, Coloſſ. 3. 17. And Chriſt himſelfe ſaith, Whatſoeuer you aske the Father in my name, he will giue it you, Ioh. 16. 23.

VII. There muſt be in prayers, Inſtancy and Perſeuerance. The heart muſt be inſtant, not onely in the act of praier; but afterwards, till the thing asked bee granted. This inſtancie, is commended vnto vs in the parable of the widdow, and the vnrighteous Iudge, Luk. 18. 1. Hereunto the Prophet exhorteth, when hee ſaith, —keepe not ſilence, and giue the Lord no reſt, &c. Eſa. 62. 7. And S. Paul in like manner wiſheth the Romanes, to ſtriue with him by praiers to God for him, Rom. 15. 30.

VIII. Euery true praier, muſt haue in it ſome thankſgiuing vnto God for his benefits. In all thinges let your requeſt bee ſhewed vnto God, in prayer and ſupplication, with giuing of thankes, Phil. 4. 6. Chriſt himſelfe gaue direction touching this, in that forme of prayer which he taught his Diſciples, For thine is the kingdome, power and glorie.

Sect. 3.

Conditions after prayer.

The third ſort of Conditions, are thoſe which are required after prayer; and they are ſpecially two.

The firſt is, a particular faith, whereby he that prayeth muſt be aſſured that his particular requeſt ſhall be granted, Mar. 11. 24. Whatſoeuer ye deſire when ye pray, BELEEVE that ye ſhall haue it, and it ſhall bee done vnto you. And that hee may haue this particular faith, hee muſt firſt haue that whence it ariſeth, namely, true iuſtifying faith, ſtanding in a perſwaſion of his reconciliation with God.

The ſecond is, that a man muſt doe and practiſe that which hee praies for; and hee is not onely to pray for bleſſings, but alſo to vſe all lawfull meanes that he can, whereby the bleſſings he asketh, may be obtained. For example: As thou praieſt for the pardon of thy ſinnes, ſo thou muſt leaue thy ſinnes, and vſe all good meanes, whereby the ſame may be mortified and crucified. And the like is to be done in al other things which we aske of God.

Thus wee haue the firſt queſtion of conſcience reſolued touching Prayer; that then the prayer is acceptable to God, when hee that prayeth obſerues, as much as in him lyeth, all theſe conditions before, in, and after prayer.

II. Queſtion.

Whether may a man lawfully make Imprecations, that is to ſay, praie againſt his enemies? and how farre forth is it lawfull?

Of Imprecations.

Sect. 1.

For anſwer to this, we muſt marke and obſerue ſundry diſtinctions, and differences.

Firſt, we muſt diſtinguiſh between the cauſe, and the perſon that defends and maintaines the cauſe. The euill cauſe which an euill man defendeth, is to be condemned of vs, and wee may alwaies, and that lawfully, pray againſt it; but we may not in like ſort, condemne and pray againſt his perſon.

Secondly, wee muſt diſtinguiſh of the perſons of our enemies; Some bee priuate enemies, ſome publike. Priuate I call thoſe, which be enemies of ſome particular men, and are againſt them, in regard of this or that cauſe or matter, and yet are not enemies of God, or of his truth. Publike are thoſe, which are not only our enemies, but the enemies of God, of his kingdome, of his truth, and religion. Now we may not pray againſt priuate enemies: wee may (as before) pray againſt their euill cauſe, but not againſt their perſons. Mat. 5. 44. Bleſſe them that curſe you, doe good to them that hate you, and pray for them which hurt you and perſecute you. And we are commanded to loue our enemies as our ſelues.

Againe, publike enemies of God and his truth, are alſo of two ſorts, either Curable, or Incurable. Curable are ſuch as offend of ignorance, or ſome other humane frailtie, ſo as there is ſome hope of their conuerſion, and repentance. Wee muſt not pray againſt the perſons of theſe, but onely againſt their dealings and badde cauſes, and pray for their perſons, & for their conuerſion. Thus Chriſt prayed for thoſe that crucified him; Father forgiue them: and Stephen, Act. 7. for them that ſtoned him. Incurable are thoſe that ſinne obſtinately & of malice, ſo as there is no hope of their amendment and conuerſion.

And further, for the better anſwering of this Queſtion, we muſt marke another diſtinction. There are two ſorts of men, that are to make prayer vnto God. Some that haue extraordinarie gifts; as the Prophets and Apoſtles. Now hee that is an extraordinarie man, hath, and muſt haue theſe two gifts; namely, firſt a ſpirit of Diſcerning, to diſcerne and iudge whether the perſon againſt whome hee prayes, be incurable or no: and ſecondly, a pure Zeale of Gods honour and glory. The extraordinarie man, that is qualified with theſe two gifts, may pray not onely againſt the cauſe of him that is an enemie to God, but againſt his perſon. Thus Dauid did, eſpecially in the 109. Pſal. which Pſalme is full of terrible curſes againſt his particular enemies, and typically againſt Iudas. For he had the ſpirit of diſcerning, by which he knew that they were incurable enemies: and a pure zeale of the glory of God, which made him break out into ſuch imprecations. So Paul praies, Gal. 5. 12. that they might be cut off which troubled the Church, &c. 2. Tim. 4. 14. he praies directly againſt the perſon of Alexander the Copperſmith, that had done him much wrong, The Lord reward him according to his workes. Which muſt not ſeeme ſtrange: for Paul had in that imprecation, the ſpirit of prophecie, and conſequently both the ſpirit of diſcerning, and of pure zeale: and therefore he might pray againſt him as he did.

But for ordinary men, ſuch as haue nothing but ordinary gifts, and want the ſpirit of diſcerning, and haue alſo a zeale mingled with choler, ſtomacke, anger, & hatred; they may vſe no extraordinarie prayer againſt the perſon of any man. All that they may doe, is to pray, that God would reſtraine their malice, hinder their bad practiſes, and turne them to his glorie, & the good of his Church. Therefore, Act. 4. 29. when there had been a Councell holden at Ieruſalem, againſt the Apoſtles Peter and Iohn, in the firſt beginning of the great perſecution of Chriſtians, in the primitiue Church, it is ſaid that they departed from the aſſembly, and praied together with the reſt of the Church, in this maner; And now, O Lord, behold their threatnings, &c. Wherein they praid not againſt the Councel, nor againſt the men that ſate in counſel, but againſt their proceedings, courſes, deuices, & threatnings. And their practiſe may be a patterne for ordinary men to follow. In Luke 9. 54. the Diſciples asking our Sauiour Chriſt whether they ſhould call for fire from heauen, to deſtroy his enemies, he ſharpely reprooueth them for their intemperate heate againſt the Samaritanes, and tels them, that they had not that extraordinarie Spirit, to effect ſuch a thing, becauſe they were but ordinary men. Ordinarie men therefore may not pray againſt the perſons of Gods enemies. The Pope at this day is a profeſſed enemie to Chriſt and his Goſpell, yet no man may pray againſt the perſon of the Pope, but onely againſt his ſtate, kingdome, and regiment, which is Antichriſtian; whereby he ſets himſelfe againſt God, and his kingdome.

Vpon the anſwer to this Queſtion, there followeth another. Sundrie Pſalmes of Dauid are Pſalmes of imprecation, wherein Dauid curſeth his enemies fearefully, eſpecially in the 109. Pſalme, now al theſe Pſalmes were penned for our vſe: It may therefore be demanded, how we may vſe theſe, and ſuch like, when we reade or ſing them?

Anſ. I. Wee muſt not vſe them as Dauid did, namely, as prayers againſt the perſons of our enemies, but onely as prophecies againſt the enemies of God, wherein the puniſhment of incurable men, that were enemies to God and his truth, is fore-tolde. For we haue not, as Dauid had, an extraordinary ſpirit, or a pure zeale: therefore we cannot pray as he did.

II. I anſwer, whereas theſe Imprecations were directed againſt particular enemies, wee may vſe them in ſome ſort as prayers, but how? as generall prayers againſt all the incurable enemies of God, not againſt any particulars among the Iewes, Turkes, or Papiſts. As therefore we may vſe theſe Imprecations as prayers, ſo wee muſt vſe them without any particular application, to the perſons of any particular men.

III. Queſtion.

VVhat be the particular Circumſtances of Prayer?

Of the Circumſtances of Prayer.

Anſ. There are chiefly foure. I. The voice, or ſpeech. II. The geſture. III. The place where. IV. The time when.

Sect. 1.

Of the Voice in Prayer.

Concerning the Voice, this Queſtion may be mooued:

VVhether a voice or words are to be vſed in prayer or no?

Anſ. Prayer is either Publike, or Priuate. In publike prayer, a forme of words muſt alwaies be vſed, in a knowne, plaine, and diſtinct voice. The reaſons are theſe: Firſt, the Miniſter is the mouth of the whole Congregation in praier, as he is the mouth of God to the people in preaching. Now as the Miniſter is their mouth to God in prayer, ſo the people muſt giue their aſſent, and approbation to his prayer, by the word Amen: But there can bee no profeſſed and publike aſſent, without a voice. Secondly, God is the Creator, not onely of the ſoule of man, but alſo of his bodie; and we bleſſe God, not onely with the heart, but alſo with the tongue: therefore the whole man muſt pray in publike.

Now in priuate prayer, made in priuate & ſecret places, by priuate perſons, the Voice is profitable, but not ſimply neceſſarie. It is profitable, becauſe it ſtirreth vp the affections of the heart; it ſerueth alſo to keepe the wandring minde in compaſſe, to expreſſe the affection, and to procure attention of the heart to the prayer. Yet it is not ſimply neceſſarie. For a man is not bound in conſcience to vſe a forme of wordes, in all his prayers. Moſes prayed, he ſpake neuer a word, and yet it was a prayer: for the Lord ſaies vnto him, Exod. 12. 15. Why crieſt thou? Anna praying in the temple, her lips did moue only, her voice was not heard, & yet ſhe is ſaid to pray, 1. Sam. 1. 13.

Againe, the Spirit is ſaid to pray in the Elect, with groanes that cannot be vttered; and yet the holy Ghoſt giues them the name of prayers, Rom. 8. 26. Paul biddes vs pray continually, 1. Theſſ. 5. 17. which is not to be vnderſtood of a continuall vſe of a forme of wordes, but of the groanes and ſighes of the heart, which may be made at all times.

Out of this Queſtion ariſeth another;

Whether it be lawfull, when wee pray, to reade a ſet forme of prayer? for ſome thinke, that to doe ſo is a ſinne.

Anſ. It is no ſinne: but a man may lawfully, and with good conſcience doe it.

Reaſons. Firſt, the Pſalmes of Dauid were deliuered to the Church, to be vſed and read in a ſet forme of wordes, and yet the moſt of them are prayers. Secondly, to conceiue a forme of prayer, requires gifts of memorie, knowledge, vtterance, and the gifts of grace. Now euery child and ſeruant of God, though he haue an honeſt heart, yet hath hee not all theſe gifts: and therfore in the want of them, may lawfully vſe a ſet forme of prayer, as a man that hath a weake backe, or a lame legge, may leane vpon a crutch.

It is alleaged, that ſet formes of prayer, doe limit and bind the holy Ghoſt.

Anſ. If we had a perfect meaſure of grace, it were ſomewhat, but the graces of God are weake and ſmall in vs. This is no binding of the Holy Ghoſt, but a helping of the ſpirit, which is weake in vs, by a crutch to leane vpon: therefore a man may with good conſcience, vpon defect of memorie and vtterance, &c. vſe a ſet forme of prayer.

Sect. 2.

The ſecond Circumſtance, is the Geſture. Concerning which it is demanded, what kind of geſture is to bee vſed in prayer? whether kneeling, ſtanding, ſitting, or the holding vp the hands or head to heauen, or bowing the bodie to the earth?

Anſ. God in his word hath not preſcribed any particular geſture of the bodie, and therfore our conſciences are not bound to any particular. Beſides that, Religion ſtands not properly in bodily actions and geſtures. Yet touching geſture, the word of God giues certaine generall rules to be obſerued in prayer, both publike and priuate.

In Publike prayer, theſe rules of Geſture are preſcribed. Firſt, when publike prayer is made in the congregation, our geſture muſt alwaies be comely, modeſt, and decent. Secōdly, all geſture vſed publikely, muſt ſerue to expreſſe, as much as may be, the inward humilitie of the heart without hypocriſie. Now theſe kinds are manifold. Some concerne the whole bodie, as the bowing thereof, the caſting of it downe vpon the ground. Some againe concerne the parts of the bodie, as liſting vp of the head, the eies, the hands, bowing the knees, &c. Touching theſe, the Scripture hath not bound vs to any particulars; but in them all, wee muſt haue regard, that they ſerue alway to expreſſe the humilitie of our hearts before God. Thus haue the holy men of God behaued themſelues; yea, the holy Angels ſtanding before the Arke, doe couer their faces, in token of reuerence of the Maieſtie of God, Eſay 6. 2. Thirdly, wee muſt in publike prayer, content our ſelues to follow the laudable faſhion, and cuſtome of that particular Church, where we are. For to decline from cuſtomes of particular Churches, in ſuch caſes, often cauſeth ſchiſme and diſſentions.

In priuate prayer, done in priuate and ſecret places, there is more libertie. For in it we may vſe any geſture, ſo it be comely and decent, and ſerue to expreſſe the inward humilitie of our hearts. An auncient writer is of opinion, that it is an vnreuerent, and vnlawfull thing, to pray ſitting. But both the learned before, in, and after his time, haue iudged his opinion ſuperſtitious; ſpecially cōſidering that Religion ſtands not in the outward geſture of the body, and it skils not much what that is, ſo the inward humilitie of a ſincere heart be expreſſed thereby.

The place of praier.

The third Circumſtance, is the Place. VVhere Queſtion is made, In what place we muſt pray? Anſ. In regard of conſcience, holineſſe, and religion, all places are equal, & alike in the new Teſtament, ſince the comming of Chriſt. The houſe or the field is as holy as the Church. And if we pray in either of them, our prayer is as acceptable to God, as that which is made in the Church. For now the daies are come, that were foretold by the Prophet, wherein a cleane offering ſhould bee offered to God in euery place, Mal. 1. 11. which Paul expounds, 1. Tim. 2. 8. of pure and holy praier, offered to God in euery place. To this purpoſe, Chriſt ſaid to the woman of Samaria, That the time ſhould come, when they ſhould not worſhip in Ieruſalem, or in Samaria; but the true worſhippers of God, ſhould worſhip him in ſpirit & in truth, whereſoeuer it be. Yet neuertheleſſe, for order, decency, & quietneſſe ſake, publike prayer muſt bee made in publike places, as Churches and Chappels appointed for that vſe. And priuate praier, in priuate houſes and cloſets, Math. 6. 5. Now the opinion of the Papiſt is otherwiſe. For he thinks that in the new Teſtament, hallowed churches are more holy then other places are, or can be, and doe make the prayers offered to God in thē, more acceptable to him then in any other: & hereupon they teach, that priuate men muſt pray in Churches, and priuate prayers muſt bee made in Churches, if they will haue them heard. For proofe hereof, they alleage the practiſe of ſome particular perſons in the Scriptures. Of Anna, who prayed priuately in the Temple, Luk. 2. 37. Of Dauid, who in his exile, deſired greatly to haue recourſe vnto the Temple. And of Daniel, who is ſaid to looke out at the window toward the Temple, and pray, Dan.6.10.

Anſ. Theſe places are abuſed by the Popiſh Church. For there is great difference betweene the Temple at Ieruſalem in the olde Teſtament, and our Churches in the new. That was built by particular commandemēt from God: ſo were not our Churches. That was a type of the very body, and manhood of Chriſt, Heb.9.11. and of his myſticall body, Col.2.7. Againe, the Arke in the Temple was a pledge and ſignification of the couenant, a ſigne of Gods preſence, a pledge of his mercy, and that by his owne appointment: for it was his wil there to anſwer his people: but the like cannot bee ſhewed of our Churches or Chappels.

1.Sam.4.

It will be ſaid, that the Sacrament is a ſigne of Gods preſence, for in it God is preſent after a ſort. Anſw. It is true: Chriſt is preſent in the Sacrament, but when? not alwaies, but then onely when the Sacrament is adminiſtred. And the adminiſtration beeing ended, Chriſt is no more preſent in the bread and wine. And in the very act of celebration, hee is not carnally, but ſpiritually preſent.

Sect. 4.

The time of prayer.

The fourth Circumſtance, is the Time.

Queſt. What are the times, in which men are to make prayers vnto God?

For anſwer to this Queſtion, it is firſt to be conſidered, that there is a twofold manner of praying, and conſequently two kinds of praier. The firſt is, the ſecret and ſuddaine lifting vp of the heart to God, vpon the preſent occaſion. The ſecond is, ſet or ſolemne prayer. The firſt ſort of prayers, haue of auncient times beene called eiaculations, or the darts of the heart. And the time of this kind of prayer, is not determined, but is, and may be vſed at any time without exception. This point I make plaine by theſe reaſons.

The firſt is, the commandement of God, 1. Theſſ.5.17. Pray without ceaſing. Eph.6.18. Pray alwaies, with all manner of prayer and ſupplication in the ſpirit, and watch thereunto with all perſeuerance—for all Saints. In both theſe places, by prayer and ſupplications, Paul vnderſtandeth the ſuddaine lifting vp of the heart vnto God.

Secondly, whatſoeuer we ſpeake, thinke, or doe, we muſt do all to the glory of God. Now God is glorified, when wee doe in all things, from our hearts acknowledge his power, wiſdome, iuſtice, mercie, prouidence, and goodneſſe. And theſe wee doe acknowledge, when wee daily and hourely lift vp our hearts to him, in petition, for ſome bleſſings, and in thankſgiuing for his mercies.

Thirdly, we are ſubiect to innumerable infirmities, frailties, and wants, ſo as wee cannot of our ſelues, ſo much as thinke one good thought: therefore we are euery day & houre to lift vp our hearts to God, partly in praier, partly in giuing of thankes, that hee would make a daily ſupply by his grace.

Fourthly, Satan ſeekes by all meanes to ouerthrowe our ſoules continually; and in that regard it behooueth vs alwaies, and vpon euery occaſion, to lift vp our hearts to God, for his mercifull protection.

Fifthly, the gift of faith muſt grow and increaſe in vs day by day. And the means whereby it groweth and thriueth in vs, are the exerciſes of faith, not ſeldome and rare, but daily and continually vſed. Now of all the exerciſes of faith, none is more excellent then Inuocation and Thankſgiuing.

The ſecond kinde of praier, is ſet and ſolemne; whē a man ſets himſelfe apart, to pray vnto God vſually & feruently: or, when men come reuerently and ſolemnly together into the congregation, to call vpon the name of the Lord. The word of God appoints no ſet time for this kind, but leaues it to the liberty, wiſdome, and diſcretion of men. And the ground of this Libertie is this; There is now no difference betweene time and time, in regard of Conſcience, for performing the worſhip of God, and the duties of religion, (the Sabath onely excepted) but the principall and onely difference, is in regard of outward order and conueniencie; whereby one time may be thought fitter then another, and that muſt be diſcerned by the wiſdome of men. In the new Teſtament, the diſtinction of daies and houres, is taken away. Paul was afraid of the Galatians, becauſe they made difference of daies, times, moneths, and yeares, in reſpect of holineſſe and religion, Gal.4.10,11.

By this doctrine, we may ſee what to iudge of the Romane religion, touching ſet times of prayer. They preſcribe certain houres, which they tearme Canonicall; and they diſtinguiſh them in this manner. The firſt, they call the Matutine, before the Sun riſing. The ſecond, the Prime, from the firſt houre of the day, to the third. The third, from thence to the ſixt houre. The fourth, from the ſixth to the ninth. The fifth, frō the ninth to the twelfth, which they call the None. The ſixth, is in the euening about the Sun-ſetting. The ſeuenth and laſt, is after the Sunne-ſetting, which they call the Completorie. Now in theſe ſeuen preſcribed houres, by the doctrine deliuered, I note three notable abuſes.

Firſt, in that the Popiſh Church binds men in conſcience to obſerue them, vpon paine of mortall ſinne. Whereas in regard of Conſcience, there is no difference of times. Secondly, they binde the Maſſe-prieſt, the Deacon, Subdeacon, and the Beneficed man, onely to canonicall houres: whereas thoſe houres differ not from others, in regard of performāce of Gods worſhip, neither are theſe men more bound to pray in them, then others. Thirdly, that a man may ſay and reade his canonicall houres this day for the morrow, and in the morning, or after dinner, for the whole day: wherein we may ſee their groſſe ſuperſtition.

IV. Queſtion touching prayer is,

How their mindes are to be pacified, which are troubled by ſundry accidents, that fall out in their prayers?

Theſe Accidents are principally three.

Firſt, when they ſhould pray, they cannot frame or conceiue a forme of prayer, as other men doe.

For remoouing of which trouble, let them remember this one thing: That the vnfained deſire of the touched heart, is a prayer in acceptance before God, though knowledge, memorie, and vtterance, to frame and conceiue a forme of prayer in words, be wanting, Pſal. 10.17. God heares the deſire of the poore, that is, of humble perſons, and them which are in diſtreſſe, Pſal. 145.19. God will fulfill the deſire of them that feare him: he alſo will heare their cry, and will ſaue them. Rom. 8.26. We know not how to pray as we ought, but the ſpirit of God, that is, the ſpirit of adoption, maketh requeſt for vs by groanes & ſighes, which cannot be vttered. Where we may obſerue, that the prayer of the holy Ghoſt, which muſt needes be an excellent prayer, is made by groanes, which cannot be vttered in words.

The ſecond Accident is, that they finde themſelues full of heauineſſe and deadneſſe of ſpirit, and their mindes full of by-thoughts and wandring imaginations.

This trouble may be remooued vpon this ground; that the defects of our prayer ſhall neuer condemne vs, if we be heartily diſpleaſed with our ſelues for the ſame; and by prayer and other good meanes, doe ſtruggle and ſtriue againſt them. Rom. 8.1. There is no condemnation to them that be in Chriſt. In which place it is not ſaid, They doe nothing worthy of condemnation; but thus, There is no condemnation to them beeing in Chriſt, though they deſerue it neuer ſo much.

The third Accident is, that though they pray, they receiue not the fruit of their prayers. For the remoouall of this diſtreſſe, wee may conſider theſe foure things.

I. The man that is thus troubled, is to examine himſelfe, whether he hath made his prayer to God aright, or no? For if he pray amiſſe, he may pray long and neuer be heard. Our Sauiour would not grant the requeſt of the ſonnes of Zebedeus, becauſe they asked they knew not what, Matth. 20.22. Iam. 4.3. Ye aske & receiue not, becauſe ye aske amiſſe, that ye might conſume it on your luſts. Paul prayed three times, and had the repulſe, becauſe hee asked things inconuenient for him to receiue: therefore anſwer was made, My grace A is ſufficient for thee, 2. Cor. 12. The man therefore that would make a prayer aright, muſt haue reſpect vnto the matter and forme thereof, as alſo to the diſpoſition of his owne heart: if he faile in any of theſe, then God will not heare; or if he doth, he heares in iuſtice.

II. Though men make lawfull prayers vnto God, and aske things that are to bee asked, and which God will grant, yet God will ſomewhat deferre the accompliſhment of their prayers, and not giue eare vnto them at the firſt. Dauid prayed night and day, and yet was not heard, Pſal. 22.2. Againe, his eies failed, his throat was drie, while he waited for his God by prayer, Pſal. 69.3. The Angel Gabriel ſaid to Zacharie, Luk. 1.13. Thy prayer is heard. B Now in all likelihood, that prayer of Zacharie was made long before, euen in his youth, yet it was not granted him till he was old.

The Lord deferres the graunt of our requeſts vpon good reaſon. For hereby he ſtirreth vp the dulneſſe of our hearts, and quickneth our faith and hope. Againe, hee makes vs when wee enioy the bleſſings deſired, to haue them in higher eſtimation, and to bee more thankfull vnto him; yea in the want therof, to ſtriue the more earneſtly with him by prayer for them. The woman of Canaan was repulſed, and called a dogge, by our Sauiour Chriſt, not for that he intended to reiect her prayer, but to ſtirre vp her faith, to make her more earneſt in asking; as alſo more C thankfull for the benefit, when ſhee had receiued it.

III. The Lord vſeth to grant our petitions, two manner of waies. Firſt, by giuing the very thing we aske. Secondly, by giuing ſomthing anſwerable thereto, when he graunteth not the thing it ſelfe. Thus Chriſt was heard in that which he feared. Heb. 5.7. He prayed to be deliuered from that cuppe, which notwithſtanding hee dranke of. How then was hee heard? Though he had not that which he asked, yet God graunted him the thing which was proportionable to his requeſt; namely, ſtrength, and power, whereby he was enabled to ouercome the woefull pangs of that death.

IV. VVe muſt thinke this ſufficient, that D wee can, and doe pray vnto God, though wee neuer haue any requeſt in this world graunted. For by whoſe grace haue we alwaies continued in prayer, but by the gift and grace of God? Paul in the like caſe, was anſwered by God, My grace is ſufficient for thee, 2. Cor. 12.9. that is, thine infirmitie ſhall not bee remooued: content thy ſelfe in this, that thou art in my fauour, and haſt receiued my grace, by which thou doeſt withſtand this temptation. To this purpoſe S. Iohn ſaith, If we know that hee heareth vs, whatſoeuer we aske, wee know that we haue the petitions granted which we deſired of him, 1. Ioh. 5.15. His meaning is, if we can perceiue, and diſcerne that God liſteneth to our prayers, hereby we may aſſure our ſelues, that he grants our requeſts. Now by this wee may perceiue that he doth liſten, and giue eare to vs, becauſe the grace wherby we pray, is from him alone.

CHAP. VII.

Of the ſecond head of Gods worſhip, the Hearing of the word preached.

THus much touching the firſt head of Outward worſhip, namely, Praier. Now followes the next, which is the Hearing of the word preached.

The Queſtions concerning this point, are of two ſorts. Some concerne the Preachers of the word, and ſome the Hearers. The firſt ſort I omit, and reſerue them to a more proper place.

For the ſecond ſort, concerning Hearers, one Queſtion may be mooued:

How any man may profitably, to his owne comfort and ſaluation, heare the word of God?

The neceſſitie of this Queſtion appeares, by that ſpeciall Caueat, giuen by our Sauiour Chriſt, Luk. 8. 18. Take heede how ye heare.

Anſ. To the profitable hearing of Gods word, three things are required, Preparation before we heare, a right Diſpoſition in hearing, and Duties to be practiſed afterward.

I. In Preparation, ſundry Rules of direction are to be obſerued.

Firſt Rule. We muſt be ſwift to heare, Iam. 1. 19. And this we ſhall doe, by diſburdening our ſelues of al impediments, which may hinder the effectuall hearing of the word. Theſe Impediments are eſpecially three; all which are named by the Apoſtle Iames, together with their ſeuerall remedies.

The firſt is, preſumption, when the hearer preſumes of his wiſedome, knowledge, and abilitie to teach, (if need were) his teachers. The remedie hereof is, to be ſlowe to ſpeake, that is, not to preſume vpon our owne gifts, thinking our ſelues better able to teach others, then to be taught by them. For ſo the Apoſtle afterwards expounds himſelfe, when hee ſaith, My brethren, be not many maſters, Iam. 3. 1. Let not priuate perſons take vpon them to become inſtructers of other men; but as Paul ſaith, 1. Cor. 3. 18. If any man among you ſeeme to be wiſe, let him be a foole, that he may be wiſe: that is, let him be willing to learne, euen of his inferiours. And in this regard, let him follow the practiſe of Naaman, who ſubmitted himſelfe to the aduice and counſell of his maid.

The ſecond Impediment is, troubled affections, ſpecially raſh anger, either againſt the Teacher or others. The remedie of this alſo is laid downe in the place before alleaged, Bee ſlowe to wrath, v. 19. The third is, ſuperfluitie of malitiouſneſſe, that is, the abundance of euill corruptions and ſinnes, which hearers ſhall by experience finde in their owne hearts and liues. This Impediment hath many branches, principally three. 1. Hardneſſe of heart, noted by the ſtony ground, in the parable of the ſower, Matth. 15. 20. 2. The Cares of the world, ſignified by the thornie ground, v. 22. 3. The itching eare, 2. Tim. 4. 3. when a man will heare no other doctrine, but that which is ſutable to his corrupt nature, not beeing willing to frame his heart to the word, but to haue the word framed to his wicked heart.

The remedies of this Impediment, are theſe. Firſt, euery hearer of the word, muſt lay apart all ſuperfluitie of malitiouſneſſe, that is, cut off, as much as in him lieth, all corruptions both of heart and life. Hence it is, that God ſpeaketh thus to the wicked man, Pſal. 50. 16. What haſt thou to do, to take my word in thy mouth, ſeeing thou hateſt to be reformed, and haſt caſt my words behinde thee? To this purpoſe, the Prophet Ieremie exhorteth the Iewes, to bee circumciſed to the Lord, and to take away the foreskinnes of their hearts, &c. Ier. 4. 4. And Moſes by Gods commandement, was to ſanctifie the people three daies, before they came to heare the Law deliuered by himſelfe in Mount Sinai, Exod. 19. 11. Againe, euery man will and ought to haue a care, to prepare himſelfe more or leſſe, to the receiuing of the Lords Supper: which dutie is as well to bee performed, before the hearing of the word, conſidering that in ſubſtance it differeth not from the Sacraments, they beeing the viſible, and preaching the audible voyce of God. Secōdly, euery hearer muſt receiue the word with meekeneſſe, that is, with quietneſſe ſubiect himſelfe to the word of God in all things. Eſa. 57. 15. I dwell with him that is of an humble ſpirit, to reuiue the ſpirit of the humble, &c.

The ſecond Rule of Preparation. VVee muſt lift vp our hearts in prayer to God, that he would giue vs the hearing eare. This hearing eare, is a gift of God, enabling the heart, when it heareth, to conceiue and vnderſtand the doctrine taught; and to yeeld obedience thereunto.

The third Rule. The hearer muſt in hearing, ſet himſelfe in the preſence of God. Now therefore (ſaith Cornelius to Peter, Act. 10. 33.) are we all here preſent before God, to heare all things commanded thee of God. The reaſon is, becauſe God is alwaies in the congregation where the word is preached.

II. The ſecond thing required to profitable hearing, is a right diſpoſition. VVherein two rules are to be obſerued.

Firſt, when the word of God is in deliuering, euery hearer muſt heare with iudgment. But ſome will ſay, many preachers bewray faults and infirmities in their preaching. To this Paul anſwereth notwithſtanding, Deſpiſe not propheſie, 2. Theſſ.5.20. Yea but what if they deliuer vntruths? Paul anſwers againe, in the next verſe, Trie all things, and keepe that which is good: and Saint Iohn to the like purpoſe, 1.Iohn 4.1. Beleeue not euery ſpirit, but trie the ſpirits whether they be of God.

Here by the way wee muſt remember one caueat. There bee three kinds of iudgement. The firſt is priuate, whereby euery priuate perſon may iudge of the doctrine which is taught. For hee muſt not heare, ſtand ouer-head, but iudge of that which he heareth. Of this Saint Paul ſpeakes to the Corinths, Iudge ye what I ſay, 1. Cor. 10. 5. The ſecond is, the iudgement of the Prophet or Miniſter: And this is a ſurer kinde of iudgement then the former, proceeding from a greater meaſure of Gods grace. The third is, the iudgement of the holy Ghoſt in Scripture; and this is ſoueraigne & abſolute. For the holy Ghoſt iudgeth all, and is iudged of none. Theſe three kinds of iudgement are ſet in this order. The firſt depends vpon the ſecond, the ſecond vpon the third, and the third is abſolute & iudged of none.

Vpon this caueat, two things doe follow; Firſt, that a priuate hearer, though hee may iudge of doctrine deliuered, yet hee may not cenſure the Teacher, or his miniſtrie. Miniſters are to bee iudged, but their ſpirit is not ſubiect to euery priuate man; but to the prophets. For the ſpirit of the Prophet, that is, the doctrine which the Prophets bring, being inſpired by the holy Ghoſt, is ſubiect to the Prophets, 1.Cor.14.32. Secondly, a priuate man, is not to publiſh or broach any point of doctrine, but that which is plainely propounded in the word, and taught by the miniſters thereof. This is a neceſſarie rule; and the want of obſeruation thereof, is the cauſe of many ſchiſmes and hereſies in the Church. The Lord commaunds the people, Mal.2.7. to require the Law at the mouth of the Prieſt in all maine points of faith and manners.

The ſecond Rule to bee obſerued in hearing.

Euery hearer muſt haue care that the word of God be rooted and grounded in his heart, like good ſeed, in good ground: which Saint Iames expreſſeth, Iam. 1.21. Receiue with meekeneſſe the ingrafted word. Here generally it is to be remembred, that not onely ignorant people, but euen the moſt learned, ought to bee hearers of the word preached. For the preaching thereof ſerues not onely for the increaſing of knowledge, but alſo for the reformation of the affection, which may bee inordinate, where knowledge doth abound.

Now for the rooting of the word of God in our hearts, ſundry things are required.

Firſt, a true and right vnderſtanding thereof.

Secondly, it muſt bee mingled with faith, Heb.4.1. For the word is as wine, or water of life: our faith is the ſuger that ſweetneth it, and giues it a pleaſant reliſh. The word there-A fore muſt be tempered, and mixed with our faith, that it may become profitable vnto vs. Now in this mixture, there is required a double faith: the firſt generall, whereby wee beleeue the doctrine deliuered to be true, ſo as wee neuer call the ſame into queſtion; Our Goſpel to you (ſaith Paul) was in much aſſurance, 1. Theſſ.1.5. The ſecond ſpeciall, whereby wee apply the word preached vnto our ſelues, for the humbling and comforting of our hearts.

Thirdly, wee muſt labour to bee affected with the word. Thus Ioſiah his heart is ſaid to melt at the reading of the law, 2.Chro.34.27. And the people reioyced greatly, becauſe they vnderſtood the word which the Leuites had taught them. Neh. 8. 12. The hearts of B the two diſciples that went to Emmaus, burned within them, when Chriſt opened vnto them the Scriptures, Luk. 24.32. And the Iewes at Peters ſermon, were pricked in their hearts, and ſaid, Men, and brethren, what ſhall we doe? Act.2.37.

Fourthly, the word of God muſt dwell plenteouſly in vs, Col. 3. 16. This it doth when it rules, and beares the greateſt ſway in the heart, and is not ouerruled by any corrupt affection.

III. The duties to bee performed after Hearing, are theſe.

Firſt, the doctrine deliuered, muſt bee treaſured vp in the heart, and practiſed in life, Pſal.119.11. I haue hidde thy word in my heart, C that I might not ſinne againſt thee.

Secondly, a man muſt meditate on the word which he hath heard, with lifting vp of his heart vnto God. The beaſts that were clouen footed, and chewed the cudde, were fitteſt both for meat vnto man, and for ſacrifice to God, Leu.11. It was the old and auncient opinion of the Church, that this chewing the cudde, ſignified holy meditations. And hee that heares the word, muſt doe as the beaſt doth, fetch vp the meat out of his bellie againe, and chew it ouer anew. The man that doth ſo, is the fitteſt for the Lords vſe.

Thirdly, hee muſt haue experience of the D word of God in himſelfe, Pſal.34.8. Taſte and ſee how gracious the Lord is.

Fourthly, hee is to examine himſelfe after he hath heard the word. Thus Dauid ſaith of himſelfe, Pſal. 119. 59. I haue conſidered my waies, and turned my feet vnto thy teſtimonies.

Fifthly, hee muſt be obedient vnto it, and teſtifie his obedience, though not at all times, yet whenſoeuer occaſion is offered. Iam.1.22. Be ye doers of the word, and not hearers onely, deceiuing your owne ſelues.

II. Queſtion touching Hearers is,

How are they to be comforted, who after long hearing of the word, either profit very little, or not at all?

For reſolution of this Queſtion, the Cauſes of not profiting, are diſtinctly to be conſidered. And they are of two ſorts.

The firſt ſort of Cauſes, are the ſinnes of the hearers. And that ſinnes are the cauſes of not profiting, it will appeare by this ſigne; if the memorie, vnderſtanding, & other parts of the minde in common matters, bee ſtrong and pregnant, but dull and weake in apprehending, and retaining the doctrine taught. Now theſe ſinnes are principally two.

Firſt, Hardneſſe of heart, when a man is not inwardly mooued and affected with the word preached, but remaines in the ſame ſtate hee was before. This is ſet foorth by the hard ground, that is, by the high way ſide, and by the ſtony ground, Matth. 13.4.5. And ſuch is the heart that is not mooued nor affected either with ioy, ſorrow, feare, or conſolation. The hardneſſe of heart ariſeth from a cuſtom in ſinning, and from the deceitfulneſſe of ſin, Heb. 3.13.

Secondly, worldly Cares, that is, a heart poſſeſſed with deſire of profits, pleaſures, honors, preferments, & ſuch like; which be as thorns that choake the ſeed of the word, and ſuffer it not to grow and fructifie: yea, that fill the heart full of wandring imaginations, which ſteale away the minde from attending to the word preached. Thoſe that are thus hindred from profiting, are rather to be reprooued, then comforted: for that the cauſe of their non-proficiencie, is in, & from themſelues. They are therefore to vſe all good meanes for the remoouall of their ſinnes, that of hard hearted and carnall, they may become good and profitable hearers of the word. The meanes are theſe.

Firſt, they muſt labour to bee touched in heart, with ſenſe and feeling of their ſpirituall pouertie, and want of Gods fauour and mercie in the pardon of their ſinnes. The reaſon is giuen of Dauid, Pſal. 25.9. The Lord teacheth the humble his waies: And by Marie in her ſong, Luk. 1.53. Hee hath filled the hungrie with good things, and the rich he hath ſent emptie away. The ſecond meanes is, to heare the word of God with an honeſt heart, ioyned with a conſtant purpoſe of not ſinning. The third, to be as carefull to bring good affections, as a good vnderſtanding. For affections are the feete that carrie the heart, and Salomon biddes vs to take heed to our feete, when we enter into the houſe of God, Eccleſ. 4.17. They are the very key of knowledge and memorie; and therefore Dauid ſaies, The ſecret of the Lord is reuealed to thoſe that feare him, and his couenant is to giue them vnderſtanding, Pſal. 25.14. And that which he ſaith of Feare, may be ſaid alſo of other good affections.

The ſecond ſort of Cauſes, are ordinarie and vſuall defects of naturall gifts; as of capacitie, or conceipt, of memorie, and vnderſtanding. For all men haue not the like gifts of nature, and therefore all men cannot reap like benefit by the word preached. Theſe wants may be diſcerned thus; If the minde and memorie bee weake or wanting, as well in common worldly matters, as in diuine things that belong to Gods kingdome. And to this kind of men, which are thus troubled for not profiting, there belongeth comfort; Yet not ſimply, but vpon theſe conditions. Firſt, if they know the principall grounds of religion. Secondly, if they haue care to profit & increaſe in knowledge. Thirdly, if they liue according to the meaſure of their knowledge, in obedience to Gods will. Theſe beeing obſerued, ſuch parties are to comfort themſelues in this, that God in mercie will accept of their indeauour, forgiue their ignorance, & beare with their infirmities. This is to bee ſeene in the example of Peter, whoſe faith was highly commended by Chriſt, when he ſaid, the gates of hell ſhould not preuaile againſt it, Matth. 16.16. And yet at that very time, Peter was ignorant of many maine points of Religion, as of the death, reſurrection, & aſcenſion of Chriſt. And in his perſon, the other diſciples are commended alſo for their faith, becauſe they held Chriſt to be the Meſſias and Sauiour of the world, though they were ignorant of the manner of his redemptiō, thinking he ſhould haue beene an earthly king. Act. 1. Againe, the want of knowledge in ſuch as haue naturall defects, may bee ſupplied by good affection, if they be not wanting in an honeſt heart, and carefull indeauour of godly life. Thus the Church of the Iewes in the olde Teſtament, did farre exceed the Church of the new in good affection, though it came farre ſhort of it in knowledge and apprehenſion.

CHAP. VIII.

Of the Sacraments in generall, the receiuing, and vſe of them.

IN the next place, follow the Queſtions of conſcience touching the third part of Gods Outward worſhip, namely, the Sacraments; and theſe concern either the adminiſtration, or the receiuing of them. The Adminiſtration I wil here let paſſe, and handle thoſe Queſtions onely, that concerne the receiuing and vſe thereof, both in generall & in particular.

Touching the receiuing of the Sacramēts in generall, there is one onely Queſtion:

VVhether the Sacraments miniſtred by Heretickes, Idolatours, and vnſufficient miniſters, be Sacraments or no?

For anſwer hereunto, wee are to know, there be three ſorts of men that may adminiſter the Sacraments. Some are true and lawfull miniſters, lawfully called by God & men to that function, keeping the right forme of the Sacrament according to the inſtitution. Some againe are meere priuate perſons, that haue no authority at all to adminiſter, whom we may oppoſe to the former ſort, as contrary to them in this action. Others againe bee admitted to ſtand in the roome of lawfull miniſters by the acceptation and conſent of men, or by cuſtome, though corrupt: and theſe are in a meane betweene the two former ſorts. Of the firſt there is no queſtion. But the Sacrament adminiſtred by the ſecond ſort, is a meere nullitie; becauſe they haue no calling thereto, neither can they do it of faith: foraſmuch as they haue neither precept nor example out of the word of God. Now for the third ſort, though they be not indeed lawfull paſtours; yet beeing in the place of ſuch, by the conſent, allowance, and cuſtome of men, though corrupt; their action is of force, and the Sacrament which is adminiſtred by them, is indeede a true Sacrament: which I prooue by theſe reaſons:

Firſt, the preaching of the word, and adminiſtration of the Sacrament, are all one in ſubſtance. For in the one the will of God is ſeene, in the other heard. Now the word preached by Heretickes, is the true word of God, and may haue his effect. The Scribes and Phariſies, great Doctours of the Iewes, were not all of the Tribe of Levi, but deſcended from other Tribes. Againe, euen the principall of them liued by extortion and briberie, and were wicked men, yea Heretickes and Apoſtatae, depoſed & excommunicated perſons. And yet becauſe they occupied the places of good teachers, and ſate in the chaire of Moſes, that is, read the doctrine of Moſes law, Chriſt biddeth his diſciples to heare them, Matthew 23. 3. Prouided onely, that they tooke heede of the leauen of their falſe doctrine, and wicked life. Now if the word taught by their miniſterie was powerfull, why may not the Sacraments miniſtred by the Heretickes ſtanding in the roome of true miniſters, bee true Sacraments? In the daies of Paul, Philippians 1. 15. ſome preached Chriſt through enuie and ſtrife, and ſome of good will: what was the Apoſtles iudgement in this caſe? Himſelfe anſwereth, verſ. 18. What then? yet Chriſt is preached all manner of waies, whether it be vnder a pretence, or ſincerely, and therein I ioy, yea, and will ioy.

Secondly, this point is plaine by examples. The Leuitical Prieſts vnder the law were Heretickes, and taught after a ſort the breach of the morall law. Yea, they held Iuſtification by workes, Rom. 10. 3. and yet Circumciſion by them adminiſtred, was in force; neither was the Paſſeouer celebrated by them, or the ſacrifices which they offered, any other then the true Paſſeouer, and true ſacrifices. Iudas was a very hypocrite, yea Chriſt cals him a Diuell, Ioh. 6. 70. and yet hee preached the word at Chriſts commandement, and baptized with the reſt of his Diſciples, Ioh. 4. 1, 2.

Thirdly, the Sacrament, if it bee adminiſtred in the name, and by the power of Chriſt, is the ordinance of God, beeing receiued by faith, yea a true Sacrament of Chriſt, and the force and efficacie thereof, doth not depend vpon the worthineſſe of the Miniſter, but vpon Chriſt. The letters or Epiſtle ſent from one man to another, are authenticall, & ſerue fully to expreſſe the minde of the author, though the meſſenger or carrier be a wicked or a naughtie man. And in like manner, the ſinne of any man that ſtands in the roome of a lawfull Miniſter, doth not nullifie the Sacrament, and therefore not hereſie or inſufficiencie. Saint Cyprian, who liued 300. yeares after Chriſt, was of this opinion, that Sacraments adminiſtred by Heretickes, were no Sacraments. But the Churches of Africa in thoſe times concluded the contrarie againſt him, according to the doctrine that hath bin deliuered.

The vſe. I. By this doctrine they are iuſtly to bee blamed, who would haue their children re-baptized, which were before baptized by the Popiſh Prieſts; becauſe the Sacrament, though adminiſtred by a Papiſt, if hee ſtand in the roome of a true Paſtour, and keepe the forme thereof, is a true Sacrament. II. Others by this doctrine come to be reprooued, that refuſe to receiue the Sacraments at the hands of vnpreaching Miniſters. For though the Miniſter bee vnſufficient, and preach not, yet if hee be called by the Church, hee hath the place of a lawfull Paſtour, his adminiſtration is warrantable, and the Sacrament by him adminiſtred, a true Sacrament.

If it be ſaid, that then the true Sacraments may bee out of the true Church, as in the Church of Rome at this day; becauſe Heretickes and ſuch like miniſters are not of the Church. I anſwer, that there is in the church of Rome, the hidden church of God, and the Sacraments are there vſed, not for the Romiſh Church, but for the hidden Church which is in the middeſt of Papacie: like as the lanterne beareth light not for it ſelfe, but for the paſſengers: yet hence it followes not, that wee ſhould communicate with idolaters, Heretickes, and wicked perſons.

And ſo much of the Adminiſtration of the Sacraments in generall. I come now to the particular Sacraments.

CHAP. IX.

Of Baptiſme.

THe firſt Sacrament in order, is Baptiſme. And the Queſtions touching it, I reduce to fiue heads.

I. Queſtion.

Whether Baptiſme be neceſſary to Saluation, or no?

For anſwer to this Queſtion, wee muſt rightly diſtinguiſh of Neceſſitie. A thing is ſaid to bee neceſſarie, two manner of waies; either abſolutely and ſimply, or in part. Abſolutely neceſſarie is that, which is in all reſpects neceſſarie, and the contrarie wherof is vtterly vnneceſſary. Neceſſarie in part is that, which in ſome reſpects, or vpon certaine cauſes and conſiderations, is neceſſary. This diſtinction premiſed, I anſwer:

Sect. 1.

How Baptiſme is neceſſary, and why?

Firſt, that Baptiſme is neceſſary the ſecond way, in part and reſpectiuely, that is, in diuers and ſundry regards.

I. As the lawfull vſe thereof is a note, whereby the true Church of God is diſcerned and diſtinguiſhed from the falſe church. Not that the Church of God cannot bee a Church without the Sacrament; For it may want Baptiſme for a time, and yet remaine a true Church; as well as the Church of the Iewes in auncient times, wanted circumciſion, for the ſpace of fortie yeares, Ioſh. 5. 6. and yet ceaſed not to bee a true Church, and loued of God.

II. As it ſerues for neceſſary vſes and purpoſes to men of yeares, that are to bee baptized: as firſt, to teſtifie vnto the Church and themſelues, that they are receiued into the bodie of Chriſt, which is the companie and ſocietie of the faithfull. Secondly, to teſtifie their obedience to Gods commaundement, and their ſubiection to his ordinance appointed by him for their good. Thirdly, to bee a neceſſary proppe to vpholde their weakenes, a ſeale to confirme their faith in the couenant of grace, and an inſtrument to conuey Chriſt vnto them with all his benefits.

III. It is neceſſarie to infants, as it ſerues to enter, and admitte them into the viſible Church, and withall to ſignifie their intereſt in the couenant of grace, and conſequently their right and title to life euerlaſting.

Sect. 2.

How Baptiſme is not neceſſarie, and why?

Secondly, I anſwer that Baptiſme is not abſolutely or ſimply neceſſarie, ſo as the partie that dies without it, remaines in the ſtate of damnation, and cannot be ſaued. My reaſons are theſe:

I. Baptiſme is appointed by God, to bee no more but a ſeale annexed vnto, and depending vpon the couenant: therefore wee muſt put a difference betweene it, and the couenant.

The Couenant of grace, and our beeing in Chriſt, is abſolutely neceſſarie: for no man, woman, or childe, can bee ſaued, vnleſſe they haue God for their God. But the ſigne thereof is not. For looke as to the eſſence of a bargaine, the conſent and agreement of the parties alone, is of meere neceſſitie required; and this being yeelded, the bargaine is a bargaine, though it bee neither ſealed, ſubſcribed, nor confirmed by witneſſes; ſo likewiſe a man may be ſaued, if he be within the couenant of grace, though hee haue not receiued the ſeale and ſigne thereof, the Sacrament of baptiſme.

II. The bare want or priuation of baptiſme (when it cannot bee had) is pardonable, and doth not condemne the partie vnbaptized. The theefe vpon the croſſe was ſaued, though hee was neuer baptized, Luk. 23. And ſundrie Martyrs in former times, who were Gods deare children, and died for the maintenance of his truth, though they wanted the outward and viſible baptiſme, yet by Gods mercie they were not deſtitute of the inward, and conſequently were not condemned, but ſaued. And ſo many children vnder the law died before the eight day, vncircumciſed. Yea, when any among them were weake, and could not endure to haue the foreskinne of their fleſh cutte, in probability their circumciſion was deferred, and ſome of them died in the meane time: which neuertheleſſe beeing borne of beleeuing parents, were vndoubtedly ſaued; according to the promiſe of God made to Abraham, I will bee thy God, and the God of thy ſeede. For as Chriſt ſaith of the Sabboth, ſo may wee ſay of circumciſion; It was made for man, and not man for it. And it were a iudgement both raſh and vncharitable, to thinke that all the males of the children of Iſrael that died before circumciſion, were condemned.

Yet on the other ſide, the wilfull contempt, and careleſſe neglect of this ordinance, when it may conueniently bee adminiſtred and receiued, is deadly and damnable. And to them that are guilty of this ſinne, is the threat of God iuſtly denounced, Gen. 17. 14. Euen that perſon ſhall be cut off from his people.

III. The grace and mercy of God is free, and not tyed or bound to the outward elements. Ioh. 3. 8. The winde bloweth where it liſteth, that is, God giues grace, and vouchſafeth fauour, to whome, where, and when it pleaſeth him. And hence it is, that they whome hee would not haue periſh, but come to eternall life, ſhall be ſaued, though they be not partakers of this Sacrament.

IV. Infants borne of beleeuing parents, are holy before baptiſme, and baptiſme is but a ſeale of that holineſſe, 1. Corinth. 7. 14. The children of beleeuing parents are holy. Rom. 11. 16. If the firſt fruites be holy, ſo is the whole lumpe; and if the roote be holy, ſo are the branches. Yea, to them belongs the kingdome of heauen as well as to others. Chriſt ſaith, Suffer litle children, &c. for to them belongeth the kingdome of heauen, Mark. 10. 14.

It is alleadged, that thoſe which are ſanctified haue faith, which infants haue not. Anſ. God ſaith, I will bee thy God, and the God of thy ſeede. By vertue of this promiſe, the parent laies holde on the couenant, for himſelfe and for his childe; and the childe beleeues, becauſe the father beleeues.

It is obiected againe, that infants are borne in originall ſinne, and therefore cannot bee borne holy and ſanctified. Anſw. Euery beleeuing parent ſuſtaines a double perſon. Firſt, as hee is a man, deſcending of Adam, by corrupted ſeede; and thus, beeing himſelfe corrupted and vncleane, his children alſo are corrupt and impure. Secondly, as he is a holy and beleeuing man, ingraffed by faith into Chriſt the ſecond Adam. And thus by his faith, comes his childe to be in the couenant, and partaker of the benefits and priuiledges thereof; and by the ſame faith hee beeing a beleeuer, the guilt of originall corruption, which is in the infant new borne, is not imputed vnto him to condemnation. And for theſe cauſes, the Sacrament of Baptiſme, is not abſolutely and preciſely neceſſarie to ſaluation, but ſo, and in that ſort, as hath beene declared.

Againſt this doctrine it is obiected, that Chriſt ſaith to Nichodemus, Except a man be borne of water and the holy Ghoſt, he cannot enter into the kingdome of God. Ioh. 3. 5.

To this obiection, ſundrie anſwers are giuen. Firſt, if the place be vnderſtood of Baptiſme, then the words may carry one of theſe two ſenſes. Firſt, that our Sauiour directs this ſpeech principally againſt Nichodemus, who was a timorous profeſſour, and remained ignorant, and had long neglected his baptiſme. Secondly, that the kingdome of heauen is here put, not for euerlaſting happineſſe, but to ſignifie the viſible eſtate of the Church of the new Teſtament; and then the meaning is, no man can be admitted into the Church, and made a viſible member thereof, but by the water of baptiſme: neither can any man bee made a liuely member of Chriſt Ieſus, but by the ſpirit, that is, by regeneration, which alone makes the partie that is entred into the Church by baptiſme, to bee a liuely member of the bodie of Chriſt. Secondly, others anſwer, that this place is to bee vnderſtood not of Baptiſme, but ſimply of regeneration, and that Chriſt alludes to the ſayings of the Prophets, which ſpeake of cleane water, Exod. 36. 25. and expounds the ſame in this ſort; Thou Nichodemus, art by profeſſion a Pariſie, and vſeſt many outward waſhings: but know this withall, that vnleſſe thou bee waſhed inwardly by cleane water, that is, be regenerated and renewed by the holy Ghoſt, thou canſt not enter into Gods kingdome. Laſtly, it is anſwered, that the neceſſitie of ſaluation lies not in both, but only in the new birth by the holy Ghoſt; as if Chriſt ſhould ſay, Except ye bee regenerate, and borne anew of the Spirit, which as cleane water, purgeth and A cleanſeth you from your ſinnes, ye cannot be ſaued.

The Vſe. By this doctrine touching the neceſſitie of Baptiſme, are iuſtly challenged two ſorts of men.

The firſt is the Popiſh ſort, who build the abſolute neceſſity of Baptiſme vpon falſe and vnſtable grounds. For they teach in their writings, that all men are borne in ſinne and corruption, and vnleſſe they be cleanſed from it, they can neuer be ſaued. Now Baptiſme (they ſay) is appointed by God, as the onely remedie and ſole meanes whereby they may bee purged from ſinne, and come to ſaluation. And this they ſhew by a compariſon of Bap- B tiſme with the brazen Serpent: which as it was the onely remedie for the cure of thoſe which were ſtinged by ſerpents, ſo is this Sacrament the onely meanes, ſet apart by God, to keep them that are partakers thereof, from the ſting of death and eternall deſtruction.

But the anſwer is plaine out of the former doctrine. That though all men bee conceiued and borne in ſinne, and cannot enter into the kingdome of heauen, except they be cleanſed; yet baptiſme is not of abſolute neceſſitie for this purpoſe. For it is not appointed by God, as the onely remedie of this euill, but onely to bee a ſigne and ſignification of the purging and cleanſing of ſinne, by the blood of Chriſt. Now thoſe that are C within the couenant, may haue their ſinnes remitted by the mercie of God, and that according to the forme of the couenant, though they receiue not the ſigne thereof; ſo bee it they doe not wilfully contemne nor neglect the ſame when it may bee had. Againe, the ſerpent lifted vp by Moſes, in it ſelfe, and by it owne vertue was a bare ſigne, and was no remedie to cure the diſeaſed Iſraelites: but they were cured by their faith in the word of Gods promiſe annexed vnto the ſigne: according to which Dauid ſaith, He ſent his word and healed them, Pſal. 107. 20. And to the ſame effect Auguſtine ſaith, That the cure and health of the Iſraelites, came not from the Serpent, but from Gods commaundement obeyed, and his pro- D miſe beleeued. And ſo is Baptiſme a remedie, and no otherwiſe.

Lib. de mirab. Script. c. 33. Non in ſerpente, ſed in Domini imperio & promiſſo, &c.

The ſecond is, the common ignorant ſort of people, who thinke that an infant dying without baptiſme, dies without chriſtendome; and that it cannot poſſibly be a Chriſtian, vnleſſe it be baptized. This their opinion is very erronious. For by it they make baptiſme the ſeale of the couenant, to be as neceſſary as the couenant it ſelfe. Whereas on the contrary, baptiſme is not ſimply and abſolutely neceſſarie, ſo as the partie dying without it, cannot bee ſaued, but onely in part, as it ſerues to diſtinguiſh the true Church from the falſe, to be a neceſſary ſigne of our admiſſion & entrance into the Church, yea, to confirme our faith in the promiſe of God. Neither is baptiſme of force to make a Chriſtian, but onely to ſignifie and declare a man to bee a Chriſtian, by being within the couenant of grace.

II. Queſtion.

Whether witneſſes, which we commonly call Godfathers and Godmothers, be neceſſary?

To this there are giuen two anſwers.

Firſt, that the vſe of Godfathers and Godmothers, is not ſimply neceſſarie to the Sacrament of baptiſme. For firſt, it ſeemes that of auncient times, the parents of children which were Heathen, and newly conuerted to Chriſtian Religion, were either ignorant and could not, or careleſſe and would not bring vp their children agreeably to the word of God, and the Religion which they newly profeſſed. And hence it was thought meete, that ſome perſons of good knowledge and life, ſhould be called to witneſſe the Baptiſme, and promiſe their care for the childrens education. But now parents amongſt vs beeing better taught and qualified, the other is not of ſuch neceſſitie. Secondly, Chriſt hath inſtituted and ordained in his word, all things fitte, conuenient, and neceſſarie vnto lawfull Baptiſme, amongſt all which, hee hath not anywhere expreſly preſcribed the vſe of Sureties. Thirdly, the whole congregation aſſembled together at the adminiſtration of this Sacrament, do preſent the childe to the Lord, and are witneſſes that the childe is admitted into the Church, and is externally in the couenant. A therefore I take it to bee a fault, when the congregation doth depart before the childe bee baptized. Fourthly, that which is required of them to promiſe and performe, may, yea muſt and ought to be performed of the parents of the baptized; who are by the word of God to bring vp their children in the feare of God.

The ſecond anſwer is, that though ſuch perſons are not neceſſarie to the eſſence of Baptiſme, yet they are not ſimply to be reiected; this alway preſuppoſed, that they be fit men, and well qualified. Their fitneſſe ſtands in foure things.

Firſt, that they be of yeares of diſcretion, ſufficient to vndertake ſuch a charge. And therefore it is a fault, when children are called to be Godfathers and Godmothers, which neither are come to yeares of diſcretion, nor able to conſider what they doe, or ought to doe.

Secondly, that they haue at leaſt ſome knowledge and vnderſtanding, not onely in generall of the principles and groundes of religion, but alſo of the nature and ende of the Sacrament, and of the ſubſtance of the promiſe wherewith they binde themſelues, in the behalfe of their god-children. It was in A auncient times required of ſuch perſons as were to bee witneſſes, that they ſhould know and vnderſtand the Creede, and the Lords prayer. Therefore thoſe are iuſtly to be blamed, that call ſuch perſons to bee witneſſes to their children, which though they haue years ſufficient, yet they haue litle or no knowledge of the grounds of the Catechiſme, or of the bond whereby they oblige themſelues for the good and godly education of the infants in time to come.

Thirdly, that they be knowne to be of an honeſt and reformed life, not iuſtly chargeable of impietie, inciuilitie, or diſhoneſtie: that by their example the children may in time to B come be drawne to holineſſe of life and conuerſation. For how can he that is of a diſſolute and wicked life, bee able to bring others committed to his charge, to the embracing of true religion?

Fourthly that they be carefull to performe their promiſe made in the face of the church, for the good education and inſtruction of the childe in the feare of God, ſpecially when the parents be negligent and careleſſe in that behalfe.

Now the reaſons why theſe Sureties are not to be ſimply reiected, if they be qualified, as hath beene ſaid, are theſe: I. Becauſe this cuſtome though it be not directly grounded vpon Scripture, yet it is not repugnant thereunto. C For beeing rightly vſed and kept, it tendeth to the furtherance of religion and godlineſſe in particular families, and conſequently to the edification of the Church. II. It is no new thing, but an ancient commendable practiſe, continued in the Church of God aboue the ſpace of 120. yeares. III. Becauſe theſe parties doe ſupply the defect of naturall parents when they be wanting, either by death, or by negligence while they liue; if they bee anſwerable to their promiſe made in the behalfe of the children, touching the things that belong to their ſaluation.

Yet further touching theſe perſons, three Queſtions are mooued.

I. Q. What dutie are they to doe in the D behalfe of the partie baptized?

Anſ. Papiſts teach, that the principall and proper act of the Suretie is, the taking of the infant baptized from the hands of the Prieſt, into his owne armes and cuſtodie. But this, though it bee an action neither good nor euill, yet conſidering it may as well be done by another as by him, and the doing of it by another, is no whit preiudiciall to the ende, for which, ſuch perſons were firſt appointed in the Church; namely, the good education of infants baptized; it cannot bee the principall dutie of the Suretie.

But the things required of them, are eſpecially theſe:

I. To be ſpeciall witneſſes of the admiſſion and entrance of the partie baptized, into the Church of God.

II. To binde themſelues by ſolemne promiſe, in the name of the childe, before the whole Church aſſembled, that they will be carefull ſo ſoone as hee comes to yeares of diſcretion, that he be brought vp in the feare and ſeruice of God, and be inſtructed in the principles of faith and repentance, and acquainted with the promiſe made by them in his behalfe, that hee may frame his life thereafter.

III. To haue ſpeciall care of the performance of their promiſe; that by all good means which God hath appointed, both publike, as hearing the word, and receiuing the Sacraments; and priuate, as exhortations and admonitions, in time to come hee ſhall bee mooued & incited to forſake the Diuell, &c. and to pay his vowes made at his Baptiſme.

II. Q. Whether children baptized, come to bee of ſpirituall kinred with the whole Church, by reaſon of their Godfathers and Godmothers?

The Papiſts anſwer yea, and they explane their anſwer in this manner: Looke as by carnall propagation, a man hath a naturall beeing; ſo by the Sacrament of Baptiſme, he hath a ſpirituall beeing in the ſtate of grace, according to which he is borne againe. Now, as by carnall propagation, ariſeth a bond of kinred betweene one man and another: ſo by the receiuing of Baptiſm, there ariſeth a bond of kinred betweene the members of the Church; by meanes whereof, the Sureties become as Fathers and Mothers to the parties baptized.

Wee on the other ſide anſwer negatiuely, that perſons baptized, doe not by their Baptiſme become ſpiritually a-kinne to the Church. Now that this is the truth, and the contrarie doctrine of the Papiſts erroneous, will appeare by theſe reaſons:

I. The Sacrament it ſelfe, doth not giue a ſpirituall beeing, to any man that is partaker thereof: neither is it of force to make a man a Chriſtian, or a member of the inuiſible Church of God. But that which doth this, is the Couenant of grace, wherein is promiſed remiſſion of ſinnes, and life eternall, in and by Chriſt. And the Sacrament, is onely a ſeale of that couenant, and no more.

Now if baptiſme cannot make a Chriſtian, much leſſe can it giue vnto him a ſpirituall beeing in the bodie of Chriſt, and conſequently any ſuch ſpirituall alliance, whereby one member may bee allied vnto another.

II. There is not the ſame reaſon of Baptiſm[illegible]t is of carnall propagation or birth. For Baptiſme is not regeneration it ſelfe, but the Sacrament, that is, the ſigne and ſeale of regeneration. And therefore though naturall kinred comes by carnall ſeede and birth, yet ſpirituall kinred, cannot come to any by baptiſme. III. The Scripture mentions onely two ſorts of kinred, and no more; the one, which ariſeth properly, from ſocietie and communion of blood, which wee call Conſanguinitie; the other, which comes by carnall coniunction of man and woman, in the eſtate of marriage, commonly tearmed Affinity. And beſides theſe, the Scripture acknowledgeth none.

If it bee ſaid, that God is the Father of all beleeuers, and that they are his ſonnes and daughters, & Chriſt their elder brother: and therefore there muſt needes be a ſpirituall alliance betweene them all. I anſwer, it is true: but that this kinred hath his originall from baptiſme, and beginneth with that relation, that is betweene the Sureties and their godchildren in that Sacrament, it is a Popiſh inuention, deuiſed by the wit of man, without ground or warrant in the word of God.

III. Q. But be it, that the Papiſts opinion were true, then a further Queſtion may be mooued:

VVhether ſpirituall kinred contracted by baptiſme, can be a iuſt impediment of marriage between the witneſſes themſelues, or their children?

The Papiſts in their writings anſwer, that ſpirituall alliance, being farre more excellent then carnall, is of much more force, both to hinder a man from marriage, before he marry, and to breake off marriage, when it is conſummate.

Lib. ſent. 4. diſt. 41. quæſt. 1. impedit contrahendum matrimonium, & dirimit contractum. Bell. de matr. lib. 1. cap. 30.

But this doctrine (as the former) is not warrantable. For firſt, they themſelues affirme, that this impediment doth not depend vpon the Law of nature, but vpon the iudgement of the Church. But the eſtate of marriage, ſtands by Gods ordinance, who hath giuen liberty of entrance into it, to all men, that are out of the degrees forbidden in his Law, without exception: and therefore the lawes and conſtitutions of men, cannot preiudice, or take away mans liberty in that behalfe.

Secondly, all beleeuers are brethren and ſiſters in Chriſt, and therefore are ſpiritually allied each to other. Now if this ſpirituall alliance be polluted by mariage, or makes marriage vndertaken, a meere nullitie; then no beleeuer ſhall marrie in the Lord: for Chriſtians by this meanes muſt neuer match with Chriſtians, but with Pagans and Infidels.

Thirdly, this impediment is a ſuperſtitious inuention of Popiſh Canoniſts, onely to increaſe the Treaſurie of their Church, by their multitude of diſpenſations. And it ſeemes that they are either aſhamed of it, or wearie to beare the imputation thereof. For ſome of their owne Canons are againſt it, which doe allow Godfathers children to marrie, and a man to marrie his Godfathers wife. And the Councell of Trent, hath drawne this affinitie into a narrower compaſſe, which before was ſo farre inlarged, allowing the VVitneſſes themſelues to bee man and wife, not vrging all the three kindes of kinred, but onely ſome degrees of compaternitie.

III. Queſtion touching Baptiſme.

Whether children of excommunicate perſons, which are caſt out, and not holden as members of the Church, haue right to Baptiſme?

For better reſoluing of this Queſtion, the ground of the Anſwer is firſt to be laid down, and then the Anſwer directly to be made.

There are two Texts of Scripture commonly alleadged, concerning the force and vſe of Excommunication. The firſt, is Mat. 18. the ſecond, is 1. Cor. 5. The ſcope of them both is, to ſhew, that the man which is excommunicated, is barred from the kingdome of heauen. For hee is not to be holden a true member of the Church, but as a Heathen and a publicane: and therefore is put out of Gods kingdome, and deliuered vp to Satan. Of this weight is Excommunication.

Now in Excommunication, there are three iudgements to bee conſidered. The firſt, of God: the ſecond, of the Church: the third againe, of God.

The firſt is, when God doth hold any obſtinate ſinner, guiltie of his offence, and conſequently guiltie of condemnation, vnleſſe he repent. This is the firſt ſentence. The ſecond is, the iudgement of Gods Church vpon the offender, after that God hath holden him guilty. For the iudgement of the Church followeth the iudgement of God, and doth indeede nothing, but pronounce the partie guiltie, and ſubiect to condemnation. And the difference betweene them both, is onely this; That God holdes the offender guiltie, and the Church declareth him ſo to be. Now the ſecond iudgement is not to bee giuen abſolutely, but with condition of repentance, and ſo farre forth, as man can iudge by the fault committed, as alſo by the word, which giues direction, how to diſcerne of the impenitencie of the ſinner. The third and laſt iudgement is Gods, whereby he ratifies and confirmes that in heauen, which the Church hath done on earth: and this in order followes the ſecond.

This ground being laid downe, I come now to the Anſwer.

Firſt therefore, the parties excommunicate, are in ſome reſpects no members of Chriſts body, and in ſome reſpects they are.

They are not, in two regards. Firſt, in that they are cut off from the companie of beleeuers, by lawful excommunication, and ſo haue no participation with them, either in prayer, hearing the word, or receiuing the Sacraments. The reaſon is: for that the action of the Church ſtands in force; God ratifying A that in heauen, which the Church doth vpon earth. Secondly, becauſe by their ſinne, they haue (as much as in them lieth) depriued themſelues of the effectuall power of Gods Spirit, which might rule and gouerne them.

But in other reſpects they are members, as will appeare, if we conſider the diuers ſorts of members.

Some are members not actually, and in preſent, but in the eternall counſell of God, and are to be in time when they ſhall be called. Thus was Paul before his conuerſion, and therefore he ſaies of himſelfe, that God had ſeparated him from his mothers wombe, and called him by his grace, Gal. 1. 15. Alſo of himſelf and other B beleeuers he ſaies, when we were enemies, wee were reconciled to God, by the death of his Sonne, Rom. 5. 20. Some againe are members onely in ſhew and appearance; of which ſort are hypocrites, which ſeeme by their outward profeſſion, to be that they are not indeede: wherein they reſemble the woodden legge, that is cunningly faſtened to the bodie, but indeede is no legge, nor part of the bodie, whereto it is adioyned. A third ſort are liuely members, which are vnited vnto Chriſt by faith, and haue fellowſhip with God in him, beeing iuſtified, ſanctified, gouerned and preſerued by his ſpirit; and withall doe feele, and ſhew forth the power of the ſame ſpirit dwelling in them. Of theſe Paul ſpeaketh, Rom. 8. 14. As many as are led C by the ſpirit of God, they are the ſonnes of God. The fourth ſort are decaied members, which thogh they belong to Gods election, and are plants truly ingrafted into the vine Chriſt Ieſus, yet for the preſent, haue not a liuely ſenſe of the power, and vertue of the Spirit of Chriſt in them. Theſe may fitly bee reſembled to the legge of a man, or ſome other part, that hath the dead palſie, which though it remaine for ſome time, without feeling, and vncapable of nouriſhment, yet being ioyned to the bodie, it may by vertue of ſome ſtrong medicine, bee recouered, and made whole as the other.

Of this ſort are excommunicate perſons. For in regard of their ingraffing, they are true members, and cannot be quite cutte off from D the bodie of Chriſt, Ioh. 10. 28. though otherwiſe they are not holden ſo to bee, in a threefolde reſpect.

One in regard of men, becauſe they are excluded from their holy communion with the faithfull, by the Churches cenſure. The ſecond, in regard of God, becauſe that which the Church rightly bindeth on earth, is bound in heauen. The third, in regard of themſelues, becauſe for a time, they want the power and efficacie of the Spirit, vntill they be throughly touched with repentance, and beginne (as it were) to liue againe.

Now, though in theſe reſpects, they bee not eſteemed members of the Church, yet the truth is, they are not wholly cut off from the ſocietie of the faithfull. For the ſeede of faith remaineth in them, and that knits the

A bond of coniunction with Chriſt, though the ſenſe thereof be loſt, vntill they repent.

In this caſe, the partie excommunicate is, as a free man in bonds, who vntill he get out of priſon, hath no vſe of his freedome, and yet continues a free-man ſtill, though he remaine in priſon. So alſo the children of God, may ſtill be the children of God, though excluded from the congregation of the Church, for ſome offences.

From this that haue beene ſaid, ariſeth the Anſwer to the Queſtion propounded; namely, that the children of ſuch perſons, as are excommunicated, are (notwithſtanding their excommunication) to be baptized, becauſe B they are indeed, and in the iudgement of charitie, true members of the bodie of Chriſt, though in ſome other regards, they are not in preſent holden ſo to be.

Yet further, beſides the former grounds, conſider theſe reaſons.

Firſt, children of parents, that are profeſſed members of the Church, (though cut off for a time, vpon ſome offence committed) haue right to baptiſme, becauſe it is not in the power of man, to cut them off from Chriſt, though they be excommunicated. Secondly, the perſonall ſinne of the parent may not keepe the bleſſing from the child: and therefore not depriue him of participation of the ordinance of God. Thirdly, wee muſt alway put a difference betweene them, which do not C make ſeparation from the Church, and yet are grieuous offenders: and open Apoſtataes, that ioyne themſelues with the enemies of the Church, to the ruine and ouerthrow of the truth of the Goſpel. Fourthly, wee muſt put a difference betweene thoſe, that haue giuen vp their names to Chriſt, though fallen grieuouſly; and Turkes, and Infidels, that are forth of the Couenant, & neuer belonged to the Church. Laſtly, if the mercie of God enlarge it ſelfe to thouſands, yea to infinite generations: why ſhould man be ſo hard hearted, as to make queſtion, whether ſuch Infants belong to the Couenant, and conſequently keep them from the Sacrament of Baptiſme?

Out of this Queſtion, ariſeth a ſecond;

D Whether children borne in fornication, haue right to baptiſme?

Anſ. They are not to be kept from it. For the wickedneſſe of the parent, ought not to preiudice the childe, in things that belong to his ſaluation.

Yet in this caſe, ſome Cautions are carefully to be obſerued; as firſt, that the parent hold the true ſaith and religion: ſecondly, that hee be by the Miniſter exhorted, to a true humiliation of himſelfe, and to earneſt repentance for his ſinne committed, and that before the child bee baptized. Thirdly, that there bee ſome appointed, to anſwer for the Infant, beſides the parents; and to make ſolemne promiſe openly to the Church, that it ſhall bee carefully brought vp, and inſtructed in the faith. And the ſame is to be obſerued and practiſed, before the baptizing of the children of parents excommunicate.

IV. Queſtion.

How men are to make a right vſe of their baptiſme, when they be come to yeares?

The not obſeruing hereof, is the cauſe of many ſinnes and corruptions in the liues of men. It is commonly holden a great fault in ciuill matters, for a man not to keep his couenants. Much more is it a hainous ſinne before God, not to keepe the promiſes, and pay the vowes made vnto him.

For anſwer therefore to the Queſtion, wee muſt firſt take this for a ground; That baptiſme both for ſignification, force, vſe, & fruit, continues not for a moment of time, but for the whole courſe of a mans life; It doth not reſpect only the time paſt or preſent, but that which is to come, yea, that whole time that a man hath to ſpend, from the very act of his baptiſme to his death. Againe, Baptiſme is the true Sacrament of Repentance, for remiſſion of ſinnes: which beeing once receiued, remaineth a perpetual teſtimonie and pledge of the euerlaſting couenant of God, & of the continuall waſhing away of ſinne in the blood of Chriſt.

This Ground premiſed, I come to the vſe of Baptiſme, which is two-fold.

The firſt is, that it ſerues to be a token, and pledge of Gods fauour towards vs; and that principally three waies.

Firſt, in that it ſealeth and confirmeth to vs, the free pardon and forgiueneſſe of our ſinnes. Thus Cornelius was baptized of Peter, after hee had heard the Goſpel preached, and receiued the holy Ghoſt, that it might be vnto him a pledge of the remiſſion of his ſins, Act. 10.48. And in like manner doth Peter exhort the conuerted Iewes, to repent them of their ſinnes, and to receiue the Sacrament of Baptiſme, as a ſeale and pledge of Gods mercie, in the forgiueneſſe thereof by Chriſt, Act. 2.38.

In regard of this vſe, baptiſme is of great force, to releeue the heart in diſtreſſe. For when any child of God, feeles himſelfe loden with the burden of his ſinnes: the conſideration and remembrance therof, that God hath pardoned them all, and giuen him a ſpeciall, & certaine pledge of his pardon in baptiſme, will ſerue to ſtay and ſupport his ſoule. Yea, though his ſinnes were of force, to make a ſeparation between God and him: yet remembring, that his name is written in the Couenant of God, and that he hath by Gods mercie receiued the ſeale of the Couenant, hee ſhall not need to be much diſmaied. When Satan tempteth him to doubt of his owne eſtate, in regard of his corruption; euen then let him haue recourſe to his Baptiſme, and thinke of the earneſt and pledge of Gods fauour, which he hath receiued. Let him draw out his euidences, ſigned with the ſeale of Gods couenant, made vnto him in Ieſus Chriſt: and that ſhall bee ſufficient to ſtoppe the mouth of Satan, and to repell his temptations.

Secondly, Baptiſme is a pledge of the vertue of Chriſts death. Doe you not know (ſaies Paul) that all we which haue beene baptized into Ieſus Chriſt, haue beene baptized into his death? Rom.6.3. For they that beleeue, are by baptiſme conformed to Chriſt their head, becauſe they are by it, buried together with him into his death, verſ.4.

This point is of excellent vſe in our liues. For it teacheth a man, when his owne corruption mooueth him to ſin, and he is now euen in the combate, the ſpirit luſting againſt the fleſh, and the fleſh againſt the Spirit; euē then, to call to memorie his baptiſme, wherein it pleaſed God, to ſeale vnto him the mortification of his ſin, by the power of Chriſts death: and conſequently to pray earneſtly vnto him, for the continuance of the ſame power in his heart, for the continuall crucifying of the old man; and the vtter deſtroying of the bodie of ſinne, Rom.6.6.

Thirdly, baptiſme is a pledge vnto vs, of the Life of Chriſt, and of our fellowſhip with him therein. For looke, as hee being dead in the graue, raiſed himſelfe to life, by his owne power; euen ſo, and more then ſo, beeing now in heauen glorified, doth hee by the power of his Deitie, raiſe vp his members, from death to life, Rom.6.4. A certaine pledge whereof, he hath giuen vs in this Sacrament. Which alſo affoardeth ſingular comfort & ioy vnto a man, euen in his greateſt extremitie. True it is, that man by nature is dead in ſin; yet God of his mercie, ſealeth vnto him in baptiſme, his riſing from the death of ſinne to newneſſe of life. True it is againe, that all men muſt die. Yet this is our comfort, that in baptiſme God hath ſealed to vs, euen our riſing from the graue to life euerlaſting, and all by the vertue & power of Chriſts reſurrection. This is a comfort of all comforts, able to vphold the ſoule of man, euen in the houre of death.

The ſecond Vſe of Baptiſme is, that it ſerues to bee a notable meanes of our death vnto ſinne, and that three waies.

Firſt, by putting vs in minde, of mortifying the fleſh, and crucifying our owne corruptions. For if we bee baptized into the death of Chriſt, as Paul ſaith, Rom.3. then ought wee not to continue in ſinne, but to labour by all meanes, as by prayer, by faſting, by the word preached, and by auoyding all occaſions of offence, to kil and deſtroy the corruption of our nature, and the wickedneſſe of our hearts, Gal.5.24.

A Secondly, it cauſeth vs to dedicate our ſelues wholly, vnto God and Chriſt, remembring, that wee once offered our ſelues to bee baptized, (in the preſence of the whole congregation) in token that we ſhould euer afterward, conſecrate our ſoules and bodies vnto the Lord, and wholly renounce and forſake the fleſh, the world, and the diuell.

Thirdly, it cauſeth vs to labour, to keepe and maintaine peace and vnitie with all men; but ſpecially with Gods people. For Baptiſme is a ſolemne teſtimonie, of the bond of mutuall loue and fellowſhip, both of Chriſt with his members, and of the members one with another. To this ende Paul ſaith, that we are all by one ſpirit, baptized into one body, 1.Cor. B 12.13. yea, and Baptiſme is one of thoſe things, whereby the vnitie of the ſpirit is preſerued in the bond of peace. Chap.4.5.

V.Queſtion.

VVhether a man falling into ſinne, after he is baptized, may haue any benefite of his Baptiſme?

Anſw. He may if he repent. And the reaC ſons are theſe.

Firſt, his Indentures & Euidences remaine whole, in reſpect of God, and his name is not put out of the couenant. Which [illegible] otherwiſe in the Euidences of men. For if they be once cancelled, a man cannot haue his name put into them againe.

Secondly, Baptiſme is indeed (as hath bin ſaid) the Sacrament of Repentance; and (as it were) a planke or board to ſwimme vpon, when a man is in danger of the ſhipwracke of his ſoule. Therefore if a man repent, & be heartily ſorie for his ſinnes committed, hee may haue recourſe to his baptiſme, wherein was ſealed vnto him, the pardon of all his ſinnes D paſt, preſent, and to come: he ſtanding to the order of his baptiſme, beleeuing & repenting.

Thirdly, to them that fall euen after Baptiſme, there is hope of repentance, and conſequently of the fauour of God, if they bee touched in heart with true remorſe and ſorrow for their offences. For hence it was, that Paul calles the Galatians (fallen after they had bin baptized) to the remembrance of the fauour of God, promiſed vnto them in the Couenant, and ſealed in their baptiſme, Gal.3.3. 19.27. In the ſame manner doth Iohn call the Churches of Aſia, that had left their firſt loue, to repentance and conuerſion, Apoc.2. 5.16. And the ſaid Iohn, in Eccleſiaſticall hiſtorie is ſaid, to haue reclaimed a young man, who had moſt grieuouſly fallen after his Baptiſme. Euſeb. Eccleſ. Hiſt.l.3 c.23.

CHAP. X.

Of the Lords Supper.

THus much concerning the Sacrament of Baptiſme. Now we come to the Sacrament of the Lords Supper; concerning the vſe whereof there are two principall Queſtions mooued.

I. Queſtion.

How farre forth men haue libertie, to vſe or not vſe the Lords Supper?

For the anſwering hereof, I propoũd three Rules.

The firſt: euery man of yeares, liuing in the Church, and being baptized, is bound in conſcience by Gods commandement, to vſe the Lords Supper. In the inſtitution of the Supper, the Lord gaue a Sacramentall VVord; whereof there be two parts: a Commaundement, and a Promiſe. The commandement is expreſſed in theſe tearmes: Take, eate, drinke, doe ye this. And it binds all men in the church that are baptized, to the vſe of the Lords Supper.

The Second Rule. Euery man of yeares baptized, is to receiue it often. 1. Cor. 11. 26. As oft as ye ſhall drinke it in remembrance of me. The reaſon is, becauſe we haue need continually to feed on Chriſt. And herein the Lords Supper differeth from Baptiſme; becauſe by Baptiſme, a man is once onely grafted into Chriſt: but beeing in Chriſt, hee hath neede often and continually to be fed in him, to life eternall. And this often nouriſhment of the beleeuer, is ſealed vnto him, by the often vſe of this Sacrament.

The third Rule. Euery man is to receiue, and vſe the Lords Supper, according to the laudable cuſtome of that Church, whereof he is a member, vnleſſe there be a iuſt impediment. A iuſt impediment is that, which bars a man from the vſe of the Supper, as Suſpenſion, Contagious and incurable ſickneſſe, Abſence vpon a iuſt and weightie cauſe, as when a man is in his iourney, and ſuch like.

The reaſon of the Rule is; firſt, if any man refuſe to receiue it, when he may conueniently, hauing no iuſt impediment; ſo doing, hee neglects and contemnes the ordinance of God. Secondly, for a man to abſtaine, when he is called to receiue it, though haply hee may be excuſed, in regard of ſome reaſon inwardly knowne to himſelfe; yet his abſtinence is a bad example, and may giue offence to others. Thirdly, the man that may receiue and yet will not, doth in effect, ſuſpend, and withhold himſelfe, from the benefite of this holy Sacrament.

A Now theſe three Rules, as they ſerue directly to anſwer the Queſtion in hand, ſo they do plainely diſcouer ſome errours and faults in the practiſe of ſundry perſons in theſe daies. Some there bee, that thinke it ſufficient to receiue the Communion once by the yeare, namely, at Eaſter time. Whereas on the contrary, it is to be vſed, as oft as may be; conſidering that it is nothing, but the ſhewing forth of the Lords death till he come: which is not once or twiſe in the yeare, but often, yea continually to be remembred. Other there are that take libertie to themſelues, to come to this Table, and abſtaine at their pleaſure; as if it were a thing arbitrarie to themſelues; which notwithſtanding the Lord hath enioyned B by expreſſe commandement, as hath bin ſaid.

But ſome alleadge for this their practiſe, that they are at variance with ſuch and ſuch perſons, that haue done them wrong, & whom they cannot forgiue; and in this reſpect, they were better abſtaine, then come vnprouided. To whome it may be ſaid; that their vnfitnes in this and other reſpects, ought to be a ſtrong motiue to induce them, at leaſt to vſe all holy indeauour, to prepare themſelues euery day, rather then a meanes to keepe them backe. For if a man ſhould abſtaine vpon euery occaſion of variance, diſcontentment, and infirmitie, he ſhould neuer receiue, and ſo conſequently haue no benefit by this ordinance of C God. Daily preparation therefore is the more neceſſarie, that when they be called and haue opportunitie, they may come as welcome gueſts, vnto that heauenly banquet.

II. Queſtion.

How may a man rightly vſe the Lords Supper, to his comfort and Saluation?

Anſ. Three things are required thereunto, A right Preparation, a right Receiuing, and D a right Vſe of it afterward.

Sect. 1.

That Preparation is needefull, the commaundement of the Apoſtle plainely ſhewes, which is directed to all Communicants without exception, 1. Cor. 11. 28. Let a man, that is, let euery man examine himſelfe.

Now that a man may be rightly prepared, hee muſt bring with him foure ſeuerall things.

Firſt, Knowledge of the foundation of Religion, ſpecially of the vſe of both the Sacraments. That this is neceſſarie to Preparation, it appeareth by that which Paul requireth in a good Communicant, 1. Cor. 11. 26. to wit, the ſhewing forth of Chriſts death, which is done by confeſſion and thankſgiuing: and theſe two cannot be performed without knowledge.

The ſecond thing required, is Faith. For al

Sacraments are ſeales of the righteouſnes of faith, Rom. 4.11. Now Faith is hereby diſcerned, when the heart of the beleeuer, contents it ſelfe only with Chriſt, the matter of ſaluation; and doth beleeue, not only that there is a remiſſion of ſinnes in generall, but that his ſinnes are forgiuen to him, in particular.

The third, is Repentance, ſtanding in a heartie ſorrow for ſinnes committed, in a hatred and deteſtation of the ſame, and in a reſolued purpoſe of amendment, and obedience for time to come.

Here we muſt remember, that renewed Repentance for ſinnes committed, is principally required before the Sacrament. For the Apoſtle chargeth the beleeuing Corinths, with vnworthie receiuing, becauſe they came in their ſinnes, without renouation of their repentance.

The fourth, is Charitie towards man. For this Sacrament is a Communion, whereby all the receiuers, ioyntly vnited together in loue, doe participate of one and the ſame Chriſt. And therfore, as no man in the old law, might offer his Sacrifice, without a fore-hand agreement with his brother; ſo no Communicant may partake with others at this Table, without reconciliation, loue, and charitie.

Now further touching Preparation, there are three Caſes of Conſcience to be reſolued.

I. Caſe. What ſhall a man doe, if after preparation, he findes himſelfe vnworthie?

Anſ. There are two kinds of vnworthines; of an euill conſcience, and of infirmitie: Vnworthines of an euill conſcience is, when a man liues in any ſinne, againſt his conſcience. This we muſt eſpecially take heede of. For it is proper to the Reprobate; and he that comes to the Table of the Lord vnworthily, in this ſenſe, queſtionleſſe he ſhal eate his own iudgement, if not condemnation. The vnworthines of infirmitie is, when a man truly repents and beleeues, and makes conſcience of euery good duty, but yet ſees and feeles wants in them all, and in regard thereof, himſelfe vnfit to the Supper. Such vnworthines cannot iuſtly hinder a man from comming to this Sacrament, neither is it a ſufficient cauſe to make him to abſtaine. The reaſon is, becauſe the Lord requires not therein, perfection of faith, and repentance; but the truth and ſinceritie of them both, though they be imperfect.

If it be demaunded, how the truth of faith and repentance may be knowne? I anſwer, by theſe notes. I. If our faith be directed vpon the right obiect, Chriſt alone. II. If there be a hungring and thirſting after his bodie and blood. III. If we haue a conſtant and ſerious purpoſe, not to ſinne. IV. If there follow a change in the life. Thus we reade, that many of the Iewes, in the daies of Hezechias, came to Hieruſalem, and did eate the Paſſeouer, which had not cleanſed themſelues, according to that which was written in the Law. And yet, for thoſe among them, that had prepared their whole hearts, to ſeeke the Lord, the text ſaith, that God heard the prayer of Hezechias, and healed the people, though they were not cleanſed, according to the purification of the Sanctuarie, 2. Chro. 30.18, 19, 20.

II. Caſe. Whether it be requiſite to preparation, that a man ſhould come faſting to this Supper?

Anſ. It is not neceſſarie. For in the Primitiue Church, Chriſtians did firſt feaſt, and at the end of their feaſt, receiued the Lords Supper. And if receiuers bring with them, attentiue mindes, reuerent and ſober hearts, it matters not, whether they come faſting or not. The kingdome of God ſtands not in meates and drinkes, as Paul ſaith, Rom. 14.17.

III. Caſe. Whether ſuch perſons, as are at contention, and goe to law one with another, may with good conſcience, come to the Lords table? The reaſon of the Queſtion is, becauſe men thinke, when they goe to law, that they doe not forgiue.

Anſ. There be three kinds of forgiueneſſe, of reuenge, of the penalty, and of iudgement. Of reuenge, when men are content to lay aſide all hatred and requitall of euill. Of penaltie, when beeing wronged, they are content to put the matter vp, and not proceede to reuenge by inflicting puniſhment. Of iudgement, when a man is willing to eſteeme and iudge things badly done, as well done, and to iudge a bad man, no euill perſon, nor an enemie, though he be an enemie.

Of theſe three, the firſt is alwaies neceſſary. A man is bound in conſcience, to forgiue the reuenge, and leaue that to the Lord, to whome vengeance properly belongeth. But to the forgiueneſſe of penalty and iudgement, we are not alway bound. We muſt ſhun and decline iniuries offered, as much as poſſibly we can; but when they be offered, wee may with good conſcience, ſeeke a remedy of them, and vſe any lawfull meanes to defend our ſelues.

Therefore I anſwer to the Queſtion thus: That if a man going to law with another, forgiues him in regard of reuenge, when he comes to the Lords table, he doth his duty. For doing that, he is not bound to the other, as hath beene ſaid.

Sect. 2.

The ſecond thing, in the right vſe of the Lords Supper, is the right receiuing of it. Wherein there be two things required.

Firſt, the renewing of our Knowledge, or Generall faith. And then ſecondly, the renewing of our Speciall Faith in Chriſt.

Let the reaſon of both be obſerued. This Sacramēt containeth many particular ſignes, as not onely the bread and wine, but the actions about the ſame. The Signes may be thus diſtinguiſhed. Some of them are repreſenting ſignes, ſome are ſignes applying.

Repreſenting ſignes are ſuch, as doe liuely ſet forth vnto vs Chriſt with all his benefits, as the bread and the wine, the breaking, and the powring. Applying are thoſe,that doe appropriate the ſame; as, the giuing and receiuing of the bread and wine. The firſt ſort ſerue properly to renew our knowledge: the ſecond,to confirme the ſame by application.

Now anſwerable to the ſcope of the Sacrament, muſt be our right receiuing, which conſiſteth in renewing of our knowledge and faith,in the myſterie thereof.

Our knowledge is renewed principally, by meditation in the vſe of the Supper, after this manner.

Firſt,when we ſee two ſignes to be receiued, we muſt call to minde, that Chriſt is our perfect Sauiour, that is, both bread and water of life.

Heb.7.25.

Secondly, when we behold the bread and wine,ſet apart by the Miniſter, and conſecrated, by repeating the promiſe, and prayers made for that end, we muſt remember, that Chriſt was ordained and appointed by God, to be our Mediatour and Sauiour, Ioh.6,27. Act.3.23.36.

Thirdly, when we ſee the bread broken, and wine powred out, we are to meditate of Chriſt,that was crucified for vs, and broken, both by the firſt death, and paines of the ſecond, whereby life and righteouſneſſe was procured vnto vs.

Fourthly, the giuing of the elements into the receiuers hands,offers vnto our meditation,thus much: That God doth truly and really giue Chriſt,with his merits and efficacie, to euery beleeuing receiuer.

On the other ſide, our Faith is renewed by apprehenſion and application,in this maner. When the Miniſter giues the bread & wine, and the Communicant receiues them, at the ſame time,are we to lift vp our hearts to heauen, to apprehend Chriſt by faith,beleeuing him,with all his benefits to be ours: that hee was made man for vs, that he ſuffered, and died for the remiſſion of our ſinnes. For theſe outward ſymbolicall or ſacramentall actions ſerue to no other end, but to ſignifie vnto vs theſe inward actions of the minde and will, whereby we apprehend and receiue Chriſt,to our ſaluation.

Here by the way, two Caſes are propounded.

I. Caſe. What is to be done,if a man,after often receiuing, ſtill doubteth, whether he hath faith or no?

Anſw. He muſt ſtriue againſt doubting,and indeauour to beleeue; beeing heartily ſorrie for the weakeneſſe and infirmitie of his faith. And let him withall conſider and remember, that God hath not onely giuen his promiſe, but ſet apart this Sacrament, to be a ſpeciall ſigne and pledge of his mercie contained in the promiſe, for the vpholding and ſtrengthening of mans faith.

But ſome man will ſay: Mine indeauour is nothing,if doubting preuaile. Anſw. It is not ſo. For if a man can be heartily ſorrie for his infirmitie,if he ſtriue to beleeue, if in heart he hungreth and thirſteth after Chriſt, faith is begunne, and he in ſome ſort doth apprehend Chriſt. The poore beggar by the high way ſide, enioyeth the almes that is giuen him, though he receiue it with a lame and leprous hand. The ſtomacke that loathes phyſicke, if it receiues into it at the firſt, but one droppe of the potion preſcribed, and that in very weake and fainting manner,it wil be able at length to take benefit by a greater quantitie, and in the meane time it receiues good. The man that is in cloſe priſon, if he ſees but one little beame of the Sunne, by a ſmall creuiſe: by that very beame he hath vſe of the Sunne, though he ſeeth not the whole body of the Sunne. In like manner, though our faith,the hand of our ſoule,be mingled with weakneſſe and corruption; though we feele neuer ſo little meaſure of Gods grace in vs: yea, though our knowledge be neuer ſo ſmall, yet it is an argument,that the Spirit of God beginnes to worke in our hearts, and that we haue by Gods mercy,begunne to lay hold on Chriſt.

It will be ſaid further: If I feele not Chriſt giuen vnto me by God, I doe not,nay, I cannot beleeue. Anſw. In nature it is true, that Experience beginnes firſt,and then followes Aſſurance, but in ſpirituall and diuine things, there is a contrary courſe to be taken. For here we muſt beginne with faith, & in the firſt place, ſimply beleeue Gods promiſes,& afterward we come, by the goodneſſe of God, to feele and haue experience of his mercie. This point was notably practiſed by Iehoſaphat, who beeing in a greate extremitie, and ſeeing no way to eſcape,practiſed his faith in the firſt place, and ſaid, Lord, we know not what to do, but our eyes are towards thee, 2.Chr.20.12. And the like he taught the people at the ſame time, verſ.20. Put your truſt in the Lord,and ye ſhall be aſſured. Thus Abraham is ſaid, aboue hope,to beleeue vnder hope the promiſe of God, euen againſt ſenſe,reaſon, & experience,Rom 4,18.

II. Caſe. If in the very inſtant of receiuing, a man feele his heart ſo hard, that he cannot lift it vp vnto God, what is then to be done.

Anſ. Firſt,hardneſſe of heart is twofold, ſenſible, and inſenſible. The inſenſible hardneſſe of heart,is a great and dangerous iudgment. But the ſenſible & felt hardneſſe, which is in Gods children,and which they feele and bewaile in themſelues, is rather a bleſſing, then a curſe. Of this,the people of God complained, Eſa. 63.17. And it muſt not diſcourage any Communicant,but rather comfort him, becauſe it is a ſigne of grace. For if there were no grace in the heart, corruption and hardneſſe could not be felt.

Secondly, I anſwer,that the benefit of the Sacrament, is not tyed to the very inſtant of receiuing,but if before and after,a man lift vp his heart to God, he ſhall find comfort, though for the preſent, he hath not ſo liuely ſenſe and feeling thereof,as he deſireth. This alway prouided, that the ſame partie be diſpleaſed with himſelfe, that he cannot doe that which he would and ought, nor in that meaſure that is required. And ſuch a one muſt conſider this to his comfort, that though he doe not apprehend Chriſt, yet Chriſt apprehendeth and accepteth him.

Sect. 3.

Right vſe after receiuing.

In the third place; after the receiuing of the Sacrament, two things are required.

Firſt, that Thanks be giuen vnto God, not onely in word, but in euery action of our life, for Chriſt and all his benefits. Secondly, that not onely for the preſent, but euer afterward, ſtill we renew our faith, repentance, and obedience.

But what is a man to doe, if after receiuing, he finde no comfort? Anſ. Firſt, he muſt examine, whether he hath truly beleeued and repented, yea or no. If he hath not, then the fault is in himſelfe, and not in Gods ordinance. If he hath, let him not be diſmaied, for the ioy of the Spirit is ſowne in his heart, and though it lie hid for a time, yet at length it wil ſhew it ſelfe, Pſal. 97.11.

CHAP. XI.

Of Adoration.

THe Fourth Head of the outward worſhip of God, is Adoration; wherein we conſider two things. Firſt, what it is? Secondly, what be the Queſtions propounded concerning it?

Sect. 1.

What Adoration is.

For the former. Adoration in generall, is an outward Worſhip, ſignifying and teſtifying the inward worſhip of the heart. More ſpecially, by it we muſt conceiue, the bowing of the head, and knee; the bending and proſtrating of the body; the lifting vp of the hands, eyes, and ſuch like.

Adoration is two-fold; Religious, or Ciuill.

Religious Adoration, is that worſhip of God, in which Religion and Godlines is exerciſed, expreſſed, and ſignified. In it there be two things alwaies ioyned together, and yet diſtinctly to be conſidered. The firſt and principall, beeing the foundation of all the reſt, is the intention of the minde, whereby God is conceiued, as an abſolute and omnipotent Lord, knowing all things, yea the heart of man; hearing the prayers of all men, in all places, at all times; the author, preſeruer, and giuer of all good things. The ſecond, depending vpon the former, is the outward proſtrating of the body, as the bowing of the knee, and ſuch like, for this end, to teſtifie our ſubiection vnto God, as our abſolute Lord, &c. This is it, which makes Adoration a true religious worſhip.

The other kind of Adoration, is Ciuill, pertaining to the ſecond Table, tearmed by A ſome ſociall, becauſe it is the adoration or worſhippe, that fellow-creatures giue one to another. And this (as the former) hath in it two things. The one is, the Intention of him, that performeth it, which muſt be this; That the creature worſhipped, is indued with excellent gifts of God: or, that he hath a power of gouernement ouer vs. For one of theſe two, is euer the Ground of ciuill Adoration. The other is, the Action or outward Geſture of the bodie, in token that the creature worſhipped, is indued with excellent gifts, and graced with authoritie before named. Here we muſt remember, that the bowing of the body, &c. and in generall, all bodily geſture performed, is one and the ſame, both in Religious, and Ciuill B worſhip, and the diſtinction ſtandeth onely in the intent of the minde.

Sect. 2.

Now the Queſtions about Adoration, are two.

I. Queſtion.

To what thing is Adoration due, and in what manner?

Anſ. We muſt diſtinguiſh the things that are, and they be of three ſorts, or rankes: In the firſt ranke, comes God the Creator, in the ſecond, the creatures: in the third, the Worke of the creatures.

C For the firſt, Adoration that is due to God the Creator, muſt not be ſociall; (for we are not Gods mates and companions) but only Religious. Yea, all religious worſhip is due to God, and to him alone: which I prooue thus. The Diuell when he tempted our Sauiour, deſired no more of him, but the proſtrating of his body, yet vpon this ground, that he was the giuer and diſpoſer of all the kingdomes of the earth. But Chriſt denies it, and anſwers: Thou ſhalt worſhip the Lord thy God, and HIM ONELY ſhalt thou ſerue, Mat. 4.10. Againe, the very ſcope of Religious Adoration is, to acknowledge the Godhead, and the properties thereof. And hereupon, it muſt be giuen to God alone, and conſequently not to the D creature, vnleſſe we will acknowledge a godhead in the creature.

Here we are to remember two Caueats, touching Religious Adoration.

Firſt, if Adoration be giuen to the true God, with a falſe and erronious intention, it makes him an Idol. For example: If the body be bowed, with this intent to worſhip God out of the Trinitie, as the Turke doth, or if he be worſhipped out of the Son, with the Iew; thus doing, we worſhip not the true God, but an Idol. The reaſon is, becauſe God is ſo to be conceiued of vs, as he hath manifeſted himſelfe in his owne word, and no otherwiſe. If otherwiſe, God is not conceiued, but an Idol or fiction of the braine, and the Adoration is not done to God, but to the Idol.

A Secondly, to worſhip God in, at, or before an Image, is idolatry and ſuperſtition; and God ſo worſhipped, is made an Idol. For he that thus worſhips him, bindeth his preſence, operation, and grace, to thoſe places, to which God neuer bound himſelfe, or his preſence, &c. God hath not appointed Images, to be pledges of theſe things, either by promiſe, or commandement. Hence it followes, that the man, which worſhips God otherwiſe then he would be worſhipped, or lookes to be heard where God will not heare, is an Idolater. Againe, God expreſſely forbiddes the worſhip of his Maieſtie, in, at, or before any creature in heauen or earth, Deut. 4. 16, 17, 18, 19.

B But the Idolater in excuſe of his ſinne, is wont to pretend many things.

Firſt, that when he worſhippeth, he intends not to worſhip the Image, but God in the Image. To this we anſwer, that it matters not what his meaning is. For let him intend what he will, if God deteſteth that manner of worſhip, it is not to be tendred vnto him, in any ſort. The Iſraelites worſhipped not the calfe it ſelfe, but God in the calfe, Exod. 32. 8. yet there Moſes ſaith, that they worſhipped an idol.

Secondly, hee alleadgeth, that in the olde Teſtament, God was worſhipped before the Arke; and that there hee promiſed to heare the prayers of his people. Anſwer. The reaſon is not alike. C For they had an expreſſe commaundement giuen them by God, touching Adoration before the Arke, and a promiſe that they ſhould be accepted and heard. But the idolater hath no ſuch commaundement, or promiſe.

Thirdly hee obiecteth, that Subiects doe kneele downe before the chaire of eſtate in the abſence of the King or Queene, in token of ſubiection due vnto them: and therefore much more may they to the Images of God, and Saints in heauen glorified. Anſw. This reaſon is alſo inſufficient. For the kneeling before the chaire of eſtate, is a meere ciuill Teſtimonie of ciuill worſhippe, and beeing referred to this end, to ſhew loyaltie and ſubiection to lawfull Princes, it ſtands in force D by the commandement of God. But there is no ſuch warrant from Gods word, for bowing to images: neither is it his will that they ſhould bee tokens, and pledges of his preſence.

The ſecond ſort of things that bee, are the creatures, which muſt bee diſtinguiſhed into foure kindes. I. VVicked ſpirits. II. Good Angels. III. Liuing men. IV. Men departed.

Touching wicked ſpirits or diuels, the queſtion is, VVhat is the Adoration that is due vnto them?

Anſw. They are the enemies of God, and accurſed of him: therefore no honour or ſeruice belongs vnto them, by his will and appointment. And for that very cauſe, wee are to haue no dealing with them at all. Nay, we are vtterly to renounce, and abandon whatſoeuer things come from the diuell, or his inſtruments: as namely, all Spels, Charmes, Inchantments, &c. which ſerue to the working of wonders, and yet haue no ſuch vertue giuen them from God for that ende, either by creation, nature, word, or inſtitution.

Now concerning the good Angels, If they did now appeare vnto vs, and wee had certen knowledge thereof, we might adore them. But how? only with ciuill and ſociall worſhip. For ſo we reade, Gen. 19. 1. that Lot ſeeing two Angels comming towards Sodome, roſe vp to meete them, & bowed himſelf with his face to the ground. By which example it appeareth, that though Angels may bee adored, yet not with Religious, or that which is mixed with Religious worſhip, but with worſhip purely and meerely ciuill. VVhereupon it was, that the Angel refuſed the worſhippe done vnto him by Iohn, ſaying, See thou do it not: I am thy fellow ſeruant, and one of thy brethren, &c. Reu. 19. 10. I adde moreouer, that ſith at this day, the Angels appeare not vnto vs, we may not worſhip them at all, either in ciuill or religious manner, albeit we muſt euer haue a reuerent eſtimation of them.

As for liuing men, Adoration meerely ciuil is only due vnto them, & that in reſpect of the gifts of God, which we ſee to be in them, as alſo of their authority & place, which they haue amongſt men. This is expreſly enioyned in the fifth Commaundement, Honour thy father, &c. and confirmed alſo by the example of Abraham, who ſtood vp, & bowed himſelfe before the people of the land the Hittites, Gen. 23. 7. Prouided alwaies, that this adoration bee according to the laudable cuſtome of the countrey, where they liue.

But for worſhippe either ſimply religious, or mixt, it is in no ſort to bee yeelded them. Thus Peter (when Cornelius met him, and fell downe at his feete) refuſed to accept of the honour done vnto him; which notwithſtanding was not a diuine, but a mixed kinde of worſhip, performed vnto Peter in a reuerent opinion of his perſon, as beeing more then an ordinarie man, Act. 10. 25, 26. In like manner, Mordecai the Iew denied to worſhip Haman, becauſe the honour which the king appointed to bee giuen vnto him, was an exceſſiue honour, hauing ſome diuine worſhip in it, ſuch as was done to himſelfe. Of the ſame ſort is the kiſſing of the Popes feete, which indeede is ciuill worſhip, but mixed with religious. For it is rendered vnto him, as to the Vicar of Chriſt, and one that cannot erre: the like to which, is not done to any Emperour or Potentate on earth.

Laſtly, touching dead men, or Saints departed, as Peter, Paul, and the reſt; all the worſhip wee owe vnto them, is no more but a reuerent eſtimation of their perſons, and imitation of their vertues. Religious or ciuill

Adoration due vnto them, wee acknowledge none: becauſe neither we haue to deale with them, nor they with vs. Therefore Romiſh Adoration of them wee renounce, as flat idolatry: conſidering it giues vnto them a Diuinity, making thẽ preſent in all places, to know our hearts, and heare our prayers at al times, which is the prerogatiue of God alone.

Now for vnreaſonable creatures, no Adoration at all appertaineth to them, but onely a reuerent, and holy vſe of them. For Adoration, is a ſigne of Subiection of the inferiour to the ſuperiour; but man is their ſuperiour: and therefore he is to do them no worſhip or ſeruice. And hereupon we iuſtly condemne the Adoration of the reliques of Saints, of the bread and wine in the Sacrament, &c.

The third ſort of things, is the worke of the creature, to wit, images. Where, if it bee demaunded, what Adoration is due to them? I anſwer, none at all. Reaſons. 1. VVee haue an expreſſe inhibition to the contrary, in the ſecond commaundement, Thou ſhalt not bow downe to them, nor worſhip them, &c. 2. The ſuperiour muſt performe no adoration to the inferiour. Now though it ſhould be granted, that they were the Images of God, yet man is a more excellent image then they, and they are inferiour not only to him, but euen to the baſer ſort of creatures. The worme is one of the baſeſt creatures vpon the earth, yet it is the worke of God. The image is a worke not of God, but of man. Man therefore may as well in all reaſon, and better, worſhippe the worme, then the image.

CHAP. XII.

Of outward Confeſſion.

THe fifth Head of Gods outward worſhippe, is Confeſſion. I meane not the Ordinary or Eccleſiaſticall Confeſſion, but that which is made before the Aduerſarie. Concerning which, there be many Queſtions commonly made.

I. Queſtion.

Whether Confeſſion of faith be neceſſary, and when?

Anſ. That Confeſſion is neceſſarie, it appeares by manifeſt teſtimonies of Scripture, 1. Pet. 3. 15. Bee readie to giue an anſwer alwaies to euery man, that asketh you a reaſon of the hope that is in you. Here is a flat commaundement for Confeſſion. Againe, Rom. 10. 9, 10. If thou ſhalt confeſſe with thy mouth, & beleeue with thy heart thou ſhalt be ſaued. For with the heart man beleeueth vnto righteouſneſſe, and with the mouth man confeſſeth to ſaluation. And Mark. 8. 38. Whoſoeuer ſhall be aſhamed of me in this adul- A terous generation, of him ſhall the ſonne of man bee aſhamed alſo, when he commeth in the glorie of his father, with his holy Angels. This is graunted of all Diuines, ſaue onely of ſome peſtilent Hereticks.

The ſecond part of the Queſtion is, when Confeſſion is to be made?

For anſwering whereof, this muſt bee remembred for a Ground, that there is a diſtinction to bee made, betweene Commaundements affirmatiue, and negatiue. The negatiue bindeth at all times, and to all times. For it is not lawfull at any time for a man to doe euil. The affirmatiue binds at, and in all times, but not to all times. For it commaunds a duty to be done, which neuertheleſſe is not at all B times to bee done. For example: To giue almes, is preſcribed by an affirmatiue commaundement, and yet almes are to bee giuen onely at fit times and occaſions. Hereupon it pleaſed the Lord to propound part of the Morall Law, in negatiue tearmes, becauſe negatiues are of greater force. Now Confeſſion beeing commanded not by a negatiue, but by an affirmatiue commaundement, wee are not bound therunto, at, and to all times, but when iuſt occaſion is offered.

VVhen then (may ſome ſay) are the eſpeciall times, in which Confeſſion is to be made before the Aduerſarie?

Anſ. There are two principally, to which all the other may bee reduced. The firſt is, C when wee are examined touching our Religion, by them that are in authority, as by Magiſtrates, Princes, Iudges, &c. For at ſuch time wee are lawfully called to make confeſſion of our faith, and may do it with boldneſſe. Thus much the place before named importeth, where wee are enioyned to bee readie to make an account, &c. 1. Pet. 3. 15. that is, not to euery examiner, but to thoſe alone, who haue power and authority giuen them by God, for that purpoſe. And the ſame is implyed in Chriſts ſpeech to his Apoſtles, Matth. 10. 18. And ye ſhall bee brought before gouernours and Kings for my ſake, to witneſſe to them, and to the Gentiles. And in this caſe, not to make profeſſion of our faith, is in effect to deny Chriſt, to D ſcandalize the Church, and greatly to preiudice the truth. The ſecond time of confeſſion is, when in the want thereof, Gods glory is directly impeached, the ſaluation of men hindered, and our neighbour offended. And then we are neceſſarily to confeſſe, though no examination be made.

If it be here asked, How wee may be able to diſcerne of this time? The anſwer is, by Chriſtian wiſedome, which teacheth vs, that when by our ſilence, wicked men are emboldened to ſpeake euill of Gods word, and weake ones occaſioned to fall from the faith, then is the fitteſt time to ſtand in the defence and maintenance of the truth. Out of theſe two times and caſes, Chriſtians haue libertie not to confeſſe, but may lawfully conceale their faith; nay (which is more) their perſons, by changing their name and attire, vpon this ground, becauſe the affirmatiue commaundement doth not alwaies binde.

Here it is obiected. Firſt, that wee are ſaued onely by faith, and therefore confeſſion is not neceſſarie. Anſ. We muſt conſider faith two waies. Firſt, as an inſtrument created in the heart, whereby we apprehend & apply Chriſt with his benefits to our ſelues, for our iuſtification and ſaluation. Secondly, faith muſt be cōſidered more largely, as it is a way to bring vs to life euerlaſting. Now in the firſt acception, it may bee truly ſaid, that wee are ſaued by faith alone. For there is no grace of God, whereby wee take holde of Chriſt, but faith. But if wee take it in the ſecond ſenſe, as a way to life, then we may truly ſay, that it alone ſaueth not, but hope, loue, repentance, good workes, and all diuine vertues. In this ſenſe Paul ſaith, we are ſaued by hope, Rom. 8.24. becauſe by it wee waite for our ſaluation: and hope is the way, in which all muſt walke that looke to be ſaued. Againe he ſaith, Momentany affliction worketh vnto vs an eternall waight of glory, 2.Cor.4.17. But how? Not as cauſes, but as waies, ſignes, and markes, that giue vs direction to our iourneyes end. And thus the woman is ſaid to be ſaued by bearing of children, 1.Tim.2.15. Which bearing and bringing vp of children, is no cauſe, but onely a way wherein ſhe muſt conſtantly walke to glorie. And though in mans iudgement, that may ſeeme a way of miſery and death, yet indeed it is otherwiſe, if the children continue in faith, loue, and holineſſe with modeſty. Againe, the Apoſtle Iames ſaith, that Abrahams faith wrought together with his workes, Iam. 2.22. which are likewiſe not to bee vnderſtood as working cauſes, but as teſtimonies and euidences, declaring and manifeſting, that hee was iuſt in the ſight of God.

Secondly, it is obiected, that confeſſion of our faith to God is ſufficient. For ſo Saint Paul ſeemes to ſay, Romanes 14.22. Haſt thou faith? haue it with thy ſelfe before God: therefore confeſſion before man is not needefull. Anſwer. The Apoſtle ſpeaketh not of that faith whereby wee are iuſtified and ſaued, but of that which ſtandeth in a perſwaſion of the vſe or not vſe of things indifferent. And this a man may keepe to himſelfe, that is, hee may ſo vſe it, as hee ſhall not thereby offend his brother. That commaundement was giuen by Paul for thoſe times, when men were not fully perſwaded of the vſe of Gods creatures, as meates, drinkes, &c. but to theſe times it is not.

VI. Queſtion.

Whether it be lawfull for a man being vrged, to go toe idol-ſeruice, and heare Maſſe, ſo as he keepe his heart to God?

A

Anſ. It is not: and I prooue it by the ſcope of the eight and tenth chapters of the firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians, where the Apoſtle diſputes the queſtion, whether the Corinthians might goe into the temples of idols, and eate of meat offered vnto them, in the meane time, not partaking with idolaters in the worſhip of the idols? This hee auoucheth to bee vtterly vnlawfull, and for that purpoſe tels the Corinthians, That they cannot drinke of the Lords cup, & of the cup of diuels. Now as this was B vnlawfull for them, ſo it is vnlawfull for any Proteſtant to goe to any Popiſh aſſembly, to heare Maſſe. Againe, God is the Creator of the body and ſoule: therefore he is to be worſhipped in both; and conſequently wee robbe him of his due, when wee reſerue our heart to him, and giue our bodies to idols. To this purpoſe Paul exhorteth the Romanes, to giue vp their bodies a liuing ſacrifice, holy, and acceptable vnto God, Rom. 12.1. Which place vtterly condemneth the errour of ſome, who think that God wil be content with the ſoule, and that they may beſtow their bodie in the ſeruice of the diuell.

But againſt this doctrine ſundry things are alleadged. The firſt is the example of Naa-C man, 2.Kin.5.18,19. who ſaid to the prophet, When I bow my ſelfe in the houſe of Rimmon, the Lord be mercifull to me in this thing. To whome Eliſha anſwered, Go in peace. Here (ſay ſome) the Prophet giues leaue to Naaman, to worſhip in an idols temple.

To this there bee ſundrie anſwers giuen. Some affirme, that Naaman ſpeakes onely of Ciuill and Politique worſhippe, and not of Religious. For his office was to kneele downe in the temple, that the King might leane vpon his ſhoulder, when he worſhipped the idol. And Naaman makes open proteſtation, verſ. 7. that hee will worſhip no God but the God of Iſrael.

Others anſwer, and that more truely, that D Naaman doth acknowledge it a ſinne, to goe to the houſe of Rimmon, and therefore hee craues pardon for it at Gods hands, twice together, verſ. 18. and withall makes a vowe, that hee will thenceforth offer, neither burnt offering, nor ſacrifice, to any other God, ſaue only to the Lord: and hereunto Eliſha anſwereth, Goe in peace.

Yet further it is anſwered, that Naaman requeſteth the Prophet to pray for him, that hee might bee conſtant in the ſeruice of the true God. And (in caſe hee were drawne againſt his purpoſe, by humane frailtie, to bow againe before Rimmon, with his King;) that the Lord in mercie would pardon his offence. And to this the Prophet yeeldeth ſaying, Goe in peace. As if he ſhould ſay, Goe to; I will pray for thee to this ende and pur-

A poſe. This text therefore giues no warrant for bodily preſence, in idolatrous aſſemblies.

The ſecond Obiect. Iehu openly profeſſed the worſhip of Baal, and yet hee diſſembled, meaning nothing leſſe: 2. King. 10. 18. And the Lord commends him for his diligent execution of that, which was right in his eyes, verſ. 30.

Anſ. Iehu is commended, not for his diſſembling, but for his diligence in deſtroying Ahabs houſe, his religion, & the Prieſts, with all that belonged vnto them; though in other matters belonging to the ſeruice of God, hee departed not from the ſinnes of Ieroboam.

The third Obiect. Dan. 3. 6. Nebuchad-
B nezzar made a decree, that whoſoeuer would not fall downe and worſhip the golden Image, ſhould the ſame houre be caſt into the middeſt of an hot fierie furnace. Now we do not reade, that any more refuſed to obey but three, and therefore it ſeemes that Daniel did worſhip the Image, as well as others.

Anſw. Daniel was not accuſed as the three children were, and for that cauſe there is no mention made of his refuſall. Againe, put the caſe hee had beene accuſed, yet the King tooke no knowledge of his accuſation, becauſe hee was in fauour, both with him, and the people.

The fourth Obiect. Paul togither with foure men, that had made a vow, yeelded to C purifie himſelfe, according to the law of Moſes, becauſe hee would not offend the weake Iewes, Act. 21. 24. And yet that Law concerning purification, as alſo the whole bodie of Ceremonies, was abrogated in the death of Chriſt. Now if he might doe that which was vnlawfull, for the auoiding of offence, why may not a man goe to Maſſe, and ſo preuent the ſcandall, which may bee taken on the behalfe of the Papiſts?

Anſw. It is true, that there was an end put vnto the ceremoniall law by Chriſts death; yet it was not at the firſt wholly to bee aboliſhed, but by little and little. Againe, the vſe of ceremonies, remained as a thing indifferent in it ſelfe, till the Temple of Ieruſalem
D was deſtroyed by Titus, and the Church of the new Teſtament throughly planted. And till both theſe were accompliſhed, the vſe of the ceremoniall law was no ſinne; prouided, that it were not holden, or vrged, as a thing neceſſarie to ſaluation.

Now whereas it is ſaid, that we may be preſent at the Maſſe, for the auoiding of offence, it may further bee anſwered: firſt, that we are to doe our duties, though men bee neuer ſo much offended; for it was the rule of Chriſt in like caſe, Let them alone, they bee the blinde leaders of the blinde, Matth. 15. 14. Secondly, we ought not to do euill, that good may come thereof.

The fift Obiect. The Maſſe is Gods ordinance, appointed by Chriſt, though now it bee corrupted by men. Anſw. It is a moſt damnable idol, yea worſe then an idol of the Gentiles, and the Adoration performed ther-therein is moſt abominable, and hath more affinitie with groſſe Gentiliſme, then with the Inſtitution of our Sauiour Chriſt.

III. Queſtion.

Whether any man, eſpecially a Miniſter, may with good conſcience flie in perſecution? and if he may flie, when?

Whether it be lawfull to flie?

Sect. 1.

This Queſtion conſiſteth of two parts. Touching the firſt: Sundrie men are of opinion, that it is vtterly vnlawfull to flie in perſecution; as Tertullian, who hath written a whole booke of this argument: and beſides him, certen Hereticks named Circumcelliones, in that part of Afrike, which wee now call Barbarie, and ſome alſo of the ſect of the Anabaptiſts. But the truth is, that ſometimes it is lawfull to flie, though not alwaies. For proofe whereof, conſider theſe reaſons.

Firſt, Chriſts commaundement, Math. 10. 23. When they perſecute you in one cittie flie into another. If it be ſaid, that this commaundement was limited to the times, wherein the Apoſtles preached in Iewry, and therefore is temporarie: I anſwer, No: for there cannot any text of Scripture bee brought, to ſhew that it was euer yet repealed. And the Apoſtles (who had receiued this commaundement, euen after Chriſts aſcenſion, and the giuing of the holy Ghoſt,) being perſecuted, did flie from one place to another, as wee may reade, Act. 9. 25. 30. 2. Cor. 11. If it bee alleadged, that if this be a commandement to flie, then all muſt flie? I anſwer againe, that though the commandement be generall to all perſons, and therefore euery Chriſtian may lawfully ſhunne apparent danger: yet the ſame is particular, in regard of circumſtances, of time and place. For though all may flie, yet there bee ſome places and times, wherein men may not vſe that libertie, as ſhall appeare afterward.

The ſecond reaſon is taken from the example of many worthie men recorded in Scripture. Iacob the Patriarch fledde from the preſence of his brother Eſau into Haran, to Laban, Gen. 27. and againe, from thence to the land of his fathers, Gen. 31. Moſes, after hee had ſlaine the Egyptian, fledde out of Egypt into Madian, where hee liued 40. yeares, Exodus 2. And this was no raſh flight, but a worke of faith, Heb. 11. 27. Obadiah the gouernour of Ahabs houſe, hid a hundreth men of the Lords Prophets, by fiftie in a caue, and fedde them with bread & water, when Iezabel would haue deſtroyed them, 1. King. 18. 13. Eliah being in feare of his life, fledde from Iezabel into Mount Horeb, 1. King. 19. 3. Againe, in the new Teſtament, our Sauiour Chriſt being in danger, withdrew himſelfe, Ioh. 10. 39. and that ſundry times till the hower of his paſſion was come. Paul, when the Iewes tooke counſell together to kill him, was let downe by the brethren in a basket through a wall in Damaſcus, Act. 9. 25. And when the Grecians went about to ſlay him, hee was brought by the brethren to Ceſarea, and ſent to Tarſus, verſ. 29, 30. Againe, being in danger, he vſed Chriſtian policie to ſaue himſelfe. For by ſaying he was a Phariſie, hee made a diuiſion between his accuſers, the Phariſies & Sadduces, and ſo eſcaped, Act. 23. 6, 7. And if that were lawfull for him to do, then is it alſo lawfull for a man, by flight to ſaue himſelf, in caſe of danger, whether he be a priuate man, or a Paſtor.

Yet for the better clearing of the Anſwer, ſome allegations to the contrarie, are to bee examined.

Obiect. I. Perſecution is a good thing, and that which is good, may not bee eſchewed. Anſ. Good things are of two ſorts. Some are ſimply good, in, and by themſelues; as vertues, and all morall duties: and theſe are not to be eſchewed. Some againe are good onely in ſome reſpects. Of this ſort are things indifferent, which be neither commaunded nor forbidden, but are good or euill, in reſpect of circumſtances. And theſe may be eſchewed, vnleſſe wee know that they bee good for vs. Now perſecution beeing of this kinde, that is to ſay, not ſimply good, but only by accident, may be auoided; becauſe no man can ſay that it is good or bad for him.

Obiect. II. Perſecution is ſent of God, for the triall and good of his Church. Anſ. Firſt, euill things ſent of God, may bee auoided, if hee ſhewes a meane or way, how they may be auoided. For example: God ſendeth ſickneſſe, famine, the plague, and ſword; hee ſends alſo meanes, and remedies for the preuenting, and remoouing of them, as phyſick, and food, &c. And theſe we may lawfully vſe for the ſaid purpoſes: and in like maner may perſecution be auoided, if God offer meanes of eſcape. Secondly, there is a two-fold will of God, his reuealed, and his ſecret will. By his reuealed will he hath appointed, that in caſe of preſent danger, when meanes of eſcape be offered, they may bee vſed. Now becauſe they that flie lawfully, are aſſured of Gods reuealed will, therefore in obedience thereunto, they vſe the meanes to ſaue themſelues from danger. As for his ſecret will, becauſe it is vnknowne, and therefore vncertaine vnto vs, we may not raſhly preſume thereof, and againſt his expreſſe will, refuſe the meanes offered, but vſe them rather, til God reueale the contrary.

Obiect. III. To fly in perſecution, is a kind of deniall of Chriſt, and againſt confeſſion: he therefore that flies, ſeemes to make no confeſſion, but rather to denie Chriſt.

Anſ. Chriſtian confeſſion is double, open, or implicite. Open confeſſion is, when a man boldly confeſſeth his faith before the Aduerſarie, euen to the death. This is the greateſt & higheſt degree of confeſſion, and in it the holy Martyrs in former times continued, euen to the loſſe of their liues, vndergoing the puniſhment of death, inflicted vpon them by the Aduerſaries of Chriſt Ieſus, for the maintenance of the truth. Implicite is: when a man to keepe his Religion, is content to forſake his countrey, friends, and goods. This is a ſecond degree, inferiour to the former, and yet it is a true Confeſſion, acceptable to God. And vnder this kind, comes flight in perſecution. VVhence it appeares, that lawfull flight in times of danger, is no deniall of Chriſt, nor yet againſt confeſſion. For ſometimes it pleaſeth God to call men to profeſſe his name openly, by ſuffering: ſometimes againe, not openly by ſuffering, but by flying: and this latter way, though it bee not ſo high a degree, as is the former, yet it is in deede and in truth, in the meaſure, a true profeſſion of Chriſt, and pleaſing vnto God.

Obiect. IV. Our Sauiour Chriſt commaunds vs, Feare not them that can kill the body, Matth. 10. 28. Now if a man muſt not feare them, then he muſt not flie.

Anſwer. The text ſpeaketh not of all feare, but of ſuch feare as tendeth to Apoſtaſie, and cauſeth men to renounce faith, and good conſcience. Againe, it ſpeakes of that feare, wherby man feareth man more then God. Thirdly, it ſpeakes of ſuch feare, as by which a man is vrged to tempt God, by doing ſome thing that is repugnant to his will, and that out of his calling. Now when the Queſtion is of flight in perſecution, we vnderſtand not ſuch a flight as tendeth to Apoſtaſie, or argueth the feare of man, more then of God, or that is repugnant to Gods wil, but that alone, whereby wee vſe the meanes offered, according to his appointment; leſt wee ſhould ſeeme to tempt him, and bring vpon our ſelues vnneceſſarie danger. And thus the firſt part of the Queſtion is anſwered.

Sect. 2.

The ſecond is concerning the Time, when a man may flie, Miniſter, or other? And for better reſolution thereof, wee are to remember, that there bee eight Conditions required in Chriſtian flight, eſpecially that which pertaines to the Miniſter.

The firſt is, if there bee no hope of doing good by his aboad in that place, where the perſecution is. But while hee conceiues any hope of doing good, by teaching, preaching, or otherwiſe, he may not flie. This the Miniſter ſhall eaſily diſcerne in Chriſtian wiſedome. To this purpoſe Paul, Act. 18. 10. hauing a while preached at Corinth, and finding that the Iewes deteſted him, and his miniſterie, intended a preſent departure thence. But the Lord appearing vnto him by night in a viſion, warned him to ſtay: for (ſaith hee)

I haue much people in this city: that is, many that are to bee conuerted, and brought vnto the faith. Euery Miniſter in his place, muſt haue a ſpeciall care of furthering Gods kingdome, whether it be by flying, or not flying.

The ſecond Condition. Conſideration muſt bee had, whether the perſecution be perſonall, or publike. Perſonall is that, which is directed againſt this, or that mans perſon. Publique, which is raiſed againſt the whole Church. If it bee directed againſt the perſon of the Paſtor, he may vſe his libertie. For it may bee, that his flight wil bring peace to the Church.

But what if the people will not ſuffer him to flie? Anſ. They ſhould be ſo farre from hindering of him in this caſe, that they ought rather to ſuccour and releeue him. Thus, when Demetrius had raiſed a tumult againſt Paul, vnder pretence of Diana, and hee would haue preſented himſelfe vnto the people, in the common place, the diſciples ſuffered him not, Act. 19. 30. And what care they had of his preſeruation, the ſame ought the people to haue of their Paſtor, in caſe of like perill. But, if the perſecution bee common to the whole Church, then he is not to fly. For it is neceſſary, at ſuch times eſpecially, that thoſe which are ſtrong, ſhould ſupport and confirme the weake.

The third Condition, If there be in the Paſtor a moderation of minde. For he muſt take heede of theſe two extremities, that hee bee neither ouercome with exceſſiue feare, nor through ouermuch confidence, run headlong into apparent danger. And that he may auoid theſe extremities, hee muſt firſt pray to God, for wiſedome, courage, and conſtancie: and ſecondly, vſe the conſent and aduice of the Church, for his direction in this behalfe, that all things may be done in wiſedome.

The fourth Condition of lawfull flight is, that the Miniſter withdraw himſelfe only for a time, and not vtterly forſake his charge, and calling. Yea, if he be principally aymed at in the perſecution, he may lawfully go apart, and it is the duty of the Church alſo, to ſee him conuaied away in ſafetie, till the perſecution be ouer. And thus doing, he neither forſakes the Church, nor his calling; but onely vſeth the meanes of his preſeruation, for the keeping of faith, and a good conſcience. This warrant our Sauiour giues to his Apoſtles, Mat. 10. 23. When they perſecute you in one cittie, flie into another. The end of that commaundement was, that the Apoſtles might preſerue themſelues in ſafetie, till they had preached the Goſpell to all the cities of Iſrael, as the next words do declare.

The fifth Condition. If after due triall and examination, he finde not himſelfe ſufficiently armed with ſtrength, to reſiſt or beare the extremitie. For then he may retire himſelfe into ſome places of ſafetie, where he may liue to the glory of God, keeping faith and a good conſcience.

A The ſixt Condition is: If hee be expelled, or baniſhed by the Magiſtrate, though the cauſe bee vniuſt. For ſubiection is ſimply to bee yeelded to the puniſhments and corrections of Magiſtrates, though we doe not alwaies tender obedience to their commandements.

The ſeauenth is, If God offer a lawfull means and way of eſcape, and doth (as it were) open a doore, and giue iuſt oportunity to flie. In this caſe not to flie, (eſpecially if hee haue not ſtrength ſufficient to ſtand out) is a tempting of God.

The eight Condition. If the danger be not onely ſuſpected, ſurmiſed, and ſeene afarre B off, but certen and preſent. Otherwiſe the Paſtor fals into the ſinne of Ionah, who fore-caſted dangers in his calling, and therefore preuented them by flying to Tarſus.

Theſe Conditions beeing obſerued, it may bee lawfull both for Paſtor and people to flie in times of perſecution.

Sect. 3.

When a man may not flie.

In the next place it may bee demaunded, When a Paſtor, or other may not flie?

For anſwer hereunto, the ſignes of vnlawfull flight are to be conſidered, and they are principally foure.

The firſt is, when God puts into a mans heart, the Spirit of courage and fortitude, whereby hee is reſolued to abide, and ſtand C out againſt the force of all enemies. Thus Paul, Act. 20. 22. went bound in the Spirit to Ieruſalem. Where, though he knew that bonds and afflictions did abide him, yet hee would not be diſſwaded, but vttered theſe words of reſolution, I paſſe not at all, neither is my life deare vnto my ſelfe, ſo that I may fulfill my courſe with ioy, and the miniſtration which I haue receiued of the Lord Ieſus, to teſtifie the Goſpell of the grace of God. This motion of the Spirit is not ordinary, yet in the time of hot perſecution, it hath bin found, in many worthy inſtruments of Gods glory, as may be ſeene in the hiſtories of ſundry Martyrs, in the daies of Queene Marie. But one eſpecially, (of whome I was credibly informed) that hauing this motion, D to ſtand out, and yet flying: for that very act, felt ſuch a ſting in his conſcience, that hee could neuer haue peace till his death.

The ſecond ſigne is, when a man is apprehended, and vnder the cuſtodie of the Magiſtrate. For then hee is not to flie, becauſe hee muſt in al his ſufferings, obey the Magiſtrate.

Here a Queſtion is mooued, Whether a man that is impriſoned, may breake priſon?

To this Popiſh Schoole-men anſwer, that hee may, if the cauſe of his impriſonment be vniuſt. And ſutable to this aſſertion, is the common practiſe of Papiſts. Wee on the contrarie ſay, and that truely, that no man being in durance, may vſe any vnlawfull or violent meanes to eſcape; for we may not at any hand, reſiſt the Magiſtrate in our ſufferings. Seruants are commaunded to ſubiect themſelues with patience, vnto the vniuſt correctiõs of their maſters, 1.Pet.2.19. And this reaſon is giuen; For it is thankworthie, if a man, for conſcience toward God, endure griefe, ſuffering wrongfully. The Apoſtles, beeing in priſon, vſed no meanes to deliuer themſelues; but when the Angel of the Lord had opened the priſon doores, then they came forth, and not before, Act.5.19. And that which Peter and the other Apoſtles did, muſt Paſtours and other men alſo doe, in the like caſe, for religion ſake.

The third ſigne. When a man is bound by his calling and miniſterie, ſo as in it, he may glorifie God, and doe good to the church by preaching; then he muſt not flie. For, the duties of a mans calling, muſt be preferred before any worldly thing whatſoeuer, whether bodie, goods, friends, or life, &c.

The fourth ſigne. When God in his prouidence, cuts off all lawfull meanes and waies of flying, he doth then (as it were) bidde that man ſtay and abide. I ſay, lawfull meanes; becauſe we may not vſe thoſe that are vnlawfull; but rather reſt contented, and reſigne our ſelues wholly to Gods will and pleaſure. We muſt not doe any euill, that good may come thereof; and of two euils, not only not the leſſe, but neither of both is to be choſen. So much of Confeſſion.

CHAP. XIII.

Of an Oath.

THe ſixt Head of Gods worſhippe, is an Oath: concerning which, three Queſtions are to be handled.

I. What an oath is?

II. How an oath is to be taken?

III. How farre-forth it bindeth, and is to be kept?

Sect. 1.

I. Queſtion.

What is an Oath?

The nature of an Oath.

Anſ. An Oath, is a religious and neceſſary confirmation of things doubtfull, by calling on God, to be a witneſſe of truth, and a reuenger of falſhood.

Firſt, I call it a Confirmation: for ſo the holy Ghoſt ſpeaketh, An Oath for confirmation is among men an end of all ſtrife, Heb.6.16.

Secondly, I terme it a religious confirmation, becauſe an Oath is a part of Gods religion and worſhip. Yea, it is ſometimes put for the whole worſhip of God: Eſa.19.18. In that day, ſhall they ſweare by the Lord of hoſts: that is, they ſhall worſhip the true God.

Thirdly I adde, a neceſſarie confirmation, becauſe an oath is neuer to be vſed, in way of confirmation, but onely in caſe of meere ne-
A ceſſitie. For when all other humane proofes doe faile, then it is lawfull, to fetch teſtimonie from heauen, and to make God himſelfe our witneſſe. In this caſe alone, and neuer elſe, it is lawfull to vſe an Oath.

Fourthly, I ſay, in which God is called vpon, as a witneſſe of the truth, and a reuenger of falſhood. This is added in the laſt place, becauſe herein alone, ſtands the forme and life of an Oath, that in things doubtfull, we call God as a witneſſe of truth, and a iuſt reuenger of the contrarie. There be ſundry kinds of confirmation, as the affirmation, the aſſeueration, and the obteſtation. And by this Clauſe, an Oath is diſtinguiſhed from them all: becauſe
B in it, we call vpon God to giue witneſſe to the thing auouched, but in the other three we doe not.

Now touching this laſt point, of the forme and life of an Oath, three Queſtions are to be anſwered, for the better clearing of the whole doctrine.

I, Queſtion. Whether an Oath taken by creatures, be a true oath, and to be kept?

Anſ. An Oath by creatures, is an Oath, though vnlawfull. For though there be not in it, a direct inuocation of God for witneſſe, yet when we call the creature to giue teſtimonie, we doe then indirectly call vpon God, becauſe he is ſeene in them, and looke how many creatures there be in the world, ſo many ſignes are they of Gods preſence. This an-
C ſwer Chriſt himſelfe maketh, Mat.23.21.22. He that ſweareth by heauen, ſweareth by the throne of God, and by him that ſitteth thereon, that is, by God himſelfe.

II. Queſt. Whether an oath by falſe gods, be a true oath or no? for example: the oath of the Turke by Mahomet, the oath of Laban, by the gods of Nachor, that is, by his Idols: when as in them, there is no inuocation of the true God of heauen and earth.

I anſwer as before, though it be not a lawfull oath, yet it is in value and effect an oath. For though that thing be a falſe god indeede, by which it be taken, yet it is the true God, in the opinion of him that ſweareth. Thus Ma-
D homet is to the Turke, in ſtead of the true God, and is honoured of him as God: and therfore his oath by Mahomet, is a true oath. Thus when Iacob in the couenant that he made with Laban, ſweares by the Feare of his father Iſaac, and Laban by the Idols of Nachor; Iacob accepted the oath which was tendered to him in the name of a falſe god; which he would not haue done, if it had not beene an oath at all. And hence the Caſe is plaine, that ſwearing by a falſe god is an oath, and therefore bindeth the ſwearer in conſcience, though it be vnlawfully taken.

III. Queſt. If in euery oath, God ought to be cited as a witnes, how then can God ſweare by himſelfe, ſeeing none can witneſſe vnto him?

Anſ. This deſcription of an oath, whereby

A the creature ſweareth, includes not that oath, whereby God ſweareth. For the end why God ſweareth is, to bind himſelfe (as it were) with a bond vnto man, whereby he would haue man to repute him a lyer, and no God, if he failes and keepes not his promiſe. Thus the Lord ſweares in his wrath, Heb. 3. 11. If they ſhall enter into my reſt. The words of the oath, are to be vnderſtood with this clauſe, If, &c. then let me be holden as no God, or as a falſe God. And in this manner is God ſaid to ſweare, when he manifeſteth to man, that he is content to be counted no God, if that which he auoucheth by oath, be not performed.

Furthermore, in euery Oath, there be foure B diſtinct things. Firſt, an Aſſeueration of the truth; which ſhould be auouched, though there were no oath taken. Secondly, a confeſſion of the omnipotent preſence, wiſedome, iuſtice, and truth of God; whereby we acknowledge, that he is the ſearcher and knower of the heart; yea, that he is both witneſſe, iudge, and reuenger of falſhood and lying. Thirdly, Prayer and Inuocation, whereby God is called vpon, to giue teſtimonie to the conſcience of him that ſweareth, that he ſpeakes nothing but the truth. Theſe two actions, of Confeſſion and Inuocation, doe make an oath, to be no leſſe a true and proper part of Gods worſhip, then prayer it ſelfe. Fourthly, Imprecation, in which a man acknowledging C God the iuſt reuenger of a lie, bindes himſelfe to puniſhment, if he ſhall ſweare falſely, or ſpeake an vntruth wittingly or willingly.

Now, though theſe be the diſtinct parts of an Oath, yet all of them are not expreſſed in the forme of euery oath; but ſometimes one, ſometimes two of the principall, and the other concealed, but yet alwaies vnderſtood. For example: the Prophet Ieremie teacheth the people of Iſrael a forme of ſwearing, Thou ſhalt ſweare, the Lord liueth, Ier. 4. 2. In which, there is expreſſed only the ſecond part, Confeſſion, and in that, the reſt are to be vnderſtood. Againe, the words of Ruth to Naomi, D Ruth 1. 17. The Lord doe ſo to me, and more alſo, if ought but death depart me and thee, are only an Imprecation, in which the other parts are infolded. So, the oath which God maketh, Heb. 3. 11. If they ſhall enter into my reſt, is expreſſed onely by imprecation, and the other parts vnderſtood, though they be not mentioned. In common ſpeech betweene man and man, it is vſually auouched, (though moſt wickedly.) If it be not thus or thus; let me be hanged, I would I were dead, I would I might neuer mooue hence, &c. Now this auouchment, howſoeuer it may be taken, is indeed a forme of ſwearing, in value and force all one with the oath of God, when he ſaith, If they enter into my reſt, let me be no God, but a deceiuer.

Sometimes two parts of the foure, are expreſſed, and the reſt vnderſtood, 2. Cor. 1. 23. Now I call God to record vnto my Soule. Here Inuocation with Imprecation, is vttered in ſpeech, and the other two conceiued in the mind. By theſe particulars, we ſee it vſuall in Scripture, to propound formes of ſwearing by expreſſing ſome one or two particular parts in ſtead of the reſt; yet ſo, as the parts concealed be all vnderſtood: for otherwiſe the oath is not formall and entire.

II. Queſtion.

How an oath is to be taken in a good and godly manner?

For the anſwering hereof, two Rules are to be remembred.

The firſt Rule. He that will take an Oath by the name of God, muſt ſweare in truth, in iudgement, in righteouſneſſe, Ierem. 4. 2. Here three vertues are required in a lawfull Oath.

Firſt, that it be made in truth. And we muſt know, that there is a double truth; the one, of the thing ſpoken: the other, of the mind wherein it is conceiued. Truth of the thing is, when a mans ſpeech is framed according to the thing, as it is indeed, or as neare as poſſibly may be; and that becauſe God is truth it ſelfe. This is called by Schoolemen, Logicall verity. Sometimes by reaſon of mens frailtie, the truth is wanting, becauſe we know not things as they are. The truth of the mind is, when a man ſpeakes or ſweares as he thinketh, or is in conſcience perſwaded of the thing; and this the Schoolemen tearme Morall veritie. Now though the firſt of theſe two be wanting, yet the latter muſt neceſſarily be in an oath, leſt we fall into periurie.

The ſecond vertue is Iudgement; that is, prudence or wiſedome. This Iudgement requires diſcretion, and conſideration, principally of fiue things. Firſt, of the thing in queſtion, which is to be confirmed. Secondly, of the nature of the oath, that is taken. Thirdly, of the minde, and true meaning of him that ſweareth. Fourthly of the particular circumſtances, of time, place, & perſons, when, where, and before whome he ſweareth. Fiftly, of the euent or iſſue of the oath. All theſe are duly to be regarded, that we ſweare not raſhly, or vnaduiſedly.

The third is Iuſtice, wherein alſo care muſt be had of two things. Firſt, that the point to be confirmed, be lawfull. And it is then lawfull, when it may ſtand with pietie, and charitie. Secondly, that the occaſions of taking the oath, be alſo iuſt; and they be chiefely foure. I. When it may further Gods glorie and worſhip: or ſerue to prooue ſome doctrine of ſaluation, in whole, or in part. II. When it may tend to the furtherance of brotherly loue, or to the preſeruation of our neighbours life, goods, or good name: or further, to the confirmation of ſome league, couenant, or contract A made betweene parties, vpon good ground, and for good and neceſſarie purpoſes. III. When it ſerueth, to releeue a mans owne priuate neceſſitie, as when one ſweares to maintaine his owne good name, goods, or life; to confirme his owne faith and truth in contracts. An example hereof we haue in Paul, who to confirme the Romanes, in the perſwaſion of his loue and care of their ſaluation, ſaith, God is my witneſſe (whome I ſerue in my ſpirit, in the Goſpel of his Sonne) that without ceaſing I make mention of you, Rom. 1. 9. And againe, to keepe his owne credit & good name among the Iewes, I ſay the truth in Chriſt, I lie not, my conſcience bearing me witneſſe, in the holy Ghoſt, Rom. 9. 1. B IV. When the Magiſtrate doth exact it, by order of iuſtice. This though it be a iuſt occaſion, and warrant of an oath, yet three Caueats are in it to be obſerued.

Firſt, that the oath be miniſtred lawfully, not againſt pietie or charitie. Secondly, he which takes an oath, tendered by the Magiſtrate, muſt ſweare according to the mind and meaning of the Magiſtrate, who exacts the oath, and not according to his owne priuate intent. Thirdly, he muſt not ſweare ambiguouſly, but in a ſimple ſenſe, ſo as the words of his mouth, may be agreeable with that which he conceiueth in his heart, Pſal. 15. 2. And whatſoeuer oath is taken without obſeruation of theſe Caueats, the ſame is not taken in truth, but in fraud and deceit. C Popiſh teachers affirme, that in ſome caſes, they may ſweare in a doubtfull meaning. And this they practiſe in time of danger, when beeing conuented before the Magiſtrate, and examined, they anſwer Yea in word, and conceiue a negation, or No in their mindes. A practiſe moſt impious, and flat againſt this excellent Rule of the Prophet, that a man ſhould ſweare in truth, iudgement, and iuſtice.

The ſecond Rule is, That the forme in which the oath is propounded, muſt be a plaine, ſimple, and direct forme, wherein God is directly called to witneſſe. For his worſhip is directly to be giuen to him: and therefore the oath alſo, beeing an Inuocation of his name, and a part of his worſhip, is directly to be made. D

That the meaning of this Rule, may the better appeare, one Queſtion is to be anſwered; Whether in the forme of an oath, a man may not ſweare, directly by creatures, and indirectly by God?

Moſt of the Popiſh ſort, and ſome Proteſtants hold that he may. But the truth is otherwiſe. I ſay vnto you (ſaith our Sauiour) ſweare not at all, neither by heauen—nor by the earth—nor by thy head, &c. Math. 5. 34. In which words, he forbids all indirect oathes whereby men ſweare directly by creatures, and indirectly by God: for ſo did the Phariſies. Againe, if a man might ſweare by creatures, and conceale the name of God, it would diminiſh his Maieſtie and authority, & much deceit might be vſed: for the ſwearer might ſay, that he ſware not, but only vſed an obteſtation.

Againſt this it is obiected. I. That Ioſeph ſware by the life of Pharaoh, Gen. 42. 25. therefore it may ſeeme, that oathes by creatures are not vnlawfull. Anſ. Firſt, it may be ſaid, that Ioſeph ſinned in ſo ſwearing: for therein he imitated the Egyptians, who ſware by the life of their King. Secondly, it may be anſwered, that Ioſeph doth onely make an aſſeueration, and not an oath.

Obiect. II. The church in the Canticles takes an oath, by the creatures, Cant. 2. 7. I charge you, daughters of Ieruſalem, by the roes and by the hindes of the field, &c. Anſ. It is no oath, but an obteſtation, whereby the church cals the creatures, to witneſſe her earneſt affection to Chriſt. The like is made by Moſes, Deut. 30. 19. when he ſaith, I call heauen and earth to record againſt you this day. And by Paul in his charge to Timothie, 1. Tim. 5. 21. I charge thee, before the elect Angels. In which, and the like ſpeeches, there is no ſwearing but a kind of citation, or ſummoning of the Creatures as witneſſes. And there is great difference betweene an oath and an obteſtation. In the Obteſtation, there is no more, but a calling of the creature to giue teſtimonie, the matter beeing alreadie apparant and manifeſt. But in an Oath, where the matter is not ſo manifeſt, God is made not onely a witneſſe, but alſo a iudge and reuenger.

Obiect. III. Saint Paul ſweares by his reioycing in Chriſt, 1. Cor. 15. 31. which reioycing was a created paſſion, or a creature. Anſ. That was alſo an obteſtation, or a word of auouchment, and aſſeueration; and not an oath. For it is all one, as if he had ſaid thus; My ſorrowes and afflictions, which I endure for Chriſt, would teſtifie (if they could ſpeake) that as certenly as I reioyce in Chriſt; ſo certenly I die daily.

Obiect. IV. Abigail ſware to Dauid by the creature; As the Lord liueth, and as thy ſoule liueth, 1. Sam. 25. 26. Anſ. The former part of her ſpeech, may be called an oath, but the latter is onely an obteſtation, or earneſt auouchment, ioyned with an oath.

Now, although it be in no ſort, lawfull to ſweare by creatures, yet when a man ſweareth directly by God, he may name the creatures in way and forme of an oath; ſpecially if he make them as his pawnes, and pledges, ſet before God, that he may in iuſtice, be reuenged vpon him in them, if he lieth and ſweareth not a truth.

Sect. 3.

III. Queſtion.

How farre-forth doth an Oath binde, and is to be kept?

The anſwer to this Queſtion is large; and therefore for order ſake I diſtinguiſh it into two parts, and firſt I will ſhew when an oath bindes; ſecondly, when it bindeth not.

For the firſt, an Oath taken of things certaine, lawfull, and poſſible, is to be kept, yea and bindes alwaies, though it be tendred euen to our enemies. To this purpoſe God hath giuen ſpeciall commandement in ſundry places, Numb. 30.3. Whoſoeuer ſweareth an oath, to binde his ſoule by a bond, he ſhall not breake his word, but ſhall doe according to all that proceedeth out of his mouth. Math. 5.33. Thou ſhalt not forſweare thy ſelfe, but ſhalt performe thine oathes vnto the Lord. Exod. 20.7. Thou ſhalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vaine, that is, lightly and raſhly. But Gods name is taken in vaine, when an oath made of things lawful and poſſible is not kept. Dauid, at the humble requeſt of Shemei, (who had before curſed him) pardons his fault for the time, and ſweares to him that he ſhould not die, 2. Sam. 19.23. Dauid made conſcience of this oath, knowing himſelfe to be bound thereby, and therefore till his death he kept it, onely he charged Salomon not to count him innocent, 1. King. 2.9.

Now for the better clearing of the anſwer, we are to conſider foure particular caſes touching this point.

I. Caſe. What if a man take an oath by falſe Gods, whether is he bound to keepe it, yea or no?

Anſw. He is, and the reaſons are theſe. Firſt, from the like. There was a queſtion among the Scribes and Phariſies, Math. 23.16, whether a man ſwearing by the creature were a detter or no? The Phariſies taught, that if a man ſware by creatures, the oath did not binde. But Chriſt, verſ. 20. affirmeth, that he that ſweareth by the Temple, or by the Altar, or by heauen, ſweares by God indirectly, and ſo takes an oath, though not a lawfull oath, and thereupon remaines bound, and is a detter. Now by proportion, he that ſweares by falſe Gods, ſweares by God indirectly, becauſe the falſe God is, in the opinion of him that ſweareth, as a God, and ſo his oath bindeth, and is to be kept. Secondly, Abraham accepts the oath that Abimelech tendreth vnto him in the name of a falſe God, Gen. 21.23. So doth Iacob accept of the oath made vnto him by Laban, Gen. 31.53. which they would not haue done, if their oathes had not beene ſufficient bonds, to binde them to obſeruation and performance.

It will be ſaid, He that admits of an oath by an Idol, doth communicate in the ſinne of him that ſweareth. Anſ. In caſe of neceſſity, a man may admit of ſuch an oath without ſin. A poore man, beeing in extreame want, borroweth of an vſurer vpon intereſt: it is ſinne in the vſurer to take it; but it is not ſo in the poore man, who is compelled by the vſurer to giue intereſt. Thus the poore man doth vſe well the iniquitie of the vſurer: So it is in an oath: A godly man may well vſe, and take benefite by the wicked oathes of idolaters, ſo farre forth as they ſhall ſerue for the ratifying and confirming of lawfull couenants.

II. Caſe. If a man take an oath, and afterward endure hurt or dammage by it, whether is he then bound to keepe his oath or no?

Anſw. If the loſſe be but temporarie and priuate, (the oath beeing made of a thing lawfull) it muſt be endured. For Dauid reckoneth it among the properties of a good man, That he ſweareth, and changeth not, though it be to his hurt, Pſal. 15.4.

And here a difference is to be made betweene a promiſſorie oath and a ſingle promiſe. A ſingle promiſe may be reuerſed by the will, and conſent of him, to whome it is made, but a promiſe made by an oath, is to be kept, though loſſes and hinderances enſue thereupon. For the reuerence we beare to the name of God vſed in the oath, ought to be of greater force with vs, then any priuate hinderance or inconuenience, which may befall vs, vpon the performance of the ſame.

III. Caſe. Whether doth an oath binde conſcience, whereunto a man is drawne, by fraud and ſubtiltie?

Anſw. If the oath be of things lawfull and poſſible, it bindeth, and is to be kept, though we were induced to it by deceipt. Ioſhua deceiued by the Gibeonites, was brought to make couenant of peace with them, and to bind it by an oath: Now perceiuing after three daies, that they had wrought it by craft, he would not touch them, in reuerence of the oath, that he had taken. Ioſh. 9.18, 19, 20. And about 300. yeares after, when Saul had ſlaine certaine of the Gibeonites, the Iſraelites for that fact, were puniſhed with three yeares famine, which could not be ſtaied, till ſeauen perſons of Sauls houſe were hanged vp in Gibeah, 2. Sam. 21.

IIII. Caſe. What if a man take an oath by feare and compulſion, is he to keepe it, yea or no? For example; A man falling into the hands of theeues, for the ſafetie of his life, is vrged to take a ſolemne oath, that he will fetch and deliuer them ſome portion of money, and withall neuer diſcloſe the parties. The oath beeing thus taken, the Queſtion is, whether he be bound to keepe it?

Anſ. Some Diuines are of opinion, that the oath is to be kept, and ſome ſay no: but generally it is anſwered, that it muſt be kept, becauſe this feare did not aboliſh the conſent of his will. But if it be alleadged, that in ſo doing, he ſhall hurt the common-wealth: Anſwer is made, that if he doe not ſweare ſecrecie, he may in probabilitie bring greater damage to the weale publike, in depriuing it of a member, by the loſſe of his owne life. But it will be ſaid, by this meanes he maintaines a theefe. Anſw. Be it ſo; yet he remaines excuſable, becauſe that was not his intent, but onely to preſerue his owne life, to the good of the Common-wealth.

Thus the moſt and beſt Diuines doe hold. But for my part, I leaue it in ſuſpenſe; though it ſeemes in likelihood that the partie which ſweares ſilence, doth after a ſort maintaine theft, and communicate with the ſinne of the robber: and further giues occaſion, that others may fall into the like hazard and ieopardie of their liues. And ſo much of the firſt part of the Anſwer.

The ſecond part of the Anſwer to this third maine Queſtion followes: namely, to ſhew when an oath bindes not. An oath doth not binde in ſixe caſes.

B I. When it is againſt the word of God, and tends to the maintenance of ſinne. The reaſon is, becauſe when God will not haue an oath to binde, it muſt not binde. For an oath muſt not be a bond of iniquitie. Hereupon Dauid hauing ſworne a raſh oath, to deſtroy Nabal and his houſe, and beeing ſtaied from it by the Lord in the meanes of Abigail; he praiſeth God in this manner: Bleſſed be the Lord God of Iſrael, which ſent thee this day to meete me, and bleſſed be thy counſell, and bleſſed be thou, which haſt kept me this day, from comming to ſhed blood. 1.Sam.25.32,33.

II. If it be made againſt the wholeſome lawes of the Common-wealth; becauſe euery ſoule muſt be ſubiect to the higher powers, Rom.13.1. C

III. If it be taken of ſuch perſons, as want reaſon; as of children, mad-men, or fooles; becauſe they know not what they ſweare: and there can be no binding of conſcience, when he that ſweareth wanteth reaſon to diſcerne what he doth.

IV. If it be made by thoſe who are vnder the tuition of their ſuperiours, and haue no power to binde themſelues; as by children which are vnder the gouernement of their Parents: For theſe are part of their parents goods; and therefore not fit to vndertake an oath, without their conſent. Neither are they to chooſe a calling, or make any contract of themſelues, but onely by the direction and aduiſe of their parents, though ſome of the Popiſh ſort do erroniouſly teach, that a child may binde himſelfe by oath, to become a Monke of this or that order without conſent of parents.

V. If it be made of things impoſſible: for then it is a vaine oath.

VI. If at the firſt it were lawfull, and afterward become impoſſible and vnlawfull. For ſuch oathes God himſelfe may be ſaid to reuerſe. Thus if a man binde himſelfe by oath to liue in ſingle life without marriage, and after findes that God hath not giuen him the gift of continencie, in this caſe, his oath becomes impoſſible to be kept, and therfore being reuerſed by God, and becomming vnlawfull, it may be broken without impietie.

A To theſe ſixe, the Papiſts adde two other. The firſt, when the oath is made vpon cuſtome. And they put this example; If two men going out of a dore, or ouer a bridge, the one ſweares by God that he will not goe firſt, likewiſe ſweares the other: yet at the laſt after contention, one of them goes firſt. In this caſe, ſaies the Papiſt, the oath bindes not. Anſ. Cuſtome cannot make that which is ſinne, to be no ſinne, or periurie, to be no periurie: but rather doubles the ſinne, and makes it aboue meaſure more vile and abhominable; & they that giue themſelues to this vſuall and cuſtomable ſwearing, cannot but oftentimes become guiltie of flat periurie.

The ſecond Caſe is, when the Superiour power, that is, the Pope, or other inferiour Biſhops, giue order to the contrarie, by relaxation or diſpenſation. Anſ. It is falſe. For in euery lawfull oath there is a double bond, one of man to man, the other of man to God. Now if in the oath taken, man were onely obliged to man, the oath might be diſpenſable by man: But ſeeing man, when he ſweareth to man, ſweareth alſo to God, and thereby is immediately bound to God himſelfe, hence it followeth, that an oath taken, cannot haue releaſe from any creature. Therefore our Sauiour Chriſts commandement is, Thou ſhalt not forſweare thy ſelfe, but ſhalt performe thy oathes, to whome? to the Lord, Math.5.33. And the oath that paſſed betweene Dauid and Ionathan, is called the Lords oath, 2. Sam.21.7. and 1. Sam. 20.8. God will haue the oath to binde, as long as ſeemeth good vnto him, yea and ceaſe binding, when it pleaſeth him. And that which himſelfe bindeth, or will haue to be bound, no creature can looſe: The things which God hath coupled, let no man ſeparate, Math. 19. 6. And herein the Pope ſhewes himſelfe to be Antichriſt, in that he challengeth power to diſpenſe with a lawfull oath, made without error or deceit, of things honeſt and poſſible.

Out of this anſwer, an other Queſtion may be reſolued, namely, when doth a man commit Periurie.

D Anſ. I. When a man ſweares that which he knowes to be falſe. II. When he ſweares that which he meanes not to do. III. When he ſweareth to doe a thing, which he alſo meanes to doe, yet afterwards doth it not. In theſe three, the not performing of an oath made, is flat periurie.

That we may yet be informed concerning the ſinne of Periurie, one Queſtion of moment is to be ſkanned. In Societies and Corporations, there be Lawes and Orders, to the keeping whereof, euery one admitted to an office takes a corporall oath: Afterward it falls out vpon occaſion, that he breakes ſome of the ſaid Statutes: The Queſtion is, whether he be not in this caſe periured?

Anſw. Statutes are of two ſorts. Some are principall or fundamentall, which ſerue to maintain the ſtate of that body or corporatiõ.

Others leſſe principall, or mixt, that ſerue for order or decencie. In the ſtatutes principall, the law-maker intends obedience ſimply; and therefore they are neceſſarie to be kept. But in the leſſe principall, he exacts not obedience ſimply, but either obedience, or the penaltie; becauſe the penaltie is as much beneficiall to the ſtate of that body, as the other. The breach of the former makes a man guilty of periurie; but it is otherwiſe in the latter, ſo be it the delinquent party be content to beare the mulct, if it be impoſed. Thus ſtudents and others belonging to ſuch ſocieties, may in ſome ſort excuſe themſelues, from the ſinne of periurie, though not from all fault, in breaking ſome of the leſſer locall ſtatutes, els few could liue in any ſocietie without periurie.

Yet one more Queſtion is propounded touching periurie, whether a man may exact an oath of him, whome he feares or knowes will forſweare himſelfe? Anſw. A priuate man muſt not; but a Magiſtrate may, if the partie offer to take his oath, (not beeing vrged therto,) and be firſt admoniſhed of the grieuouſneſſe of the ſaid ſinne of periurie. In the execution of Ciuill Iuſtice, Magiſtrates muſt not ſtay vpon mens ſinnes, Moſes expected not the Iſraelites repentance, for their idolatrie; but preſently proceeded vnto puniſhment. Neither muſt the publike good of the Common-wealth be hindred, vpon the likelihood or ſuſpition of a mans periurie.

CHAP. XIIII.

Of Vowes.

THe ſeauenth head of the Outward worſhip of God, is concerning a vow. All the Queſtions whereof may be reduced to theſe foure.

I. Queſtion.

What is a Vowe?

Anſ. A vow, is a promiſe made to God of things lawfull and poſſible, I call it a promiſe, to diſtinguiſh a vow from a ſingle purpoſe. For a purpoſe may be changed, but a vow lawfully made cannot. Againe, there is great difference betweene theſe two: for in a vow, there is firſt a purpoſe to doe a thing: ſecondly, a binding of our ſelues to doe that we purpoſe. For this cauſe I tearme it a promiſe, becauſe it is a purpoſe with a bond, without which there can be no vow made.

In the next place I adde a promiſe made to God, not to Saint, Angel, or man. The reaſons are theſe. Firſt, a vow is properly the worke of the heart, conſiſting in a purpoſe. Now God alone knowes the heart, and he alone is able, to diſcerne of the purpoſe and intent of the ſame: which no Angel, Saint, or other creature can poſſibly doe. Secondly, when the vow is made, none can puniſh and take reuenge of the breach thereof, but God. Thirdly, in the old Teſtament, the Iewes neuer vowed, but to God, becauſe the vow was a part of Gods worſhip: Deut. 23. 21. When thou ſhalt vow a vow vnto the Lord thy God, thou ſhalt not be ſlacke to pay it, for the Lord thy God, will ſurely require it of thee, and ſo it ſhould be ſinne vnto thee. Where by the way, we may take notice, of the ſuperſtition of the Popiſh Church, that maketh vowes to Saints and Angels, which is in effect to make them gods, and to worſhippe them as the Iewes worſhipped God in the old Teſtament.

II. Queſtion.

Whether a vowe, be now in the new Teſtament, any part of Religion, or Gods worſhip?

The anſwer is three-fold.

Firſt, if a vow be taken for a promiſe of morall obedience; the anſwer is, that a vow is indeed the worſhip of God, and ſo ſhall bee to the end of the world. For as God (for his part) promiſeth mercie, in the couenant of grace, ſo we in Baptiſme, doe make a vow, and promiſe of obedience to him, in all his commandements; and therefore Peter calleth Baptiſme a ſtipulation, that is, the promiſe of good conſcience to God. This promiſe once made in Baptiſme, is renewed ſo oft as wee come to the Lords Supper, and further continued in the daily ſpirituall exerciſes of Inuocation, and Repentance.

But it may be ſaid, we are alreadie bound to the obedience of the Law, by order of diuine Iuſtice, therfore we cannot further bind our ſelues. Anſw. He that is bound by God, may alſo bind himſelfe. Dauid though he was bound by God in conſcience, to keepe the Law, yet he binds himſelfe freely by oath, to helpe his owne weakeneſſe, and to keepe himſelfe from falling, when he ſaith: I haue ſworne, and will performe it, that I will keepe thy righteous iudgements, Pſal. 119. 106. And the ſame bond is no leſſe neceſſarie and behoouefull for vs, if we conſider how prone and readie we are to fall from the worſhip of God.

The ſecond Anſwer. If a vow be taken for a promiſe of ſome ceremoniall dutie, as of Sacrifices and Oblations, or of giuing houſe, lands, and goods to the Temple, then we muſt put a difference betweene the Old Teſtament and the New. In the Old Teſtament, the vow of ſuch duties, was part of Gods worſhippe, but in the New it is not, and that for theſe Reaſons.

Firſt, the Iewiſh ceremonies were to the Iewes, a part of Gods worſhip, but to vs Gentiles they are not, conſidering they are all in Chriſt aboliſhed, and none of them doe now ſtand in force by Gods Law to vs. Thus the Paſſeouer was a ceremonie, or ſeruice appointed by God to be obſerued of the Iſraelites and their poſteritie, Exod. 12.24,25. and therefore ſtood as a part of Gods worſhippe to them for a perpetuall ordinance. But to vs in the new Teſtament, both it and other Legall ceremonies are abrogated, and wee haue onely two Sacraments to be adminiſtred and receiued, as ſeales of the promiſes of God, and parts of his worſhip, Baptiſme, and the Supper of the Lord.

Secondly, that which is not commended vnto vs by God, in the name of worſhip, is no worſhippe to vs. Now, the ceremonies of the Iewes, are no where commended vnto vs in that name; and therefore it is a vaine thing for any man to vow the obſeruation thereof.

Thirdly, vowes of ceremoniall duties, did, in a peculiar manner, & vpon ſpecial reſpects, pertaine to the Iewes. Hereupon, when they vowed houſe, lands, goods, &c. to the vſe of the Temple, this they did, as being the Lords Tenants, of whome alone they held their poſſeſſions: and hereby they acknowledged, and alſo teſtified their Homages and Seruices due vnto him. And this particular reſpect concerneth not the Church and people of the new Teſtament: whence it followeth, that they are not tied by the ſame bond, to performe worſhip vnto God by the vowes of ceremonies, gifts, oblations, and ſacrifices.

The third and laſt part of the Anſwer. If a vowe be taken for a promiſe of ſome bodily and outward worke, or exerciſe; as faſting, giuing of almes, abſtaining from certaine meates and drinkes, &c. then it is not any part of Gods worſhip, but onely an helpe, ſtay, and furtherance of the ſame. For firſt, we haue libertie of conſcience in Chriſt, to vſe, or not to vſe all indifferent things. Now Gods worſhip is not a thing of that nature, but abſolutely neceſſary. Secondly, Paul, 1. Tim. 4. 8. affirmeth, that bodily exerciſe profiteth little, but godlineſſe is profitable for all things: In which words, he oppoſeth godlineſſe to bodily exerciſe; and therefore godlineſſe, or the worſhip of God, conſiſteth not in them.

But the words of Dauid are alleadged to the contrarie, Pſalm. 76.11. Vowe, and performe vnto the Lord your God. Where we haue a double commaund, one to make vowes, another to pay them. To which I anſwer: firſt, if Dauid ſpeaketh of the vow of all morall duties, then the commaundement concerneth euery man, becauſe the thing commanded, is a part of Gods worſhip. For it it as much as if he had ſaid, Vow thankfull obedience vnto God, and performe it. Againe, if the place bee meant of the vow of ceremoniall duties, then it is a commaundement peculiar to the olde Teſtament, and ſo bindes the Iewes only: howbeit not al of them, but only ſuch as had iuſt cauſe to make a vow: for otherwiſe they had libertie to abſtaine from vowing, Deut, 23. 22. When thou abſtaineſt from vowing, it ſhall be no ſinne vnto thee. Of one of theſe two kindes, muſt the place alleadged neceſſarily be vnderſtood, and not of the third, which is of bodily exerciſe: for then it ſhould reuerſe Chriſtian liberty in the vſe of things indifferent, which no commandement can doe.

By light of this Anſwer, wee may diſcerne the errour of the Popiſh Church, which maketh vowes a part of religion, and the worſhip of God. Nay further, it teacheth that ſome vowes, as namely thoſe of Pouertie, Continencie, Regular Obedience to this or that Order, are workes of merit & ſupererogation, tending to a ſtate of perfection, euen in this life; and deſeruing a further degree of glory in heauen, then the worke of the Morall Law.

III. Queſtion.

When a Vowe made, doth binde, and when not?

Before I giue anſwer to the Queſtion, I will lay downe this Ground.

In making of a lawfull Vow, foure Conditions are to be obſerued.

The firſt concernes the perſon of him that voweth; that he be a fit perſon. His fitneſſe may be diſcerned by two things. Firſt, if he be at his owne libertie, (as touching the things whereof he makes his vowe,) and not vnder the gouernement of a ſuperiour. Thus in the old Teſtament, if a daughter had made a vow, without the conſent or allowance of her father, it might not ſtand in effect, Numb. 30. 4,5. Secondly, if the partie keepe himſelfe within the compaſſe of his calling generall & particular. Hence it followes, that vowes of going a Pilgrimage, to worſhip this or that idol, in this or that place: (for example, Saint Iames of Compoſtella, and the Ladie of Loretto, &c. are vtterly vnlawfull, becauſe ſuch perſons, by this practiſe doe leaue their calling and condition of life, and take vpon them a calling not warranted by the Lord.

The ſecond Condition is concerning the matter of a Vow. It muſt be Lawful, Poſſible, & Acceptable to God. Hereupon it followes, that there bee foure things, which cannot bee the matter of a Vow. The firſt is ſinne. Thus the Iewes bound themſelues with a Vow, that they would neither eate nor drinke, till they had killed Paul, Act. 23. 12. 14. This their vow was nothing elſe, but a threatning of God himſelf: and therefore vtterly vnlawfull. Secondly, trifles, and light matters; as when a man voweth not to take vp a ſtraw, or ſuch like. And this is a plaine mocking of God. Thirdly, things impoſſible: as to flie, or to goe on foot to Ieruſalem. Fourthly, things meerely neceſſarie: as to die, which cannot be auoided.

The third is touching the Forme of a Vowe. It muſt be voluntarie, and free. And that it may be ſo, three things are neceſſarily required. Firſt, that it be made in iudgement, that is, with reaſon and deliberation. Next, that it be done with conſent of wil. And thirdly, with liberty of conſcience.

Hence it appeares, that the Vowes of children, mad-men, and fooles, or ſuch as are taken vpon raſhnes, or conſtraint; alſo the vow of perpetuall abſtinence from things ſimply indifferent, are all vtterly vnlawfull. For the firſt ſort are not done vpon iudgement, the next without due conſideration, and the laſt are greatly preiudiciall to Chriſtian liberty.

The fourth concernes the Ende; which is not to bee a part of Gods worſhip, but onely a ſtay and proppe to further and helpe vs in the ſame. Now there be three particular ends of a vow. Firſt, to ſhew our ſelues thankefull to God for bleſſings receiued: ſecondly, to preuent ſinne to come, by keeping ſobrietie and moderation: thirdly, to preſerue and increaſe our faith, prayer, repentance, and obedience.

This Ground being laid, the Anſwer to the Queſtion propounded, is this: VVhen in vowing, wee obſerue the conditions præ-required, the vow is lawfull, and conſequently bindes the partie vowing, ſo as if he keepe it not, he diſhonoureth God. But when the ſaid conditions, doe not concurre in the action of vowing, it becomes vnlawfull, and the partie remaines free, & not bound to performance.

Here by the way, a Queſtion of ſome moment is made; VVhether Iephte vpon his Vowe, did offer his Daughter in ſacrifice or no? conſidering that it is plaine, euen by the light of nature, as alſo by the doctrine before taught, that a man is bound by the vow which he maketh.

This Queſtion admitteth ſundry anſwers, according to the diuers opinions and iudgements of men, vpon the place written, Iudg. 11. 39. And my purpoſe is not to examine that which others haue brought in way of reſolution, but briefly to deliuer that which I take to be the truth. I anſwer therefore, that Iephte did not offer his daughter in ſacrifice vpon his vowe, but onely dedicated her vnto God, after the maner of the Nazarites, to the end of her daies, to leade her life apart in a ſingle eſtate. The truth of this anſwer will appeare by theſe reaſons:

Firſt, in the 37. verſe of the chapter, the daughter of Iephte craues leaue of her father, to goe apart into the mountaines, for two moneths ſpace, to bewaile her virginitie. VVhere it may bee obſerued, that ſhee went not to deplore the loſſe of her life, but her future eſtate and condition, becauſe ſhee was (vpon her fathers vowe) to liue a perpetuall ſingle life. And why? ſurely becauſe (as the text ſaith, v. 39.) ſhee had not knowne a man: and it was accounted a curſe in Iudea, for a woman alwaies to liue vnmarried.

Secondly, in the laſt verſe it is ſaid in our common Engliſh tranſlation, that the daughters of Iſrael went yeare by yeare to lament the daughter of Iephte: but I take it, it may bee as well, or better tranſlated out of the Hebrew, they went to * talke or conferre with her, and ſo to comfort her: and that this interpretation may not ſeeme ſtrange, the very ſame word is obſerued in this ſenſe, Iud. 5. 11. there ſhall they * talke or confer of the righteouſnes of the Lord. Now if they went yeare by yeare to comfort her, then ſhee was not put to death.

Thirdly, Iephte is commended by the holy Ghoſt, for the excellencie of his faith, and that out of the ſame hiſtorie. Now the commendation of his faith, and the vnnaturall murther of his daughter, cannot ſtand together. But it will be ſaid, that Iephte vowed, that whatſoeuer came out of his doores to meete him, ſhould be the Lords, and he would offer it for a burnt offering, v. 31. Anſ. The words may more truly bee read thus; or I will offer it in ſacrifice. And the meaning of the vow was this: That thing which firſt meeteth mee, if it be a thing to bee ſacrificed, I will ſacrifice it: if not, I will dedicate it to to the Lord. For it ſeemes to conſiſt of two parts, whereof the latter is coupled to the former, by a diſcretiue coniunction, as the Grammarians ſpeak. In this manner the word is elſewhere taken, ſo as it may either way be expounded. In the fourth commaundement, Exod. 20. 10. in our common tranſlation it is read, thou and thy ſonne, and thy daughter; but out of the Hebrew it may be tranſlated either and, or or.

It will bee ſaid againe, that Iephte rent his cloathes, becauſe his daughter met him, when hee returned from the victorie. Anſw. That was in regard of her vowed virginitie: which was a curſe among the Iewes. And beſides, he had but one daughter, and by this meanes of ſacrificing her, all hope of poſterity after him was cut off.

But it ſeemes, that Monaſticall vowes of virginitie, by this example are lawfull. Anſ. Indeede the cuſtome of vowing virginitie beganne in thoſe daies, but they thought it not a ſtate of perfection, but rather an eſtate of miſery, as may appeare, in that hee rent his cloathes, when ſhee met him; and the daughters of Iſrael went to comfort her, as beeing now in a wofull and miſerable eſtate.

Vpon theſe reaſons I conclude, that Iephte did not offer vp his daughter in ſacrifice, but onely ſet her apart, to liue a ſingle life, to the honour and ſeruice of God. And Iephte might know, euen by the light of nature, that it was a ſinne to vow his daughters death, and a double ſinne to kill her.

IV. Queſtion.

Whether Monaſticall or Monkiſh vowes binde or no?

* Le-thannoth. So it is expounded by the Hebrew Doctors. Kimchi In Iud. 11. 40.

* Iethannu.

Heb. 11. 32.

To this the Papiſts anſwer affirmatiuely, placing the greateſt part of their religion, in practiſe and obſeruance of theſe vowes.

That we may know them the better, they are in number three. The firſt is, the vow of continencie, whereby a man renounceth Mariage for euer, and voweth vnto God perpetuall virginity. The ſecond, of Voluntary Pouerty, which is, when a man giues ouer all property of his goods, and bindes himſelfe to liue by begging. The third is, of Regular obedience, when a man reſignes himſelfe in conſcience to be ruled by another, and to keep ſome deuiſed order, in all actions and duties pertaining to religion.

Now the Queſtion beeing, whether theſe vowes binde or no? I anſwer in a word, they doe not, and that for theſe reaſons.

I. Firſt, they are flat againſt the law of God, which I make manifeſt in the particulars. The vow of perpetuall chaſtitie, is expreſly againſt Gods commandement, 1. Cor. 7. 9. If they cannot abſtaine, let them marry: for it is better to marry then to burne. To this text the Papiſts anſwer, three waies.

Firſt they ſay, that this place of Scripture is onely a diuine permiſſion, and not a commandement: we reply againe directly, that it is a plaine commandement. For the intent of the holy Ghoſt in that text, and in the whole chapter is, to ordaine a neceſſary remedy for incontinencie, which Paul cals burning, and for the auoiding of fornication, which brings deſtruction to the ſoule. And for that purpoſe, he ſpeakes not in permitting maner, but in imperatiue tearmes, Let them marrie.

Secondly they anſwer, that the words concerne only incontinent perſons, that commit fornication. Wee on the other ſide affirme, that they are not only giuen to them that liue incontinently, but to all perſons, which are ſubiect to burning, which burning may be without incontinencie.

For the better vnderſtanding whereof, let it bee conſidered, that there be three diſtinct degrees of luſt in man. The firſt is, when the temptation is firſt receiued into the minde. The ſecond, when the ſame temptation preuaileth, though with ſome reſiſtance & trouble of the minde and conſcience, which alſo (though no outward offence as yet follow) is a degree of burning. The third is, when the temptation ſo farre preuaileth, that the heart and will are ouercome, and the duties of religion for the time vtterly hindered. This is the higheſt and worſt kinde of burning. And if we conſider theſe degrees well, it will eaſily appeare, that there may be burning, without incontinent liuing.

Thirdly they anſwer, that this text ſpeakes of thoſe perſons alone that are free, not of thoſe who are bound from marriage by ſolemne vowe. Wee contrariwiſe affirme and holde, that the words are generall, and plainly directed to all perſons, bound by vowe or otherwiſe; and that appeares by verſe 35. where hee ſaies, I ſpeake not this to tangle you in a ſnare. Theſe words do ſhew, what Pauls minde was, touching the vow of perpetuall virginity: For hee leaues euery man according to Gods ordinance, to his owne libertie, willing none by vowe to binde himſelfe from the vſe thereof.

Now for the vow of Regular Obedience, that alſo is againſt the word of God, 1. Cor. 7. 27. Ye are bought with a price, bee not the ſeruants of men. VVhere the Apoſtle forbids vs to ſubiect our hearts and conſciences to the lawes and ordinances of men, in matters of Religion; and conſequently ouerthrowes the vow of Regular obedience. For, in that a man bindes himſelfe to be ruled (in all things belonging to Gods worſhip) according to the will and pleaſure of his Superiour, yea to eate, drinke, ſleepe, to be cloathed, &c. according to a certaine rule giuen and preſcribed by him; wheras in regard of conſcience we are bound only vnto God.

Laſtly, the vowe of voluntarie Pouerty, is alſo a plaine abuſe of Gods owne ordinance and appointment, Deut. 15. 4. that there ſhould be no begger in Iſrael.

But it may ſeeme, that this law is not perpetuall. For in the New Teſtament we reade, that there were beggers, as namely one, that was laide at the gate of the Temple, daily to aske almes, Act. 3. Anſ. This Law neither was then, nor is now abrogated by God, but the obſeruation of it (at that time, and ſince) was much neglected. And the neglect of prouiſion for the poore, is the cauſe of begging; and the vowe of perpetuall pouerty, ſtill remaines as a manifeſt breach of Gods holy ordinance, notwithſtanding any thing that may be pretended to the contrary.

II. The ſecond reaſon followes. Monkiſh vowes, as they are againſt Gods commandement, ſo are they alſo againſt the Libertie of Conſcience, which wee haue by Chriſt touching the vſe of the creatures, and ordinances of God; as riches, marriage, meates, drinkes, and apparell. Stand faſt, ſaith the Apoſtle, in the libertie wherewith Chriſt hath made you free, Gal. 5. 1. Againe, Let no man iudge you in meate, or in drinke, or in reſpect of an holy day, Col. 2. 16. In theſe places there is graunted vnto man, a free vſe of all things indifferent, ſo it be not in caſe of offence.

Now in Monkiſh vowes, thoſe things which God hath made indifferent, and put in our libertie, are made neceſſarie: whereas no ordinance of man, can make things ſimply neceſſarie, and parts of Gods worſhip, which hee himſelfe hath made indifferent, and left free to the will of man. And hence it was, that the forbidding of meates and marriage, were tearmed by the Apoſtle, The doctrine of diuels, 1. Tim. 4. 1.

But (will ſome ſay) doth not the ciuill Magiſtrate in our Common-wealth, forbid the vſe of ſome meates? Anſ. He doth. But by his commaundement hee takes not away the liberty that wee haue in the vſe of things indifferent, but doth onely moderate it for the common good, which he may doe lawfully. A

III. The third reaſon. Some of them are out of the power and ability of him that voweth; as the vow of perpetuall chaſtitie in ſingle life. For our Sauiour ſaith, All men cannot receiue this word, but they to whome it is giuen, Math. 19.11. that is, Continencie is a gift of God, whereof all men are not capable, but thoſe onely to whome he giueth it, when, and as long as it pleaſeth him: neither is it denied vnto ſome, becauſe they will not, but becauſe they are not able. B

Againſt this the Papiſt obiecteth, that wee may receiue any good gift of God, if we pray for it: for Chriſt hath ſaid, Aske, and ye ſhall receiue, Mat. 7.7. Anſ. It is falſe. Gods gifts are of two ſorts. Some are common to al that beleeue, and neceſſary to ſaluation: as faith, repentance, obedience, the feare of God. Some againe are ſpeciall gifts, not giuen to all, nor needfull to ſaluation, but peculiar onely to ſome: as health, wealth, continencie, ſingle life, &c. Now the promiſe of our Sauior, Aske, & ye ſhall receiue, is meant of things neceſſary to ſaluation, and not of particular and ſpeciall gifts. For ſome may pray for them, & yet neuer receiue them. Thus Paul prayed thriſe, that the pricke in his fleſh, the meſſenger of Satan, might bee remooued from him, yet he was not heard, nor his petition granted. C And why? becauſe that which he prayed for, was not a common gift neceſſary to ſaluation, but a ſpeciall grace, for the time of the temptation, wherewith hee was preſently aſſaulted: whereupon Anſwer was giuen, My grace is ſufficient for thee.

And hence wee learne in what manner to aske things at the hands of God, when wee pray. Such as are neceſſarie to ſaluation, wee may aske abſolutely and ſimply; but things that are leſſe neceſſarie, with this condition: If it may ſtand with the good will and pleaſure of God.

Againe, the Papiſt alleadgeth an example of two married perſons, the one whereof beeing D ſmitten by the hand of God, with the dead palſie, the other muſt needes pray for the gift of continencie. Anſw. In this caſe a married partie may aske it, and by Gods mercy obtaine it, becauſe now there remaines vnto him or her no other remedie. But it is not ſo with ſingle perſons, conſidering that they haue another remedie, which is marriage: and therefore they may not looke, or hope to obtaine ſuch a gift.

Thirdly, they ſay God hath giuen to al men ſufficient aide and ſtrength, that if they wil vſe the meanes, they may haue the gift of chaſtity. For ſufficient grace is giuen to all, though not effectuall. Anſ. It is falſe: there is neither ſufficient, nor effectuall grace giuen to all, to liue a ſingle life: but it is a rare and ſpecial gift giuen onely to ſome. Paul to Timothie, willeth younger women, not to endeauour to forbeare, when they haue not the gift, but in want thereof to marry, 1. Tim. 5.14. Where he takes it for graunted, that they had no ſuch power giuen them of God, to liue in perpetuall chaſtity, though they would.

IV. The fourth reaſon. Popiſh vowes do aboliſh that order, which God hath ſet in the ſociety of mankinde, to wit, that men ſhould not onely ſerue him in the duties of the firſt Table, but in the duties of the ſecond, by ſeruing of men, Gal. 5.13. By loue ſerue one another. Againe, Rom. 13.10. Loue is called the fulfilling of the law: becauſe the law of God is practiſed, not apart by it ſelfe, but in and with the loue of our neighbour. From this order it followeth, that euery man beſide the generall calling of a Chriſtian, muſt haue ſome particular kind of life, in the which he muſt walke, and therein doe ſeruice to men: which if hee refuſe to doe, he muſt not eate, according to the Apoſtles rule, 2. Theſſ. 3.10.

Now theſe vowes make a ſeparation betwixt theſe two: for they bring men into a generall calling, but they vtterly fruſtrate and make void the particular, and the duties of it: ſo as a man keeping them, cannot bee ſeruiceable to man, either in Church or commonwealth. Beſides, by the vow of pouerty, the Apoſtles rule is diſanulled, 1. Tim. 5.16. which is, that if a man be able to maintaine himſelfe, or haue any kinred able to do it, he ſhould not be chargeable to the Church: and ſo there might be ſufficient almes to them that are truly poore.

V. The fift reaſon. They bring in againe Iudaiſme: for Iewiſh Religion by Gods appointment, ſtood in bodily rites, and outward ceremonies, actions, and geſtures, yea in outward things, as garments, meates, drinks. And their rule was, touch not, taſte not: from all which we are wholly freed by Chriſt.

VI. Sixtly, theſe Vowes are idolatrous and ſuperſtitious: for they are made and obſerued with an opinion of Gods worſhip, of merit, and of the ſtate of perfection, whereas nothing can be made Gods worſhip, but that which himſelfe commaundeth. And bodily exerciſes are vnprofitable, as Paul ſaith, and therefore they cannot be meritorious. And further, to dreame of a ſtate of perfection beyond the Law of God, is to make the Law it ſelfe imperfect: whereas contrariwiſe, the Law of the Lord is perfect, righteous, and pure, Pſal. 19.7, 8.

VII. Laſtly, theſe vowes are againſt the preſeruation of nature: for by them, ſpecially that of perpetuall chaſtitie, men are brought to deſtroy euen their owne bodies and liues, which they are bound to preſerue and maintaine, Eph. 5.29. No man euer yet hated his owne fleſh, but nouriſheth and cheriſheth it. The Apoſtle, euen in his daies, noted it as a fault in a voluntarie Religion, that was then taken vp by ſome, that for the maintenance thereof, they ſpared not their owne bodies, Col. 2. 23. And like vnto that, is the practiſe of the Popiſh Votaries, which tendeth to the ruine and ouerthrow of nature & life it ſelfe.

Theſe be the reaſons. In the next place, we are to conſider the Allegations that are commonly made, in the fauour and defence of Popiſh Vowes.

And firſt it is obiected: In the Old Teſtament, Vowes were a part of Gods worſhip: therfore they are ſo to be holden in the New. Anſ. There is great difference betwene them. For firſt, they had their warrant out of Gods word: theſe haue not ſo: nay, there be expreſſe teſtimonies of Scripture againſt theſe vowes

Secondly, in their Vowes, there was alwaies right reſerued to ſuperiours, to reuerſe them, if they liked them not. But in Monaſticall vowes, all right is taken from ſuperiours. For children are permitted to vowe, and their promiſes muſt ſtand againſt parents conſent. And wiues (according to Popiſh doctrine) may vow againſt the expreſſe conſent of their husbands.

Thirdly, they were not perpetuall, but ceaſed with the ceremoniall law: But theſe are ſuppoſed to haue a perpetuall equity, that muſt continue till the end of the world.

Secondly, they alleadge that which is written, Matth. 19. 12. Some haue made themſelues chaſte for the kingdome of heauen. Anſwer. The meaning of the text is not, that ſome haue vowed ſingle life, but that there are ſome, who being aſſured that they haue the gift of continencie, vpon that gift, do endeauour to maintaine their preſent eſtate, that ſo they may the better ſerue God, and aduance his kingdome, both in themſelues and others.

Thirdly, they obiect 1. Tim. 5. 12. where Paul ſpeaks of certaine young women, which haue damnation, becauſe they haue broken their firſt faith; that is, (as they interpret it) their vow of ſingle life. Anſwer. The words are not to be vnderſtood of the faith of the vow; but either of that faith and promiſe, which was made to God in their Baptiſme, or the faith and promiſe of ſeruice and releefe to be performed to the poore; and for the breach of either of theſe, they may be ſaid to incurre damnation.

Fourthly, they ſay Chriſt himſelfe was a begger, and therefore why may not wee alſo be beggers? Anſ. Though Chriſt was poore, yet was hee no begger. For he kept a familie, and had a treaſure: Iudas was the ſteward of his familie, and bare the bagge, Ioh. 13. 29. Againe, there is mention made of 200. pence, Ioh. 6. 7. which in likelihood was in the bag that Iudas kept: yea, of the money which he had, the Diſciples are ſaid to buy meate, Ioh. 4. 8. And though it were granted, that Chriſt was a begger, yet it followes not, that wee ſhould be ſo. For his pouertie was expiatory, and part of his ſufferings. So ſaith the Apoſtle, Hee being rich, for our ſakes became poore, that we through his pouertie might bee made rich, 2. Cor. 8. 9.

Fiftly, they alleadge, that the Diſciples forſooke all, and liued in pouertie; and their example is propounded for our imitation. Anſ. They forſooke all indeede, yet how? not for euer, but for a time; and that not by vowe, but onely in affection and diſpoſition of their hearts. For after they had forſaken all, wee reade, that they came to their nettes and boates againe, Ioh. 21. 3. Againe, the Apoſtle Paul ſpeakes of himſelfe and the reſt, when hee ſaith, Haue wee not power to leade about a wife beeing a ſiſter? 1. Cor. 9. 5. By which it is plaine, that they put not away their wiues.

Sixtly, Mat. 19. 21. If thou wilt be perfect (ſaith Chriſt to the young man) goe ſell all that thou haſt, and giue to the poore, & thou ſhalt haue treaſure in heauen, and come and follow mee. Here (ſaith the Papiſt) our Sauiour preſcribes perpetuall pouertie, by expreſſe counſell.

Anſw. The words are no counſell, but a ſpeciall Commaundement of triall, directed to this young man. And the end of it was, to diſcouer vnto him his ſecret pride and hypocriſie, in that he boaſted, that he had kept all the commaundements, when as indeede hee knew not what they meaned.

Laſtly, they obiect the example of the Recabites, who according to the commaundement of their father Ionadab, would drinke no wine, nor dwell in houſes, nor build, nor plant, nor ſowe, Ier. 35. 8, 9, 10. and the Lord approoueth their practiſe. Anſ. They did obey their fathers commaund in theſe things, as beeing things indifferent, but not as parts of Gods worſhippe in the doing whereof they placed Religion. And they obeyed it carefully, for this end, that they might inure themſelues vnto hardſhippe. Secondly, this their obedience touching theſe things, ſtood not by any vowe, much leſſe was it perpetuall. For then they ſhould haue obſerued all the things which they vowed, equally, which they did not; for they diſpenſed with their fathers voluntary iniunction for dwelling in Tents, and as we reade, verſ. 11. They came vp, for feare of the Chaldeans, that were in the land, and dwelt at Ieruſalem.

And ſo much touching Popiſh Vowes, whereof to conclude, this may be ſaid: That they are all, but a meere will worſhip, ſtanding vpon no ground or warrant of Gods word, and therefore of no force to binde the conſciences of men, but are to bee holden as they are in truth, wicked and abhominable.

CHAP. XV.

Of Faſting.

THe eight Head of the outward worſhip of God, is faſting.

By Faſting I underſtand the Religious Faſt, which is ioyned with the duties of Religion; and namely, the exerciſes of Prayer and Humiliation. Touching it, there are three principall Queſtions to be handled in their order.

I. Queſtion.

What is a Religious Faſt?

Anſ. It is a voluntarie and extraordinarie abſtinence, taken vp for a religious end: what this end is, we ſhall ſee afterward.

Firſt, I call it voluntarie, becauſe the time, and particular manner of Faſting, is not impoſed, or determined, but left free to our own libertie. Againe, I tearme it extraordinary, to diſtinguiſh it from ordinary faſting, which ſtands in the practiſe of temperance and ſobriety, whereby the appetite is reſtrained in the vſe of meates and drinkes, that it doe not exceed moderation. Now this kinde of faſt is to be vſed of all Chriſtians, at al times: whereas the extraordinary is not daily and ordinarily to be practiſed, but vpon ſpeciall occaſions, and at ſpeciall times, in as much as it is a more ſtrait and ſeuere abſtinence, then the other.

II. Queſtion.

How a Religious Faſt is to be obſerued?

Anſ. For the obſeruation of it, three things are required.

I. A iuſt and weightie cauſe.
II. A right manner.
III. Right ends.

Sect. 1.

The iuſt cauſe of a Faſt.

Faſting is then to bee vſed, when a iuſt and weightie cauſe or occaſion thereof is offered. There be two iuſt cauſes of a faſt.

The firſt is, when ſome iudgement of God hangs ouer our heads, whether it bee publike, as Famine, Peſtilence, the Sword, deſtruction, &c. or priuate. The Prophet Ioel in the name of the Lord, cals the Iewes to a ſtraight & ſolemne faſt, and that vpon this iuſt occaſion, becauſe the Lord had ſent a great dearth vpon the land, Ioel 2. 14, 15, &c. Heſter and her company faſted when ſhee had heard newes of the intended deſtructiō of the Iewes, Eſter 4. 16. The people of Niniue, which were not Iewes, but forreiners in regard of the Couenant, when the Prophet came and denounced deſtruction vnto them for their ſinnes, they gaue themſelues generally to faſting and prayer, Ion. 3, 5, 8.

The ſecond cauſe of faſting is, when wee are to ſue, and ſeeke by prayer to God for ſome ſpeciall bleſſing, or for the ſupply of ſome great want. Thus, when Daniel deſired to obtaine the deliuerance of the children of Iſrael, out of captiuitie in Babylon, hee gaue himſelfe to faſting, Dan. 10. 3. Thus Chriſt faſted, and ſpent the whole night in prayer vnto God, before hee choſe his twelue Apoſtles, Luk. 6. 12. And in like manner, Paul and Silas when they were to found and plant Churches, vſed prayer and faſting, Act. 14. 23. becauſe in theſe matters of ſo great importance, they looked for ſpeciall direction from God himſelfe. Laſtly, Anna, that ſhee might be more feruent in prayer, faſted night and day in the Temple, Luk. 2. 37.

The ſecond point is the Right manner of faſting, which ſtands in three things.

The firſt is, abſtinence from meat & drink: for therein conſiſteth the very nature of a faſt: and if that be wanting, it is no faſt at all. Thus Eſter commaunding the Iewes to faſt for her, bids them neither eate nor drinke for three daies, Eſter 4. 16.

The ſecond is, an abſtinence from all delights, which may any way cheare and refreſh nature. In this ſort Daniel faſted three whole weekes of daies, abſtaining from all pleaſant bread, fleſh, wine, and ointments, Dan. 10. 3. So when Dauid faſted, it is ſaid that he lay all the night vpon the earth, that he neither waſhed, nor annointed himſelfe, nor changed his apparell, 2. Sam. 12. 16. 20. In the ſolemne faſt of the Iewes, the bridegroome and bride muſt come out of their chambers, Ioel 2. 15, 16. By theſe places it is manifeſt, that in a true faſt, there is required not onely abſtinence from meate and drinke, but from all delights, recreations, and other things that might refreſh the nature of man. By this the Popiſh faſting is iuſtly reprooued: wherein, though men are enioyned to abſtaine from fleſh, yet there is giuen liberty to vſe other delicates.

The third thing in the manner of a Faſt is, ſo farre forth to abſtaine from meate, and other delights, as the body may be thereby afflicted. Ezra proclaimes a faſt, and hee giues a reaſon thereof, that himſelfe and the people might afflict themſelues, Ezra 8, 2. This afflicting of a mans ſelfe is expounded by Paul, 1. Cor. 9. 27. where hee ſaith, I beate downe my body and bring it in ſubiection. Now though wee muſt humble and afflict our bodies by faſting, yet we ought not to weaken, aboliſh, or deſtroy nature, or do that whereby the ſtrength of nature may be taken away. For ſuch afflicting is forbidden, Col. 2. 23. And contrariwiſe, wee are commaunded by Chriſt to pray for daily bread, that is, ſuch food as is fit to ſuſtaine our ſubſtances, and therefore we may not by ſuch exerciſes ouerthrow the ſame.

Yet for the better vnderſtanding of the manner of Faſting, three Queſtions are to be anſwered.

I. Queſtion. How long the Faſt muſt continue?

Anſ. The beginning and end of a Faſt, is left vnto our libertie. But it is ſo long to bee kept, as the principall actions of the faſt, that is, humiliation and prayer, doe continue. And though the beginning and end thereof be free to vs, yet it is moſt meete and conuenient, that ſolemne faſts ſhould beginne in the Morning, and laſt till the Euening. This was the vſuall cuſtome of the Church in the old Teſtament.

II. Queſtion. Whether in the day of a ſolemne faſt, a man may eate any thing or no? and if he may, what? and how often?

Anſw. We may eate, and that (if neede require) once or twiſe. Yet here we muſt take with vs two caueats. Firſt, concerning the quantitie of our meate; it muſt be leſſe then ordinarie, and onely that which is neceſſarie to preſerue nature, and no more: for if it be otherwiſe, we aboliſh our faſt. Secondly, concerning the qualitie of that we eate; It muſt not be daintie and pleaſant, but the meaneſt food, and ſuch as hath leaſt delightſomnes & delicacy in it. Thus Daniel faſted for three weekes of daies, from morning to euening; in which time he eate but a ſmall quantitie of meate, and that which was none of the daintieſt, Dan. 10. 3.

These caueats obſerued, a man may lawfully take ſome ſuſtenance, euen in the time of a ſolemne faſt. For there is no kinde of meate but may then be eaten, quantitie and qualitie beeing obſerued. In the old Teſtament, no cleane beaſt was forbidden to be eaten in the day of a faſt. And in the New, To the pure, ſaith Paul, Tit. 1. 15. all things are pure. And the kingdome of God ſtands not in meates and drinkes, but in righteouſneſſe, peace, and ioy in the holy Ghoſt.

Rom. 14. 17.

III. Queſt. Whether all perſons are bound to keepe the forme preſcribed, in the day of the ſolemne faſt?

Anſw. All that are able, and can abſtaine, are bound. Yet becauſe Gods worſhip ſtands not in eating or not eating, ſome perſons are here exempted.

Firſt, all thoſe that are weake, as children, aged perſons, and thoſe that are ſickely. Secondly, they that, by reaſon of the conſtitution of their bodies, do find themſelues vnfit to pray, and heare the word cheerefully, when their ſtomacks are empty. Theſe perſons may eate in the day of a ſolemne faſt, ſo that they obſerue the caueats before remembred. It is not with vs in theſe countries, as it was with the Iewes: They could faſt one, two, or three daies together, without any inconuenience; we cannot doe the like. And the reaſon is plaine. Men that liue in thoſe hotte countries, haue cold ſtomackes, & ſo may faſt the longer; but in colder climates, ſuch as ours is, in reſpect of theirs, men beeing of hotter ſtomackes, are not able to continue faſting ſo long as they.

Sect. 3.

The right ends of faſting.

The third point is, concerning the Right endes of a religious faſt, and they are foure.

The firſt is, to ſubdue the fleſh, that is, to bring the body, and ſo the bodily luſts, into ſubiection to the will and word of God. By eating and drinking, the bodie is made heauie, the heart oppreſſed, the ſenſes dull, and the whole man vnfit for the duties of humiliation, prayer, and hearing of the word, Luk. 21. 24. That therefore this vnfitneſſe may be taken away, not onely the body it ſelfe, but the vnruly luſts of the fleſh are to be mortified and ſubdued, by this exerciſe of faſting.

The ſecond end is, to ſtirre vp our deuotion, & to confirme the attention of our minds in hearing and in prayer. To this purpoſe in the Scripture, faſting and prayer are for the moſt part, if not alwaies, ioyned together, becauſe, when the ſtomacke is full, the body and minde are leſſe able to doe any good duty; and contrariwiſe, when abſtinence is vſed, the heart is lighter, the affections in better order, the whole man more quicke and liuely in the ſeruice of God. For this very cauſe Anna is ſaid, to worſhip God night and day with faſting and prayer, Luke 2. 37. And the intent of the holy Ghoſt there, is to commend her for the feruencie of her prayer, which ſhee teſtified, in that by ſuch exerciſes, ſhee ſtirred vp and increaſed the attention of her minde.

The third end is, to teſtifie the humilitie and contrition of our hearts, that is to ſay, our inward ſorrow and griefe for ſinne, and our repentance and effectuall turning vnto God. Without this end, the faſt is but a vaine ceremonie. And therefore the Prophet Ioel cals vpon the people to turne vnto the Lord with all their hearts, with faſting, weeping, & mourning, to rent their hearts, and not their garments, &c. Ioel, 2. 12. 13. The Prophet Eſay in like manner, reprooueth the Iewes, becauſe when they faſted, they would afflict their ſoules for a day, and bow downe their heads as a bulruſh, and lie downe in ſackecloath and aſhes: but made no conſcience to turne from their euill waies, Eſay. 58. 5, 6. Therefore their outward humiliation was but hypocriſie.

The fourth end of a faſt, is to admoniſh vs of our guiltines before the Lord, and to put vs in mind of the acknowledgement of our ſins, whereby we become vnworthy of any bleſſing, gift, or mercie, yea, vnworthy to goe vpon the ground, to breathe in the aire, to eate, drinke, ſleepe, or enioy any other benefit. In a word, that we haue deſerued by our ſinnes all the plagues and puniſhments threatned in the Law againſt ſinners. The Malefactor in the day of Aſſiſes, cannot giue greater teſtimonie of the true confeſſion of his guiltineſſe, then by comming before the Iudge, with the rope about his necke; neither can we bring a more notable ſigne of our true humiliation before God, then by comming before him, in the day of the ſolemne faſt, with open confeſſion and proclamation of our guiltineſſe, both of ſinne and puniſhment. Hence it was, that in the faſt of Nineue, not onely men, but euen the beaſts were forbidden to feede or drinke water, for this very end, that the Nineuites might acknowledge their ſinnes to be ſo great, and heinous in the ſight of God, that in regard thereof, not onely the reaſonable creatures themſelues, but alſo the beaſts of the field, for their ſakes, were vnworthy of life and nouriſhment.

III. Queſtion.

Whether Popiſh Faſts be lawfull, and approoved of God?

Anſw. They are wicked, and therefore neither approoued of God, nor to be obſerued by man, and that for three ſpeciall cauſes.

First, the patrons and maintainers of them, doe appoint ſet times of faſting, which are neceſſarily to be kept, vpon paine of mortall ſinne. And abſtinence from fleſh (with them) is made a matter of conſcience. Now to preſcribe ſet times neceſſarily to be obſerued, is contrarie to that libertie, which the Church of God and the gouernours thereof haue for this purpoſe, onely vpon ſpeciall occaſion. When the queſtion was mooued to our Sauiour by Iohns Diſciples, Why they and the Phariſies faſted often, whereas his faſted not, Anſwer was giuen in this manner, Can the children of the marriage chamber mourne, as long as the bridegroome is with them? But the daies will come, when the bridegroome ſhall be taken away from them, and then ſhall they faſt. Math. 9. 15. From whence we may gather, that times of faſting muſt be, according to the times of mourning. For Chriſt giues them to vnderſtand, that they were to faſt, as occaſions of mourning were offered. As therefore, there can be appointed no ſet time for mourning, no more can there be enioyned a ſet time for faſting, but muſt be left to the libertie of the Church, to be preſcribed, as God ſhal giue occaſion. Againe the Apoſtle reprooueth the Church of Galatia, for obſeruing ſet daies, & monethes, and times, and yeares, in way of Religion. Gal. 4. 10. Montanus the Hereticke is thought (in Eccleſiaſticall ſtories) to haue bin the firſt, that made lawes of ſet-faſting. And the Churches of God in auncient times, faſted of their owne accords freely, not inforced by law or commandement, but as time and occaſion ſerued.

Euſeb. Hiſt. Eccle. l. 5. c. 17.

It is alleadged, that this doctrine ſeemes to challenge the Church of England of Hereſie: for it appointeth and obſerueth ſet times of faſt. Anſ. Nothing leſſe. For our Church inioyneth and approoueth theſe times, not vpon neceſſitie, or for religions ſake, but for ciuill and politicke reſpects: whereas the Romiſh Church, holds it a mortall ſinne, to put off a ſet faſt appointed, ſo much as till the next day following.

The ſecond reaſon. They of the Church of Rome make a diſtinction of meates. For A they wholly forbidde fleſh to be eaten vpon daies of faſt, & allow whit-meates onely then to be vſed, and that of neceſſitie. Now this difference of meates is partly impious, partly abſurd and fooliſh.

Impious it is, becauſe they make it for Religions ſake. For ſince the comming of Chriſt, there is a liberty giuen to al men whatſoeuer, to eate of all kinds of meates, without any diſtinctiō: commanding abſtinence from nothing, which God hath created; to be receiued with thankſgiuing. It is true indeede we hold a difference betweene meate and meate, but how? not in way of religion, but in regard of temperance and health, for ciuill B and politicke vſes and reſpects. As for the other, we reſt vpon the word of God, and hold it with Paul, a doctrine of Diuels, to commaund forbearance of meates, in regard of conſcience, 1. Tim. 4. 3.

But to this place of Paul, they giue anſwer and ſay, that it is ſpoken of Heretikes, ſuch as the Manichees, and Nouatians, &c. were, that held meates in their owne nature vncleane. We on the other ſide reply, and ſay, that this text condemnes thoſe that make meates any way vncleane. And that the Papiſts doe put this difference, in way of religion, and conſcience; as appeareth by their ſtreight prohibitions of fleſh as vncleane, and that for conſcience ſake. And this text they ſhall neuer be able to ſhift off: for it plainely condemneth any C ſuch diſtinction, ſeeing to the pure, all things are pure: and euery creature of God is good, and nothing to be refuſed, ſo it be receiued with thankſgiuing, 1. Tim. 4. 4.

Furthermore, this difference of meates is alſo fooliſh. For firſt, the light of nature and common ſenſe teacheth, that in ſuch meates, as they permit, there is as much delicacie, pleaſure, and contentment, yea, as much) if not more) ſtrength: for example: in ſome fiſh, fruits, and wines, as in fleſh by them forbidden. Yea, Saint Paul aſcribes fleſh vnto fiſhes, 1. Cor. 15. 39. There is one fleſh of men, another of beaſts, another of fiſhes, &c. Secondly, I call it fooliſh, because in their ſet Faſts they D forbid fleſh, but permit diuers wines, and the dantieſt iuncates that the Apothecaries ſhop can affoard: whereas in a ſolemne faſt, all meates, drinkes, and all other delights, of what kinde and nature ſoeuer, are to be forborne. For this was the practiſe of the Church in former times, to forbeare not onely ordinarie foode, but ſoft apparell, ſweete oyntments, and whatſoeuer it was, that ſerued to refreſh and cheare the heart, as hath beene ſhewed.

The third Reaſon. The Church of Rome giueth to their faſtings, falſe and erronious ends: as namely, to merit ſomething at the hands of God thereby, to ſatiſfie his iuſtice for ſinne, and to be true and proper parts of his worſhip. And that theſe are falſe and erronious, I prooue by theſe reaſons.

Firſt, they doe wholly fruſtrate the death of Chriſt, which is the onely thing in the world appointed by God, to be meritorious and ſatisfactorie.

Secondly, Faſting of it ſelfe, is a thing indifferent, neither good nor euill. For though it be referred to a religious end, which is the humbling of the ſoule; yet it is not good in it ſelfe, but onely in regard of the end. Neither is it any part of Gods worſhip, being ſo referred, but onely a proppe and furtherance, ſeruing (in the right vſe thereof) to make a man more fit for the duties of Gods ſeruice.

Thirdly, theſe ends if they be well conſidered, cannot be the true ends of faſting, as will appeare by this example. A begger at our doores, entreats an almes, we giue it, and he receiues it. But will any man ſay, that by begging he doth merit or deſerue his almes? In like manner we are all beggers, that haue nothing of our owne, neither foode, nor raiment, nor any other bleſſing we doe enioy, but all we haue, commeth vnto vs only from God. Well, vpon iuſt occaſion we giue our ſelues to faſting, we pray earneſtly vnto him for mercie, in the pardon of our ſinnes. In this caſe, is it not great madneſſe to thinke, that we by begging mercie can merit mercie at the hands of God? But prayer (ſaith the Papiſt) as it is prayer, merits nothing, but as it is a good worke. Anſ. Prayer as it is a good worke, is no other then begging: and then it is vnpoſſible, that it ſhould be meritorious, vnleſſe it be granted, that begging is meritorious, which cannot be.

Theſe reaſons conſidered; I conclude, that Popiſh faſts, which ſtand in force among them at this day, are wicked and damnable, and conſequently to be aboliſhed, if it were no more, but for the blaſphemous endes which they make of them.

And thus much touching this point of Faſting, as alſo concerning the other Heads of Gods outward worſhip.

CHAP. XVI.

Of the Sabbath day.

THe fourth maine Queſtion touching man, as he ſtands in relation to God, is concerning the Time of Gods worſhippe. Wherein certaine particular Queſtions are to be reſolued touching the Sabbath day.

The firſt, and moſt principall of all the reſt, is this;

Whether it be in the libertie of the Church of God vpon earth, to alter the Sabbath day from the ſeauenth day, to any other?

A In anſwering to this Queſtion I will not reſolutely determine, but onely propound that which I thinke is moſt probable.

Firſt therefore I anſwer negatiuely: That it is not in the Churches libertie, to alter the Sabbath, from the Seuenth day, The reaſons are theſe.

I. Reaſon. The ſubſtance of the fourth commandement is vnalterable. Now the ſanctifying of a reſt vpon the ſeuenth day, is the ſubſtance of the fourth commandement. Therefore the ſanctifying of the reſt of the ſeuenth day, is vnalterable in regard of any creature.

That the truth of this reaſon may appeare, two things are to be conſidered. Firſt, what is changeable and temporarie in the Sabbath: B and then what is morall and perpetuall.

Sect. 1.

What is ceremoniall in the Sabbath.

The things which are temporarie and ceremoniall in the Sabbath day, are theſe.

I. That rigorous and preciſe reſt, preſcribed to the Iewes, which ſtood in the ſtraight obſeruation of three things.

Firſt, the Iew might not on the Sabbath goe forth, or take a iourney any whither, for any matter or buſines of his owne. For of this there was a ſpeciall commaundement giuen, Exod. 16.29. Tarrie euery man in his place let no man goe out of his place the ſeaueuth day: namely, to doe any worke or buſines of his own whatſoeuer.

Secondly, the Iew might not kindle a fire C vpon the Sabbath day. For ſo ſaith the Lord by Moſes, Ye ſhall kindle no fire throughout your habitations, &c. Exod. 35.3 It will be then ſaid, How did they for meate and fire in winter? Anſ. They prepared and dreſſed their meate, the day before: as they were commaunded, Exod. 16.24. And for fires in winter, if they had any vpon the Sabbath, it was neceſſarie (as I ſuppoſe) that as they dreſt their meate the day before, ſo they ſhould then beginne their fire alſo, which being then begun, might be preſerued on the Sabbath.

Thirdly, the Iewe might not carrie a burden. This the Lord did expreſſely forbidde them by the Prophet Ieremie. Thus ſaith the Lord, Carrie no burdens vpon the Sabbath day, D neither bring them in by the gates of Ieruſalem, &c. Ier. 17.21. And Nehemiah charged the men of Iudah, with the prophanation of the Sabbath in that kinde, Neh. 13.15, 16, 17. In theſe three particulars, ſtood the ſtrict obſeruation of the Iewiſh reſt, which is altogether temporarie, and doth not concerne the times of the New Teſtament, becauſe it was onely typicall, the Sabbath beeing (in regard of that manner of reſt) a figure of the moſt ſtrict ſpirituall reſt from all ſinne, in thought, word, and deede, required of euery true beleeuer.

II. Againe, in the Sabbath this was ceremoniall and temporarie, that it was a ſpeciall ſigne betweene God and his people, of the bleſſings that were propounded and promiſed in the Couenant, Exod. 31.13. And theſe were principally two. Firſt, it was a ſigne of their ſanctification, to teach them, that as the Lord had ſet apart a day of reſt, ſo he did and would ſanctifie the obſeruers thereof vnto himſelfe, by forgiuing their ſinnes, and receiuing them into his fauour, in and by the Meſſias to come. Secondly, it was ordained by God, to figure and ſignifie the euerlaſting reſt of Gods children, in the kingdome of heauen. Of this the Prophet Eſay ſpeakes, when he ſaith, that from moneth to moneth, and from Sabbath to Sabbath, all fleſh ſhall come to worſhip before God, Eſa. 66. 23. And the author to the Hebrewes, There remaines therefore a Sabbatiſme, or reſt to the people of God, Heb. 4. 9.

III. Furthermore, this was temporarie in the Sabbath, that it was to be obſerued vpon a ſet day, namely, the ſeauenth from the Creation, and that with ſet rites and ceremonies. So ſaith Moſes, The ſeauenth day is the Sabbath, Deut. 5. 14. Againe, On the Sabbath day, ye ſhall offer two lambes of a yeare old, without ſpot, and two tenth deales of fine flower, for a meate offering mingled with oyle, and the drinke offering thereof: and the burnt offering of euery Sabbath, beſide the continuall burnt offering, and the drinke offering thereof, Numb. 28. 9. 10.

IV. This alſo was Ceremoniall, that it was to be obſerued, in remembrance of their deliuerance out of Egypt. Remember that thou waſt a ſeruant in the land of Egypt, and the Lord thy God brought thee out thence, by a mightie hand, and ſtretched out arme: therefore the Lord thy God commaunded thee to obſerue the Sabbath day, Deut. 5. 15.

Sect. 2.

Now, as there were ſome things temporarie and Ceremoniall in the Sabbath, ſo there are ſome things in it perpetuall and Morall: and thoſe I take it are three eſpecially.

Firſt, that there ſhould be a day of reſt, in which man and beaſt might be refreſhed after labour.

Secondly, that this day ſhould be ſanctified, that is, ſet apart to the worſhip of God. Theſe two firſt, are therefore morall, becauſe they are expreſſely mentioned in the Commandement touching the Sabbath.

Thirdly, that a ſeauenth day ſhould be ſanctified to an holy reſt, and that this holy reſt ſhould be obſerued in a ſeauenth day. I ſay not in this or that ſeauenth day, but in one of the ſeauen.

Now that this alſo is morall, it appeares by theſe reaſons.

Firſt, the Sabbath of the ſeauenth day, was inſtituted and appointed by God in Paradiſe, before the fall of man, and the reuealing of Chriſt; yea euen then, when there was one condition of all men. This is plainely ſet downe in Gen. 2. as alſo in the fourth Commandement. And vpon this ground it is manifeſt, that a Sabbath of a ſeauenth day cannot be a Ceremonie ſimply, conſidering the ordination thereof was in time long before all Ceremonies. If it be obiected, that it was made a ceremonie afterward: I anſwer, that the reaſon is naught. For matrimonie was ordained in Paradiſe, and afterward made ceremoniall, to ſignifie the ſpirituall vnion betweene Chriſt and his Church, and yet Matrimonie is perpetuall: and ſo is a Sabbath of a ſeauenth day. If it be againe alleadged, that God did then keepe a ſeauenth day in his own perſon, and afterward inioyned it to man by his commaundement: I anſwer, that the inſtitution of the Sabbath in Paradiſe, conſiſted of two parts, Bleſſing, and Sanctification; and the meaning of the holy Ghoſt is, that God did both bleſſe it in regard of himſelfe, becauſe he kept it in his owne perſon, and hallowed it alſo in regard of man, by commanding it to be ſanctified, and kept in performance of holy duties.

Secondly, the reaſons of the fourth Commaundement are generall, and the equitie of them is perpetuall, and they haue this end, to vrge the reſt of a ſeauenth day. Let them be conſidered in particular. The firſt, in theſe words, Sixe daies ſhalt thou labour. Which ſome take to be a permiſſion: as if God ſhould haue ſaid thus; If I permit thee ſixe, thou ſhalt allow me a ſeauenth. But they may be alſo taken for a commaundement, inioyning labour in the ſixe daies; firſt, becauſe they are propounded in commanding tearmes: ſecondly, becauſe they are an expoſition of the curſe laid vpon Adam, Thou ſhalt eate thy bread in the ſweate of thy face, namely, in the ſixe daies: and thirdly, becauſe idlenes, the ſpoile of mankind, is there forbidden. This beeing ſo, there muſt needes be a ſeauenth day, not onely of reſt, to eaſe them that labour in the ſixe daies, but alſo of an holy reſt, that God might be worſhipped in it. The ſecond reaſon is taken from Gods example: For in ſixe daies, the Lord made heauen and earth, &c. That which the Lord himſelfe hath done in perſon, the ſame muſt man doe by his commaundement: But the Lord himſelfe in ſixe daies laboured, and reſted the ſeauenth: therefore man muſt doe the ſame. This reaſon made by God to the creature, muſt ſtand in force, till he reuerſe it, which yet he hath not done, nor doth. If then theſe reaſons doe not onely inforce a reſt, and an holy reſt, but a reſt on the ſeauenth day; then this reſt on the ſeauenth day, is a part of the fourth Commandement: and conſequently, the Church cannot alter it from the Sabbath day, becauſe they cannot alter the ſubſtance of that Commandement which is eternall.

II. Reaſon. The Sabbath day in the new Teſtament, (in all likelihood) is tyed to that, which we call the Lords day, and that) as I take it) by Chriſt himſelfe. The reaſons thereof are theſe.

I. The Sabbath day of the new Teſtament is called the Lords day, Apoc. 1. 10. Now I ſuppoſe, (for in theſe points ſtill we muſt goe by likelihoods) it is called the Lords day, as the laſt Supper of Chriſt is called the Lords Supper, for two cauſes. Firſt, as God reſted the ſeauenth day after the Creation, ſo Chriſt hauing ended the worke of the new creation, reſted on this day from his worke of redemption. Secondly, as Chriſt did ſubſtitute the laſt Supper in roome of the Paſſeouer, ſo he ſubſtituted the firſt day of the weeke in roome of the Iewes Sabbath, to be a day ſet apart to his owne worſhip.

II. The Church of Corinth euery firſt day of the weeke, made a collection for the poore, as we may read, 1. Cor. 16. 2. and this collection for the poore in the Primitiue Church followed the preaching of the Word, Prayer, and the Sacraments, as a fruite thereof, Act. 2, v. 42. For theſe be Sabbath exerciſes, that went alwaies together in the Apoſtolicall church. But it will be ſaid, that collecting for the Saints, is a matter of indifferencie, & may be done vpon any day, as well as vpon the Sabbath. To this I anſwer, that Paul commands the Corinths to do it, as he had ordained it in the church of Galatia: whereby he makes it to be an Apoſtolicall, and therefore a diuine ordinance. Yea, that very text doth in ſome part manifeſt thus much, that it is an ordinance and inſtitution of Chriſt, that the firſt day of the weeke ſhould be the Lords day. For Paul commaundeth nothing, but what he had from Chriſt.

III. Chriſt and his Apoſtles kept the firſt day of the weeke as the Sabbath. For Chriſt roſe againe the firſt day of the weeke, and appeared to his Diſciples, Ioh. 20. 19. and eight daies after he appeared againe to Thomas, verſ. 26. which was the next firſt day of the weeke. And this hath beene the opinion of ſundrie auncient Diuines. (a) Cyrill vpon Iohn ſayes, that this eight day was without doubt the Lords day, and ſo ought to be kept, becauſe it is likely Chriſt himſelfe kept it holy. And the ſame is affirmed and taught by (b) Auguſtine and (c) Chryſoſtome. Againe, the Apoſtles alſo kept it. For when the Holy Ghoſt deſcended vpon them, they were again aſſembled vpon this day, Act. 2. v. 1. which I prooue thus. The day of Pentecoſt was the firſt day of the weeke: for the Iewes were commaunded to bring a ſheafe of their firſt fruits, the morrow after the Sabbath in the Paſſeouer, Leuit. 23. 10. &c. and betwixt that & Pentecoſt, they were to reckon fifty daies. Hence it followeth, that the day of Chriſts reſurrection, falling the morrow after the Iewes Sabbath, which is the firſt day of the weeke; Pentecoſt muſt needs fall on that day: and therefore the Apoſtles met the ſame day, and not they onely, but alſo the whole church gathered themſelues together, and celebrated this day with preaching of the Word, & adminiſtration of the Sacraments, Act. 20. 7. And according to this inſtitution of Chriſt, and the examples of his Apoſtles, hath bin the conſtant practiſe of the church, from their times vntill now.

IV. That which was prefigured, in that it was prefigured, was preſcribed: but the Lords day was prefigured in the eight day, wherein the children of the Iewes were circumciſed: therefore it was preſcribed to be kept the eight day. Thus the ancient Fathers, by name Cyprian & Auguſtine, haue reaſoned & taught. Againe, the day of Chriſts reſurrection was prefigured by that day, wherein the ſtone which the builders refuſed, was made the head of the corner, Pſal. 118 verſ. 24. and in that it was prefigured, it was appointed by God. For then it appeared to be true which Peter ſaith of Chriſt, that God had made him both Lord and Chriſt, Act. 2, 36. And the ſame may be ſaid of the Sabbath of the new Teſtament, that it was in the figure preordained, and therefore limited and determined by our Sauiour Chriſt vnto the Lords day. Other reaſons might be added, but they are onely coniectures: theſe be the principall.

III. Reaſon. God is Lord of times and ſeaſons, and therfore in all equitie, the altering and diſpoſing thereof is in his hands, and belongs to him alone, Act. 1. 10. Times and ſeaſons the Father hath kept in his owne hand. Againe, Chriſt is called the Lord of the Sabbath. And Antiochus Epiphanes is condemned by the holy Ghoſt, becauſe hee tooke vpon him to alter times, Dan. 7. 25. Beſides that, Daniel ſaith, that it is God alone that changeth times and ſeaſons, Dan. 2. 21. Now if it be proper vnto God, as to create, ſo to determine and diſpoſe of times, then he hath not left the ſame to the power of any creature. And therfore, as the knowledge thereof, ſo the appointment, and alteration of the ſame, either in generall, or particular, belongs not to the Church, but is reſerued to him. The church then, neither may nor can alter the Sabbath day. And this is the firſt part of the anſwer.

Sect. 2.

The ſecond is this: If the Church had libertie to alter the Sabbath, then this alteration muſt be made within the compaſſe of the weeke, to the ſixt, or fift, or fourth, or ſecond or third, or firſt day, and not to the eight, or ninth, or tenth daies, without the compaſſe of the weeke. The reaſon is plaine. The Church of the new Teſtament, hath more knowledge and more grace, then the people of the old Teſtament had, and in that regard, ought to haue more zeale, and greater alacritie in the worſhip of God then they had, that it may exceede the Iewes according to the meaſure of grace receiued. And thus the firſt and principall Queſtion touching the Sabbath, is anſwered and reſolued.

Sect. 3.

Now, before I come to the next, let vs in the meane while ſee and examine the Reaſons that are brought againſt the anſwer pre-ſently

a Cyril. l. 11. in Ioh. c. 58

b Ad Caſulanum, Epi. 86. ad Ianuarium. Epi. 119. cap. 13.

c Serm. 5. de reſurrect.

ſently made. Firſt therfore it is alleadged, that in the new Teſtament there is no difference of daies. For if we haue or make difference of daies, we are in truth no better then Iewes. That there is no diſtinction of daies, they prooue out of two places. The firſt is, Col. 2. 16. where the Apoſtle ſaies, Let no man condemne you in reſpect of an holy day, or of the new Moone, or of the Sabbath day. The ſecond, Gal. 4. 10. where the ſame Apoſtle reprooues the Galatians for obſeruing daies, and moneths, and times, and yeares.

To this I anſwer, that both the places ſpeake of the Feaſts of the Iewes, and of differēce of daies, that ſtands in force by the Iewiſh ceremoniall law. Paul to the Coloſſians, warnes them to giue no occaſion to others, whereby they might iuſtly condemne them, for obſeruing of daies in ſuperſtitious maner, vpon opinion of holineſſe and neceſſitie, as if mens conſciences were bound to ſuch obſeruation. And he reprooues the Galatians, for obſeruing daies (as it is likely they did) not onely in the Iewiſh, but alſo in the heatheniſh manner. To which purpoſe Paul ſaith, ver. 11. He is afraid of them. His meaning was, becauſe they placing their ſaluation (in part) in their Iewiſh obſeruation of daies, after they had beene informed touching their libertie in Chriſt, did thereby mixe the Goſpel with the Law: and therefore he feared, leſt by that meanes Chriſt ſhould become vnto them vnprofitable, and ſo his preaching to ſmall or no purpoſe.

Againe, they alleadge Rom. 14. 5. where Paul ſaith, One man eſteemes one day better then another, and another man counteth euery day alike. In which words the Apoſtle blameth not them, which thinke all daies as one.

Anſ. In the new Teſtament, all daies be as one, in regard of the aptneſſe thereof to the worſhip of God: and yet there may be a difference of daies in regard of order: & this Paul no where condemneth. That we may the better conceiue this diſtinction, we muſt conſider a difference betweene the Iewes Sabbath and ours, which is this; That the Iewes Sabbath was both the time of the worſhip of God, and alſo a part of his worſhip. But the Sabbath of the new Teſtament, though it be a neceſſarie time of Gods worſhip, yet it is not a part thereof. If it be ſaid, that it is commanded, therfore it muſt needs be a part of Gods worſhip: I anſwer, It is commaunded not as Gods worſhip for ſubſtance, but in reſpect of the duties of the worſhip, that are to be kept and performed in it. And hence it is manifeſt, that in regard of Gods worſhip, there is no difference of daies in the new Teſtament, but in regard of order.

Thirdly, they obiect, that Paul kept the Iewes Sabbath, as well as the Lords day. For he and Barnabas came to Antiochia, & went into the Synagogue on the Sabbath day, Act. 13. 14. And againe, he and Timothie conuerted Lydia vpon the ſame day, Act. 16. 13. A

Anſ. The Apoſtle did this vpon very good ground, not becauſe he held the obſeruation of it as neceſſarie as the other; but in regard of the weakneſſe of the Gentiles and Iewes newly called. For the Church that conſiſted of ſuch perſons in thoſe daies, was not yet fully perſwaded and reſolued of the Abrogation of the Iewiſh Sabbath: and therefore for the time, he yeelded to their weakneſſe, & obſerued it as well as the other. But afterward when they were confirmed in that point, he forbare that libertie, and taught the full aboliſhment both of it, and other ceremonies.

Fourthly, Act. 18. 3. 4. Paul is ſaid to come to Corinth to Aquila and Priſcilla, and to B worke with them in their trade of tent making: and further it is ſaid, that he diſputed in the ſynagogue euery Sabbath day, that is, on the Iewes Sabbaths, and exhorted the Iewes & Grecians. Hence it is gathered by ſome, that Paul did onely keepe the ſabbath of the Iewes, and that both on the Lords day, and on the weeke daies, he wrought with Aquila and Priſcilla.

Anſ. Firſt, we muſt remember this rule, That Charitie and neceſſitie doe diſpenſe with the Sabbath, and with ceremonies. If a Towne ſhould be on fire, or if a citie or countrey ſhould be preſently aſſaulted by the enemie, in the time of the word preached, on the Sabbath day; the preaching of the word, in theſe caſes, muſt ceaſe for a time, till by conuenient C helpe the fire be quenched, and the enemie be taken, or driuen backe. Now whereas Paul in the ordinary daies of the weeke made tents, and on the ſeauenth too, not obſeruing it, but the Iewes Sabbath; we muſt know, that he did it vpon neceſſitie, for the ſaluation of the Iewes. For Priſcilla and Aquila were Iewes vnconuerted, and Chriſt was not yet reuealed vnto them. And if Paul had but once named Chriſt, he could haue done no good among them. Yet afterward, when he ſaw better opportunitie, at the comming of Silas and Timotheus from Macedonia, then he could no longer containe himſelfe, but burned in the ſpirit, and teſtified to the Iewes, that Ieſus was the Chriſt. verſ. 5. Now if there was cauſe why he D did not ſpeake of Chriſt for the time, then was there cauſe alſo why he did not make profeſſion of a Sabbath. Secondly I anſwer, though Paul did not then openly ſanctifie the Sabbath; yet it is to be ſuppoſed, that he kept it priuately by himſelfe, reſeruing ſome ſpeciall time for that purpoſe: and the contrarie cannot be ſhewed.

The ſecond Queſtion touching the Sabbath.

How the Sabbath of the New Teſtament is to be obſerued?

Anſw. In obſeruing a Sabbath of the new Teſtament, there are two things required; a Reſt, and a ſanctification of the ſame Reſt to an holy vſe. This anſwer is made out of the very ſubſtance of the fourth Commaundement, which is morall, and hath nothing ceremoniall in it. And the fourth Commandement (for ſubſtance) conſiſts in a ceaſing from labour, and a holy dedication of our reſt to an holy vſe, that is, to the worſhip and ſeruice of God.

Sect. 1.

Now touching the firſt point, the Reſt of the Sabbath, there are three ſeuerall opinions, whereof two are contrarie, and the third is a meane betweene both.

The firſt opinion is, that wee are bound as ſtrictly to keep the outward reſt of the Lords day, as the Iewes were to keepe the Sabbath: and ſundrie men are of this minde. But I take it, this opinion is not warrantable. For (as we ſaid before) the Iewiſh maner of keeping the Sabbath in ſtraitnes, is a Ceremonie. And if we be bound to keep it as ſtraitly as the Iewes did, then Iudaiſme muſt ſtill remaine and the ceremoniall Law (at leaſt in ſome part) muſt ſtill be in force.

But in fauour of this opinion, it is alleadged: Firſt, that the fourth Commandement is a Law giuen as well to Chriſtians, as to Iewes, and therefore it bindes both alike. Anſ. The fourth Commandement bindeth Chriſtians to keepe a ſeauenth day for the Sabbath, both in reſpect of Reſt, as alſo in regard of ſanctification thereof; but that it bindeth them to the ſame ſtrait manner of keeping the Reſt, as it did the Iewes, we vtterly deny.

Secondly, That the reaſons vſed to inforce the Commaundement, doe equally binde all: therefore the Commaundement it ſelfe. Anſ. It is true for the dutie commaunded, but not for the manner of performance. Againe, the reaſon alleadged doth not follow: for ſometimes the holy Ghoſt vſeth a reaſon that is perpetual, to enforce a Ceremony. That Leui ſhould haue no part, nor inheritance among his brethren, was a Ceremony commaunded by God, and yet the Lord enforced it, with a reaſon that was perpetuall, namely, becauſe himſelf was the part and inheritance of Leui, among the children of Iſrael, Numb. 18. 20.

Thirdly, that the Sabbath is a figure (to beleeuers in the new Teſtament) that God is their God, and they his people; and the ſame it was to the Iewes: therefore the bond is as ſtrict to the one, as to the other. Anſ. 1. Beleeuers vnder the Goſpell, haue two onely ſignes of the Couenant, Baptiſme, and the Lords Supper, and no more. 2. The Scripture reſtraineth the Sabbath, as a ſigne, onely to the Iewes, It is a ſigne betweene me and you in your generations, Exodus 31. 13. Againe, verſ. 16. the children of Iſrael ſhall keepe the Sabbath—for an euerlaſting couenant. 3. The Sabbath was not a ſigne in the firſt inſtitution in Paradiſe. For the couenant of grace was made after the fal of man, and the ſigne therof muſt needes be appointed after it; conſidering that before the fall, Ceremonies ſignifying ſanctification had no place. And this is the firſt opinion.

The ſecond opinion touching the Reſt of the Sabbath, is flatte contrarie to the former, namely, that on the Sabbath day, (after the publike worſhippe of God is ended, and the Congregation diſſolued,) men haue liberty either to giue themſelues to labour, or to honeſt pleaſures and recreations. This opinion doth quite aboliſh one of the Commaundements of the Decalogue: For it preſuppoſeth all daies to bee alike, this only prouided, that the publike worſhippe of God bee ſolemnely kept. Now this may be done in any day of the weeke; and there will be no neede of appointing a ſette time for Gods ſeruice, if all daies be equall, without any difference or diſtinction. But the fourth Commandement (for ſubſtance) is eternall, and requireth (vpon paine of the curſe) both reſt from labour, and a ſetting apart of the ſame reſt, to the duties of holineſſe and religion. And if it commaund abſtinence from ordinarie labour, then much more from pleaſures and recreations.

The third & laſt opinion, holds the meane between the two former extremities, and that I take to be the beſt and ſafeſt. The ſubſtance hereof conſiſts of theſe two concluſions.

I. That vpon the Sabbath day of the new Teſtament, men are to reſt from the ordinarie labours of their callings. Thus much is commanded in the fourth Commandement. For the Reſt it ſelfe was not a Ceremonie (as I ſaid before) but the ſtrait & preciſe manner of reſting. Againe, it is moſt neceſſary, that religion, and the power thereof, ſhould be maintained amongſt Gods people, which cannot poſſibly be, vnleſſe men (at ſome times) ſet themſelues apart vnto it. The ſtudent that deſires learning, doth not attaine vnto knowledge, vnleſſe he doe daily conſecrate and deuote himſelfe to the ſtudy therof. In like manner religion cannot bee preſerued and maintained in the Church, except men doe wholly & continually employ themſelues in the practiſe of the ſame. Furthermore, it is the liberty that Gods Law giues to ſeruants, yea and to beaſts, that they ſhall not be oppreſſed with labour by working on the Lords day; and this liberty is grounded vpon the law of nature, and common equity.

Here the common ſort are woont to replie and ſay: If wee muſt reſt from the labour of our callings the whole day, wee ſhall not be able to maintaine our ſelues and our families. To which it may be anſwered, that they which gathered Manna onely in the ſixe daies, had as much as they that went out to gather it on the ſeauenth day: for though ſome of the people went out thereon to gather, yet they found none. They therefore which take reſt on the Sabbath day, muſt not bee diſtracted with needeleſſe cares, but liue by faith, and depend vpon Gods prouidēce for meat, drinke, and clothing. And the labour of the calling then vſed, when it is expreſly forbidden by God, brings rather a curſe with it, then a bleſſing. Againe, ſuch perſons muſt remember, that godlines hath the promiſes of this life, and the life to come, 1. Tim. 4. 8. and if they will firſt ſeeke the kingdome of God and his righteouſnes, all things neceſſary ſhall bee caſt vnto them in way of aduantage, Matth. 6. 33. Therefore, if they keep his commandement, and reſt vpon the ſeauenth day, God will in mercie giue a bleſſing, and they ſhall no leſſe receiue from him their daily bread, in that day, then in another.

II. Concluſion. In this Reſt, ſundry kindes of workes may bee done, and that with good conſcience; principally two.

The firſt are workes both holy, and of preſent neceſſity. And they are ſuch as cannot be done before or after the Sabbath. Theſe are likewiſe of two ſorts. The firſt are thoſe, that doe neceſſarily pertaine to Gods worſhip, ſo as without them God cannot be worſhipped. Of this kinde is the Sabbath daies iourney, Act. 1. 12. allowed among the Iewes to the people, to goe and heare the word preached: Thus we reade, that the Shunamite went ordinarily vpon the Sabbath and new Moone, to the Prophet, to heare him. For when ſhe demanded leaue of her husband, to goe to the Prophet, he askes her, Why wilt thou goe, ſeeing it is neither new Moone, nor Sabbath day? 2. King. 4. 23. Of the ſame ſort were the killing and dreſſing of ſacrificed beaſts, in the time of the law, whereof our Sauiour ſaith, Haue ye not read in the law, how that on the Sabbath daies, the Prieſts in the temple breake the Sabbath, and are blameleſſe? Matth. 12. 5. The next ſort of workes of preſent neceſſity, are thoſe that belong immediately to the preſeruation of the temporall life of man and beaſt, or that ſerue to the good eſtate of them both. Such are workes of mercie: the watering of cattel, Mar. 12. 11. the drawing of a beaſt out of a pitte, Luk. 14. 5. and ſuch like.

The ſecond kinde of workes, that may bee done vpon the Sabbath, are workes of Chriſtian libertie, out of the Caſe of neceſſity. Theſe were ſuch as the Iewes might not doe, and yet we in the new Teſtament may doe them. For example: prouiſion and dreſſing of meate, making fires, and carrying of burdens. Yet vpon this liberty, men ought not to gather, that they may doe what they will, becauſe they muſt ceaſe from the ordinary execution of the workes of their callings. For the word of God giueth no ſuch warrant: men are in this caſe, to ſubmit themſelues to his will expreſly reuealed, and to vſe their liberty according to the ſame.

Here two caſes are propounded.

I. Caſe. Whether we may not lawfully vſe recreations on the Sabbath day, as ſhooting, bowling, hunting, hawking, wraſtling, &c.

Anſ. I take it, we are not denied to reioyce and ſolace our ſelues vpon this day. For to ſome men, at ſome times, recreations may be more neceſſarie then meate, in caſe of weakenes, for preſent preſeruation of health. And though not in that regard, yet being wel vſed, it may be a furtherance to men, in the performance of the duties of godlineſſe, as well as in the duties of their calling. But this reioycing muſt be ſuch, as was the reioycing of the Iewes, Nehem. 8. 12. which was onely ſpirituall, and in the Lord. For they reioyced onely for this, that they vnderſtood the Law of God, that was taught them.

But as for the recreations and paſtimes aforenamed, as bowling, and ſuch like, they are not at this time to be vſed. My reaſon is this: That which is the more principall and neceſſary, namely, labour in the execution of a mans calling, is forbidden; recreation therefore which is for labour, muſt ceaſe on that day when labour ceaſeth. Againe, if the duties of the ordinary vocation, otherwiſe lawfull and commendable, be therefore forbidden, becauſe they deſtroy the Reſt commanded, and take vp the minde, that it cannot be freely imployed in the affaires of God, then much more are the works of pleaſure forbidden, becauſe they doe the ſame things much more, though otherwiſe in themſelues they be not vnlawfull. Obiect. Seruants muſt haue recreation, otherwiſe how ſhall they be able to worke in the weeke day? Anſw. True; but their recreation muſt be granted them in the daies of labour. For recreation pertaineth not to reſt, but to labour, and is therefore vſed, that a man by it may be made more fit to labour.

II. Caſe. VVhether men vpon any occaſion, may not doe a worke of their callings, in the morning or euening of the Sabbath day, as Tradeſmen for example. I anſwer, that they may, ſo be it they obſerue foure caueats. I. That the worke done be no ſcandall to any perſon. II. That it withdraw not the minde of the worker, or any other from ſanctifying the Sabbath, either publikely, or priuately. III. That it bee not a worke of gaine, but a worke of mercy, or tend to a worke of mercy. IV. That it ſerue for the immediate preſeruation of life, health, or goods. Of life; thus Elias continued his flight from Iezabel many Sabbaths together, 1. King. 19. 8. And the reaſon is good: the Sabbath was made for man (ſaith Chriſt,) that is, not for the hurt, but for the good of man. Of health, and thus our Sauiour Chriſt viſited the ſicke, Ioh. 5. 3. and cured the blinde man vpon the Sabbath, Ioh. 9. 14. By whoſe example the Phyſitian and the Chirurgion may lawfully goe, not onely to giue neceſſarie counſell, but to miniſter neceſſarie phyſicke, & do cure. Laſtly, of goods which are in preſent danger of loſing. Thus Chriſt would haue the oxe preſently pulled out of the pit, Luk. 14. 5. and the ſhippe on the ſhore full fraught with wares, requires preſent helpe, if it bee in apparent danger of ſinking. Thus much concerning the firſt thing, required in the obſeruation of the Sabbath.

Sect. 2.

Sanctification of Reſt

The ſecond thing required in the hallowing of the Sabbath of the new Teſtament, is the ſanctification of reſt, which is nothing elſe but the dedicating of it to a religious vſe, that is, to the practiſe of diuine worſhip. This ſanctification is either publike, or priuate.

The publike is the ſolemne performance of ſpirituall workes, commaunded in the ſecond and third Commaundements, and tending to publike worſhip. And this may bee reduced to foure principall heads. I. The reading or preaching of the word, when the Miniſter publikely in the Congregation aſſembled, doth faithfully deliuer vnto the people pure & ſound doctrine, and applies the ſame as neceſſity requireth, and occaſion ſerueth, to the edification and ſaluation of all and euery hearer in publike audience: and the people on the other ſide, do reuerently and attentiuely, heare the ſame word read and preached. II. The adminiſtration of the ſacraments according to Gods inſtitution, by the miniſters of the Church lawfully called. III. Publike prayer, wherein the miniſter calleth vpon the name of the Lord, and the whole congregation, in feruent affection, lift vp their hearts vnto him, and in minde giue aſſent to the prayers made in the name and behalfe of them. IV. Collection and giuing of almes for the releefe of the poore, whether they bee captiues and ſtrangers, or thoſe that dwel among vs, the ſick, the needie, orphanes and widowes, and ſuch like. Vpon theſe foure heads doth ſtand the whole publike worſhip of God. For proofe and declaration hereof, reade theſe places, Neh. 8. Act. 2. 42. Act. 13. 14, 15. Act. 16. 13. Act. 20. 7. 1. Cor. 16. 1, 2, &c.

Priuate ſanctification, (which ſerueth to anſwer the ſecond opinion) ſtands in theſe things: I. That euery man in the beginning of the Sabbath, in the morning, doe priuately prepare himſelfe to the publike ſeruice that followeth, by priuate prayer, by examination and humbling of himſelf before God, in reſpect of his particular ſinnes. This the wiſe man exhorteth vnto, when he ſaith, Take heede to thy foote when thou entreſt into the houſe of God, Eccleſ. 4. 17. and his meaning is, that before a man betakes himſelfe to the publike congregation, there to performe ſeruice and worſhip vnto God, hee ſhould looke into his heart, and examine his affections & thoughts, that hee come not vnprepared: which dutie, though it bee alwaies to bee done, yet principally on the Sabbath day. The children of Iſrael roſe vp early in the morning on the Sabbath day, to offer vp burnt offerings, & peace offerings to an idol, Exod. 32. 5, 6. much more ought wee, &c. And it is ſaid of our Sauiour Chriſt, that he roſe very early in the morning before day, and went into a ſolitary place to pray, and the day following was the Sabbath, when he preached in the Synagogues, Mark. 1. 35. 39. II. That when the congregation is diſſolued, we ſpend the reſt of the Sabbath in meditation and conference of the word before preached, and of the creatures. Thus it is ſaid of ſome that heard Paul preach, that they receiued the word with all readines, and ſearched the Scripture whether thoſe things were ſo, Act. 17. 11. And the whole 92. Pſalme was penned, that it might bee a ſong of the Sabbath, and it containes nothing but a meditation of the workes of God. III. That men priuately exerciſe themſelues in the workes of charitie and mercie, as in viſiting the ſicke, in making peace betweene thoſe that are at diſcord, in releeuing the poore, in teaching and inſtructing the ignorant, in comforting thoſe that are diſtreſſed and comfortleſſe, Neh. 8. 12. Then all the people went to eate, and to drinke, and to ſend part abroad to the poore, and to make great ioy.

The third Queſtion touching the Sabbath.

When the Sabbath doth beginne?

To this ſome doe anſwer, in the euening, and ſome in the morning. My anſwer is this, that the Sabbath of the new Teſtament amongſt vs, is to begin in the morning, and ſo to continue till the next morrow, and not in the euening, till the euening.

The reaſons be theſe. 1. The Sabbath is to beginne, when other ordinarie dayes begin, according to the order and account of the Church wherein we liue. 2. It was the practiſe of Chriſt and the Apoſtles. For Chriſt (as it hath bene thought of auncient times) conſecrated the Sabbath, in that he roſe from the dead early in the morning, when the firſt day of the weeke beganne to dawne, Matth. 28. 1. and therefore it is fit that the Sabbath day ſhould then begin when he roſe, for as much as it is kept in remembrance of his reſurrection. The ſame was the practiſe of the Apoſtles. For Act. 20. 7. the firſt day of the weeke the Iewes came together at Troas in the morning, and there Paul preached from that time till midnight, beeing the next morning to depart, hauing ſtaied there, as is plaine out of the ſixt verſe, ſeauen daies. In that text I note two things. Firſt, that the night there mentioned was a part of the ſeauenth day of Pauls abode at Troas. For if it were not ſo, then hee had ſtayed at leaſt a night longer, and ſo more then ſeuen daies, becauſe he ſhould haue ſtaied part of another day. Secondly, that this night was a part of the Sabbath which they then kept. For the Apoſtle keepes it in maner of a Sabbath, in the exerciſes of piety & diuine worſhip, & namely, in preaching. Yea further, he cõtinues there till the reſt was fully ended. He cõmuned with them till the dawning of the day, and ſo departed, verſ. 11. Beſides this text, Dauid ſaith in his Pſalme of the Sabbath, that he will declare Gods louing kindneſſe in the morning, and his truth in the night, Pſal. 92.2. making the night following a part of the Sabbath.

Gen.1.5.8, 13,&c.

Againſt this doctrine it is alleadged, firſt; that the Sabbath is to begin in the euening, becauſe in the firſt of Geneſis it is ſaid, ſixe ſeuerall times, the euening and the morning made the firſt day, and ſo the ſecond, and third, &c.

Anſ. Firſt, in that text when it is ſaid, the euening and the morning, made ſuch and ſuch daies, by the euening is vnderſtood the night, and by the morning the day, and the euening was the end of the day, and the morning the end of the night. This expoſition is auncient, and yet in Scripture wee finde not one place, where the euening is put for the night. Secondly, I anſwer, that the collection from that place is of no force: for thus the reaſon muſt needes be framed. That which God did in appointing of daies, the ſame muſt we doe in vſing of them: But God in appointing of daies, beganne the day at the euening, Erg. &c. The conſequent is falſe. For the caſe is otherwiſe in the conſtitution of time, then it is in the vſe of time conſtituted: and there is not the ſame reaſon of things in doing, as there is of the ſame things in beeing and vſe. Thirdly, this did not bind the Iewes. For they in all likelihood began their Sabbaths in the morning. Indeed their ſolemne feaſts, as the Paſſeouer, and ſuch like, began and were kept from euening to morning, as wee may reade, Leuit. 23. 5. But their ordinary Sabbath was kept from morning to morning. VVhence it is, that S. Matthew cals the dawning of the firſt day of the weeke, the ende of the Sabbath of the Iewes, Mat. 28.1. and there is nothing (I take it) that can be brought to the contrary.

It is obiected, that Moſes ſaith, Leu. 23.32. From Euen to Euen ſhall ye celebrate your Sabbath. Anſw. The words muſt be vnderſtood of the feaſt of reconciliation, beeing the tenth day of the ſeuenth moneth, which was ſolemnized and kept from Euen to Euen. And it is called a Sabbath, becauſe it was by ſpeciall commandement appointed to be kept as the Sabbath day, and that in two reſpects. Firſt, becauſe it was to be kept holy by the Iewes, in humbling themſelues and offering Sacrifices, verſ. 27. Secondly, becauſe vpon that day it was not lawfull to doe any ſeruile worke vpon paine of death, verſ. 25. 30.

Againe, it is alleadged that Ioſeph of Arimathea could not embalme Chriſt, by reaſon that the Sabbath was at hand, and this was the euening. I anſwer, that the Iewes Sabbath there meant, concurred with the day of their Paſſeouer, and hence it was, that their Sabbath began in the euening.

By this that hath beene ſaid, the anſwer to the third Queſtion is plaine, to wit, that in the new Teſtament the Sabbath is to beginne at the morning, and ſo to continue to the next morning, and not as ſome ſuppoſe, to beginne at the Euen, and continue till the next Euen. And thus much touching the ſpeciall Queſtions of Gods worſhip, as alſo generally concerning thoſe that belong to man as he ſtands in relation to God.

The end of the ſecond Booke.

THE THIRD BOOKE OF THE CASES OF CONSCIENCE, CONCERNING MAN, AS HE STANDS IN RELATION TO MAN.

CHAP. I.

Of the Nature and differences of Vertue, and the Order of the Queſtions.

THVS farre wee are proceeded in the handling of two ſorts of Queſtions, whereof ſome doe concerne man as he is conſidered apart by himſelfe, without reſpect vnto another: ſome againe concerne man, as hee ſtands in the firſt relation, namely to God.

Now wee come by order, to ſpeake of the third and laſt head of Caſes, propounded by the conſcience of man, as hee ſtands in the ſecond relation to man. And vnder this head are comprehended all thoſe Queſtions of Conſcience, that are incident to the liues of men; and which doe belong vnto man, as he is a member of ſome ſocietie, whether it bee the Familie, the Church, or the Commonwealth.

For the better and more orderly proceeding

A ding in this Diſcourſe, ſome conuenient Subiect or Matter is to be propounded, whereunto all the Queſtions that follow may fitly bee reduced. Now of all other, the moſt conuenient ſubiect in this kinde is Vertue, and therefore according to the Differences of Vertue, wee will diſtinguiſh the Queſtions into three ſeuerall ſorts.

But before wee proceede to particulars, it ſhall not bee amiſſe to ſpeake ſomewhat generally of Vertue, ſo farre forth as the knowledge thereof may giue light to the things that follow.

Touching Vertue, two things are briefly to bee remembred: firſt, what it is: and then what be the diſtinct kindes thereof.

B Vertue is a gift of the Spirit of God, and a part of regeneration, whereby a man is made apt to liue well.

I call it firſt, a gift of the Spirit of God, becauſe in whomſoeuer it is, whether in Chriſtians, or in Heathen men, it hath the nature of a gift that floweth immediately from the Spirit of God. And this I put in the firſt place to confute the receiued error of the wiſeſt Heathen Philoſophers, which call Vertue an habite of the minde, obtained and confirmed by cuſtome, vſe, and practiſe.

Secondly, I call it ſuch a gift, as is alſo a part of regeneration: and this is added for two cauſes.

Firſt, that we may put a difference between C Chriſtian and Heathen vertues. For, howbeit the ſame vertues n kinde and name, are, and may bee found, both in them that profeſſe Chriſt, and thoſe alſo that are ignorant of the true God; yet they are in them after a diuers manner. For in Heathen men they are the gifts of God, but not parts of regeneration and new birth: but in thoſe that bee true Chriſtians, they are indeed not only the gifts of Gods Spirit, but alſo eſſentiall parts of regeneration.

That wee may the better yet conceiue this difference, we muſt vnderſtand, that the grace of God in man is two-folde: reſtraining, and renewing.

Reſtraining is that, which bridleth and re- D ſtraineth the corruption of mens hearts, from breaking forth into outward actions, for the common good, that ſocieties may bee preſerued, and one man may liue orderly with another. Renuing grace is that, which doth not onely reſtraine the corruption, but alſo mortifieth ſinne, and renewes the heart daily more and more. The former of theſe is incident to Heathen men; and the vertues which they haue, ſerue onely to repreſſe the act of ſinne in their outward actions: but in Chriſtians, they are graces of God, not only bridling and reſtraining the affection, but renewing the heart, and mortifying all corruption. And though thoſe vertues of the Heathen be graces of God, yet they are but generall and common to all: whereas the vertues of Chriſtians, A are ſpeciall graces of the Spirit, ſanctifying & renewing the minde, will, & affections. For example, chaſtity in Ioſeph was a grace of Gods Spirit, renewing his heart; but chaſtity in Xenocrates was a common grace, ſeruing onely to curbe & reſtraine the corruption of his heart. And the like may be ſaid of the iuſtice of Abraham, a Chriſtian, and of Ariſtides, a Heathen.

Secondly, I adde this clauſe, to meete with an errour of ſome learned Philoſophers, who taught, that the very nature of Vertue ſtands in a meane, or mediocritie of affection. This that they ſay is true in part, but not wholly. For the mediocritie, of which they ſpeake, without renouation of affections, is nothing: B and therefore all vertues, that are not ioyned with a renouation and change of the affections, are no better then ſinnes. This point the Philoſophers neuer knew, and hence it was, that they ſtood onely vpon a mediocritie, defining a man to bee truely vertuous, that did wiſely obſerue a meane betweene two extreames.

Laſtly, I ſay that this gift of God, makes a man fit to liue well. In which clauſe ſtandeth the proper effect of vertue, which is, to make thoſe in whome it is, to leade their liues well. And by this we are aduertiſed, to take heede of the opinion of Philoſophers, concerning ſome particular vertues. For in their moral diſcourſes, they giue both the name and the nature of C Vertue to thoſe things, which are either falſe and counterfeit vertues, or indeed none at all. For example: Ariſtotle makes Vrbanity a vertue, which is indeed a ſinne, being nothing els, but a dexterity in mocking & deſcanting vpon mens perſons and names: and ſo it is reckoned by Paul amongſt grieuous ſinnes and vices, which are to be auoided, Eph. 5.4. Againe, the Philoſopher cals Magnanimitie (whereby a man thinkes himſelfe worthie of great honours, and thereupon enterpriſeth great things) a Vertue, which notwithſtanis to be holden a flat vice. For by the Law of God, euery man is to range himſelfe within the limits of his calling, and not to dare, once to goe out of it. Whereas on the contrary, the D ſcope and end of this vertue (as they tearme it) is to make men to attempt high and great matters aboue their reach, and ſo to goe beyond their callings. Beſides, it is directly oppoſite to the vertue of humilitie, which teacheth, that a man ought alwaies to bee baſe, vile, and lowly in his owne eyes. The Prophet Dauid cleares himſelfe of this ſinne, Pſal. 131. 1. when he ſaith, Lord, I am not high minded, mine eyes are not lofty, I haue not walked in things that be great, and aboue my reach. Furthermore, no Vertue muſt make vs to forſake good life, but euery one ſerueth for this ende, to make vs fit to liue a godly life.

The next point to bee conſidered is, What be the kindes of Vertue.

Vertue is either in the minde of man, or in

A the will. The vertue of the mind, is Prudence. The vertue of the wil, is that that orders mans will, and it is two-folde: for it reſpecteth either our ſelues, or others.

That which reſpecteth our ſelues, is conuerſant about two maine things in the heart of man, the reuenging, and the luſting power. That which reſpecteth the reuenging power, is Clemencie; which ſtandeth in the ordering and reforming of the raging power of anger. The next, which reſpecteth the luſting power, is Temperance.

Vertues that doe reſpect others, are either concerning curteſie, as Liberality, or concerning Equity. And theſe conſiſt partly in doing B of equity, as Iuſtice; partly in defending and maintaining it, as Fortitude.

Now according to this diſtinction of vertues, the Queſtions of Conſcience are to bee diſtinguiſhed in this ſort. Some of them concerne Prudence, ſome concerne Clemencie, ſome Temperance, ſome Liberalitie, ſome alſo concerne Iuſtice, and ſome Fortitude. Of all which in order.

CHAP. II.

Of Queſtions concerning Prudence.

C THere are two maine Queſtions of Conſcience, which concerne Prudence.

I. Queſtion.

How a man ſhould practiſe Prudence or Wiſedome?

This I acknowledge, is a high point in the life of man, and ſuch as cannot bee reſolued as it ought, without great deliberation: notwithſtanding, I will do mine indeauour to anſwer ſomething.

Concerning Prudence, there are ſundrie things to be conſidered.

D Firſt, what is the beginning of the practiſe of this vertue, and that in a word is the Feare of God. This feare ſtandeth principally in two things; the firſt is, a reuerent awe of the Maieſtie of God in all places, and at all times, whereby we are reſolued, that whereſoeuer we are, wee are in his preſence, and whatſoeuer we thinke, ſpeake, or doe, it is wholly and perfectly knowne vnto him. The ſecond is, a reſolued care to walke as in the preſence of God: that is, to keepe his commaundements, and to yeeld obedience vnto his Maieſtie in all things. Now that this feare is the beginning of wiſedome, it appeares by ſundrie places of Scripture, Pſalm. 111. 10. The beginning of wiſedome, is the feare of Iehouah. Prou. 3. 7. The beginning of knowledge is the feare of the Lord: fooles deſpiſe wiſedome and vnderſtanding. Moſes tels the children of Iſrael, that herein ſtood their wiſedome and vnderſtanding before the eyes of all people, that they obſerue and practiſe all the ordinances & iudgments of God, which hee had commanded them, Deut. 4. 6. And Dauid profeſſeth of himſelfe, that by his daily meditation in the law of God, and keeping his commaundements, hee became wiſer then his enemies, Pſal. 119. 98. yea, of more vnderſtanding then all his teachers, v. 99. yea further, more prudent then the ancient, v. 100.

Secondly, wee muſt conſider the rule of Prudence; and that is, ſpirituall vnderſtanding, whereby wee are enabled to know and conceiue ſpiritually truth and falſhood, good and badde. This Saint Paul wiſhed vnto the Church of Coloſſ. when hee ſaith, Wee ceaſe not to pray for you, and deſire that ye might be fulfilled with knowledge of his will, in all wiſedome, and ſpirituall vnderſtanding, Coloſſ. 1. 9. And the ſame Apoſtle exhorting the Romanes, to giue vp their bodies a liuing ſacrifice, holy and acceptable vnto God, and not to faſhion themſelues like vnto this world: hee makes the ground of his exhortation, and conſequently the rule of their obedience thereunto, the renouation of their mindes or vnderſtandings, to this ende, That they might prooue, what is the good will of God, acceptable and perfect, and anſwerably do and performe the ſame, Rom. 12. 2. And his reaſon is good, becauſe, though prudence be the rule of all vertues, as the ancient Philoſophers among the heathen haue affirmed, yet it ſelfe muſt be ruled by a higher rule, which they knew not, namely, by ſpirituall vnderſtanding and knowledge, according to the word of God.

Thirdly, wee are to conſider what is the practiſe of Prudence, and wherein it conſiſteth.

In the practiſe thereof, two actions are required: the one is Deliberation, whereby according to ſpirituall vnderſtanding, wee aduiſe what is good and badde, what truth and falſhood, what is to bee imbraced and done, and what not. The other is Determination, whereby wee reſolue vpon former deliberation, to imbrace, to do, to follow and purſue the beſt things in euery kinde. And therein ſtands the very nature and forme of true Chriſtian prudence, when a man (vpon due conſideration of things and actions, together with their properties and circumſtances) proceedes to a holy and godly reſolution, according to the rule aforeſaid. Now the practiſe of Prudence in theſe two actions, is very large, and conſiſteth of ſundry branches. I will onely touch the principall, and propound them in theſe Rules following.

The firſt Rule is this: A man muſt in the firſt place, and aboue all things in the world, carefully prouide for the forgiueneſſe of his ſinnes, and the ſaluation of his ſoule. This our Sauiour Chriſt commaundeth as a ſpeciall dutie, Mat. 6. 23. Seeke ye firſt the kingdome of God, and his righteouſneſſe. And ſinners and vnrepentant perſons, are ſundrie times in Scripture tearmed fooles, as in many other reſpects, ſo principally in this, becauſe they faile in this firſt point of wiſedome, going on in their ſinne without repentance. The fiue virgins in the Goſpel are for this very cauſe pronounced fooliſh, or fooles, becauſe they prouided not for the oyle of Faith, but did onely content themſelues with ſhining lampes, that is, a naked profeſſion of religion and vertue; and for want of wiſedome and prudence in this point, they were iuſtly depriued of acceſſe into the bride-chamber. Thus, the rich man, that had great reuenewes and abundance of worldly wealth, is notwithſtanding tearmed by God himſelfe a foole, becauſe he gathered riches to himſelf, and was not rich in God; that is, he minded earthly things, and placed his chiefe felicitie in vaine and tranſitorie riches, not once forecaſting, how to come into the fauour of God, that he might be ſaued.

To this Rule I adde that, which Paul by way of caueat commendeth to the Epheſians, Eph. 5.16. Take heede that ye walke circumſpectly, not as vnwiſe, but as wiſe, redeeming the time. As if he ſhould ſay, Play the part of wiſe men; take time while time ſerues, lay hold on the meanes of ſaluation, vſe no delaies in heauenly matters, deferre not your repentance from day to day: for the daies are euill, and you may be ſurprized in your ſinnes before you be aware.

II. Rule. We muſt vſe continuall watchfulneſſe againſt our enemies, but ſpecially againſt our ſpirituall enemies. This watchfulneſſe our Sauiour commaundeth often in the Goſpel, but ſpecially in Mark. 13.33. Take heed, watch, and pray. 35. Watch therefore, for ye know not, &c. 37. Thoſe things that I ſay vnto you, I ſay vnto all men, Watch. And S. Peter exhorteth in like manner, Be ſober, and watch; for your aduerſarie the Diuell as a roaring Lyon, walketh about, ſeeking whom he may deuoure, 1. Pet. 5. v. 8.

Now this dutie ſtands principally in two things. Firſt, that we diligently obſerue the danger, wherein we are, by reaſon of temptations. Secondly, that we daily labour to ſearch and finde out the ſecret counſels, practiſes, and enterpriſes of our enemies, and withall ſeeke to preuent them. To this purpoſe, we muſt watch againſt the corruptions of our hearts, the temptations of the Diuell, and the day and houre of our death, that we be not found vnprepared. For our owne ſinnes are many; Satan is ſtrong and ſubtill in his ſuggeſtions, and temptations; and death, though of all other things it be moſt certaine, and cannot be auoided, yet it is moſt vncertaine in regard of the time when, the place where, and the manner and kind, of what and how a man ſhall end his daies.

III. Rule. Euery man muſt meaſure himſelfe by his owne ſtrength, and doe nothing beyond his abilitie. This Rule is ſet downe, though expreſſed in other tearmes, Rom. 12.3. No man muſt preſume to vnderſtand, aboue that which is meete to vnderſtand, but ought to be wiſe according to ſobrietie, as God hath dealt to euery man the meaſure of faith. An example of the tranſgreſſion of this Rule, we haue in Dauids three Worthies, who brake into the hoſt of the Philiſtims, to fetch Dauid the king water from the well of Bethlem, 2. Sam. 23.16. Which act of theirs, was a raſh enterpriſe, and ſuch a one, as Dauid himſelfe condemneth in that Chapter, becauſe they went beyond their ſtrength, to encounter with a whole garriſon of men, they being themſelues but few, namely three in number.

IV. Rule. We muſt diſtinguiſh betweene the neceſſarie workes of our callings, that pertaine to vs, and other workes that are out of our callings, and pertaine not vnto vs: and we muſt doe the other, though we leaue theſe vndone. This Rule is propounded in 1. Theſſ. 4.11. Medle with your own buſineſſe, that is, doe the neceſſarie workes of your callings that belong to you, though you leaue the other for the time vndone. The contrary to it, is to liue or to behaue himſelfe inordinately, 2. Theſſ. 3.7. And we haue an example of the tranſgreſſion hereof in Peter, Ioh. 21.21, whom when Chriſt had commanded to follow him, he would needs aske him what Iohn ſhould doe; Chriſt giues him this anſwer, what is that to thee? In which words, he teacheth that not onely Peter, but alſo euery man muſt attend vpon the neceſſary and proper workes of his owne vocation, and not deale with other mens buſines, which becauſe Peter did, he is by that anſwer ſecretly reprooued, and iuſtly condemned of curioſitie in that behalfe.

V. Rule. We muſt put a difference betweene things honeſt and of good report, and things vnhoneſt and of bad report, and theſe we are to let paſſe, and onely to doe the other. Phil. 4.8. Whatſoeuer things are true, whatſoeuer things are honeſt, whatſoeuer things are iuſt, whatſoeuer things are pure, whatſoeuer things pertaine to loue, whatſoeuer things are of good report, if there be any vertue, if there be any praiſe, thinke on theſe things. To this may be added one caueat, that, Of two euils which are both ſinnes, we muſt not onely not chuſe the leſſe, but we are to chuſe neither. For their damnation is iuſt, who affirme that men may doe euill, that good may come of it, as the Apoſtle ſaith, Rom. 3.8.

E duobus malis non minimum, ſed neutrũ eligendum.

VI. Rule. Things of profit and pleaſure, muſt giue place to things that belong to vertue and honeſtie. This concluſion the light of nature teacheth. Worldly men ſay, who will ſhew vs any good? but Dauids prayer is, Lord lift thou vp the light of thy countenance vpon vs, Pſal. 4.6. Godlineſſe is the great gaine: therefore all gaine muſt giue place to godlineſſe, 1. Tim. 6.6.

VII. Rule. We may not truſt men vpon faire pretences that they make vnto vs, without further triall. This point was practiſed by our Sauiour Chriſt, who, though many beleeued in his name, when they ſaw the miracles which he had done, yet he did not commit himſelfe vnto them, becauſe he knew them all, Ioh. 2.24. And it is alſo verified by the common proverbe, Firſt trie, and then truſt.

VIII Rule. We muſt giue place to the ſway of the times, wherein we liue, ſo farforth as may ſtand with keeping faith, and a good conſcience. We may not be temporizers, and change our Religion with the time: but yet we may and muſt giue place to times, as we giue place to the ſtreame, ſo that it be done with keeping of true religion, and good conſcience. This rule was practiſed by Paul, Act. 28.11. who liuing among the Heathen, was conſtrained to ſpeak as they, and therefore he ſaies, that he departed in a ſhippe to Rome, whoſe badge was Caſtor and Pollux. Againe, Act. 19.10. he was three yeares in Epheſus an idolatrous place, where the great goddeſſe Diana was worſhipped; yet in all that time he contained himſelfe, and ſpake nothing in particular againſt Diana, but only in generall againſt falſe gods, ſaying, that they be no gods that are made with hands, v. 29. Nay Alexander could not charge him with this, that he had in all that while, blaſphemed their goddeſſe Diana. Paul therefore was faine to yeeld to the ſway of thoſe times, that ſo he might do ſome good in Epheſus by his miniſterie. Whereas, if he had ſpoken againſt Diana directly, it had not bin poſſible for him, to haue done that good by preaching, which otherwiſe he did. Againe, in the Primitiue Church, the Apoſtles for the weakeneſſe of the Iewes, did yeeld to the vſe of Circumciſion, and permitted abſtinence from blood, and that which was ſtrangled, &c. ſo farre forth, as it ſtood with pure religion, and good conſcience: and if they had not ſo done, they ſhould not haue wonne the Iewes to the faith, as they did.

IX Rule. If we cannot doe the good things that we deſire, in that exquiſite manner that we would, we muſt content our ſelues with the meane; and in things which are good, and to be done, it is the ſafeſt courſe to ſatisfie our ſelues in doing the leſſe, leſt in venturing to doe the more, which cannot be, we grow to the extremitie, and ſo faile or offend in our action. It is a good and wiſe counſell of the preacher, to this purpoſe, Eccl. 7.16. Be not iuſt ouermuch: and his meaning may be this; Be not too ſtrict or curious, in effecting that which thou intendeſt, exactly, when thou canſt not; but reſt contented in this, that thou haſt done thine endeauour, and take to the leſſe, when the greater cannot be effected. In ſome countries, Popiſh Images erected in Churches, do ſtand vndefaced. The good deſire of the people is, that they may be pulled downe: but this cannot be brought to paſſe. What then are they to doe in this caſe? they muſt not grow to extremitie, and pull them downe themſelues; but they muſt intreat the lawfull Magiſtrate for their remoouall ſo to doe; and in the meane time, reſt content with that they haue done, and wait the Magiſtrates pleaſure. In the Iudiciall law, by reaſon of the hardneſſe of the Iewes hearts, ſundry ſinnes could not vtterly be taken away, as diuorcements, polygamie, vſurie. Hereupon, the Lord makes a law of Toleration, without approbation, and did not remooue them quite away, for that was not poſſible, in regard of man, for the time: but reſtrained the euill, that could not be quite cut off and aboliſhed otherwiſe. And herein appeared the great wiſedome of God, in making a Law not to allow of, nor yet vtterly to take away, but to moderate the practiſe of theſe ſinnes in the Iewes, for the hardneſſe of their hearts. In like manner, in this our land there is the practiſe of vſurie, a ſinne that cannot, nor euer ſhall be rooted out vtterly. For this cauſe, the States of this kingdome, haue out of their wiſedome prouided a Law for the toleration thereof after a ſort, and that vpon ſpeciall cauſe. For if the Magiſtrate ſhould haue enacted a Law vtterly to aboliſh it, it would before this (in likelihood) haue growne to great extremitie. The ſame was the practiſe of the Apoſtles in their times, who yeelded to beare with the vſe of Circumciſion for a time, when they could not otherwiſe vtterly cut it off.

II. Queſtion.

VVhether a man may lawfully and with good conſcience vſe Policie in the affaires of this life?

Anſ. There bee foure principall Caueats, which being obſerued, Policie may be vſed, and is not againſt Chriſtian religion. I. Nothing muſt (in policie) be ſaid, done, or intended, to preiudice the truth, ſpecially the truth of the Goſpel. II. Nothing is to be ſaid, done, or intended, againſt the honour and glorie of God, either in word, in deed, or in ſhew. III. Nothing muſt bee wrought or contriued againſt iuſtice, that is due to man. IV. All actions of policie, muſt be ſuch as pertaine to our callings, and bee within the limits and bounds therof. For if any action whatſoeuer be done out of that calling, wherin God hath placed vs, or at leaſt, be not anſwerable thervnto, though it bee plotted and attempted in neuer ſo great wiſedome and policie, it is vnlawfull and not warrantable.

Theſe Caueats obſerued, it is not vnlawfull to vſe that which we commonly call policie. And the reaſon is this; when any buſineſſe is to be done, we muſt make a twofold inquirie. Firſt, into the thing to be done, whether it be good or bad, lawfull or not lawfull, commanded or forbidden. Secondly, into our ſelues, whether the work in hand be agreable to the calling of the doer, or anſwerable to that duty which he owes to God & man. Now becauſe both theſe are grounded vpon the former

A cautious, therefore we conclude, that whatſoeuer buſines is taken in hand, & not ſuted vnto them, it hath not good warrant, and ſo cannot be done with good conſcience.

Yet for better clearing of this anſwer, let vs a little conſider the Scriptures, & the examples ther recorded touching this policy. In Ioſh. 8. 5. we ſhall find, that Ioſhua vſeth Martiall policy in the beſieging of Ai, placing one part of his armie in an ambuſh, and cauſing the other part to flie: for by that meanes, the men of Ai comming out of the citie, and purſuing thoſe that fled, the ſouldiers that lay in ambuſh, tooke the citie and deſtroyed it. In 2. Sam. 5. 23. Dauid beeing to make warre againſt the Philiſtims, asketh counſel of God, B and God teacheth him policie, he therfore in his own example allowes policy, & more eſpecially thoſe wiſe and prudent ſhifts in warre, which wee call Stratagemes or policies of the field. We haue alſo the example of Paul for this purpoſe, who (Act. 21. 26.) faines himſelfe to haue made a vow to be a Nazarite, that he might yeeld ſomewhat to the weakneſſe of the Iewes, who were not ſufficiently informed in the doctrine of Chriſtian libertie. This practiſe was warrantable, neither was it a ſinne in Paul: for he did it by the counſell of the Church at Ieruſalem, verſ. 20. 24. And Paul himſelfe neuer made mention of this, as of a ſinne, which he would vndoubtedly haue done, had it beene a ſinne. Againe, C Act. 23. 6. when he was brought before Ananias the Prieſt, and the Councell at Ieruſalem, beeing in ſome daunger, he vſeth policie: for he pretended that he was a Phariſie, and by that meanes raiſed a diſſention betweene the Phariſies and the Sadduces. And this was no ſinne in Paul: for he ſpake no more but the truth, onely he concealed part of the truth.

Now if it fall out otherwiſe, that policie be vſed, and any of theſe foure Caueats be not obſerued, then it loſes both the name and nature of true policie, and becomes fraud, craft, and deceit, and ſo is condemnable. Example hereof we haue in Dauid, 1. Sam. 21. 14. who when he came to the court of Achiſh king of Gath, and ſaw himſelfe in daunger, he D faines himſelfe mad. Which though he did to ſaue his owne life, yet his policie was not to be allowed of: for it tended to his owne diſgrace, (he beeing King of Iſrael:) and it was alſo diſhonourable vnto God, who had appointed him to be the king of Iſrael. Againe, that which is commonly called the policie of Machiauel, is here to be condemned. For it is not anſwerable to the Caueats before remembred. Beſides that, it is not onely againſt the written law of God, but euen againſt the law of Nature. And the very foundation thereof, ſtandeth onely in the practiſe of lying, ſwearing, forſwearing, in fraud, deceit, & iniuſtice.

CHAP. III.

Of Queſtions concerning Clemencie.

Clemencie or meekenes, is a vertue, that ſerues to moderate wrath and reuenge.

Touching Clemencie there be three Queſtions.

I. How a man is to carrie himſelfe in reſpect of iniuries and offences done vnto him?

II. When Anger is a ſinne, and when not?

III. How a man ſhould remedie his raſh and vniuſt anger?

I. Queſtion.

How may a man carry himſelfe, in reſpect of iniuries and offences done vnto him?

Anſ. That a man may behaue himſelfe ſo as becommeth a Chriſtian in theſe caſes, he muſt in the firſt place, inquire into the nature and qualitie of the wrong done.

Now, Offences that are done to vs by others, are of three ſorts.

The firſt ſort, and the leaſt are, when ſome things are done to vs, that doe onely diſpleaſe vs, but bring no loſſe or hurt to vs. Theſe be light offences, and of this kind are common infirmities, as haſtineſſe, teſtineſſe, frowardneſſe, ſlowneſſe and dulneſſe of nature, of this kind alſo, are reproches of vnskilfulneſſe, ignorance, baſenes, pouertie, and ſuch like. The firſt degree then of Clemencie is, not ſo much as to take notice of theſe ſleight offences, but to let them paſſe, and burie them in obliuion. Salomon ſaith, A mans vnderſtanding deferreth his anger, & it is credit to paſſe by an offence, Prou. 19. 11. his meaning is, that when ſmall offences are done, which cannot be auoided, then in diſcretion a man ſhould withhold his anger, and not take notice of them, but paſſe by them and let them goe: for this ſhall be a farre greater ornament vnto him, then if vpon the deede done, he ſhould haue haſtily proceeded to reuenge.

The ſecond ſort of offences, are ſmall iniuries, ſuch as doe not onely diſpleaſe vs, but withall bring ſome little hurt to vs: either in our goods, life, or good name. Now the ſecond degree of meekeneſſe is, to take notice of theſe, but withall to forgiue them and put them vp. The reaſon is, becauſe alwaies greater care muſt be had of peace and loue, then of our owne priuate affaires. Reade the practiſe hereof, Ioh. 8. 49. It was obiected to Chriſt wrongfully, that he was a Samaritane, and had a Diuell. Chriſt takes knowledge of the wrong, and ſaith, you haue reproched me: but withal he puts it vp, onely denying that which they ſaid, and clearing himſelfe, I haue not a diuell, but I honour my Father. Dauid had receiued great wrong at the hands of Ioab and Shemei, as appeares in the hiſtorie of his life, but principally, when he came firſt to be king of Iſrael, 2. Sam. 3. and yet he takes not a haſtie courſe, preſently to be reuenged vpon his aduerſaries: but proceedes in this order. Firſt, he takes notice of the fact, and commits his cauſe to God, v. 39. and then afterward, as opportunity ſerued, gaue the parties their iuſt deſert. The reaſon was, becauſe beeing newly inueſted in the kingdome, his aduerſaries were ſtrong, and himſelfe weake, euen by his owne confeſſion, and therefore not able at the firſt, to redreſſe the iniurie done vnto him. But when he had once eſtabliſhed himſelfe, then he doth not onely beginne, 2. Sam. 19. 14. but proceedes to ful execution of puniſhment vpon them, as we reade, 1. Kin. 2. ver. 5. 6. 34. 35.

The third ſort of wrongs, are greater iniuries, ſuch as are not onely offenſiue to our perſons, but withall doe preiudice our liues, and bring a ruine vpon our eſtates, both in goods and good name. Theſe are the higheſt degree of iniuries, manifeſted in open and apparant wrongs. And therefore anſwerable to them, is required the third and higheſt degree of Clemencie, which ſtands in three things. Firſt, in taking notice: ſecondly, in forgiuing them: thirdly, in a iuſt and lawfull defending our ſelues againſt the wronging parties. This is the ſumme and ſubſtance of the anſwer.

For the better conceiuing whereof, ſundry Queſtions are further to be propounded and reſolued.

Firſt in generall, it is demanded, how a man ſhould and ought to forgiue an iniurie.

Anſ. In forgiueneſſe there be foure things.

The firſt is forgiueneſſe of Reuenge, that is, of requiting euill for euill, either by thought, word, or deed. This muſt alwaies be practiſed. For vengeance is not ours, but the Lords, and great reaſon then, that we ſhould euermore forgiue, in regard of reuenge and hatred. This the Apoſtle teacheth, when he ſaith, 1. Cor. 13. 5. Loue is not prouoked, it neuer thinketh, much leſſe ſpeakes or does euill.

The ſecond is forgiueneſſe of priuate puniſhment, which is, when men returne puniſhment for iniuries done, in way of requitall, and this muſt alwaies takes place with vs, becauſe as vengeance it ſelfe, ſo alſo puniſhment in way of reuenge, is Gods alone.

The third is, forgiueneſſe of iudgement, when we iudge an iniurie done to be an iniurie. This iudgement we are not bound to forgiue vnto men. For we may with good conſcience, iudge a ſinne and a wrong to be as they are. And yet notwithſtanding, if a man make ſatisfaction for the wrong done, then there ought to be forgiueneſſe, euen in regard of iudgement.

The fourth is forgiueneſſe of ſatisfaction. This we are not alway bound to remit, but we may with good conſcience, alway require ſatisfaction where hurt is done.

Secondly, for the further clearing of this generall Queſtion, we are to anſwer ſome particular Caſes vſually propounded in the liues of men, and namely, fiue.

I. Whether a man may defend himſelfe by law?

II. How he may defend himſelfe by law?

III. Whether a man may defend himſelfe by force?

IV. How?

V. Whether a man may defend himſelfe by combate?

I. Caſe. Whether a man may with good conſcience and a meeke Spirit, defend himſelfe by law, for wrongs that are done vnto him?

I anſwer affirmatiuely: A man may, with good conſcience, defend himſelfe againſt great iniuries, by the benefit of law. For Magiſtracy is Gods ordinance, for the good of men, Rom. 13. 4. and therefore men may vſe the benefit of authority, iudgement, and iuriſdiction of Magiſtrates, without breach of conſcience. Againe, it is the expreſſe law of God, that when a falſe witnes riſeth vp againſt a man, to accuſe him of a treſpaſſe; that both the accuſer and the accuſed, ſhould ſtand before Gods, that is, before his Prieſts & Iudges for the time beeing, and haue remedy at their hands. An example of which iudiciall defence, we haue in Paul, who in caſe of wrong, makes his appeale to the iudgement ſeate of Rome, Act. 25. 10.

But it is alleadged out of Scripture, to the contrarie, Luk. 6. 29. To him that ſmiteth thee on the one cheeke, offer alſo the other. Math. 5. 40. If any man will ſue thee at the law, and take away thy coate, let him carrie thy cloake alſo.

Anſ. Theſe places are ſpoken of priuate perſons, that want the defence and aſſiſtance of the publike Magiſtrate; and ſuch muſt rater ſuffer wrong vpon wrong, blow vpon blow, and loſſe vpon loſſe, then right their owne wrongs, by reuenging themſelues.

Againe, it is obiected, that Paul ſaies, Lawing is a fault, 1. Cor. 6. 7. There is vtterly a fault among you, becauſe ye goe to law one with another, &c.

Anſ. We muſt diſtinguiſh betweene things themſelues, and the manner of doing them. When Paul ſaies, it is a fault, he condemneth not lawing abſolutely in it ſelfe, but the Corinthian manner of going to law: which was this. Firſt, they went to law with ſcandall, before the Tribunals of Heatheniſh and vnbeleeuing Iudges, and ſo made the Goſpel to be ſlandered and reproched. Secondly, they went to law vpon light cauſes, and for ſmall iniuries, which they might well haue put vp, and eaſily brooked. Thirdly, in lawing they fell into raſh and violent paſſions of rage, and enuy, ſo as they could not temper themſelues, but muſt needs goe to law in the firſt place; which ſhould rather haue beene the laſt & the deſperateſt remedie of all. And this bad manner of ſuing one another at the law, is it which Paul rebukes as a fault. And it is to be obſerued, that Paul notes their fault by a word that ſignifies * Weakneſſe or impotency of their affections, whereby it came to paſſe, that beeing ouercome by the ſtrength of their owne deſires, vpō iniuries offered, they were vnable to beare them in any degree of Chriſtian moderation, and thereupon haſtily proceeded to the Courts of Heathen Iudges, for determination of controuerſies and contentions among them.

It is further alleadged, that when a man is any way wronged, it is Gods will it ſhould be ſo, & therefore he ought not to ſeeke redreſſe, but to reſt himſelfe in the will of God.

Anſ. It is Gods will we ſhould haue diſeaſes, and yet it is no leſſe his will, that we ſhould vſe good meanes to be cured of them. So is it in wrongs and iniuries done vnto vs. As his will is, we ſhould be afflicted, ſo alſo hath he willed our deliuerance, by ſuch meanes, as himſelfe hath appointed.

But our Sauiour would haue his Diſciples to be as ſheepe among woolues, and therefore we ought to endure all wrongs without reuenge. For the ſheepe takes all wrongs, & doth not ſo much as defend it ſelfe againſt the woolfe.

Anſw. So Chriſt commaundeth that we ſhould be ſimple as doues, Math. 10.16. and yet withall, he commaundeth vs to be wiſe as Serpents, to defend our owne heads, and to ſaue our ſelues.

Laſtly, it is alleadged, 1.Cor. 13.5. that loue ſeekes not her owne: therefore loue muſt not defend her ſelfe.

Anſw. Loue doth not ſo ſeeke her owne things, as that ſhee neglecteth the good of others; but ſeeking her owne, ſhee ſeekes the good of all. And this practiſe is not againſt, but according to the law of Charitie.

II. Caſe. How is a man to defend himſelfe by law?

Anſw. For the reſoluing of this Queſtion we muſt take two Rules.

The firſt is this. We muſt firſt trie al means, and vſe all remedies that may be, before we vſe the remedie of Law. It is our Sauiours direction, Math. 5.25. Agree with thine aduerſarie quickely, while thou art in the way, that is, before the controuerſie be ended by order of law. Againe, Math. 18.15. If thy brother treſpaſſe againſt thee, go and tell him his fault betweene thee and him alone. And Saint Paul in this caſe, preſcribes a courſe to be taken before-hand; namely, firſt to beare and ſuffer as much as may be, 1.Cor. 6.7. Why rather ſuffer ye not wrong? why rather ſuſtaine ye not harme? Then, if bearing will not end it, to commit our cauſe to priuate arbitrement of one or two, v. 5. Is it ſo that there is not a wiſe man among you, no not one that can iudge betweene his brethren? Law is to be vſed in this caſe, as the Phyſitian vſeth poiſon, and that is, onely in deſperate caſes.

The ſecond Rule is, That our patient mind muſt be made knowne to all men, Phil. 4.5. In taking the benefit of Law, we are to vſe great Moderation of minde, and that in three reſpects; before we goe to law; in lawing; and A when the ſuit is ended.

The Moderation of minde, before the beginning of ſuits in law, ſtands in three things.

Firſt, we muſt conſider, that all iniuries whatſoeuer they be, doe befall vs by the prouidence of God, and that for our ſinnes. Vpon which conſideration, we ought to ſubmit our ſelues to Gods will, to obey him, to arme our ſelues with patience, and to lay aſide all anger, enuie, malice, and impatience.

Secondly, we muſt conſider before-hand that courts of Iuſtice, are the ordinance of God, in which it pleaſeth him to teſtifie his preſence, iuſtice, and goodneſſe; and vpon this ground, we ſhall be mooued to depart with our owne right, and to yeeld our ſelues and B all the right we haue, into the hands of God, in the vſe of the meanes appointed; in the meane time depending on him by faith, for the iſſue and euent of our ſuit.

And hence (by the way) it appeares, that few or none doe vſe this ordinance of God, as they ought, becauſe the greater ſort of men that commence ſuits in law, doe not conſider either the nature, or end of ciuill Courts. No man ordinarily will yeeld a haire of his right, but euery one fixeth his eies wholly, vpon the euent of his action by extremitie of law: and ſo ſwarueth from that Chriſtian moderation, required by the word of God in this caſe.

Thirdly, we muſt ſet downe with our ſelues
C lawfull and iuſt ends of our actions, not vniuſt and vnlawfull. Theſe iuſt ends are; firſt, Gods glorie in the execution and manifeſta-tion of iuſtice: ſecondly, the honeſt defence of our owne right: thirdly, publike peace; fourthly, the amendment of diſordered per-ſons, and not the defamation or hurt of any man.

The Moderation of the mind in Lawing, ſtands in theſe particulars. 1. In ſeeking after peace to the vtmoſt, Rom. 12.18. If it be poſſi- ble, as much as in you is, haue peace with all men.
2. In loue of our enemies, with whome we are at controuerſie in law. 3. In neither vſing nor D ſhewing extremitie in our proceedings, Mat.
5.25. Mat. 18.28.

After that the ſuit is ended, the moderation of our minds muſt be expreſſed, by our behauiour, in regard of the euent of our action. For if the Law goe with vs, we are to giue God thanks for the manifeſtation of his iuſtice, in the courſe taken. If on the other ſide it goe againſt vs, we may not rage or be diſcontentedly grieued, but commend our cauſe quietly to God, and accuſe our ſelues for our owne ſinnes, and ſay with Dauid, Righteous art thou, O Lord, and iuſt are thy iudgements. Pſal. 119.137.

III. Caſe. Whether may a man defend himſelfe by force, when he is wronged?

Anſw. In ſome Caſes, he may lawfully defend himſelfe by force. Reaſons. Firſt, becauſe the Goſpel doth not aboliſh the Law of nature, nor the poſitiue lawes of all countries: but it doth eſtabliſh them. Now, it is the Law of nature and nations, that a man may defend his life & health, in ſome caſes vpon iuſt occaſion. Secondly, this is Gods Law, Exod. 22. 2. If a theefe be found breaking vp a houſe, and be ſmitten that he die, no blood ſhall be ſhed for him: Abraham was a ſtranger in the land of Sodom, and yet he reskued his brother Lot, and recouered all his ſubſtance that he had loſt, by force and armes, Gen. 14.14. and his action was approoued of God. For Melchiſedeck met him, at his returne from the ſlaughter of the Kings, and bleſſed him: yea, & bleſſed God for his deliuerance, v. 19. 20. Againe, in ſome caſes a man may giue his life for his brother. So ſaies S. Iohn 1. Ioh. 3. 16. We ought alſo to lay downe our liues for the brethren.

IV. Caſe. When may a man defend himſelfe by force?

Anſ. Not alwaies and vpon euery occaſion, but onely in theſe caſes. Firſt, when violence offered is ſo ſudden & vnexpected, that when it comes, there can be no eſcape, either by yeelding, or by flying, or by ſome ſuffering. Secondly, when the violence offered is open and manifeſt, ſo as there is no other way to reskue our ſelues, but by ſtriking or killing. Thirdly, when violence is offered, and the Magiſtrate abſent; either for a time, and his ſtay be dangerous; or altogether, ſo as no helpe can be had of him, nor any hope of his comming. In this caſe, God puts the ſword into the priuate mans hands. Fourthly, when the defence is Iuſt and done in a right manner.

A Iuſt defence ſtands in theſe things. I. It muſt be done incontinent and forthwith ſo ſoone as euer violence is offered. For if there be delay, and it come afterward, it loſes the name of a iuſt defence, & becomes a reuenge, ariſing of prepenſed malice, as the Lawyers vſe to ſpeake. II There muſt be an intention, not to reuenge principally, or to kill, but onely to defend himſelfe. III. There muſt be a iuſt and equall proportion of weapons, therefore it is no iuſt defence to ſhoote a naked man through with a musket, or other peece of ordinance, when he offers violence.

V. Caſe. Whether a man may reskue himſelfe or others by Combate?

Anſ. It hath bin of ancient times, an vſuall manner of defence in ſome countries, that in caſe of difference, betweene people, and people, in matters of weight, two men ſhould be choſen out amongſt the reſt, who by fighting hand to hand, and killing one an other, ſhould end the controuerſie. But this way of defence, how ancient ſoeuer it be, is vtterly vnlawfull.

Reaſons are theſe. Firſt, it is the expreſſe commandement of God, Thou ſhalt not kill. In which, all priuate men are forbidden to kill or ſlay, but in the caſe of iuſt and neceſſarie defence. Secondly, we may not hazard our liues, without ſome ſpeciall warrant from God: if we doe, it is a flat tempting of God: and this is done in euery combate. Thirdly, if Magiſtrates will permit ſuch fights as this is, then they are bound to defend and ſaue the life of the innocent. For by ſuch permiſſion, oftentimes innocent blood is ſhed, and the more harmeleſſe partie goes by the worſt.

But it will be, and is obiected. Firſt, that a Combate is a trial of innocencie. Anſ. It is not ſo. For he that is ſtronger vſually ouercomes in the combate, not he that hath the more righteous cauſe. Again, there be other means to try a truth, beſides this; as by examination, and by oath. Laſtly, triall by the combate, is of the ſame nature with the triall of a murtherer by the bleeding of a corps touched, or handled; which is very doubtfull, and of all other moſt vncertaine.

Secondly, it is alleadged, that if a man take not a chalenge, he is diſgraced for euer. Anſw. There is no warrant in Gods word, for a priuate man to accept a chalenge. Nay, it is rather flat againſt the word. For God ſaies, Reuenge is mine. The priuate man ſaies the contrarie, The wrong is mine, & I will be auenged of him that hath done it. Againe, it is better for any man, to indure a little reproch with ſome men, then to loſe or hazard his life.

Thirdly, it is obiected, that the Philiſtims offered to try the victory by a ſingle combate with the Iſraelites, and appointed Goliah (on their ſide) to giue the Challenge, and that Dauid (on the Iſraelites ſide) accepting the Challenge, encountred with him, & had good ſucceſſe. It may ſeeme therefore, that combats are lawfull. For it is better that one man ſhold periſh in warre, then that a whole army ſhould miſcarie. Anſ. That was a ſpeciall and extraordinarie example of triall, and Dauid was a champion in that fight, not by ordinary appointment, but by extraordinarie propheticall inſtinct of Gods ſpirit. Againe, in warre, though there be leſſe danger in hazarding one mans life, then a whole armie: yet a good and iuſt cauſe is to be maintained, with all the ſtrength that may be made, and not to depend vpon the power & courage of one man, who, in probabilitie, vnleſſe he be ſupported by ſpeciall calling and aſſiſtance from God, may be ouercome and loſe the victorie.

Fourthly, it is alleadged, that an army may fight againſt an armie, therefore one man againſt an other. Anſ. The reaſon is not alike. For warres and armies are Gods ordinances, and ſo are not combates; and it is not Gods will that men ſhould deuiſe and eſtabliſh new waies and meanes of triall, not allowed by his word, but rather reſt content with that he hath appointed.

Fiftly, Ionas did hazard his life, by caſting lots, therefore a man may by combate. Anſw. To ſay that Ionas did put his life in hazard by lots, is an vntruth. For there was onely a coniecturall triall made, who ſhould be the cauſe of the preſent danger. And when the lot fell vpon him, hee was not caſt into the ſea by the lotte, but by his own aduice and counſell. Againe, the caſting of Ionas into the ſea, did not befall him by lotte, but by his owne voluntarie reſignation of himſelfe, into the hands of God; willingly vndergoing it, as a iuſt puniſhment of the neglect of his calling; which himſelfe confeſſed in theſe words, For I acknowledge, that for my ſake this great tempeſt is vpon you, Ion. 1.12.

Sixtly, Moſes and the Egyptian fought a combate, and Moſes ſlew him. Anſw. Moſes tooke vpon him publike reuenge in this action, as a Magiſtrate, and not priuate, as a priuate man. For though as yet, his calling was not fully manifeſted to his brethren, yet the truth is, God had called him to be their deliuerer out of the hands of the Egyptians; and this very action was a ſigne of their deliuerance, which was to come to paſſe afterward. It was (I ſay) a ſigne thus; As he defended his brother, and auenged his quarrell vpon the Egyptian, ſo in time to come the Lord would by his hand, giue them full freedome and deliuerance from the tyranny of Pharaoh, and all his and their enemies, Act. 7.25. Beeing then a publike perſon, his example can proue nothing for this purpoſe.

II. Queſtion.

When anger is a vertue, & ſo good and lawfull, and when it is a vice, and conſequently euill and vnlawfull?

This Queſtion hath two diſtinct parts: of which I will ſpeake in their order.

Sect. 1.

The firſt part is, when Anger is a vertue, and lawfull?

For anſwer hereof, we muſt vnderſtand, that in iuſt & lawfull Anger, there be three things; a right beginning or motiue; a right Obiect; and a right manner of beeing angrie.

To the right beginning of anger, three things are required.

Firſt, that the occaſion of anger be iuſt and weightie, as namely, a manifeſt offence of God. Take an example, or two. Moſes in ſundry places, is ſaid to be angry, and the occaſions of his anger were great, as appeares in the particulars. Firſt, becauſe ſome of the Iſraelites, againſt Gods commaundement, had reſerued Manna till the next day, Exod. 16.20. Againe, hee was angrie becauſe the Iſraelites had tempted God, in worſhipping the golden calfe, Exod. 32.19. In Num. 16.15. Moſes againe is wroth, becauſe Corah, Dathan, and Abiram rebelled againſt him, and in him againſt God. Phinees, Numb. 25.8.11. is ſaid to haue been zealous, that is, angry for God: the occaſion was, becauſe the Iſraelites committed fornication with Heatheniſh women. Dauid in like maner, 2. Sam. 13.20, 21. was angry vpon this occaſion, becauſe Ammon his ſon had deflouered his ſiſter Thamar. Elias is angry, 1. Kin. 19.14. and why? becauſe the Iſraelites forſooke Gods couenant, caſt downe his altars, and had ſlaine his Prophets with the ſword. Nehemias, Chap. 5. v. 6. is very angry, becauſe the Iſraelites oppreſſed one another with vſurie, and other kindes of exactions. Ieremie alſo, Chap. 6. v. 11. was angry for this, becauſe the Iſraelites were of vncircumciſed hearts and eares, and the word of the Lord was vnto them as a reproch, and they tooke no delight therein.

Secondly, it is required, that anger be conceiued vpon counſell and deliberation, Prou. 20. 18. Eſtabliſh thy thoughts by counſell. If thoughts muſt be eſtabliſhed by counſel, then the affections, and ſo our anger alſo. And the Apoſtle ſaith, Iam. 1.19. Be ſlow to wrath. Now the reaſon is plaine; Counſell ought to be the foundation of all our actions, and therefore much more of our affections, which are the beginnings of our actions.

Thirdly, iuſt and lawfull anger muſt be kindled and ſtirred vp by good and holy affections, as namely, by deſire to maintaine the honour and praiſe of God, by the loue of iuſtice and vertue, by hatred and deteſtation of vice, and of all that is euill. One ſaith well to this purpoſe, that anger muſt attend vpon vertue, and bee ſtirred vp by it againſt ſinne, as the dogge attends vpon the ſhepheard, and waites vpon his eye and hand, when to follow him, and when to purſue the wolfe.

The ſecond thing in good anger, is a fitte Obiect or Matter to worke vpon: touching which, two things muſt be remembred.

Firſt, we muſt put a difference betweene the perſon, and the offence or ſinne of the perſon. The ſinne of the perſon is the proper obiect of anger, and not the perſon, but onely by reaſon of the ſinne. Thus Dauid ſaies of himſelfe, that hee was conſumed with anger, not becauſe the men with whome hee was angrie, were his enemies; but becauſe they kept not Gods Law, Pſal. 119.139. Thus Moſes was angry at the idolatry of the Iſraelites, wherewith they had ſinned againſt God fourty daies togither, and yet hee praies earneſtly vnto God, for their perſons, as we reade, Exod. 32.

But it is alleadged to the contrarie, that Dauid directs his anger againſt the perſons of his enemies, eſpecially in Pſalme 109. Anſwer. Firſt, Prophets (as hath beene ſaid heretofore) were endued with a ſpeciall meaſure of zeale; and their zeale was a pure zeale, taken vp ſpecially for the glory and honour of God, but our zeale againſt our enemies, is commonly mixt with hatred, enuy, and ſelf-loue; therefore wee muſt not, nay wee cannot follow their examples. Secondly, imprecations vſed by Dauid, were predictions rather then praiers: for he rather fore-tolde in them what ſhould come to paſſe, thē praied that it might come to paſſe. Thirdly, Dauid in his imprecations, accurſeth not his owne priuate enemies, but the enemies of God, & not all them but ſuch onely as were incurable: for by the ſpirit of prophecie, he knew the ſtate of thoſe againſt whome he did pray, ſo do not we.

Secondly, we muſt put a difference betweene the cauſe and offence of God, and the cauſe and offence of man. Now iuſt anger muſt bee directed againſt perſons, for the offence of God properly, and not for priuate offence, but onely ſo far-forth, as it tendeth to the offence of God. Thus Miriam and Aaron murmured againſt Moſes, becauſe hee had married a woman of Aethiopia. But this was onely a priuate offence, and therefore Moſes behaued himſelfe meekely towards them, Num.12.3.

The third thing in good anger, is the right maner of conceiuing it. Wherein theſe Cautions are to be obſerued. Firſt, that our anger bee mixed and tempered with charity & loue. It is the propertie of God himſelfe, in wrath to remember mercie, Hab.3.2. and herein we muſt bee like vnto him. This was the practiſe of Moſes, who out of his loue prayed for thoſe, with whome he was angrie, Exod.32. Secondly, anger againſt any offence, muſt bee mixed with ſorrow for the ſame offence. Thus Chriſt was angrie with the Iewes, but withall hee ſorrowed for the hardneſſe of their hearts, Mar. 3.5. The reaſon hereof is this: In any ſociety whatſoeuer it be, if one member ſinneth, the ſinne of that one member, is the puniſhment of the reſt that be in that ſociety; euen as it is in the bodie, if one part be affected and ill at eaſe, the reſt will be diſtempered. Paul ſayes of himſelfe, that hee was afraid, leſt when hee came to the Corinths, God would humble him for their ſinnes, 2. Cor.12.21. Againe, he teacheth, that thoſe which are fallen into any fault, muſt be reſtored by the ſpirit of meekeneſſe, becauſe wee our ſelues are ſubiect to the ſame tentations, Galat.6.1. And in this regard, he would haue men to mourne with them that haue in them the cauſe of mourning, Rom. 12.15. Thirdly, iuſt anger muſt be contained within the bounds of our particular calling, and ciuill decencie: that is, ſo moderated, as it make vs not to forſake our duties which we owe to God and man, nor breake the rules of comelineſſe. Thus Iacob was angry with Laban, and yet he ſpeakes and behaues himſelfe as a ſonne to his father, euen in his anger, Gen. 31.36. Ionathan was angrie with Saul his father, and yet he withdrawes not any reuerent or dutifull reſpect from him, 1. Sam.20.

Sect. 2.

The ſecond part of the Queſtion is, When anger is a vice, and vnlawfull?

Anſ. It is a ſinne in fiue regards, contrarie to the former.

Firſt, when wee conceiue it without counſell and deliberation. This raſh, haſty, ſudden, and violent anger, is condemned by our Sauiour Chriſt, Matth. 5. 22. Whoſoeuer is angrie with his brother vnaduiſedly, ſhall bee culpable of puniſhment.

Secondly, when it is conceiued for no cauſe, or for a light or trifling cauſe, Prouerbs 10. 12. Loue couers a multitude of ſinnes. Therefore euery light offence, muſt not bee the cauſe of open anger. Prouerbs 19.11. It is the glorie of a man to paſſe by ſome infirmities. Eccleſiaſtes 7. 23. Take not notice of al the words that men ſpeake, no not of all thoſe which ſeruants ſpeake vnto their maſters. Beſides that, cauſleſſe anger is many times forbidden in the Scripture. And Paul ſaies, that loue is hardly prouoked, becauſe it will not bee mooued to conceiue hatred, but vpon waightie and important cauſes, 1. Cor. 13. v. 5.

Thirdly, when the occaſion is iuſt, yet the meaſure of anger is immoderate. Eph. 4. 26. Be angry, and ſinne not; and if by infirmitie thou fall into it, let not the Sun go down vpon thy wrath. The reaſon is added in the next words, Giue not place to the diuell, becauſe hee is alwaies at hand to inflame the affection, as he did Sauls, who therefore in his rage, would haue killed him that was next him.

Fourthly, when it makes vs to forget our duty to God or man, and to fall to brawling, curſing, and banning. Thus was Shemei angry, when hee railed vpon the king, and flung ſtones at him and his ſeruants, giuing him bad and vnreuerent tearmes, and calling him a man of blood, and a man of Belial, 2. Sam. 16.5,6,7. Thus did the diſciples forget their duty of loue vnto their brethren, and in anger deſired that fire might come down from heauen, and deſtroy the Samaritanes, Luk. 9.59. Thus the Iewes in vndecent and vncharitable manner, gnaſhed with their teeth at Steuen, Act.7.54. And S. Paul ſaies, that the fruites of wicked anger, are clamors, and crying ſpeeches betweene perſon and perſon in their fury, Eph.4.31. And thence it is, that wee finde Balaam in his anger, to haue been more void of reaſon then his aſſe, Numb.22.27.

Fiftly, when wee are angrie for priuate reſpects concerning our perſons, and not concerning the cauſe of God. Thus Cain is ſaid to be exceeding wroth, and to haue his countenance caſt downe, onely vpon a priuate reſpect, becauſe hee thought his brother Abel ſhould be preferred befor him, Gen. 4.5. Thus Saul was wroth with Dauid, taking himſelfe to be diſgraced, becauſe the people (after the ſlaughter of the Philiſtimes) aſcribed to Dauid ten thouſands, and to him but a thouſand, 1. Sam. 18,7. In like maner he was angry with Ionathan, for his loue that he bare to Dauid, and for giuing him leaue to goe to Bethleem, 1. Samuel 20, v. 30. Thus Nebuchadnezzars wrath was kindled againſt the three children, becauſe he tooke himſelfe to be contemned of them, Dan. 3.19. Thus Haman meerely in regard of priuate diſgrace, growes to great indignation againſt Mordecai, Eſter. 3. v. 5. Thus Aſa was angry with the Prophet Hanani, becauſe he thought it a diſcredit to him, to be reproued at his hand, 2. Chron. 16. 10. And in this ſort, were the Iewes filled with wrath at Chriſts reproofe, Luk. 4.28. ſhewing thereby, as it is truly expounded by the Commenter, that they were very hot in their owne cauſe, and not in the cauſe of God.

III. Queſtion.

What is the Remedie of vniuſt Anger?

Anſ. The Remedies thereof are two-fold: Some conſiſt in meditation, and ſome in practiſe.

Sect. 1.

The Remedies that ſtand in Meditation, are of three ſorts; ſome doe concerne God; ſome our neighbour, ſome our ſelues.

The Meditations concerning God, are ſpecially ſixe.

I. Meditation. That God by expreſſe cōmandement forbids raſh and vniuſt anger, & commaunds the contrary, namely, the duties of loue. Reade for this purpoſe, Mat. 5.21.22. where we may obſerue three degrees of vniuſt anger. The firſt whereof is, that which is inwardly conceiued, and not outwardly ſhewed. The ſecond, when vniuſt anger ſhewes it ſelfe by ſignes of contempt, as by ſnuffing, tuſhing, changing and caſting downe of the countenance. The third, is railing (thou foole) which is culpable of Gehenna fire, the higheſt degree of puniſhment. Now all theſe three degrees are murther; and the puniſhment of a murtherer is, to bee caſt into the lake of fire, Reu. 21.8. Againe, Chriſt commandeth vs to reward good for euill, to bleſſe them that curſe vs, and to do good to them that hate vs, if we will be the children of our Father which is in heauen, Mat. 5.45. And S. Paul wiſheth vs, to ouercome euill with goodneſſe, Rom. 12.21.

II. Meditation. That all iniuries which befall vs, do come by Gods prouidence, whereby they are turned to a good end, namely, our good. Thus David ſaith, that God had bidden Shemei to curſe him, 2. Sam. 16.10. And this was the ground of Chriſts reproofe of Peter, Shall I not (ſaith hee) drinke of the cuppe which my Father hath giuen me to drinke of? Ioh. 18.11.

III. Meditation. God is long-ſuffering euen towards wicked men; and wee in this point muſt be followers of him. In regard of this, God is ſaid to bee mercifull, gracious, ſlow to anger, abundant in goodnes & truth, Exod. 34.6. Hence it was, that hee ſpared the olde world 120. yeares, 1. Pet. 3.19. Hee ſpared the Iſraelites, after their idolatrie, 390. yeares, Ezech. 4.5. Beſides this, we haue example of the lowlineſſe and long-ſuffering of Chriſt, who ſaith, Matth. 11.29. Learne of me, for I am humble and meeke: and of whome it is ſaid, 1. Pet. 2.22. When hee was reuiled, hee reuiled not againe: when he ſuffered, he threatned not; but committed his cauſe to him that iudgeth righteouſly. Now becauſe ſome may haply ſay, that theſe examples of God and Chriſt, are too perfect for man to follow, who cannot imitate God in all things: therefore beſides them, conſider further the examples of ſome of the ſeruants of God. Moſes, when the people murmured at him, did not anſwer them againe by murmuring; but cried vnto the Lord, what ſhall I do to this people? for they be almoſt ready to ſtone me, Exod. 17.4. And Steuen, when he was ſtoned, praied for his enemies, Lord, lay not this ſinne to their charge, Act. 7.60.

IV. Meditation is, concerning the goodneſſe of God towards vs; an argument whereof is this: That he doth euery day forgiue vs farre more offences, then it is poſſible for vs to forgiue men.

V. Meditation. All reuenge is Gods right, and he hath not giuen it vnto man, Rom. 12. 19. Vengeance is mine, I will repay, ſaith the Lord. And man by reuenging his owne quarrell, makes himſelfe both the Iudge, the witneſſe, the accuſer, and the executioner.

VI. Meditation is, touching Chriſts death. He ſuffered for vs the firſt death, and the ſorrowes of the ſecond death: much more then ought wee at his commaundement, to put vp ſmall wrongs & iniuries without reuenge. His commandement is, Reſiſt not euill, but whoſoeuer ſhall ſmite thee on the right cheeke, turne to him the other alſo, Mat. 5.39. Againe, Deſtroy not him with thy meate, for whom Chriſt died, Rom. 14.15.

The Meditations concerning our neighbour, are two. The firſt, is the condition of him, with whome we are angrie, namely, that he is a brother. Let there be no ſtrife betweene me and thee, for we are brethren, Gen. 13.8. Againe, he is created in the Image of God; wee muſt not therefore ſeeke to hurt or deſtroy that Image. The ſecond is, concerning that Equitie which we looke for at the hands of all men. If wee wrong any man, wee deſire that he would forgiue vs: and therefore we muſt forgiue him the iniurie that he doth vnto vs, without vniuſt anger. This is the very law of nature, Whatſoeuer ye would that men ſhould doe vnto you, euen ſo do you vnto them, Mat. 7.12.

Meditations concerning our ſelues, are ſixe.

Firſt, he that conceiueth raſh anger, makes himſelfe ſubiect to the wrath of God, if hee cheriſh the ſame without relenting. Matthew 6.15. If ye doe not forgiue men their treſpaſſes, no more will your Father forgiue you your treſpaſſes. And Matthew 7.1. Iudge not, that ye bee not iudged. Yea, when we pray to God to forgiue vs, and doe not reſolue to forgiue our brethren, we doe in effect ſay, Lord condemne vs, for we will be condemned.

Secondly, we are commanded to loue one another, euen as Chriſt hath loued vs, Eph.5.2. It is the propertie of loue, to ſuffer, and to beare, and not to be prouoked to anger, 1.Cor.13. And it is a marke, whereby Gods children are diſcerned from the children of the Diuell, that they loue their brethren. 1.Ioh.3.10

Thirdly, we are ignorant of mens mindes in ſpeaking and doing: we know not the manner and circumſtances of their actions. And experience teacheth, that much anger comes vpon miſtaking and miſconſtruing them. VVhereas contrariwiſe, if they were throughly knowne, wee would not be ſo much incenſed againſt men, as cōmonly we are.

Fourthly, in raſh anger, we can doe no part of Gods worſhip that is pleaſing to him. VVe cannot pray: for hee that praies, muſt lift vp pure hands without wrath, 1.Tim.2.8. VVe cannot be good hearers of the word: for Saint Iames wiſheth vs to bee ſwift to heare, and ſlow to wrath; becauſe the wrath of man doth not accompliſh the righteouſnes of God. Iam.1.20.21

Fiftly, we muſt conſider what are the fruits and conſequents of vniuſt anger. For firſt, it greatly annoies the health. It annoies the braine, & pulſes, it cauſes the gall to flow into the ſtomacke & the bowels; it killeth and poiſoneth the ſpirits; and is the next way to procure diſtemper of the whole body, and conſequently loſſe of health. Secondly, it makes a man captiue to the diuel, Eph.4.27. which we ſee to be true in Sauls example, who beeing a man full of wrath, and giuing place to his own rage and furie, an euill ſpirit entred into him by the iuſt iudgement of God.

Sixtly, we muſt conſider the Cauſes of vniuſt anger. It is commonly thought, that anger is nothing but the flowing of choler in the gall, and in the ſtomacke. But the truth is, anger is more then choler. For it riſeth firſt of a debilitie of reaſon and iudgement in the minde. Secondly, from euil affections: as from enuie, and ſelf-loue. Thirdly, from the conſtitution of the body, that is hotte and drie. Againe, wee reade in hiſtories, that men hauing no gall, haue notwithſtanding beene ful of anger: and choler indeede is a furtherance, but no cauſe of anger.

The remedies of vniuſt anger that ſtand in practiſe, are ſpecially fiue.

The firſt is, in the time of anger to conceale the ſame, both in word and deede. The indignation of a foole (ſaith Salomon, Prou.12.16.) will bee knowne the ſame day, but the wiſe man couereth his ſhame: that is, hee reſtraines his anger, which if it ſhould preſently breake forth, would be a reproch vnto him. Anſwerable to this notable ſpeech of Salomon, was the wiſe counſell of * Ambroſe to Theodoſius; that after ſentence giuen, he ſhould take 30. daies reſpite before execution. And not vnlike hath beene the practiſe of the very Heathen in their time. Socrates ſaid, I had beaten thee, but that I was angrie. Athenodorus gaue Auguſtus this rule, that when hee was angrie, hee ſhould firſt ſay ouer the whole Alphabet, before hee put in execution his anger.

* Ambro. de obit. Theod.

Secondly, we muſt depart from them with whom we are angrie. For this affection is as a fire; take the matter away from fire, and it will ceaſe to burne: ſo let a man depart, & employ himſelfe (for the time) ſome other way, & he ſhall ſoone ceaſe to be angrie. Thus did Ionathan depart out of his fathers preſence, 1.Sam.20.34. Abraham in his anger withdrew himſelfe from Lot, Gen.13. Iacob in wrath departed from Eſau, Gen.27.43.44.

Thirdly, wee muſt auoide the occaſions thereof: as contentions, and contentious perſons. Doe nothing through contention. Philip.2.3. Make no friendſhip with an angry man, neither goe with a furious man, leſt thou learne his waies, and receiue deſtruction to thy ſoule, Pro.22.24. VVe muſt for this purpoſe, be carefull to auoid all means, that may ſerue to further the heate of the temperature of ſuch a body, as is apt and diſpoſed to this vnruly paſſion.

Fourthly, we are to conſider that wee ſinne againſt God, not once or twiſe, but often, yea euery day: and therefore the courſe of our anger muſt be turned againſt our own ſelues, for our ſinnes. For this is one property of true repentance, to worke in vs a reuenge vpon our ſelues, in regard of our ſinnes committed againſt God, and our brethren, 2.Cor.7.11.

Fiftly, we muſt accuſtome our ſelues to the daily exerciſes of inuocation of the name of God, for this ende, that hee in mercie would mortifie all our earthly affections, eſpecially this corrupt and violent affection of vniuſt wrath. And this muſt we doe, as at all times, ſo then eſpecially, whē anger is creeping vpō vs.

It will bee ſaid of ſome: Our anger is violent, and comes vpon the ſudden, and therefore theſe remedies will doe vs no good. Anſ. Such perſons, when their mindes bee quiet, muſt often reade and meditate of the foreſaid remedies, and by this meanes they ſhall bee able to preuent haſtineſſe.

But what if wee bee ouertaken with anger, what muſt we then doe? Anſ. If thou fall into it through infirmity, yet remember thy ſelfe, let not the Sun go down vpon thy wrath, Eph.4.26. Conſider with thine own heart, that anger is as a poiſon: if a man drinks poiſon, he muſt not ſuffer it to reſt, and flow into the body & veines, but with all ſpeede muſt purge it out: and ſo muſt anger be dealt withall, wheṅſoeuer we are ouertaken with it.

CHAP. IV.

Of Queſtions concerning Temperance.

TEmperance is a vertue that moderateth appetite or luſt. And this moderation of appetite, ſtands in foure things.

I. In the vſe of Riches.
II. In the vſe of Meate and Drinke.
III. In the vſe of Apparell.
IV. In the vſe of Pleaſures; wherein Recreations are to be conſidered.

Sect. 2.

Concerning the Moderation of Appetite in the vſe of Riches, there are two maine Queſtions.

I. Queſtion.

How farre a man may, with good conſcience, proceed in the deſiring and ſeeking of Riches?

The Anſwer of this Queſtion is the rather to be conſidered, becauſe this doctrine rightly conceiued and vnderſtood, ſerues greatly for the direction of the whole courſe of our liues vnto the end. Here therefore I will firſt ſet down the Ground of the Anſwer, and then the Anſwer it ſelfe.

The Ground of the Anſwer, I propound in fiue Rules.

I. Rule. Wee muſt conſider, that riches and goods are of two ſorts: ſome are neceſſarie, ſome are more then neceſſarie, which the Scripture cals Abundance.

Goods and riches are two waies neceſſarie; neceſſarie to nature, or neceſſarie to the perſon of a man. Goods neceſſarie to nature, are thoſe, without which nature and life cannot bee well preſerued; and theſe are moſt needfull. Neceſſarie in reſpect of a mans perſon, are thoſe goods, without which a mans ſtate, condition, and dignitie wherein hee is, cannot be preſerued.

Now Riches more then neceſſarie, I tearme thoſe, without which, both the life of man, and his good eſtate, may well bee preſerued. For example: To the calling of a Student, meate, drinke, and cloth, are neceſſarie in reſpect of nature; beſides theſe, other things, as bookes, and ſuch like, are alſo neceſſarie for him, in reſpect of his condition & place. And whatſoeuer is beſide theſe, is more then neceſſarie.

II. Rule. Things and goods, are to be iudged neceſſarie and ſufficient, not by the affection of the couetous man which is vnſatiable, but by two other things; the iudgment of wiſe and godly men, and the example of ſober and frugall perſons.

III. Rule. We muſt not make one meaſure of ſufficiencie of goods neceſſarie for all perſons; for it varieth, according to the diuers conditions of perſons, and according to time & place. More things are neceſſary to a publike man, then to a priuate; and more to him that hath a charge, then to a ſingle man.

IV. Rule. That is to be iudged neceſſarie, which in ſome ſhort time to come may bee needefull, though it haue no preſent vſe. For example: the dowry that a father giues to his daughter at the day of marriage, though it be not preſently needefull, yet becauſe in ſhort time it may be neceſſarie, therefore it is to be reputed amongſt neceſſarie goods.

V. Rule. We our ſelues doe often erre in iudgement, in determining of things neceſſarie and ſufficient for our ſelues: and therefore when men ſeeke things competent and neceſſarie, they muſt alwaies pray to God to giue them that, which hee knowes in his wiſedome to be meete and neceſſarie, not preſcribing a meaſure vnto him.

I come now to the Anſwer of the Queſtion, which is two-folde.

The firſt is this: Man may with good conſcience, deſire and ſeeke for goods neceſſarie, whether for nature, or for his perſon, according to the former rules: but he may not deſire and ſeeke for goods more then neceſſary, for if he doth, he ſinneth. The reaſons of this anſwer, are theſe:

Firſt, Deut. 17.16, 17. the commandement is giuen to the King, that hath moſt neede of abundance, that he ſhould not multiply his horſes, or his ſiluer or his golde. That which the King may not doe, the ſubiects ought much leſſe to do; and therefore they are not to multiply their goods. For this cauſe it is a great fault in ſubiects, remaining (as they be) ſubiects, to ſeeke to attaine to the riches of Princes. Againe, Paul ſaith, 1. Tim. 6. 8. Hauing foode and raiment, let vs be therewith content. Beſides that, in the petition, Giue vs this day, &c. wee craue but onely bread for our ſubſtance, that is meet to preſerue vs for nature, in that calling wherein we ſerue God day by day. The prayer of Agur is, that God would giue him food conuenient for him, or (as the words ſignifie) bread of his ſtatute, that is, which God in his counſel had appointed and ordained for him, Prou. 30 8.

Secondly, ſeeking of abundance is a hazard to the ſaluation of the ſoule, by reaſon of mans corruption. Therefore, Mat. 13. Riches are called thornes, that choake the word of God ſowne in the heart. And 1. Tim. 6 9. They that will, that is, deſire to be rich, and content not themſelues with things neceſſarie, fall into the ſnare of the diuell.

Thirdly, ſeeking of abundance, is a fruit of diffidence in the prouidence of God. Now all fruites of vnbeleefe muſt be cut off; we muſt not therefore deſire more then neceſſary.

In the next place, for the better clearing of this doctrine, the Obiections of Couetous men are to be anſwered.

Obiect. I. Good things are to be ſought for; but abundance is a good thing, and a bleſſing of God. Anſw. Good things are of two ſorts. Some are ſimply good, that is to ſay, good both in themſelues, and to vs, as remiſſion of ſinnes, holineſſe, righteouſneſſe, and life euerlaſting in the kingdome of heauen, and ſuch like: theſe may wee deſire, and ſeeke for. Some againe, are good onely in part, which though they bee good in themſelues, yet are not alwaies good to vs. Of this kinde is abundance of riches, and ſtore of wealth more then neceſſary for nature & perſon. For which cauſe, riches in abundance, are as the knife in the hand of a childe, likely to hurt, if it be not taken away; becauſe they are (in ſome men) occaſions of ſinne, vnleſſe God in mercie preuent and hinder them. And for our ſelues, what know wee, whether God will keepe and preſerue vs from ſinne, when wee ſeeke and labour for abundance?

Obiect. II. It is the promiſe of God, that riches and treaſures ſhall be in the houſe of the iuſt, Pſal. 112.3.

The anſwer is two-folde. Firſt, riches in Scripture ſometimes, doe ſignifie only things ſufficient and competent, and of them is that place to be vnderſtood. To this purpoſe Dauid ſaies, that a ſmall thing, that is, a competent, and meane portion, though but very little, is to the iuſt man better then great riches to the wicked and mightie, Pſal. 37.16. And whereas Dauid in another place affirmeth, that nothing ſhall bee wanting to them that feare God, Pſalme 34.9. and againe, They which ſeeke the Lord, ſhall want nothing that is good: the places are to bee vnderſtood with exception of the croſſe and correction, in this ſort; that they ſhall haue competencie, vnleſſe the Lord intend to chaſtiſe and correct them by want. Secondly, if by riches Dauid there meaneth abundance, the words muſt bee vnderſtood with this condition; if they be for their good. For ſo all promiſes of temporall things muſt bee limited with exception, partly of Gods glorie, kingdome, and will, and partly of our good and ſaluation.

Obiect. III. We muſt doe good to the poore, to the Church, to the commonwealth, and wee muſt alſo leaue ſomewhat to poſteritie. I anſwer: we may not doe euill that good may come thereof. Againe, euery man is accepted of God, according to that he hath, and not according to that he hath not, if there be a ready minde, 2. Cor. 8.12. And the ende of a mans calling, is not to gather riches for himſelfe, for his family, for the poore, but to ſerue God in ſeruing of man, and in ſeeking the good of all men: and to this ende men muſt apply their liues and labours.

Obiect. IV. We are called to imitate the Ant, Pro. 6. & 13. which gathers in one ſeaſon, for her releefe in another. Anſ. The Ant gathers in ſommer, onely things neceſſary; ſhe doth not by the inſtinct of nature, ſeeke ſuperfluity, and more then is neceſſary.

This doctrine ſerues to direct and informe almoſt all the world, to beate downe the wicked practiſe of the Vſurer, and to teach euery one of vs to moderate our care in things pertaining to this life.

The ſecond part of the Anſwer is this: If God giue abundance, when we neither deſire it, nor ſeeke it, we may take it, holde and vſe it, as Gods ſtewards. Abraham and Ioſeph of Arimathea, are commended for their riches, and yet they obtained them not by their own ſeeking and moiling, after the manner of the world; but walking in their callings, God in his prouidence bleſſed and multiplyed their wealth. For further proofe of this anſwer, conſider but one only place, Act. 5.4. where Peter ſaies to Ananias, when it remained, appertained it not vnto thee? and when it was ſolde, was it not in thy power? Theſe words import thus much; that if we haue poſſeſſions and abundance, wee may with good conſcience inioy them as bleſſings and gifts of God.

Againſt this doctrine it is alleadged: Firſt, that our Sauiour ſaies, It is a hard thing for him that hath riches, to enter into the kingdome of God, Matth. 19.23. Anſ. The place is to be vnderſtood of them that truſt in their riches, as it is expounded Mark. 10.24.

Secondly, it is obiected, wee muſt forſake all, and become Chriſts diſciples, by the commaundement of Chriſt, Luk. 14 26. Anſ. A man muſt forſake al, not ſimply, but in regard of the daily diſpoſition and preparation of his minde; and ſo a man ought to forſake the things that are deareſt vnto him, becauſe hee muſt haue his mind reſolued to forſake them. Again, a man muſt be content to part with all, not onely in affection, but actually when it commeth to this point, that either hee muſt loſe them, or renounce Chriſt.

Thirdly, it is alleadged, that riches are called vnrighteous, Luk. 16. 9. Make ye friends of vnrighteous Mammon: therefore it ſeemes we may not haue them. Anſ. Mammon is called Mammon of iniquitie, not becauſe it is ſo in it ſelfe, but becauſe it is ſo in the common vſe, or rather abuſe of wicked men: and that in ſundry reſpects. Firſt, becauſe it is commonly (though not alwaies) vniuſtly gotten: for it is a hard thing to become rich without iniuſtice. Secondly, it is made ordinarily, among ſinfull men, an inſtrument of many euils. Thirdly, euill gotten goods are vniuſtly poſſeſſed, and no man can be truly tearmed rich, that vniuſtly poſſeſſeth riches.

II. Queſtion.

How a man may with good conſcience, poſſeſſe and vſe Riches?

The Anſwer to this Queſtion, I propound in foure Rules.

I. Rule. They which haue riches are to conſider, that God is not onely the ſoueraigne Lord, but the Lord of their riches, and that they themſelues are but the ſtewards of God, to imploy and diſpenſe them, according to his will. Yea further, that they are to giue an account vnto him, both for the hauing and vſing of thoſe riches, which they haue and vſe. This Rule is a confeſſed truth. In the petition, when we haue bread in our houſes and hands, yea which is more, in our mouthes; when we are in the vſe of the creature, euen then are we taught to ſay, Giue vs this day our daily bread, to ſignifie, that God is our ſoueraigne and abſolute Lord, and that when we haue the creatures, we haue no vſe of them, vnleſſe he giue it vnto vs. Againe, the commandement, Luk. 16.2. Giue an account of thy ſtewardſhip, pertaines to all men that haue riches, though it be but meat and bread.

II. Rule. We muſt vſe ſpeciall moderation of minde, in the poſſeſſing and vſing of riches, and be content with our eſtate, ſo as we ſet not the affection of our heart vpon our riches, Pſal. 62.10. If riches increaſe, ſet not your heart vpon them; that is, place not your loue and confidence in them; be not puffed vp with pride and ambition, becauſe you are rich, Luk. 6.24. Woe be to you that are rich: that is, that put confidence in your riches, Math. 5.3. Bleſſed are the poore in ſpirit. Now pouerty of ſpirit is, to beare pouerty with meekeneſſe, patience, and obedience, as a croſſe impoſed by God. And in this ſenſe the rich man may be ſaid to be poore in ſpirit, if he beſtoweth not his loue and confidence vpon his wealth, but in affection of heart is ſo diſpoſed, as if he were not rich, but poore. And this pouertie is neceſſarie euen in the middeſt of wealth, becauſe it will reſtraine the furie of the vntamed and vnruly affection. Againe, Chriſt ſaith, Math. 10.39. He that loſeth his life for my ſake, ſhall finde it. Loſing there mentioned, is not an actuall loſing, but (as before) a diſpoſition or preparation of the heart to loſe for Chriſts ſake, (if neede be) the deareſt thing we haue, that is, our life. And againe, Luk. 14.26. If any man come to me, and hate not father and mother, — yea and his owne life alſo, he cannot be my Diſciple. That place is not ſpoken of actuall, but of habituall hatred. And this ſtands in a readineſſe and inclination of the heart to hate (if need be,) father and mother, yea our owne life for Chriſt and the Goſpels ſake. To this purpoſe the Apoſtle ſaith; They that buy, muſt be as though they poſſeſſed not, 1. Cor. 7.30. that is, in reſpect of moderation of the affection, and the diſpoſition of the heart. For otherwiſe, it is the law of nature, that he that buies muſt poſſeſſe.

Example of the Moderation of the affection, we haue in Moſes, who eſteemed the rebuke of Chriſt, greater riches then the treaſures of Egypt, Heb. 11.26. And in Dauid, who though he were a King, and a Lord in the earth, yet ſaith of himſelfe, that he was but a pilgrime and ſoiourner in it, as all his fathers were, Pſal. 39.13. And he ſpeakes this in reſpect of the affection of his heart, and moderation thereof, becauſe he did not fixe the ſame vpon abundance. And of Paul, who profeſſeth in this manner, I haue learned to be full, and to be hungrie: in all things I am inſtructed,* or entred in this high point of Chriſtian practiſe, to be hungrie and to be full, Phil. 4.12. In which text, two things are ſet downe. Firſt, that Chriſtian moderation or contentment, is a high myſterie; yea that it requires much skill & art to know, how to be poore, and how to be rich. Secondly, that himſelfe was a learner of this art, and that he had beene but entred and initiated into the knowledge thereof.

Now, that this Moderation of mind may be learned and practiſed, we muſt remember that two eſpeciall meanes are to be vſed. Firſt, we muſt labour to be able to diſcerne betweene things that differ, Phil. 1.10. How is that? by iudging aright betweene riches temporal, and the true riches, that will make a man rich before God. This gift of diſcerning was in Moſes, who vpon a right iudgement in this point, accounted the rebuke of Chriſt, greater riches, then the treaſures of Egypt, Heb. 11.26. In Dauid, who ſaies, that the Lord was his portion, when he was a King, and euen in the middeſt of his riches, Pſal. 119.57. In Paul, who eſteemed the beſt things that were, but baſe, yea droſſe and dung, that he might win Chriſt. Phil. 3.8. The ſecond meanes of Moderation is, to conſider that wee are in this world, as pilgrimes and ſtrangers, 1. Pet. 2.11. that the beſt of vs brought nothing into the world, neither ſhall (when we die) carry ought out of it.

III. Rule. We muſt, vpon the calling of God, forſake our riches, and al that we haue in this world, not onely in diſpoſition of minde, but in deed.

The word of God teacheth, that there be three Caſes, wherein a man is indeede to forſake all.

I. If he be extraordinarily and immediately called, to publiſh the Goſpel to all nations. This was the caſe of the Apoſtles & Euangeliſts, who in regard of their calling, at leaſt for vſe, forſooke all that they had, Math. 19.27.

II. In the Caſe of Confeſſion, when for profeſſing the name of Chriſt, a man is depriued of them in the daies of triall. Thus when our Sauiour ſaith, Whoſoeuer he be that forſaketh not all that he hath, &c. Luk. 14.33. the words are ſpoken of all beleeuers, in the Caſe of confeſſion, when they are called by God vnto it, and therefore S. Matthew explaines it thus, Whoſoeuer, &c. for my names ſake, he ſhall receiue, &c. Math. 19.29.

III. When in the time of perſecution, famine, or warre, the neceſſity is ſo great, that it requires preſent reliefe, which can no other way be had, but by giuing & ſelling the goods that a man hath. In Pſal. 112.9. the good man is ſaid to diſperſe to the poore; this diſperſing muſt not be vnderſtood of all times, but in caſe of extreame neede. Againe, when Chriſt ſaies, Luk. 12.33. ſell all that thou haſt; this commandement muſt be limited: for a man is not bound to ſell all at all times, but in the time of great and vrgent neceſſity. Thus the Chriſtians in the Primitiue Church, in the daies of imminent perſecution, ſold all their poſſeſſions, Act. 2.45. And ſo Paul acknowledgeth that the Church of Corinth releeued the Church of Macedonia, euen beyond their abilitie, in the daies of extremity that was in that Church, 2. Cor. 8.

Here another Queſtion may be mooued; Whether a man may voluntarily, and of his owne accord, giue away all his goods, liue vpon almes, & giue himſelfe to faſting & praier?

Anſ. He may in Popiſh conceit giue himſelfe (in this ſort) to voluntary pouerty, which they hold to be lawfull, and (which is more) a ſtate of perfection. We on the contrarie doe anſwer, that this practiſe is in no ſort lawfull, vnleſſe a man haue ſpeciall calling & warrant from God ſo to doe. For firſt, the Law of nature ſets downe and preſcribes diſtinction of poſſeſſions, and proprietie of lands & goods, and the Goſpel doth not aboliſh the law of nature. Againe, the ſame diſtinction and proprietie, is allowable by the written Law of God. Salomon teacheth, Pro. 5.15. that a man muſt let his waters flow out of his ciſterne, but he muſt keepe the fountaine to himſelfe. And, Prou. 10.22. It is the bleſſing of God to be rich, and he addeth no ſorrowes to it. Men muſt not therefore voluntarily forſake their riches, and ſo bring ſorrow to thẽſelues. Beſides that, Agur praies againſt pouertie; Giue me (ſaith he) neither pouerty nor riches, Prou. 30.8. Dauid makes it a curſe, to be a beggar, Pſal. 109.10. and he neuer ſaw the righteous mans ſeede begging their bread, Pſal. 37.25. Our Sauiour Chriſt biddes him that had two coates, not to giue both away, but one, Luk. 3.11. And Paul ſaies, It is a more bleſſed thing to giue, then to receiue, Act. 20. 35. Therefore he biddes euery man to labour with his owne hands, that he may need nothing: that is, that he may not neede the releefe and helpe of any man, or of any thing, 1. Theſſ. 4. 11, 12.

But it is alleadged to the contrary, Mat. 19. 21. If thou wilt be perfect ſell all. Anſ. The words are a perſonall and particular commaundement. For this young Prince, whome Chriſt ſpeakes vnto, was called to become a Diſciple of Chriſt, & to preach the Goſpel, Luk. 9.59. And the commaundement is not giuen generally to all men, but particularly to him alone, and we cannot make a general rule of a ſpecial commandement or example. Againe further, it was a commandement of ſpeciall triall.

Secondly they alleadge, Math. 10.9. Poſſeſſe neither gold, nor ſiluer, nor money in your purſes. Anſ. That commandement was temporal, and giuen to the Diſciples but onely for the time of their firſt embaſſage into Iurie, as appeares in the 5. v. where Chriſt bids them not to goe yet into the way of the Gentiles. And the commaundements of their firſt embaſſage, were reuerſed afterward, Luk. 22.36. Conſidering then that it belonged onely to their firſt embaſſage, when they preached to the Iewes, it was not giuen them for all times.

IV. Rule. We muſt ſo vſe and poſſeſſe the goods we haue, that the vſe and poſſeſſion of them, may tend to Gods glorie, and the ſaluation of our ſoules. Rich men muſt be rich in good workes, and together with their riches, lay vp a good foundation in conſcience, againſt the euill day, 1. Tim. 6.18.

For the better practizing of this rule, take theſe three cautions.

I. We muſt ſeeke to haue Chriſt, and to be in him iuſtified and ſanctified: and beeing in him, then ſhall we in him and by him, haue the holy vſe of all that we haue.

Some will ſay; Infidels haue the vſe of riches. Anſ. They haue indeed, and they are to them the gifts of God: Yet they ſo inioy them, as that before God they are but vſurpers. They be gifts of God in regard of Gods giuing, but they are abuſes and thefts in regard of their receiuing, becauſe they receiue them not as they ought. A father giues a gift vnto his child, vpon condition that he ſhall thus and thus receiue it; now the child ſteales the gift that is giuen him, and therefore hath it not in that manner that his father would he ſhould haue it. In like maner doe Infidels ſteale and vſurpe the bleſſings of God, to which they haue no iuſt title, themſelues being out of Chriſt; neither doe they vſe them in that maner which God requireth, ſanctifying them by the word and prayer, 1. Tim. 4.5.

II. We ought to pray to God, that hee would giue vs his grace, rightly to vſe our riches to his glory, and our owne ſaluation. For Riches and other temporall bleſſings, to ſinfull men that haue not the gift to vſe them well, are dangerous, euen as a knife in the hand of a child. They are thornes, and choake the grace of God, they keepe thoſe that truſt in them, from entrance into the kingdome of heauen. Yea they are the diuels ſnare, wherby he catcheth the wicked, and holdeth them in it at his will and pleaſure.

III. Our riches muſt be imploied to neceſſarie vſes. Theſe are firſt, the maintenance of our owne good eſtate and condition. Secondly, the good of others, ſpecially thoſe that are of our family or kindred, 1. Tim. 5.8. He that prouideth not for his owne, and namely for them of his houſhold, he denieth the faith, and is worſe then an Infidell. Thirdly, the reliefe of the poore, according to the ſtate and condition of euery man. Fourthly the maintenance of the Church of God, and true religion, Prou. 3.9. Honour God with thy riches. Fiftly, the maintenance of the common-wealth: Giue tribute (ſaith Paul) to whome tribute belongeth, Rom. 13.7. And giue vnto God, ſaith Chriſt, the things that are Gods, and vnto Caeſar, the things that are Caeſars, Math. 22.21. Thus much touching the moderation of the appetite in the vſe of Riches.

Sect. 2.

In the ſecond place follow thoſe Queſtions, that concerne the moderation of our appetite, in the vſe of Meate & Drinke. Concerning which there are principally two; the anſwer to the firſt whereof is the ground of the ſecond.

I. Queſtion.

Whether there be any difference in the vſe of Meates and Drinkes, now in the times of the New Teſtament?

Anſ. There is a diſtinction and difference of Meates, to be obſerued in ſundry reſpects.

I. In reſpect of man, for healths ſake. Paul counſelleth Timothie, Drinke no more water, drinke a little wine, 1. Tim. 5. 23. In which it is plaine, that there is a diſtinction of meates approoued and commended for man. For euery kinde of foode fits not euery body: meates therefore are to be vſed with difference. Man was not made for meate, but meate for man.

II. In reſpect of ſcandall. Some are not to be vſed at ſome time, and ſome are at the ſame time to be eaten. Thus Paul profeſſeth, that rather then he would offend his brother, he would eate no fleſh while the world endureth, 1. Cor. 8. 13. And in Rom. 14. he diſputes the point at large, touching the diſtinction of meates, that is to be obſerued in regard of offending them that are weake.

III. There is a diſtinction to be made, in reſpect of ciuill and politicke order; when for the common good of ſocieties, certaine kinds of meates for certaine ſeaſons of the yeare are forbidden. Thus in our common wealth, there are appointed daies of fleſh, and daies of fiſh, not in reſpect of conſcience, but in regard of order, for the common good of the countrie.

IV. There is a difference of meates, which ariſeth vpon the bond of conſcience, ſo as it ſhall be ſinne to vſe or not to vſe this or that meate. Touching this difference; Before the flood, the Patriarches (in all likelihood) were not allowed fleſh, but onely hearbs, and the fruit of the ground, Gen. 1. 29. After the flood, fleſh was permitted, but blood forbidden, Gen. 9. 3. 4. From that time there was commanded a diſtinction of meates, whereof ſome were cleane, ſome vncleane; which diſtinction ſtood in force til the death of Chriſt, and that in conſcience, by vertue of diuine Law. But in the laſt daies, all difference of meates in reſpect of obligation of the conſcience, is taken away, and a free vſe of all is giuen in that regard.

A This the Scripture teacheth in many places, Act. 10. 15. The things that God hath purified, pollute thou not. Peter in theſe words teacheth, that all meats in the new Teſtament in regard of vſe, were made cleane by God, and therefore that no man by refuſall of any kind of meats, ſhould thinke, or make them, vncleane. Againe, Rom. 14. 17. The kingdome of God is not meate or drinke, but righteouſneſſe, peace, and ioy in the holy Ghoſt. For whoſoeuer in theſe things ſerueth Chriſt, is acceptable to God and approoued of him. Hence it appeareth, that in the Apoſtles iudgement, meate and drinke doth not make any man accepted of God, whether he vſeth or vſeth it not, but the worſhip of God is it that makes man approoued B of him. To the ſame purpoſe it is ſaid, 1. Cor. 8. 8. Meate doth not commend vs vnto God. Againe, Col. 2. 16. Let no man condemne you in meate and drinke, &c. v. 20. If ye be dead with Chriſt, why as if ye liued in the world are ye burdened with Traditions, as Touch not, Taſt not, Handle not? All which periſh with the vſing. Here, Paul would not haue the Coloſſians burdened with rites and Traditions concerning meates, ſo as if they vſed them not, they ſhold incurre the blame and condemnation of men: but he would haue them to vſe them freely and indifferently. And his reaſon is double: Firſt, becauſe they were now freed in conſcience from the bond of the Ceremoniall law touching meats: and therefore they were in C conſcience much more freed from mens lawes. Secondly, becauſe theſe traditions are not the rules and commandements of God, but the doctrine and precepts of men. Furthermore, Paul in 1. Tim. 4. 3. foretels, that there ſhould be many in the latter dates, that ſhould commaund to abſtaine from meates. To which place the Papiſts anſwers, that that was, becauſe ſuch perſons taught, that meates were vncleane by nature. But the words are ſimply to be vnderſtood, of meates forbidden with obligation of the conſcience, and the text is generall, ſpeaking of the doctrine, not of the perſons of thoſe men, nor in ciuill reſpects, but in regard of the bond of conſcience. Laſtly, it is a part of Chriſtian liberty, to D haue freedome in conſcience, as touching all things indifferent, and therefore in regard of meates.

To this doctrine, ſome things are oppoſed, by them of contrarie iudgement.

Obiect. I. Princes doe make lawes, and in their lawes do forbid meates and drinks, and they muſt be obeyed for conſcience ſake, Rom. 13. 5.

Anſw. They doe ſo, but all theſe lawes are made with reſeruation of liberty of conſcience, and of the vſe of that libertie to euery perſon. But to what end then (will ſome ſay) are lawes made, if they be made with reſeruation? Anſ. The ſcope of them is, not to take away, or to reſtraine liberty, or the vſe of liberty in conſcience, but to moderate the ouercommon and ſuperfluous outward vſe. As for that text, Rom. 13. 5. It is to be vnderſtood for conſcience ſake, not of the law of the Magiſtrate, but of the law of God that bindes vs to obey the Magiſtrates law.

Obiect. II. There was blood, and things ſtrangled forbidden, in the councell at Ieruſalem, after Chriſts aſcenſion, Act. 15. 20. Anſ. It was forbidden onely in regard of offence, and for a time, ſo long as the weake Iew remained weake, not in regard of conſcience. And therfore afterward Paul ſaies, that all things, euen blood it ſelfe was lawfull, though not expedient in regard of ſcandall, 1. Cor. 6. 12. And to the pure, all things are pure. Tit. 1. 15.

Obiect. III. Papiſts make lawes, in which they forbid ſome meates, only to reſtraine concupiſcence. Anſ. Then they ſhould forbid wine, as well as fleſh; for wine, ſpices, and ſome kinds of fiſh, which they permit, are of greater force to ſtirre vp luſt, then the vſe of fleſh. And hence it is, that Saint Paul exhorts men not to be drunke with wine, wherein is exceſſe; Eph. 5. 18. Againe, I anſwer, that luſt may be reſtrained by exhortation to temperance, without prohibitorie lawes for the obligation of the conſcience, which are flat againſt Chriſtian libertie.

Vpon this anſwer a further Queſtion may be made.

Whether a man may with good conſcience eate fleſh at times forbidden?

Anſ. There are two kinds of eating; eating againſt the Law, and beſides the Law.

Eating againſt the law is, When a man eates, and by eating hinders the end of the law, contemnes the authoritie of the law-maker, fruſtrates the law it ſelfe, and withall, by his eating, giues occaſion to other to doe the ſame. This eating is a flat ſinne againſt the fift commaundement. For it is neceſſarie, that the Magiſtrates lawes ſhould be obeyed in all things lawfull, Heb. 13. 17. The maſter and the parent, muſt be obeyed in al lawful things, much more the lawes of Magiſtrates.

Eating beſide the law, is, when a man eats that, which the law mentioneth and forbiddeth, but not hurting the law. And that a man may thus eate, ſundry cautions are to be obſerued. I. This eating muſt be vpon iuſt cauſe in a mans owne ſelfe. II. It muſt be without contempt of the law-maker, and with a loyall minde. III. It muſt be without giuing offence to any, by his bad example. IV. When it doth not hinder the maine end of the law. V. When the eater doth ſubiect himſelfe to the penaltie, voluntarily and willingly. In this eating there is no breach in conſcience, neither is it a ſinne, to eate that which the law forbiddeth. For man hath free libertie, in conſcience; to eate that which he doth eate. Now if he vſe his liberty, and hurt no law, obſeruing theſe cautions, his eating is no ſinne. For example. It was Gods law, that the prieſts only ſhould eate the ſhew-bread. Now Dauid

A vpon a iuſt cauſe in himſelfe, (all the former cautions obſerued) eates the ſhew-bread, and ſinnes not; becauſe his conſcience was free in theſe things, and therefore Dauids eating was not againſt the Law, but only beſide the law.

II. Queſtion.

B How we may rightly vſe meates & drinkes, in ſuch ſort as our eating may be to Gods glory, and our owne comfort?

Anſ. That we may ſo doe, ſome things are to be done before we eate, ſome in eating, and ſome after our eating.

Sect. 1.

What is required before we eat.

The thing that is to be done before our eating, is the conſecration of the food, that is, the Bleſſing of the meates which we are to eate, 1. Tim. 4. 5. Euery creature of God is ſanctified by the word of God, and prayer. By ſanctification there, is not meant that, whereby we are ſanctified by the holy Ghoſt: neither that, whereby the bread and the wine is hallowed in the Sacrament of the ſupper. But it is this; when C we are aſſured, that the creature is made ſo free, and lawfull to vs, in reſpect of our vſe, that we may eate it freely, and with good conſcience. By the word of God, Paul meanes the word of creation, mentioned in Gen. 1. 28. 29. and repeated, Gen. 9. 3. as alſo the word of God touching the libertie of conſcience, namely, that to the pure all things are pure, Tit. 1. 15. It is further added, and prayer, that is, praier grounded vpon the ſaid word of creation, and the doctrine touching Chriſtian liberty; wherby we pray for grace to God, that we may vſe the creatures holily to his glorie.

The reaſons, why this ſanctification of our meate is to be vſed, are theſe. Firſt, that in the vſe of it, we may lift vp our hearts vnto God, and by this meanes, put a difference betweene D our ſelues and the brute beaſts, which ruſh vpon the creatures, without ſanctifying of them. Secondly, that we may be admoniſhed thereby, touching the title we haue to the creatures, which beeing loſt by the fall of Adam, is reſtored vnto vs againe by Chriſt. Thirdly, that it may be an aſſured teſtimonie to our hearts, that we may vſe the creature with liberty of conſcience, when we doe vſe it. Fourthly, that we may be ſanctified to the vſe of the creature, as it is ſanctified to vs, to the end, that we may vſe it with temperance, and not abuſe it. Fiftly, that when we vſe the creature, we may depend on God for the bleſſing of it, to make it our nouriſhment. For no creature can nouriſh of it ſelfe, but by Gods commandement, who as Dauid ſaith, Pſal. 145. 16 Openeth his hand, and filleth al things liuing of his good pleaſure.

And in bread, we muſt not conſider the ſubſtance onely, but the ſtaffe, which is the bleſſing of God vpholding our bodies. Sixtly, that we may not grow to ſecuritie, forgetfulneſſe, and contempt of God, and ſo to prophanenes in the vſe of our meates & drinkes, as the Iſraelites did; which ſate downe to eate and drinke, and roſe vp to play.

Now beſide these Reaſons, we haue alſo the Examples of holy men. This bleſſing of the meate, was ſo knowne a thing of auncient times, that the poore maides of Ramath-zophim, could tell Saul, that the people would not eate their meate, before the Prophet came, and bleſſed the ſacrifice, 1. Sam. 9. 13. Chriſt in his owne family, would not eate of the fiue loaues and two fiſhes, till he had looked vp to heauen and giuen thanks. Mark. 6. 41. Paul tooke bread in the ſhip, and gaue thanks in the preſence of all that were with him, Act. 27. 35.

The vſe of the firſt point is. I. By this doctrine, all perſons are taught, but ſpecially gouerners of others, as Maſters of families; and Parents; neuer to vſe, either meates or drinkes or any other bleſſing, that they receiue at the hands of God, but with praiſe and thankſgiuing. For this which is ſaid of meates and drinkes, muſt be inlarged alſo to the vſe of any benefit, bleſſing, or ordinance, that we take in hand, to vſe or inioy. II. Though we doe not ſimply condemne, but allow of hallowing of Creatures, yet we deteſt Popiſh conſecration of ſalt, creame, aſhes, and ſuch like. Firſt, becauſe Papiſts hallow them for wrong ends, as to procure by them remiſſion of ſins, to driue away diuels, &c. Secondly, becauſe they ſanctifie creatures without the word; yea, though they doe it by praiers, yet it is prayer without the word, which giueth no warrant thus to vſe the creatures, or to theſe endes; and therefore of the ſame nature with Magicall inchantments. Thirdly, if the creature muſt be ſanctified for our vſe, before we can vſe it, then we our ſelues muſt be ſanctified both in ſoule and body, before we can be fit for the vſe and ſeruice of God. Looke as the creature, by the hand and prouidence of God, is preſented before vs to ſerue vs; ſo muſt we beeing ſtrengthened and nouriſhed by the ſame giue vp our ſelues, ſoules, and bodies, to ſerue and honour him. Yea our ſanctifying of the creature to our holy vſe, ſhould put vs in minde of ſanctifying our ſelues to his glory. So ſoone as the Prophet Eſay was ſanctified by God vnto his office, then he addreſſed himſelfe, and not before, and ſaid, Lord, I am heere, Eſa. 6. 8. and ſo we our ſelues, before we can performe any acceptable duty vnto God, muſt be purged and clenſed. The ſonnes of Aaron would not doe this honour vnto God, by ſanctifying his name before the people, and therefore God glorified himſelfe in their death, and temporall deſtruction, Leuit. 10. 2. And when Moſes the ſeruant of God, failed in the ſanctification of his name, by the circumciſion of his ſonne; Gods hand was vpon him to haue deſtroied him. This point is duly to be obſerued of all, but principally of ſuch as are appointed to any publike office; if they will ſerue God therein with comfort and incouragement, they muſt firſt labour to be ſanctified before him, both in their ſoules and bodies.

Sect. 2.

What is required in our eating.

I come now to the ſecond thing, required for the right and lawfull Vſe of meates and drinkes, namely, a Chriſtian behauiour while we are in vſing them.

For the better vnderſtanding whereof, we are to conſider two points. Firſt, what we may doe, and then, what we muſt doe in vſing the creatures.

I. Touching the former. We may vſe theſe gifts of God, with Chriſtian liberty: and how is that? not ſparingly alone, and for meere neceſſitie, to the ſatisfying of our hunger, and quenching of our thirſt, but alſo freely and liberally, for Chriſtian delight and pleaſure. For this is that liberty, which God hath granted to all beleeuers. Thus we reade, that Ioſeph and his brethren with him, did eate and drinke together of the beſt, that is, liberally, Gen. 43. 34. And to this purpoſe Dauid ſaith, that God giueth wine, to make glad the heart of man, and oyle to make the face to ſhine, as well as bread to ſtrengthen the bodie. Pſal. 104. 15. And the Lord threatneth to bring a puniſhment vpon his people, Agg. 1. 6. in that he would giue them his creatures indeede, but ſuch a portion of them, as ſhould onely ſupply their preſent neceſſities, and no more. Ye ſhall eate (ſaith he) but ye ſhall not haue enough: ye ſhall drinke, but ye ſhall not be filled. Againe, we reade that Leui the Publican, made our Sauiour Chriſt a great feaſt in his owne houſe, Luk. 5. 29. At the marriage in Cana a towne of Galile, where Chriſt was preſent, the gueſts are ſaid, according to the manner of theſe countries, to haue drunke liberally. Ioh. 2. 10. And at an other place, in ſupper time, Marie is ſaid to haue taken a boxe of pretious and coſtly oyntment, and to haue annointed his feete therewith, ſo as the whole houſe was filled with the ſauour of the oyntment, Ioh. 12. 3. Iudas indeed thought that expence which ſhee had made, ſuperfluous, but Chriſt approoues of her act, and commendeth her for it.

I adde further, that by reaſon of this libertie purchaſed vnto vs by Chriſt, we may vſe theſe and the like creatures of God, with ioy and reioycing. This is the profit that redoundeth vnto man, in the vſe of them, that he eate and drinke, and delight his ſoule with the profit of his labours, Eccl. 2. 24. The practiſe hereof we haue in the Acts, c. 2. v. 46, where they of that Church that beleeued, are ſaid to eate their meate together with gladneſſe, and ſingleneſſe of heart. And yet this reioycing in the creatures, muſt be limited with this clauſe; that it be, in the Lord, that is to ſay, a hurtleſſe and harmeleſſe ioy, tending to the glorie of God, & the good of our neighbour. This condemneth the common practiſe of the world, who ſolace and delight themſelues in the vſe of Gods creatures, but ſo, as with their ioy is ioyned the ordinarie traducing of the Magiſtrate, Miniſter, and thoſe that feare God, and will not runne with them to the ſame exceſſe of riot. 1. Pet. 4.4.

II. The ſecond point is, what we muſt do, when we take the benefit of Gods creatures; a matter of great conſequent in the liues of men. And it is this, that we vſe our libertie in the Lord, and whether we eate, or eate not, we muſt doe both to the Lord. Rom, 14 6. This is done by labouring, both in eating, and in abſtinence, to approoue the ſame vnto God, vnto his Saints, and vnto our owne conſciences. Wherein appeareth a manifeſt difference betweene the wicked and the godly man. For the one, when he eateth or drinketh, he doth it in the Lord, and to the Lord; the other doth it not to the Lord, but to himſelfe, that is, to the ſatisfaction and contentment of his owne carnall delight and pleaſure.

That a man may eate to the Lord, there are foure things directly to be obſerued.

I. That in our eating, we practiſe Iuſtice. Salomon ſaith, The bread of deceit, that is, gotten by vnlawfull meanes, is ſweet vnto a man: but afterward, his mouth ſhall be filled with grauel. Prou. 20.17. And Paul giues a rule to the Church of Theſſalonica, that euery man ſhould eate his owne bread: that is, the bread which is procured and deſerued, by his owne iuſt and honeſt labour, 2. Theſſ. 3.2. This firſt thing, ſerues to checke a number of men, that liue in the daily practiſe of iniuſtice, by ſpending their goods in good fellowſhip at Tauernes and tipling houſes, neglecting (in the meane while) the maintenance of their owne charge, by following their honeſt labour; and by this meanes, doe euen rob their families, of their due and right.

II. That we may eate to the Lord, we muſt practiſe Loue and Charity in our eating. How is that?

Firſt, we muſt giue offence to no man whatſoeuer. It is good, ſaith Paul, neither to eate fleſh, nor to drinke wine, nor any thing, whereby thy brother ſtumbleth, is offended, or made weake: Rom. 14.21.

Secondly, in our eating we muſt haue reſpect of the poore. Thus Nehemiah exhorteth the Iewes that were mourning for their ſinnes, to be cheerefull, to eate of the fatte, and drinke the ſweete, and ſend part vnto them for whome none was prepared: that is, to them that were poore. Nehem. 8.10. And the Prophet Amos inueigheth againſt ſome of the Princes of Iſrael, who drunke wine in bolles, and anointed themſelues with the chiefe ointments, and were not ſorrie for the affliction of Ioſeph: that is, did not releeue the poore brethren, that were led captiue, and wanted food and and maintenance, Amos. 6.6.

III. We muſt vſe our meate in Sobriety. Sobrietie is a gift of God, whereby we keepe a holy moderation in the vſe of our diet. Pro. 23.1.2. When thou ſitteſt to eate, &c. conſider diligently, what is ſet before thee, and put the knife to thy throat, that is, be very carefull and circumſpect in taking thy foode, bridle thine appetite, take heede thou doeſt not exceed meaſure.

If it be asked, what Rule of moderation is to be obſerued of all, whether they be men or women, young or old?

I anſwer. Firſt, one mans particular example, muſt not be a rule of direction to all. In the Eaſt countries, we reade, that men haue liued, and doe yet liue a great time with a litle; for example, with parched corne and a cake. Now this example of theirs, is no rule to vs that liue in theſe parts. For their countrie is hotter then ours, and therefore leſſe might ſerue them then vs: we are hot within, and ſo our appetite is the more ſtrong. Againe, in eating we may not iudge or condemne him that eateth more or leſſe, then we our ſelues, because his eating is no rule to vs in this caſe.

Secondly, a mans owne appetite, is not to be made a rule of eating for others. For a man muſt not eate ſo long as his ſtomacke craues meate, leſt he fall into the ſinne of gluttonie. Rom. 13.13. And this ſinne is noted by our Sauiour Chriſt, to haue beene in the old world, in the daies of Noah, Matth. 24.38. when they gaue themſelues to * eating and drinking like the brute beaſts: for ſo the word ſignifies.

If then neither example, nor appetite may rule our eating, what be the right rules of Chriſtian moderation in this behalfe?

Anſ. That we may not exceede meaſure, we muſt keepe our ſelues within theſe limits.

Firſt, our foode muſt not goe beyond the condition, place, abilitie, and maintenance that God hath giuen vs. Iohn the Baptiſt being in the wildernes, contented himſelfe with very meane fare, agreeable both to the maner of that countrey, and to his owne calling, and condition of life. His meate was locuſts and wild honie, Math. 3.4.

Secondly, it muſt be framed to the order and difference of time and place. Againſt this Rule the rich glutton offended, who fared deliciouſly euery day, without any difference of time or place. Luk. 16. Salomon pronounceth a woe to that Land, whoſe Princes eate in the morning, Eccl. 10 16. Saint Paul notes it as a fault in a Miniſter *to be * giuen to wine*, 1. Tim. 3.3. that is, to be a common tipler, and one that loues to ſit by the wine morning and euening, day by day.

Thirdly, euery man muſt eate & drinke ſo much, as may ſerue to maintaine the ſtrength of his nature, of his bodie and minde, yea ſo much, as may ſerue to vpholde the ſtrength of grace in him. Salomon the King of Iſrael, would haue al Princes to eat in time, for ſtrength, and not for drunkenneſſe, Eccl. 10. 17. Eſay notes it as a iudgement of God vpon men, when they vſe feaſting & mirth, and haue not grace to conſider the workes of God, Eſa. 5. 12. Our Sauiour would haue al men ſo to eate and drink, that they may be the fitter to watch and pray, Luk. 21. 34. 36. And the Apoſtle Paul exhorteth men, not to be drunke with wine, wherein is exceſſe, but to be filled with the holy Ghoſt, Epheſ. 5. 18. His meaning is, that men ought ſo to eate and drinke, that their bodies, mindes, and ſenſes, may not bee made thereby more heauie, but rather more lightſome and able to performe their duties to God and man. For if by immoderate feeding they be hindred in this behalfe, they are guilty of exceſſe and riot, which is greatly diſpleaſing to God, and offenſiue to men. This rule ſerueth to admoniſh ſome perſons, who (as the Prouerb is) are good forenoone-men, but badde afternoone-men; becauſe in the morning they bee ſober, but for the moſt part ouercome with drinke after dinner.

IV. Euery man muſt eate his meate in godlines. This is indeed to eate vnto the Lord, and it may bee done by obſeruation of theſe rules.

Firſt, by taking heede of the abuſe of any creature appointed for foode, by intemperance. This abuſe holy Iob ſuſpected in his ſonnes, while they were a feaſting, and therefore he ſent day by day, and ſanctified them, and offered vp burnt offerings vnto God according to the number of them all, Iob 1. 5.

Secondly, by receiuing the creatures, as from the hand of God himſelfe. For this very end did God by expreſſe word, giue vnto Adam euery hearb bearing ſeed, which was vpon the earth, and euery tree wherein was the fruit of a tree bearing ſeed, for his meate, that he might receiue it as God had giuen it vnto him, from his owne hand, Gen. 1. 29. Thus Moſes ſaid vnto the Iſraelites touching Manna: This is the bread, which the Lord hath giuen you to eate, Exo. 16. 15. This Dauid acknowledged, ſaying, Thou giueſt it them, and they gather it, thou openeſt thy hand, and they are filled, Pſal. 104. 28. & 145. 15. The Lord vpbraideth Iſrael with this fault, by the Prophet Hoſea, Shee did not acknowledge that I gaue her corne, and wine, and oyle, and multiplyed her ſiluer and golde, Hoſ. 2. 8. Yea it is noted as an argument of Gods loue to Iſrael, by the Prophet Ioel, that he ſent them corne, wine, and oyle, that they might bee ſatiſfied therewith, Ioel 2. 19.

By this duty, are iuſtly to be reprooued the careleſſe and godleſſe behauiours of ſundry perſons, who (with the ſwyne) feed vpon the creatures of God, but neuer lift vp their eyes or hands vnto him, of whom, and from whom they doe receiue them. The very brute beaſt can teach them a better leſſon. For (as Dauid ſaith,) The Lyons roaring after their prey, do ſeeke their meat from God, Pſal. 104. 21. Yea the heauens and the earth, and all that are in them, do alwaies depend vpon his prouidence, and are altogither guided & directed by him, Iob 38. And ſhall not man much more haue an eye vnto his Creator, and wholly depend vpon him, for all bleſſings, from whom he receiues life and breath, and all things?

Thirdly, wee muſt receiue theſe creatures from God our Father, in token of our reconciliation to him in Chriſt. So ſaith S. Paul, Giuing thankes alwaies, for all things, to God euen the Father, in the name of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, Eph. 5. 20. Thus wee holde and receiue Gods bleſſings, and hee that holdes and receiues them otherwiſe, is an vſurper, and not a right and lawfull poſſeſſour of them.

Fourthly, wee muſt learne to bee content with that portion that God aſſigneth to vs, be it neuer ſo ſmall; and withall labour to ſee the goodneſſe of God, euen in the meaneſt fare that may bee. Our table is (as it were) a liuely Sermon to vs, of Gods ſpeciall prouidence ouer our bodies. For firſt, in reaſon dead fleſh ſhould rather kill vs, then giue vs nouriſhment, and yet by his bleſſing and prouidence, it continueth life and ſtrength. Againe, both we & our meate are but periſhing, and therefore when we feede thereon, it may ſerue to ſtirre vs vp, to ſeeke for the foode of the ſoule, that nouriſheth to life euerlaſting, Ioh. 6. 27. Furthermore, looke as euery creature ſerues for our vſe, euen ſo ſhould wee our ſelues, conſecrate our ſelues vnto God, and ſerue him both with our ſoules and bodies, as before hath beene ſhewed.

What is required after our meate.

The third and laſt point is, what we are to doe, and how to behaue our ſelues after our meate? This Moſes teacheth the Iſraelites, Deut. 8. 10. When thou haſt eaten and filled thy ſelfe, thou ſhalt bleſſe the Lord thy God. This praiſing or bleſſing of God, ſtands in two things.

Firſt, in a holy remembrance, that God hath giuen vs our food. For beeing once filled, we muſt take heed we forget not God, who hath opened his hand, and plenteouſly refreſhed our bodies with his creatures, Deut. 8. 11.

Secondly, we muſt make conſcience, in liew of thankfulnes to God, to imploy the ſtrength of our bodies in ſeeking his glory, and walking according to all his lawes and commandements. Whether ye eate or drinke, or whatſoeuer ye doe, doe all to the glorie of God, 1. Cor. 10. 31. Wee may not liue idlely, and giue our ſelues to riot and gaming, but labour to ſerue God and our countrey, in ſome profitable courſe of life, leſt it be ſaid of vs, as it was once of the old Iewes, that we ſit downe to eate and drink, and riſe vp to play.

To this I adde one thing further, that when we haue eaten to our contentment, and ſomething remaines, care muſt bee had to reſerue it, and not to caſt it away. For this purpoſe we haue the example of Chriſt, who commaundeth to gather vp the broken meat that remaines, that nothing be loſt, Ioh. 6.12. The reaſon is, becauſe theſe reliques and fragments, are part of the creatures, yea they are as well Gods good creatures, as the reſt were, and muſt bee preſerued to the ſame vſe.

Now if theſe may not bee abuſed, or loſt, much leſſe ought the gifts of the minde, which are greater, and farre more precious, be ſuffered to miſcarrie, but rather to be preſerued and increaſed. A good leſſon for ſuch as haue receiued any ſpeciall gifts of nature, or grace from God; that they miſpend them not, or ſuffer them to periſh, but carefully maintaine them to the glory of God, and the good of others.

To conclude this Queſtion, wee are all to be exhorted to make conſcience of this duty, to vſe the good bleſſings of God in ſuch ſort, as they may alwaies tende to the honour of the giuer, auoiding all exceſſe and riot.

Reaſons to mooue vs hereunto, may be theſe. I. Exceſſe deſtroyes the bodie, and kils euen the very naturall ſtrength & life thereof. II. It brings great hurt to the ſoule of man, in that it annoyeth the ſpirits, it dulleth the ſenſes, it corrupteth the naturall heate, and good temper of the body. Now theſe things beeing the helpes, and next inſtruments of the ſoule, if they be once corrupted and decayed, the ſoule it ſelfe will at length be brought to the ſame paſſe. III. Let this be conſidered, that a Woe belongs vnto them, that eate and drinke immoderately, Eſa. 5.11. And for this very ſinne, the Lord led his owne people into captiuity, verſ. 13. Yea the drunkard and the glutton, ſhall become poore, Pro. 23:21. And both ſhall equally, with their pompe and exceſſe deſcend into hell, Eſa. 5.14. IV. We ſhould be willing to part from all for Chriſts ſake, much more from our exceſſe; & ſhall we think it poſſible for a man to forſake all, euen his owne life, that will not forſake exceſſe and intemperance, in the vſe of Gods creatures?

It will be ſaid of ſome, we are not drunken, though we drinke much. Anſ. It is a policie of the Diuell, to delude men withall, when hee perſwades them, that much drinking is not amiſſe, if a man bee not ouertaken therewith. For it is a ſin to liue and ſit daily by the wine, to be alwaies bibbing and ſipping. We know not when or where wee ſhall die, and wee are commaunded to watch ouer our hearts, that we be not ouercome with ſurfeting and drunkenneſſe. What a madneſſe then is it, to giue ouer our ſelues to ſuch immoderate exceſſe, whereby wee are vtterly diſabled from theſe, and all other duties of godlineſſe?

Sect. 3.

In the third place, wee come to thoſe Queſtions that concerne the moderation of our appetite in the vſe of Apparell. And of this kinde there be two principall Queſtions; the former of them beeing nothing elſe, but an introduction to the latter.

I. Queſtion.

Whether ornaments of gold, ſiluer, precious ſtones, ſilkes and veluets, &c. may not lawfully be vſed?

Anſ. There is a lawfull vſe of theſe things, yet not in all, but only in them to whom they belong. Reaſons of the Anſwer are theſe;

I. Gold and ſiluer, &c. are the gifts of God, and ſerue not only for neceſſity, but for ornament and comelineſſe.

II. We haue the examples of ſundry perſons in Scripture, which doe warrant the vſe of theſe creatures and bleſſings of God. Abraham by his ſteward ſends vnto Rebecca a golden abiliment, or ear-ring, of halfe a ſhekell waight, and two bracelets of tenne ſhekels waight of golde, Gen. 24.22. And it is ſaid, that when ſhe receiued it, ſhe ware the iewell of golde in her forehead, and the bracelets vpon her hands, verſ. 47. Ioſeph being aduanced in Pharaohs Court, had the ſignet of Pharaoh put vpon his hand, and a chaine of golde about his necke, and was arrayed in fine linnen: all which were the ornaments of Princes in thoſe countries, Gen. 41.42. Againe, all the Iſraelites did weare ear-rings of golde, which afterward they tooke off from their eares, and gaue them to Aaron, to make thereof the golden calfe, Exod. 32.3. And they are not blamed for wearing them, but becauſe they put them to idolatrous vſes. So it is ſaid of king Salomon, that he had ſiluer in ſuch abundance, that, according to his ſtate, he gaue it in Ieruſalem as ſtones, 2. Chron. 9.27. And Chriſt ſpeaketh of the royalty of Salomon, as of a rare and excellent thing, which himſelfe approoued, howſoeuer hee preferres the glory of the Lillies of the field before it, Mat. 6.29. The daughter of Pharaoh is ſaid to be brought vnto Salomon, in a veſture of golde of Ophir, that is, in a garment of the fineſt beaten golde, Pſalm. 45.10. All theſe examples doe ſhew thus much, that there is a lawfull vſe of theſe things in them to whome they appertaine.

Againſt this doctrine, ſome things are obiected.

Obiect. I. In ſome places of Scripture, women are forbidden to weare coſtly apparell, and gold. For Paul willeth Timothie, that the women array themſelues in comely attire, not with broidered haire, or golde, or pearles, or coſtly apparell, 1. Tim. 2.9. And to the ſame purpoſe Peter ſpeaketh, 1. Pet. 3.3.

Anſw. Firſt, theſe ornaments are not by Paul and Peter ſimply forbidden, but the abuſe of them in riot and exceſſe. For perſons that were in thoſe times called, were of meaner eſtate; and the Churches in the daies of the Apoſtles, conſiſted (for the greater part) of poore, baſe, and meane men and women. 1. Cor. 1. 28. Theſe things therefore are forbidden them, becauſe the vſe of golde and pretious ornaments, is nothing elſe but meere riot, in thoſe that are but of a meane condition. Secondly I anſwer, that the Apoſtles in the places alledged, do reprooue a great fault, which was common and ordinary in thoſe daies. For men and women deſired and affected the outward adorning and trimming of their bodies, accounting the outward ornament, which conſiſted of golde, pearle, and coſtly apparell, to be the principall: whereas indeede the chiefe ornaments of a Chriſtian, ſhould be the vertues of Modeſtie and Humilitie, ſeated in the minde, and teſtified in the outward carriage.

Obiect. II. The Prophet Eſay condemneth theſe things in particular. For it ſeemes, that he had viewed the wardrobes of the Ladies of the court in Ieruſalem, Cap. 3. 18, &c. where he makes a Catalogue of their ſpeciall attires and ornaments, and pronounceth the iudgements of God againſt them all.

Anſw. Some of the ornaments which the Prophet there mentioneth, are indeed meere vanities, that were of no moment, and ſerued to no neceſſarie or conuenient vſe or ende at all. Againe, others of them were in themſelues things lawfull, and the Prophet doth not condemne them at all, as they haue meete and conuenient vſe: but he condemnes them in this regard, becauſe they were made the inſtruments and ſignes, of the pride, wantonnes, vanity, and lightneſſe of thoſe women. The truth of this anſwer will appeare, if wee conſider the 16. verſe of that chapter, where the Prophet ſhewes what his drift was in ſpeaking of thoſe things; not to condemne all ornaments, but the pride of the daughters of Ieruſalem, and their hautineſſe and wantonneſſe, teſtified by diuers particular behauiours there mentioned. Againe, ſome of the things there named, were the like, if not of the ſame kinde, with thoſe which Abraham ſent to Rebecca, and which ſhee did weare, Gen. 24. 22. And therefore we may not think, that the Prophet intends to condemne all things there ſpecified, but onely the abuſe of them, as they were then miſapplied to wrong ends, and ſerued to proclaime to the world, the pride and wantonneſſe of the hearts of that people.

II. Queſtion.

What is the right, lawfull, and holy vſe of apparell?

Anſw. In the vſe of Apparell, two things are to bee conſidered: the preparation of it, when it is to be worne; and the wearing, when it is prepared.

Sect. 1.

Preparation of apparell.

In the right preparation of our apparell, two Rules are propounded in Scripture for our direction.

I. Rule. Our care for apparell, and the ornaments of our bodies, muſt bee very moderate. This our Sauiour Chriſt teacheth at large, Mat. 6. from the 28. to the 31. v. Where, commanding men to take no thought for apparel, he forbiddes not all care, but the curious and immoderate care. The reaſon is added, becauſe they which walke in their callings, and doe the duties thereof with diligence, ſhall haue, by Gods bleſſing, all things needefull prouided and prepared for them. Hee that dwels in a borrowed houſe, wil not fall a trimming of it, and ſuffer his owne hard by, to become ruinous. In like manner, our bodie is the houſe of our ſoule, borrowed of God, and by him lent vnto vs for a time; and wee are but his Tenants at-will: for wee muſt depart out of it at his commaundement. And therefore our greateſt care muſt be emploied vpon our ſoules; and the other which concerneth the adorning of our bodie, muſt be but moderate. Againe, Gods in his prouidence, clotheth the very hearbs of the field, therefore much more is he carefull for man. And Paul ſaith, If we haue foode and raiment, we muſt therewith be content, 1. Tim. 6. 8. that is, if wee haue foode and raiment neceſſary for vs and ours, wee ought to quiet our hearts, and haue no further care for our apparell.

It will wee ſaid, How ſhall we know what is neceſſarie?

Anſ. A thing is neceſſarie two waies: firſt, in reſpect of nature, for the preſeruation of life and health: ſecondly, in reſpect of place, calling, and condition, for the vpholding and maintenance thereof. Now we call that neceſſarie rayment, which is neceſſarie both theſe waies: For example: That apparell is neceſſary for the Scholler, the Tradeſman, the Countrey-man, the Gentleman; which ſerueth not onely to defend their bodies from colde, but which belongs alſo to the place, degree, calling, and condition of them all.

If it be asked, who ſhall determine & iudge, what is neceſſary to theſe perſons and purpoſes? I anſwer, Vaine and curious perſons are not to bee competent iudges hereof; but in theſe things, we muſt regard the iudgement & example of modeſt, graue, and frugal perſons in euery order and eſtate; who vpon experience and knowledge, are beſt able to determine what is neceſſary, and what is not. Againe, though wee muſt not ſeeke for more then neceſſarie apparell; yet if God of his goodneſſe, giue vs ability to haue and maintaine more, we muſt thankfully receiue it, and vſe it well to the good example of others.

But ſome will ſay; It ſeemes that we ought not to haue much, though God giue abilitie, becauſe we may not haue aboue one coate. For Iohn giues this rule, Luk. 3. 11. Let him that hath two coates, giue to him that hath none. Anſ. Iohns meaning muſt needs be this; He that hath not onely neceſſarie rayment, but more then neceſſarie, he muſt giue of his abundance to them that want. For otherwiſe, his rule ſhould not agree with Chriſts owne practiſe, who had himſelfe two coates, an inner and an vpper garment, which he kept & wore: not with S. Pauls, who had both a cloake and a coate.

This Rule, diſcouers the common ſinfull practiſe of many men in the world. The greater ſort of men are exceedingly carefull, by all meanes and waies, to follow the faſhion, and to take vp euery new fangled attire, whenſoeuer it comes abroad. A courſe flat contrarie to Chriſts doctrine, which commandeth an honeſt care onely for neceſſarie ornaments, and condemneth the contrarie, & that vpon ſpeciall reaſon; becauſe this inordinate & affected care, is commonly a great pick-purſe. It filles mens heads and hearts with vaine and fooliſh thoughts: it makes them waſtfully to abuſe the bleſſings of God giuen vnto them, whereby they are diſabled from helping others that are in neede. VVhereas, the firſt and principall care, ought to bee for the adorning of the ſoule with grace, and putting on the Lord Ieſus; and this is it which will yeeld more comfort to the minde and conſcience, then any externall formalitie to the outward ſtate of man.

II. Rule. All apparell muſt bee fitted to the body, in a comely and decent maner; ſuch as becommeth holineſſe, Tit. 2. 3.

If it bee here demaunded, How wee ſhould thus frame and faſhion our attire? The anſwer is, By obſeruing the rules of decencie & comelineſſe, which are in number ſeauen.

Firſt, that it be according to the ſexe: for men muſt prepare apparell for men, women for women. This rule is not ceremoniall, but grounded vpon the law of nature, & common honeſty, Deut. 22. 5. The woman ſhall not weare that which pertaineth vnto the man, neither ſhall a man put on womans raiment: for all that doe ſo, are abomination to the Lord thy God.

Secondly, our apparell muſt bee made according to our office; that is, ſuch as may be fitte and conuenient for vs, in reſpect of our calling: that it may not hinder or diſable vs, in the performance of the duties thereof. VVhereupon comes iuſtly to be condemned the kinde of apparell, (ſpecially of women) that is vſed in this age. For it makes them like an image in a frame, ſet bolt vpright; wherby it comes to paſſe, that they cannot go well, and with eaſe or conueniencie, about any good buſines, but muſt of neceſſity, either ſit, or ſtand.

Thirdly, our attire muſt bee according to our abilitie, and maintenance, either in lands, or in goods and ſubſtance. VVe muſt (as the common prouerbe is) ſhape our coate according to our cloath, that ſo wee may not bee in want, but haue ſufficient wherewith to maintaine our families, and to releeue the poore. VVhich alſo ſerueth to condemne the ſinne of many perſons, who lay vpon their backes, whatſoeuer they can ſcrape and gather together, in the meane while, neglecting the honeſt maintenance of their owne eſtates for time to come, and the neceſſarie releefe of them that are in diſtreſſe and want.

Fourthly, it muſt be anſwerable to our eſtate and dignity, for diſtinction of order and degree in the ſocieties of men. This vſe of attire ſtands by the very ordinance of God; who, as he hath not ſorted all men to all places, ſo he will haue men to fit themſelues and their attire, to the quality of their proper places, to put a difference betweene themſelues and others. Thus we reade, that Ioſeph being by Pharaoh ſet ouer all the land of Egypt, was arrayed with garments of fine linnen, and had a golden chaine put vpon his necke, to put a difference between him and the inferiour princes of Pharaoh, Gen. 41. 42. Thus in auncient times, the captaines and cheefe of the armies, did weare fine garments of diuers colours of needle work, to diſtinguiſh them from others, Iud. 5. 30. Thus in kings courts, they went in ſoft rayment, and the poorer people in baſer and rougher attire, Mat. 11. 8. By which it appeares, that many in theſe daies doe greatly offend. For men keepe not themſelues within their owne order: but the Artificer commonly goes clad like the Yeoman: the Yeoman like the Gentleman: the Gentleman as the Nobleman: the Nobleman as the Prince: which bringeth great confuſion, and vtterly ouerturneth the order which God hath ſet in the ſtates and conditions of men.

Fiftly, mens attire is to be framed and prepared, according to the auncient and receiued cuſtome of the countrey, wherein they are brought vp and dwell.

Touching this Rule, it is demaunded, whether, if a man ſee a faſhion vſed in other countries, he may not take it vp here, and vſe it?

Anſw. He may not. For God hath threatned to viſite all ſuch, as are clothed with ſtrange apparell, Zeph. 1. 9. And Paul taxeth it as a great diſorder in the Church of Corinth, and euen againſt nature, that men went in long haire, and women went vncouered, 1. Cor. 11. 13, 14. And if this be ſo, then what a diſorder is that, when men of one countrey, frame themſelues to the faſhions and attires, both of men and women of other nations? This one ſinne is ſo common among vs, that it hath branded our Engliſh people with the blacke marke of the vaineſt and moſt newfangled people vnder heauen. If a ſtraunger commeth into our land, hee keepeth his auncient and cuſtomable attire, without varying or alteration. Wee on the contrary, can ſee no faſhion vſed either by the French, Italian, or Spaniſh, but we take it vp, and vſe it as our owne.

Sixtly, the garments that we make to couer our bodies, muſt be ſuch as may expreſſe the vertues of our mindes; ſpecially the vertues of Modeſty, Frugality, Shamefaſtneſſe. They ſhould be as a booke written with text letters, wherein, at the firſt, any man may reade the graces that be in the heart. Thus Paul exhorts women, that they array themſelues with comely apparell, in ſhamefaſtnes and modeſty, not with broidered haire, &c. but as becommeth women that profeſſe the feare of God, with good workes, 1. Tim. 2.9,10. And our Sauiour commandeth, that the light of our conuerſation, euen in outward things, ſhould ſo ſhine vnto men, that they ſeeing our good workes, may glorifie the Father which is in heauen, Mat. 5.16.

Seauenthly, it muſt bee framed to the example, not of the lighter and vainer ſort, but of the graueſt, and the moſt ſober of our order and place, both of men and women. We haue no expreſſe rule in Scripture, touching the meaſure and manner of our apparell; and therefore the wiſe and graue preſidents of good and godly men, that are of the ſame, or like degree with our ſelues, ought to ſtand for a rule of direction in this behalfe. To which purpoſe Paul exhorteth, Whatſoeuer things are pure, honeſt, of good report, if there be any vertue, &c. thinke of theſe things, which ye haue both learned, and receiued, and heard, and ſeene in me, thoſe things doe, Philip. 4.9. Examples hereof, wee haue many in the word of God. Of Iohn the Baptiſt, who had his garments of Camels haire, Mat. 3.4. Of Elias, who is ſaid to bee a hairie man, in reſpect of his attire, and to bee girded (as Iohn was) with a girdle of leather about his loines, 2. King. 1.8. For theſe rough garments were the principall raiments of Prophets in thoſe times and places, as we reade, Zach. 13. 4. And it was the ordinary faſhion of the Iewiſh nation, to vſe goats-haire, not only for making of their apparell, but euen of the curtaines, that were made for the vſe of the ſanctuarie, Exod. 36.14. If this rule were practiſed, it would ſerue to cut off many ſcandalous behauiours, in the conuerſations of men. For now adaies, men do ſtriue who ſhall go before another, in the braueſt and coſtlieſt attire; hauing little or no reſpect at all, to the examples of godly and ſober perſons of their degrees and places. And this their exceſſiue pride and vanity, is ordinarily maintained, by vniuſt dealing, in lying and deceipt, by couetouſnes, and vnmercifulnes to the poore: ſinnes which are ſo greatly diſhonourable vnto God, that the very earth whereupon men doe liue, can hardly endure the ſame. Wherefore thoſe that feare God, and haue a care to ſerue him in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, ought to hate and deteſt theſe courſes, renouncing the curious vanitie of the world, and teſtifying the graces and vertues of their mindes vnto men, euen by their graue and ſober geſtures and habites of their bodies.

Wearing of apparell.

The ſecond thing to bee conſidered in the right vſe of apparell, is the wearing and putting of it on. Touching which, two ſpeciall Rules are to be obſerued.

I. Rule. That wee weare and put on our apparell, for thoſe proper Endes, for which God hath ordained the ſame. The Endes of apparell are ſpecially theſe:

Firſt, for Neceſſity ſake; that is, for the defending of the body from the extremitie of parching heate, and pinching colde, and conſequently the preſeruing of life and health.

This was the end, for which garments were firſt made after the fall. And the reaſon of it is this: Whileſt man was yet in the ſtate of Inocencie, before his fall, there was a perfect temperature of the ayre, in reſpect of mans body, and ſo there was no need of garments: and nakednes then was no ſhame vnto man, but a glorious comelineſſe. Now after that Adam, and in him all mankinde had ſinned, vanity came vpon al the creatures, and amongſt the reſt, vpon the ayre a marueilous diſtemperature in reſpect of heate and cold. For the remedie whereof, it was ordained that Adam ſhould weare apparell, which God hauing once made and appointed, he hath euer ſince bleſſed it as his owne ordinance, as daily experience ſhewe. For our attire, which is voide of heate and life, doth notwithſtanding preſerue mans bodie in heate and life; which it could not doe, if there were not a ſpeciall prouidence of God attending vpon it.

The ſecond Ende of apparell, is Honeſtie. For to this ende doe wee put it on, and weare it, for the couering and hiding of that deformity of our naked bodies, which immediatly followed vpon the tranſgreſſiō of our firſt parents: and in this reſpect alſo, were garments (after the fall) appointed by God, for the vſe of man.

It is obiected, that Eſay prophecied naked and bare foote, Eſay 20.2. and ſo did Saul, 1. Sam. 19.24. I anſwer, firſt, that which the Prophet did, was done by commaundement, as may appeare in the 2. verſe of that Chapter. For the Lord gaue him commaundement ſo to do. Againe, he is ſaid to be naked, becauſe he put off his vpper raiment, which was ſackcloath, or ſome other rough garment that Prophets vſed to weare; but it cannot bee prooued, that he put off that garment which was next his fleſh and skinne.

Concerning Saul, there bee two anſwers giuen. One, that hee put off his vpper garment, as Eſay did. For we are not to imagine, that hee prophecied naked, it beeing ſo vnſeemely a thing, and euen againſt the Law of nature ſince the fall. The other anſwer, and that according to the true meaning of the text is; that Saul, before the ſpirit of prophecy came vpon him, had put on and worne his warrelike attire, wherewith hee went out to take Dauid. But when the Spirit came vpon him, then hee put off his militarie habite, and went in another attire, after the manner and faſhion of a Prophet, and ſo prophecied. And therefore, whereas he is ſaid to goe naked, the meaning is, that hee ſtript himſelfe of his armour, which both himſelfe and his meſſengers vſed, in purſuing after Dauid.

Now touching the Couering of the bodie with apparell, theſe things are to bee remembred. Firſt, that it muſt be couered in decent and ſeemly ſort. Thus Ioſeph wrapped Chriſts body that was dead, in a cleane linnen cloath, togither with the ſpices, Matth. 27. 59. Secondly, the whole body muſt be couered, ſome onely parts excepted, which (for neceſſity ſake) are left open and bare, as the hands and face: becauſe there is an ignominious ſhame, not onely in ſome parts, but ouer the whole body. And here comes to bee reprooued, the affected nakedneſſe vſed of ſundrie perſons, who are wont to haue their garments made of ſuch a faſhiõ, as that their necke & breaſts may be left for a great part vncouered. A practiſe full of vanity, and cleane contrarie to this Rule, grounded in corrupted nature. For if the whole body bee ouerſpread with ſhame, by ſin, why ſhould any man by ſuch practiſe, (as much as in him lies) vncouer his ſhame to the view of the world? The ende of attire is, to hide the ſhamefull nakedneſſe of the body from the ſight of men. But ſuch perſons as theſe are, doe hereby expreſſe the vanity and lightnes of their mindes, by leauing ſome part of there bodies open and vncouered. Wherein, what do they elſe, but euen diſplay and manifeſt vnto men and Angels, their own ſhame and ignominie? Nay, what doe they elſe, but glory in that, which is (by the iuſt iudgement of God) reprochfull vnto them? Let all thoſe that feare God, and are humbled in the conſideration of their ſinnes, which are the matter of the ſhame of mankinde, bee otherwiſe affected.

A third ende of apparell is, the honouring of the body. To this purpoſe S. Paul ſaith, 1. Cor. 12. 23. Vpon thoſe members of the body, which wee thinke moſt vnhoneſt, put we on the greater honour, &c. v. 24. God hath tempered the body togither, and giuen the more honour to that part which lacked. And in 1. Theſ. 4. 4. It is the will of God, &c. that euery one of you ſhould know how to poſſeſſe his veſſell in holineſſe and honour. Theſe words are ſpoken of chaſtity, but they are generally to be vnderſtood of any other vertue belonging to the body. Now the reaſon of this ende is plaine. The body of euery beleeuer, is the Temple of the holy Ghoſt, and a member of Chriſt, in the kinde and place, as well as the ſoule. Therefore it ought to bee both holily and honourably vſed.

For the honouring of the bodie with outward ornaments, wee muſt remember this diſtinction. Some ornaments are inward, and ſome are borrowed. Inward, are the graces & gifts of God; theſe are our owne. Borrowed, are golde, ſiluer, pearles, and pretious ſtones: and theſe are outward. And of the two, more ſpeciall care ought to bee had of the inward, then of the outward and borrowed. For theſe are indeede faire and honourable, in the opinion and eſtimation of men; but the other are farre more honourable, in the ſight of God. And therfore S. Peter exhorteth women, that their apparell be not outward, as with broidered haire, & gold ſet about, or in ſumptuous garments, but that the hidden man of the heart be vncorrupt, with a meeke and quiet ſpirit, which is before God a thing pretious, 1. Pet. 3. 3, 4.

Now that wee may vſe our apparell to the Endes before rehearſed, wee are yet further to obſerue ſome ſpeciall Rules, which may ſerue for our direction in the right adorning of the body.

Firſt, euery one muſt be content with their owne naturall fauour, and complexion, that God hath giuen them; and account of it as a pretious thing, be it better, or be it worſe. For the outward forme & fauour that man hath, is the worke of God himſelfe, fitted and proportioned vnto him, in his conception, by his ſpeciall prouidence. Beeing then the Lords owne worke, and his will, thus to frame it, rather then otherwiſe; great reaſon there is, that man ſhould reſt contented with the ſame.

Here comes to bee iuſtly reprooued, the ſtraunge practiſe and behauiour of ſome in theſe daies, who beeing not contented with that forme and faſhion which God hath ſorted vnto them, doe deuiſe artificiall formes and fauours, to ſet vpon their bodies and faces, by painting and colouring; thereby making themſelues ſeeme that, which indeede they are not. This practiſe is moſt abominable in the very light of nature, & much more by the light of Gods word; wherein wee haue but one onely example thereof, and that is of wicked Ieſabel, 2. King. 9. 30. who is noted by this marke of a notorious harlot, that ſhe painted her face. For what is this, but to finde fault with Gods owne workmanſhip? and to ſeeke to correct the ſame, by a counterfeit worke of our own deuiſing; which cannot but be highly diſpleaſing vnto him?

A cunning Painter, when hee hath once finiſhed his worke, if any man ſhall go about to correct the ſame, he is greatly offẽded. Much more then may God, the moſt wiſe and abſolute Former, and Creatour of his worke, bee highly offended with all thoſe, that cannot content themſelues with the fauour and feature they haue receiued from him, but will needes be calling his worke into queſtion, and refining it according to their owne humours and fancies. Tertullian in his booke de habitu mulierum, cals ſuch perſons, and that deſeruedly, the diuels hand-maides.

But may ſome ſay, if there be any deformitie in the bodie, may wee not labour to couer it? Anſwer. Yes: but we may not ſet any new

A forme on the face, or habite on the body. Diſſembling is condemned, as well in deed, as in word, and ſuch is this.

Secondly, we muſt place the principall ornament of our ſoules and bodies, in vertue and good workes, and not in any outward things. So would Paul haue women to array themſelues in comely apparell, with ſhamefaſtneſſe and modeſtie, 1.Tim.2.9.

Thirdly, in vſing of ornaments before named, we muſt be very ſparing, and keepe our ſelues within the meane.

It will be here demaunded, What is then the meaſure that muſt be vſed? Anſw. The Scripture giues no rule for our direction in this point, but the example and iudgement of the sageſt & ſobereſt perſons in euery order, age, and condition, and as they doe and iudge, ſo muſt we. As for example: whether a man ſhould weare a ruffe ſingle, or double, or tripled, &c. the Scripture, in particular, giues no direction: onely we muſt looke vpon the example of the ſobereſt, and diſcreeteſt perſons of our order and age, and that ought to be our preſident for imitation.

Fourthly, ornaments muſt be vſed not alwaies alike, but according to times and ſeaſons. It is noted as a fault in the rich glutton, that he went euery day in coſtly apparell. Luk.16.19. In the daies of reioycing, we may put on more outward ornaments: and ſo they vſed of ancient times, at mariages, to put on wedding garments. Mat.22. But in the daies of mourning, baſer and courſer attire is to be vſed, as fitteſt for the time.

Fiftly, we muſt adorne our bodies to a right end; to wit, that therby we may honour them, and in them honour God. Againſt this Rule do offend thoſe, that adorne their bodies, to be praiſed, to be counted rich and great perſons, & to purchaſe and procure vnto themſelues the loue of ſtrangers. This is the harlots practiſe, deſcribed by Salomon at large, Prou.6.25. and 7.10.16. Theſe are the ends, for which we muſt attire our ſelues.

And ſo much of the firſt maine Rule to be obſerued, in the wearing and putting on of apparell.

The ſecond maine Rule followeth. We muſt make a ſpiritual vſe of the apparel which we weare. How may that be done?

Anſw. Firſt, we muſt take occaſion thereby to humble our ſelues, and that in this manner. When we ſee the plaiſter vpon the ſore, we know there is a wound: and ſo, the couer of our bodies, muſt put vs in minde of our ſhame and nakedneſſe, in regard of grace and Gods fauour, by reaſon of originall ſinne. And we are to know, that it is a daungerous practiſe for any man, to puffe vp himſelfe in pride, vpon the ſight and vſe of his apparell. For this is to be proud of his owne ſhame. Nay, it is as much, as if a theefe ſhould be proud of his bolts, and of the halter about his necke; garments beeing nothing elſe but the couer of our ſhame, and the ſignes of our ſinnes.

Secondly, by the putting on of our garments, we muſt be admoniſhed to put on Chriſt. Rom.13.14. Queſt. How ſhall we doe that? Anſ. Thus: We muſt conceiue Chriſts obedience actiue and paſſiue, as a couering; & therefore by prayer we are to come vnto God in his name, & intreate him to accept this his obedience for vs: yea that Chriſt may be made vnto vs wiſedome, righteouſnes, ſanctification, and redemption. And we on the other ſide, made conformable to him in life & death, in all morall duties. Laſtly, that we may haue the ſame mind, affection, and conuerſation that he had.

B Thirdly, when we put off our cloathes, we then are admoniſhed of putting off the old man; that is, the maſſe and body of ſinfull corruption. And we then put him off, when we can by grace hate ſin, and carrie a reſolute purpoſe in our hearts of not ſinning.

Fourthly, when we cloath our ſelues, and truſſe our attire to our bodies, this ſhould teach vs a further thing; that it behooueth vs, to gird vp our loines, to haue our lights burning, to prepare our ſelues to meete Chriſt, whether by death, or by the laſt iudgement. If we make not theſe vſes of our attire, we doe not rightly vſe, but rather abuſe the ſame.

C In a word, to ſhut vp this point we are all to be exhorted to make conſcience of the practiſe of theſe Rules, and to take heede of pride in theſe outward things. And in way of motiue hereunto; conſider firſt, how great and hainous a ſinne Pride is. The greatneſſe of it may be diſcerned by foure things.

Firſt, in it, and the fruit thereof, ſuperfluitie of apparell, there is an abuſe of our wealth to needleſſe and ſuperfluous vſes, which ought to be imployed to vſes more neceſſarie; as to the good of the Church, commonwealth, and family; and eſpecially for the releefe of the poore.

D Secondly, in this ſinne there is an abuſe of time. For they that giue themſelues to pride, ſpend ſo much time in the adorning of their bodies, that they haue no leiſure for the adorning and beautifying of the ſoule. Hence it comes to paſſe, that proud perſons abound with ignorance, idleneſſe, wantonneſſe, and many other enormities.

Thirdly, in this ſin there is an abuſe of the attire it ſelfe: in that it is made a ſigne of the vanity of the mind, and wantonneſſe of the heart, which ſhould be the ſigne of a heart religiouſly diſpoſed.

Fourthly, in it there is a confuſion of order in the eſtates & ſocieties of men. For whereas one order of men ſhould go thus attired, and another after another manner; by this it comes to paſſe, that equall and ſuperiour are cloathed both alike, and that which ſhould be an occaſion to humble vs, is made an occaſion to puffe vs vp.

Fiſtly, there is a great iudgment threatned againſt this ſinne, Eſay 2. 11. 12. Zeph. 3. 11.

The greatneſſe of this vice, we are to indeuour, by all means poſſible, to redreſſe in our ſelues. For which purpoſe, we muſt be carefull to ſee & feele, and withall to bewaile the ſpirituall nakedneſſe of our ſoules; which is a deprauation of the image of God, wherein we are created, according to him, in holines and righteouſneſſe, the want whereof makes vs vgly and deformed in the eyes of God. And the true ſenſe & experience of this, will turne our minds and thoughts from the trimming of the body, and make vs eſpecially to labour for the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt imputed, as the onely couering which wil keepe vs warme and ſafe from the ſtormes and tempeſts of the wrath of God.

Sect. 4.

In the fourth place, we come to the handling of thoſe Queſtions, that concerne the Moderation of our Appetite in the Vſe of Pleaſures & Recreations. And theſe are ſpecially three.

I. Queſtion.

Whether Recreation be lawfull for a Chriſtian man?

Anſ. Yea, and that for two cauſes.

Firſt, Reſt from labour, with the refreſhing of body and mind, is neceſſarie; becauſe mans nature is like the bow, which beeing alway bent and vſed, is ſoone broken in peeces. Now that which is neceſſarie, is lawfull. And if reſt be lawfull, then is recreation alſo lawfull.

Secondly, by Chriſtian libertie, we are allowed to vſe the creatures of God, not onely for our neceſſitie, but alſo for meet and conuenient delight. This is a confeſſed truth; and therefore to them, which ſhall condemne fit and conuenient recreation (as ſome of the ancient Fathers haue done, by name Chryſoſtome and Ambroſe) it may be ſaid, Be not too righteous, be not too wiſe, Eccl. 7. 18.

II. Queſtion.

What kinds of Recreations and ſports, are lawfull and conuenient, and what be vnlawfull and vnconuenient?

Anſ. I will firſt lay downe this ground, that, All lawfull recreation is onely in the vſe of things indifferent, which are in themſelues neither commaunded nor forbidden. For by Chriſtian liberty, the vſe of ſuch things for lawfull delight and pleaſure, is permitted vnto A vs. Therefore meete and fitte recreations doe ſtand in the vſe of things indifferent, and not in things either commanded or forbidden. Hence I deriue three concluſions, that may ſerue for the better anſwer of the Queſtion.

I. Recreation may not be in the vſe of holy things; that is, in the vſe of the Word, Sacraments, Prayer, or in any act of religion. For theſe things are ſacred and diuine, they doe ſtand by Gods expreſſe commandement, and may not be applyed to any common or vulgar vſe. For this cauſe it is well prouided, that the Pageants which haue beene vſed in ſundrie cities of this land, are put downe; becauſe they were nothing elſe, but either the whole, B or part of the hiſtorie of the Bible turned into a Play. And therefore the leſſe to be allowed, conſidering that the more holy the matter is which they repreſent, the more vnholy are the playes themſelues. Againe, all ſuch ieſts, as are framed out of the phraſes and ſentences of the Scripture, are abuſes of holy things, and therefore carefully to be auoided. The common ſaying may teach vs thus much, It is no ſafe courſe to play with holy things. Laſtly, vpon the former concluſion, we are taught that it is not meete, conuenient, or laudable for men to mooue occaſion of laughter in Sermons.

* Non eſt bonum ludere cum Sanctis.

The ſecond concluſion. Recreation may not be made of the ſinnes or offences of men. They C ought to be vnto vs the matter of ſorrow and mourning. Dauid ſhed riuers of teares, becauſe men brake the commaundements of God, Pſal. 119. 136. The righteous heart of Lot was vexed, with hearing the abomination of Sodome, 2. Pet. 2. 8.

Vpon this, it followeth firſt, that common playes, which are in vſe in the world, are to be reproued, as being not meete & conuenient matter of recreation. For they are nothing elſe, but repreſentation of the vices and miſdemeanours of men in the world. Now ſuch repreſentations are not to be approoued. Paul ſaith, Fornication, couetouſneſſe, let them not be named among you, as becommeth Saints, Eph. 5. 3. And if vices of men may not be named, vn- D leſſe the naming of thē tend to the reprouing and further condemning of them, much leſſe may they be repreſented, for the cauſing of mirth and paſtime. For, naming is farre leſſe, then repreſenting, which is the reall acting of the vice. Indeede Magiſtrates and Miniſters may name them, but their naming muſt be to puniſh, and reforme them, not otherwiſe. Againe, it is vnſeemely, that a man ſhould put on the perſon, behauiour, and habit of a woman; as it is alſo for a woman to put on the perſon, behauiour, and habite of a man, though it be but for an houre. The law of God forbids both, Deut. 22. 3. And that law, for equitie, is not meerely iudiciall, but moral. Nay, it is the law of nature and common honeſtie.

Here alſo, the dauncing vſed in theſe daies, is to be reproued; namely, the mixed dauncing of men and women, in number and meaſure, (ſpecially after ſolemne feaſts) with many laſciuious geſtures accompanying the ſame; which cannot, nor ought to be iuſtified, but condemned. For it is no better then the very bellowes of luſt & vncleanenes, yea the cauſe of much euil. It is condemned in the daughter of Herodias, dauncing before Herod, Mar. 6. 22. And in the Iſraelites, that ſate down to eate and drink, and roſe vp to play, that is to daunce. We reade indeed of a kind of dauncing commended in Scripture, that Moſes, Aaron and Miriam vſed at the redde ſea. Exod. 15. 20. And Dauid before the Arke, 2. Sam. 6. 14. And the daughters of Iſrael, when Dauid got the victorie of Goliah, 1. Sam. 18. 7. 8. But this dauncing was of another kind. For it was not mixt, but ſingle, men together, and women apart by themſelues. They vſed not in their dauncing wanton geſtures, and amorous ſongs, but the Pſalmes of praiſe & thankſgiuing. The cauſe of their dauncing was ſpirituall ioy, and the end of it was praiſe and thankſgiuing.

It may be alleadged, that Eccleſiaſtes ſaith, There is a time of mourning, and a time of dauncing, Eccl. 3.4. And Dauid ſaith, Thou haſt turned my ioy into dauncing, Pſal. 30. 11. And the Lord ſaith in Ieremie; O daughter Sion, thou ſhalt goe forth with the daunce of them that reioyce. Ierem. 31. 4. I anſwer: firſt, theſe places ſpeake of the ſacred dauncing before named, and not of the dauncing of our times. Secondly, I ſay, that theſe places ſpeake not of dauncing properly, but of reioycing ſignified by dauncing: that is to ſay, a heartie reioycing, or merrie-making. Beſides that, the Prophet Ieremie ſpeakes by the way of compariſon, as if he ſhould ſay; Then ſhall the Virgin reioyce, as men are wont to doe in the daunce. And it is ſometimes the vſe of the Scripture, to expreſſe things lawfull by a compariſon, drawne from things vnlawfull: as in the Parables of the vnrighteous Iudge, the vniuſt Steward, and the theefe in the night.

D The third Concluſion. We may not make recreations of Gods iudgements, or of the puniſhments of ſinne. The Law of God forbids vs to lay a ſtumbling blocke before the blind, to cauſe him to fall, though it be not done in earneſt, but in ſport, Leuit. 19. 14. Vpon the ſame ground, we are not to ſport our ſelues with the folly of the naturall foole. For that is the blindneſſe of his mind, and the iudgement of God vpon him. I know it hath beene the vſe of great men, to keepe fooles in their houſes. And I dare not condemne the fact: For they may doe it, to ſet before their eies a daily ſpectacle of Gods iudgement, and to conſider how God in like ſort, might haue dealt with them. And this vſe is Chriſtian. Neuertheleſſe, to place a ſpiritual recreation in the folly of ſuch perſons, and to keepe them onely for this end, it is not laudable. When Dauid fained himſelfe to be mad, before Achiſh the king of Gath, marke what the heathen King could ſay, Haue I neede of mad men, that ye haue brought this fellow to play the mad man in my preſence? Shall he come into my houſe? 1. Sam. 21. 15.

A Againe, the Bayting of the Beare, and Cockefights, are no meete recreations. The baiting of the Bull hath his vſe, and therefore it is commanded by ciuill authoritie; and ſo haue not theſe. And the antipathie and crueltie, which one beaſt ſheweth to another, is the fruit of our rebellion againſt God, and ſhould rather mooue vs to mourne, then to reioyce.

B The ſecond anſwer to the former Queſtion, is this.

Games may be deuided into three ſorts. Games of wit or induſtry, Games of hazard, and a mixture of both.

Games of wit, or induſtry are ſuch, as are ordered by the skill and induſtry of man. Of this ſort are Shooting in the long bow, Shooting in the caleeuer, Running, Wraſtling, Fenſing, Muſicke, the games of Cheſts, and draughts, the Philoſophers game, and ſuch like. Theſe, and all of this kind, wherein the induſtry of the mind and body hath the chiefeſt ſtroke, are very commendable, and not to be diſliked.

C Games of hazard are thoſe, in which hazard onely beares the ſway, and orders the game, and not wit; wherein alſo there is (as we ſay) chance, yea, meere chance in regard of vs. Of this kind is Dicing, and ſundry games at the Tables and Cardes. Now games that are of meere hazard, by the conſent of godly Diuines are vnlawfull. The reaſons are theſe.

Firſt, games of meere hazard are indeede lots; and the vſe of a lot is an act of religion, in which we referre vnto God, the determination of things of moment, that can no other way be determined. For in the vſe of a lot there be foure things. The firſt is, a caſual act done by vs, as the caſting of the Die. The ſecond is, the applying of this act, to the determination of ſome particular controuerſie, the ending whereof maintaines peace, order, and loue among men. The third is confeſſion, that God is a ſoueraigne Iudge, to end and determine things that can no other way be determined. The fourth is, ſupplication, that God would, by the diſpoſition of the lot, when it is caſt, determine the euent. All theſe actions are infolded in the vſe of a lot, and they are expreſſed, Act. 1. v. 24, 25, 26. Now then, ſeeing the vſe of a lot is a ſolemne act of religion, it may not be applyed to ſporting, as I haue ſhewed in the firſt concluſion. Secondly, ſuch games are not recreations, but rather matter of ſtirring vp troubleſome paſſions, as feare, ſorrow, &c. and ſo they diſtemper the body and mind. Thirdly, couetouſneſſe is commonly the ground of them all. Whereupon it is, that men vſually play for money. And for theſe cauſes,ſuch playes by the conſent of learned Diuines, are vnlawfull.

The third kind of playes are mixt, which ſtand partly of hazard, and partly of wit, and in which hazard beginnes the game, and skill gets the victorie: and that which is defectiue by reaſon of hazard,is corrected by wit.

To this kind are referred ſome games at the cards and tables. Now the common opinion of learned Diuines is, that as they are not to be commended, ſo they are not ſimply to be condemned, and if they be vſed, they muſt be vſed very ſparingly. Yet there be others, that hold theſe mixt games to be vnlawful,and iudge the very dealing of the cards to be a lot,becauſe it is a meere caſuall action. But,(as I take it) the bare dealing of the cards is no more a lot,then the dealing of an almes, when the Princes Almner puts his hand into his pocket,and giues, for example, to one man ſixe pence, to another twelue pence, to another two pence, what comes forth without any choice.Now this caſuall diſtribution is not a lot,but onely a caſuall action. And in a lot, there muſt be two things. The firſt is,a caſuall act:the ſecond, the applying of the foreſaid act, to the determination of ſome particular and vncertaine euent.Now the dealing of the cards is a caſuall act;but the determination of the vncertaine victorie, is not from the dealing of the cards, in mixed games, but from the wit and skill, at leaſt from the will of the players. But in things that are of the nature of a lot,the wit and will of man hath no ſtroke at all. Neuertheleſſe, though the dealing of the cards,and mixed games,be no lots;yet it is farre ſafer and better to abſtaine from them, then to vſe them: & where they are aboliſhed, they are not to be reſtored againe, becauſe in common experience,many abuſes and inconueniences attend vpon them: and things vnneceſſarie, when they are much abuſed, becauſe they are abuſed, they muſt not be vſed, but rather remooued, as the brazen ſerpent was,2.King.18.4.

III. Queſtion.

How are we to vſe Recreations?

For anſwer whereof, we muſt remember theſe foure ſpeciall rules.

I. Rule. We are to make choice of Recreations, that are of leaſt offence, and of the beſt report, Phil. 4. 8. Whatſoeuer things are of good report, thinke of them. The reaſon is, becauſe in all recreations, we muſt take heede of occaſions of ſinne, both in our ſelues and others. And this mooued Iob, while his ſonnes were a feaſting, to offer daily burnt offerings, according to the number of them all, becauſe he thought, It may be, my ſonnes haue ſinned, and A blaſphemed God in their hearts, Iob. 1.5. And not onely that, but I adde further, we muſt take heede of occaſions of offence in others. Vpon this ground, Paul ſaies, that rather then his eating ſhall offend his brother, he would eate no meate while the world endured, 1. Cor. 8. 13. In this regard,it were to be wiſhed, that games of wit ſhould be vſed onely,and not games of hazard, becauſe they are more ſcandalous then the other. Laſtly,in things that are lawfull in themſelues, we are to remember Pauls rule, All things are lawfull,but all things are not expedient,1.Cor.6.12.

II. Rule. Our Recreations muſt be profitable to our ſelues and others; and they muſt tend alſo to the glorie of God. Our Sauiour B Chriſt ſaies, that of euery idle word that men ſhall ſpeake, they ſhall giue an account at the day of iudgement, Math. 12.36. Whereby idle words, he meaneth ſuch, as bring no profit to men, nor honour to God. And if for idle words, then alſo for idle recreations, muſt we be accountable to him. Againe, S. Paul teacheth, that whether we eate, or drinke, or whatſoeuer we do, we muſt do all to the glorie of God, 1. Cor. 10. 31. Therfore the ſcope and end of al recreations is, that God may be honoured in and by them.

III. Rule. The end of our recreation muſt be, to refreſh our bodies and mindes. It is then an abuſe of Recreation, when it is vſed to winne other mens money. The gaine C that comes that way, is worſe then vſury, yea it is flatte theft. For by the law, we may recouer things ſtolne, but there is no law to recouer things wonne. And yet, if play be for a ſmall matter, the loſſe whereof is no hurt to him that loſeth it, and if it be applied to a common good, it is lawfull; otherwiſe not.

IV. Rule. Recreation muſt be moderate and ſparing, euen as the vſe of meate & drink, & reſt. Whence it followeth, that they which ſpend their whole life in gaming, as Players doe, haue much to anſwer for. And the like is to be ſaid of them that haue lands & poſſeſſions, and ſpend their time in pleaſures and ſports, as is the faſhion of many gentlemen in D theſe daies.

Now Recreation muſt bee ſparing, two waies.

Firſt, in regard of time. For we muſt redeeme the time, that is, take time while time laſteth, for the procuring of life euerlaſting. Eph. 5. 16. This condemneth the wicked practiſe of many men that follow this game, and that, to driue away time, whereas they ſhould employ all the time that they can, to doe Gods will. And indeed, it is all too litle, to do that which we are commanded: and therefore while it is called to day, let vs make all the haſte we can, to repent and be reconciled vnto God.

Secondly, Recreation muſt be ſparing, in regard of our affection. For we may not ſet our hearts vpon ſports, but our affection muſt be tempered and allaied with the feare of God. Thus Salomon ſaies, that laughter is madneſſe, Eccl. 2. 2. ſo farre forth, as it hath not the feare & reuerence of the name of God to reſtraine it. This was the ſinne of the Iewes reprooued by the Prophet, that they gaue themſelues to all manner of pleaſure, and did not conſider the worke of the Lord: that is, his iudgements and corrections, Eſa. 5. 12. And thus if Sports and Recreations be not ordered and guided according to this and the other Rules, we ſhall make them all not onely vnprofitable vnto vs, but vtterly vnlawfull. And ſo much of the vertue of Temperance.

CHAP. V.

Of Liberality.

Hitherto we haue treated of the firſt ſort of Vertues, that are ſeated in the will, which doe reſpect a mans owne ſelfe, namely, of Clemencie, which ſtandeth in the moderation of the mind in reſpect of anger: and Temperance, which conſiſteth in the moderation of our appetite, in reſpect of riches, apparel, meate and drinke, pleaſures and recreations.

Now we come to the ſecond ſort, which reſpect others beſide our ſelues. And theſe belong to the practiſe either of Courteſie and kindneſſe, or Equitie and right. Of the firſt kind, is Liberality: of the ſecond is Iuſtice, in ſhewing or giuing Equitie, or Fortitude in maintaining the ſame. Of theſe in order.

Liberalitie is a vertue, ſeated in the will, whereby we ſhew or practiſe courteſie & kindnes to others. The principall Queſtions touching this vertue, may be referred to that text of Scripture which is written, Luk. 11. 41. Therfore giue almes of thoſe things which ye haue, and behold all things ſhall be cleane vnto you.

The words are a rule or counſell, deliuered by Chriſt to the Phariſies: and the true and proper ſenſe of them, is this. You Phariſies, giue your ſelues to the practiſe of iniuſtice and oppreſſion, and thereby you defile your ſelues, & all your actions. For redreſſe hereof, I propound you this Rule; Practiſe Charitie in giuing of your almes, let your outward good actions, proceede from the inward ſyncere affection of your hearts toward your brethren; and then ſhall you attaine to a holy and pure vſe of your goods. The counſell of Daniel to King Nebuchadnezar, Dan. 4. 24. To breake off his ſinnes by the practiſe of iuſtice, and his iniquities by mercie to the afflicted, may be a good Commentary to this Text.

In the words, I conſider two things: A remedie, Therefore giue almes of thoſe things you haue, and the fruite that followes vpon the remedie, and behold all things ſhall be cleane vnto you.

Sect. 1.

The Remedie, is the vertue of Chriſtian Liberalitie, conſiſting principally in the practiſe of loue and mercie, in giuing of Almes.

For the better vnderſtanding, whereof, fiue Queſtions are briefly to be propounded and reſolued.

I. Queſtion.

Who, or what perſons muſt giue Almes?

Anſw. There be two ſorts of men, that are, and ought to be giuers of Almes.

The firſt ſort are Rich men, who beſides things neceſſarie, haue ſuperfluitie and abundance, yea, much more then things neceſſary. Theſe are ſuch as haue the worlds good, as S. Iohn ſaith, whereby they are able to giue and 1.Ioh.3.17. beſtow releefe vpon others, out of their abundance. Thus Saint Paul ſaith, that the abundance of the Corinthians, muſt ſupply the want of other Churches, 2. Cor. 8. 14. Many other proofes might be brought, but theſe are ſufficient in a knowne and confeſſed truth.

A ſecond ſort, are men of the poorer ſort, that haue but things neceſſarie, and ſometime want them too. Theſe muſt ſometimes and in ſome caſes giue releefe. And becauſe this point is not ſo eaſily graunted, therefore I will prooue it by the Scriptures.

The man that liues by his worke, is commanded to labour in his calling, that he may haue ſomething to giue to them that want, Eph. 4. 28. The poore widow that caſt into the Lords treaſurie of her penury, but two mites, that is, the eight part of a penny, is commended; and Chriſt preferreth her almes before the great gifts of the richer ſort, Luk. 21. 2. The Church of Macedonia, being poore and in extreame neceſſity, doth yet ſend releefe to other Churches, and is commended for it by Paul, 2. Cor. 8. 2. Their pouertie excuſed them not from liberalitie, but they were liberal, not onely according to, but euen beyond their abilitie. Our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe liued of almes: for Ioanna the wife of Chuza Herods ſteward, and Suſanna, miniſtred vnto him of their ſubſtance, Luk. 8. 3. Where by the way, we note, that he did not liue by begging, as the Papiſts affirme, but by the voluntarie miniſtration and contribution of ſome, to whom he preached. Now, though he was ſo poore himſelfe, yet he vſed to giue almes of that he had, Ioh. 13. 29. The oblations of the old Teſtament, for the maintenance of the Altar, were a matter of great coſt and charge, in ſacrifices, and ſuch like ceremonies: and yet all were charged with them, the poore, as well as the rich. Now in the new Teſtament, the material Altar is taken away, & yet we haue ſomthing in the roome therof, namely, thoſe that are poore and deſtitute, which all men are bound in conſcience to releeue and maintaine, as once they were to maintaine the Altar. Saint Iohn commends vnto vs Charitie, not that which conſiſteth in words only, but which ſhewes it ſelfe in actions, 1. Ioh. 3. 18. teaching that the one is no way ſufficient without the other. Laſtly, all mankind is diſtinguiſhed into theſe two ſorts: ſome are giuers, ſome are receiuers of almes: there is not a third kind to be found in the Scriptures.

Yet here an exception muſt be added, that this doctrine be not miſtaken. There are ſome perſons exempted from this duty, and they be ſuch as are in ſubiection to others, and are not at their owne diſpoſition. Of this ſort are children vnder the gouernement of their parents, and ſeruants ſubiect to the authoritie and dominion of their maſters. For the goods which they haue, are not their owne, neither may they diſpoſe of them as they liſt: they therefore muſt not be giuers.

It may be asked, whether the wife may giue almes without the conſent of her husband, conſidering that ſhee is in ſubiection to another, and therefore all that ſhee hath is anothers, and not her owne. Anſw. The wife may giue almes of ſome things, but with theſe cautions: as firſt, ſhee may giue of thoſe * goods that ſhee hath excepted from mariage. Secondly, ſhee may giue of thoſe things which are common to them both, prouided it be with her husbands conſent, at leaſt generall and implicite. Thirdly, ſhee may not giue without or againſt the conſent of her husband. And the reaſon is, becauſe both the law of nature, and the word of God, commands her obedience to her husband in all things.

* Ex paraphernalibus.

If it be alleadged, that Ioanna the wife of Chuza Herods ſteward, with others, did miniſter to Chriſt of their goods, Luk. 8. 3. I anſwer: It is to be preſumed, that it was not done without all conſent.

Againe, if it be ſaid that Abigail brought a preſent to Dauid, for releefe of him and his young men, whereof ſhe made not Nabal her husband acquainted, 1. Sam: 25. 19. I anſwer, it is true, but marke the reaſon. Nabal was generally of a churliſh and vnmercifull diſpoſition, whereupon he was altogether vnwilling, to yeeld releefe to any, in how great neceſſities ſoeuer; whence it was, that he rayled on the young men, that came to him, and droue them away, verſ. 14. Againe, he was a fooliſh man, and giuen to drunkenneſſe, ſo as he was not fit to gouerne his houſe, or to diſpenſe his almes. Beſides that, Abigail was a woman of great wiſedome, in all her actions, and that which ſhe now did was to ſaue Nabals and her owne life, yea, the liues of his whole family: for the caſe was deſperate, and all that they had, were in preſent hazard. That example therefore, is no warrant for any woman to giue almes, vnleſſe it be in the like caſe.

II. Queſtion.

To whome muſt almes be giuen?

Anſ. To them that are in neede, Eph. 4. 28. For the better conceiuing of this anſwer, we muſt remember, that there be three degrees of need. The firſt is extreame neceſſity, when a man is vtterly deſtitute of the meanes of preſeruation of life. The ſecond is great neede, when a man hath very little to maintaine himſelfe, and his. The third is common neceſſitie, when he hath ſomething, but yet not ſufficient or competent.

Now thoſe that are in the firſt and ſecond degree of need, they are the perſons that muſt be ſuccoured and releeued. For proofe hereof conſider theſe places, Math. 25. 35, 36. I was hungry, and ye gaue me meate, I thirſted, and ye gaue me drinke, I was naked, and ye clouthed me, I was ſicke, and ye viſited me, I was in priſon, and ye came vnto me. Where obſerue what perſon Chriſt commendeth vnto vs to be releeued, the hungrie, thirſtie, naked, ſicke, harbourles, and the captiue or priſoner. Rom. 12. 20. If thine enemie hunger, feede him; if he thirſt, giue him drinke. We muſt not onely ſupply the neede of our friends, but alſo our enemies, 1. Tim. 5. 16. If any beleeuing man or woman haue widowes, let him miniſter vnto them, &c. that there may be ſufficient for them that are widowes indeede. Here widowes that are deſolate, without friends and goods, are commended to the liberality of the Church, Leuit. 25. 35. If thy brother be impoueriſhed, and hath the trembling hand, thou ſhalt releeue him, as a ſtranger or ſoiourner, ſo ſhall he liue with thee. By the trembling hand, is meant the man that workes hard for his liuing, and yet cannot by his labour get things neceſſarie, but muſt needes ſtretch out his hand to others that are in better ſtate, for helpe.

Here two Queſtions may further be made. Firſt, whether we muſt giue almes to beggers? I meane ſuch as goe from doore to doore: for they come vnder the degrees of needie perſons.

Anſ. Beggers are of two ſorts: either ſuch as are ſtrong, able to labour, and doe ſomewhat for their liuing; or ſuch as are weake and impotent, vnable to take paines for the maintenance of themſelues, or thoſe that belong vnto them.

The firſt ſort, are not to be releeued. For touching them, the Apoſtle hath giuen this rule, He that will not labour, muſt not eate, 2. Theſſ. 3. 10. 12. Euery man muſt liue by the labour of his owne hands, and feede vpon his owne bread. Againe, ſuch beggers are theeues and robbers, becauſe they ſteale their labour from the Church and Common-wealth, which is as profitable, as land and treaſure.

In the olde law, if two men ſtriued together, & the one had wounded the other; the offender was enioyned, not onely to pay for the healing, but for the loſſe of his time alſo, Exo. 21.19. And in like maner, ought ſuch perſons to beare the puniſhment, both of their theft, and of the loſſe of their labour. And the truth is, they that giue to them in this their looſe life, doe maintaine them in wickedneſſe.

Yet here one Caution is to be remembred: that if ſuch a man bee in extreame neede, hee muſt be helped, rather then he ſhould periſh. And the Magiſtrate is to puniſh him for his idleneſſe, and to compell him to labour. The Magiſtrate, I ſay, for priuate perſons haue no authority to inflict puniſhment in this caſe.

As for the other ſort, that are vnable to worke, they are not allowed by the word of God, to gather their almes themſelues by begging from doore to doore, but to be releeued at home in their houſes, Deut. 15.4. There ſhall not be a begger in thee, v. 11. There ſhall be euer ſome poore in the land. Here the holy Ghoſt makes a plaine difference betweene the poore and the begger, forbidding the one, and commanding to helpe the other. S. Paul likewiſe diſtinguiſheth of widowes, whereof ſome haue rich kindred, and they are to be prouided for by them, 1. Tim. 5.4. Others are deſtitute of friends and kindred, by whome they may bee releeued, and ſuch he willeth to bee maintained by the Church v. 16. And this is no toleration or approbation of beggers.

Againe, the begging of almes is the very ſeminarie of vagabunds, rogues, and ſtragling perſons, which haue no calling, nor are of any Corporation, Church, or Commonwealth. Yea it doth proclaime to the world, in the eares of all men, the ſhame either of the Magiſtrate, who reſtraines it not, hauing authority: or of the wealthie and able, that they haue no mercy or compaſſion. It is alſo a great diſorder in common-wealths. For the boldeſt and moſt clamorous begger, carries away all the almes from the reſt; and ſo releefe is diſtributed both vnwiſely, and vnequally. And howſoeuer it is the good law of our Land, agreeable to the Law of God, that none ſhould begge that are able to labour, and all men are bound in conſcience to ſee it obſerued, that haue any care of the good of this Church and comonwealth; yet it is a plague of our times, and greatly to bee bewailed, that it is neglected, and not put in execution.

In the ſecond place it is demaunded, whether wee muſt put a difference betweene perſons and perſons, in giuing our almes?

Anſ. There be three differences of men, that are in need.

The firſt, is a mans owne: And ſuch are they, that be of his houſhold, for which he that makes not prouiſion, is worſe then an Infidell, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, 1. Tim. 5.8. Thoſe alſo which are of a mans owne blood, as father and mother, &c. Mat. 15.5,6. Now contrary to this ſort are ſtrangers, to whom we muſt not giue in this caſe. For to neglect a mans owne, and to beſtow it vpon forrainers, vnleſſe there be iuſt and neceſſary cauſe ſo to doe, is a ſinne againſt the law of nature.

A ſecond difference of men is this. Some are of the houſhold of faith, ſome are otherwiſe. S. Pauls rule is this, that we prefer them before the other, Gal. 6.10. Doe good vnto all men, but ſpecially to them that are of the houſhold of faith.

A third difference. Some are our owne poore, of our towne, land, and countrey, and ſome be ſtrangers in the ſame reſpects. Now howſoeuer wee are debters to all that wee can do good to: yet thoſe that are neerer to vs in habitation or neighbourhood, are to be reſpected and relieued before others. This the Lord commaundeth, Deut. 15.7. If one of thy brethren with thee be poore, within any of thy gates in thy land, which the Lord thy God giueth thee; thou ſhalt not harden thy heart, and ſhut thine hand from him. And theſe being relieued, we may in the next place affoard our helpe to others. Thus did the good Samaritane, in caſe of neceſſitie, practiſe his charitie vpon a ſtranger, Luk. 10.33. and is therefore commended by our Sauiour Chriſt.

III. Queſtion.

How much releefe muſt euery man giue?

Anſ. We muſt put a difference betweene the almes of priuate men, and of Incorporations or Churches. Touching priuate mens almes, the Scripture hath not determined how much muſt be giuen, but hath left it to the diſcreet conſideration of euery Chriſtian. And yet it muſt be remembred, which the Apoſtle ſaith, 2. Cor. 9.6,7. that he that ſoweth ſparingly, ſhall reape ſparingly. And againe, Let euery man giue, as he hath determined in his owne heart. Laſtly, he giues a commaundement touching the quantitie of giuing, that euery firſt day of the weeke, euery one lay aſide by himſelfe, and lay vp as God hath proſpered him; that is, according to the abilitie, wherewith God hath bleſſed him, 1. Cor. 16.2.

But two cautions are propounded in the word, touching this quantitie.

Firſt, that we muſt not ſo giue almes, that others be eaſed, and we our ſelues grieued. 2. Cor. 8.13. It is not Gods will, that we ſhould giue all that we haue in almes, and keepe nothing for our ſelues, but that we keepe a due proportion in giuing, and doe that good to others, whereby we may not our ſelues be hindred or oppreſſed. Our fountaines, and riuers muſt runne, to ſerue the neceſſity of the ſtranger, in vſe, Prou. 5.16,17. But yet the right muſt remaine our own, we may not giue away fountaine and water, and all. Luk. 3.11. He that hath two coates, let him part with him that hath none, that is, he that hath things neceſſarie and in abundance, let him giue freely, yet ſo as hee reſerue one coate to himſelfe.

Here the Papiſt is iuſtly to be blamed, who holdeth it a ſtate of perfection, to giue away all, and to liue by begging. For this cannot be, ſeeing it is againſt Gods commaundement, who will haue ſome giuen, and not all, one coate, not both, and ſo is a ſtate rather of ſinne and imperfection.

Secondly, in the caſe of extreame neceſſity (and not otherwiſe) we muſt be ready and willing to giue almes, though it be by the ſelling of our poſſeſſions, Luk. 12.33. Sell that ye haue, and giue almes: our Sauiours meaning is, in the caſe of extreame neceſſity; when there is no other way to releeue thoſe that are to bee releeued. Dauid notes it as a property of a mercifull man, that he diſperſeth abroad, and giues to the poore, Pſal. 112.9. It was practiſed by the Primitiue Church, in the time of perſecution, in the like caſe, Act. 4.34.35. And the Church of Macedonia, though they were in want themſelues, yet ſupplied the extreame want of other Churches, 2. Cor. 8.1, 2.

Now touching the almes of whole bodies, and Churches, this is the Rule: that they ſhould maintaine the poore with things neceſſary, fitte, and conuenient, as meate, drinke, and cloathing, 1. Tim. 5.16. And this ſerues to confute a groſſe error, maintained by learned Papiſts; who holde, that whatſoeuer a man hath, aboue that which is neceſſarie to nature and eſtate, hee ſhould giue it in almes. But the truth is otherwiſe: for a man may and ought to giue almes more liberally, when hee hath abundance, yet ſo, as he is not bound to giue all, but may reſerue euen part of his ſuperfluitie, for the publike vſe of Church and Common-wealth. And to this purpoſe, is that which our Sauiour ſaith, Luk. 3.11. Hee that hath two coates, that is, things neceſſarie and ſuperfluous, muſt giue but one, and that in caſe of the greateſt neceſſitie; meaning thereby, that al ſuperfluity muſt not be giuen in almes, ſauing only in the caſe afore-ſaid of extreame want.

IV. Queſtion.

How many waies is a man to giue almes?

Anſ. Three waies. Firſt, by free giuing to the poore. Secondly, by free lending: for this is oftentimes as beneficial to a man, as giuing. For this ende there was a law giuen, Deut. 15.8. Thou ſhalt open thy hand vnto thy poore brother, and lend him ſufficient for his neede which hee hath. Luk. 6.35. Lend, looking for nothing againe. Exod. 22.25. If thou lend money to the poore with thee, thou ſhalt not bee an vſurer vnto him, thou ſhalt not oppreſſe him with vſurie. Thirdly, by remitting due debt, in caſe of mens decay and extreame pouerty. Exod. 22.26. If thou take thy neighbours raiment to pledge, thou ſhalt reſtore it vnto him, before the ſunne goe down. 27. For that is his couering onely, and this is his garment for his skinne: wherein ſhall he ſleepe? therefore, when he crieth vnto me (for colde and neceſſitie) I will heare him: for I am mercifull. According to this law, Nehemiah exhorteth the Rulers & Princes of the Iewes, that had oppreſſed their poore countri-men, ſaying, Remit vnto them the hundreth part of the ſiluer, and of the corne, of the wine, and of the oyle that ye exact of them, for loue, Nehem. 5.11.

V. Queſtion.

How should almes be giuen, that they may be good workes, and pleaſing vnto God?

Anſ. For the right maner of giuing, ſundry things are required, but ſpecially theſe ſixe:

Firſt, a man muſt conſecrate himſelfe, and all the gifts that he hath and enioyes, to God and his honour. This dutie is commended in the Church of Macedonia, that they gaue their owne ſelues, firſt to the Lord, and after vnto them that were in neede, by the will of God, 2. Cor. 8.5. And thus the Prophet Eſay fore-telleth, that the citie Tyrus beeing conuerted, ſhould conſecrate her ſelfe, and her goods to the Lord. Eſa. 23.18. Yet her occupying and her wages ſhall be holy vnto the Lord, it ſhall not be laid vp nor kept in ſtore, but her merchandiſe ſhall be for them that dwell before the Lord, to eate ſufficiently, and to haue durable cloathing.

Secondly, we muſt giue almes in faith. How is that? firſt, we muſt be perſwaded, that we are reconciled to God in Chriſt, and ſtand in his fauour: and then our almes ſhall be accepted. For, no worke of the perſon can pleaſe God, before the perſon himſelfe bee approoued of him. Secondly, wee muſt depend vpon God by faith, for the good ſucceſſe of our almes. Saint Paul compares the poore man to a field well tilled, and almes to the ſowing of ſeede, which hath a moſt plentifull harueſt of bleſſing following it, 2. Cor. 9.6. Now as the husbandman, caſting his ſeede into the earth, waiteth vpon God for the fruit thereof, Iam. 5.7. ſo muſt the good man that giues almes, depend vpon God for the euent thereof. Salomon ſaies, He that hath mercy vpon the poore, lendeth to the Lord, & the Lord will recompence him that which he hath giuen, Prou. 19.17. Vpon theſe grounds muſt our faith reſt, when we do good to the poore.

Thirdly, we muſt giue in ſimplicitie. Rom. 12.8. He that diſtributeth, let him doe it with ſimplicitie, that is, of meere pitie and compaſſion, and not for any ſiniſter reſpect, pleaſure, or praiſe of men, Math. 6.3. When thou doeſt thine almes, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doth.

Fourthly, we muſt giue in loue. 1.Cor.13.3. Though I feede the poore with all my goods, &c. and haue not loue, it profiteth me nothing.

Fiftly, in iuſtice. For we muſt not giue other mens goods, but our owne truely gotten. Eſa. 58.7. The true faſting is, to breake thine own bread to the hungry, to bring the poore that wander, into thine owne houſe, &c.

Sixtly, with a bountifull and chearefull mind. 2.Cor. 9.7. As euery man wiſheth in his heart, ſo let him giue, not grudgingly, or of neceſſity: for God loueth a chearefull giuer. Our almes muſt not be extorted, but franke and free. And hence it followes, that there ought to be no begging from doore to doore, in a Chriſtian Commonwealth. For that ſhewes, that men part with their almes, of a niggardly and compelled minde. And thus much of the Remedie.

Sect. 2.

In the next place followeth the fruit of the Remedie, in theſe words, And all things ſhall be cleane vnto you.

Here firſt I will ſpeake of the falſe, and then of the true and right fruit of Liberality.

The falſe fruit is this, that giuing of almes doth merit forgiueneſſe of ſinne, and ſatisfie the iuſtice of God; for the temporall puniſhment thereof. That we may the better ſee the errour of this doctrine, I will anſwer the arguments alleadged in defence thereof.

Obiect. I. The firſt is framed out of this text, that giuing of almes makes all things cleane vnto vs, Luk.11.41.

Anſ. We muſt vnderſtand the text thus: If wee returne to God, beleeue in Chriſt, and leaue all our ſinnes, then are we cleane, and all our actions, and conſequently our almes giuing ſhall bee cleane vnto vs: for to the pure all things are pure. Now almes and other things, are then ſaid to be cleane vnto a man, when hee beeing himſelfe pure, maketh and hath a pure vſe of them.

Obiect. II. Dan.4.24. Redeeme thy ſinnes, by giuing of almes.

Anſ. This place maketh againſt the Papiſts: for by ſinnes, the Prophet vnderſtandeth both the guilt, and alſo the puniſhment. Whereas they affirme, that the guilt of ſinne cannot be redeemed, but by Chriſt alone, and man onely is to ſatisfie for the temporall puniſhment of ſinne. Secondly, the word which they tranſlate redeeme, doth proper ſignifie (as it is in the Chalde paraphraſe) to breake off. As if the Prophet ſhould haue ſaid, thou art, O King, a mighty Monarch, and thou haſt vſed much iniuſtice and crueltie: therefore now repent thy ſelfe, and breake off the courſe of thy ſinnes, and teſtifie thy repentance, by doing iuſtice, and giuing almes to the poore, whom thou haſt oppreſſed: thirdly, the word in the auncient Latine tranſlations, ſignifieth to amend; and then it beareth this ſenſe; Amend thy ſelfe, and the courſe of thy life, and let thine iniuſtice be turned into iuſtice, thy cruelty into mercy.

Obiect. III. Make you friends with the riches of iniquitie, that when ye ſhall want, they may receiue you into euerlaſting habitations, Luk.16.9.

Anſw. Receiuing here mentioned, is not in regard of merit, as though a man could deſerue it by giuing almes, but either by way of heartie prayers made by the poore, that they may bee receiued, or elſe becauſe their almes ſhall bee vnto them a pledge and earneſt, of their receiuing into Gods kingdome.

Obiect. IV. Prou.16.6. By mercy and truth, iniquity is redeemed.

Anſw. 1. Salomons meaning is, that by Gods goodnes, and not ours, iniquity is pardoned. 2. If by mercy, is meant mans mercy, then are wee to vnderſtand it thus: that mercy and truth are euident ſignes vnto vs that our ſinnes are forgiuen, and not the working cauſes of remiſſion.

Obiect. V. Luk.14.14. And thou (which giueſt releeſe) ſhalt be bleſſed, becauſe they cannot recompence thee: therefore almes do merit.

Anſ. When God promiſeth reward to the giuing of almes, the promiſe is not made to the worke, but to the worker, and that not for the merit of his perſon, or worke, but onely for Chriſt his ſake, in whome he is, by whoſe meanes he ſtands reconciled vnto God. And ſo men that practiſe charitie in giuing of almes, are rewarded with bleſſedneſſe, not for their almes, but according to the mercy of God in Chriſt.

Now followeth the right fruit of almes-giuing: and it ſtands in foure things.

Firſt, they are the way, in which wee muſt walke to life euerlaſting I ſay the way, not the cauſe either of life, or any other good thing, that God hath promiſed.

Secondly, they are effects and fruits of our faith: yea the ſignes and ſeales of Gods mercie to vs in Chriſt. To this purpoſe S. Paul wiſheth Timothie, 1.*Tim.*6.17,18,19. to charge them that bee rich in this world, that they doe good, and be rich in good workes, and be ready to diſtribute, laying vp in ſtore for themſelues a good foundation, againſt the time to come, that they may obtaine eternall life. Now where is this foundation to bee laid vp? not in heauen, for that is impoſſible for vs, and it is laid vp for vs there already by Chriſt; but in our owne conſciences, and that is our aſſurance of Gods fauour in this world, and life euerlaſting in the world to come: of which aſſurance, this and other good workes, are ſignes and ſeales vnto vs.

Thirdly, almes comes in the way of reſtitution of thoſe goods that haue beene gotten fraudulently, though from whome, wee know not. Thus Zaccheus at his conuerſion, for wrongs that hee had done, hee knew not to whome, gaue halfe his goods to the poore, & proclaimed reſtitution to thoſe that could come forth, and chalenge him.

A Laſtly, almes are a notable remedie againſt couetouſneſſe. For hee that hath a mercifull heart, to beſtow vpon the poore, ſhall eaſily be content with that he hath, and auoid that ſinne whereby otherwiſe he fals into tentation and ſnares of the diuell, 1.Tim.6.9.

CHAP. VI.

Of Iuſtice.

Pſal.15.2. He that walketh vprightly, and worketh righteouſneſſe.

THE ſubſtance of the whole Pſalme is a B Queſtion, and an Anſwer. The Queſtion is, Who are the members of Gods Church vpon earth, that ſhall come to life eternall in heauen? verſ.1. The anſwer is made in the reſt of the Palme. And in this Anſwer is contained a deſcription of the parties, by their properties and markes. The firſt marke is, walking vprightly; that is, in truth and ſinceritie of religion, which ſtandeth in the ſincerity of faith and a good conſcience. The ſecond note is the practiſe of righteouſneſſe.

Now Righteouſnes, or Iuſtice, is two-folde: the Iuſtice of the Goſpel, and the Iuſtice of the Law.

Euangelicall iuſtice, is that which the Goſpel reueales, and not the Law; to witte, the o- C bedience of Chriſt in his ſufferings, and fulfilling of the Law, imputed to them that beleeue for their Iuſtification; and this is not here meant.

Legall Iuſtice, is that which the Law reuealeth, and withall requireth: and it is either vniuerſall, or particular.

Vniuerſall Iuſtice, is the practiſe of all vertues: or that, whereby a man obſerues all the commaundements of the Law. Of this Paul ſpeaketh, Rom.10.5. in which place, he oppoſeth it to the righteouſneſſe which is by faith. And Zacharie and Elizabeth, are ſaid to bee iuſt before God, Luk.1.6. namely, by this vniuerſall iuſtice; becauſe they walked in all the commandements & ordinances of the Lord, D endeauouring in all things to pleaſe him.

Particular Iuſtice is that, whereby we giue to euery man his right or due: and of this Dauid here ſpeaketh. The reaſon is, becauſe if it were not ſo, then this ſecond marke ſhould comprehend vnder it all the reſt; and ſo there would bee no good diſtinction of theſe properties, one from another.

Particular Iuſtice is two-folde: in diſtribution, or in exchange and contract. Iuſtice in diſtribution is that, which keepes a proportion in giuing to euery man that honour, dignitie, reuerence, reward, or puniſhment, that is due vnto him.

Of this, there are mooued principally two Queſtions.

I. Queſtion.

What is that iudgement, which men are to giue and holde, one to and of another?

Anſ. Iudgement is of two ſorts: publike, and priuate.

Publike, which is giuen and adminiſtred by a publike perſon, in a publike place. Such is the iudgement of the Magiſtrate, when hee acquitteth men, or according to their deſerts condemneth them to temporall puniſhment. Of which we may reade, 2.Chron.19.6. Pſal. 58.1. Such alſo is the iudgement of the Prophet or Miniſter, whereby hee doth openly pronounce to men that beleeue and repent, that their ſinnes are remitted, or retained, 1. Corin. 14.24. or that, whereby obſtinate ſinners are deliuered vp vnto Satan, by the cenſure of Excommunication or Suſpenſion, 1. Cor.5.3,4,5.

Priuate iudgment is that, whereby one man giueth iudgement priuately of another, and touching it, wee are to conſider two points: Firſt, of what things iudgment muſt be giuen: Secondly, how we are to giue iudgement?

For the firſt: wee muſt giue iudgement of three ſorts of things: of mens facts, of their doctrines, & of their perſons. Touching facts: the Apoſtle Paul would not haue vs to haue fellowſhip, with the vnfruitfull workes of darknes, Eph.5.11. but rather to reprooue them, becauſe they are ſubiect to our iudgement: and being reprooued by vs, they are iudged of vs. And our Sauiour doth therefore command vs, when our brother treſpaſſeth againſt vs, to goe and reprooue him, Mat.18.15. becauſe his actions are liable to our cenſure.

Secondly the doctrines of men are to bee iudged by vs. Trie the ſpirits whether they are of God or no, 1. Ioh.4.1. The ſpirituall man iudgeth all things, that is, al doctrines, 1.Cor.2.15. And our Sauiour ſaith, You ſhall know them by their fruites, that is, partly by their doctrine, and partly by their liues, beeing iudged according to the rule of Gods word, Mat.7.20.

Thirdly, wee may iudge of the perſons of men. Now men are of two ſorts: either in the Church, or out of the Church. The members of the Church, muſt bee iudged by the iudgement of charitie, not of infallibilitie. They that are out of the Church, wee muſt ſuſpend our iudgments concerning them, and leaue them to God. For what haue I to doe (ſaith the Apoſtle) to iudge thoſe that are without? 1.Cor.5.12. We may trie and examine the perſon, but wee muſt reſerue the iudgement of condemnation to God alone.

The ſecond point is, How we are to iudge one of another.

Anſ. The right manner of iudging according ding to the word of God, I will lay downe in ſixe Rules.

The firſt is, If we know any good thing by any man, whether vertue, or action, wee are willingly to ſpeake of it, to commend it, and glorifie Gods name in it, and for it. Thus Paul affirmeth, that the Churches of Iudæa, when they heard the word which he preached glorified God for him, Gal. 1. 23.

The ſecond Rule; If we know any euill, ſinne, vice, or offence by any man, there is a time when wee may, and a time when we may not ſpeake of it, and that with good conſcience. For the better keeping of this Rule, foure cautions are to be remembred.

Firſt, hee that will giue ſentence of another man, muſt in the firſt place purge & reforme himſelfe. To this purpoſe Chriſt commandeth, firſt to plucke the beame out of our owne eye, and then ſhall wee ſee clearely, to caſt out the mote out of our brothers eye, Mat. 7. 5. And hee that will not doe this, in iudging another, hee condemneth himſelfe, Rom. 2. 1.

Secondly, we muſt be rightly and truely informed in the matter, before wee giue iudgement. This was Gods own practiſe, who came downe to ſee, whether the ſinne of Sodome was anſwerable to the crie, Gen. 18. 21.

Thirdly, our loue and charitie muſt order and direct, both our ſpeech & our iudgement of others, that we ſpeake not of them without deliberation. For hee that vpon hatred, reports the euill hee knoweth by another, is a backbiter. When Doeg the Edomite came, and ſhewed Saul, that Dauid was gone to the houſe of Abimelech, hee tolde no more then the truth; and yet becauſe it proceeded from an euill minde, therefore Dauid accuſeth him of hatred, backbiting, ſlandering, and vnrighteouſneſſe, Pſal. 52. 1, 2.

Fourthly, he that ſpeaks the euil he knowes by his neighbour, muſt haue the teſtimony of his owne conſcience, to aſſure him that hee hath a calling to doe it. & fol: 220

Now a man is called by God, in three caſes. Firſt, when he is commaunded by the Magiſtrate, to teſtifie what he knoweth. Secondly, when an euill that is in his neighbour, is to be redreſſed by admonition. Thirdly, when an euill is to bee preuented, that it ſpread not abroad to the infection of others.

Theſe caueats obſerued, wee may ſpeake the euill we know by others, truly, and with an vpright conſcience. But if they may be concealed, rather then a man ſhould blaze abroad the faults of others, whereunto hee is priuie, he ought to bee ſilent: remembring alwayes the ſaying of Salomon, that it is the glorie of a man, to paſſe by an infirmitie, and not to take notice thereof, but by loue to couer a multitude of ſinnes, Prou. 19. 11.

The third Rule. When a mans ſpeech or action, is doubtfull, and may be taken either well or ill, wee muſt alwaies interpret it in the better part. When Chriſt was brought before A Caiphas the high prieſt, there came two witneſſes againſt him, who affirmed ſomething of him, which hee had ſpoken: but becauſe they chaunged and miſconſtrued his words, turning them to a wrong ſenſe, therefore they are called by the Holy Ghoſt, to their perpetuall ſhame and reproch, falſe witneſſes, Mat. 26. 90. Againe, the Apoſtle ſaith, that Loue thinkes no euill, 1. Cor. 13. 5. therefore loue takes euery ſpeech and action in the better ſenſe.

The fourth Rule. Touching ſecret offences of our neighbour, we muſt ſuſpend our iudgement of them. The reaſon is, becauſe loue alwaies hopes the beſt, and thinkes no euill, 1. B Cor. 13. 5. And our Sauiours rule is, If thy brother treſpaſſe againſt thee, firſt reproue him priuately, betweene thee and him, and goe no further, if that will preuaile, Mat. 27. 15.

The fift Rule. Againſt an Elder, receiue not an accuſation vnder two or three witneſſes, 1. Tim. 5. 19. By an Elder, vnderſtand miniſters, ciuill gouernours, and all ſuperiours. And if we muſt not receiue, then much leſſe may wee frame an accuſation againſt them. This may bee a leſſon for all inferiours to learne, who take liberty to themſelues, to ſpeake what euil they pleaſe of their gouernours.

The ſixth Rule is, concerning miniſters. The Spirit of the Prophets, is ſubiect to the Prophets, and not to priuate perſons, 1. Cor. 14. C 32. Indeed priuate perſons haue power to examine & try their doctrine and miniſtery: but they muſt goe no further: for they haue no power to giue iudgment, either of their miniſters doctrine, or perſons. The doctrine and maners of teachers, are ſubiect to the cenſure of Prophets onely. For example: A priuate man ſaies, that he may excommunicate at his pleaſure, thoſe that ſinne, if he proceed according to the three degrees mentioned, Mat. 18. But this is in him a fault; for hee muſt not iudge in this caſe, at his owne pleaſure, but his iudgement muſt follow the iudgement of the Church: and when the Church hath giuen cenſure, then may the priuate man proceede to cenſure, and not before. So ſaith our Sauiour D Chriſt, Math. 18. 17. If hee heare not the Church, after the Church hath iudged him, let him be vnto thee as an heathen and a publicane.

Here if the Queſtion be made, how a man may with good conſcience giue iudgement of his owne ſelfe?

I anſwer, by obſeruing two Rules. Firſt, a man muſt alwaies in the preſence of God, iudge himſelfe in regard of his ſinnes, both of heart and life, 1. Corinth. 11. 31. If wee would iudge our ſelues, wee ſhould not be iudged. And this iudgement of a mans ſelfe, muſt not bee partiall, but ſharpe and ſeuere, with true humiliation and lowlineſſe of heart. For this is a true ground of all charitable iudgement of others. Secondly, before men a man muſt ſuppreſſe his iudgement of himſelfe, and bee ſilent: no man is bound either to praiſe, or diſpraiſe, to excuſe or accuſe and condemne himſelfe before others: and grace muſt teach him thus much, not vainely to commend or boaſt of his owne gifts and actions; but rather to bury them in ſilence, and referre them to the iudgement of others.

Now to conclude this point: The doctrine deliuered, is moſt neceſſarie for theſe times. For the faſhion of moſt men is, to giue raſh and ſiniſter iudgement of others; but themſelues they will commend, and that highly. If any thing be euill ſaid or done, all men muſt haue notice of it. If a thing be doubtfull, it is alway conſtrued in the worſer part. If a thing be done of weakneſſe and infirmity, we aggrauate it, and make it a double ſinne. We are curious in ſearching & inquiring into the liues of others, that wee may haue ſomething to carpe and finde fault with. But let this be remembred, that as we iudge, ſo wee ſhall be iudged; firſt, of God by condemnation, and then by hard and vnequall iudgment from others. Againe, what is it that makes men to be open mouthed, in declaring & cenſuring our faults, but this; that we open our mouthes to the diſgrace and defamation of others? Wherefore, if wee would haue other men to iudge of vs, and our actions in loue, wee muſt alſo make conſcience, to giue charitable iudgement of them.

II. Queſtion.

How one man ſhould honour another?

Anſw. That we may rightly honour men, wee muſt firſt know the cauſes, for which men are to bee honoured. And that the cauſes of honour may bee conceiued, I will lay downe this Ground: Honour is in the firſt place principally and properly, to be giuen vnto God. 1. Tim. 1. 17. To God onely wiſe, be honour and glorie. The reaſon hereof is rendred in the Lords prayer; becauſe his is kingdome, power, and glory. Againe, God is goodneſſe it ſelfe: his goodneſſe and his eſſence are one and the ſame: therefore honor is due vnto him in the firſt place. Now euery creature as it comes neere vnto God, ſo is it honourable; and the more honourable, by how much neerer it commeth vnto him. But man eſpecially, by how much neerer he commeth to God in diuine things, by ſo much more is hee to bee honoured in reſpect of other creatures. From this Ground doe follow theſe Concluſions:

Firſt, that man is firſt of all to be honoured, for vertues ſake: becauſe therein principally, ſtands the internall Image of God. Rom. 2. 10. To euery man that doth good, ſhall bee honour, glory, and peace to the Iew firſt, &c. Now whereas the queſtion might be, Who is the Iew, to whome this honour muſt bee yeelded? Paul anſwers, verſ. 29. that he is not a Iew, which is one outward, but he is a Iew, who is one within: and the circumciſion is of the heart. And Salomon ſaith, that Honour is vnſeemely for a foole, Prou. 26. 1. And the Holy Ghoſt to the Hebrewes ſaith, that by faith, our Elders were well reported of, Heb. 11. 2. The Heathen man Marcus Marcellus, a Romane, dedicated a temple to the goddeſſe of Honour, & the way to that temple was, by the houſe of Vertue.

The ſecond Concluſion is, That man is to be honoured, not only for vertue, but alſo for diuine repreſentations of other good things: in a word, becauſe one man before another, beares the image of ſomething that is in God. As firſt, of his Maieſtie. Thus the King is honoured, becauſe in his Maieſtie and ſtate, hee carrieth a reſemblance of the power and glory of God; ſo as that which is ſaid of God, may be alſo ſpoken of him. Hence it was, that Daniel ſaid to Nebuchadnezzar: O King, thou art a King of Kings, and why? for the God of heauen hath giuen thee kingdome, power, ſtrength, and glorie. Secondly, of his Dominion. Thus the husband is to be honored of the wife, becauſe he beareth before the woman, the image of the glory of God; yea, of his prouidence, wiſedome, Lordſhip, and gouernment, 1. Cor. 11. 7. Thirdly, of his Paternity: and ſo the Father is honoured of the Sonne, becauſe hee beares in his perſon the Image of Gods paternity or fatherhood. Fourthly, of his Eternitie: and hence it is, that honour is giuen to the aged, before the young man, becauſe hee beareth the image thereof. Thus wee ſee, that diuine repreſentations doe imprint a kinde of excellency, in ſome perſons, and conſequently doe bring forth honour.

Dan. 2. 37.

The third Concluſion is, That men are to be honoured, euen for the vertues of others, to whome they ſtand in relation. Thus the ſonnes of Princes are called by the honourable name of Princes. The children of Nobles, are eſteemed by birth noble. Thus dignities doe run in deſcent, and the poſterity is honoured in the name of the aunceſtours, but principally for the vertues of the aunceſtours.

The fourth Concluſion is, Men are to bee honoured for their riches. I meane not for riches ſimply; but for the right vſe of riches; namely, as they are made inſtruments to vpholde and maintaine Vertue.

If it be ſaid, that to honour rich men, is to haue the faith of the Lord Ieſus Chriſt in reſpect of perſons, Iam. 2. 1. I anſwer: In that place wee are not forbidden to honour rich men: but the Apoſtles meaning is, to reproue a fault of another kinde, when men preferre riches before piety; when rich men are honored being vngodly; and when godly poore men are deſpiſed and reiected, becauſe they are poore.

Now hauing premiſed the Ground, wee come to giue Anſwer to the Queſtion before propounded. A man therefore is to honour euery one in his place, whether hee bee his ſuperiour, equall, or inferiour. Yea there is a kinde of honour to be performed to a mans owne ſelfe. The truth of this Anſwer we ſhall ſee in the particulars that follow.

Sect. 1.

Touching the honouring of Superiours, theſe Rules are to be obſerued.

Firſt: All Superiours muſt haue reuerence done vnto them, whether they be Superiours in age, in gifts, in authoritie, or howſoeuer, and that becauſe they are Superiours.

The actions of Reuerence due to all Superiours, are principally ſixe. The firſt is, to riſe vp before the Superiour, Leuit. 19. 32. Thou ſhalt riſe vp before the hoare head, and honour the perſon of the old man. The ſecond, when they are comming towards vs, to goe and meete them. Thus, when Abraham ſaw the three Angels comming toward him, he ranne to meete them from the tent doore, Gen. 18. 2. And king Salomon, when his mother Bathſheba came towards him to ſpeake vnto him for Adoniah, the text ſaith, he roſe vp to meete her, 1. King. 2. 19. The third, to bow the knee before the ſuperiour. Thus wee reade in the Goſpell, that a certaine man comming to Chriſt, as he was going on the way; kneeled vnto him, Mar. 10. 17. Thus Abraham ranne to meete the three Angels, and bowed himſelfe to the ground. Gen. 18. 2. And the ſame Abraham, els where, bowed himſelfe before the people of the land of the Hittites, Gen. 23. 7. The fourth, to giue them the firſt and higheſt ſeate or place. This our Sauiour Chriſt meaneth in the parable, wherein he willeth thoſe who are inuited to a banquet, to yeeld the chiefeſt place to them, that are more honourable then themſelues. Luk. 14. 7. And it is ſet downe as a commendation of Ioſephs brethren, that they ſate before him in order, the eldeſt according to his age, and the youngeſt according to his youth, Gen. 43. 33. Here we muſt remember, that though in common practiſe among men, the right hand is a note of ſuperioritie, yet in Scripture the practiſe is contrarie. For in the article of our Creede, Sitting at the right hand, ſignifieth the inferioritie of the Mediatour, in reſpect of the Father, though it be a token of his ſuperioritie, in regard of the Church. And ſo muſt the place be vnderſtood, (1. King. 2. 19. where it is ſaid, that Bathſheba ſate at the right hand of Salomon,) namely, that it was an argument of ſuperioritie, whereunto he preferred her before the people; but it ſhewed her inferioritie in regard of Salomon himſelfe. And this cuſtome is frequent, both in the Scriptures, and in humane writers. The fift to giue libertie of ſpeaking in the firſt place. This was the practiſe of Elihu, one of the friends of Iob, who beeing the youngeſt in yeares, dared not to ſhew his opinion, till Iob and others, who were his auncients had ſpoken. But when they had left off their talke, then he is ſaid to haue anſwered in his turne, Iob 32. 6. 7. 17. The ſixt, A to giue the titles of reuerence to al ſuperiours. Sara according to this rule, called Abraham Lord, 1. Pet. 3. 9. The man in the Goſpel, comming to learne ſomething of Chriſt, cals him by this name, Good Maſter, Mark. 10. 17. and Anna rebuked by Eli, anſwered him with reuerence, and ſaid, nay, my Lord. 1. Sam. 1. 15.

The ſecond Rule touching honour due to ſuperiours, is more ſpeciall, touching ſuperiours in authoritie; namely, that they alſo muſt be honoured. And this honour ſhewes it ſelfe in foure things.

The firſt is, ſpeciall reuerence: which ſtands in the performance of two duties. The former is, to ſtand when our ſuperiours doe ſit. For B thus Abraham after he had receiued the Angels into his tent, & prepared meate for them, ſerued himſelfe by them vnder the tree, giuing attendance, while they did eate, Gen. 18. 8. In like manner, when Moſes ſate in iudgement, the people are ſaid to haue ſtood about him, from morning vntill euening, Exod. 18. 13. The latter is, not to ſpeake, but by leaue. A duty alwaies to be obſerued, but ſpecially in the courts of Magiſtrates. Example whereof we haue in Paul, who being called before Fœlix the gouernour, did not ſpeake a word, vntill the gouernour had beckened vnto him, and giuen him leaue. Act. 24. 10.

The ſecond thing is ſubiection, which is nothing els but an inferioritie, whereby we do (as C it were) ſuſpend our wils and reaſons, & withall cauſe them to depend (in things lawfull and honeſt) vpon the will of the ſuperiour. This ſubiection is yeelded to the authoritie of the ſuperiour, and is larger then obedience.

The third is, obedience; whereby we keepe and performe the expreſſe commaundement of our ſuperiour, in all things lawfull and honeſt. Il ſtandeth in ſundry particulars, as Firſt, it muſt be in the Lord, & as to the Lord himſelfe, Whatſoeuer ye doe (ſaith the Apoſtle,) doe it heartily, as to the Lord, and not vnto men, Col. 3. 23. Againe, obedience muſt be performed euen to ſuperiours that are euill. Thus Peter exhorts ſeruants to be ſubiect to their Ma- D ſters, in all feare, not onely to the good and courteous, but alſo to the froward, 1. Pet. 2. 18. Thirdly, it muſt be done to Rulers, in whome we ſee weakeneſſes. For their infirmities ought not to hinder or ſtoppe our duty of obedience, conſidering that the commaundement of honouring the father and mother is generall without exception. Fourthly, it is to be performed to them that are Deputies to Rulers, yea, which are deputies of deputies. Submit your ſelues (ſaith Peter) vnto all manner ordinance of man, for the Lords ſake, whether it be vnto the King, as vnto the ſuperiour, or vnto gouernours, as vnto them who are ſent of him, &c. 1. Pet. 2. 13. 14. Fiftly, though puniſhment bee wrongfully, and moſt vniuſtly impoſed by Rulers, yet it muſt be borne without reſiſtance, til we can haue our remedie. For this is thankworthie, if a man for conſcience, toward God, indure griefe, ſuffering wrongfully, 1. Pet. 2. 19. The practiſe of this we may ſee in Hagar, the handmaide of Sara, who is commaunded by the Angel, to returne againe to her dame, and humble her ſelfe before her, though ſhe had dealt very roughly with her, Gen. 16. 9.

The fourth thing due to Superiours in authoritie, is Thankeſgiuing, in praying God for their paines, authoritie, and gifts principally. Thus Paul exhorts, that praiers, interceſſions, and thankeſgiuing, be made for Kings, and all that be in authoritie. 1. Tim. 2. 1. The reaſon is, becauſe beeing ouer vs in authoritie, we haue the benefite of their gifts and authoritie. Gen. 45. 9.

Sect. 2.

In the ſecond place commeth to be conſidered, our honour due vnto our Equals. Concerning which, there be two Rules.

I. Rule. Equals muſt eſteeme better of others, then of themſelues. Thus Paul exhorts all men, in meekeneſſe of minde, without contention or vaine-glorie, to eſteeme others better then themſelues. Phil. 2. 3.

II. Rule. Equals, in giuing honour, muſt goe one before another. Rom. 12. 10. where the Apoſtle ſaith not, in taking honour, becauſe the dutie by him preſcribed, concernes not all perſons, but thoſe alone who are of alike or equall condition.

Sect. 3.

A third ſort, to whom honour is to be yeelded, are inferiours. And the honour due vnto them is, without all contempt, in meekeneſſe of Spirit, to reſpect them as brethren. This dutie the Lord commands expreſſely to the King; That his heart be not lifted vp aboue his brethren, Deut. 17. 20. The ſame was the practiſe of Iob, who ſaith of himſelfe, that he did not contemne the iudgement of his ſeruant, or of his maid, when they did contend with him, Iob 31. 13. Naaman the Syrian, thought it no diſgrace, to be aduiſed and ordered by the counſell of his ſeruants. 2. King. 5. 13. And true it is, that all ſuperiours ought to keepe their ſtate and place, yet ſo, as they haue reſpect alſo to ſuch as are inferiour to them, without ſcorne or contempt.

Laſtly, there is a kind of honour to be performed to a mans owne ſelfe, which duty the Apoſtle exhorteth vnto, Phil. 4. 8. where he ſaith; If there be any vertue, if there be any praiſe, thinke on theſe things. By which he would teach vs, not onely to tender the honour of our ſuperiours, equals, and inferiours, but euen of our ſelues, in ſeeking after vertue and praiſe that followeth after it.

B

But how ſhould a man in a right manner honour himſelfe?

Anſ. By obſeruing two rules.

I. Rule. We muſt preſerue our ſelues in bodie and ſoule; ſpecially, we muſt keepe the body, that it be not made an inſtrument of ſinne. For when we doe vſe our bodies as inſtruments of vncleaneneſſe, then doe we bring a ſhame vpon them. And it is the will of God, that euery man ſhould know how to poſſeſſe his veſſel in holineſſe and honour, 1. Theſſ. 4. 4. And that which is ſaid of the body, is to be vnderſtood of the hand, the heart, the tongue, and all the parts and members thereof.

C

II. Rule. If we would truly honour our ſelues, we muſt honour God in all our waies. For God will honour them, who honour him. 1. Sam. 2. 30. Now to honour God, is to honour him according to his will and word, in the duties of good conſcience and good life. On the contrarie, they that diſhonour God, God will diſhonour them before all the world. And this muſt teach vs, euen to dedicate our ſelues to God and his glorie, in the whole courſe of our callings, whether in the Church or Common-wealth.

THE holy Scriptures (Right Honourable) giuen by diuine inſpiration, and penned by the holy men of God, Prophets, Apoſtles, and Apoſtolike writers, not by priuate motion, but as they were guided by the holy Ghoſt; are not onely commended by God, and left vnto the Church as a pretious depoſitum carefully to be kept in their integritie (for which cauſe the Church is called the ground and pillar of truth. 1.Tim.3.15.) nor to be defended onely by the ſword of the Magiſtrate, againſt Heretickes, Schiſmatikes, and men of ſcandalous life, in which reſpect he is called (and that truly,) Cuſtos vtriuſq; tabulæ: But alſo to be the pillar and foundation whereon to reſt our faith, the touch-ſtone of truth; the ſhoppe of remedies for all ſpirituall maladies, an anker in the blaſts of Temptation, and waues of affliction; a two edged ſword to foile and put to flight our ſpirituall enemies, the onely Oracle to which we muſt haue recourſe, and whereat we are to enquire the will of God: In a word, the bread and water of life, whereon our ſoules are to feede vnto eternall life. Therefore we are commanded to ſearch the Scriptures as for ſiluer, and to ſeeke in them as for treaſures, to reade in them continually, to meditate on them day and night; to vſe them as bracelets vpon our armes, and frontlets betweene our eies, to teach them to our poſteritie, and to talke of them when we are in our houſes, and when we walke by the way, when we lie downe, and when we riſe vp. And great reaſon there is of this commandement, ſeeing that (as an auncient writer ſaith,) Quicquid in eis docetur veritas eſt: quicquid præcipitur bonitas eſt: quicquid promittitur fœlicitas eſt: that is, Whatſoeuer is taught in them, is truth it ſelfe: whatſoeuer is commanded, is goodneſſe it ſelfe: whatſoeuer is promiſed, is happineſſe it ſelfe. They beeing of ſuch perfection, that nothing may be added vnto them, nor any thing taken from them: of ſuch infallible certentie, that heauen and earth ſhall ſooner paſſe away, then one title fall to the ground: ſo pleaſant and delightfull, that they exceede the honie and the honie combe: and ſo profitable that no treaſures may be compared vnto them: ſeeing they are able to make vs wiſer then our enemies, then the aged, then our teachers: to make vs wiſe vnto ſaluation, to giue vs an inheritance among them that are ſanctified: nay, able to ſaue our ſoules. Which beeing ſo, I cannot ſufficiently wonder, that any calling themſelues Chriſtians, ſhould make leſſe account of the booke of God, then the Romanes in old time, did of their twelue Tables, and other Heathens of their Rituall bookes: or then the Iewes at this day doe of their Talmud, the Turkes of their Alcoran, the AEthiopians of their Abetelis: eſpecially that thoſe which profeſſe themſelues Diuines, ſhould ſo diſtaſt the holy Scripture, that leauing it the cleare fountaine of the water of life, they ſhould betake themſelues to the troubled ſtreames of mens deuiſes, and digge vnto themſelues pits which will hold no water. Wherein the Schoolemen (I meane the Sententiaries, the Summiſts, & Quodlibetaries are chiefly (if not onely) to be cenſured, who ſetting aſide the Scriptures, haue vaniſhed away in vaine ſpeculations in their Queſtions vpon Lumbard the Maſter of the Sentences, and vpon Thomas their new Maſter. So that had it not beene for ſome few Gloſſes (which notwithſtanding like the gloſſe of Orleans doe often corrupt the text) Nicolaus de Lyra, Hugo de S. Charo, and Peter Comeſter (whome I ſhould haue named firſt, beeing ſo good a text man, that (as his name importeth) he did eate vp the text, as the poore mans horſe dranke vp the moone) we ſhould not haue had among ſuch a multitude of writers, one poore comment vpon the Bible for diuers hundred yeares. And no maruaile, ſeeing it is an ordinarie thing for young nouices in popiſh Vniuerſities (and I would it were but there onely) not to lay the foundation of their ſtudie in Diuinitie vpon the rocke, but vpon the waters: that is, not vpon the Scripture, but vpon Aquinas, or ſome ſuch Summiſt: and to reade the Scriptures no further then they giue them light for the vnderſtanding of their Schoole-Doctours. Witneſſe one of their owne writers, who teſtifieth of himſelfe, that he had ſtudied Schoole-Diuinitie and the Canon Law for the ſpace of 16 yeares, and yet neuer ſo much as ſaluted either the Scriptures, or the Fathers. Which courſe they take, either becauſe they preſume to vnderſtand aboue that which is written, contrary to the commandement of the Apoſtle, Rom. 12.3. or for that they iudge the Scriptures too ſimple and ſhallow for them to wade in, as not affording them ſufficient matter for their wits to worke vpon. Not conſidering that whilſt they contemne the ſimplicitie of the Scriptures, and looke beyond the Moone, in the meane time with Thales they fal into the ditch: and that whilſt they ſtriue with the wings of their wit to ſoare aboue the cloudes of other mens conceits, they ſincke into a Sea of abſurditie and errors. Not yet remembring that the Scripture hath great maieſtie ioyned with ſimplicitie, and as great difficulty mixed with plaineneſſe and facilitie: and therefore not vnfitly reſembled by S. Gregorie, to the maine Ocean, in which the lambe may wade, and the Elephant may ſwim. For the ſpirit of God hath in wonderfull wiſedome ſo tempered the Scriptures, that they are both obſcure and perſpicuous; in ſome places like a claſped or ſealed booke. Iſa. 29. 11. in other places like a booke that is opened. Apoc. 5. 5 beeing both eaſie and difficult. Eaſie, in that the entrance into the word giueth light and vnderſtanding to the ſimple. Pſal. 119. 130. Difficult, in that ſome things are hard to be vnderſtood. 2. Pet. 3. 16. and hard to be interpreted. Ebr. 5. 11. Eaſie, to inuite vs to reade and learne them: Difficult, to exerciſe vs leſt we ſhould contemne them. From the eaſie and plaine places are gathered principles of religion, both articles of faith and rules of good life, which we call Catechiſmes. The difficult places require interpretation, and the Commentaries of the learned. Both which is neceſſarie in the Church of God: Catechiſmes haue a neceſſarie vſe, both in regard of the ſimple, who are to be fedde with milke, beeing but babes in Chriſt: and of the learned, who are ſtrong men in Chriſt, that they may haue ſome rule whereby to trie the ſpirits, conſonant to the analogie of faith, and the doctrine of the Orthodoxe Fathers of the Church: which Paul calleth the forme of knowledge, Rom. 2. 20. and The forme of doctrine, Rom. 6. 17. and a patterne of wholeſome words, 2. Tim. 1. 13. which formes of doctrine were in vſe in the primitiue Church in the Apoſtles daies, as it is manifeſt. Heb. 6. 1. where the Apoſtle ſets downe the principall points of the Catechiſme, calling them the doctrine of the beginning of Chriſt. And after the Apoſtles, we finde that they were vſed by learned Fathers, both of the Greeke and Latine Church. Clement Alex. had his Pedagogue. Cyril of Ieruſalem his Catechiſme and Myſtagog. bookes. Origen (that famous Catechiſt) his bookes (o) of principles. Theodoret his Epitome θείων δογμάτων. Lactantius his Inſtitutions. Auguſtine his Enchiridion. Hugo de S. Victore his bookes of the Sacraments, or myſteries of Chriſtian religion. And it were greatly to be wiſhed, that as in other reformed Churches beyond the Sea, they haue a ſet Catechiſme which all men follow: and in the Church of Rome one approoued by the Councell of Trent: ſo there were an vniforme Catechiſme inioyned by publike authoritie to be vſed in all Families, Schooles and Churches in this land, that we might all with one minde and one mouth, iudge and ſpeake the ſame thing.

(o) περὶ ἀρχῶν.

Now as Catechiſmes gathered out of plaine and eaſie places are neceſſarie for the ſimple: ſo Commentaries are as neceſſarie for the vnderſtanding of ſuch places as are more abſtruſe and difficult. Our Sauiour Chriſt (the great Doctor of the Church) hath by his owne practiſe giuen vs a preſident hereof in expounding the law, Math. 5. in expounding all hard parables to his diſciples apart: for the text ſaith, that he vnfolded or expounded them vnto them. Mark. 4. 35. That he interpreted vnto them in all the ſcriptures the things which were written of him. Luk. 24. 27. That he opened vnto them the ſcriptures. v. 32. And they haue beene alwaies ſo accounted in the Church of God. For the Iewes (as we know) had their Peruſhim, the Greeke church their Scholia, the Latin Church their Gloſſes, with other Paraphraſes, and Expoſitions. Neither was it euer called in queſtion by any, ſaue by the phantaſticall Anabaptiſts, who reſt onely vpon immediate reuelations. And ſome preiudicate Papiſts, who hold the conſent of all Catholikes to be the true Scripture, both the gloſſe, and the text, the written word, but inkie Diuinitie, and a dead letter. And certaine arrogant ſpirits, who with Neſtorius ſkorne to reade any Interpreters. But how Commentaries ought to be written, it is not ſo eaſie to define, there beeing ſuch difference as well in regard of the manner of writing, as of the meaſure. For beſides that the Popiſh writers make foure ſeuerall ſenſes of the Scripture, commending Ierome to excell in the Literall, Origen in the Allegoricall, Ambroſe in the Anagogicall, Chryſoſtome in the Tropologicall: they haue aboue fiftie ſeuerall waies of expounding the Scripture, as their owne writers doe record. In the meaſure, we finde ſome too tedious, as the two Alphonſi, Toſtatus, and Salmeron, who vpon euery ſmall occaſion digreſſe from the text, or rather take occaſion to enter into infinite friuolous queſtions, which breede ſtrife rather then godly edifying which is by faith. For there is not ſo ſhort a Chapter in the Bible, vpon which the former mooueth not infinite endleſſe queſtions: whereupon his volumes grow to that bigneſſe, that one contracting his Commentaries vpon S. Math. and drawing it into an Epitome, yet could not ſo abridge it, but that it contained aboue a thouſand pages in folio in the largeſt volume, and ſmalleſt character. The other is ſo ſhort with his 12. volumes vpon the Euangeliſts, that he might well haue contracted leaues into lines, and lines into letters. Which tedious diſcourſes, and impertinent excurſions from the text, ſerue for no other end, but to caſt a miſt before the eies of the reader, and draw (as it were) the vaile of Moſes ouer his face, ſo that he cannot ſee the meaning of the holy Ghoſt. Others on the contrarie are too ſhort, and compendious, offending as much in breuitie, as the former in prolixitie: by name, Emanuel Sa the Ieſuit, whoſe Commentaries vpon the Bible are ſhorter then the text it ſelfe, like to thoſe of Apollinaris, of whome Ierome writeth, that a man which readeth them, would thinke he read Contents of chapters, rather then Commentaries. But as for the manner: the literall ſenſe (which our author here followeth) is the onely ſenſe intended by the ſpirit of God: the Allegoricall, Tropologicall, Anagogicall, beeing but ſeuerall vſes and applications thereof: For the Scripture (conſiſting in the ſenſe, not in the letters) is profitable to teach, and improoue, as Paul ſaith: whereas from the Allegoricall ſenſe no neceſſary argument can be taken (as their owne Doctors confeſſe) either to confirme or confute any point of doctrine: and therefore much leſſe from the Tropologicall, or Anagogicall. And as for the meaſure, in regard of breuitie or prolixitie, the golden meane hath beene iudged by the learned to be the beſt; which is not onely to giue the bare meaning paraphraſtically, but to make collection of doctrine and application of vſes; yet briefely, rather pointing at the chiefe heads, then dwelling long vpon any point. Some are of opinion that a Commentor is onely to giue the literall ſenſe of the place, without making further vſe of application, or inſtruction: To which I could eaſily ſubſcribe, if all the Lords people could propheſie, or if all were able to handle the word of God, the ſword of the ſpirit. For as to an expert Muſitian who is acquainted with the concordes or rules of deſcant, it is as good a direction to haue only the grounds, as if he had euery point pricked out vnto him, being inured to the diuiſion vpon euery point, as it falleth out in the ground: So to him that is acquainted with the word of God, a ſhort and conciſe handling of the ſcripture, may be as good a direction, as if euery point were diſcourſed at large. But becauſe all readers are not ſtrong men in Chriſt, ſome

To

To the courteous Reader.

I Here offer to thy view (gentle Reader) a Comment, and a Supplement: the Comment begunne by an excellent workeman, and drawne in excellent proportion, in all points ſuting to the analogie of faith, and the doctrine of the Orthodoxe Fathers of the Church, being the ſubſtance of his three yeares Lectures vpon the Lords day. If his former workes either of Poſitiue Diuinitie in ſundry of his Treatiſes, or Controuerſall Diuinitie in his Reformed Catholike, or Caſe-Diuinitie in his Caſes of Conſcience, haue miniſtred any comfort vnto thee, or giuen thee content: I doubt not, but theſe Commentaries will abundantly ſatisfie thy expectation. For to omit the varietie of matter, as alſo the breuitie and admirable perſpicuitie, in regard of the manner, (being the chiefeſt commendation of Oecumenius or any Interpreter) in them as in a mirrour thou maiſt more clearely ſee his knowledge in the myſterie of Chriſt; and his dexteritie in exemplifying that by practiſe, which he had formerly taught by (o) precept, then in any of his writings beſides: as hauing a double eminencie aboue the reſt. First, in that they were penned the laſt of all his workes, beeing come to ripenes of iudgement: and that vpon mature deliberation after his Sermons, (as his manner was.) Secondly, in that they were written with his own hand, whereas all his other writings (except ſome ſhort Treatiſes) were taken by ſome diligent auditors, and peruſed by himſelfe. Herein reſembling the Epiſtle it ſelfe, which was written with Pauls owne hand: all the reſt (except that ſhort one to Philemon) by his ſcribes. And as they doe exceede his other Writings, ſo I might ſay (perhaps more truly then diſcreetly) that they ſurpaſſe in this kinde, all the moderne writers that haue gone before them: ſo that hee which will vouchſafe to reade them, ſhall not greatly neede nor deſire any other Interpreter vpon this Scripture: the which I ſpeake not as eſteeming of Antiquity no better worth, then to be put vnder a buſhell, that Noueltie might be ſet vpon the candleſticke: but for that I ſee not; but that Iohn Baptiſt the laſt of all the Prophets, was as goodly a burning and ſhining candle, as any of the reſt; and that he pointed forth Chriſt more diſtinctly then the reſt. But I hope I ſhall not neede to vſe many words in commendation either of the worke, or of the Author, being ſo well knowne and ſufficiently commended by others, for ſoundnes of doctrine, and integritie of life: which (whileſt he was liuing) did parallel each other, his doctrine being a patterne of his life, and his life a counterpaine of his doctrine. And now being dead, his ſauorie writings which he hath left behinde him, breathing forth (as it were) the ſweete ſmell of a ſanctified ſpirit (like a field which the Lord hath bleſſed) haue got him a name neuer to bee forgotten: which giueth him after his death, a ſecond life.

Eph.3.4.

o In his Prophetica

Gal.6.11. Philem.v.18.

Ioh.5.35. Ioh.1.16.

I am further to aduertiſe thee, (good Reader,) that there were ſome places in the originall copie, to which the Author would (no doubt) haue giuen ſome reuiew and correction, if God had drawne out the line of his life but a little longer: which I haue filed and poliſhed according to my poore skill, though very ſparingly, in ſuch places onely as were obſcure, or had any phraſe of doubtfull conſtruction, or otherwiſe ſeemed to be miſtaken: pointing and interlining the reſt, to fit it for the Preſſe. It may be my vnskilfull handling of them, hath depriued them of their due luſtre, yet ſure I am it hath giuen them no tincture.

Touching the Supplement: it was my purpoſe at the firſt, to haue made a ſupplie of that which was wanting, out of the Authors owne writings, as it hath beene done in Aquinas Summes and others: but afterwards perceiuing that his workes already extant, would not affoard me ſufficient matter to furniſh out that argument, I was inforced to take another courſe, and to make a ſupply with courſer ſtuffe of mine owne, as I could. Which if it ſhall ſeeme not to ſute the former in all points, I ſhall deſire thee to conſider, that it is not ſo eaſie a matter for Aſclepiodorus accuſtomed to draw with a cole or chaulke onely, to finiſh a picture begunne by Apelles with ſo curious a penſill: and that it is an argument wherein (I confeſſe) I haue not beene ſo much conuerſant as perhaps in ſome other: neither choſen out of purpoſe to make oſtentation of witte, reading, or inuention: but left as a neceſſary taske to be performed by ſome for the perfecting of the worke, and the good of the Church, if this poore mite may confer any thing to the Treaſurie of the Lords Temple.) And thus hoping that theſe reſpects may intreate for a friendly acceptance at thy hands, and that thou wilt affoard me thy good word for my good will, and a fauourable conſtruction for my paines: I commend it to the bleſſing of the Almightie, and thee to his gracious protection, vnfainedly wiſhing to thee as to my ſelf, the mercy of God in Chriſt Ieſus. August. 10.

Thine in the Lord Ieſus,

THE EPISTLE OF SAINT PAVL TO THE GALATIANS.

The Argument.

TWo things are generally to be conſidered: the occaſion of this Epiſtle, and the ſcope. The occaſion that mooued Paul to write this Epiſtle was; becauſe certen falſe-Apoſtles ſlaundered him both in reſpect of his calling, as alſo in reſpect of his doctrine; teaching that he was no Apoſtle, and that his doctrine was falſe. And by this meanes they ſeduced the Churches of Galatia, perſwading them, that iuſtification and ſaluation was partly by Chriſt, and partly by the Law. The ſcope of the Epiſtle is in three things. Firſt, the Apoſtle defends his calling in the firſt and ſecond chapters. Secondly, he defends the truth of his doctrine; teaching iuſtification by Chriſt alone. And vpon this occaſion, he handles the greateſt Queſtion in the world: Namely, what is that Iuſtice whereby a ſinner ſtands righteous before God, in the 3. and 4. and in the beginning of the fift. Thirdly, he preſcribes rules of good life in the fifth and ſixth chapters.

CHAP. I.

1. Paul an Apoſtle (not of men, nor by man; but by Ieſus Chriſt, and God the Father, who raiſed him from the dead.)

THE Epiſtle hath 3. parts; a Preface, an Inſtruction, & the Concluſion. The Preface is in the fiue firſt verſes: and it hath two parts, an Inſcription, a Salutation.

The inſcription ſets down the perſons that write the Epiſtle, and the perſons to whom it is ſent. The perſons that write are two; Paul and the Brethren.

Paul is mentioned in the firſt verſe. In which, in comely and decent manner he commends himſelfe to the Galatians by his office and function [an Apoſtle] that is, one called to bee a planter and founder of the new Teſtament among the nations. And becauſe the title of an Apoſtle in generall ſignification, may agree to all teachers: therefore hee goes further, and ſets downe the cauſe of his Apoſtleſhip. And firſt he remoooues the falſe cauſes in theſe words [not of men] that is, not called by men as by Authors of my calling, or not called by the authority of men. And in this Paul oppoſeth himſelfe to the falſe-apoſtles, who were called not by God, but by men. Againe, hee ſaith [not by man] that is, not called of God in and by the miniſterie of any meere man. And in this Paul oppoſeth himſelfe to all ordinarie Miniſters of the Goſpel whatſoeuer, who are called of God by man. This done, hee propounds the true cauſe and author of his Apoſtle-ſhip, of whome hee was called immediately. Againſt this it may bee obiected, that Paul was ordained to be an Apoſtle by the impoſition of hands of the Church of Antioch. I anſwer, that this impoſition was rather a confirmation, then a calling. Secondly, they of Antioch had not impoſed hands on Paul, but that they were commaunded by the Spirit of God. Further Paul addes, that hee was called by Chriſt [and God the Father] for three cauſes. The firſt was, to ſignifie the conſent of will in the Father and Chriſt. The ſecond was, to teach vs how wee A are to conceiue of God, namely, that he is the Father, and Ieſus Chriſt, and the holy Ghoſt: for the godhead may not bee conceiued out of the trinitie of perſons. The third is, becauſe the Father is the fountaine of all good things that come to vs by Chriſt. Laſtly, hee ſetteth downe the effect or action of the Father [who raiſed him from the dead] and that for two cauſes. One was to prooue Chriſt to bee the naturall Sonne of God; for hee profeſſed himB ſelfe to be ſo: and that was one cauſe why hee was crucified, and put to death. Now when he was dead, if hee had not beene the Sonne of God indeede, hee had neuer riſen againe, but had periſhed in death. And in that the Father raiſed him againe to life, hee gaue teſtimony that hee was his owne naturall Sonne. And therefore Paul ſaith, Rom. 1. 5. that (Chriſt was declared to be the Sonne of God by the reſurrection from the dead: and he applies the words of the C Pſalm. (Act. 13. 33. Thou art my Sonne, this day haue I begotten thee) to the time of Chriſts reſurrection. Againe, Paul mentions the reſurrection of Chriſt, to note the time of his owne calling: for though the reſt of the Apoſtles were called when Chriſt was in the eſtate of humiliation, yet Paul was called afterwards, when Chriſt was entred into his kingdome; and ſate at the right hand of his Father.

The vſe. Firſt, whereas Paul in the very forefront D of his Epiſtle, begins with his owne calling, I gather, that euery Miniſter of the Goſpel ought to haue a good and lawfull calling. A man cannot preach vnleſſe he be ſent. Rom. 10. 14 Chriſt tooke not vnto him the office of a Mediatour till he was called and ſent of the Father. Therfore the opinion of the Anabaptiſts is fooliſh and phantaſticall, who thinke that euery man may preach that will, without any ſpeciall calling. They alleadge, that the houſe of Stephnas ordaine themſelues to the Miniſtery of the Saints. 1. Cor. 16. 15 ἔταξαν. Anſwer, the meaning of the place is not that they called themſelues, but that they ſet themſelues apart to the miniſterie of the Saints, in the purpoſe and reſolution of their owne hearts. Againe, they alleadge, that all Chriſtians in the new Teſtament, are Kings and Prieſts, Apoc. 5. 10 and the office of the prieſt is to teach. I anſwer, all are prieſts in that they are to offer themſelues in ſacrifice to God: and to teach priuately within their places and callings, as the maſter his ſeruants, the father his children, &c. and to make a confeſſion of their faith, when they are called ſo to doe. Thirdly, they alleadge, that the power of the keies is giuen to the Church. I anſwer, it is indeed; yet ſo as the vſe & adminiſtration thereof belongs to the Miniſters alone, in the diſpenſation of the word.

Secondly, whereas Paul ſaith (not of men, but of Chriſt,) I gather, that euery lawfull calling is of God, and not of men as authors thereof: and that the Right to call belongs to God. Math 9. 38. Eph. 5. 11. Act. 20, 28, The Father thruſts forth labourers into the vineyard: the Sonne giues Paſtors and Teachers: the Holy Ghoſt makes ouer-ſeers. It may bee alleadged, that the Church hath authority to call and ordaine miniſters: I anſwer, that the Churches authority is no more but a miniſtery or ſeruice, whereby it doth teſtifie, declare, and approoue whom God hath called.

Thirdly, whereas Paul thus proclaimes his calling, (Paul an Apoſtle of Ieſus Chriſt,) I gather, that the callings of the Miniſters of the Goſpel muſt bee manifeſt to their owne conſciences, and the conſciences of their hearers. And that for diuers weightie cauſes. Firſt, they are embaſſadours, inſtruments, and the mouth of God: and for this cauſe they are to ſpeake in the name of God, and this they cannot doe, vnleſſe they know themſelues to be called. Secondly, that the calling of the Miniſterie may tend to edification, there is required the aſſiſtance of Gods Spirit in the teacher, the protection of him and his miniſterie, the effectuall operation of the Spirit in the hearts of the hearers. And he that wants the aſſurance of his calling, cannot pray to God in faith for theſe things; neither can he apply the promiſes of God to himſelf. Thirdly, the knowledge of our callings breeds conſcience of our duties, diligence, and the feare of God. Laſtly, knowledge of our callings in the conſciences of the hearers, breedes a reuerence in their hearts, and obedience to the miniſterie of the word. Vpon this, ſome may demaund, how they may know that they are called of God to the miniſtery of the word. Anſwer; they may know it, if they finde three things in themſelues: the firſt is, the teſtimonie of their conſciences, that they entred not for praiſe, honour, lucre; but in the feare of God, with a deſire to glorifie him, and to edifie the Church. The ſecond is, a faculty to doe that which they haue a deſire and will. In this faculty are two things; knowledge of God and his waies, and aptnes to deliuer that which they know. The third is, the Ordination of the Church, which approoues & giues teſtimonie of their will and ability. Hee that hath theſe things, is certainely called of God. Now put the caſe a man wants the firſt of theſe three, becauſe hee entred with euill conſcience, being carried with ambitious and couetous deſires: then I anſwer, that his calling ſtil in reſpect of the Church, is good and lawfull, and when he repents of his badde conſcience, it is alſo accepted of God.

The fourth point to bee obſerued, is that Paul makes three kindes of callings in the Church. One is, when men are called by men, and not by God: and thus are al falſe teachers called. The ſecond is, when men are called of God by the miniſtery of men: thus are all ordinary miniſters of the word called. The third is, when men are called not by men, but by Chriſt immediately. And Paul here ſignifies, that he himſelfe and the reſt of the Apoſtles, were called according to this third way. And in this reſpect, hee puts a difference betweene the Apoſtles, and all the Miniſters of the new Teſtament. For in that they were called immediately, they were alſo taught by immediate inſpiration, and alſo aided by the infallible aſſiſtance of Gods Spirit. And of all this they had promiſes, Matth. 10. 19, 20. Luk. 10. 16. Hence we may gather the certenty of our religion. The eſſentiall note of the Church, is faith: faith ſtands in relation to the word of God: and the word of God is no word vnto vs, vnleſſe wee know it to be ſo: and we know it to be ſo, becauſe it was written by the Apoſtles, who in preaching and writing, could not erre. Secondly, hence I gather, that the doctrine of the Apoſtles is the immediate word of God, becauſe it was giuen by inſpiration, both for matter and words: whereas the doctrine of the Church in ſermons, and the decrees of Councels, is both the word of God, and the word of man. The word of God, as it agrees with the writings of the Apoſtles and Prophets: the word of man, as it is defectiue, & as it is propounded in tearmes deuiſed by man. It may be obiected, that Paul ſpake ſome things of himſelfe, and not from the Lord, 1. Cor. 7. 12. Not the Lord, but I. Anſwer; the meaning is, not the Lord by any expreſſe commaundement, but I by collection and interpretation of Scripture, and that by the aſſiſtance of Gods Spirit, v. 40. Seeing then the writings of the Apoſtles are the immediate and meere word of God, they muſt be obeyed as if they had beene written without man, by the finger of God.

Laſtly, ſeeing it is the property of an Apoſtle, to be called immediately by Ieſus Chriſt, hence it followes, that the authority, office, & function of Apoſtles ceaſed with them, and did not paſſe by ſucceſſion to any other. Therfore it is a falſhood that the Pope of Rome ſucceeds Peter in Apoſtolicall authority, and in the infallible aſſiſtance of the Spirit, when he is in his Conſiſtorie.

And where Paul ſaith hee was called by Ieſus Chriſt, & not by man, that is, meere man, hee giues a pregnant teſtimony that Chriſt is both God and man.

And whereas Paul was called by Chriſt raiſed from the dead, hence I gather the dignity of the Apoſtle Paul aboue all other Apoſtles, in that he was called after the reſurrection of Chriſt, when hee was entred into his kingdome.

The text.

2. And all the brethren that are with me, to the Churches of Galatia;

The Expoſition.

By brethren wee are to vnderſtand, ſuch as ſeparated themſelues from the Pagans, & receiued the faith of Chriſt, 1. Cor. 5. 11. And here more ſpecially ſuch as taught and profeſſed the faith, that is, both paſtors and people, whether of Antioch (as ſome thinke) or of Rome, as others.

And Paul writes his Epiſtle as well in their names as in his owne, and with their conſent, for two cauſes. One was, that he might not be thought to deliuer any priuate doctrine deuiſed of his owne head. And this care hee had alwaies: and therefore taught nothing but that which was in the writings of Moſes and the Prophets, Act. 26. 22. And this was the care of Chriſt: who ſaith, My doctrine is not mine, but his that ſent me, Iohn 7. 16. And at this day, this muſt be the care of the Miniſters of the Goſpell, to deliuer nothing of their owne. Firſt therefore, their doctrines muſt be founded in the writings of the Prophets and Apoſtles: and ſecondly, that they may bee ſure of this, they muſt haue the conſent of the true Church, ſpecially of ſuch as haue beene the Reſtorers of the Goſpell in this laſt age. This rule Paul giues Timothie, to continue in the things which hee had learned of Paul and the reſt of the Apoſtles, 2. Timothie 3. 14. Hence it appeares to be a fault in ſundry priuate perſons, when they reade the Scriptures, to gather priuate opinions, to broch them to the world. This practiſe hath beene the foundation of hereſies and ſchiſmes in the Church.

Secondly, Paul writes with conſent, that he might the better moue and perſwade the Galatians to receiue his doctrine which he is is now to deliuer.

Hence it appeares, that the conſent of Paſtors and people, is of great excellencie. For the better conceiuing of it, and the meaning of the text, I wil handle three points. The firſt is, what is the force of conſent? wherein ſtands it? and where it is now to be found? For the firſt. Conſent is of force to prepare the heart, & to mooue it to beleeue: as Auguſtine ſaith, I had not beleeued the Goſpell, except the authority of the Church had mooued me. And this is all it can doe. For it is the word, that is the obiect and the cauſe of our faith: the word it ſelfe workes in vs that faith, whereby it is beleeued. And Paul in this place vſeth conſent, not to worke a faith in the Galatians, but only to ſtir vp a liking of his doctrine. Two errors of the church of Rome muſt here bee auoided. One, that conſent is a certaine marke of the church. It is falſe: for conſent may be among the wicked, in the kingdome of Antichriſt, Reu. 13. 16 In the kingdome of darknes, all is in peace. Againe, diſſention may bee among the godly; as betweene Paul & Barnabas, Paul & Peter: In the church of Corinth there were ſchiſmes, 1. Cor. 11. Conſent therefore ſimply, vnleſſe it bee ioyned with true faith, and true doctrine, is not of force to declare vnto vs the true Church. The ſecond error is, that the catholike conſent of beleeuers in points of religion, is the true and liuely Scripture, and that the written word is but a dead letter to it, and to be iudged by it for his ſenſe and meaning. But all is contrary. For the written word is the firſt, and perfect patterne of the minde and will of God: and the inward conſent in the hearts of men is but a rude and imperfect extract, and draught of it.

The ſecond point is, wherein ſtands this conſent? it muſt haue his foundatiō in Chriſt, and thence flow to the members, as the oyle from Aarons head, to his garments. Pſal. 133. And it ſtands in three things, conſent in one faith and doctrine: conſent in affection, wherby men be of one heart, Act. 2. 47. conſent in ſpeech, 1. Cor. 1. 10.

The third point is, where it is now to bee found? The Papiſts ſay, that they haue true & perfect conſent among themſelues, and that Fathers and Councels bee on their ſide: and that wee haue no conſent among our ſelues. I anſwer firſt, that they haue not the conſent which they pretend, for the proper points of Popery were not knowne to the Apoſtles, nor to the Apoſtolicall churches, but were taken vp in the ages following by litle and litle. Secondly, ſuch doctrine as the papiſts make articles of faith, are but opinions & coniectures in the Fathers and Councels. Thirdly, the things which the Papiſts holde, are the ſame perauenture in name, but they are not the ſame indeed, with that which the fathers hold, neither are they holden in the ſame manner: as for example; the purgatory which the Fathers holde, is a thing farre different from the purgatory of the Papiſts, & ſo all the reſt. Of conſent they may brag, but they cannot ſhew it. As for our ſelues, we all conſent in the foundation of religion. There is difference about the deſcent of Chriſt into hell. The thing we all hold, namely a deſcent: the difference is in the manner, whether it be vertually or locally. There is differēce about the paines of Chriſt in his agonie and paſſion: yet all acknowledge the infinite merit and efficacie of the death of Chriſt. There is difference about the gouernment of the viſible Church on earth. For the ſubſtance of gouernment all agree, but for the manner of execution and adminiſtration, they doe not. That Chriſt is preſent in the Euchariſt, and that his body and blood is there to bee eaten and drunken, all our Churches agree: and the difference is onely touching the manner of his preſence; namely, whether it be ſpirituall or locall. And this is the mercy of God, that in all our differences the foundation of religion is not raſed. Let vs pray for the continuance, and increaſe of this conſent.

Thus much of the perſons that write: now follow the churches to which the Epiſtle is ſent [to the churches of Galatia.] At this time the Galatians had made a reuolte, and were fallen from iuſtification by the obedience of Chriſt: ſo as Paul *was afraid of them, Chap.*4. and yet he called thē churches ſtill, vſing great meeknes & moderation. His exāple muſt we follow in giuing iudgement of churches of our time. And that we may the better do this, & the better releeue our conſciences, mark three rules. The firſt is, that wee muſt rightly conſider of the faults of churches. Some are faults in maners, ſome in doctrine. If the faults of the Church be in maners, and theſe faults appeare both in the liues of miniſters and people, ſo long as true religion is taught, it is a church, & ſo to be eſteemed: and the miniſters muſt be heard, Mat.23.1. Yet may we ſeparate frō the priuate company of bad men in the church. 1.*Cor.*5.11. and, if it be in our liberty & choiſe, ioyne to churches better ordered. If the error be in doctrine, we muſt firſt conſider, whether the whole church erre, or ſome few therein. If the errour bee in ſome, and not in all, it remaines a church ſtill, as Corinth did, where ſome denied the reſurrectiō, becauſe a church is named of the better part. Secondly, wee muſt conſider, whether the church erre in the foundation, or no. If the errour or errours be beſide the foundation of religion, Paul hath giuen the ſentence, that they which build vpon the foundation haie and ſtubble of erronious opinion, may be ſaued, 1.*Cor.*3.15. Thirdly, inquiry muſt be made, whether the church erre of humane frailty, or of obſtinacie. If it erre of frailty, though the errour bee in the foundation, yet it is ſtil a Church, as appeares by the example of the Galatians. Yet if a church ſhall erre in the foundation openly, and obſtinately, it ſeparates from Chriſt, and ceaſeth to bee a church, and wee may ſeparate from it, and may giue iudgement that it is no church. When the Iewes reſiſted the preaching of Paul, and had nothing to ſay, but to raile, Paul then ſeparated the Church of Epheſus, and Rome from them, Act. 19.8. & 28.28. It may here be demaunded, why Paul writes to the Galatians as brethren, and cals them Churches, ſeeing they haue erred in the foundation, and are as he ſaith, verſe 6. remooued to another Goſpell. I anſwer, he could doe no otherwiſe. If a priuate man ſhall erre, hee muſt firſt be admoniſhed, & then the church muſt be told of it. If he heare not the church, then iudgement may bee giuen, that hee is a Publicane, and not before: much more then, if the Church ſhall erre, there muſt firſt be an examination of the error, and then ſufficient conuiction: and after conuiction, followes the cenſure vpon the Church, & iudgement then may be giuen, and not before. And Paul had now onely begun in this Epiſtle to admoniſh the Church of Galatia. Great therefore is the raſhnes, and want of moderation in many, that haue beene of vs, that condemne our Church for no church, without ſufficient conuiction going before. If they ſay that we haue beene admoniſhed by bookes publiſhed: I ſay againe, there be groſſer faults in ſome of thoſe bookes, then any of the faults that they reprooue in the Church of England: and therefore the bookes are not fit to conuince, ſpecially a Church.

And though Paul call the Galatians Churches of God, yet may wee not hence gather, that the church of Rome is a church of God. The name it may haue; but it doth in truth openly, and obſtinately oppugne the manifeſt principles of Chriſtian religion.

If any demaund what theſe churches of Galatia are? I anſwer, that they were a people of Aſia the leſſe: yet now the country is vnder the dominion of the Turke. This ſhewes, what God might haue done to vs in England long ago, for the contempt of the Goſpel. This againe ſhewes, what deſolation wil befall vs, vnleſſe wee repent and bring forth better fruites of the Goſpel.

3. Grace be with you, and peace from God the Father, and from our Lord Ieſus Chriſt.

4. Who gaue---.

Here is laid downe the ſecond part of the Preface, which is the ſalutation propounded in the forme of a prayer, Grace and peace, &c. Grace here mentioned, is not any gift in man, but grace is Gods, and in God. And it ſignifies his gracious fauour and good wil, whereby he is wel pleaſed with his elect, in, and for Chriſt. Thus Paul diſtinguiſheth the grace of God, from the gift that is by grace, Rom.5.v.15. and ſets grace before the gift as the cauſe of it. Here comes the errour of the Papiſts to bee confuted, which doth teach, that the grace which makes vs gratefull to God, is the infuſed gift of holineſſe and charity: whereas indeede we are not firſt ſanctified, & then pleaſe God: but firſt wee pleaſe God by grace in Chriſt, and then vpon this wee are ſanctified and indued with charity.

Peace is a gift not in God, but in vs: and it hath three parts. The firſt is peace of conſcience, which is quietneſſe and tranquilitie of minde, ariſing of a ſenſe and apprehenſion of reconciliation with God, Romanes 5. verſe 1. The ſecond is, peace with the creatures: and it hath fiue branches. The firſt is, peace with Angels; for man is redeemed by Chriſt, and by meanes of this redemption, ſinfull man is reconciled to good Angels, Coloſſ. 1. 20.

The ſecond is, peace with the godly: who are all made of one heart and mind, Iſai.11.9. The third is, peace with our ſelues: and that is a conformity of the will, affections, and inclinations of mans nature to the renewed minde. The fourth is, peace in reſpect of our enemies. For the decree of God is, Touch not mine annointed, and doe my Prophets no harme. Againe, All things turne to the good of them that loue God. The fift is, peace with the beaſts of the field. God makes a couenant with them for his people. Oſe.2.18. The creatures deſire & wait for the deliuerance of Gods children. Rom.8 They that truſt in God ſhall walke vpon the Lyon and the Baſiliske, Pſal.91.

Pſal.105. 15.
Rom. 8.28.

The third part of peace is, proſperitie and good ſucceſſe: whatſoeuer the righteous man doth, it proſpers. And all things proſpered in the houſe of Potipher, when Ioſeph was his ſteward, becauſe he feared God, Gen.39.1.2.

To proceede, Paul ſets downe the cauſes of grace and peace, and they are two; God the Father, and Ieſus Chriſt. And here it muſt be remembred, that the Father & Chriſt, as they are one God, they are but one cauſe: and yet in regard of the manner of working; they are two diſtinct cauſes. For the Father giues grace from none but himſelfe, by the Sonne; and Chriſt procures grace and peace, and he giues it vnto men from the Father. Furthermore Chriſt is deſcribed by his property, Our Lord, and by his effects in the next verſe.

The vſe. Whereas Paul begins his prayer with grace, we learne that grace in God is the firſt cauſe and beginning of all good things in vs. Election is of Grace. Rom.11, verſ.5. Vocation to ſaluation is of Grace. 2.Tim.1.9. Faith is of Grace. Phil.1.29. Iuſtification is freely by Grace. Rom.3.24. Loue is by Grace. 1.Ioh.4.9. Euery good inclination is of Grace, Phil.1.13. Euery good worke is of Grace. Ezech.36.27. Ephe.2.10. Life euerlaſting is of Grace. Rom.6 23. To auoid any euill is the leaſt good, and euery good is of God. It may be ſaid, that will in man is the cauſe and beginning of ſome good things. Anſwer: In the creating or imprinting of the firſt grace in the heart, will is no cauſe at all, but a ſubiect to receiue the grace giuen. After the firſt grace is giuen, will is an Agent in the receiuing of the ſecond grace, and in the doing of any good worke. Yet this muſt be remembred, that when will is an agent, it is no more but an inſtrument of grace, and grace in God is properly the firſt, middle, & laſt cauſe of grace in vs, and of euery good act. Hence it followes, that there be not any meritorious works that ſerue to prepare men to their iuſtification: and that the Co-operation of mans will with grace in the acte of conuerſion, whereby we are conuerted of God, is but a fiction of the braine of man. Laſtly, this doctrine is the foundation of humilitie: for it teacheth vs to aſcribe all to grace, and nothing to our ſelues.

Secondly we learne, that the chiefe good things to be ſought for, are the fauour of God in Chriſt, and the peace of a good conſcience. Conſider the example of Dauid, Pſal.4.verſ.7. and Pſal.73. verſ.24,25. and of Paul, who accounted all things dung for grace & peace in Chriſt. And the peace of good conſcience is as a guard to keepe our heart and minds in Chriſt, Phil.4.7. The fault of moſt men is, They ſpend their dayes and their ſtrength in ſeeking riches, honours, pleaſures: and they thinke not on grace and peace. After the manner of beaſts, they vſe the bleſſings of God, but they looke not at the cauſe; namely, the grace of God. Our dutie is, aboue al things to ſeeke for grace and peace. The reaſon: true happineſſe, which all men deſire, conſiſts in peace, and is founded in grace: they are ſaid to be happie and bleſſed that mourne, and ſuffer perſecution for iuſtice ſake, Mat.5. becauſe in the middeſt of their ſorrowes and miſeries, they haue the fauour of God, and the peace of good conſcience.

Thirdly, in that grace and peace are ioyned, we learn, that peace without grace is no peace. There is no peace to the wicked, ſaith my God, Iſai.57. laſt. They which make a couenant with hell and death, are ſooneſt deſtroyed. Iſai.28.18. Laughter (ſaith Salomon) is madnes: namely, when it is ſeuered from grace and peace. When men ſay peace, peace, then comes deſtruction, 1.Theſſ.5. The proſperitie of the men of this world, ends in perdition, reade Pſal.73.

Paul ſaith not ſimply that Grace & peace comes from God, but from God the Father, and from Ieſus Chriſt: that he may teach vs rightly to acknowledge & worſhip God. For God is to be acknowledged and worſhipped in the Father, in Chriſt, and in the holy Spirit. It was the fault of the Pagans, and it is the fault of ſundrie Chriſtians, to worſhip an abſolute God, without the Father, and without Chriſt. This fault muſt be amended, for it turnes God to an idol.

Againe when Paul ſaith, that grace proceedes from the Father; and ſecondly from Ieſus Chriſt: hee ſets downe the Order which God obſerueth in the communication of grace and peace. The Father is the fountaine of grace, and giues it from none but from himſelfe. Chriſt againe is (as it were) a conduit, or pipe, to conuaie grace from the Father to vs. Of his fulneſſe we receiue grace for grace, Ioh.1. In him we are complete, Col.2. Election, Iuſtification, Saluation, and al is done in, and by Chriſt, 2.Tim.1.9. The vſe. I. Let them that trauell vnder the burden of a bad conſcience, and a bad life, come to Chriſt by turning from their ſinnes, and by beleeuing in him, and they ſhall obtaine grace, and finde reſt to their ſoules. II. In our miſeries, our hearts may not be troubled ouer-much, but we muſt alwaies moderate our ſorrowes. For if we beleeue in Chriſt, wee ſhall alwaies haue grace & peace: Reade Ioh.14.27. III. We muſt moderate our cares for this life. For if we truſting in Chriſt, haue grace and peace, we ſhall want nothing: reade Pſal, 4. v. 6, 7.

Ieſus Chriſt that giues grace and peace, is called, Our Lord, for two cauſes. One is to teach vs to acknowledge Chriſt aright, & that is, as well to acknowledge him to be our Lord, as well as our Sauiour. He is a Prieſt to procure life, a Prophet to teach the way of life, a Lord to command them to walke in the way of life. The fault of our times: Al men profeſſe Chriſt: yet many allow of no Chriſt, but of their own deuiſing: namely, a Chriſt that muſt be a Sauiour to deliuer them from hell, but not a Lord to commaund them; that they cannot brooke. The ſecond cauſe why Chriſt is called our Lord, is to ſignifie the perſons to whome grace and peace belong, and they are ſuch as acknowledge Chriſt for their Lord, and yeeld ſubiection to him in heart and life. They find reſt to their ſoules, that take vp the yoke of Chriſt in new obedience, and the patient bearing of the Croſſe, Math. 11. v. 29.

4. Who gaue himſelfe for our ſinnes, that he might deliuer vs out of this preſent euill world, according to the will of God our Father.

5. To whome be glorie for euer and euer, Amen.

In theſe words, the ſecond argument is propounded, whereby Chriſt is deſcribed, namely, the effect of Chriſt, which is, that he gaue himſelfe. And he is ſaid to giue himſelfe for two cauſes. Firſt, becauſe he preſented himſelfe as a price and ſacrifice for ſinne to God the Father, Math. 20. 28. Eph. 5. 2. 1. Tim. 2. 6. The ſecond, becauſe he did publikely propound and ſet forth himſelfe to the world, as a ſacrifice and price of redemption, Rom. 3. 25. Ioh. 3. 14. and Act. 4. 12.

In this giuing there are fiue things to be conſidered. The firſt, the giuer, Chriſt: the ſecond, the thing giuen, and that is Chriſt himſelfe. The third, is the end of his giuing, for ſinne, that is, that he might make ſatisfaction for our ſinnes. The fourth is, another end of his giuing, that he might deliuer vs out of this preſent euill world. Here the preſent world ſignifies the corrupt eſtate of men, that liue according to the luſts of their owne hearts. 1. Ioh. 2. 16. And men are here ſaid to be deliuered and taken out of the world, when they are ſeuered from the condition of ſinfull men, by ſanctification and newnes of life, and by diuine protection, whereby they are preſerued from euill after they are ſanctified. Tit. 2. 14. and Ioh. 17. 15. And this deliuerance is not in this life in reſpect of place, but in reſpect of qualitie. The fifth thing is the cauſe that moued Chriſt to giue himſelfe, & that is the will of God.

In the 5. verſe there is ſet downe a corollarie or concluſion, which containes the praiſe of God

The vſe followes. Whereas Chriſt is the giuer of himſelfe, hence it followes that his death and ſacrifice was voluntarie. And this he ſhewed in two things. When he was to be attached he fledde not, but went to a garden in the mount, as his cuſtome was, which was knowne to Iudas, Ioh. 18. 2. And in the very ſeparation of body and ſoule, he cried with a loud and ſtrong voice, which argued that he was Lord of death, and died becauſe his will was to die. This muſt be remembred: For otherwiſe his death had not beene a ſatisfaction for ſinne.

In that Chriſt gaue himſelfe to be a ſacrifice, we learne many things. Firſt, that the worke of redemption excedes the worke of creation. For in the creation, Chriſt gaue the creatures to man; in the redemption he gaue himſelfe, and that as a ſacrifice. Secondly, in that he gaue himſelfe, it appeares that he gaue neither angel, nor meere man, nor any thing out of himſelfe, and that all merits of life, and ſatisfaction for ſinne, are to be reduced to the perſon of Chriſt: and conſequently that there be no humane ſatisfactions for ſin, nor meritorious workes done by vs; becauſe they pertaine not to the perſon of Chriſt, but to our perſons: and they were neuer offered of Chriſt vnto God as merits and ſatisfactions, becauſe he gaue nothing but himſelfe, and the things which appertained vnto his owne perſon. Thirdly, in that Chriſt giues himſelfe, we muſt take, and receiue him with hungring hearts. Nay he is to ſuffer violence of vs, and the violent are to take him to themſelues. Laſtly, in that he giues himſelfe to vs, we againe muſt giue our bodies and ſoules vnto him in way of thankfulneſſe, and dedicate all that we haue or can doe to the good of men. The creatures at our tables preſent vs with their bodies: and ſo muſt we preſent our bodies and ſoules to God.

The firſt end of this giuing is, that Chriſt might be a ſacrifice and ranſome for ſin. The knowledge of this point is of great vſe. Firſt, it workes loue in vs, on this manner. We muſt in minde and meditation come to the croſſe of Chriſt. Vpon the croſſe we are to behold Chriſt crucified, and in his death and paſſion, his ſacrifice, in his ſacrifice for the ſinnes of his enemies, his endles loue: and the conſideration of his loue will mooue vs to loue him againe, and the Father in him. Secondly, the conſideration of his endles paines for our ſins in the ſacrifice of himſelfe, muſt breede in vs a godly ſorrow for them: for if he ſorrow for them, much more we. Thirdly, this knowledge is the true beginning of amendment of life. For if Chriſt gaue himſelfe to redeeme vs from iniquitie, we muſt take vp a purpoſe of not ſinning, and neuer wittingly ſinne more. Laſtly, this knowledge is the foundation of comfort in them that truly turne to Chriſt. For the price is paid for their ſinnes: and they which are eaſed of their ſins are bleſſed, Pſal. 32. 1. And in temptation, they may boldy oppoſe the ſatisfaction of Chriſt againſt hell, death, the law, and the iudgement of God: and

A if at any time they ſinne, they muſt recouer themſelues, and remember that they haue an Aduocate with the Father Ieſus Chriſt the iuſt. 1.Ioh.2.1.

And whereas Paul ſaith, that Chriſt gaue himſelfe for our ſinnes, he teacheth that euery man muſt apply this gift & ſacrifice of Chriſt to himſelfe. This applying is done by faith: and the right manner of application is this. We muſt turne to Chriſt, and in turning by faith apply: and when we apply Chriſt by faith, we muſt withall turne. Faith goeth before conuerſion in order of nature, yet in the order of teaching, and practiſe, they are both together. They which vſe to apply Chriſt and his benefits vnto themſelues, and yet will not B turne themſelues to Chriſt, miſapply, and preſume: becauſe the right apprehenſion of Chriſt, is in the exerciſes of inuocation, and repentance.

The ſecond end, for which Chriſt gaue himſelfe, is that he might take vs out of this euill world. And hence we are taught three things. Firſt, that we muſt be grieued and diſpleaſed at the wickedneſſe of the world as Lot was, 2. Pet.2.7. Secondly, that we muſt not faſhion our ſelues to the wicked liues of the men of this world; but we muſt in all things prooue Rom.12,2. what is the good will of God, and doe it. Thirdly, ſeeing we are taken out of this world, we muſt not dwell in it, but our dwelling muſt be in heauen. Reuel. 13. 6. the beaſt out of the ſea C perſecutes them that dwell in heauen, that is, ſuch as dwell on earth, and for affection haue their conuerſation in heauen. And ſeeing this muſt be ſo, we muſt not loue the world, but loue the comming of Chriſt, and euery day prepare our ſelues againſt the day of death, that we may enter into our owne home.

And whereas Paul cals this world an euill world, hee doth it to ſignifie that there is nothing in men but ſinne, till they bee regenerate, yea that ciuill vertues, and ciuill life, that are excellent in the eyes of men, are no better then ſinnes before God. It is the errour of the Papiſts, that men may thinke and doe ſome D thing that is morally good without grace.

The cauſe that moued Chriſt to giue himſelfe, is the wil of God. Hence it appeares that God giues Chriſt to no man for his foreſeene faith, or workes. For there is no higher cauſe of the will of God. The foreknowledge of things that may come to paſſe, goes before will, but the foreknowledge of things that ſhal come to paſſe, and therefore the foreknowledge of faith and workes, followes the will of God. Becauſe things that ſhall come to paſſe are firſt decreed, and then foreſeene.

The will here mentioned, is ſaid to be the wil of God, that is, the firſt perſon, the Father: for when Chriſt is oppoſed to God, then God ſignifies the father. And he is moſt commonly called God, becauſe he is God without communication of the Godhead from any: whereas the Sonne and holy Ghoſt are God, by communication of Godhead from the Father.

And this God, is called our father by Paul. And hereby he ſignifies that the ſcope of the Goſpel is; firſt, to propound God vnto vs not onely as a creator, but as a father: ſecondly, to inioyne vs to acknowledge him to be our father in Chriſt: and conſequently to carrie our ſelues as dutifull children to him in all ſubiection and obedience. They which doe not this, know not the intent of the Goſpel: and if they know it, in deede they denie it.

The concluſion annexed to the ſalutation. (To whome be glorie for euer) teacheth vs ſo oft as we remember the worke of our redemption by Chriſt, ſo oft for to giue praiſe & thanks to God: yea, all our liues muſt be nothing els but a teſtimonie of thankfulneſſe for our redemption. And all our praiſe and thankes to God, muſt proceede from the ſerious affection of the heart ſignified by the word, Amen: that is, ſo be it.

6. I marueill that you are ſo ſoone remooued away to another Goſpell; from him that hath called you in the grace of Chriſt.

7. Which is not another Goſpell: but that ſome trouble you: and intend to ouerthrow the Goſpell of Chriſt.

Here begins the ſecond part of the Epiſtle, in which he giues inſtruction to the Galatians. And it hath two parts: one concernes doctrine, the other manners. The firſt part touching doctrine, beginnes in this ſixt verſe, and continues to the 13. verſe of the 5. chapter. The ſumme of it is a reproofe of the Galatians for reuolting from the Goſpel: and it is diſpoſed in this ſyllogiſme.

If I be immediately called of God to teach, and my doctrine be true, ye ought not to haue reuolted from my doctrine.

But I was called immediately of God to teach, and my doctrine is true: Therefore ye ſhould not haue reuolted from my doctrine.

The propoſition is not expreſſed: becauſe it was needles. The minor is handled, through the whole Epiſtle. The Concluſion is in the 6. and 7. verſes, the meaning whereof I will briefely deliuer. So ſoone] that is, preſently after my departure, remooued] carried away by the perſwaſions of falſe teachers. To another Goſpell.] to another doctrine of ſaluation, which in the ſpeech and opinion of the falſe teachers, is another manner of Goſpel, more ſufficient and more excellent, then that which Paul hath deliuered. From him] that is, from me beeing an Apoſtle, who haue called you by preaching the Goſpel of Chriſt. In the grace] that is, haue called you freely, without any deſert of yours, to be partakers of the fauour of God in Chriſt. Which is not another] which pretended Goſpel of the falſe Apoſtles, is not indeede another Goſpel from that of Paul, becauſe there is but one, but it is an inuention of the braine of man. But there be ſome] that is, but I plainely perceiue the cauſe of your reuolt, that ſome trouble you, and ſeeke to ouerthrow the Goſpell of Chriſt.

In theſe words, two points are to be conſidered. The firſt is, the manner which Paul vſeth in reproouing the Galatians. He renders their good, and ſaluation, and ſeekes by all meanes their recouerie. And therefore in his reproofe hee doth two things. Firſt, hee reprooues them with meekeneſſe, and tenderneſſe of heart, following his owne rule, Gal. 6.1. for he might iuſtly haue ſaid, Ye may be aſhamed, that ye are remooued to another Goſpell, but he ſaith onely, I marueill, that is, I was well perſwaded of you, and I hoped for better things, but I am deceiued, and I wonder at it. Secondly, he frames his reproofe with great warineſſe, and circumſpection: for he ſaith not, ye of your ſelues doe remooue to another Goſpell, but ye are remooued: and thus he blames them but in part, and laies the principall blame on others. Againe, he ſaith not, ye were remooued, but in the time preſent, ye are remooued, that is, ye are in the act of Reuolting, and haue not as yet altogether reuolted. And hereby he puts them in minde, that although they be in a fault, yet there is nothing done, which may not eaſily be vndone. According to his example, we are in all Reproofes, to ſhew loue, and to keepe loue: to ſhew loue to the party reprooued, & to frame our reproofe, ſo as we may keepe his loue.

The ſecond point is the fault reprooued, and that is, the Reuolt of the Galatians: which was a departure from the calling, wherby they were called to the grace of Chriſt. If it be demanded, what kind of Reuolt this was? I anſwer, there be two kinds of reuolt, particular and generall. Particular, when men profeſſe the name of Chriſt, and yet depart from the faith, in ſome principal points thereof. Of this kind was the Apoſtacie of the tenne tribes, & ſuch is the Apoſtacie of the Romane Church. A generall reuolt is, when men wholly forſake the faith and name of Chriſt. Thus do the Iewes, and Turkes at this day. Againe, a reuolt is ſometime of weakeneſſe, and humane frailtie, and ſometime of obſtinacie. Now the reuolt of the Galatians was onely particular in the points of iuſtification, and of weakeneſſe, and not of obſtinacie: and this Paul ſignifies when he ſaith, they were carried by others. Of this Reuolt, foure things are to be conſidered. The time, ſo ſoone: From whom, or what? from the doctrine of Paul, & conſequently the grace of Chriſt. To what? to another Goſpell. By meanes of whom? but ſome trouble you, &c.

Touching the time, it was ſhort, They were ſoone carried away. This ſhewes the lightneſſe and inconſtancie of mans nature, ſpecially in matter of religion. While Moſes tarried in the mount, Aaron and the people ſet vp a golden calfe, & departed from God. Oſea ſaith, The righteouſneſſe of the Iſraelites, was like the morning dew, which the riſing of the Sun conſumeth, chap. 6.4. Iohn was a burning light, and the Iewes reioyced in this light: that is well; but marke what is added: for an houre or moment, Ioh. 5.35. They which cryed Oſanna to the ſonne of Dauid, ſhortly after cried, Crucifie him, crucifie him. The croſſe and perſecution, will make men call the Goſpel in queſtion, if not forſake it. Luk. 8.13. The multitude of people among vs are like waxe, and are fit to take the ſtampe, and impreſſion of any religion: and it is the law of the land that makes the moſt imbrace the Goſpel, and not conſcience. That we may conſtantly perſeuere in the profeſſion of the true faith, both in life and death, firſt, we muſt receiue the Goſpel ſimply for it ſelfe, becauſe it is the Goſpel of Chriſt, and not for any other by-reſpect. Secondly, we muſt be mortified, & renewed in the ſpirit of our minds, and ſuffer no by-corners in our hearts, where ſecret vnbeleefe, ſecret hypocriſie, and ſpirituall pride may lurke and lye hid from the eyes of men. Heb. 3.12. Thirdly, we muſt not onely be hearers of the word, but alſo doers of it, in the principall duties to be practiſed, of faith, conuerſion, and new obedience.

To come to the ſecond point: when Paul ſaith, the Galatians were remooued from him that called them, that is, himſelfe; he ſhewes Chriſtian modeſtie: becauſe ſpeaking things praiſe-worthie of himſelfe, he ſpeakes in the third perſon: from him that hath called, &c. The like he doth, 2. Cor. 12. I know a man taken vp into the third heauen: that is, himſelfe. And Iohn ſaith, the diſciple that leaned on the breaſt of Chriſt, whome Chriſt loued, asked whome hee meant, Ioh. 13.23. After this practiſe, we are to giue praiſe to God, and to his inſtruments: but neither to praiſe nor diſpraiſe our ſelues. This is Chriſtian ciuilitie to be ioyned with our faith.

Secondly, when he ſaith, who hath called you in the grace of Chriſt, we learne, that the ſcope of the Goſpell is to bring men to the grace of Chriſt. To this very end God hath vouchſafed vs in England the Goſpel more then fortie yeares. And therefore our words, & deeds, and liues, ſhould be ſeaſoned with grace, and ſauour of it, and ſhew forth the grace of God. Secondly, we owe vnto God great thankefulneſſe, and wee can neuer be ſufficiently thankfull for this benefite, that God calles vs to his grace. But it is otherwiſe: the ſunne is a goodly creature: yet becauſe we ſee it daily, it is not regarded: and ſo it is with the grace of God.

Thirdly, the Galatians are remooued not onely from the doctrine of Paul, but alſo from the grace of God. And the reaſon is, becauſe they ioyned the workes of the law, with Chriſt and his grace in the cauſe of their iuſtification and ſaluation. Here it muſt be obſerued, that they which make an vnion of grace and workes, in the cauſe of iuſtification, are ſeparated from the grace of God. Grace admits no partner, or fellow. Grace muſt be freely giuen euery way, or it is no way grace. Hence it fol-

A followes, that the preſent Church of Rome is departed from the grace of God, becauſe it makes a concurrence of grace and workes, in the iuſtification of a ſinner before God: and we may not make any reconciliation with that Church in religion; becauſe it is become an enemie of the grace of God.

The third point is, To what thing the Galatians reuolt? to another Goſpell, that is, to a better Goſpel, then that which Paul taught, compounded of Chriſt and the workes of the law. And this forged Goſpell the falſe Apoſtles taught, and the Galatians quickly receiued. Here we ſee the curious niceneſſe & daintineſſe of mans nature, that cannot be con- B tent with the good things of God, vnleſſe they be framed to our minds; and if they pleaſe vs for a while, they doe not pleaſe vs long, but we muſt haue new things. Our firſt parents not content with their firſt eſtate, muſt needes be Leu.10.1. as God. Nadab and Abihu offer ſacrifice to God, but the fire muſt be of their owne ap- 2.Reg.16.11. pointment. King Achas will offer ſacrifice to God, but the altar muſt be like the altar at Damaſcus. Falſe-teachers beſide the doctrine Reu.2.24. of the Apoſtles, had profound learning of their owne. The Iewes beſide the written law of Moſes, muſt haue their Cabala, containing, as they ſuppoſed, more myſticall and excellent doctrines. The Papiſts beſide the written word, ſet vnwritten Tradition, which they C make equall with the Scripture. We that profeſſe the Goſpell, are not altogether free from this fault. We like, that Chriſt ſhould be preached: but ſermons are not in common reputation learned, neither doe they greatly pleaſe the moſt, vnleſſe they be garniſhed with skill of arts, tongues, and varietie of reading; this curiouſneſſe and diſcontentment the Lord Deut.22.10.11. condemnes, when he forbids plowing with the oxe, and the aſſe, and the wearing of garments of linſi-wolſie. And it is the worſt kind of diſcontentment, that is in things pertaining to ſalua- 2.Tim.4.5. tion. It is called by Paul, the itching of the eare, and it is incident to them that follow their owne luſts. The remedie of this ſinne, is to learne the firſt leſſon, that is to be learned of D them that are to be good ſchollers in the ſchoole of Chriſt: and that is, to feele our pouertie, and in what extreame neede we ſtand of the death and paſſion of Chriſt: and withall to hunger and thirſt after Chriſt, as the bread, and water of life. Reade Iſa. 44.3. Ioh. 7.37. Pſal. 25.11. the example of Dauid, Pſal. 143. 6. When the heart and conſcience hath experimentally learned this leſſon, and not the braine, and tongue alone: then ſhall men begin to ſauour the things of God, and diſcerne of things that differ, and put a difference betweene grace and workes, mans word & Gods word; and for the working of our ſaluation, eſteeme of mans workes, and mans word, as offols that are caſt to dogges.

Paul addes, which is not another Goſpell, that is, though it be an other goſpel in the reputation of falſe teachers, yet indeede it is not another, but is a ſubuerſion of the Goſpel of Chriſt. Hence I gather, that there is but one Goſpel, one in number and no more. For there is but one way of ſaluation by Chriſt, whereby all the Elect are ſaued, from the beginning of the world to the end, Act. 15.11. 1.Cor.10.3. It may be demanded, how they of the old Teſtament, could be partakers of the bodie, and blood of Chriſt, which then was not. Anſw. The bodie, and blood of Chriſt, though then it was not ſubſiſting in the world, yet was it then preſent to all beleeuers, two waies: firſt, by diuine acceptation: becauſe God did accept the incarnation and paſſion of Chriſt to come, as if it had beene accompliſhed. Secondly, it was preſent to them by meanes of their faith, which is a ſubſiſtance of things that are not ſeene: and conſequently it makes them preſent to the beleeuing heart.

Againe, hence it appeares, to be a falſhood, that Euery man may be ſaued in his owne religion, ſo be it, he hold there is a God, & that he is a rewarder of them that come vnto him. For there is but one Goſpel: & if the former opinion were true, then ſo many opinions, ſo many Goſpels. Paul ſaith, that the world by her wiſdome could not know God in his wiſedome, and for this cauſe he ordained the preaching of the word to ſaue men, 1.Cor.1.21. And though he that comes to God muſt beleeue that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that come to him: yet not euery one that beleeues generally that there is a God, and that he is a rewarder of them that come to him, comes to God: for this the diuels beleeue.

The fourth point, is concerning the Authors of this Reuolt: and Paul chargeth them with two crimes. The firſt is, that they trouble the Galatians, not onely becauſe they make diuiſions, but becauſe they trouble their conſciences ſetled in the Goſpel of Chriſt. It may be alleadged, that there be ſundry good things which trouble the conſcience, as the preaching of the law, the cenſure of excommunication, the authoritie of the magiſtrate in compelling Recuſants to the congregation. I anſwer, theſe things indeede trouble the conſciences of men, but they are euil conſciences: and the end of this trouble is, that they may be reformed, and made good. But the crime wherewith the falſe-apoſtles are charged, is, that they trouble the conſciences of the godly, or the good conſciences of men. Here then is ſet downe a note, whereby falſe and errone-doctrines, may be diſcerned: namely, that they ſerue onely to trouble, and diſquiet the good conſcience. And by this we ſee the Romane religion to bee corrupt and vnſound: for a great part of it tends this way. Iuſtification by workes is a yoke that none could euer beare, Act. 15. The vow of ſingle life is a ſnare, or as the nooſe in the halter to ſtrangle the ſoule, 1. Cor. 7. 34. So is the doctrine which teacheth that men after their conuerſion, muſt ſtill remaine in ſuſpence of their ſaluation: and that pardon of ſinne, is neceſſarily annexed to confeſſion in the eare, and to ſatisfaction for the temporall puniſhment of ſinne in this life, or in purgatorie.

On the contrarie, the Goſpell of Chriſt (as here it appeares) troubles not the good conſcience, but it brings peace and perfect ioy. Ioh. 15. 11. Rom. 15. 4. And the reaſon is plaine: for it miniſters a perfect remedie for euery ſinne, and comfort ſufficient for euery diſtreſſe. And this is a note whereby the Goſpel is diſcerned from al other doctrines whatſoeuer.

The ſecond crime wherewith the falſe-apoſtles are charged, is, that they ouerthrow the Goſpell of Chriſt: the reaſon of this charge muſt be conſidered. They did not teach a doctrine flat contrary to the Goſpel of Chriſt: but they maintained it in word, and put an additon to it of their owne out of the law, namely, iuſtification, and ſaluation, by the workes thereof. And by reaſon of this addition, Paul giues the ſentence, that they peruert and turne vpſide downe the Goſpel of Chriſt. Vpon this ground it appeares that the Popiſh religion is a flat ſubuerſion of the Goſpel of Chriſt: becauſe it ioynes iuſtification by workes, with free iuſtification by Chriſt. The excuſe, that the workes that iuſtifie, are workes of grace, and not of nature, will not ſerue the turne. For if Chriſt by his grace make workes to iuſtifie, then is he not onely a Sauiour, but alſo an inſtrument to make vs ſauiours of our ſelues: he beeing the firſt, and principall Sauiour, and we ſubordinate ſauiours vnto him. But if Chriſt haue a partner in the worke of iuſtification, and ſaluation, he is no perfect Chriſt.

8. But though we, or an Angell from heauen, preach vnto you otherwiſe, then that which we haue preached vnto you, let him be accurſed.

9. As we ſaid before, ſo ſay I now againe: if any man preach vnto you otherwiſe then ye haue receiued, let him be accurſed.

An obiection might be made againſt the former concluſion, thus: But the moſt excellent among the Apoſtles, Iames, Peter, Iohn, (by your leaue) teach an other Goſpell then that which Paul had preached. To this obiection he makes anſwer in this verſe negatiuely, that whoſoeuer teacheth another Goſpell is accurſed, whatſoeuer he be. In this anſwer three things are to be conſidered: a ſinne, the puniſhment therof, and a ſuppoſition ſeruing to amplifie the ſinne.

The ſinne is to preach in the cauſe of our iuſtification, any other thing beſide that or diuers to that which Paul taught the Galatians, though it be not contrary. Thus much the very words import: and the ſame words are againe vſed in the next verſe. And Paul bids Timothie, auoide them that teach otherwiſe, that is, any diuers doctrine as neceſſarie to ſaluation, beſide that which he taught, 1. Tim. 6. 3. And the reaſon of this ſinne, is, becauſe God hath giuen this commaundement, We may not depart from his word, to the right hand or to the left; neither may we adde thereto, or take therefrom, Ioſu. 1. v. 7. 8. Deut. 4. and 12. Before I gather any doctrine hence, this ground is to be laid downe, that Paul preached all the counſell of God, Act. 20. 27. And that which he preached, beeing neceſſarie to ſaluation, he wrote, or ſome other of the Apoſtles, Ioh. 20. 31. This beeing graunted (which is a certen truth) two maine concluſions follow. One, that the Scriptures alone by themſelues, without any other word, are aboundantly ſufficient to ſaluation, whether we regard doctrines of faith, or manners. For he that deliuers any doctrine out of them, and beſide them, as neceſſarie to be beleeued, is accurſed.

The ſecond concluſion is, that vnwritten Traditions, if they be tendered to vs, as a part of Gods word, and as neceſſarie to ſaluation, they are abominations, becauſe they are doctrines beſide the Goſpel that Paul preached. And the Romane religion goes to the ground: becauſe it is founded on Tradition out of, and beſide the written word. Learned Papiſts, to helpe themſelues, make a double anſwer. One is, that they are accurſed which preach otherwiſe then Paul preached, and not they which preach otherwiſe then he writ. But it is falſe which they ſay, for that which he preached, he writ. Auguſtine hauing relation to the text in hand, ſaith, that he is accurſed which preacheth any thing * beſide that which we haue receiued in the legall and Euangelicall ſcriptures. Againe, he ſaith, that he muſt * not teach any more, or any other thing, then that which is in the Apoſtle, whoſe wordes he muſt expound.

* Præter-quam Contra Petilian l. 3. c. 6. De bono viduitatis c. 1.
* Non aliud quid amplius.

The ſecond anſwer is, that to preach otherwiſe, is to preach contrarie. Becauſe (as they ſay) precepts and doctrines, may be deliuered if they be diuerſe, and not contrarie. As the Goſpel of Iohn, and the Apocalyps, were written after this Epiſtle to the Galatians, which are diuers to it, though not contrarie: the like they ſay of the Canons of Counſels: and that Paul, Rom. 16. 18. put (παρ' ὃ) beſide for contrarie. I anſwer thus. The præpoſition (παρὰ) tranſlated, beſide or otherwiſe, ſignifieth thus much properly: and we are not to depart from the proper ſignification of the words, vnleſſe we be forced by the text. And the place in the Romanes in his proper and full ſenſe, muſt be turned thus: Obſerue the authors of offences, beſide the doctrine which ye haue learned. And Pauls minde is, that they ſhould be obſerued, that teach any other diuers, or diſtinct doctrine, though it be not directly contrary. The Goſpel of Iohn and the Apocalyps, written afterward, propound not any diuers doctrine, pertaining to the ſaluation of the ſoule, but one and the ſame in ſubſtance, with that which Paul wrote. The Canons of Councels, are traditions touching order and comelineſſe, and they preſcribe not any thing, as neceſſarie to iuſtification, and ſaluation. Againe, the Embaſſadour that ſpeakes any thing beſide his commiſſion, is as wel in fault, as he that ſpeakes the contrarie: though not ſo much.

The ſecond point is, the puniſhment [Let him be accurſed] Here are three things to be conſidered. The firſt, what is it to be accurſed? Anſw. God hath giuen to the Church, the power of binding, and it hath foure degrees, Admonition, Suſpenſion from the Sacraments, Excommunication, Anathema. And this laſt is a cenſure or iudgement of the Church, wherby it pronounceth a man ſeuered from Chriſt, and adiudged to eternall perdition, Rom. 9. 5. 1. Cor. 16. 22. And he is here ſaid to be accurſed, that ſtands ſubiect to this cenſure. The ſecond part is, who are to be accurſed? Anſw. Hainous offendours, and deſperate perſons, of whoſe amendment, there is no hope. And therefore this iudgement is ſeldome pronounced vpon any. We finde but one example in the new Teſtament: Paul accurſed Alexander the Copper-ſmith, 2. Tim. 4. 14. And the Church afterward accurſed Iulian the Emperour. Other examples we finde not any.

The third point, how the Church ſhould accurſe any man, and in what order? Anſw. In this action, there be foure iudgements. The firſt is Gods, which is giuen in heauen, whereby he doth accurſe obſtinate and notorious offenders. The ſecond iudgement, pertaines to the Church vpon earth, which pronounceth them accurſed, whom God accurſeth. It may be ſaid, how comes the Church to know the iudgement of God, whereby he accurſeth? Anſw. The word ſets downe the condition of them, that are accurſed; and experience, and obſeruation findes out the perſons, to whome theſe conditions are incident. The third iudgment is giuen in heauen, whereby God ratifies and approoues the iudgement of the Church according to that, Whatſoeuer ye binde on earth ſhall be bound in heauen. The laſt iudgement, pertaines to euery priuate perſon, who holds him in execration, whom God hath accurſed, and the Church hath pronounced ſo to be. If he heare not the Church, the Church pronounceth him to be as a Publican and heathen, and then (ſaith Chriſt) let him be a Publican to thee. Thus muſt the text be vnderſtood.

Hence we are taught, to be carefull in preſeruing the puritie of the Goſpel: becauſe the corrupters thereof are to be accurſed as the damned ſpirits. Hence againe it appeareth, that the Church in accurſing, doth but exerciſe a Miniſterie, which is, to publiſh and teſtifie, who are accurſed of God. Laſtly, hence we learne, that priuate perſons muſt ſeldome vſe curſing: becauſe God muſt firſt accurſe, and the Church publiſh the ſentence of God, before we may with good conſcience vtter the ſame. They therefore, which in a rage accurſe themſelues, and others, deale wickedly. We are called ordinarily to bleſſing, and not to curſing.

The third point is, the ſuppoſition of things impoſſible, on this manner. Put the caſe, that I Paul, or any other of the Apoſtles, ſhould teach otherwiſe then I haue taught you: neither I, nor they muſt be beleeued, but be accurſed. Againe, put the caſe, that an Angell from heauen ſhould come and preach otherwiſe then Paul preached to the Galatians, who muſt be beleeued? Paul, or the Angel? the anſwer is, not the Angel, but Paul: and the Angel muſt be accurſed. And the reaſon is, becauſe Paul in preaching and writing, did repreſent the authoritie of God, & God puts his owne authoritie vnto the word which he vttered: and he was aſſiſted by the extraordinarie, immediate, and infallible aſſiſtance of Gods Spirit. From this ſuppoſition, ſundrie things may be learned. The firſt, that the word preached and written by Paul, is as certen, as if it had bin written by God himſelfe, immediately. It may be obiected, that Paul ſaith, 1. Cor. 7. 12. To the remnant, I ſpeake, not the Lord. I anſwer, Paul ſaith, I, not the Lord, not becauſe he was deceiued in his aduiſe, for he ſpake by the Spirit of God, chap. 7. verſ. 40: but becauſe he gaue counſell in a caſe of marriage, wherof the Lord had made no expreſſe law. The meaning then is this, I ſpeake by collection from the law of God, and not the Lord, by any particular and expreſſe law.

Secondly it appeares hence, that the articles of faith, or the doctrine of the Goſpel, is in excellencie and authoritie, aboue all men and Angels. And hence it followes, that the Church and Councels, cannot authorize the word of God, in the minde and conſcience of any man. For the inferiour, & dependent authoritie, addes nothing to that which is the principall, and ſuperiour authoritie. Therefore, the opinion of the Papiſts is falſe, that we cannot know the Scripture to be the word of God, but by the teſtimonie of the Church: as though the letter of a Prince, could not be knowne to be ſo, without the teſtimonie of the ſubiects. The principall authoritie is ſufficient in it ſelfe, to authorize it ſelfe, without externall teſtimonie.

Thirdly, ſince the daies of the Apoſtles, ſundrie doctrines haue bene receiued and beleeued, touching interceſſion of Saints, prayer to the dead, and for the dead, Purgatorie, and ſuch like: and theſe doctrines haue bene confirmed by ſundry reuelations. And we learne, what to iudge both of the doctrines, and of the reuelations, namely, that they are accurſed: becauſe the doctrines are beſide the written word, and the reuelations tend to ratifie and confirme them.

Laſtly, hence we learne, what to thinke of the writings of Papiſts, and Schoolemen, whereof ſome are called Seraphicall, Cherubicall, as that Angelicall Doctour: They broch, and maintaine ſundrie things, beſide that which the Apoſtles preached, and wrote; as iuſtification by works, and a mixture of the law and the Goſpel: they giue too little to grace, and too much to mans will. In this regard, Paul hath giuen the ſentence, that they are accurſed. For this cauſe, ſtudents of diuinity, are warily to reade them with prayer, that they bee not led into temptation, and they are to vſe them onely in the laſt place. And they are greatly to bee blamed, that preferre them almoſt aboue all writers: they ſhew that they haue little loue of the Goſpell in their hearts.

9. As we ſaid before, ſo ſay I now againe: if any man preach vnto you otherwiſe then ye haue receiued, let him be accurſed.

In theſe words Paul repeates againe that which he ſaid before: and the repetition is not in vaine, but for three weightie cauſes; the firſt is, to ſignifie that hee had ſpoken not raſhly, but aduiſedly, whatſoeuer he had ſaid before: the ſecond is, that the point deliuered, is an infallible truth of God: the third is, to put the Galatians and vs in minde, that we are to obſerue and remember that which he hath ſaid, as the foundation of our religion, namely, that the doctrine of the Apoſtles is the onely infallible truth of God, againſt which we may not liſten to Fathers, Councels, or to the very Angels of God. If this had bin remembred and obſerued, the Goſpel had continued in his purity after the daies of the Apoſtles.

In this verſe one thing is to bee obſerued. Before Paul ſaid, they are accurſed which teach otherwiſe then hee had taught: here he ſaith, they are accurſed which teach otherwiſe then the Galatians had receiued. Whereby it appeares, that as Paul preached the Goſpel of Chriſt, ſo the Galatians receiued it. And they receiued it: firſt in that they had care to know it: ſecondly, in that they gaue the aſſent of faith vnto it, as to a truth: againſt which, the very Angels could take no exceptiō. And for this alſo are the Theſſalonians commended, that the Goſpel was to them in power and much aſſurance. The great fault of our times is, that whereas the Goſpell is preached, it is not accordingly receiued. Many haue no care to know it: and they which know it, giue not vnto it the aſſent of faith, but only holde it in opinion. And this is the cauſe that there is ſo ſmall fruit of the Goſpell. This ſinne will at length haue his puniſhment. The places that are not ſeaſoned by the waters of the Sanctuarie, are turned to ſalt-pits, Ezec. 47. 11.

10. For now whether preach I men or God? or ſeeke I to pleaſe men? for if I ſhould yet pleaſe men, I were not the ſeruant of Chriſt.

The interrogations in this place, do I preach? and, doe I pleaſe? are in ſtead of earneſt negations: I doe not preach, I doe not pleaſe. And when he ſaith, doe I now preach men, or God? his meaning is this: Heretofore I haue preached the Traditions of men, but now beeing an A- A poſtle, I preach not the doctrine of men, but of God. And when he ſaith, doe I ſeeke to pleaſe men? his meaning is this; I doe not make this the ſcope of my miniſterie, to frame and temper my doctrine ſo, as it may bee ſutable and pleaſing to the affections of men. For otherwiſe we are to pleaſe men in that which is good, and for their good, 1. Cor. 10. 33. Rom. 15. 2.

This verſe containes a double reaſon of his former ſpeech; and of the repetition thereof. The firſt is this: Though heretofore I taught the Traditions of men, yet now I teach the word not of men, but of God: and therefore I accurſe them that teach otherwiſe. The ſecond is framed thus: If I ſhould yet pleaſe men, I were not the ſeruant of God: but I am B the ſeruant of God: therefore I ſeeke not to pleaſe men, but if need ſhall be, I wil denounce curſes againſt them.

Here firſt wee ſee the proper matter of the Miniſtery, which is not the word or doctrine of man, but of God. By this the Miniſters of the Goſpell are taught to handle their doctrine with modeſty and humility, without oſtentation, with reuerence, and with a conſideration of the maieſtie of God, whoſe the doctrine is which they vtter, that God may bee glorified, 1. Pet. 4. 11.

Secondly, the hearers in hearing are to know, that they haue to deale with God: and that they are to receiue the doctrine taught not as the word of man, but as the very word of God, C as the Theſſalonians did, 1. Theſſ. 2. 13. The want of this cōſideratiō, is the cauſe that ſome contemne the miniſtery of the word, and others are not touched & mooued in hearing.

Againe, here is ſet downe the right manner of diſpenſing the word, which muſt not be for the pleaſing of men, but of God. Hence it appeares, that Miniſters of the Goſpel, muſt not be men-pleaſers, nor applie, and faſhion their doctrine to the affections, humours, and diſpoſitions of men, but keepe a good conſcience, and doe their office. The Lord tels Ieremie, he muſt not turne to the people, but the people muſt turne to him, Ier. 15. 19. Thus God ſhall be with them, and they ſhall bring forth much fruit.

D And the people muſt know it to be a good thing for them, not to be pleaſed alwayes by their Miniſters. The miniſterie of the word muſt be as a ſacrificing knife, to kill and mortifie the old Adam in vs, that we may liue vnto God. A ſicke man muſt not alwayes haue his mind, but he muſt often be croſſed, and reſtrained of his deſire: and ſo muſt we that are ſicke in our ſoules in reſpect of our ſinnes. It is a fault therefore of men that deſire to bee pleaſed, and to haue matters ſmoothed ouer of their teachers. This is Dauids balme, which hee wiſheth may neuer bee wanting to his head, Pſal. 141. 5.

The end of this verſe ſets downe a memorable ſentence, That if we ſeeke to pleaſe men, wee cannot be the ſeruants of God.

Hence I gather, that our nature is full of rebellion, and enmitie againſt God, becauſe they which pleaſe men, cannot pleaſe God. Againe, here is ſet downe what is the hurt that commeth by pride and ambition. It keepes men that they cannot bee the ſeruants of Chriſt. Ye beleeue not (ſaith Chriſt) becauſe ye ſeeke glorie one of another, Iohn 5.44. Ambition ſo fils the minde with vanitie, and the heart with worldly deſires, that it cannot thinke or deſire to pleaſe God. Wherefore he that would bee a faithfull Miniſter of the Goſpell, muſt denie the pride of his heart, and bee emptied of ambition, and ſet himſelfe wholly to ſeeke the glorie of God in his calling. And generally, hee that would bee a faithfull ſeruant of Chriſt, muſt ſet God before him as a Iudge, and conſider that he hath to deale with God; and he muſt turne his minde, and ſenſes from the world, and all things therein, to God: and ſeeke aboue all things to approue his thoughts, deſires, affections, and all his doings vnto him.

Laſtly, the profeſſion of the ſeruant of God, is here to be obſerued in the example of Paul, who ſaith, Doe I now preach men? and, doe I yet pleaſe men? as if he had ſaid, I haue done thus and thus, I haue preached the Traditions of men heretofore, and I haue pleaſed men in perſecuting the Church of God: but I doe not ſo ſtill, neither will I. And he that can ſay the like with good conſcience, I haue ſinned thus and thus heretofore, but now I doe not, neither will I ſinne as I haue done, is indeede the ſeruant of God.

V. 11. Now I certifie you, brethren, that the Goſpell which was preached by me, was not after man.

The meaning is this: that it may the better appeare, that I haue iuſtly accurſed them which teach any other Goſpel, and iuſtly reprooued you for receiuing it: I giue you to vnderſtand, that the Goſpel which I preached was not after man, that is, not deuiſed by man, or preached of me by mans authoritie, but it was from God, and preached by the authoritie of God. And this ſenſe appeares by verſe 10. and 12.

In theſe words is laid downe the reaſon of the concluſion, or the aſſumption of the principall argument, which was on this manner. If I be called to teach, and that immediately of God, & my doctrine be true, then ye ought not to haue reuolted from the Goſpel which I preached: but I was called to teach immediately of God, and my doctrine is true. The firſt part of this aſſumption is here ſet downe, and handled to the ende of the ſecond chapter: and the concluſion (as we haue heard) was ſet downe in the premiſſes.

Hence two maine points of doctrine that are of great conſequent, may bee gathered. The firſt is this: It is a thing moſt neceſſarie, that men ſhould be aſſured and certified, that the doctrine of the Goſpell, and the Scripture is not of man, but of God. This is the firſt thing which Paul ſtands vpon in this Epiſtle. It may be demaunded, how this aſſurance may bee obtained. I anſwer thus: For the ſetling of our conſciences, that Scripture is the word of God, there be two teſtimonies. One is the Euidence of Gods Spirit, imprinted and expreſſed in the Scriptures: and this is an excellencie of the word of God aboue all words, and writings of men and Angels: and containes thirteene points. The firſt is, the puritie of the law of Moſes; whereas the lawes of men, haue their imperfections. The ſecond is, that the Scripture ſets downe the true cauſe of all miſery, namely ſinne, and the perfect remedy, namely, Chriſts death. The third is, the Antiquity of Scripture, in that it ſetteth downe an hiſtorie from the beginning of the world. The fourth is, prophecies of things in ſundrie bookes of Scripture, which none could poſſibly fore-tell, but God. The fifth is, the confirmation of the doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles by miracles, that is, workes done aboue, and contrarie to the ſtrength of nature, which none can doe but God. The ſixth is, the conſent of all the Scriptures with themſelues, whereas the writings of men are often at iarre with themſelues. The ſeauenth is, the confeſſion of enemies, as namely, of heritickes, who in oppugning of Scriptures, alleadge Scriptures, and thereby confeſſe the truth thereof. The eighth is, an vnſpeakable deteſtation that Sathan and all wicked men beare to the doctrine of Scripture. The ninth is, the protection and preſeruation of it, from the beginning to this houre, by a ſpeciall prouidence of God. The tenth is, the conſtant confeſſion of Martyrs, that haue ſhedde their blood for the Goſpell of Chriſt. The eleauenth is, that fearefull puniſhments and iudgements haue befallen them, that haue oppugned the word of God. The twelfth is, the holines of them that profeſſe the Goſpell. The laſt is, the effect and operation of the word: for it is an inſtrument of God, in the right vſe whereof, wee receiue the teſtimonie of the Spirit, of our adoption, and are conuerted vnto God. And yet neuertheleſſe, the word which conuerteth, is contrarie to the wicked nature of man.

The ſecond teſtimonie is, from the Prophets and Apoſtles, who were Embaſſadours of God, extraordinarily to repreſent his authoritie vnto his Church, and the pen-men of the holy Ghoſt, to ſet downe the true and proper word of God. And the Apoſtles aboue the reſt, were eye-witneſſes, and eare-witneſſes, of the ſayings & doings of Chriſt: and in that they were guided by the infallible aſſiſtance of the Spirit, both in preaching, and writing, their Teſtimonie touching the things which they wrote, muſt needes be authenticall. If it be ſaid, that counterfeit writings, may bee publiſhed to the world, vnder the name of the Apoſtles. I anſwer, if they were in the daies of the Apoſtles, they, by their authority cutte them off: and therefore Paul ſaith, If any teach otherwiſe, let him be accurſed. And they prouided, that no counterfeit ſhould bee foiſted vnder their names, after their departure. And hereupon, Iohn, the laſt of the Apoſtles, concludes the new Teſtament with this clauſe, If any man ſhall adde vnto theſe things, God ſhall adde vnto him the plagues that are written in this booke, Reu. 22. 18. If any demaund, of what value is the teſtimonie of the Church. I anſwer, conſider the Church diſtinct from the Apoſtles, and then the teſtimonie thereof is farre inferiour to the Apoſtolicall teſtification, concerning the word of God. For the Church is to bee ruled by the teſtimonie of the Apoſtles, in the written word: and the ſentence of the Church, is not alwaies, and altogether certen. not ioyned with that euidence of the Spirit, wherewith euery teſtimonie Apoſtolicall is accompanied.

Furthermore, that wee may be capable of theſe two teſtimonies, and take the benefite thereof, we our ſelues for our parts, muſt yeeld ſubiection & obedience to the word of God. In this our obedience, ſhall we be aſſured, that it is indeede of God, as our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, Ioh. 7. v. 17.

This doctrine touching the certentie of the word, is of great vſe. For when the minde and conſcience, by meanes of the double teſtimonie before mentioned, plainely apprehends it, there is a foundation laid of the feare of God, and of iuſtifying faith: and before wee be aſſured, that the Scripture is the word of God, it is not poſſible, that we ſhould conceiue, & holde a faith in the promiſes of God. And the want of this certenty in many, is an open gappe to hereſie, apoſtaſie, Atheiſme, & all iniquitie. Secondly, by this it appeares, that the Church of Rome erreth groſſely, in teaching, that wee cannot know the Scripture to be the word of God, without the teſtimony of the Church, in theſe latter times, and that without it, wee could haue no certentie of religion; whereas the teſtimonie of the Spirit, or the euidence thereof in Scripture, with the teſtimonie of the Apoſtles, will doe the deede ſufficiently, though the Church ſhould be ſilent.

The ſecond maine point is, That it is neceſſarie, that men ſhould bee aſſured in their conſciences, that the calling, and authoritie of their teachers, is of God. It may bee demaunded, how we in theſe daies ſhould be aſſured hereof. I anſwer thus: a diuers conſideration muſt bee had of the firſt Miniſters of the Goſpell, and of their ſucceſſours. Touching the firſt Miniſters and planters of the Goſpell, within theſe 80. yeares. We muſt conſider, that a calling is of two ſorts: Ordinarie, and Extraordinarie. Ordinarie is, when God cals by the voices, and conſent of men, following the lawes of his word. Extraordinarie is, when God cals otherwiſe. And this he doth three waies: firſt, by immediate voice. Thus God called Abraham and Moſes, and thus were the Apoſtles called. The ſecond is, by the meſſage of a creature. Thus Aaron and the tribe of Leui was called by Moſes: Eliſeus by Elias: Philip was called by an angell to baptize the Eunuch, Act. 8. 26. The third is, by inſtinct. Thus Philip a Deacon preached in Samaria, Act. 8. 14. Thus the men of Cyprus, and Cyrene preached among the Gentiles, & the hand of God was with them, though otherwiſe they were but priuate perſons, Act. 11. 19, 20. Of this kinde was the calling of the firſt preachers of the Goſpell. It may bee obiected, that they did not confirme their callings and doctrine by miracles, which they ſhould haue done, if their callings had beene extraordinarie. I anſwer: they preached no new doctrine, but the olde and auncient doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles, which they had heretofore confirmed by miracles. Now olde doctrine needes no new miracles, but new doctrine, ſuch as are the Popes decrees and decretals. Againe, it may bee alleadged, that men may falſely pretend extraordinarie calling. I anſwer, if three rules bee obſerued they cannot. The firſt is, that extraordinary neuer takes place, but when there is no roome for ordinarie. The ſecond is, that they which pleade a calling extraordinarily, muſt bee tried by the word, both for doctrine and life: for this is an infallible way to diſcouer falſe teachers, Matthew 7. 22. Deuteron. 13. 1. 5. Iohns authority is ſaid to be from heauen, becauſe his Baptiſme, that is, his doctrine was ſo, Luk. 20. 4. The third is, that extraordinarie teachers in theſe laſt daies, after they haue brought men to receiue the Goſpell, are to bee ordained as other ordinarie Miniſters after the Lawes of Gods word. For they are not extraordinarie in reſpect of their doctrine, which is the doctrine of the word, nor in reſpect of their office or function, in which regard they are paſtours and teachers, and not Apoſtles or Euangeliſts: but their callings are extraordinarie, in reſpect of the common abuſe of the office of teaching, and in reſpect of the common corruption of doctrine. Theſe three rules, as caueats obſerued, wee may eaſily perceiue who are called extraordinarily, who not: and they are all fully verified in the firſt preachers of the Goſpell.

Thirdly, it is obiected, that they which are lawfully called, are ordained by them, whoſe aunceſtours haue beene ſucceſſiuely ordained by the Apoſtles. I anſwer: Succeſſion is three-folde. The firſt is, of perſons and doctrine ioyntly together: and this was in the primitiue Church. The ſecond is, of perſons alone, and this may bee among infidels and heretickes. The third is, of doctrine alone.

A And thus our miniſters ſucceed the Apoſtles. And this is ſufficient. For this Rule muſt bee remembred, that the power of the Keyes, that is, of order & iuriſdiction, is tyed by God, and annexed in the new Teſtament to doctrine. If in Turkie, or America, or elſewhere, the Goſpell ſhould bee receiued of men, by the counſell and perſwaſion of priuate perſons, they ſhall not neede to ſend into Europe for conſecrated Miniſters, but they haue power to chooſe their owne Miniſters from within themſelues: becauſe, where God giues the word, he giues the power alſo.

Touching the Succeſſours of the firſt preachers, their calling was altogether ordinarie, & they were ordained of their predeceſſours. B It is obiected, that their callings are corrupt. I anſwer thus: All actions Eccleſiaſticall, that tend to binding or looſing, appertaine properly to the perſon of Chriſt, and men are but miniſters, and inſtruments thereof. And therefore to call men to the miniſterie and diſpenſation of the Goſpel, belongs to Chriſt, who alone giueth the power, the wil, the deed. And the Church can do no more but teſtifie, publiſh, and declare whome God calleth, by Examination of parties for life and doctrine, by Election, and by Ordination. This is for ſubſtance, all that the Church can doe: and al this is allowed, and preſcribed by the lawes of this Church and land. And therefore our callings for their ſubſtance are diuine, whatſoeuer defects there be otherwiſe. C

This aſſurance that our callings are of God, is of great vſe. It makes the Miniſter to make a conſcience of his duty: it is his comfort in trouble, Iſa. 49.2. 2. Corin. 2.15. And to the hearers it is a meanes of great reuerence and obedience.

12. For neither receiued I it of man, neither was I taught it, but by the Reuelation of Ieſus Chriſt.

The meaning is this: Paul here ſaith, he receiued not the Goſpel of man: becauſe hee receiued not the office to teach & preach the Goſpel from any meere man. For here he ſpeakes of himſelfe as he was an Apoſtle: and then an Apoſtle properly is ſaid to receiue the Goſpel, when he receiues not onely to know and beleeue it, but alſo to preach it. D And he addes further, that hee was not taught it, that is, that he learned the Goſpell, not by the teaching of any man, as formerly hee learned the law at the feet of Gamaliel. The laſt words [but by the reuelation of Ieſus Chriſt] carrie this ſenſe; but I learned and receiued it of Chriſt, who taught mee by reuelation. Further, Reuelation is two-folde: one ordinarie, the other extraordinarie. Ordinarie is, when Chriſt teacheth men by the word preached, and by his Spirit. In this ſenſe the holy Ghoſt is called the Spirit of Reuelation, Eph. 1.17. Extraordinarie is, without the word preached, and that foure waies. Firſt, by voice. Thus God taught Adam and the Patriarkes. The ſecond, by dreames, when things reuealed were repreſented to the minde in ſleepe. The third is viſion, when things reuealed are repreſented to the outward ſenſes of man beeing awake. The fourth is inſtinct, when God teacheth by inward motion & inſpiratiō. Thus did God vſually teach the Prophets, 2. Pet. 1.21. Now the reuelation which Paul had, was not ordinarie, but extraordinarie; and that partly by viſion, partly by voice, and partly by inſtinct, Act. 9. and 22. It may here bee demaunded, where Chriſt was, whether on earth, or in heauen, becauſe Paul heard his voice, and ſaw him viſibly? I anſwer, hee was not on earth, but in heauen: and that Paul both ſawe and heard him, it was by miracle; whereas Stephen in like manner ſaw Chriſt, hee ſaw him not on earth, but ſtanding at the right hand of God in heauen: for otherwiſe the opening of the heauens had beene a needleſſe thing.

Theſe words then are a confirmation of the former verſe, on this manner: The authority whereby I teach, and the doctrine which I teach, I firſt receiued and learned it, not of man, but immediately of Chriſt: therfore the Goſpel which I preach is not humane, but diuine, and preached not by humane, but by diuine authority.

In the ſcope and ſenſe of the words, many points of doctrine are contained. The firſt, that Chriſt is the great Prophet and Doctor of the Church, Matth. 17.6. Heare him: and 23.8. One is your Doctour, namely, Chriſt. And hee is called the great Sheapheard of the ſheepe, Hebr. 13.20. His office is in three things. The firſt is, to manifeſt and reueale the will of the Father, touching the redemption of mankind Ioh. 1.18. & 8.26. This he hath done from the beginning of the world (the Father neuer ſpeaking and appearing immediately, but in the Baptiſme and transfiguration of Chriſt) and this hee doth to Paul in this place. The ſecond is, to inſtitute the Miniſterie of the word, and to call and ſend Miniſters. As my Father ſent me, ſo I ſend you, Ioh. 20.21. He it is that giues ſome to be Paſtours, ſome to be Teachers, Eph. 4.21. And thus appoints Paul to be an Apoſtle. The third is, to teach the heart within, by illuminating the mind, and by working a faith of the doctrine which is taught. He openeth the vnderſtanding of his Diſciples that they may vnderſtand the Scriptures, Luk. 24.45. Thus here hee inlighteneth and teacheth Paul.

Furthermore, it muſt bee obſerued, that this office of teaching, is inſeparably annexed to the perſon of Chriſt, and is by him accordingly executed euen after his aſcenſion, as appeares in the conuerſion of Paul. And therefore Iſay ſaith, They ſhall be all taught of God, Iſay 54.13. As for the Miniſters of the Goſpel, they in teaching are no more but inſtruments of Chriſt to vtter and pronounce the word to the eare: this is all they can doe. Therefore Paul ſaith, he that plants or waters is not any thing, but God that giueth the increaſe.

John 6.45.

The teacher then properly in the miniſterie of the new Teſtament to the very ende of the world is Chriſt himſelfe. This muſt teach vs reuerence in hearing Gods word, & care with diligence in keeping of it, Hebr. 2. 1, 2, 3, &c. Secondly, this teacheth vs, that they which embrace not the Goſpell among vs, are contemners of Chriſt, and ſhall endure eternall condemnation, Ioh. 3. 18. and Hebr. 12. 25. Thirdly, if wee want vnderſtanding, wee muſt pray to Chriſt for it, and becauſe we haue ſo excellent a teacher, wee muſt pray vnto him that he would giue vnto vs hearing eares, that is, hearts tractable, and obedient to his word, that we may be fitte diſciples for ſo worthie a Maſter.

The ſecond is, that there bee two waies whereby Chriſt teacheth thoſe that are to be teachers. One is immediate reuelation; the other, is ordinarie inſtruction in ſchooles by the meanes and miniſterie of man. The like ſaith Amos, I was neither Prophet, nor ſonne of a Prophet, but the Lord ſent me to prophecy to Iſrael, Amos 7. 14.

The third point is, that they which are to bee teachers, muſt firſt be taught, and they muſt teach that which they haue firſt learned themſelues, 2. Tim. 3. 14. Abide in the things which thou haſt learned. Chriſt taught that which he heard of the Father: the Apoſtles, that which they heard of Chriſt: ordinarie Miniſters, that which they learned of the Apoſtles. This is the right Tradition: and if it bee obſerued without addition or detraction, the Goſpel ſhal remaine in his integrity. Here our Aunceſtours are greatly to bee blamed, who haue not contented themſelues with that which they haue learned of the Apoſtles, but haue deliuered things of their owne which they were neuer taught. Hence ſprang vnwritten Traditions, and the corruption of religion. Againe, ſuch are here to be blamed, that take vpon them to bee teachers of the Goſpell, and were neuer taught by reuelation, or by any ordinarie way. Thirdly, priuate perſons are much more to bee blamed, that broch and deliuer ſuch doctrines, and opinions, as they themſelues neuer learned by any miniſterie. For teachers themſelues muſt firſt learne, and then teach.

The fourth point is, that they which are to bee teachers are firſt to bee taught, and that by men, where reuelation is wanting. This kinde of teaching is the foundation of the ſchoole of the Prophets, and it hath beene from the beginning. The Patriarkes till Moſes were Prophets in their families, and they taught not onely their families in generall, but alſo their firſt borne, that they might ſucceede as Prophets after them. There were 48. cities of the Leuites diſperſed through all the tribes, where not onely the people were taught, but alſo ſchooles erected that they might be taught which were to be Prieſts and Leuites. One cittie among the reſt is called Cereath ſepher, Ioſu. 15. 15. that is, the cittie of bookes, or as wee ſay, the Vniuerſitie, Samuel a young man, was ſent to the Tabernacle in Shilo, to be taught, and trained vp of Eli the Prieſt. Samuel, when he was Iudge of Iſrael, erected Colledges of Prophets, and ruled them himſelfe, 1. Samuel 19. In the decaied eſtate of the ten tribes, Elias and Elizeus ſet vp ſchooles of the Prophets in Bethel, Carmel, &c. and the young ſtudents were called the ſonnes of the Prophets, 2. King. 2. 3. Chriſt himſelfe beſide the ſermons made to the people, trained vp and taught himſelfe, his twelue Apoſtles, and his 70. Diſciples. Paul commands Timothie to teach that which hee had learned, to ſuch as ſhall be fitte to teach others, 2. Tim. 2. 2. Furthermore, this teaching is of great vſe. For it ſerues to maintaine the true interpretation of Scripture, puritie of doctrine: and it is a meanes to continue the miniſterie to the ende of the world. The meaneſt arte or trade that is, is not learned without great teaching: then much more teaching is required in diuinitie, which is the arte of all arts. The true interpretation of Scripture, and the right cutting of the word, is a matter of great difficultie, and a matter (whatſoeuer men thinke) of the greateſt learning in the world. Therefore it is neceſſary, that teachers ſhould firſt bee taught, & learne aright the Goſpel of Chriſt. Eleauen hundred yeares after Chriſt, men beganne to lay aſide Moſes, and the Prophets, and the writings of the new Teſtament, and to expound the writings of men, as the Sentences of Peter Lumbard. Hence ignorance, ſuperſtition, and idolatrie came headlong into the world. Seeing then the teaching of them that are to bee teachers, is of ſuch antiquity, and vſe, all men are to bee exhorted, to put to their helping hands, that this thing may goe forward. Princes are to maintaine it, by their bountifulneſſe, and authority, as they haue done, and doe ſtill: and that which they doe, they muſt doe it more. Parents muſt dedicate the beſt of their children to the ſeruice of God, in the miniſtery, and not to vſe it in the laſt place for a ſhift, as they doe. For commonly, the eldeſt muſt bee the heire, the next the lawyer, the yongeſt the diuine. Students muſt loue and affect this calling aboue all other, 1. Cor. 14. 1. Laſtly, all men muſt make prayer, that God would proſper and bleſſe all Schooles of learning, where this kinde of teaching is in vſe.

Numb. 37.

Here againe it appeares, that Chriſt is God, & more then a meere man, becauſe hee is oppoſed to man: and that Paul receiued authority, and the keyes of the kingdome of heauen immediately of Chriſt, as well as Peter.

13. For ye haue heard of my conuerſation in time paſt, how that I perſecuted the Church of God extreamely, and waſted it.

14. And profited in the Iewiſh religion, aboue many of my companions, of mine owne nation, and was much more zealous of the Traditions of my fathers.

In the former verſe the Apoſtle ſette downe, that hee learned the Goſpell, not of man, but of Ieſus Chriſt, immediately. This in the next place, hee goes about to prooue at large. His reaſon is framed thus: If I learned the Goſpel of any man, I learned it either before, or after my conuerſion: but I learned it neither before, nor after my conuerſion, of any man. The firſt part of his reaſon is here confirmed thus: Before my calling and conuerſion, I profeſſed Iudaiſme, and I liued accordingly, perſecuting the Church, and ſuppreſſing the Goſpel of Chriſt, and profiting in my religion aboue many others: therefore I was not then fit to heare and learne the Goſpel of Chriſt of any man. This argument he further confirmes, by the teſtimony of the Galatians thus: That this was my conuerſation in Iudaiſme, ye are witneſſes: for ye haue heretofore heard as much.

In the example of Paul, two points are generally to bee conſidered. The firſt, that the diſtinction of man and man, ariſeth not of the will, or naturall diſpoſition of man, but of the grace and mercy of God. For Paul an Elect veſſell for nature and diſpoſition, before his conuerſion, is as wicked as any other. And he ſaith, Rom. 9.16. that the difference betweene man and man before God, is not in him that willeth, nor in him that runneth, but in God that ſheweth mercie. Therefore it is a Pelagian errour, to thinke that men, doing that which they can, doe by nature occaſion God to giue them ſupernaturall grace. The ſecond point is, that Paul here makes an open and ingenuous confeſſion of his wicked life paſt. And hence I gather, that this Apoſtle, and conſequently the reſt, writte the Scriptures of the new Teſtament by the inſtinct of Gods Spirit, and not by humane policie, which (no doubt) would haue mooued them to haue couered and concealed their owne faults, and not to haue blazed their owne ſhame to the world. And therefore the bookes of Scripture, are not bookes of policie (as Atheiſts ſuppoſe) to keepe men in awe, but they are the very word of God. Againe, the ende of this plaine confeſſion is, that Paul might thereby confirme and iuſtifie his calling, to the office of an Apoſtle. This ſerues to giue a checke to ſuch perſons, as vſe to ſit and rehearſe their wicked liues paſt, in boaſting and reioycing manner.

In Pauls example there bee two things to bee conſidered, his profeſſion before his calling, and conuerſation. His profeſſion was Iudaiſme: and this hindered him from embracing the Goſpel. It may be here demaunded, what Iudaiſme, or the Iewiſh Religion is? Anſwer. In the dayes of Chriſt, and the Apoſtles, there were three ſpeciall ſects among the Iewes, Eſſeis, Sadduceis, and Phariſes, And the Phariſes were the principall, and their doctrine A was commonly imbraced of the Iewes. And therefore by Iudaiſme (as I take it) Phariſaiſme is here meant. Now the principall doctrines of the Phariſes were theſe: I. They held, that there was one God, and that this God was the Father, without any diſtinction of perſons: for when Chriſt mentioned the diſtinction of the Father, and the Sonne, they would not acknowledge it, Ioh. 8.19. II. They acknowledged in the Meſſias but one nature: for when it was asked them, how Chriſt being the ſonne of Dauid, ſhould neuertheleſſe bee his Lord; they could not anſwer, Matth. 22. III. They held, that the kingdome of the Meſſias, was an earthly kingdome: and with this opinion, the Diſciples of Chriſt were B tainted. IV. They held, that the keeping of the morall law, ſtood in externall obedience, as appeares by the ſpeeches of Chriſt, reforming their errours, Matthew 5,6,7. chapters. V. They maintained a naturall freedome of the will, in the obſeruing of the law, Luk. 18. Lord I thanke thee (ſaith the Phariſie) I doe thus and thus. VI. They held a iuſtification by the workes of the law without the obedience of the Meſſias, Romanes 9.3. VII. Beſide the written word and law of Moſes, they had many vnwritten traditions, which they obſerued preciſely, and the obſeruation of them was accounted the worſhippe of God, Matth. 15.3.9. Other points they held, but theſe are the principall. It may further bee demaunded, C how the Iewes could holde ſuch hereticall, and damnable opinions, and yet bee the people of God? Anſwer. They had for their parts forſaken God: but God had not forſaken them, becauſe the Temple was yet ſtanding, and the ſacrifices with the outward worſhippe yet remained among them. In this regard, they were ſtill a reputed people of God. Againe, they are called a people of God, not of the bigger, but of the better part: and the better part was a ſmall remnant of them that truely feared God, and beleeued in the Meſſias. Of which ſort, were Ioſeph, Marie, Zacharie, Elizabeth, Simeon, Anna, Ioſeph of Arimathea, and Nicodemus. Againe, it may D bee demaunded, how the Iewes, beeing ſuch a people of God, ſhould fall away to ſo damnable a religion? Anſwer. They neither loued, nor obeyed the doctrine of Moſes, and the Prophets: and therefore God in iudgement left them to the blindnes of their owne mindes, and the hardnes of their owne hearts, Iſai. 6. The like may be our caſe. If wee loue and obey not the Goſpel, more then we haue done, our religion may ende in ignorance, ſuperſtition, and prophaneneſſe, as theirs hath done.

The ſecond thing in Pauls example, is his conuerſation, whereby hee liued and conuerſed according to his religion. The like ſhould bee in vs. For the profeſſion of the faith, and godly conuerſation are to goe together, Phil. 1.27. Faith in the heart is a light, and workes are the ſhining of this light. Mat. A 5.16. Chriſt hath redeemed them that beleeue from their vaine conuerſation. 1. Pet. 1.18.

Here many of vs doe amiſſe, diſioyning faith, and good life. And this fault is the greater, becauſe it is an occaſion to our aduerſaries to miſlike, and reiect our religion.

Pauls conuerſation hath two parts, his perſequution of the Church, and his profiting in his religion.

Perſequution properly is the afflicting of the people of God for their faith and religion.
In this we are not to follow Paul, but to do the contrarie, that is, by all meanes to ſeeke the good of the Church. After Gods glory immediatly, we are to ſeeke the coming, and aduancement of the kingdome of God. Now B this kingdome, is a certaine eſtate and condition of men, whereby they ſtand ſubiect to the word and ſpirit of God. And this ſubiection to God, and Chriſt, is the propertie of them that be members of the Church of God. All, both rich, and poore, conferred ſomething (according to their abilitie) to the building of the Temple, which figured the Church of God. The fault of our times is, that we build our ſelues, and our worldly eſtates, and little reſpect the common good of the Church.

In the perſequution of the Church by Paul,
two points are to be conſidered, the manner, and meaſure, or accompliſhment. The manner is, that he perſequuted the Church extreamely C or aboue meaſure. That which Paul did in his religion, we muſt doe in ours. The good things that we are to doe, we muſt doe Eccl,9.10. them with all our might. Our dutie is to keepe our hearts in the feare of God, and we muſt do it with all diligence. Prou.4.24. It is our dutie to ſeeke Gods kingdome & we muſt take it with violence. To enter into life is our duty, and we muſt ſtriue to enter. To pray is our duty, and we muſt wraſtle in prayer, Rom. 15.30. Ioſias turnes to God with all his heart. The law requires, that we ſhould loue God, with all the powers of body and ſoule, and with al the ſtrength of all the powers. In earthly things we muſt D moderate our thoughts and cares, but ſpirituall duties muſt be performed with all our might.

The accompliſhment of perſequution, is, that Paul waſted the Church, and made hauocke of it. Here I conſider 2. points, what is waſted? and who is the waſter? For the firſt, it is the church. Here 2. queſtions may be demanded:
the firſt is, how the church can be waſted?
Anſw. In reſpect of the inward eſtate thereof, which ſtands in election, faith, iuſtification, glorification, it cannot be waſted. In reſpect of her outward eſtate, it may be waſted, that is, in reſpect of mens bodies, and in regard of the publike aſſemblies, and the exerciſes of religion.
The ſecond queſtion is, why God ſuffers his enemies to waſt his owne Church. Anſw.
Iudgement beginnes in Gods houſe, and his iudgements ſometime are very ſharpe, whether they be inflicted for triall or correction of ſinnes paſt, or for the preuenting of ſinnes to come. As in the bodie ſometime there is no hope of life, except armes, and legges be cut off: euen ſo is it in the Church. Hence it appeares, that there ſhal be a laſt iudgement, and that there is a life euerlaſting in heauen: becauſe the wicked man flouriſheth in this world, and the godly are often oppreſſed.

The waſter of the church is Paul. By whom we learne that ſinne, where it takes place, giues a man no reſt till it hath brought him to a height of wickedneſſe. Hatred hauing entred into Caines heart, leaues him not, till it haue cauſed him to imbrue his hands in his brothers blood. Couetouſneſſe makes Iudas at length to betray his maſter, and hang himſelfe.
Blind zeale makes Paul not only to perſecute, but alſo to waſt the Church. Therefore it is good to auoide the firſt beginnings, yea the very occaſion of ſinne.

The ſecond part and point in Pauls conuerſation, is, that he profits in his religion.
Thus ſhould we profit in the Goſpel of Chriſt.
It is Gods commaundement, Be ye perfect, as Mat. 5, 48.
your heauenly father is perfect: that is, indeauour to come to perfection. All the faith we haue or can obtaine is little enough in the time of temptation. Iob that ſaid in his affliction, though the Lord kill mee I will ſtill truſt in him, Iob.13.15, v.26.
ſaith alſo, that God wrot bitter things againſt him, and made him to poſſeſſe the ſinnes of his youth.
It is a token that a man is dead in his ſinnes, when he doth not grow, or increaſe in good things, 1. Pet. 2. 2. In this regard great is the fault of our daies, for many are wearie of the goſpel, many ſtand at a ſtay without profiting; many goe backeward. The cauſe is this. Commonly men liue as it were without the law: and thinke it ſufficient, if they doe not groſſely offend:
not conſidering that the law of God, is law to our thoughts, and affections, and all the circumſtances of our actions. That we may hereafter make good proceedings in our religion, we muſt remember three caueats.
One, that we muſt indeauour to ſee, and feele in our ſelues the ſmallneſſe of our faith, repentance, feare of God, &c. and the great maſſe of corruption that is in vs. Thus with the beggar, we ſhall be alwaies peecing, and mending our garment. The ſecond, that as trauellers, we muſt forget things paſt, and goe on to doe more good, Phil. 3. 14. The third, that we muſt ſet before vs the crowne of eternall glorie, and ſeeke to apprehend it, 1. Tim. 6. verſ. 12. thus did Moſes Hebrew.
11.

In Pauls profiting two things muſt be conſidered, the meaſure, and the thing in which he profited. The meaſure, in that he profited aboue many others. Hence we learne, that in matters of religion there ſhould be an holy emulation and contention among vs: and our fault is, that we contend who ſhall haue the moſt riches, and honour, or goe in the fineſt apparell, and ſtriue not to goe one beyond another in good things. Againe, Pauls modeſtie muſt here be obſerued. He doth not ſay, that he profited more then all, but more then many: and he ſaith not, more then his ſuperiours, but more then his equals for time: and he ſaith not, more then all the world, but more then they of his owne nation. This modeſtie of his muſt be learned of vs, for it is the ornament of our faith, and therefore muſt be ioyned with our faith.

The matter or the thing in which Paul profited, is, that he was aboundantly zealous for the traditions of the fathers. Here I conſider three points. I. What zeale is? Anſ. It is a certen feruencie of ſpirit, ariſing of a mixture of loue & anger, cauſing men earneſtly to maintaine the worſhip of God, and all things pertaining thereto, and mouing them to griefe and anger, when God is any way diſhonoured. II. For what is Paul zealous? Anſw. For the outward obſeruation of the law, and withall, for Phariſaicall vnwritten Traditions: which therfore he cals the Traditions of his fathers. III. What is the fault of his zeale? (for he condemnes it in himſelfe.) Anſw. He had the zeale of God, but not according to knowledge. For his zeale was againſt the word, in that it tended to maintaine vnwritten Traditions, and iuſtification by the works of the law, out of Chriſt, Rom. 10. 2.

Hence we learne ſundry things. (For that which Paul did in his religion, are we to doe in the profeſſion of the Goſpell.) Firſt, we are to addict and ſet our ſelues earneſtly, to maintaine the truth, and the practiſe of the Goſpel. Chriſt was euen conſumed with the zeale of Gods houſe, Ioh. 2. The angell of the Church of Laodicea is blamed, becauſe he is neither hote nor cold, Reu. 3. He is accurſed of God, that doth the worke of God negligently, Ier. 48 Secondly, we are to be angry in our ſelues, and grieued, when God is diſhonoured, and his word diſobeyed. When the Iſraelites worſhipped the golden calfe, Moſes in holy anger, burſt the tables of ſtone, Dauid wept, and Paul was humbled for the ſins of other men. Pſal. 119. 136. 2. Cor. 12. 21. Thirdly, we are here taught, not to giue libertie to the beſt of our naturall affections, as to zeale, but to mortifie them, and to rule them by the word, Numb. 15. 39. otherwiſe they will cauſe vs to runne out of order, like wild beaſts, as here we ſee in Paul. Laſtly, let it be obſerued, that Paul here condemnes zeale, for the maintenance of vnwritten Traditions. And let the Papiſts conſider this.

15. But when it pleaſed God (which had ſeparated me from my mothers wombe, and called me by his grace.)

16. To reueale his ſonne in me (or to me) that I ſhould preach him among the Gentiles, immediately I communicated not with fleſh and blood.

17. Neither came I to Hieruſalem, to them A which were Apoſtles before me, but I went into Arabia, and turned againe to Damaſcus.

Paul before prooued, that he learned not the Goſpel of any men before his conuerſion: here he further prooues, that he learned it of no man after his conuerſion. And the ſubſtance of his reaſon is this; becauſe immediatly vpon his conuerſion, he conferred with no man, but went and preached in Arabia, and Damaſcus.

In the words I conſider foure things. Firſt, the cauſes of Pauls conuerſion. And here he ſets downe three degrees of cauſes, depending one vpon another. The firſt is, the good pleaſure of God, whereby he doth whatſoeuer he B will, in heauen, and earth, in theſe words [when it pleaſed.] The ſecond is, his ſeparation from the wombe: which is an act of Gods counſell, whereby he ſets men apart to be members of Chriſt, and to be his ſeruants, in this, or that office. This ſeparation is ſaid to be from the wombe; not becauſe it began then; for it was appointed by God before al times, euen from eternitie, as all his counſels are. But the holy Ghoſt hereby ſignifies, that all our goodneſſe, and all our dexteritie to this, or that office, is meerely from God: becauſe we are ſanctified, dedicated, and ſet apart in the counſell of God, from all eternitie, and therefore from the wombe, or from our firſt conception, and beginning. The third cauſe is, vocation by C grace; the accompliſhment of both the former, in the time which God hath appointed. The ſecond thing is, the manner or forme of Pauls vocation, in theſe words [to reueale his ſonne to me.] The third is, the end of his vocation, to preach Chriſt among the Gentiles. The laſt is, his obedience to the calling of God: in the 16. and 17. verſes.

To begin with the efficient cauſes of Pauls conuerſion: here we ſee the order and dependance of cauſes, in the conuerſion and ſaluation of euery ſinner. The beginning of our ſaluation, is, in the good pleaſure of God: then followes ſeparation, or election to eternall life: then vocation by the word and ſpirit: then obedience to the calling of God, and D after obedience, euerlaſting life. This order Paul here ſets down, and the conſideration of it, is of great vſe. Hence it appeares to be a doctrine erronious, which beginnes our ſaluation, in the preuiſion of mans faith, & good workes. For in Pauls order, works haue the laſt place. And it muſt be Gods pleaſure, that man ſhall do a good worke, before he can do it. And if ſeparation to eternall life, ſhould be according to faith or workes, then we ſhould make ſeparation of our ſelues, as well as God. And vocation is not for workes, but that we might doe good workes, Eph. 1. 4. Secondly, by this order it appeares, that the ſaluation of them that beleeue, is more ſure, then the whole frame of heauen and earth: becauſe it is founded in the vocation of God, which is without repentance, in the counſell of ſeparation, and in the pleaſure of God. Thirdly, by obſeruing well this order, we may attaine to the aſſurance of our election. For if thou haſt beene called, and haſt in truth anſwered to the calling of God by obedience, thou maiſt aſſure thy ſelfe of thy ſeparation from the wombe, to euerlaſting life, becauſe this order is (as it were) a golden chaine, in which all the linkes are inſeparably vnited. Laſtly, the conſideration of this order, ſerues to mortifie the pride and arrogancie of our hearts, in that it aſcribes all to God: and nothing to man, in the cauſe of ſaluation. Reade Ezech. 16.63.

Againe, by the conſideration of theſe 3. cauſes, we gather that God hath determined what he will doe with euery man, and that he hath in his eternall counſell aſſigned euery man his office and condition of life. For there is in God a pleaſure whereby he may do with euery man what he will. And by his eternall counſell, he ſeparates euery man from the very wombe to one calling or other: and accordingly he cals them in time by giuing gifts, and will, to doe that, for which they were appointed. And this I vnderſtand of all lawfull callings in the family, church, or commonwealth. Thus Chriſt was called from the wombe, and ſet apart to be a Mediatour. Iſa. 47.1. and *Ioh.*6.27. Ieremy to be a Prophet, *Ierem.*1.5. Chriſt is ſaid to giue Apoſtles, Prophets, Paſtors, Teachers, *Eph.*4.11. God ſent Ioſeph vnto Egypt to be the gouernour thereof, and a releeuer of Iacobs family, *Gen.*45. In this regard the Medes and Perſians are ſaid to be the ſanctified ones of God, Iſai. 13.3. and *the men of his counſell. Iſa.*46.11.

The vſe. Hence we are all taught, to walke in our callings with diligence and good conſcience. Becauſe they are aſſigned vs of God. Hence we are taught to yeeld obedience to our rulers and teachers, becauſe they that are our rulers and teachers, were ſeparated from the wombe to be ſo, and that by God himſelfe, without the will of man. Hence we may gather aſſurance of Gods protection and aſſiſtance in our callings: for in that he hath appointed vs our callings, he will alſo defend vs in them, 2.Cor.3.46. Iſa.49.2. Hence we may learne patience and contentation in all the miſeries and troubles of our callings: for in what calling ſoeuer thou art, thou waſt ordained to it by God from thy mothers wombe. Thinke on this. Hence we learne thankfulnes to God, becauſe our callings, gifts, and the execution of our callings, is wholly of God: and this Paul ſignifies, when he ſaith, that our ſeparation to our offices and callings, was from our firſt conception. Hence we learne to depend on Gods prouidence for the time to come. For if he prouided our callings when we were not, he will much more aide, & bleſſe vs in them now while we haue a beeing. Reade Pſalme 22.8.9. Poore parents that cannot leaue lands and liuings to their children after A their deceaſe, let them comfort themſelues in this; that their children are from their mothers wombe, ſeparated to ſome good office & condition of life by the wiſedome of God: and that a good office, or calling is better then land and liuing.

Thirdly, it appeares hence that the time of all euents, is determined in the counſell of God. For God determines with himſelfe the time in which he will cal, and conuert Paul. By this we are taught in our prayers, not to limite God to any time for the accompliſhment of our requeſts: for the diſpoſition of time is his, and that is to be left to his wiſedome. Againe, in our afflictions and temptations wee may not make haſt for helpe and deliuerance B before the time, but waite the leiſure of God, who hath decreed the time of deliuerance. Hee that beleeues makes no haſt, Iſa.28.16. Habacuke muſt waite, becauſe the viſion is for a time appointed. Hab.2.1. Dauids eyes and ſtrength failed in waiting on God. Pſal.69.3. Daniel waits on God 70. yeares, and then praies for deliuerance out of captiuity, the time beeing expired. This ſerues to diſcouer the wickedneſſe of them, that beeing in any kind of miſerie, cannot ſtay the leiſure of God til he deliuer them by good meanes, but they will haue preſent remedie, though it be from the diuell: and if helpe cannot be had when they deſire, they preſently make away themſelues.

The ſecond point is, the Forme of the C calling, or conuerſion of Paul, in theſe words [to reueale his Sonne in me] that is, to teach me the doctrine of the redemption of mankind by his Sonne Ieſus Chriſt. Here I conſider, to whom reuelation is made, and how?

For the firſt, reuelation of the Sonne is made to cruel and perſecuting Paul, a deſperate ſinner. Hence euery man can gather, that God hath mercy for great, & notorious offenders, as for Paul, and ſuch like: and the collection is good. For God is much in ſparing, Iſa.55.7. And yet here it muſt be remembred, that all deſperate offenders, ſhall not find mercy; vnleſſe they be great in their repentance, as God is great in mercy. For Gods mercy hath a double effect in vs, one is, remiſſion of ſinne by the D imputation of the merit of Chriſt: the other, the mortification of originall ſinne, by his efficacie. And theſe two be inſeparable, as we ſee in Paul, on whome God ſhewed great mercy, whoſe repentance alſo was notable. As the woman, Ioh.7. had many ſinnes forgiuen her, ſo ſhe loued much. v.47. By this we ſee the great, and common abuſe of the mercy of God. Men euery where preſume vpon the greatneſſe of Gods mercy, and they make Chriſt a packhorſe, lading him with their burdens, and there is litle or no amendment of life.

The manner that God vſed in reuealing the Sonne to Paul, ſtands in two things: Preparation and Inſtruction.

Preparation is a worke of God, whereby he humbled Paul, ſubdued the pride, and ſtubbornneſſe of his heart, and made him tractable, and teachable. This humiliation is outward, or inward. The outward, was partly by lightening from heauen, that caſt him to the earth, and made him blind, and partly by a voice reproouing him: Saul, Saul, why perſecuteſt thou me? The inward humiliation was in a ſight, and horrour for his ſinnes. The ſins that God reuealed to him, are theſe: the firſt was, an height of wickedneſſe, that in perſecuting the Church, he made warre euen againſt God himſelfe. Secondly, God made manifeſt vnto him the meaning of the tenth commaundement, and that ſecret luſt without conſent of will, was ſinne. Rom. 7.7. And thus the law killed him that was aliue, in his owne opinion, when he was a Phariſie.

The inſtruction whereby God taught the ſame to Paul, hath two parts. The firſt is, the call of God, whereby he inuites Paul to become a member of the Sonne of God. And this he did, firſt, by propounding vnto him the commaundement of the Goſpel, which is, to repent and beleeue in Chriſt. Secondly, by offering to him the promiſe of remiſſion of ſinnes, and life euerlaſting, when he beleeued. The ſecond part of inſtruction, is a reall and liuely teaching, when God made Paul in his heart to anſwer the calling, according to that, Pſal. 27. v. 5. When thou ſaidſt, ſeeke yee my face, mine heart anſwered, I will ſeeke thy face, O Lord. And in Zacharie, 13.9. He ſhall ſay, it is my people, and they ſhall ſay the Lord is our God. This is a ſpirituall Eccho, that is made in the heart. The ſound of Gods word, goes through the world, and the hearts of men, which be as rockes and ſtones, make anſwer. And this worke of God, that makes man yeeld to the calling of God, is in Scripture, a kind of diuine teaching: thus the Father is ſaid to teach the Sonne by drawing, Ioh. 6.44. And God is ſaid to teach vs his waies, when he guids vs by his ſpirit in the land of righteouſneſſe, Pſal. 143. That this real, and heauenly kind of teaching, may take place, God by his grace, puts a kind of ſoftneſſe into the heart, whereby it is made ſubiect, and obedient to the word. And it hath two parts. One is an acknowledgement by faith, that the Sonne is our redeemer. The ſecond is, regeneration, which is the putting off the old man, and the putting on of the new: which to doe, by the vertue of Chriſt, is to learne Chriſt. Eph. 4.20.23. Thus then God reueales the ſonne to Paul, by preparing him, and making him teachable, by propounding the doctrine of ſaluation to him, and by cauſing him inwardly to beleeue it, and to obey it. And thus we ſee the manner of the calling, and conuerſion of Paul.

For the better clearing of this doctrine, fiue queſtions are to be anſwered. The firſt is, what was the preuenting grace in the conuerſion of Paul? Anſw. Schoolemen, and Papiſts generally teach, that it was the inſpiration of good motions, and deſires, into the heart of Paul. But it is falſe which they teach: for the heart is vncapable of any good deſire, or purpoſe, till it be regenerate. The truth is this: that the preuenting grace, in the firſt conuerſion, is the grace of regeneration, and ſecondly, the inſpiration of good deſires, and motions. When Chriſt preuents Lazarus, that he may reuiue againe, he firſt puts a ſoule into him, and then he cals vnto him, & ſaith, Come forth, Lazarus, becauſe he was dead: in like manner, we are dead in ſinne, and therfore regeneration (which is the ſoule of our ſoules) muſt be put into vs, before any inſpiration of heauenly motions can take place. Yet after we are once borne anew, good motions and deſires put into our hearts, may be the preuenting grace, for the doing of ſundrie good workes.

The ſecond queſtion is, whether the will of Paul, were an agent, or cauſe, in the effecting of his firſt conuerſion? Anſw. No: Scripture makes two ſorts of conuerſion: one Paſſiue, when man is conuerted by God. In this, man is but a ſubiect, to receiue the impreſſion of grace, and no agent at all. For in the creating, ſetting, or imprinting of righteouſneſſe, and holineſſe in the heart, will can doe nothing. The ſecond conuerſion, is Actiue, whereby man beeing conuerted by God, doth further turne and conuert himſelfe to God, in all his thoughts, words, and deedes. This conuerſion is not onely of grace, nor onely of will; but partly of grace, and partly of will: yet ſo as grace is the principall agent, and will but the inſtrument of grace. For being firſt turned by grace, we then can mooue, & turne our ſelues. And thus there is a cooperation of mans will, with Gods grace. And Auſten ſaid truly, He that made thee without thee, doth not ſaue thee without thee.

Serm. 25. de verbis Apoſt.

The third queſtion is, whether God did offer any violence to Pauls minde and will, in his conuerſion? Anſw. There is a double violence, or Coaction. One, which doth aboliſh all conſent of will; and this he vſed not. The other drawes out a conſent from the will, by cauſing it of an vnwilling will, to become willing. This coaction or violence, God offered to Paul, and in this ſenſe, they which come to Chriſt, are ſaid to be drawne, Ioh. 6.45.

The fourth queſtion is, wherein ſtands the efficacy of the preuenting grace, wherby Paul was effectually conuerted? Anſw. The Councell of Trent, and ſundry Papiſts, incline to this opinion, to thinke that it ſtands in the euent, in that the will of man applies it ſelfe to the grace which God offereth. But then the efficacie of grace muſt be from mans will: and then man hath ſomething, whereof to boaſt, and he is to thanke himſelfe for the grace of God. Other Papiſts place the efficacie of grace, in the congruitie, or aptneſſe of motions, or heauenly perſwaſions, preſented to the minde of man that is to be conuerted. But this opinion alſo, is deuoid of truth. For there is no efficacie in any motions, or perſwaſions, til there be a change, and new creation of the wil. The true anſwer is this. Outward meanes are effectuall, becauſe they are ioyned with the inward operation of the Spirit. Inward grace is effectuall, becauſe God addes to the firſt grace, the ſecond grace. For hauing giuen the power to beleeue, and repent, he giues alſo the will and the deede: and then faith and repentance muſt needs follow. And herein ſtands the efficacie of the firſt grace, that God addes vnto it, and workes the will and the deede, Phil. 2.13.

The laſt queſtion is, whether it was in the power of Pauls will, to reſiſt the calling, or the grace of God? Anſw. The will for his condition is apt to reſiſt grace: neuertheleſſe, if we conſider the efficacie of Gods grace, and the will of God, he could not reſiſt the calling of God. Euery one that hath heard and learned of the father, comes to Chriſt, Ioh. 6.45. Gods will determines and limits the will of man: and mans will is an inſtrument to effect the will of God. It may be here demaunded, how the efficacie of grace, may ſtand with the libertie of mans will, if it haue not libertie, to accept or refuſe the grace of God? Anſw. Libertie and freedome of will in God, is perfect libertie: now God cannot will either good or euill, but onely that which is good. And mans will, the neerer it comes to this will of God, the greater libertie hath it. Therefore to will that only which is good, ſo it be freely without compulſion, is true libertie; to be able to will that which is euill, and to reſiſt the calling of God, is not libertie, but impotencie. And he that can onely will that which is good, doth more freely will good, and hath more liberty, then he that can will either good or euill.

The vſe. Miniſters of the Goſpel muſt learne Chriſt as Paul learned him. They may not content themſelues with that teaching which they finde in ſchooles, but they muſt proceed further to a reall learning of Chriſt: and that is, to beleeue in the Sonne of God, to die to their ſinnes by the vertue of his death, and to liue to God by the vertue of his life. This is a reall and liuely learning of Chriſt They that muſt conuert others, it is meete they ſhould be effectually conuerted. Iohn muſt firſt eate the booke, and then prophecy. Reu. 10.9 And they that would be firſt Miniſters of the Goſpel, muſt firſt themſelues eate the booke of God. And this booke is indeede eaten, when they are not onely in their minds inlightned, but their hearts are mortified and brought in ſubiection to the word of Chriſt. Vnleſſe Chriſt be thus learned ſpiritually and really, diuines ſhal ſpeake of the word of God, as men ſpeake of riddles, and as Prieſts in former time ſaid their mattens, when they hardly knew what they ſaid. Againe, ſtudents in euery facultie, are with Paul to learne Chriſt, and that as he learned him. Such perſons deſire and loue good learning: now this is the A beſt learning of all, to learne to know and to acknowledge Chriſt. The knowledge of Chriſt crucified is Pauls learning. The knowledge of the remiſſion of our ſinnes, is the learning of Dauid that great Prophet. For this title he giues to the 32. Pſal. The vnderſtanding of Dauid. Laſtly, all men are on this reall maner with Paul to learne the ſame. For he is an example to all that ſhall beleeue in him to life euerlaſting, 1. Tim. 1.12. Paul biddes vs do the good things which we haue ſeene in him, Phil. 4.9. Hoc age.

The third point is the end of Pauls conuerſion in theſe words [that he might preach him among the Gentiles.] Here I conſider what he muſt preach, namely the Sonne Chriſt: and to B whome? namely, among the nations. Againe, of the preaching of Chriſt, I conſider two things: the firſt is, why Chriſt muſt be preached rather then Moſes? Anſwer, there be two cauſes. One is, becauſe Chriſt is the ſubſtance or ſubiect matter of the whole Bible. For the ſumme of the Scriptures may be thus gathered together: The Sonne of God made man, and working our redemption, is the Sauiour of mankind: but Ieſus the Sonne of Marie is the Sonne of God made man, working our redemption: therefore Ieſus the Sonne of Marie is the Sauiour of mankind. The maior is the ſumme of the old Teſtament: the minor is the ſumme of the new: and the concluſion is the ſcope of both. The ſecond cauſe is. The C law is the miniſterie of death: and the Goſpel (which is the doctrine of ſaluation by the Sonne) is the inſtrument of God to begin and to confirme all graces of God in vs, that are neceſſarie to our ſaluation. Therefore the doctrine principally to be preached is the Goſpell, and not the law.

Secondly, it may be demanded, what it is to preach Chriſt? Anſwer: it is a great worke, and it containes foure, miniſteriall actions. The firſt, generally to teach the doctrine of the incarnation of Chriſt, and of his three offices, his kingly office, his propheticall office, and his prieſthood with the exequution thereof. D The ſecond, to teach that faith is an inſtrument ordained of God to apprehend and to apply Chriſt with his benefits. The third is to certifie and to reueale to euery hearer, that it is the wil of God to ſaue him by Chriſt in particular, ſo be it he will receiue Chriſt. For when the Goſpell is preached, God thereby ſignifies vnto vs, that his will is to giue vs life euerlaſting, 1. Ioh. 5.11. The laſt is to certifie and to reueale to euery particular hearer, that he is to apply Chriſt with his benefits to himſelfe in particular, and that effectually by his faith, that a change and conuerſion may follow both in heart and life, 1. Ioh. 3.23. And thus when theſe things are rightly performed, Chriſt is preached. Hence it appeares that to learne Chriſt, is not onely to know him generally, but alſo effectually to apply him to our ſelues by our faith, that there may be a change and renouation of the whole man. They which learne Chriſt, muſt thus learne him, els can they not be ſaued.

The ſecond point is, that Paul muſt preach to the Gentiles. There be two cauſes of it: one, that the prophecies of the calling of the Gentiles might be fulfilled, Pſal. 2. and 110. Iſai. 2. The ſecond, becauſe at the death of Chriſt, the diuiſion which was betweene the Iewes and Gentiles was quite aboliſhed. Eph. 2. 15. Here I obſerue the difference betweene Apoſtles, and ordinary Miniſters. Their charge is a ſet, and particular congregation; whereas the charge of an Apoſtle is the whole world.

The fourth and laſt point, is the obedience of Paul to the calling of God, in that he went and preached the Goſpell. Here a queſtion may be demanded: whether Paul performed his obedience, by vertue of the grace which he had formerly receiued, without the helpe of new and ſpeciall grace, or no? Anſwer. No: His obedience proceeds from the firſt grace, helped or excited by ſpeciall grace. In the regenerate that haue power to doe good, God workes the will, and the deede, in euery good. Phil. 2. 13. And it is a certaine truth: we doe not that which we are able to doe, vnleſſe God make vs doe it, as he made vs able to doe it. Therefore to the doing of euery new act, there is new, and ſpeciall grace required.

In Pauls obedience, I conſider 3. points. 1. When he obeyed? Immediatly. How? Without deliberation or conſultation. When? In Arabia and Damaſcus.

For the firſt, in that he obeyed God in going to preach immediately, we learne how we are to anſwer, and obey the calling of God, that calls to amendment, and newneſſe of life: namely, in all haſt, without deferring of time. Heb. 3. 8. To day if ye will heare his voice, harden not your hearts: & v. 13. exhort one another while it is called to day, Pſa. 119. 60. I made haſt & did not delay to keepe thy commandements. And there be good reaſons, why we ſhould no longer defer our conuerſion to God. The end of our life is vncerten: and looke as death leaues vs, ſo ſhal the laſt iudgement find vs. Secondly, when we delay our daily repentance, we adde ſinne to ſinne, and ſo treaſure vp wrath againſt the day of wrath, Rom. 2. Thirdly, when we deferre to obey and turne to God, we grow to perfection in ſinne: and ſinne beeing perfected brings forth death. Iam. 1. 14. Laſtly, late repentance is ſeldome, or neuer, true repentance. For when men are dying, their ſinnes forſake them, and they doe not commonly forſake their ſinnes. God hath called vs in England more then 40. yeares together, and yet many of vs haue not liſtened to the call of God, but deferred to obey: let vs now preſently amend, and turne to God: leſt if we ſtill deferre the time of our repentance, Gods iudgements come forth in haſt vpon vs.

The manner of his obedience is, that Paul did not communicate with men: that is, conferre, and conſult with them, touching his doctrine, and calling. And this he amplifies by a compariſon, thus: He did not conſult with any man, no not the Apoſtles of Hieruſalem. And he addes a reaſon of his doing: becauſe they were but fleſh and blood in reſpect of God: and indeed it is vnmeete to conſult with men, touching the matters of God.

Hence I gather, that Gods word, whether preached or written, doth not depend on the authoritie of any man, no not on the authoritie of the Apoſtles themſelues; it is ſufficient to authorize it ſelfe. Chriſt receiues not the teſtimony of man, Ioh. 5. 34. And it is an errour, to thinke that the Church doth authorize the word, and religion, in the conſciences of men. For the Church it ſelfe is founded on the word. The Church cannot conſiſt without faith, nor faith without the word.

Secondly, hence I gather that there is no conſultation, or deliberation, to be vſed at any time, touching the holding or not holding of our religion. He that will follow Chriſt, may not put his hand to the plough, and then looke backe againe to his friends, to ſee what they wil ſay. Luk. 9. 61. He that would be wiſe, muſt denie his owne wiſedome, and become a foole, 1. Cor. 3. 18. The three children would not conſult, touching the worſhipping of the Image, but ſaid: Be it knowne to thee, O king, that we will not worſhip thy gods. Dan. 3. When the iudge gaue Cyprian the martyr leaue to deliberate a while, whether he would denie his religion: he anſwered, that in diuine matters deliberation is not to be vſed. By this I gather, that the Schoolemen haue done euill, which haue turned all Diuinitie into Queſtions, and haue made of the articles of our faith, a queſtionary Diuinity. Secondly, by this we are taught, that in the day of triall, we may not conſult of the change of religion: but we muſt be reſolute, and tread vnder foote the perſwaſions of fleſh and blood.

Thirdly, our obedience to God muſt be without conſultation. We muſt firſt trie what is the will of God, and then abſolutely put it in execution, leauing the iſſue to God. Abraham is called of God to forſake his countrie and kindred, Gen. 12. he directly then giues attendance to the commandement, and goes as it were blind-fold, he knowes not whither. God promiſed him a child in his old age, he beleeues God without any reaſoning, or diſputing the caſe with himſelfe, too or fro: Rom. 4. 20. But the common manner is, (though we know the will of God) to diſpute the caſe, and to conſult with our friends, and to practiſe according to carnall counſell. Eue liſtens to the counſell of Satan, and neglects Gods commandement. Saul beeing forbidden to offer ſacrifice in Gilgal, till Samuel came to doe it, conſults with himſelfe, whether he may doe it or no: and followes his owne reaſon, againſt Gods commaundement, and loſt his kingdome for it. And this kind of de-

A liberation, whereby men conſult what is to be done, is the cauſe of the manifolde rebellions of men in the world.

In that man is tearmed here, fleſh and blood, we are taught, not to put confidence in man: wee are taught to humble our ſelues before God: we are taught, euery day to prepare our ſelues againſt the day of death, & the day of iudgement: yea to account euery new day, as the day of death, becauſe we are but fleſh and blood.

The third point is, where Paul firſt preached? namely, in Arabia and Damaſcus. Arabia is a region of the world, where Mount Sina ſtands, & where the children of Iſrael wandred 40. yeares. The inhabitants thereof, were B of two ſorts: ſome more ciuill, and ſome barbarous. Ciuill, as the Iſraelites, Amalechites, Madianites, &c. (yet were they profeſſed enemies of the people of God.) Barbarous, as the Eaſterne part of Arabia, toward Babilon. For the inhabitants dwelt in Tents, and liued like wilde and ſauage men, by robbing and ſtealing, and conſequently by killing, Iſa. 13. 20. Ier. 3. 2.

Here we ſee Pauls eſtate & condition, when he firſt begins the execution of his Apoſtolicall function. God then laies vpon him a ſharpe and waightie triall. For hee goes alone into Arabia, and he muſt become a teacher to his owne profeſſed enemies, yea to a ſauage generation, of whoſe conuerſion hee had no hope, in mans reaſon. And this hath beene C an vſuall dealing of God, with his owne ſeruants. When Moſes was called to deliuer the Iſraelites, and was in the way, the Lord, for a defect in his family, comes againſt him, to deſtroy him, Exodus 4. 24. Dauid is annointed King of Iſrael: and withall Saul is raiſed vp, to perſecute him, & to hunt him, as men hunt Partridges in the mountaines. Ionas is called to preach to Nineue, and withal God forſakes him, and leaues him to himſelfe, ſo, as hee is caſt into the ſea, and deuoured of a fiſh: and after this, being deliuered, he muſt go preach at Nineue. When Chriſt was in his baptiſme (as it were inaugurated the Doctour of the Church) preſently after, before hee beganne D to preach, hee is carried into the wilderneſſe, to bee with wilde beaſts, and to be tempted of the diuell, Mark. 1. verſ. 12. And the reaſons of this dealing of God, are manifeſt: by this meanes ſinnefull men, are made fitte for the office of teaching. For the ſaying is true, Reading, prayer, and temptation, make a Diuine. Againe, by this meanes they are cauſed to depend on the prouidence and protection of God, and they are made fitte for the aſſiſtance and preſence of Gods Spirit, who dwels only with them that are of humble, and contrite hearts. Now then, let not them, that in any notable change of their liues, finde notable temptations, be diſcouraged; for this is a condition that befals them, by a wiſe and ſpeciall prouidence of God. For it was the Spirit of God, that led Chriſt into the wilderneſſe, to be tempted, after his baptiſme.

Againe, here wee are taught, to acknowledge three things in God. His power, in that hee ſets vp his kingdome, where it is moſt oppugned, and reignes in the middeſt of his owne enemies, namely, the wicked and ſauage Arabians, according to that in Pſalm. 110. v. 2. His goodneſſe, in that hee ſends Paul to preach repentance to the people, that are in the ſnare of the diuell, at his will, 2. Tim. 2. 26. His truth, in that hee now fulfils things foretolde by Dauid, Pſalm. 72. 10. The kings of Sheba and Saba ſhall bring gifts: that is, Ethiopians and Arabians.

18. Then after three yeares, I came againe to Ieruſalem, to viſit Peter, and abode with him fifteene daies.

Paul hauing prooued before, that hee learned not the Goſpel of any man, no not of the Apoſtles at Ieruſalem: goes about now to anſwer exceptions, that might bee made againſt his reaſon. And firſt of all, it might haue bin obiected, that hee was ſeene at Hieruſalem ſundrie times: and therefore in all likelihood, went thither to be inſtructed. To this hee anſwers three things: that hee went thither three yeares after his conuerſion, and not before: that hee went to viſite Peter: that he abode there fifteene daies. For the firſt, where hee ſaith, hee preached three yeares in Arabia and Damaſcus, and then after went to Hieruſalem, and abode there fifteene daies (for ſome ſpeciall cauſes:) wee ſee Paul is ready, and able to make a good account of the ſpending of his time, both for daies & yeares. And good reaſon: for time is pretious, and great care ought to bee had of the expending of it. After Pauls example, wee muſt ſo liue, that wee may bee able to giue a good account of the ſpending of our daies. That this may bee done, wee muſt learne to number our daies, and, to redeeme the time. To number our daies, is to conſider the ſhortneſſe of our liues, and that wee are euery day ſubiect to death: and withall, ſeriouſly to bethinke our ſelues, of the cauſes of this our condition; namely, our ſinnes, both originall and actuall. When this two-folde conſideration takes place, wee then beginne to number our daies. The numbring of our time, and the parts thereof, bringeth vs to the redeeming of it. To redeeme our time, is to take time, while time ſerues, ſpecially for ſpirituall vſes, and for the amendment of our liues. When time is thus numbred and redeemed, then ſhall the good account bee made before God and men. VVherefore miſerable is the caſe of them, that ſpend their daies in idleneſſe, in riot, and ſporting, in chambering, and wantonneſſe. For they neither number time, nor redeeme it: and therefore they are farre from any good account.

The ſecond point is, that Paul goes vp to Hieruſalem to viſit Peter, that is, to ſee him, to be acquainted with him, to talke, and conferre with him. Hence it appeares, that there is a lawfull kinde of peregrination, or pilgrimage: in that Paul iourneies from Arabia to Ieruſalem: to ſee Peter. Thus the Queene of Saba, went vp to Ieruſalem, to heare the wiſedome of Salomon. The Law of God was, that all the males in Iſrael, ſhould thriſe in the yeare, goe vp to the place which God had appointed, Deut. 16. This Law was practiſed by Elkana and Anna, 1. Sam. 1. by Ioſeph and Marie, by the Steward of Candaces, Queene of Ethiopia, Act. 8. Neuertheleſſe, Popiſh pilgrimage is vtterly to bee condemned, for two cauſes. One is, becauſe it is made a part of Gods worſhip, whereas now in the new Teſtament, all religious diſtinction of places is aboliſhed, 1. Tim. 2. 8. Liſt vp pure hands in euery place vnto God. Some alleadge, that vowes, which were not commaunded, were neuertheleſſe parts of Gods worſhip, among the Iewes. I anſwer: though men were not commaunded to vow, yet the matter and forme of vowes was commaunded. And in that God commanded the manner of vowing, he allowed the act of vow-making: let the Papiſts ſhew the like allowance for their pilgrimage. The ſecond reaſon is, becauſe popiſh pilgrimage, is not to liuing men, but to the Reliques and images of dead men: which kinde of peregrination, was neuer vſed in the world, till after the Apoſtles daies. For pilgrimage to reliques came in 300. yeares after Chriſt, and pilgrimage to images, after 600. yeares.

In that Paul goes about to viſit Peter, the Papiſts gather the Primacie of Peter, ouer all the Apoſtles, but falſely. For this viſitation argues reuerence: and reuerence is giuen, not only to ſuperiors, but alſo to equals. Againe, primacie is two-folde: Primacie of order, & Primacie of power. Primacie of order, was due vnto Peter, in that he was firſt called to be an Apoſtle, and he was in the faith before Paul. And in this regard, he was reuerenced of him.

The third point is, that Paul abides with Peter at Ieruſalem, and that fifteene daies. His abode with Peter, was in token of mutual conſent, and fellowſhip. Like ſhould be the conſent of the Miniſters of the Goſpel. For their office is to publiſh & perſwade peace between God and men, to which they are vnfitte, that cannot maintaine peace among themſelues. And all beleeuers ſhould bee of one minde, ſpeaking and thinking the ſame things: and this cannot be, vnleſſe there bee a conſent of them that are guides. This conſent therefore is to bee maintained, and greatly to bee prayed for. And when there cannot bee conſent of iudgement, by reaſon of humane frailtie, yet ſo long as the foundation is maintained, there muſt bee conſent in affection. And iniuries offered, may not diſſolue this bond. Though the Church of Ieruſalem ſuſpected Paul, and would not at the firſt acknowledge him for a Diſciple, Act. 9. 26. yet did hee for his part, accept of their loue and fellowſhip.

Whereas hee addes, that his abode with Peter was but for 15. daies: hereby he ſignifies, that he learned not the Goſpel of him: for it could not bee learned in ſo ſhort a ſpace: neither could Paul by the teaching of any man, become an Apoſtle in ſo little time.

19. And none other of the Apoſtles ſaw I, ſaue Iames the Lords brother.

It might haply be obiected againſt the former verſe, that Paul might be taught of ſome other Apoſtle beſide Peter, and that at Ieruſalem: to this he anſwers two thing. One, that there was none of the Apoſtles at Ieruſalem, but Iames: (beſide Peter afore-named:) the ſecond, that he did but ſee Iames.

Here I gather, that if there be any mother church in the world, it is rather at Ieruſalem, then Rome, becauſe the Goſpel was firſt preached there, and went thence into the whole world: and Ieruſalem was for a time guided by two of the chiefe Apoſtles, Iames and Peter.

In that Iames is called our Lords brother, three things may be demanded. One, which Iames this was? Anſ. It was Iames the ſonne of Alpheus: for hee liued 14. yeares after this, Gal. 2. 9. whereas Iames the ſonne of Zebedeus liued not ſo long, becauſe he was put to death by Herod. The ſecond thing is, how Iames ſhould be the Lords brother? Anſwer. In ſcripture, children of the ſame wombe, are brethren: men of the ſame bloud, are brethren, as Abraham and Lot, Gen. 13. 8. Men of the ſame countrey are brethren, thus Sauls countri-men are called his brethren, 1. Chro. 12. 2. And Iames is called our Lords brother, not becauſe he was of the ſame wombe, but becauſe he was of the ſame blood or kindred: For Eli had two daughters, Marie eſpouſed to Ioſeph, and Marie Cleophas, who afterward was married to Alpheus, of whome came Iames here mentioned. Iames therefore was the coſin-german of Chriſt. Therefore Heluidius failed, when he went about to infringe the perpetuall virginitie of the virgin Marie out of this place, as if ſhee had more ſonnes beſide Chriſt. The third thing is, what benefit Iames had by beeing the Lords brother? Anſw. Hee is here called the Lords brother, onely for diſtinctions ſake, in reſpect of the other Iames the ſonne of Zebedeus: and this brother-hood doth not make him the better Apoſtle, or the better man. Outward things doe not commend vs to God. And it is the ſpiritual kindred, by meanes of faith, and our new birth, that bringeth vs into fauour with God, Mat. 12. 49.

20. Now the things which I write, I ſpeake before God, I lie not.

Before, Paul hath auouched ſundry things of himſelfe: that hee preached in Arabia, and Damaſcus: that he went thence to Ieruſalem: that he did not learne the Goſpel there of Peter, Iames, or any other Apoſtle. Now ſome men might haply ſay, that theſe ſayings of his are but falſe & fabulous auouchments: therefore in this verſe Paul defends himſelfe, and iuſtifies his owne ſayings, by a diuine teſtimony.

The words containe 2. parts. An anſwer to an obiection concealed on this manner; I may bee thought to lie, but indeede I lie not. The ſecond is, a confirmation by oath, Before God I ſpeake it. Touching the firſt part, there bee two points to be handled: what is a lie? And whether it be ſinne or no?

A lie is, when we ſpeake the contrarie to that we thinke, with an intention to deceiue. More plainely, in a lie there be 4. things: the firſt is, to auouch and affirme that which is falſe. The ſecond is, to ſpeake with a double heart, Pſal. 12. 2. That is, to ſpeake againſt knowledge, and conſcience, as when a man ſaith that is true which hee knowes to bee falſe, or that is falſe, which he knowes to be true. This makes a lie to bee a lie, and this diſtinguiſheth an vntruth, from a lie. For here it muſt be obſerued, that a man may ſpeake that which is falſe, and not lie: namely, if hee ſpeake that which is falſe, thinking it to be true. For then though hee erre and is deceiued, yet hee ſpeakes not againſt conſcience, and conſequently hee ſpeakes no lie. Againe, a man may ſpeake that which is true indeed, and ſpeake it as a truth, and yet thinke it to be falſe, he lies indeed: becauſe he ſpeakes the truth, againſt his conſcience. The third thing in a lie, is, a minde or intention to deceiue, or hurt. For in the ninth commaundement, that is a falſe teſtimonie that is againſt our neighbour. The 4. point is, that he which ſpeakes that which is falſe, vpon a vanity of minde, without reaſonable cauſe, is a lier. Thus boſters, and flatterers, are liers. And theſe are the things which concurre in the making of a lie.

For the better conceiuing of the nature of a lie, we muſt put a difference between it and ſundry other things incident to ſpeech. Firſt, wee muſt put difference betweene a lie, and a parable or figure. In a parable indeed there is ſomething ſuppoſed or fained; as for example, when the trees are brought in conferring, and conſulting about their king, Iud. 9. 8. neuertheleſſe a parable is farre from falſehood, or lying: for by things fained, it ſignifies and declares an vnfained truth.

Againe, difference muſt bee put betweene a lie and the concealement of a thing: for it is one thing to ſpeake againſt our knowledge, and another not to ſpeake that which we know. And concealments, if there be a reaſonable cauſe, and if it be not neceſſary for vs to reueale the thing concealed, are not vnlawfull. Thus Abraham ſpeakes the truth in part, calling Sara his ſiſter, and conceales it in part, not confeſſing her to be his wife, Gen. 12. 10. Thus Samuel by Gods appointment reueales that hee came to Gilgall to offer ſacrifice, & conceales the annointment of David, that hee might ſaue his life, 1. Sam. 16. 5. Ionas preaches, that Nineue ſhal be deſtroyed within 40. daies, and hee conceales the condition of repentance. The like did Iſay to Ezechias, Iſa. 38. 1.

Thirdly a difference muſt bee made betweene lying and faining: which ſome call ſimulation: not diſſembling, but rather ſembling (if I may ſo tearme it.) And that is, when ſomething is ſpoken not contrary, but beſide, or diuers to that which we thinke. And this kinde of faining, if it be not to the preiudice of truth, againſt the glory of God, & the good of our neighbour, and haue ſome conuenient and reaſonable cauſe, is not vnlawfull. It was not the will and counſell of God to deſtroy the Iſraelites for their idolatry. And he doth not ſpeake vnto Moſes any thing contrary to his will, but ſomething that is beſide, or diuers vnto it, when hee ſaith, Let me alone, that my wrath may waxe hotte, and I may deſtroy them, Exod. 32. 10. And this he ſpake, that he might ſtirre vp Moſes to feruencie in prayer for the Iſraelites, and the Iſraelites to vnfained repentance. Ioſua hauing beſieged Ai, meant not to flie, yet doth he faine a flight, that hee might draw his enemies out of the cittie and deſtroy them, Ioſ. 8. 5. There is a kinde of deceit called dolus bonus, that is, a good deceit, and of this kinde was the act of Ioſua. Thus Phyſitians for their good, vſe to deceiue the ſenſes of their impotent patients. Thus parents inſinuate vnto their children, terrible things, of the Beare, and bull-begger, that they may keepe them from places of hurt and danger. And this may bee done without fault, for it is one thing to contrary the truth, and another to ſpeake or doe ſomething diuerſe vnto it without contrariety.

The ſecond point is, whether to lie, be a ſinne, or no? the anſwer is, yea. For euen in this place, Paul puts lying from himſelfe, and that with an oath. The diuell is ſaid to be the author of all lies, Ioh. 8. And it is Gods commaundement, that we ſhould put away lying, Eph. 4. 25. It is obiected, that the ſporting and officious lie, is not againſt charitie, to the hurt of any, but for the good of men. I anſwer, firſt, though it bee not to the hurt of out neighbour, yet is it to the hurt and preiudice of truth. Secondly, they are deceiued to whome theſe lies are tolde. Thirdly, hee hurts himſelfe that tels a lie, though it bee for the good of men: for when hee ſpeakes the truth indeede, hee is leſſe beleeued. Laſtly, though theſe kinde of lies, ſeeme to be good in reſpect of their end, yet are not they good in reſpect of their nature, and conſtitution. For in ſpeaking, there ſhould be a conformity, and conſent, between the tongue, and the minde, which is not, when any lie is vttered. Secondly, it is obiected, that the Egyptian Midwiues, ſaued the male children of the Iſraelites and Rahab the ſpies, by lying, Exod. 1. 19. Ioſ. 2. 5. and that they are commended for this: I anſwer, wee muſt diſtinguiſh the worke done, from the execution

A of the worke. The worke in ſauing the children and the ſpies, was a fruite of faith and the feare of God, and it is commended: but the manner of putting theſe workes in execution, by lying, is not approoued. If it bee ſaid, that faith and the feare of God, cannot ſtand with a manifeſt ſinne: I ſay againe, that faith, and the feare of God, are imperfect in this life, and therefore they are ioyned with many frailties; and actions of faith, are mixed with ſundry defects, and ſinnes.

Now then, we are to be exhorted, to make a conſcience of lying, and to ſpeake the truth from our hearts. And there be many reaſons to induce vs to the practiſe of this duty. Firſt, it is Gods commaundement, Iam. 3. 14. Secondly, B lying is a conformity to the diuell, and by truth wee are made conformable to God, who is truth it ſelfe. Thirdly, we are ſanctified by the word of truth, Ioh. 17. 17. and guided by the Spirit of truth: and therefore wee are to deteſt lying, and deceit. Fourthly, truth is a fruite of Gods Spirit, Gal. 5. and a marke of Gods childe, Pſalm. 32. v. 2. he hath the pardon of his ſinnes in whoſe ſpirit there is no guile. and Pſal. 15. 2. hee ſhall reſt in the mountaine of God, who ſpeakes the truth from his heart. Laſtly, deſtruction is the lyers reward. Pſal. 5. 6. God will deſtroy them that ſpeake lies: and they muſt haue their portion in the lake that burns with fire and brimſtone, Reuel. 22. 15.

Thus much of the anſwer to the obiection: C now followes the confirmation by oath, [before God.] Here it may be demaunded, how theſe words can be a forme of ſwearing? Anſ. In an oath there bee foure things. The firſt is, an Aſſeueration of the truth. The ſecond is, Confeſſion, whereby the partie that is to ſweare, acknowledgeth the power, preſence, and wiſedome of God, in ſearching of the heart, and that he is both witneſſe, and iudge of all our doings. The third is, Inuocation of God, that hee would bee a witneſſe with vs, and to vs, that wee ſpeake the truth. The laſt is, Imprecation, that God would bee a Iudge to take reuenge vpon vs, if wee lie. Now then, the forme of an oath is a certen forme of words, in which not all, but ſome of the principall parts of an oath are expreſſed; and the reſt D concealed, and yet to be vnderſtood. Ier. 4. 2. there is the forme of an oath, The Lord liueth, and here onely confeſſion is expreſſed. The forme of ſwearing, I call God to witneſſe to my ſoule, 2. Cor. 1. 23. expreſſeth the third part, namely inuocation. The words, Ruth 3. 17. The Lord doe thus and thus vnto me, is an Imprecation. The common forme, The Lord thee help through Ieſus Chriſt, is partly praier, and partly imprecation. And the forme in this place is directly a confeſſion, that God is preſent, to witneſſe and iudge the truth. Thus commonly in all formes of oaths, one part is expreſſed, and the reſt are infolded.

Here firſt wee learne, that the forme of an oath, is to be plaine, and direct in the name of God, and not indirect, or oblique, in the name of the creatures, Gods name concealed. And it is the flatte commaundement of God, Mat. 5. 34. It is alleadged, that Paul, 1. Corinth. 15. 31. ſweares by his reioycing in Chriſt. I anſwer, the words of Paul, by my reioycing, are not an oath, but an obteſtation: for the meaning of his words is this, that his ſorrowes and afflictions which hee endured for Chriſt, would teſtifie (if they could ſpeake) that he died daily. Thus Moſes called heauen and earth to witneſſe, without ſwearing: for in an oath, the thing by which hee ſweares, is made not only witneſſe, but alſo Iudge. Neuertheleſſe, it is not vnlawfull to name the creatures in the forme of an oath, if they bee conſidered as pledges, preſented vnto God, that hee ſhould puniſh vs in them, if we lie. Thus Paul ſweareth, I cal God to witnes to (or vpon) my ſoule. Here they are to be blamed, whoſe common ſwearing is by the creatures; as by their faith, by their troth, by the maſſe, Mary, by this bread, by this drinke, &c.

Secondly, here wee learne to vſe an oath, onely in the caſe of extremitie, namely, when a neceſſary truth is to be confirmed, and when this cannot be done by any reaſon or proofe to bee found among men vpon earth, then may wee flie vnto heauen for proofe, & make God our witneſſe. Thus Paul confirmes his owne calling, when all other proofes failed. And it muſt further be obſerued, that in extremities he vſeth an oath but ſeldome: This ſeemes to condemne their wickedneſſe, that crie at euery word in their common talke, before God, before God.

Thirdly, before wee ſweare, wee are to vſe great meditation, conſideration, and preparation: and therefore Paul in ſwearing vſeth a word of attention, and ſaith, Beholde, I ſpeake it before God. This condemnes the raſh, and cuſtomable ſwearing of men in their common talke: who alſo in that they commonly and raſhly ſweare, commonly forſweare themſelues.

In that Paul confirmes his writings by oath, it appeares that they are of God. For if hee had ſworne falſly, God would haue taken reuenge vpon him and his writings, before this: which he hath not done.

Whereas Paul ſaith, Before God I ſpeake it: he teacheth vs after his own example to bring our ſelues into the preſence of God, to walke before him as Enoch did, Geneſis 5. 22. and as Abraham was commaunded, Geneſis 17. 1. and to doe whatſoeuer wee doe as in the ſight and preſence of God: and to bee afraid to ſinne, becauſe of his preſence. This is the true feare of God, and this is the right practiſe of religion.

21. After that I went into the coaſts of Syria and Cilicia: and I was vnknowne by face to the Churches of Iudea which were in Chriſt.

22. But they had heard onely ſome ſay, Hee which perſecuted vs in times paſt, now preacheth the faith which before he deſtroyed.

23. And they glorified God in me.

Here Paul anſwers an other obiection, which may bee framed thus: Though Paul learned not the Goſpel of the Apoſtles at Ieruſalem, yet might he haply learne it of them in other Churches of Iudea. To this Paul anſwers three things. The firſt is, that he went from Ieruſalem into Syria, and Cilicia. The ſecond, that he was not knowne in perſon to the Churches of Iudea, but onely by heareſay: and hee ſets downe the report that went of him. The third is, that the Churches of Iudea did not diſgrace & ſlaunder him, but they glorified God for him. Of theſe in order. For the firſt, that Paul went from Ieruſalem ſtraight into Syria, and Cilicia, the regions of the Gentiles, there be two cauſes, One, becauſe Paul was ordained ſpecially to bee the Apoſtle of the Gentiles, Act. 9. 15. Rom. 15. 16 The ſecond, becauſe Cilicia was his own conntrey: for he was born in Tarſus a towne in Cilicia: and his loue to his countrey, no doubt, was great. For in the like caſe hee could haue wiſhed himſelfe to bee accurſed for his countrimen the Iewes. From this firſt anſwer, I gather two things. Firſt, if any Apoſtle aboue the reſt, be the Paſtour and vniuerſall Biſhoppe of the Church ouer the whole world, it is Paul, and not Peter: becauſe hee ſpecially was ordained to teach and conuert the nations. The ſecond is, that Pauls often and dangerous iourneies, muſt teach vs to attend on our callings with care & diligence, and not to be diſmaied with the troubles that ſhall befall vs.

The ſecond anſwer, that Paul was knowne to the Chriſtian Iewes, not by face, but by heare-ſay: this may ſeeme ſtrange, conſidering Paul was at Ieruſalem, and trauailed through Iury, into Syria, and Cilicia: but it is the truth: and the reaſon of it is plaine. The office of an Apoſtle, is not to build vpon the foundaton of another, or to ſucced any man in his labours, but to plant & found the Church of the new Teſtament, where Chriſt had not bin preached or named, Rom. 15. 20 In this the Apoſtles differ from all the Miniſters of the new Teſtament whatſoeuer. And this is the cauſe why Paul was not knowne to the Churches of Iudea. And here we ſee, that Succeſſion (which the Papiſts magnifie) is not alwaies a note of the true Church, and the true Miniſterie. For the miniſterie of the Apoſtles, and the Apoſtolicall Churches wanted it. And this is for the greater commendation of them.

Againe, it is ſaid, that Paul was not knowne to the Churches of Iudea, which were in Chriſt. Where let it be obſerued, that 4. yeres after the aſcenſion of Chriſt, the Apoſtles had gathered, and planted ſundry Chriſtian Churches in Iudea. This greatly commends the efficacie, and power of the Goſpell. For hardnes of heart had ouer-ſpread the nation of the Iewes, and they had reiected and crucified the Lord of life. And thus that is verified which Chriſt ſaith, that his Diſciples beleeuing in him, ſhould do greater things, then he had done, Ioh. 14. 12. for he by preaching did not conuert multitudes of the Iewes, & range them into Churches, as the Apoſtles did. Here again, we ſee that the Goſpel, by means of the corruption of man, is an occaſion of diuiſions. For after the Goſpel was preached by the Apoſtles, there a roſe a diuiſion of churches among the Iewes. Some were Churches in Chriſt, and ſome out of Chriſt, namely, the Synagogues which refuſed Chriſt. We may not therefore now adaies take offence, if ſchiſmes and diſſentions follow, where the Goſpell is preached: it is not the fault of the Goſpel, it is the fault of men.

That Paul might the better ſhew, that hee was knowne to the Churches of the Iewes, onely by heare-ſay, hee expreſſes the report that went of him. Hence I gather, it is not vnlawfull to tell and heare reports, or newes, ſo be it, they be not to the preiudice of the truth of the glorie of God, and the good name of men. Nay it is commendable to report, and heare newes, that concernes the increaſe of Gods kingdome, and the conuerſion of wicked men.

In the report, two things are ſet down, what Paul did? He once perſecuted vs, and deſtroyed the faith: what he now doth? He preacheth the Goſpel. By this we ſee that verified which Iſay foretolde, that the lyon, the wolfe, the lambe, &c. ſhould peaceably liue together. Againe, here wee ſee, that all things vpon earth, are ſubiect to change and alteration: ſo as it may be ſaid, heretofore it was thus, and thus, but now it is otherwiſe. Therefore in miſeries, we may not be ouer-much grieued, for they are changeable: and in earthly things, we may not reioyce ouer-much, becauſe they are mutable, & ſubiect to daily alterations. Our ſpecial care muſt be, to auoid eternall and vnchangeable euils; as death, and the cauſe of death, namely, ſinne; and to purchaſe to our ſelues, the good things which are euerlaſting; namely, the fauour of God, and euerlaſting life.

Furthermore, the thing which Paul aimed at, in perſecuting the Church, is to bee conſidered, and that was, that hee might deſtroy the faith. By faith, wee are to vnderſtand the doctrine of the Goſpell, and withall, the vertue, or gift of faith, whereby it is beleeued: for the diuell and his inſtruments ſeeke the ouerthrow of both. Chriſt ſaith, Satan deſired to ſift his Diſciples, that is, to ſift all their faith out of their hearts, and to leaue nothing in them but chaffe, Luk. 22. 32. Here then, it may be demanded, whether faith may be loſt, ſpecially in the children of God, in the time of temptation, and perſecution? I anſwer thus: There be three degrees of faith. The firſt conſiſts in two things, knowledge of the Goſpel, and Aſſent to the truth of it. This faith the diuels haue, and it may be loſt, and beleeuers by this faith, may quite fall away. The ſecond kinde of faith containes knowledge, aſſent, a taſte or ioy in the goodneſſe of God, a zeale to the word of God, and apparent fruites of holineſſe. This faith alſo (beeing better then the former) may be loſt in the daies of perſecution: and beleeuers by this faith, may fall quite away, Luke 8. 13. The third faith, (called the faith of the Elect) containes three parts, knowledge of the Goſpell, aſſent to the truth of it, and apprehenſion, whereby wee doe receiue, and applie Chriſt with his benefits to our ſelues, or the promiſe of remiſſion of ſinnes, and life euerlaſting. This faith may bee greatly waſted, for things appertaining to it may bee loſt, as boldneſſe to come vnto God, the ſenſe or feeling of ſpirituall ioy, and ſuch like. Againe, it may bee buried for a time in the heart, and not ſhew it ſelfe, either by fruites, or any profeſſion: and in reſpect of the meaſure of it, it may be leſſened and maimed: and if wee reſpect the nature of it, it is as apt to bee loſt, as any other grace of God: for there is nothing by nature vnchangeable, but God. Neuertheleſſe, where this faith is in truth, it is neuer by affliction and temptation put out or extinguiſhed: becauſe God in mercy confirmes it by new grace. Chriſt ſaith to Peter, I haue prayed for thee, that thy faith faile not, Luk. 22. 32. And this priuiledge haue all the godly, for God promiſeth, that they ſhall not bee tempted aboue their ſtrength, 1. Cor. 10. 13. Indeed perſecutors are ſaid to deſtroy the faith: becauſe this is their intent, and they endeauour to doe what they can: but God preuents their deſires, by eſtabliſhing true faith, that it may not vtterly faile.

It may be obiected to the contrary on this manner: The child of God may fall into perſecution, and deny Chriſt: by this fall, hee is guilty of a great offence: being guilty, he hath not pardon of his offence: and being without pardon, he is without faith. Touching guiltineſſe, I anſwer thus: The childe of God when he fals, is indeede guilty: but how? Guiltie in reſpect of himſelfe, or as much as in him lies: becauſe he hath done that which is worthie of death, and he hath done all hee can to make himſelfe guilty. But he is not guilty to condemnatiõ, becauſe God on his part, doth not breake off the purpoſe of adoption, and adiudge him to wrath.

Secondly, touching the pardon of his offence, I anſwer thus: In pardon there be foure degrees: the decree of pardõ before al worlds: the promiſe of pardon in the beginning of the wolrd, The ſeed of the woman, &c. The procurement of pardon vpon the croſſe: and the donation, or the giuing of the pardon. This donation is an action of God, whereby hee giues and communicates Chriſt vnto vs, and applies to our conſciences the remiſſion of our ſinnes. In this donation, there is required a hand to giue, and a hand to receiue. The hand of God, whereby hee giues, is the word preached, and the Sacraments: the hand to receiue, is our faith. The giuing of pardon is neceſſarie: for though ſinnes bee pardoned, in the decree of God, by his promiſe in the word, and by procurement vpon the croſſe: yet pardon is no pardon to vs, till it be giuen vnto vs by God. Furthermore, this giuing is not altogether at one inſtant, but it beginnes in the conuerſion of a ſinner, and is often iterated in the vſe of the word and Sacraments, to the death. Paul wils the Corinthians reconciled to God, ſtill to bee reconciled, 2. Corinthians 5. 21. And wee are taught, euery day to pray to God, to giue vs the pardon of our ſinnes. This giuing is two-folde; conditionall, and abſolute. Conditionall, when God giues the pardon of ſinne vpon condition. Thus in baptiſme, and in the firſt conuerſion of a ſinner, all ſinnes without exception, are pardoned; yea future ſinnes: yet not ſimply, whether a man repent or no, but vpon condition of future repentance. The abſolute donation is, when a man repents or renewes his repentance: for then the pardon of ſinne is ſimply and fully without condition, applied & reuealed to the conſcience. When Dauid confeſſed his ſin, Nathan, in the name of the Lord ſaith, Thy ſinne is forgiuen thee, 2. Sam. 12.

Now then, to come to the point, the childe of God hath pardon of his fall, in reſpect of the decree to pardon, in reſpect of the generall promiſe of pardon, in reſpect of the procurement of pardon, in reſpect of the conditionall donation of pardon, which is made in baptiſme: and he may be ſaid to want pardon, in that the pardon of his offence is not fully and abſolutely giuen him till he recouer himſelfe, and renew his repentance. If it be here demaunded, what the childe of God askes, when he praies for pardon day by day? I anſwer, he praies for two things. Firſt, that God would continue to ſhew his fauour, and to impute the merits of Chriſt vnto him, whereas he for his part by his offence, deſerues to bee depriued of all fauour. Secondly, hee askes the giuing of the pardon, that is, that God would certifie his conſcience thereof.

The vſe. Seeing the intent of the diuell and wicked men, is to deſtroy the faith (as it appeares in this place, and in the firſt temptation wherewith Sathan aſſaulted Chriſt, Math. 4) wee muſt haue a ſpeciall care of our faith. And firſt wee muſt looke that our faith bee a true faith, leſt wee bee deceiued, as the fooliſh virgins. Secondly, we muſt keep and locke vp our faith in ſome ſafe and ſure place, namely, in the ſtore-houſe or treaſury of a good conſcience, 1. Tim. 1. 9. Thirdly, our care muſt be to increaſe in faith, that our hearts may bee rooted and grounded in Gods loue. And for this cauſe wee are to make continuall experiences, and obſeruations of the loue of God toward vs, and to lay them all together, and to build a ioyfull concluſion thereupon.

The third anſwer of Paul is, And they glorified God for me: that is, the Churches of Iudea when they heard of my calling, and conuerſion, they conſidered therein the power, the goodneſſe, and the mercy of God, and with ioy they gaue him thankes for it. In this practiſe of the Church, we learne that our duty is to ſanctifie and glorifie the name of God, in euery worke of his. And this ſanctification hath 2. parts. The firſt is, the conſideration of the Diuine vertues that ſhew themſelues in euery worke of God, as his wiſdome, power, iuſtice, mercie, prouidence, preſence, &c. The ſecond is, praiſe and thankſgiuing to God for the ſame. And this practiſe muſt be enlarged to all his workes without exception, to his iudgements, as well as to his workes of mercie. Therefore we are commaunded in perſequution to ſanctifie God in our hearts, 1. Pet. 3. 17. And Moſes, becauſe he failed in the doing of this duty, was barred the land of Canaan. Numb. 20. 12. In England God hath wrought his wondrous workes among vs. He hath giuen vs peace and protection againſt our enemies, with the Goſpel for the ſpace of 40. yeares and more. And our duty is to glorifie God in theſe workes of his: but alas, we doe it not. For the Goſpel of ſaluation is litle regarded of the moſt, and little obedience is yeelded to it. This neglect of ours, in glorifying and praiſing of God, is a great ſinne: and it ſtands vs in hand to repent of it betime, leſt God take away his word from vs, and leaue vs to ſtrange illuſions, to beleeue lies.

Againe, here we ſee what is the right manner of honouring of the Saints, and that is, to glorifie God in them, and for them. As for religious worſhip of adoration and inuocation, it is proper to God: and the Saints deſire it not, Reuel. 22. 9.

CHAP. 2.

1. Then 14. yeares after I went vp againe to Ieruſalem with Barnabas, and tooke with me Titus alſo.

2. And I went by reuelation, and communicated with them of the Goſpell, which I preach among the Gentiles, but priuately with them that were the chief, leſt by any meanes I ſhould runne, or had run in vaine.

IN this chapter, Paul proceedes to iuſtifie and defend his immediate, and extraordinary calling. And this whole chapter ſeemes to depend on the laſt words of the former chapter, againſt which the Aduerſaries of Paul might haply obiect on this manner: Though the Churches of Iudea glorifie God for thee, yet will not the Apoſtles doe it; becauſe thou teacheſt otherwiſe the they teach. To this obiection, Paul makes a double anſwer, in this chapter. The effect and ſumme of the firſt is this: I went to Ieruſalem: I conferred with the Apoſtles there: I had their conſent, and approbation. And the anſwer containes three parts. The firſt, of Pauls iourney to Ieruſalem, in the firſt verſ. the ſecond, of his conference with the Apoſtles, in the 2. verſe: the third, of the approbation which they gaue him, from the 3. verſ. to the 11.

In his iourney, I conſider foure things. The firſt is, the Manner of his iourneying, in theſe words, I went vp, or aſcended to Ieruſalem. And this he ſpeakes, becauſe Ieruſalem was placed and ſeated vpon a mountaine, and compaſſed with mountaines, Pſal. 125. Or againe, in reſpect of the dignitie and excellencie of the place, as we in England are ſaid to go vp to London, from all the parts of the land; becauſe it is the chiefe citie.

The ſecond thing to be conſidered in the iourney is, the time when, in theſe words, then after fourteene yeares. Here two queſtions are to be conſidered. The firſt is, of which of his iournies muſt this be vnderſtood? (for he made fiue iournies to Ieruſalem.) The firſt, from Arabia: the ſecond, when he and Barnabas were ſent by the Church of the Gentiles to carie almes to Ieruſalem: the third, when he went to the Councell at Ieruſalem: the fourth, when he went vp for the keeping of his vowe: the laſt is mentioned, Act. 19. 21. Anſwer. Theſe words are not ſpoken of the firſt, for that was but three years after his conuerſion: neither can they well be vnderſtood of the ſecond: becauſe Paul then was ſent by the Church, and therefore he went not by reuelation. And they cannot well be vnderſtood of the third: for then Paul would here haue mentioned the Councell of Ieruſalem, whereof he was a principall member, ſpecially ſeeing he hath occaſion ſo to doe, and it ſerued much for his purpoſe. The fourth, and fifth iourneies were after a longer time then fourteene yeares. It is likely therefore, that this iourney here mentioned, and deſcribed by Paul, is none of the fiue mentioned by Luke, but ſome other. The ſecond queſtion is, When theſe fourteene yeares muſt beginne? Anſw. It is vncerten. Some thinke, they muſt beginne at his conuerſion; ſome three yeares after, when Paul went firſt to Ieruſalem: and either may be a truth. None muſt here take offence. For though circumſtances of time, and place, beeing things of leſſe moment cannot alwaies be certenly gathered, yet hiſtories for their ſubſtance and doctrines pertaining to ſaluation are plainly ſet downe. And here we are put in minde to be content to be ignorant in ſome things, becauſe the ſpirit of God hath more darkely expreſſed them, or againe becauſe we cannot, by reaſon of our blindnes, gather them.

The third point is, concerning the companions of Paul in this iourney, namely, Barnabas, and Titus. And Paul takes them with him, that they might be witneſſes to the Iewes of the doctrine he taught among the Gentiles: & againe, to the Gentiles of the conſent that was betweene him, and the reſt of the Apoſſes. For the law of God is, that euery matter ſhall be eſtabliſhed by the teſtimonie of two, or three witneſſes. Hence we learne, that if a queſtion ariſe of the doctrine which is deliuered in the publike Miniſterie, then the hearers that are able to iudge, muſt be witneſſes, and the triall is to be made by them. Thus ſaith Chriſt in the like caſe, Why aske yee me? aske them that heard me, Ioh. 18. 21. Therefore great care, and circumſpection is to be had of things publikely deliuered. Againe, whereas Paul makes Barnabas a Iew, and Titus a Gentile, his companions, we are taught to imbrace with a brotherly loue, not onely the men of our owne countrey, but alſo ſuch as be of other nations, ſpecially if they beleeue. For then they are all children of one Father, and pertaine all to one family: and there is no difference of nations now. It is a fault therefore, that men of one nation carrie in their hearts, a generall diſlike, and hatred oftentimes of them with whome they deale and conuerſe, and that becauſe they are of ſuch, or ſuch countries.

The fourth point is, the cauſe of his iourney, in theſe words, and I went by reuelation. Here we are taught, that for the iourneies we make, we are to haue ſome good and ſufficient warrant: though not a reuelation, yet a commandement, or that which counteruailes a commandement: as when we trauaile by vertue of our callings. When Noe had made the Arke, he enters into it at Gods commandement: he abides in it: and when the earth was in part dried, he preſumes not to goe out, till the Lord bad him. Here, three ſorts of men are to be blamed. Pilgrimes, that trauell to Ieruſalem, or other countries in way of merit, or religion. For they haue no warrant. Secondly, trauellers, that goe from countrey to countrey, and out of the precincts of the Church, vpon vaine curioſity, to ſee faſhions. Such when they trauell from their owne countries, yet they trauell not from their vices, but rather goe deeper into them, and come home againe, with many bad and corrupt faſhions. The laſt, are beggers, and Rogues, that paſſe from place to place, that they may liue in idleneſſe, and vpon the ſweat of other mens browes.

Thus much of the iourney: now followes the Conference, in theſe words, and I communicated, &c. Here generally I gather, that Conferences both priuate, and publike, are laudable, and to be maintained, ſpecially, when they tend to the maintenance of vnitie, and conſent in doctrine. The Papiſts blame vs Proteſtants, for condemning Conferences (as they ſay) and Councels. But they doe vs wrong. Indeede the Councell of Trent we reiect, and condemne. For in it againſt all equitie, the Pope was both partie and iudge. In it there was no libertie to make triall of truth. For nothing was propounded but by the liking and conſent of the Pope. Againe, the whole Councell conſiſted of ſuch as were of the Italian faction, whoſe faith was pinned on the Popes ſleeue. Neuertheleſſe, we allow all Chriſtian Councels, lawfully gathered: and we deſire there might be a Generall Councell, for the triall of truth, and for the ſtaying of vnſetled minds: theſe three caueats being remembred. One, that the Councell be gathered by Chriſtian Princes, to whome the right of calling a Councell belongs. The other, that the Pope be no iudge, but a partie. The third, that Chriſt in his word be the iudge, and that the Delegates in the Councell be but as witneſſes, determining all things by the written word.

In this conference, we are firſt to conſider the manner of conferring, which was vſed. Paul ſaith, he communicated with them, that is, he laid downe vnto them, and expounded the Goſpel which he preached; and this he did priuately, that is, with the Apoſtles, one by one, in plaine and familiar manner, as one friend doth with another. Therefore for the maintaining of this conference, there was no aſſembly made, neither was there any diſputation held. Onely Paul declares his doctrine, and they giue aſſent. Hence it appeares, that Paul doth not ſubmit the truth of his doctrine to triall. For he was reſolued of it, and he accurſed him that taught otherwiſe: but his intent was to ſeeke the approbation of the Apoſtles, that he might ſtoppe the mouth of his aduerſaries.

The ſecond point is, the matter of the conference, and that is the Goſpell which Paul preached. Here the Papiſt gathereth, that the Church is the iudge, in all queſtions pertaining to religion, and the word: becauſe it is here the thing that is iudged. I anſwer, firſt, they gather amiſſe. For Paul doth not here ſubmit the Goſpel which he preached, to the iudgement of the Church of Ieruſalem. And it is falſe, which they teach: for the ſoueraigne Iudge of all queſtions and controuerſies in Religion, is Chriſt alone. The power to determine and reſolue in caſes concerning faith, and good life, is inſeparably annexed to his perſon: and in it are we to reſt. The principall voice of the iudge, and the definitiue ſentence, is the written word. And the office of the Church, is no more but to gather, declare, teſtifie, and pronounce this ſentence. It is obiected, that when a queſtion is propounded, the Scripture cannot ſpeake, nor Chriſt in the Scripture, but the Church onely: I anſwer againe, that God aſcribes to the written word, a voice, or ſpeech, Rom. 3. 19. And the Scripture ſpeakes ſufficiently, to the reſoluing of any mans conſcience, in all matters pertaining to ſaluation. Againe, they alleadge, that the Church is before the Scripture: and therefore it beeing moſt ancient, muſt be the Iudge. I anſwer, that the Church was before the writing of the word, but not before the word which is written. For the Church preſuppoſeth faith, and faith preſuppoſeth a word of God. Vpon this our doctrine, they further vpbraid vs, that we will be tried by nothing, but by the Scriptures, euen as the malefactour, that will not be tried by the Queſt, but by the euidence. I anſwer, for the ſatisfying of our aduerſaries, we ſubmit our ſelues to the triall of the Church and Councels, ſo be it, the three cautions before remembred, be duly obſerued: ſpecially, that all things be iudged and tried by the written word, and by reaſons gathered thence.

Againe, the Papiſts hence gather, that the Scriptures are to be approoued by the Church. Anſw. Thus much we grant: yet ſo, as we hold, that the principall approbation of the word, (whereby we are mooued to beleeue and obey) is the word, & from the word, and not from the Church. For the Scripture hath his euidence within it ſelfe, which is ſufficient to make vs beleeue the word to be the word, though the Church ſhould ſay nothing.

The third point is, concerning the perſons, with whom Paul conferred: namely, with them that were the chiefe, that is, with them that were in price and account, as Peter, Iames, &c. Here we ſee, what is the honour and worſhip that is due to excellent men, namely, a pretious and reuerend eſtimation. Thus the name of Dauid was of price in Iſrael for his vertues, 1. Sam. 18. laſt. And thus with the Papiſts, are we content to honour the Saints. Againe, here the Papiſts gather, that they are heretickes, that after Pauls example, will not goe vp to Rome to Peter, and his ſucceſſour, to haue their doctrine and religion tried and examined. I anſwer, firſt, we are content to be tried by the writings of Peter, Iames, Iohn, Paul, &c. And this is the commaundement of God, in doubtfull caſes: To the Law and to the teſtimonie. Iſai. 8. 20. Secondly, I anſwer, that we haue a commaundement, not to goe vp to Rome at this day, to haue our religion tried, Reu. 18. 4. Come out of Babylon my people. Thirdly, I anſwer, that the Biſhop of Rome is Peters ſucceſſour, not in teaching, but in denying Chriſt. And the learned Papiſts confeſſe, that for this ſucceſſion, they haue but a humane faith, grounded vpon humane hiſtorie.

The fourth point is, the End of the conference, Leſt I ſhould runne, that is, leſt I ſhould preach, or had preached in vaine. Theſe words of Paul, are not ſimply to be taken. For the Miniſterie of man, and euery ſermon, brings forth the fruit which God hath appointed. And whether it be vnto the hearers, the ſauour of life, or the ſauour of death, it is alwaies a ſweet ſauour vnto God. The words therfore carrie this meaning: Leſt my preaching ſhould be of leſſe vſe, and profit: or againe, leſt I ſhould preach in vaine, in reſpect of that good which is looked for at the hands of an Apoſtle. And this Paul ſpeakes, becauſe a rumor went abroad, that his doctrine in many things, was contrarie to the other Apoſtles. A And by this meanes, many were kept from receiuing the Goſpell, and the faith of weake beleeuers was quenched. Now then, the end of the conference was, to ſtay this falſe report, that the Miniſterie of Paul might haue paſſage, and that with greater profit.

Hence the Papiſts gather, that the doctrine of Paul was vncerten, and vnprofitable, till it was approoued by Peter. I anſwer, that Paul ſought the approbation of his doctrine, at the hands of Peter, and the reſt: not becauſe it was vncerten, and vnprofitable; but becauſe it was ſlaundered: & the ſlaunder was, that he taught otherwiſe then Peter did. Now to cut off this ſlaunder, he vſeth meanes to manifeſt his conſent with Peter, and therefore ſeekes approbation at his hand. B

Againe, when Paul ſaith, Leſt I ſhould runne in vaine; he giues vs to vnderſtand, that the Miniſterie of the word, is not a worke of eaſe, or pleaſure, but a labour: nay a continued labour, like to the running in a race. It were therefore to be wiſhed, that Miniſters of the Goſpel, would ſo labour, and walke in this calling, that they might be able to ſay with Paul, I haue fought a good fight, I haue finiſhed my courſe, &c. 2. Tim. 4.

Thirdly, hence it appeares, that all beleeuers ſhould haue a certen knowledge of their faith and religion. The procuring of this, was the thing that Paul aimed at, in this conference with the Apoſtles at Ieruſalem. We C muſt not be as children, carried away with euery winde of doctrine, Eph. 4. 14. Gods word requires faith in vs: and faith preſuppoſeth certen knowledge. The firſt, and ſecond commandements require, that we know God, and his will, diſtinguiſh him from falſe gods, and his worſhip from falſe worſhip. Here comes the fault of our times to be conſidered: moſt men among vs, doe not know their religion. A foule negligence. We take paines to learne trades and occupations, that we may haue wherewith to preſerue this temporall life: what a ſhame then is it, that we learne not better to know the doctrine of true religion, whereby our ſoules are to be ſaued?

Laſtly, here we learne, that the office of the D Miniſter is, not only to teach and preach, but alſo to ſtudy, and take care, how by preaching he may doe the moſt good.

3. But neither yet Titus, which was with me, though he were a Grecian, was compelled to be circumciſed.

After the Conference, followes the Approbation, which was giuen to Paul. It ſtands in foure things. The firſt, that the Apoſtles did not compell Titus to be circumciſed. v. 3. The ſecond, that they added nothing to his doctrine, v. 6. The third, that they gaue him the hands of fellowſhip. v. 7. The laſt, that at his departure, they required of him nothing, but the giuing of Almes, verſ. 10.

For the firſt, the words, And Titus was not compelled to be circumciſed, carrie this ſenſe: I for my part was readie to circumciſe Titus, if there had beene a meete occaſion: falſe brethren would haue impoſed a neceſſitie vpon vs: then I and Titus refuſed: and the Apoſtles did not vrge me to circumciſe him.

Here it may be demaunded, how this text can well ſtand with Act.16.v.3. for there Paul circumciſeth Timothie, a Grecian: and here he refuſeth to circumciſe Titus, though he were a Grecian. I anſwer thus. Circumciſion was at this time, a thing indifferent. From the firſt inſtitution, to the comming, and ſpecially to the death of Chriſt, it was a thing commanded, a Sacrament, and a part of Gods worſhip. Againe, after the planting of the Church of the new Teſtament, it was vtterly aboliſhed, and a thing in reſpect of vſe, vtterly vnlawfull. In the middle time, that is, while the Goſpell was in publiſhing to the world, and the Church of the new Teſtament was yet in founding, it was a ceremonie free, or indifferent. It may be obiected, that the whole Ceremoniall law was aboliſhed in the death of Chriſt: I anſwer, it was ſo: and circumciſion was aboliſhed, in reſpect of faith, and conſcience: yet ſo, as the vſe thereof was left to the libertie of the people of God for a while. Circumciſion at this time was as a corps that is dead, yet vnburied, and onely laid out; and ſo it muſt remaine for a time, that it may be buried with honour. It may againe be obiected, that Baptiſme was come in the roome of circumciſion: and that therefore circumciſion was but an idle and emptie ceremonie. I anſwer, it was not vſed as a Sacrament at this time, or as a part of Gods worſhip, or as a matter of neceſſitie, but onely as a free ceremonie, and that onely then, when it tended to the edification of men.

Beeing then a thing indifferent, it might as occaſion ſerued be vſed, or not vſed. Therfore Paul condeſcending to the weakeneſſe of the beleeuing Iewes, circumciſed Timothie: and that he might not offend the godly, and hinder Chriſtian libertie, he refuſed to circumciſe Titus.

Here a great queſtion is anſwered, whether we may vſe things indifferent, as oft as we wil, and how we will: The anſwer is, No. Things are not called indifferent, becauſe we may vſe them indifferently, or not vſe them when we will, and how we will: but becauſe in themſelues, or in their own nature, they are neither good nor euill, and we may vſe them well, or ill, and we may againe not vſe them well or euill. Furthermore, there be two things which reſtraine the vſe of things indifferent: the law of charitie, and the lawes of men. The law of charitie is this, Things indifferent in the caſe of ſcandall, ceaſe to be indifferent, and are as things morall, that is, either forbidden, or commaunded. Paul ſaith, if to eate fleſh, be to the offence of his brother, he will eate no fleſh while the world ſtands, 1.Cor.8.13. And though he circumciſed Timothie, yet would he not circumciſe Titus, leſt he ſhould offend the godly, and A by his example, hurt Chriſtian liberty.

Likewiſe, the good lawes of men, whether ciuill or Eccleſiaſticall, tending to the common good, and ſeruing for edification, reſtraine the vſe of things indifferent, ſo that they which ſhall do otherwiſe then theſe lawes command, with a contemptuous, or diſloyall minde, are guilty before God; yet here two cautions muſt be remembred. One, that the lawes of men doe not change the nature of things indifferent: for it is the propertie of God, by willing this or that, to make it good, or euill. Neither doe they take away the vſe of things indifferent. For libertie graunted by a ſoueraigne power, cannot be reuerſed by an B inferiour power. Therefore humane lawes do no more, but temper, and moderate, the ouercōmon vſe of things indifferent. The ſecond caution is, That when the end of a law ceaſeth, when there is no contempt of the authoritie that made the law, when no offence is giuen: a thing indifferent remaines in his free vſe without ſinne, or breach of conſcience.

Againe, here we learne, that a thing indifferent, when it is made neceſſarie to ſaluation, (as Circumciſion was) is not to be vſed. This concluſion ſerues to ouerthrow the Popiſh religion. For it ſtands in the obſeruation of things indifferent, as meats, drinkes, apparell, times, &c. And the vſing, or the not vſing of them is made neceſſarie euen in regard of C mans ſaluation. For the abſtinence from things that are by nature indifferent, is made a part of Gods worſhip, and meritorious of eternall life. For example: to marrie, or not to marrie, is for nature a thing indifferent: and therefore when abſtinence from marriage is made neceſſarie (as it is in diuers orders of men and women) the nature of the thing is changed, which God hath left free, and it is a doctrine of diuels, which is taught.

Here againe we learne, to make difference of perſons. Some are weake, ſome are obſtinate. Weake ones are ſuch, as hauing turned vnto God, and carrying in their hearts a purpoſe in all things to pleaſe God, neuertheleſſe doe ſundrie things amiſſe, vpon ſimple igno- D rance, or badde cuſtome, till they be better informed. Of theſe Paul ſaith, that he became all to all, that he might ſaue ſome, 1.Cor.9.22. And for their ſakes he condeſcended to circumciſe Timothie. And if we that haue ſcarce a droppe of mercie in vs, muſt thus beare with them that are weake, much more wil God do it, who is mercie it ſelfe. The good ſhepheard brings home the ſtray ſheepe vpon his ſhoulders: he carries his lambs in his boſome. Iſa. 40. 11. He will not quench the ſmoaking flaxe, Iſa.42. He ſpares them that feare him, as a father ſpares his child. Mal. 3.17. This beeing alwaies remembred, that weake ones truly turne to God, and carrie in their hearts an honeſt purpoſe not to ſinne againſt his lawes at any time wittingly, and willingly. Obſtinate perſons, are ſuch as profeſſe the faith, and yet hold and practiſe bad things of wilfull ignorance, and of malice. Theſe perſons are not to be borne with, nor to be reſpected: and in reſpect of them, Paul would not circumciſe Titus.

Laſtly, in that Titus was not compelled to be circumciſed, it may be demanded, whether Recuſants may be compelled to the exerciſes of religion? I anſwer, yea: for exerciſes of religion are not things indifferent, as Circumciſion was. Ioſias made a couenant with the Lord, and he cauſed all his ſubiects to ſtand to it, 2. Chr. 34.32. The king at the marriage feaſt of his ſonne ſaith of the gueſts, Compell them to enter in, Luk. 14.23. It is obiected, that men may not be compelled to beleeue. I anſwer: it is the commandement of God, prooue the ſpirits, 1. Ioh.4.1. And this commandement pertaines to all perſons. Therefore though men may not be compelled to beleeue: yet may they be compelled to come to the congregation, to heare our ſermons, and therein the reaſons and grounds of our doctrine, that they may trie what is the truth, and cleaue vnto it. For this is their duty.

4. For all the falſe brethren, that crept in: who came in priuily to ſpie out our libertie which we haue in Chriſt Ieſus, that they might bring vs into bondage.

5. To whome we gaue not place by ſubiection for an houre, that the truth of the Goſpell might continue with you.

Paul had ſaid before, that Titus was not compelled to be circumciſed: now he addes, For all the falſe brethren, that is, though the falſe brethren did what they could to the contrarie. Here then Paul ſets downe, who were the cauſe that Titus was not circumciſed, namely, certaine perſons at Ieruſalem, and them he ſets forth by two properties, they are falſe brethren, and they crept into the Church. Touching the firſt, by it we learne, that the Church of God vpon earth, euen when it is at the beſt, hath wicked men, and hypocrites in it. In Adams family, there is Cain: in the Arke, there is Cham: in Chriſts family, or ſchoole, there is Iudas. In the Church of Ieruſalem, planted and gouerned by the chiefe Apoſtles, there be falſe brethren. The true ſheepe be often without, and wolues within. Therefore we may not ſo much as dreame of a perfection of the Church of God vpon earth; ſo long as wicked men be mixed with true beleeuers.

Againe, theſe aduerſaries of Paul, are called falſe brethren, becauſe they ioyned Circumciſion with Chriſt, as a neceſſarie cauſe of iuſtification, and ſaluation. Hence it followes, that the Church of Rome, is a falſe Church: becauſe it ioynes workes with Chriſt, in the caſe of our iuſtification, and that as meritorious cauſes.

Their ſecond propertie is, that they crept into the Church, which I conceiue on this manner. The Church of God is as a ſheepe-fold, or houſe, Ioh. 10. 1. Chriſt is the onely doore. A Now Paſtours, that teach Chriſt aright, are ſaid to enter in by this doore: they which teach any other way of ſaluation, are ſaid to clime in an other way: and they which teach Chriſt, ioyning ſome other thing with him in the cauſe of ſaluation, are ſaid to Creepe in, becauſe in appearance, they maintaine Chriſt, and yet, becauſe they adde ſomething to Chriſt, they neither enter, nor continue in the true Church, with any good warrant from God. In this, they are like the ſerpent. Liuing creatures were all placed in Eden: and Man was placed in the garden of Eden called Paradiſe, and ſo were not beaſts. How then comes the ſerpent in? why, in all likelihood it crept in. And ſo do falſe brethren into the Church. Hence I gather B that falſe brethren, are not true, and liuely members of the viſible Church: though they be members in appearance. For if they were in their right place, they ſhould not be ſaid to creepe in. The true members of the Church creepe not into the myſticall bodie, but are built and ſet vpon the foundation by God. It may be alleadged, that they are baptiſed, & thereby made members of the Church. I anſwer: that faith makes vs members of Chriſt, and conſequently of the true Church: and baptiſme doth but ſeale our inſition into Chriſt, and ſerues as a meanes of admiſſion into the outward ſocietie of the congregation: and the outward waſhing doth not make any man a member of Chriſt. Againe, it followes C hence, that falſe brethren are not members of the Catholike Church. For the viſible Church is part of the Catholike: and therfore they which are not reall members of the true viſible Church, are not members of the Catholike.

Againe, in that falſe brethren creepe into the congregation, hence it appeares, that no man can ſet downe the preciſe time, when errours had their beginning. For the authors thereof enter in ſecretly, not obſerued of men. The enuious man ſowes his tares when men be aſleepe, Math. 13. It ſufficeth therefore, if we can ſhew them to be errours by the word, D though we cannot deſigne the ſet time when they began. The time when a ſhippe ſinketh, we often obſerue: but the time when it firſt drew water, we doe not. Let the Papiſts thinke vpon this.

Paul hauing thus declared who were the cauſes that Titus was not circumciſed, goes on, and ſhewes, how they were cauſes. The effect, and ſumme of his declaration, is this: They vrged the obſeruation of the Ceremoniall law, as neceſſarie: and hereupon we refuſed to circumciſe Titus. Firſt therefore, Paul ſets downe how they vrged circumciſion, and that by three degrees. Firſt, they came in priuily. Secondly, they ſpie out their liberty. Thirdly, they labour to bring them into bondage. Againe, Paul ſets downe the manner of their refuſall, in three things. We gaue not place for an houre. We gaue not place by ſubiection. We gaue no place, that the truth of the Goſpel might continue with you.

The firſt degree or ſteppe in their vrging of circumciſion, was, that They came in priuily: that is, they ioyned themſelues in fellowſhip with the Apoſtles, and in ſhew pretended the furtherance of the Goſpel: and yet indeede meant nothing leſſe: though their fraud, and wickedneſſe was not perceiued. Here then the foundation they lay of all their naughtie dealing, is their diſſembling, which Paul here notes and condemnes. On the contrarie, our duty is, to be indeed that which we profeſſe ourſelues to be: and to profeſſe no more outwardly, then we are inwardly: and to approoue our hearts to God, for that which we profeſſe before men.

The ſecond ſteppe or degree is, that they ſpie out the libertie which Paul, and the reſt had by Chriſt: that is, they conferre with the Apoſtles; and inquire of them what libertie they haue by Chriſt, in reſpect of the Ceremoniall law of God: and this they doe, not of a minde deſirous to learne, but for aduantage ſake. There be two kinds of ſpying: one lawfull; the other vnlawfull. Lawfull, as when in iuſt and lawful warre, we inquire into the counſels and doing of our enemies. Numb. 13. 1. Vnlawful, when men prie into any thing, or matter, to find a fault. Thus hypocrites ſpie faults in the perſons and liues of men; that they may haue ſomewhat whereby to diſgrace them, Math. 7. 4. Thus Atheiſts prie into the Scriptures, that they may confute them. Thus ſundrie hearers, come to ſermõs, that they may carpe. Thus our enemies, inquire into our religion, that they may finde (as they ſuppoſe) exceptions, vntruthes, and contradictions. And in the Church of Ieruſalem, falſe brethren inquire, how farre Chriſtian liberty extends, that they may ouerthrow it. This kind of ſpying, is a common fault; we muſt take heede of it, and apply the eie of our mind to a better vſe. Firſt, we are to be ſpies, in reſpect of our owne ſins and corruptions, to ſpie them out. Lam. 3. 40. Let vs ſearch our waies, and inquire, and turne againe to the Lord. Againe, we are to plaie the ſpies, in reſpect of our ſpirituall enemies, that we may finde out the temptations of the fleſh, the world, and the diuell. Thirdly, we muſt be as ſpies, in ſearching of the Scriptures, Ioh. 5. 39. that we may vnderſtand the words of the law of God, and finde comfort to our ſoules.

The third and laſt degree of vrging, is, that the falſe brethren ſeeke to bring the Apoſtles in bondage, that is, to binde them to a neceſſarie obſeruation of the ceremoniall law. Here let vs marke the practiſe, and pollicie of the diuell. Libertie from ſinne, death, and the ceremoniall law, is the treaſure of the Church: and therefore the diuell ſeekes to ouerthrow it, by holding men in bondage vnder aboliſhed ceremonies. Thus at this day, they of the Popiſh church, are in bondage vnder an heape of humane traditions, beeing indeed, a yoake farre heauier, then that of the ceremoniall law. Againe, when men profeſſe the name of Chriſt, the diuell is content with it: and he indeauours with all his might, euery where to hold them vnder the bondage of ſinne, and to hold them in his ſnare at his will. Thus vnder the name of Chriſtianitie, there be ſwarmes of Atheiſts, Epicures, Libertines, worldlings, and prophane perſons. At this time, according to auncient cuſtome, we celebrate the memoriall of the birth of Chriſt; and yet no time ſo full of diſorder as this. For the moſt that profeſſe Chriſt, take and challenge to themſelues, a licentious libertie, to liue and do as they liſt: and this kind of libertie, is flat bondage. But they that are ſeruants of Chriſt indeed, ſhould take heed of this bondage: For beeing free from ſinne, they ſhould be ſeruants of nothing but righteouſneſſe. Rom. 6. 18. They that be of a corporation, ſtand for their liberties: what a ſhame then is it, that men ſhould loue in bondage, and neglect the ſpirituall libertie, which they haue by Chriſt?

Thus we ſee, how the falſe brethren vrged circumciſion: now let vs come to Pauls refuſal. The firſt point is, that they would not giue place for an houre. It ſeemes they were requeſted to vſe circumciſion but once; but they would not yeeld, ſo much as once: becauſe their act would haue tended to the preiudice of Chriſtian libertie, in all places. Here we learne, that we may not vſe the leaſt ceremonie that is in the caſe of confeſſion before our aduerſaries, that is, when they ſeeke to oppreſſe the truth by force, or by fraud, and make ceremonies, ſignes, and tokens, of the confeſſion of any vntruth. Iulian the Emperour ſitting in a chaire of eſtate, gaue gold to his ſouldiers, one by one, withall commanding to caſt of frankincenſe, ſo much as a grain into the fire, that lay vpon an heatheniſh altar before him. Now Chriſtian ſouldiers refuſed to doe it: and they which had not refuſed, afterward recalled their act, and willingly ſuffered death.

Theodoret hiſt. l. 4. c, 16.

Againe, here we learne, that we are not to yeeld from the leaſt part of the truth of the Goſpel, that God hath reuealed to vs. This truth is more pretious, then the whole world beſide: and heauen and earth ſhal rather paſſe, then the leaſt title of it ſhall not bee accompliſhed. The commiſſion of the Apoſtles was to teach them, to doe all things, which God had commaunded. Therefore the vnion or mixture of our religion with the Popiſh religion, is but a dreame of vnwiſe Politicks: for in this mixture, we muſt yeeld, and they muſt yeeld ſomething: but we may not yeeld a iot of the truth reuealed to vs. There is no fellowſhip of light with darkeneſſe. 2. Cor. 6. Colacinthus a naughtie pot hearbe, marred a whole pot of pottage, 2. King. 4. 40. Chriſt ſaith in the like caſe of the Phariſies, Let them alone: they are the blinde leaders of the blind, Math. 15. 14. We may yeeld in things indifferent, but not in points of religion. In matters of this world, wee may be indifferent, and of neither ſide: but in matters of God, we may not. There is no halting betweene two religions.

The ſecond point is, they gaue not place by the way of ſubiection. The reaſon is, the Apoſtles were of higheſt authoritie, ſimply to bee beleeued in their doctrine. And they had extraordinary authority, to puniſh them that rebellioully withſtood them. Act.5.5.& 10. and Act.13.20. 2.Cor.10.6. For this cauſe, they were not to ſtand ſubiect to the iudgement, and cenſure of any man. They willingly ſuffered their doctrine to be tried, yet were they not bound to ſubiection, as other miniſters of the new Teſtament are, 1.Cor.14.32. 1.Ioh.4.1. It may bee ſaid, If they would not giue place by ſubiection, how then gaue they place? Anſwer. There is two kindes of yeelding: one by toleration without approbation, the other by ſubiection, which is the greateſt approbation that can bee. By the firſt, it may bee, Paul was content to giue place, but not by the ſecond. Here we ſee how we are to yeeld to the corruptions of the times, in which we liue, whether they be in manners, or in doctrine. We are to giue place by meeke & patient bearing of that which wee cannot mende, but we are not to giue place by ſubiection.

Luk.10.16.

The third point is, the end of Pauls refuſall, That the truth of the Goſpel might continue: that is, that the Goſpel might be preſerued in puritie, and integritie in all things. And by this Paul giues vs to vnderſtand, that if circumciſion bee made a neceſſarie cauſe of iuſtification & ſaluation, the truth of the Goſpel doth not continue. Here let vs obſerue, that when iuſtification, or ſaluation is aſcribed to works, or Sacraments, the truth of the Goſpel giues place, & falſhood comes in the roome. Wherfore the religion of the Church of Rome, is a meere deprauation of the Goſpel, for it makes workes to be the meritorious cauſes of iuſtification, and ſaluation. Nay, which is more, it teacheth men to worſhip a piece of bread, and to inuocate dead men, and to kneele downe to ſtockes, and ſtones.

6. And of them that ſeemed to be great, * ---; (what they were in times paſt, it makes no matter to mee: God accepteth no mans perſon:) for they that are the chiefe, did not communicate any thing to me.

* I learned nothing, or, I was not taught.

Here Paul laies downe the ſecond ſigne of his approbation, namely, that in conference, hee learned nothing of the chiefe Apoſtles. And this hee expreſſeth in the firſt words: in which, the concealement which he vſeth, is to be obſerued. For hauing begun a ſentence, he breakes it off in the middle, and conceales the latter part, and leaues it to be ſupplied by the reader, thus, Of them that ſeemed to be great, I was not taught, or, I learned nothing. The like forme of ſpeaking, is vſed, 1.Chron.4.10. Where Iabez ſaith, If the Lord bleſſe me, and be with me, concealing the end of his ſentence, I will be thankefull, thus, and thus.

In the roome of this concealement, Paul puts an anſwer to an obiection. For ſome man might take exception, againſt his former ſpeech, thus: Thou calleſt the Apoſtles Great, but thou ſpeakeſt fainedly: for thou knoweſt, they were but poore fiſher-men. To this hee makes anſwer, thus: What they were once, it makes no matter to me. Then he renders a reaſon of his anſwer: God accepts no mans perſon. This done, he proceedes and renders a reaſon of his firſt ſpeech: he learned nothing of the chiefe Apoſtles: becauſe, they did not communicate any thing to him, either in doctrine, or counſell.

The vſe. This verſe ſerues to expound other places in S. Iohn. Where Chriſt promiſeth to giue his Spirit to his Diſciples, to teach them all things, Ioh.14.26. and to leade them into al truth, Ioh.16.13. Now theſe promiſes directly, and properly, concerne the Apoſtles: and they are here verified in Paul. Who was ſo farre forth taught by God, and led into all truth, that the chiefe Apoſtles could not teach, or communicate any thing to him. For all this, though Paul & the reſt were led into all truth, that they could not erre, yet were they not led into all holineſſe of life, that they could not ſinne. Paul ſaith, to will is preſent with mee, but he addes, that he cannot do the good he would. Chriſt ſaith to all the Apoſtles, He that is waſhed, and is all cleane, muſt ſtill haue his feete waſhed, Ioh.13.10. Wherefore they are to be rebuked, that thinke there muſt bee no want at all in them that are Preachers of the Goſpel: and hereupon take occaſion to deſpiſe their Miniſterie, if they can ſpie any thing amiſſe in their doings. Vpon the ſame ground, they might reiect the Miniſterie of the Apoſtles. For though they could not erre in preaching, and writing, and though they had no neede to be taught of any man, yet were they not free from ſinne in their liues; and the chiefe of them ſundry times failed.

Againe, here we learne, that there is a good and lawfull kinde of boaſting: and that is, when a man is diſgraced, and his diſgrace is the diſhonour of God, and the diſgrace of the Goſpel. This makes Paul here to ſay, that he learned nothing of the chiefe Apoſtles. For if he had ſaid otherwiſe, hee ſhould haue beene reputed to be no more but an ordinary diſciple: and the doctrine which he taught before this conference, ſhould haue beene called in queſtion. For this cauſe, hee ſtands vpon it, that they did not communicate any thing vnto him. Vpon the like occaſion hee profeſſeth that hee will boaſt, 2.Cor.11.16. Here the ſaying of Salomon may bee obiected, Let another mans mouth praiſe thee, and not thine owne, Prou.27.2. I anſwer, it ſuffiſeth for the truth of ſundrie prouerbes, if they bee commonly, ordinarily, and vſually true, though they bee not generally true. Thus ordinarily, men are not to praiſe themſelues: yet in a ſpeciall and extraordinarie caſe, it may bee otherwiſe. And the manner which Paul vſeth in commending of himſelfe, is to be obſerued. Firſt, hee doth it in great modeſtie: becauſe in ſpeaking of himſelfe, hee concealeth that part of the ſentence, which ſhould haue ſerued to expreſſe his praiſe. Secondly, in praiſing of himſelfe, hee is not carried with enuie, but his care is, to maintaine the good name of the reſt of the Apoſtles, when he ſaith, What they haue bin, it is no matter to me. Here then we ſee, that the Atheiſts doe Paul wrong, who challenge him for pride and preſumption, as though he could not brooke an equall, and withall skorned to learne of any. Againe, by Pauls example we are to take notice of a common ſinne: Mens hearts are ſo poſſeſſed with ſelfe-loue, and they are ſo addicted to their owne praiſe, that it is griefe to them, to heare any praiſed beſide themſelues: whereas loue bindes vs as well to take care for the good name of others, as of our owne.

When Paul ſaith, What they were in times paſt, it matters not to me: we learne, that we are to eſteeme of men, not as they haue beene, but as they are. Peter, Iames, and Iohn, though they had beene fiſher-men, yet are they honoured of Paul, as Apoſtles. Therefore when men haue repented, wee may not vpbraid them with their liues paſt. Neither may wee take occaſion to contemne them that bee in authority, becauſe we haue knowne what they haue beene heretofore: but euery man is to bee eſteemed according to his calling, and according to the grace of God giuen him. Like is Gods mercifull dealing toward vs. For he accepts men, not as they haue beene, but as they are when they repent. Therefore if Sathan ſhall at any time obiect thy life paſt: ſay vnto him thus: Tell me not what I haue beene: but tell me what I am, and what I will be. This ſufficeth when we repent.

God accepteth the perſon of no man.] By perſon is meant, not the ſubſtance of a man, or the man himſelfe, but the outward qualitie or condition of man, as countrey, ſexe, birth, condition of life, riches, pouertie, nobilitie, wiſedome, learning, &c. And God is ſaid, not to accept the perſon, becauſe hee doth call men, beſtow his gifts, and giue iudgement, according to his owne wiſe and iuſt pleaſure, and not according to the outward appearance, and condition of the perſon. Reade Iob 34. 19. It may be obiected, that God deales not equally with them that are equall: becauſe all men are equall in Adam, and of them hee chooſeth ſome to eternall life, and refuſeth others. I anſwer: hee is ſaid to accept perſons, that deales vnequally with men, beeing bound to deale equally: now God is not thus bound: becauſe he is a ſoueraigne, and abſolute Lord ouer all his creatures, and may doe with his owne what he will, Math. 20. 16. Secondly, it may bee obiected, that God had reſpect to Abel, and his ſacrifice, Gen. 4. 4. Anſ. The condition of man is two-folde, outward, inward. Outward, ſtands in worldly, and ciuill reſpects. Inward, ſtands in a pure heart, good conſcience, and faith vnfained. For this onely was Abel reſpected, Hebr. 11. 4. Though God accept not the outward perſon, yet in euery nation, hee that feareth God, is accepted of him, Act. 10. 34. Thirdly, it may be obiected, that God iudgeth euery man according to his workes. Anſ. Though workes appeare outwardly, yet the roote and ground of them is in the heart. And the iudgement of God is according to them, as they are fruites of the faith of the heart.

The vſe. All men are in this to be like vnto God their heauenly Father: not accepting perſons in their dealings. As Magiſtrates in the execution of iuſtice, Deut. 1. 17. Miniſters in teaching, and in the reproouing of ſinne, Mark. 12. 14. and all beleeuers, who are not to haue religion in acceptation of perſons, Iam. 12. 1. This acceptation is the ruine of ſocieties. And it is the common fault. For vſually elections are made, offices beſtowed, and iuſtice executed with partiality, and with blinde reſpects to countrey, kindred, friendſhip, money.

Secondly, we are al taught to feare the iudgement of God, and to prepare our ſelues with all diligence, that we may be found worthie to ſtand before God in that great day. For wee muſt come naked before him, and hee will haue no reſpect to our birth, our riches, our learning. Therefore it is good for vs now to put on Chriſt, that in him wee may be accepted. For with him the Father is well pleaſed.

Thirdly, wee may not ſet our hearts vpon the outward things of this world: becauſe God doth not reſpect vs for them. But wee are earneſtly to ſeeke after the things that make vs accepted with God; as true faith, righteouſneſſe, and good conſcience, Rom. 14. 17.

Againe, ſuperious muſt be admoniſhed to deale moderately with their inferiours, Coloſſ. 2. 11. Againe, inferiours are to comfort themſelues if they be oppreſſed: in that God the Iudge of all, accepts no perſons.

Laſtly, here wee learne, that when we ſhall haue immediate fellowſhip with God in heauen, all outward reſpect of perſons ſhall ceaſe. God himſelfe, and the Lambe Chriſt Ieſus, ſhall be all in all to the Elect.

In the ende of the verſe, Paul addes: For they communicated nothing to me. But to the contrarie, Rom. 1. 12. may be obiected: where Paul deſires to come to Rome, that hee might be comforted by their mutuall faith, both his and theirs. Anſ. Though the Apoſtles did communicate nothing to Paul, in reſpect of doctrine or iudgement; yet might they, or the meaneſt beleeuers, conferre ſomething vnto him, in reſpect of comfort, or the confirmation of his faith: and thus much he ſignifieth to the Romanes. Here is a good item for them that come to no Sermons, becauſe they can learne nothing. But the caſe they were as learned as the Apoſtles, yet might they profit in hearing, in reſpect of comfort, of faith, and good affection.

7. But on the contrary, when they ſaw that the Goſpell ouer the vncircumciſion was committed vnto mee, as the Goſpel ouer the circumciſion was to Peter.

8. (For he that was mighty by Peter in the Apoſtleſhip ouer the circumciſion, was alſo mighty by me toward the Gentiles.)

9. And when Iames and Cephas, and Iohn, knew the grace of God that was giuen to me, which are accounted pillars, they gaue to me, and to Barnabas, the right hand of fellowſhip that we ſhould preach to the Gentiles, and they vnto the Circumciſion.

The words of, more difficulty are thus to bee explaned. [Contrariwiſe] that is, they did communicate nothing to mee in way of correction, but on the contrarie, they gaue me the hand of fellowſhip. Againe, the words [circumciſion, and vncircumciſion] ſignifie the nation of the Iewes, and the Gentiles, the one circumciſed, the other vncircumciſed. And when Paul ſaith, that the grace of God was giuen to him, hee meanes ſpecially, the gift of an Apoſtle, Rom. 1. 5. Laſtly, to giue the right hand of fellowſhip to Paul, is to eſteeme and acknowledge him for their colleague, or fellow-Apoſtle, by giuing the right hand in token thereof.

The contents of the words are theſe: Here Paul ſets downe the third ſigne of his approbation, namely, that the chiefe Apoſtles acknowledged him for their fellow-Apoſtle, verſ. 9. Secondly, hee ſets downe the manner, how the chiefe Apoſtles acknowledged this fellowſhip: and that was, by making a couenant with Paul, that hee ſhould preach to the Gentiles, and Peter to the Iewes. Thirdly, hee ſets downe the impulſiue cauſe, that mooued the Apoſtles to receiue Paul to their fellowſhip: and that was the decree of God, whereby he ordained, that Paul ſhould bee the chiefe Apoſtle to the Gentiles, and Peter the chiefe Apoſtle among the Iewes, verſe 7. Laſtly, hee ſets downe the ſignes, whereby the Apoſtles knew, that Paul was ordained the Apoſtle of the Gentiles: and they are two; the grace of God giuen him, and the power of his miniſterie among the Gentiles, verſ. 8, 9. Furthermore, the things here contained, are in a Syllogiſme diſpoſed thus:

When the Apoſtles ſawe that I was ordained the chiefe Apoſtle of the Gentiles, and Peter of the Iewes, they acknowledged me for their fellow-Apoſtle, and made a couenant with me, that I ſhould preach to the Gentiles, and Peter to the Iewes.

But when I was with them at Ieruſalem, they ſaw that I was ordained the chiefe Apoſtle of the Gentiles, and Peter of the Iewes.

A This minor is omitted, yet the proofe thereof, is ſet downe thus: For they ſawe the efficacie of my miniſterie among the Gentiles, and the grace of God that was with me, Therefore they acknowledged me for their fellow-Apoſtle, &c.

The vſe. This text makes notably againſt the Primacie of Peter. Firſt therefore, let vs obſerue the ordinance of God here plainly expreſſed, that Paul ſhould bee the chiefe Apoſtle of the Gentiles, and Peter the chiefe Apoſtle of the Iewes. And this may elſewhere bee gathered. For the commiſſion of the twelue Apoſtles ranne thus, that they muſt firſt preach to Ieruſalem and Iudea, then to Samaria: B and in the laſt place, to the vttermoſt part of the earth, Act. 1. 8. And Pauls commiſſion was, that hee ſhould firſt preach to the Gentiles, and in the ſecond place to the people of Iſrael, Act. 9. 16. It may bee obiected, that the commiſſion of all the Apoſtles, was to goe into al the world, & to preach to al men without exception, Marke 16. 15. Anſwer, This power and libertie, Chriſt gaue to all the Apoſtles, and hee did not take it away afterward: neuertheleſſe, hee ordered it by a ſecond decree, that Paul ſhould ſpecially haue care of the Gentiles, and Peter of the Iewes. And this the Lord did in great wiſedome, that confuſion and diſcord might bee auoided, and a regard had of al prouinces through C the world.

Hence it followes, that the primacie of Peter, ouer Iewes and Gentiles, is a ſuppoſed thing. For the ordinance of God is, that Peter ſhall be chiefe ouer the Iewes, and not ouer the Gentiles, which were almoſt all the world beſide. And thus the ſupremacie of the Pope goes to the ground, for if hee holde of Peter, and ſucceede him in authoritie, and office, (as hee pretends) hee muſt challenge a ſuperioritiy ouer the Iewes, and hee hath nothing to doe with vs. For Paul was chiefe ouer the Gentiles, and not Peter.

Secondly, this ordinance of God giues vs to vnderſtand, that the place, Matthew 16. 18. Thou art Peter, and vpon this rocke will I D build my Church, &c. and I will giue thee the keies of the kingdome of heauen: doth not containe a promiſe made to Peter, of a primacie ouer all the Apoſtles, and ouer the Catholike Church. If Chriſt had meant any ſuch thing, in theſe words, hee would not haue aſſigned the Iewes to Peter, and all the nations of the world beſide, to Paul. Thus we ſee, how this text, for many hundred yeares, hath beene abuſed, and is ſtill at this day.

Thirdly, it is falſe which the Papiſts teach, that the place in S. Iohn, Feede my lambes, and, feede my ſheepe, giues a primacie to Peter, ouer the whole world. For by the ordinance of God, this feeding of lambes, and ſheepe, is limited to the nation of the Iewes. Ioh. 21. 15, 16

Laſtly, whereas Euſebius ſaith in his Chronicle, that Peter was Biſhop of Rome, and ſate there 25. yeares, it hath no likelihood of truth: A for then Peter liued in the breach of an expreſſe commandement of God, for a long time: becauſe the Iewes were his ſpeciall charge.

Againe, it is to be obſerued in this text, that Iames, Peter, Iohn, are made equall, all beeing pillars; and Iames is firſt named, and that not without cauſe. For not Peter, but Iames was the Preſident of the Councell of Ieruſalem: becauſe hee ſpake the laſt, and concluded all, Act. 15. 13. Therefore the firſt naming of Peter, in other places of Scripture, is no ſufficient proofe of his ſupremacie.

Thirdly, Peter here is ſaid to make a couenant with Paul, that he ſhall be the Apoſtle of the Gentiles, and Peter of the Iewes. But if Peter had beene head of the Church for 14. yeares together; B and had but knowne the primacie, which the Papiſts giue to him, hee would not haue conſented to this order. It is alleadged, that Paul was the chiefe Apoſtle ouer the Gentiles, in reſpect of paines and labour, and not in reſpect of iuriſdiction. I anſwer, this diſtinction hath no ground in the word of God. Againe, Paul was an Apoſtle, and vſed his Apoſtolicall authority ouer the Gentiles: and there is no Eccleſiaſticall perſon that is, or can bee aboue an Apoſtle. For hee was ſimply to be beleeued in preaching and writing, and had extraordinary power giuen him by God, to puniſh them that rebelled.

Againe, Paul here ſaith, that the Goſpell was committed to him and Peter, that is, that they C were put in truſt with it. Hence wee learne three things. The firſt, that the Goſpel is not ours, but Gods: and that men are but the keepers of it. For this we are to praiſe God. The ſecond is, that the miniſters of the word, are to keepe and maintaine the truth of it, with all faithfulneſſe and good conſcience: and further, to apply it to the beſt vſe, & to the greateſt good of men. For this charge lies vpon them that are put in truſt. The third is, that the Goſpel is a ſpeciall treaſure. For this, we in England are to giue vnto God all thankfulneſſe, ſpecially by bringing forth the fruits of the Goſpel. In this duty the moſt of vs come ſhort: and therfore we may iuſtly feare, leſt God take from vs the Goſpel of life, and D giue it to a nation that will bring forth the fruit of it.

Moreouer, in that Paul ſaith, that God was mightie by him, and Peter, to the Iewes and Gentiles, wee are to conſider the efficacie of the Miniſterie. Of it three cautions are to be obſerued. The firſt, that grace or power to regenerate, is not included in the word preached, as vertue to heale, in a medicine. Paul ſaith, Hee that planteth, and he that watereth, is not any thing, 1. Cor. 3. 7. To regenerate, is the proper worke of God, not agreeing to angels, no not to the fleſh of Chriſt, exalted aboue men and Angels. For the vertue to renew or regenerate, is not in it, as in a ſubiect, but in the godhead of the Sonne. The ſecond caution is, that grace is not inſeparably annexed, and tyed to the word preached; for to ſome it is the ſauour of death, to death. The third is, that the preaching of the word is an externall inſtrument of faith, and regeneration: and the proper effect of it, is to declare, or to ſignifie. And it is an inſtrument; becauſe, when the miniſters of the word, do by it ſignifie and declare, what is to be done, and what is the wil of God, the Spirit of God inwardly enlightens the minde, and inclines the heart to beleeue & obey. Hence wee learne, that it is a magicall fiction, to ſuppoſe that fiue words, For this is my body, ſhould tranſubſtantiate the bread into the body of Chriſt. Secondly, we learn, that the Sacraments do not confer grace, ex opere operato, by the worke done. For the word and Sacraments, are both of one nature (Sacraments being a viſible word.) Now the word, and the preaching of it, doth not confer grace, but only declare what God will confer. Thirdly, by this it appeares, that charmes or ſpels, haue not force in them to cure diſeaſes, & to worke wonders, but by ſatanicall operation. For the beſt word of all, euen the word preached, hath it not. Laſtly, we are here to be put in minde, that wee loſe no time in hearing of the word; for it is a meanes whereby we are cleanſed and renewed. Every branch that bringeth forth fruit, God purgeth it by his word and other meanes, that it may bring forth more fruit, Ioh. 15.

It is a thing to bee obſerued, that the Apoſtles at Ieruſalem, acknowledged Paul to bee an Apoſtle: becauſe he had the gift of an Apoſtle, and becauſe his miniſtery was powerfull among the Gentiles. Therfore, they which haue the gift of teaching, by whom alſo God is powerfull in the conuerſion of ſinners, are miniſters certainely called of God. Let them thinke on this, that vtterly condemne the miniſtery of the Church of England. For many teachers among vs, can ſhew both the gift of teaching, and the power, or the efficacie of their miniſtery.

It is worth the marking alſo, that the Apoſtles are called Pillars. Here we ſee, what is the charge of the miniſters of the word, namely, to ſuſtaine and to vphold the Church, by doctrine, prayer, counſell, good life. Elizeus is called of Ioas, The charrets and horſe-men of Iſrael, 2. King. 13. 4. And the Church of God vpon earth, is called the Pillar and ground of truth, in reſpect of the Miniſtery of the word, 1. Tim. 3. 15.

Againe, in that all miniſters in their places (according to the meaſure of gifts receiued) are pillars, they are admoniſhed hereby to be conſtant in the truth, againſt al enemies whatſoeuer. It is the praiſe of Iohn Baptiſt, that he was not a reede ſhaken of the winde, Mat. 11. 7. All beleeuers are to ſtand faſt in temptation, againſt their ſpirituall enemies, Epheſ. 6. 13. and this they ſhall the better doe, if they be directed by the good example of their teachers.

Thirdly, in that Miniſters are pillers, wee are taught to cleaue vnto them, and their miniſterie, at all times, in life and death. For we are liuing ſtones in the Temple of God: Chriſt is our foundation, and they be pillers to holde vs vp: & therfore not to be forſaken, Deu. 12. 19.

Furthermore, Paul at this time was not accounted a pillar, for he ſaith thus, Iames, Cephas, Iohn, are accounted pillars; as who ſhould ſay, I am accounted none. Thus Paul goes through good report, and euill report, and is content to be contemned.

Laſtly, the example of concord among the Apoſtles is to be obſerued: in that they giue the right hands of fellowſhip one to another.

10. Warning only that we ſhould remember the poore: which thing alſo I was diligent to doe.

In theſe words, Paul ſets downe the fourth and laſt ſigne of his approbation at Ieruſalem, on this manner. At my departing, the Apoſtles warned me to remember the poore, and of no other thing did they giue me warning: therefore there was a full and perfect conſent betweene vs.

In theſe words, two things are ſet downe, the Apoſtolicall warning, and the practiſe of it by Paul. The warning in theſe words, [Warning onely that we ſhould remember the poore.] In them three points are to be conſidered. The firſt, that the Church of Ieruſalem is in extreame pouertie. And the cauſes of it may bee two. The firſt, becauſe the poorer ſort receiued the Goſpell: thus it was in Corinth, 1. Corinth. 1. 26. Not many wiſe according to the fleſh, not many mightie, not many noble. The like haue wee in experiehce at this day: the poorer ſort among vs doe more heartily receiue it, then they of the richer ſort. By this we are taught, that we may not fixe our loue, & our confidence vpon riches: and that they that buy, muſt bee as though they bought not, and they that poſſeſſe, as though they poſſeſſed not. Becauſe riches ſteale away the heart. The ſecond cauſe of their pouertie was, that they were depriued of their riches for the profeſſion of the name of Chriſt, 1. Theſſ. 2. 14. Heb. 10. 34. Here wee are taught to ſitte downe, and to reckon what the profeſſion of Chriſt will coſt vs to the vttermoſt: and wee muſt put this in our account, that we muſt be readie, and willing to part with the deereſt things in the world, for the name of Chriſt. And this reckoning and reſolution muſt wee daily carry about with vs.

The ſecond point is, VVhy the Church of Ieruſalem muſt be releeued by the Gentiles, conſidering by Gods Law, Deut. 15. 11, euery place muſt releeue his owne poore? Anſ. VVe are firſt of all, debters to our owne poore, and they muſt firſt be releeued: this done (in the caſe of extreame neceſſitie) wee are debters to the poore a thouſand miles off. And in this caſe, did the Apoſtles craue releefe of the Gentiles, for them of Ieruſalem.

The third point is, that the Apoſtles themſelues are carefull for the gathering of releefe. Hence wee learne, that it is the office of Paſtours and teachers, not onely to preach and diſpence the word, but alſo to haue care of the poore: and this care is to be ſhewed in exhortation, counſell, ouerſight. As for the adminiſtration and execution of matters belonging to the poore, it belongs to others. If the Apoſtles at any time gathered, carried, & diſpenſed releefe, it was becauſe the Church was not yet founded, and planted; and therefore there was no other to doe it.

Now I come to the practiſe of Paul, in theſe words; Which thing alſo I was diligent to doe. Here firſt let vs marke, that Paul who had ſpoiled, and made hauocke of the Church of Ieruſalem, now gathers releefe, (and as wee ſay) begges for it: and no doubt, the rather that hee may make ſome recompence for the wrong hee had done. By his example wee are taught to make ſatisfaction for all iniuries and hurts done to others, and that to the vttermoſt. Hee that ſteales, according to the qualitie of his theft, muſt reſtore either two-folde, or foure-folde, Exod. 22. 7. hee that maimes a man, muſt pay for his healing, and for his reſting, that is, for the loſſe of his labour, Exod. 21. 19. Daniel ſaith to Nabuchadnezzar, O King, breake off thy ſinnes with almes-deedes, Daniel 4. 24. that is, whereas thou haſt beene giuen to cruelty, and oppreſſion, ceaſe to doe ſo any more, & make ſome recompence by giuing of almes. Dauid ſaith, it is the property of a wicked man, to borrow, and not to repay, Pſalm. 37. 21. Satiſfaction, recompence, and reſtitution, is the way to life, by the appointment of God, Ezec. 18. 7. and 33. 15. If thou reſtoreſt the pledge, and repay that which thou haſt robbed, thou ſhalt liue, and not die. The Lord ſaith, Are the treaſures of wickednes yet in the houſe of the wicked? and hee addes, that hee will not iuſtifie the falſe ballance, Mich. 6. 10, 11. Zacheus in his conuerſion, for known wrongs reſtores foure-folde: and for his vnknowne wrongs he giues halfe his goods to the poore, Luk. 19. 7.

Let vſurers, ingroſſers, and al that oppreſſe, or deale deceitfully, remember this; and beginne to make conſcience of this duty of ſatiſfaction, or reſtitution. And that it may the better bee practiſed, I will further ſet downe fiue points.

The firſt is, who muſt ſatiſfie and reſtore? Anſ. Hee that is the cauſe of any wrong, or loſſe to others: and all they that are acceſſary. Men may be acceſſarie many waies, by commaundement, by counſell, by conſent, by partnerſhip, by receiuing, by ſilence when a man ought to ſpeake, by not hindring, when hee ought to hinder, by not manifeſting that which we ought to manifeſt.

The ſecond is, To whome muſt reſtitution be made? Anſ. To him that is wronged, and beares the loſſe, (if the partie be knowne and aliue:) if he be dead, to his heires: if al be dead, to the pore. If the perſon wronged bee not knowne to vs (as often it fals out) then reſtitution is to bee made to the Church, or commonwealth, and reſtitution is to be turned into almes for the poore, Dan. 4. 24. Moreouer, if both the giuing & the receiuing of a thing bee vnlawfull, as in bribes, and Simoniacall gifts; reſtitution is not to bee made to the giuer, but, as before, it is to bee applied to common vſe, ſpecially to releefe.

The third point is, What muſt bee reſtored? Anſ. The things which are of vs vniuſtly receiued, or detained, either knowne to vs, or vnknowne. If they be knowne, they are in their owne kinde to bee reſtored, or in value, Exod. 21. 19. If the partie who is to reſtore, be in extreame pouertie, and haue not wherewith to make recompence, hee muſt doe that which hee can, that is, hee muſt ſhew a ready, and willing minde: and this is done by confeſſion, and by crauing of pardon. If goods to be reſtored, be for their value and quantity vnknowne, then reſtitution muſt bee made according to the iudgement, and diſcretion of them that are wiſe.

The fourth point is, touching the time when? Anſwer. In reſpect of preparation of minde, wee muſt preſently ſatisfie: yet not in reſpect of execution. For the act of reſtitution may be deferred, if there be ignorance of the right, or ignorance of the fact, if the reſtorer be in extreame neede: or if vpon preſent reſtitution, life, goods, or good name bee endangered.

The laſt point is, in what order and manner reſtitution is to be made? Anſ. Things certaine muſt firſt be reſtored, and things vncertaine after. Among things certaine, that is, which certenly belong vnto another, things bought and not deliuered, are to be reſtored: and Depoſita, things committed to our truſt. If things to be reſtored for their value and quality be vncertaine, the order is this; Reſtitution muſt be made (according to the diſcretion of wiſe men) in ſome part: and for the reſt, pardon to be craued. Againe, in reſtitution, warineſſe is to bee vſed, leſt by ſupplying the loſſes of other men, wee procure to our ſelues the loſſe of good name.

Againe, in Pauls practiſe we ſee an earneſt care and diligence to prouide for the poore. And his diligence is further expreſſed, Rom. 15. 25. 28. where it is ſaid, that hee miniſtred to the Saints at Ieruſalem, and withall, that hee gaue himſelfe no reſt in this duty, till hee had ſealed this fruite vnto them, that is, till hee ſawe it done according to his deſire. His example muſt be followed of vs. It is not enough for vs to giue good words, and to wiſh well, but wee muſt in our places and callings, doe our endeauour, that releefe may euen be ſealed to our poore. And there bee many reaſons to mooue vs. Firſt, let vs conſider that the charge was very great, to maintaine the altar of the Lord in the old Teſtament, with ſheep, and oxen, and offerings of all kindes: and now in the new Teſtament, the poore come in the roome of the Altar. Secondly, the poore repreſent the perſon of Chriſt; and in them he comes vnto vs, & ſaith, I am hungry, I am naked, I am harbourleſſe: therefore, look what we would doe to Chriſt, the ſame muſt we doe to them. Thirdly, the poore haue title and intereſt, to part of our goods: for God is the Lord of them, and wee are but ſtewards to diſpoſe and vſe them, according to his appointment. And his will is, that part of our goods be giuen for the releefe of the poore. If this be not done, wee are theeues in reſpect of the goods wee poſſeſſe. Laſtly, mercy or the bowels of compaſſion in vs, is a pledge, or an impreſſion of the mercie that is in God towards vs: and by it wee may know, or feele in our ſelues, that mercie belongs vnto vs. Thus we ſee what is our duty: now let vs conſider what is our fault. Not to blame any perſon or perſons, it is our common fault, that we are backward & ſlacke in this duty. And the cauſe is, in that we doe not heartily giue our ſelues to Chriſt: and this makes vs to bee ſo ſlacke in giuing our goods to the poore, 2. Cor. 9. 5. Againe, wee commonly liue (as it were) without a law. We doe not with Dauid, ſet Gods Law before vs, Pſal. 119. v. 168. Neither doe wee apply our hearts to his ſtatutes, v. 112. For then would we with Dauid, make haſt to keep the commandements of God, v. 60. Specially this great commandement of releefe: and the rather, becauſe the obſeruing of it, is the enriching of vs all.

Laſtly, let vs marke, that Paul beeing warned of the Apoſtles, was diligent to doe that whereof hee was warned. The like muſt wee doe. It is not ſufficient to heare; but beſide this, there muſt bee in vs a care and diligence to doe and practiſe that which we heare. For this is to build vpon the rocke. And it is a common fault to heare much, and doe little, Ezech. 33. 24.

Verſ. 11. And when Peter was come to Antioch, I withſtood him to his face: for he was to be blamed.

In theſe words Paul propounds the ſecond anſwer, which hee makes to the obiection, mentioned in the beginning of the chapter, to this effect: Though the Church glorifie God for thee: yet will not the Apoſtles doe it, becauſe thou art contrarie to them. Here Paul anſwers, that there was indeede a diſſention betweene him and Peter, when hee withſtood Peter to his face at Antioch: but the fault was not his, but Peters, who was wholly to be blamed.

For the better vnderſtanding of theſe words, three points are to be handled. The firſt is, who was reſiſted? The anſwer is, Peter the Apoſtle. For the intent of this chapter is, to ſhew what agreement there was betweene Paul, and the reſt of the Apoſtles. And there was no Apoſtle of this name but one. Therefore, they among the Auncient, are greatly deceiued, who thinke, that the Apoſtle Peter was not reprooued, but ſome other of that name. The ſecond point is, who reſiſted? Anſw. Paul: and that not for ſhew and faſhion, but in truth, and good earneſt. And this appeares, becauſe in the words following, he ſets downe a waightie and vrgent cauſe of his reproofe. Therefore Ierome and others are deceiued, who thinke that Paul reprooued Peter  in ſhew and appearance*, and not in good earneſt. The third point is, what was Pauls minde and meaning, in reſiſting Peter? Anſw. To doe his office. The kingdome of God, & all things pertaining thereto, muſt haue free paſſage without reſiſtance. The ſecond petition is, Thy kingdome come. Iohn the Baptiſt preached thus, Prepare the way of the Lord, and make his pathes ſtraight, Mark. 1. Saint Paul ſaith, Pray that the word of God may haue free paſſage, and be glorified; 2. Theſſ. 3. 1. Contrariwiſe, ſuch things as hinder the kingdome of God, muſt be withſtood. Therefore Peter ſaith, Reſiſt your aduerſarie the diuell, ſtrong in faith, 1. Pet. 5. 9. And thus men that are inſtruments of euill, are to be withſtood. And here Paul, by an holy reproofe, withſtands Peter for his badde example.

* Simulatè non verè.

In Paul, here firſt we may behold an example of true vertue, in that he reſiſts euill, to the vttermoſt of his power, following his own rule, Abhorre that which is euill, and cleaue vnto that which is good, Rom. 12. 9. Haue no fellowſhip with the vnfruitfull works of darkeneſſe, but rather reprooue them, Eph. 5. 11. In like manner muſt euery one of vs reſiſt euill; firſt, in himſelfe, and then in them that appertaine to him. Therefore Paul ſaith to all, Put on the armour of God, that ye may reſiſt, Eph. 6. 13. Here 2. things may be demanded: firſt, what muſt we reſiſt? Paul anſwers againe, Principalities, and powers, and ſpirituall wickedneſſes: that is, the diuell, and all his angels. It may be ſaid, we haue no dealing with them, for they vſe not to appeare vnto vs. Anſ. The diuell comes not vnto vs viſibly, but in the perſons of euill men, and in the badde examples of all men. This made Chriſt ſay to Peter, Math. 16. 23. Come behind me, Satan, for thou art an offence vnto me, when Peter would haue diſſwaded him from going to Ieruſalem. Againe, it may be ſaid, In what things muſt we reſiſt them? Paul anſwereth, In heauenly things, verſ. 12. that is, in things which pertaine to Gods kingdome, and concerne either the ſaluation of our ſoules, or the worſhip of God. For the diuell ſeeketh by all manner of euils, to hinder theſe good things. Moreouer, this duty of reſiſting euill is ſo neceſſarie, that we muſt reſiſt ſinne, if neede be, to the very ſhedding of our blood, Heb. 12. 4.

Againe, we haue in Paul an example of boldneſſe and libertie in reproouing of ſinne. This was a thing commaunded to the Prophets and Apoſtles, Iſa. 58. 1. Cry and ſpare not, lift vp thy voice like a trumpet, ſhew my people their tranſgreſſion. Ier. 1. 17. Truſſe vp thy loines, ariſe and ſpeake vnto them all that I command thee: be not afraid of their faces, leſt I deſtroy thee before them. Like libertie may the miniſters of the word vſe, obſeruing Pauls rule, 2. Tim. 1. 7. God hath not giuen vs the ſpirit of feare, but of power, and of loue, and of a ſound minde. Where he ſets downe three caueats. Firſt that this libertie in reproouing, is not the fruit of a bold and raſh diſpoſition, but it is a fruit of Gods ſpirit, and ſo to be acknowledged. Reade Mich. 3. 8. The ſecond, that the vſe of this libertie is to be ordered by a ſound minde, whereby we are able to giue a good account of our reproofes, both for the matter, and manner of them. The third is, that all our admonitions muſt be ſeaſoned and tempered with loue: that they tend to the good and ſaluation of them that are reprooued. Theſe caueats obſerued, libertie in reproouing ſhall neuer want his bleſſing, Iſai. 50. 7.

Thirdly, here is an example in Paul, of an ingenuous and honeſt minde. When he ſees Peter do amiſſe, he reprooues him to his face. Contrarie to this, is the common practiſe in backbiting, whiſpering, and tale-bearing, whereby it comes to paſſe, that when a man is in fault, euery man knowes it, ſaue he which is in fault. This vice the law of God expreſſely forbids, Leu. 19. 16. And it is the propertie of a good man, not to take vp a falſe report, Pſal. 15. And Dauid reprooues Saul, becauſe he did but lend the eare to tale-bearers, ſaying, Wherefore giueſt thou an eare to mens words that ſay, behold Dauid ſeeketh euill againſt thee? 1. Sam. 24. 10.

In Peter, who when he was reprooued made no reply, we ſee an example of patience and humility, whereby he humbled himſelfe before the reproouer, when he was conuicted of an offence. The like was in Dauid when he ſaid, let the righteous ſmite mee. Pſal. 141. v. 5.

Whereas Paul ſaith, that Peter was to be blamed, or condemned, not in reſpect of his perſon, but of his example: we ſee that excellent men euen the chiefe Apoſtles are ſubiect to erre, and be deceiued. It may be ſaid, how then may we truſt them in their writings? I anſwer, while they were in deliuering any thing to the Church, whether it were by ſermon, or writing they were guided by the infallible aſſiſtance of the ſpirit, and could not erre. Otherwiſe they might erre, when they were out of this worke, in mind, will, and affection, or action. Thus Ionas, when he ſaw that Nineuie was not deſtroied, was impotent in his anger. Nathan was deceiued in giuing aduice to Dauid, touching the building of the temple. 2. Sam. 7. The Apoſtles at the aſcenſion of Chriſt, ſtill dreamed of an earthly kingdome ſaying, When wilt thou reſtore the kingdome to Iſrael? Act. 1. And Peter being bidden to ariſe, and eate of things forbidden by the ceremoniall law, ſaid, Not ſo Lord, Act. 10. 14.

Thus then, if Peter was ſubiect to errour, the pretended ſucceſſours of Peter, namely, the Biſhops of Rome, cannot be free from errour. It is alledged, that Peter erred in life, and not in doctrine. I anſwer, it was ſo indeed: yet did his bad example tend to the ruine of doctrine, if it had not beene preuented. Therefore, the errour that was in act, if we reſpect the euent, was in doctrine. Againe, I anſwer, that an errour in action, preſuppoſeth an errour in minde, or at the leaſt, ſome ignorance: becauſe the minde is the beginning of the thing done. Thus all ſinners, are called ignorant perſons. Heb. 5. 2. And it ſeemes that the errour of Peter was, that of two euils, it was the beſt to chooſe the leſſe: that is, to chooſe rather to offend the Gentiles, then the Iewes, to whom he was an Apoſtle ſpecially appointed.

Here againe we miſerable wretches are taught to watch and pray, that God wold not leade vs into temptation, cōſidering moſt excellent men are ſubiect to falling. And men muſt be warned not to abuſe Peters example in bolſtering themſelues in their naughtie waies, by ſaying, we are all ſinners, that the beſt man aliue is a ſinner, that the iuſt man falls ſeuen times a day. For the place in the Prouerbs 24. 14. is ſpoken of affliction and not of ſinne: the iuſt man falls ſeuen times, that is, he falls into manifold perils. And further, we ſhould not onely conſider the faults of iuſt men, but alſo their conuerſion and repentance. And againe, to ſinne and to commit ſinne, are two diuers things. Though the godly ſinne, yet doe they not keepe a courſe in ſinning and goe on from ſinne to ſinne.

Verſ. 12. For before certen came from Iames, he ate with the Gentiles: but when they were come, he withdrew himſelfe, fearing them that were of the circumciſion.

Verſ. 13. And other Iewes diſſembled likewiſe with him: in ſo much that Barnabas was brought into their diſſimulation alſo,

The Apoſtle hath propounded his ſecond anſwer in the former verſe: now he proceedes to make a declaration of it. And firſt, he ſets downe the cauſe why Peter was reprooued, and the manner of reproofe. The cauſe is in the 12. and 13. verſes, namely Peters ſin. And this ſinne is ſet forth by foure things. By the name of the ſinne, the matter of the ſinne, the cauſe of the ſinne, the effects of the ſinne.

The name of the ſinne is noted, when Paul ſaith, And other Iewes diſſembled likewiſe with him, v. 13. where I gather that Peters ſinne was Simulation. Simulation of it ſelfe is a thing indifferent, and according to circumſtances is either good, or euill. Lawfull ſimulation is, when men conceale that which they may lawfully conceale, and ſignifie ſomething either by word or deede, that is onely beſide the truth, and not contrary to it. This was the Simulation of Ioſeph, who carried himſelfe as a ſtranger to his brethren in Egypt after he had examined them, and knew who they were. Gen. 42.

A This was the Simulation of Chriſt, who when he was come to Emmaus, made as though he would haue gone further, Luk. 24. 28. Thus Paul among the Iewes, plaid the Iew, 1. Cor. 9. 20. Vnlawfull Simulation is, when ſomething is ſignified, or fained againſt the truth, or to the preiudice of any. Of this kind was the ſimulation of Peter, which tended to the preiudice of the Goſpel, and to the offence of the Gentiles.

The ſecond point is, the matter of the ſin, or the ſinne it ſelfe, which was on this manner. Firſt, among the Gentiles at Antioch, he vſeth Chriſtian libertie, in eating things forbidden by the ceremoniall law: yet after B the comming of certaine Iewes from Ieruſalem he ſeparates himſelfe from the Gentiles, and plaies the Iew among the Iewes. Like to this, was the halting of the Iſraelites betweene God and Baal. 1. King. 18. 21. and the practiſe of ſundry men, who are Proteſtants with vs, and yet in other countries goe to Maſſe: and the practiſe of our people, who change their religion with the times.

Here we ſee the great weakneſſe of Peter, in that vpon a very litle occaſion, and that preſently, he falls away from his profeſſion to his old courſe. In him we may behold our owne weakeneſſe, and conſider what we are like to doe in like caſe. We now profeſſe the Goſpell of Chriſt: yet if any occaſion were C offered, it is to be feared, that many of vs would be eaſily mooued to returne to our old prophaneneſſe, and to the ſuperſtition of popery. But for the ſtaying and the better eſtabliſhing of our mindes, let vs alwaies remember, that they ſhall periſh, who withdraw themſelues from their faith, profeſſion, and obedience, which they owe vnto God, Heb. 10. 38. Pſal. 73. 27.

Againe, here it muſt be obſerued, that Paul in deſcribing the ſin, expreſſeth two actions, his eating with the Gentiles, and his ſeparation from them; the firſt good, and the latter euill. The beginning of his action was good, but the end of it was naught. The reaſon is this: the man regenerate is partly fleſh, and partly D ſpirit: and hereupon it is, that when we will that which is good, we cannot accompliſh it, and euill is preſent with vs. The child of God is like a lame man, that goes the right way, but yet halts at euery ſteppe. Abraham and Sara deſire iſſue, that is from the ſpirit: but they deſire iſſue by Agar their handmaid, that is from the fleſh. Rebecca ſeekes the bleſſing for Iacob: that is a worke of the ſpirit: but ſhee ſeekes it by lying, that is from the fleſh: Peter eates with the Gentiles, that is from Chriſtian liberty, he after ſeparates himſelfe, that is from corruption. Thus we ſee that the beſt workes are imperfect, and mixed with corruption: and that for the beſt workes we muſt humble our ſelues, and ſeeke pardon, not in reſpect of the goodneſſe of the worke, but in reſpect of the defect thereof.

It may be demaunded, how the act of Peter ſhould be a ſinne, conſidering he did onely abſtaine from certaine meates, that he might auoid the offence of certaine Iewes? Anſw. The fact of Peter conſidered by it ſelfe, is not a ſinne: for Paul did the like in playing the Iew: but the circumſtances make it a ſin. For firſt of all, Peter doth not onely abſtaine from meates forbidden by the ceremoniall law, but alſo he withdrawes himſelfe from the companie of the Gentiles, and keepes companie apart with the Iewes. Secondly, he abſtaines not among the Iewes at Ieruſalem, but at Antioch among the Gentiles, where a little before, he had openly done the contrarie, in vſing his Chriſtian liberty. Thirdly, he vſed this abſtinence, when certen Iewes came from Ieruſalem, to ſearch out the liberty of the Gentiles. Fourthly, while Peter ſeekes to auoid the ſmall offence of ſome Iewes, he incurres a greater offence of all the Gentiles. Laſtly, this act of Peter, did tend to the ouerthrowing of Pauls Miniſterie, and the ſuppreſſing of the truth of the Goſpell. Thus then the act of Peter becomes vnlawfull, that was otherwiſe lawfull, beeing ſimply conſidered by it ſelfe. Here it may be demaunded, what Peter ſhould haue done? Anſ. He ſhould haue openly withſtood the Iewes, that came from Ieruſalem: as Paul withſtood them that vrged the circumciſion of Titus: Or againe before he had plaid the Iew, he ſhould haue aduertiſed the Gentiles that for a time he was to yeeld to the infirmitie of ſome Iewes.

In Peters example, we are taught, that we muſt not offend God, though all the world be offended. Leſſe offences muſt giue place, when the great offence is at hand: that is, when God is diſhonoured, and the very leaſt part of his truth is ſuppreſſed.

The third point to be conſidered, is, the cauſe of the ſinne of Peter; and that was the feare of the offence of the Iewes. Here two queſtions are to be handled. The firſt, how Peters feare ſhould be a ſinne? Anſw. There is a naturall feare created by God, and placed in the heart of man. This feare of it ſelfe is good. Neuertheleſſe, by the corruption of nature it becomes euill. And it is made euill two waies. One is, when men feare without cauſe, as when the Diſciples feare Chriſt walking vpon the ſea, and feare drowning when Chriſt was in the ſhip with them. The other is, when there is no meaſure in feare. As when men ſo feare the creature, that they neglect their dutie to God. This was Peters feare, and it was a ſinne in him. For God is to be feared ſimply, becauſe he is Lord of body and ſoule, and can deſtroy both: and he is to be feared for himſelfe, whereas euery creature is to be feared in part onely, and for God, Rom. 13.3.4. By this we are taught daily to inure our ſelues in our hearts to feare God aboue all things.

The ſecond queſtion is, how Peter could haue the feare of God, conſidering he feared A men more then God, at the leſt in this one action? Anſw. There are three kinds of feare. One is, without all ſinne: this was in Adam, and in Chriſt. The ſecond is, altogether ſinful, in the wicked and vngodly, becauſe it is ſeuered from faith and obedience: as when there is a feare of men, without the feare of God. The third is, a mixed feare in them that are regenerate, in whom the feare of God is ioyned with the corrupt feare of man. And in this mixture otherwhiles the one preuailes, otherwhiles the other. And this feare was in Peter: in whom at this time the carnall feare of man, preuailed againſt the true feare of God.

Paul notes feare to be the cauſe of Peters B ſinne, that he may thereby ſignifie vnto vs, what kind of ſinne it was, namely, a ſinne not of malice, but of infirmitie. A ſinne of infirmitie is, when there is a purpoſe in the heart not to ſinne: and yet for all this, the ſinne is committed, by reaſon the will is ouercarried by temptation, or by violence of affection, as by feare, anger, luſt. Thus Peter ſinned. And let it be remembred, that to ſinne of infirmitie is properly incident to ſuch as be regenerate, as Peter was. Euery wicked man makes his ſinne his infirmitie: fornication is the infirmity of the fornicator: drunkenneſſe the infirmitie of the drunkard, &c. But it is falſe which they ſay. For they ſinne with all their hearts when they ſinne.

The fourth and laſt point is, the effect of C Peters ſinne, in drawing the Iewes, and Barnabas to the like diſſimulation. Here we ſee the contagion of euill example. And hence we learne, that Miniſters of the word muſt of neceſſitie ioyne with good doctrine, the example of good life. For firſt of al, it is the expreſſe commaundement of God, 1. Pet. 5.3. Be patternes of the flocke. 1. Tim. 4.12. Be an enſample in word, conuerſation, loue, ſpirit, faith, purity, Phil. 4.8. What ye haue ſeene in me, that doe, Math. 5.16. Let your light ſo ſhine before men, that they may ſee your good workes. Secondly, practiſe in the Miniſter is a part of his teaching. For the multitude doe not marke ſo much what men ſay, as what men doe. Herod did many things, not becauſe Iohn the Baptiſt was a good Mini- D ſter, but becauſe he was a good man, Mar. 6.20. Thirdly, Miniſters haue not the preſence and protection of God, vnleſſe their liues be vertuous and godly. If thou turne, thou ſhalt ſtand before me, Ierem. 15.19. God reueales his ſecrets to the Prophets his ſeruants, Amos 3.7. Laſtly, fearefull iudgements of God belong to Miniſters of wicked liues. Deſtruction befals the ſonnes of Eli and their families, becauſe they by leud example made the people of God to ſinne, 1. Sam. 2.24. The like befell the ſonnes of Aaron for their preſumption.

Againe, al ſuperiours are warned to goe before their inferiours by good example. When Moſes went into Egypt to be the guide of the Iſraelites, the Lord would haue deſtroyed him, by reaſon of the badde example in his owne family, namely, the vncircumciſion of his child. Dauid, for his euill example, whereby he cauſed the enemies of God to blaſpheme, is puniſhed, and that after his repentance, that men might ſee in him an example of Gods iudgement againſt ſinne; 2. Sam. 12. 14.

Here againe we ſee, that the conſent of many together, is not a note of truth: Peter, Barnabas, and the Iewes, altogether are deceiued, and Paul alone hath the truth. Panormitane ſaith, that a lay-man bringing Scripture, is to be preferred before a whole Councell. Paphnutius alone had the truth, and the whole Councell of Nice inclined to errour.

14. But when I ſaw that they went not with a right foot to the truth of the Goſpell, I ſaid to Peter before all men: If thou beeing a Iew, liueſt as the Gentiles, and not like the Iewes, why conſtraineſt thou the Gentiles to doe like the Iewes?

In theſe words Paul ſets down the reproofe of Peter, and the whole manner of it. In it many points are to be conſidered. The firſt is, the time of this reproofe: and that was ſo ſoone as Paul ſaw the offence of Peter. Here we learne, that we muſt reſiſt, and cut off the firſt beginnings of temptation, of ſinne, and of ſuperſtition, becauſe we are prone to euill: and therefore if it once ſet footing in vs, it wil take place.

The ſecond point is, the foundation of the reproofe in theſe words [when I ſaw,] and that is a certen knowledge of Peters offence. Here we are to take notice of the common fault, and that is, that we vſe to cenſure, and condemne men, ſpecially publike perſons, vpon ſuſpitions, and coniectures, and heare-ſay: whereas we ſhould not open our mouthes to reproue, till we haue certen knowledge of the fault. Moreouer, publike perſons, as Magiſtrates and Miniſters, haue their priuiledge, that an accuſation is not to be receiued againſt them, without there be a proofe by two or three witneſſes, 1. Tim. 5. 20.

The third point is, the fault reprooued, which is here expreſſed by an other name, not to walke with a right foote to the truth of the Goſpel: that is, not to conuerſe with men, and to carrie himſelfe ſo, as he may be ſutable to the ſinceritie of the Goſpel both in word, and deede.

Here is a notable duty ſet downe for all men, To walke with an euen foote according to the truth of the Goſpel: and this is done, when in word and deede, and euery way, we aſcribe all the good we haue, or can doe, to grace, to mercie, and to Chriſt: when againe, in word, and deede, and euery way, we giue all thankes to God, for grace and mercy by Chriſt. Here two ſorts of men are to be condemned, as halters in reſpect of the truth of the Goſpel. The firſt, are Papiſts, who ioyne Chriſt and workes in the cauſe of our iuſtification, and ſaluation. The ſecond, are carnall Proteſtants, and all other ſorts of men, that profeſſe the name of Chriſt, & withall challenge to themſelues a libertie to liue as they liſt. For they walke contrarie to the Goſpel, diſioyning iuſtification and ſanctification, faith and good life, remiſſion of ſinne and mortification. This is the riſe and common ſinne of our daies. We are light in the Lord, but we walke not as children of light. We are content to come to the marriage of the kings ſonne, but we come not with the marriage garment. It is to be feared, this very ſinne will baniſh the Goſpel, and bring all the iudgements of God vpon vs. Let vs therefore repent of our vneuen and halting liues: and preuent the Lords anger, by walking worthy the Goſpel of Chriſt.

It will be ſaid, how muſt we performe this duty? Anſw. Two rules muſt be remembred. The firſt is, that we muſt haue and carrie in vs a right heart. For the want of this was Simon Magus condemned, Act. 8. 21. A right heart is an humble and an honeſt heart. The humble heart is, when in eſtimation of our owne hearts, we abaſe our ſelues vnder all creatures vpon earth, and that for our offences: when againe, in the affection of our hearts, we exalt the death, and blood of Chriſt, aboue all riches, aboue all honours, aboue all pleaſures, aboue all ioyes, and aboue all that heart can thinke, or tongue can ſpeake. The honeſt heart is, when we carrie, and cheriſh in our hearts the ſetled purpoſe of not ſinning: ſo as if we ſinne at any time, we may in the teſtimony of a good conſcience ſay, that we ſinned againſt our purpoſe. The ſecond rule is, that we muſt make ſtraight ſteppes to our feete, Heb. 12. 13. And that is done, when we endeauour to obey God, according to all his commaundements, Pſal. 119. 6. and alſo, according to all the powers of the inward man, that is, not onely in action, but alſo in will, affection, and thought. Let vs alſo apply our hearts to the doing of this, leſt if we come to the marriage of the Kings ſonne without the garment of a right heart and life, we heare the ſentence, Binde them hand and foote, and caſt them into vtter darkneſſe, there ſhall be weeping and gnaſhing of teeth.

The fourth point is, the place of reproofe: [before all men:] for they that ſinne openly to the offence of many, are openly to be reprooued, 1. Tim. 5. 20.

The fifth point is, concerning the reaſons which Paul vſeth for the reſtraining of the ſinne of Peter. The firſt is ſet downe in the 14. verſe, If thou beeing a Iew, &c. Here the meaning of ſome words are to be opened. To Iudaize, or to liue as a Iew, is to obſerue (and that neceſſarily,) a difference of meates, and times, according to the ceremoniall law of Moſes. To Gentilize, or to liue as a Gentile, is to vſe meates, and drinkes, and times, freely without difference. Peter is ſaid, to compell the Gentiles to Iudaize, not by teaching of any doctrin, (for the Apoſtles neuer erred, in teaching and deliuering any thing to the Church of God: this is a principle:) therefore he conſtrained them by the authority of his example: whereby he cauſed them to thinke that the obſeruation of the Ceremoniall law was neceſſarie.

The firſt reaſon then is framed thus: If thou beeing a Iew, vſeſt to liue as the Gentiles, thou maiſt not by thy example compell the Gentiles to Iudaize in the neceſſarie obſeruation of ceremonies: but thou beeing a Iew, vſeſt to liue as the Gentiles: therefore thou maiſt not compell the Gentiles to liue as Iewes.

Here firſt, let vs obſerue the force of euill example: it compels men to be euill. Therfore let all ſuperiours, Magiſtrates, Miniſters, and all gouernours of families, looke to their examples: for if they be euill, they conſtraine others alſo to be euill.

Here againe, we ſee what wonderfull ſubiection the auncient beleeuers yeelded to the Miniſterie of the word. For if the actions of the Apoſtles compelled men to doe this or that, what then did their doctrines and heauenly exhortations doe? When Iohn the Baptiſt preached, the kingdome of heauen ſuffered violence, and the violent tooke it to themſelues. Math.11.12. When the Diſciples preached in Iurie, they ſaw Satan falling downe from heauen like lightning. Luk.10.18. The weapons of Paul were ſpirituall, to caſt downe holds, and to bring euery thought in ſubiection to God. 2.Cor.10.4. Here the fault of our time is to be conſidered. We haue the forme of godlineſſe, in hearing and in outward profeſſion, but we want the power of it. For we doe not in heart yeeld ſubiection by ſuffering our ſelues to be vrged and compelled to obedience by the authoritie of the Miniſterie.

Thirdly, here we ſee wherein ſtood Peters ſinne: namely, in that he conſtrained men to a neceſſarie obſeruation of the Ceremoniall law: by his example binding the Gentiles to the doing of that which the Goſpell hath made free. Therefore great is the wickedneſſe of the Romane Religion: in that it placeth a neceſſitie in many things, in the vſe whereof, Chriſt hath procured vs an holy and Chriſtian libertie. In this reſpect the vowes of perpetuall continencie, of pouerty, and regular obedience, are falſely tearmed ſtates of perfection, and are indeed eſtates of abomination.

15. We which are Iewes by nature, and not ſinners of the Gentiles:

16. Know that a man is not iuſtified by the workes of the law, but by the faith of Ieſus Chriſt: which (I ſay) haue beleeued in Ieſus Chriſt, that we might be iuſtified by the faith of Ieſus Chriſt: and not by the workes of the law; becauſe by the workes of the law, no fleſh ſhall be iuſtified.

Here Paul laies downe the ſecond reaſon of his reproofe: it is framed thus: That which we defend, both in iudgement and practiſe, that muſt we vrge, and not the contrary: but iuſtification by faith without works we defend both in iudgement and practiſe: therefore we muſt vrge it, and not the contrarie, namely, the neceſſarie obſeruation of the law.

The maior is wanting: the minor is expreſſed in the 16. v. and it is amplified by an argument of diuers things, thus: Though we be Iewes, to whom the law was giuen: yet we forſake the law, and looke to be iuſtified by the faith of Chriſt. Secondly, the minor is confirmed by a teſtimonie of the Pſalme: verſ. 16. By the workes of the law, no fleſh ſhall be iuſtified.

Here two points are to be handled. One, of the diſtinction of the Iewes and Gentiles: the other of iuſtification.

Touching the diſtinction of Iewes, & Gentiles, ſundrie points are to be handled. The firſt, what is the cauſe of this diſtinction. Anſ. The good will and pleaſure of God. Moſes ſaith, God choſe the Iſraelites aboue all nations, Deut.7.6. He loued them, Deut.10.15. When he diuided the nations, Iacob was his portion, Deut. 32.8. He knew them aboue al nations, ſaith Amos 3.2. And he choſe them, becauſe he loued their fathers, Deut.4.37. Hence we gather, the free Election of God: and that they are deceiued, who thinke, that there was no difference of Iewes and Gentiles in reſpect of God, but in reſpect of themſelues: becauſe the one embraced Chriſt, the other refuſed Chriſt. But there cannot be a refuſall, where the Meſſias was not knowne: and among the Gentiles he was not ſo much as named, Rom.15.20.

The ſecond point is, wherein ſtands the difference of Iewes and Gentiles. Anſw. Here the Iewes are oppoſed to ſinners of the Gentiles: and therefore by the Iewes are meant an holy and peculiar people. The diſtinction thereof lies in this, that the one was holy, the other prophane: the one in the couenant, the other out of the couenant, Rom. 9. 4. 5. Pſal. 147.20. Here two errours muſt be auoided. One, that the difference lay in earthly things: which is not true. For the law was giuen to the Iſraelites: and it was a Schoolemaſter to Chriſt, Gal. 3. and an introduction to a better hope, Heb.7.19. The ſecond errour is, that they differed onely in this, that Chriſt was more plentifully and fully reuealed to the Iewes: more darkly, and ſparingly to the Gentiles. But it was otherwiſe. For the Gentiles were without God, and Chriſt, Eph. 2. 12. and they were left to themſelues, to walke in their owne waies, Act.14.16.

The third point is, how long this difference endured? Anſw. Till the death of Chriſt. For the Diſciples were forbidden to goe into the way of the Gentiles, Math.10.5. And Chriſt ſaith, that he was not ſent, but to the loſt ſheepe of the houſe of Iſrael, Math.15.24. It may be obiected, that here we ſee the difference of Iewes, and Gentiles is ſtanding, long after the aſcenſion of Chriſt. Anſ. Chriſt in his death did fully merit the aboliſhment of this difference, Eph. 2. Neuertheleſſe the execution of this aboliſhment was by degrees: and it was at this time begunne by the miniſterie of the Apoſtles, yet not accompliſhed.

A The laſt point is, that the Iewes are an holy people by nature: not becauſe holineſſe is conuaied to them by generation, but becauſe euen from their beginning, and birth by vertue of the couenant, they are holy. If the roote be holy, the branches are holy, Rom. 11.16. If either of their parents beleeue, their children are holy, 1. Cor. 7.14. In a ciuill contract, the father and his heire make but one perſon, and the father couenants for himſelfe, and his poſteritie; euen ſo, in the couenant of grace, he beleeues for himſelfe, and withall makes his poſteritie partaker of the ſaid couenant: & thus the poſteritie becomes holy. It may be obiected, that whatſoeuer is borne of fleſh, is fleſh. Anſw. The parent ſuſtaines a double B perſon. Firſt, he is to be conſidered as a child of Adam, and thus he brings forth a child, hauing with Adams nature, Adams corruption. Againe, he is to be conſidered as a beleeuer: and thus albeit, he doth not propagate his faith and holineſſe to his child, yet by meanes of his faith, his child is in the couenant, and conſequently is to be accounted holy in the iudgement of charitie, till God manifeſt the contrarie. Againe, it may be obiected, that if the children of beleeuing parents be borne holy, they want originall ſinne. Anſ. The children alſo ſuſtaine two perſons. Firſt, they are to be conſidered as children of the firſt Adam, and thus they are conceiued and borne in ſinne, and are children of wrath. Againe, C they are to be conſidered as children of beleeuing parents: and thus by meanes of the couenant, they are children of God: and originall ſinne which is in them, is couered from their firſt beginning, and not imputed to them.

The vſe. There was no abſolute neceſſity of circumciſion. For they which died before the eight day, were borne holy, and conſequently, in the couenant: and therfore might be ſaued. And thus Baptiſme is not of abſolute neceſſitie: for the children of beleeuers are borne holy and Chriſtian: and therefore dying in the want of baptiſme, may for all that be ſaued. The ſeale of the couenant is not of like neceſſitie, with the couenant it ſelfe.

D Secondly, here we learne, that it is not the act of baptiſme to conferre the firſt grace: but onely to confirme, and ſeale it vnto vs. Adoption, and life beginnes not in baptiſme, but before. If the roote be holy, the branches ſpringing thence are holy. We are borne Chriſtians, if our parents beleeue, and not made ſo in baptiſme.

Laſtly, if wee be borne holy, it is our ſhame that we haue made no more proceeding in holineſſe, then we haue done: the moſt remaine ignorant, and vnreformed, and they of the better ſort, either ſtand at a ſtay, or goe backward.

The ſecond point is, concerning Iuſtification, in the ſixteenth verſe, of which ſundrie things are there propounded. And firſt, I will begin with the name. The word, Iuſtifie, is borrowed from courts of iudgement, and ſignifies a iudiciall act. Otherwhiles it is put for the action of the iudge, and then it ſignifies to abſolue, or to pronounce innocent. Thus Paul ſaith, Act. 13.39. That we are iuſtified from all things, from which we could not be iuſtified by the law of Moſes, that is, abſolued, or cleared. Againe, he oppoſeth iuſtification to accuſation, and condemnation, Rom. 8.33. Now the contrarie to condemnation, is abſolution. Sometimes againe, the word iuſtifie, ſignifies the act of the partie iudged, or of the witneſſes: and then it imports as much, as to giue teſtimony, or to declare and approoue. Thus Iames ſaith, Abraham was iuſtified by workes, chap. 2. v. 22. that is, declared, and approoued to be a iuſt man by workes. In the former ſignification is the word vſed, where the holy Ghoſt deliuereth the doctrine of iuſtification, as in this place.

The vſe. Here we ſee how to diſtinguiſh betweene Iuſtification, regeneration, and renouation. Regeneration is vſually in Scripture, the change of the inward man, whereby we are borne anew. Renouation is, the change both of the inward and outward man, that is, both of heart and life. Iuſtification is neither, but a certaine action in God applied vnto vs, or a certaine reſpect or relation, whereby we are acquit of our ſinnes, and accepted to life euerlaſting. Secondly, we muſt here note, that the Teachers of the Church of Rome, miſtake the word, Iuſtification. For by it, they vnderſtand nothing els, but a phyſicall tranſmutation of the qualitie, and diſpoſition of our hearts, from euill to good. And by this miſtaking, they haue made a mixture or rather confuſion, of law and Goſpel. Thirdly, here we ſee, what is to be the diſpoſition of the partie iuſtified: (for by the conſequent we may learne the antecedent.) A man therefore that would be iuſtified, muſt come before the iudgement ſeate of God, and there muſt he pleade guilty, and be his own aduerſarie, condemning himſelfe: and beeing preſſed with the terrours of the law, he muſt flie and make his appeale to the throne of grace, for pardon in Chriſt: and then he ſhall be acquit, or iuſtified from all ſinnes. Thus much doth the word iuſtifie, import. Thus came the Publican before God, Luk. 18. when he ſaid, Lord be mercifull to me a ſinner; and departed iuſtified. Thus in the fift petition, we are taught to come euery day into the preſence of God, and to acknowledge our debts, and to vſe the plea of mercy, ſaying, Forgiue vs our debts.

The ſecond thing to be conſidered, is the ſubiect of iuſtification, or the perſon to be iuſtified, and that is man generally, ſignifying that a Man is iuſtified. The holy Ghoſt ſpeaketh thus generally, for two cauſes. The firſt is, becauſe al men without exception haue need of iuſtification, euen they which are regenerate, Rom. 3. 23. And in this place Paul ſaith, that hee and Peter, and the reſt haue beleeued in Chriſt, that they might bee iuſtified by faith. Here wee are to take notice of the miſerable condition of prophane, and ſecure Epicures, who neuer ſo much as dreame of iuſtification. The ſecond reaſon is, becauſe God communicates the benefits of iuſtification, generally to all ſorts of men: and this he doth in the Miniſtery of the word, in which he beſeecheth men to be reconciled to God, 2. Cor. 5. v. 21. This muſt be an inducement vnto vs, to come vnto Chriſt, humbling, and iudging our ſelues, that we may be iuſtified. God himſelfe from heauen vſeth reaſons vnto vs daily, to mooue vs to the practiſe of this dutie. What meane theſe gracious, and continuall preſeruations, of Prince and people, Church and land? By them we ſee, it is the good pleaſure of God, to giue vs a time to ſeek his kingdome, and righteouſneſſe: wherefore let vs not neglect the day of viſitation, but take the time while it ſerues, that wee may turne vnto God, and be accepted of him, and eſcape the woe pronounced vpon Corazin & Bethſaida.

The third thing to bee conſidered, concernes things excluded from iuſtification, as falſe cauſes: namely, the workes of the Law. Here it may bee demaunded, what workes are meant? I anſwer, firſt, not onely workes of the Ceremoniall, but alſo of the morall law. For all men know, that ceremoniall actions are of no vſe, vnleſſe they bee ioyned with morall duties of loue and mercie. And if Paul meant onely Ceremoniall workes, hee needed not to haue made ſo long a diſcourſe againſt iuſtification by workes: for he might haue ended the whole matter in a word or twaine, by ſhewing that the ceremoniall law was abrogated by Chriſt. Secondly, I anſwer, that not onely workes done before faith, are excluded, but alſo workes that follow faith, and are done in the eſtate of grace. For Paul here reaſons thus: If no fleſh be iuſtified by workes, then not wee beleeuers: but no fleſh at all is iuſtified: therefore not we beleeuers. Dauid, Pſ. 143. reaſons on the ſame manner: No fleſh ſhall be iuſtified in thy ſight: therfore I cannot, though otherwiſe I bee thy ſeruant, in keeping thy commandements. When Abraham was the father of all the faithfull, and was come to the higheſt degree of faith, and abounded in good workes, yet was hee not then iuſtified by workes, Rom. 4. 1, 2. Paul kept a good conſcience before God and men, Act. 23. and yet was he not iuſtified thereby, 1. Cor. 4. 4. And hee ſaith, that wee are not ſaued by the workes, which God hath ordained that wee ſhould walke in, Epheſ. 2. 9, 10. And the workes that God hath ordained for vs to walke in, are the beſt works of al, euen works of grace. Againe, he ſaith, that we are not ſaued by workes of mercy, Tit. 2. 5. It may bee obiected, that there is a Co-operation of workes and faith, James 2. 21. I anſwer, that this Co-operation is not in the act A of iuſtification, nor in the worke of our ſaluation, but in the manifeſtation of the truth, and ſincerity of our faith, without hypocriſie. And for the declaration and approbation of this, faith and workes ioyntly concurre. Here then we ſee it is a peſtilent and damnable doctrine of the Papiſts, when they teach iuſtification by the workes of the law. Let vs here be warned to take heede of it.

The fourth point is, the Meritorious cauſe of our iuſtification: and that is Chriſt. Here it may bee demaunded, what is that thing in Chriſt, by, and for which wee are iuſtified. I anſwer; the Obedience of Chriſt, Rom. 5. 19. And it ſtands in two things, his Paſſion in life and death, and his Fulfilling of the Law ioyned B therewith. For by faith the law is eſtabliſhed, Romanes 3. 31. Chriſt was ſent in the ſimilitude of ſinnefull fleſh, that the rigour of the law might bee fulfilled in vs, Rom. 8. 4. and Chriſt is the perfection of the law for righteouſneſſe to all that beleeue, Rom. 10. 4. Hee that doth not fulfill all things contained in the law, is accurſed, Gal. 3. 10. Seeing therefore wee cannot performe the things contained therein, by our ſelues, wee muſt performe them in the perſon of our Mediator: who hath ſatisfied for the threatnings of the law by his paſſion; and hath fulfilled the precepts of the law by his obedience, in all duties of loue to God and man. We owe to God a double debt. One is, that we are to fulfill the law euery moment, from our firſt C beginning, both in regard of purity of nature, and purity of action. And this debt was laid vpon vs in the creation, and is exacted of vs in the law of God. The ſecond debt is, a ſatisfaction for the breach of the law. For this double debt, Chriſt is become our Surety; and God accepts his obedience for vs, it beeing a full ſatisfaction, according to the tenour of the law.

For the better conceiuing of this obedience, foure queſtions may bee demaunded. The firſt is, when this obedience beginnes and ends? Anſwer. Satisfactorie obedience performed by Chriſt, beginnes in his incarnation, and endes in his death. Chriſt ſaith, Ioh. 4. 34. It is my meate, to doe my Fathers will, D and to finiſh his worke. But when was it indeed finiſhed? A little before his paſſion hee ſaid, Ioh. 17. 4. I haue finiſhed the worke which thou gaueſt me to doe. Againe, in the ſurrendring of his ſoule, he ſaith, It is finiſhed, Ioh. 19. 30. S. Paul ſaith, Chriſt was obedient to the death of the croſſe, Phil. 2. 8. The triumph of Chriſt beganne vpon the croſſe, Coloſſ. 2. 15. and hee could not triumph before hee had made a full, and perfect ſatisfaction for vs. When Chriſt had procured deliuerance from hell, and Right to life euerlaſting, hee there made a perfect ſatisfaction for vs, to the iuſtice of God. And this hee did in his death vpon the croſſe. For by the death of the Mediatour, wee receiue the promiſe of euerlaſting inheritance, Heb. 9. 15. and with one oblation vpon the croſſe, he perfected them that are ſanctified, Heb. 10. 14. and they cannot bee perfected, without the perfect obedience of Chriſt. Chriſt roſe from death, and aſcended into heauen in our roome and ſtead: and this he could neuer haue done, vnleſſe hee had made a perfect ſatisfaction in death. Here it may be asked, If ſatisfactory obedience end in the death of Chriſt, to what vſe ſerue the reſurrection, and aſcenſion of Chriſt, and his ſitting at the right hand of the Father? Anſ. They ſerue alſo for our iuſtification, but after another ſort. For they ſerue to apply & communicate to vs, and to put vs in poſſeſſion of the benefits which Chriſt hath procured for vs, and purchaſed by his death. S. Paul ſaith, He aſcended to giue gifts to men, and to fill all things, Eph. 4. 8, 10. And Chriſt ſaith, When I am exalted, I will draw al men to me, Ioh. 12. 32. And, He liues for euer to make interceſſion for vs. Heb. 7. 25.

The ſecond queſtion is, how Chriſt could obey beeing God, and ſatisfie for vs beeing man? Anſw. Chriſt muſt be conſidered, not meerely as God, or as man, but as God-man, or Man-god. For the godhead doth not redeem vs without the manhood, nor the manhood without the godhead. Neuertheleſſe, Chriſt as God and man, may both obey, and ſatisfie. For as there are in Chriſt two natures; ſo there are two diſtinct operations of the ſaid natures. And as the ſaid natures vnited, make one Chriſt, ſo the operations of the natures concurring and beeing vnited in one, make the compound worke of a Mediatour. Therfore the Obedience of Chriſt, being the work of a Mediatour, hath in it the operations of both natures. The practiſe, exerciſe, or execution of obedience, is from the manhood: therefore it is ſaid, that Chriſt bare our ſinnes in his bodie vpon the croſſe, 1. Pet. 2. 24. that hee ſuffered in the fleſh, 1. Pet. 4. 1. that he made a liuing way by the vaile of his fleſh, Hebr. 10. 20. that wee are reconciled in the body of his fleſh, Coloſſ. 1. 22. Obedience is properly a ſubiection of the will in reaſonable creatures, to the will of God: Now the will of the godhead of Chriſt, admits no ſubiection to the will of God, becauſe the will of the godhead (or of God,) is one and the ſame in all the perſons. Chriſt therefore yeelds ſubiection only in reſpect of the will of the manhood; in which he performes obedience. Moreouer, the operation of the godhead is to make the ſaid Obedience meritorious and ſatisfactory for all that ſhall beleeue. In this reſpect Paul ſaith, God was in Chriſt reconciling the world vnto himſelfe, 2. Cor. 5. 18. and that God ſhedde his blood, Act. 20. 28. namely, in that nature which the Sonne of God aſſumed. Hence ariſeth the value, price, and dignity of the obedience of Chriſt.

The third queſtion is, how the Obedience of Chriſt ſhould be made ours? Anſ. By the free donation of God. For Chriſt is really giuen vnto vs in the word and ſacraments: and

A consequently Chriſts Obedience is made ours: euen as when a peece of ground is made ours, the commodity thereof is ours alſo.

The fourth queſtion is, how the obedience of Chriſt ſhould be our iuſtice? Anſ. It is not our iuſtice in natural maner, for then it ſhould be in vs: but by a diuine & ſupernatural manner, namely, by Gods Acceptation, in that he accounts it ours, euen as truely, as if it were in vs. And becauſe God accepts it for ours, it is ours indeede: for his willing and approouing of any thing, is the doing of it: and he calls the things that are not, as if they were.

Thus we ſee what the obedience of Chriſt is. And here two errours muſt bee auoided. The one is of ſome Proteſtants, leſſe dange-
B rous, yet an vntruth; namely, that we are iuſtified, onely by the paſſion of Chriſt. But if this were ſo, wee ſhould be iuſtified without fulfilling the law: for (as I haue ſaid) wee owe vnto God a double debt: one by creation, namely, the fulfilling of the law in all things, from our firſt beginning: the ſecond, ſince the fall of Adam, namely, a ſatisfaction for the breach of the law. Now the paſſion of Chriſt is a paiment of the ſecond debt, but not of the firſt; whereas both muſt bee anſwered. For, Curſed is he that doth not continue in all things written in the law to doe them. The paſſion of Chriſt procureth deliuerance from hell, but alone by it ſelf conſidered, it doth not purchaſe a right to eternall life.

C Obiect. I. Chriſt fulfilled the law for himſelfe: therefore his paſſion alone ſerues for our iuſtification. Anſ. Chriſt as man fulfilled the law for himſelfe: that he might be in both natures an holy high Prieſt, & ſo continue. Neuertheleſſe as Mediatour, God and man, hee became ſubiect to the law: in this regard hee did not fulfill the law for himſelfe, neither was he bound ſo to doe.

Obiect. II. That which Chriſt did, we are not bound to do: but Chriſt (ſay ſome) fulfilled the law for vs: therefore we are not bound to fulfill the law. Anſ. That which Chriſt did, we are not bound to do, for the ſame end, and D in the ſame manner. Now he fulfilled the law in way of redemption, and ſatisfaction for vs: and ſo doe not wee fulfill the law, but onely in way of thankfulneſſe for our redemption.

Obiect. III. The law doth not exact both obedience, and the penalty alſo. Anſ. In the eſtate of innocency, the law threatned the penalty, and it only exacted obedience. Since the fall it exacteth both obedience, and the puniſhment. The threatning of the law, exacts the puniſhment; the precepts exact obedience.

Obiect. IV. Hebr. 10. 19. By the blood of Chriſt we haue entrance into the Holy place. Anſ. By the blood of Chriſt, we are to vnderſtand the paſſion: and the paſſion may not be ſeuered from actiue, & voluntary obedience. For Chriſt in ſuffering obeyed, & in obeying ſuffered. And (as Chryſoſtom ſaith) the Paſſion is a kinde of action. Chriſt in the oblation of himſelfe did not only offer to God his paſſion, but alſo prayers, which are no paſſions, Heb. 5. 7.

The ſecond errour is of the Papiſts: who teach, that the thing by which, and for which a ſinner is formally iuſtified, is remiſſion of ſins, with inherent iuſtice infuſed by the holy Ghoſt. But this cannot bee. For inherent iuſtice, and iuſtification, are made diſtinct gifts of God. Paul ſaith, Chriſt is made vnto vs of God, wiſedome, iuſtice, ſanctification, 1. Corinth. 1. 3. Againe, But ye are waſhed, ye are iuſtified, and ſanctified, 1. Corinth. 6. 11. Secondly, the iuſtice whereby a ſinner is iuſtified, is reuealed without the law, Rom. 3. 21. Now inherent iuſtice, or the habite of charitie, is reuealed by the law: and the obedience of Chriſt, is the onely iuſtice reuealed without the law. For it is a iuſtice imputed, which the law neuer knew; and in this obedience, Chriſt performed the law, and more too. For he died for his enemies; and ſo loued his neighbour more then himſelfe. Thirdly, God is not onely a iuſtifier, but alſo iuſt in iuſtifying, Rom. 3. 26. becauſe he iuſtifieth none but ſuch as bring vnto him a true and perfect iuſtice, either in themſelues, or in their Mediatour, Prou. 17. 15. Now this inward, and inherent iuſtice is not ſuch; For it is imperfect: becauſe it is increaſed (as they teach) by a ſecond iuſtification, and it is in this life mixt with the corruption of the fleſh. Fourthly, the righteouſneſſe of a good conſcience, is an excellent grace, and gift of God: but by it we are not iuſtified, 1. Cor. 4. 4. Laſtly, a cloſe errour is to be noted in this Popiſh doctrine of iuſtification. For in Popiſh learning, remiſſion of ſinnes is not only an aboliſhing of the guilt, and the puniſhment, but alſo of the corruption of ſinne: ſo as the party pardoned, and iuſtified, hath nothing in him, that (as they ſay) God may iuſtly hate. And yet Paul iuſtified and regenerate, ſaith otherwiſe of himſelfe: that ſinne dwelleth in him; and that the law of ſinne rebels in him againſt the law of his minde, and leades him captiue to ſinne, Rom. 7.

The vſe of the doctrine. Firſt, in that we are iuſtified by an obedience out of our ſelues, we are taught, vtterly to deny our ſelues, and to goe out of our ſelues, as hauing nothing in vs whereby wee may be ſaued. Here is the foundation of the abnegation of our ſelues. Secondly, the obedience of Chriſt muſt bee vnto vs the foundation of our obedience: for hee performed all righteouſneſſe for vs, that wee might bee ſeruants not of ſinne, but ſeruants of righteouſneſſe in all duties of obedience. And in his obedience wee muſt not onely reſpect the merit thereof, but alſo his holy example in loue, mercy, meekeneſſe, patience, &c. and after it, are wee to faſhion our liues. Thirdly, the obedience of Chriſt muſt bee the foundation of our comfort. In all dangers and temptations, wee that beleeue are to oppoſe the obedience of Chriſt againſt A the fierce wrath of God, againſt hell, death, & condemnation. Certaine beaſts, when they are purſued, flie the next way to their dennes, where they holde themſelues euen to death. Chriſt in reſpect of his obedience, is our hiding place. Rom. 3. 26. he is ſet forth vnto the world as a Propitiatorie, For as the Propitiatorie couered the Arke, and the decalogue, ſo hee couereth our ſinnes, and he hides our bodies and ſoules, from the furious indignation and vengeance of God. Let vs therefore by our faith, flie to this our hiding place in the ſtorm and tempeſt of Gods wrath: and let vs there liue and die. Fourthly, this obedience is the foundation of our happineſſe. For true hap- B pineſſe is, to be eaſed of our ſinnes, Pſal. 32. 1. and this eaſe we haue from Chriſt, Matth. 11 28. Laſtly, the conſideration of this obedience, is the foundation of our thankfulnes to God. For if we beleeue that Chriſt ſuffered, and fulfilled the law for vs; we are worſe then beaſts, if we do not euery way ſhew our ſelues thankfull for this mercy.

The fifth point to bee conſidered, is the meanes of iuſtification, namely, the Faith of Chriſt. Of which I conſider three things. The firſt, what faith is? The Papiſts define iuſtifying faith to bee a gift of God, whereby wee beleeue the articles of faith to bee true, and the whole word of God. But this faith the diuels haue. Here they alleadge, that A- C braham was the father of all the faithfull, and that his faith was nothing elſe but a perſwaſion, that he was able to giue him a child in his olde age. Anſ. Firſt, the obiect of Abrahams faith was double: one leſſe principall, that he ſhould haue iſſue in his olde age: the ſecond, more principall, that the Meſſias his Redeemer ſhould deſcend of his loines. And this was the thing which his faith in the promiſe of God ſpecially aimed at. I anſwer againe, that Abraham beleeued not onely the power of God, Rom. 4. 21. but alſo his will which he had reuealed in the promiſe, In thy ſeed all the nations of the earth ſhall be bleſſed. Secondly, it is alleadged, that Chriſt in the curing of certain blinde men, required no more, but that they D ſhould beleeue his power, Mat. 9. 28. I anſwer, that the end of the miracles of Chriſt, was to confirme the certenty of doctrine, ſpecially touching his natures, and offices. And therefore a general faith touching the diuine power or godhead of Chriſt, was ſufficient for the obtaining of a miraculous cure. Thirdly, they obiect, that ſaluation is promiſed to generall faith, Rom. 10 9. If thou ſhalt confeſſe with thy mouth the Lord Ieſus, and beleeue that God raiſed him from the dead, thou ſhalt be ſaued. That Peters faith was generall, Matth. 16. 16. Thou art Ieſus Chriſt the Sonne of the liuing God. That the Eunuchs faith was of the ſame kinde, Act. 8. 37. I beleeue that Ieſus Chriſt is the Sonne of God. Anſ. It is a common rule in ſcripture, that words ſignifying knowledge, ſignifie alſo the motions and good affections of the heart, Pſalm. 1. The

A Lord knowes the way of the righteous, that is, knowes & approoues it. 2. Tim. 2. 19. The Lord knowes who are his, that is, he knoweth & chooſeth them. Ioh. 17. 2. This is eternall life, to know thee the onely God, that is, to know and acknowledge thee for our God. If this bee true in words of knowledge, then much more words of beleeuing ſignifie the good motions, and the affiance of the heart. Thus to beleeue Chriſt to be the Sonne of God, in the places before-named, is to beleeue that hee is God, and withall to fixe our affiance on him: otherwiſe the diuels beleeue thus much. When Thomas had put his finger in the ſide of Chriſt, he ſaid, My Lord, and my God, Ioh. 20. 28. And to this ſpeech of his, Chriſt ſaith, Thou haſt ſeene and beleeued. B This then is true faith, not only to beleeue that Chriſt is God, but alſo that he is our God.

Iuſtifying faith in true manner is defined thus: It is a gift whereby we apprehend Chriſt and his benefits, Ioh. 1. 12. to beleeue in Chriſt, and to receiue Chriſt, are put both for one, Ioh. 6. faith is the mouth of the ſoule, whereby wee eate the fleſh of Chriſt, and drinke his blood, Ion. 17. 8. To receiue the word of Chriſt, to acknowledge it, and to beleeue it, are put all for one. Paul ſaith, that the Gentiles did apprehend the iuſtice which is by faith, Rom. 9. 30. Againe, that we receiue the promiſe of the Spirit by faith, Gal. 3. 14.

This apprehenſion ſtands in two things. The firſt is, to know Chriſt, as hee propounds C himſelfe in the word and Sacraments. The ſecond is, To apply him and his benefits vnto our ſelues. This application is made by a ſupernaturall act of the vnderſtanding, when we beleeue, that Chriſt with his benefits is really ours. It may bee obiected, that faith is a certaine confidence wherby we beleeue in Chriſt: and ſo it is deſcribed euen in this text. Anſ. 1. Faith and confidence, properly are diſtinct gifts of God: and confidence is the effect or fruit of faith. For Paul ſaith, that we haue entrance to God with confidence by faith, Eph. 3. 12. And reaſon declares as much, for a man cannot put his confidence in Chriſt, till hee be aſſured that Chriſt with his benefits are his. We doe not reſt on his goodneſſe, of whoſe loue D we doubt. Secondly, I anſwer, that confidence beeing a moſt notable effect of faith, is often in Scripture put for faith, and faith is deſcribed by it (as it is in this place,) and yet for nature they are not one, but muſt bee diſtinguiſhed.

Furthermore, the grounds of apprehenſion muſt bee conſidered. For ſpeciall faith, muſt haue a ſpeciall, and infallible ground. The grounds are three. The firſt is this: In the Goſpel God hath propounded generall promiſes of remiſſion of ſinnes, and life euerlaſting by Chriſt: and withall hee hath giuen a commaundement to apply the ſaid promiſes to our ſelues, 1. Ioh. 3. 23. This is the commaundement of God, that ye beleeue in the name of his Sonne Ieſus Chriſt: and wee cannot beleeue in Chriſt, till wee beleeue Chriſt to bee our Chriſt. Now then a generall promiſe, with a commaundement to apply the ſame to our ſelues, is in effect as much as a ſpeciall promiſe. The ſecond ground is this, Rom. 8. 16. The Spirit of God teſtifieth together with our ſpirits, that we are the ſonnes of God. In this teſtimony, foure things muſt be obſerued. The firſt, that it is ſufficient to certifie & aſſure vs of our ſaluation. For if the teſtimony of two or three witneſſes eſtabliſh a truth among men, thē much more the teſtimony of God. The ſecond is, that this teſtimony may be certainly known; elſe it is no teſtimony vnto vs. The third is, that this teſtimony is found and perceiued in the vſe of the word, prayer, Sacraments. The laſt is, that it is eſpecially giuen and felt in the time of great danger and affliction. For when by reaſon of miſerie and trouble, we know not to pray as wee ought, then the Spirit makes requeſt for vs with groanes that cannot bee vttered, Rom. 8. 26. And in afflictions Paul ſaith, the loue of God is ſhedde abroad in our hearts. Now then, if God giue to them that turne vnto him a teſtimonie that they are the children of God: they for their parts, are by ſpeciall faith to beleeue it. The third ground is this: A ſpeciall faith may be gathered, partly vpon things generally reuealed in the word of God, and partly vpon ſenſe, obſeruation, and experience: the ſame things beeing reuealed generally in the word, and particularly by experience. Vpon this ground may we truly conclude the forgiueneſſe of our ſinnes, and the ſaluation of our ſoules, on this manner: Hee which beleeueth, hath the forgiueneſſe of his ſinnes; but I beleeue in Chriſt (ſaith he which beleeueth) therefore my ſinnes are forgiuen me. The maior or firſt part, is expreſſed in the word; the minor or ſecond part is found true by experience, and by the teſtimony of the conſcience, which is a certaine teſtimony. For Paul ſaith, This is my reioycing, the teſtimonie of my conſcience, 2. Corinth. 1. 12. And the concluſion, is the concluſion of ſpeciall faith. If this bee not a good and ſufficient ground, there is almoſt no ſpeciall faith in the world.

Laſtly, wee are to conſider the degrees of Apprehenſion, and they are two: there is a weake apprehenſion, and there is a ſtrong apprehenſion, as there is a weake and a ſtrong faith. The weake faith and apprehenſion is, when we endeauour to apprehend. This endeauour is, when wee bewaile our vnbeleefe, ſtriue againſt our manifolde doubtings, will to beleeue with an honeſt heart, deſire to be reconciled to God, and conſtantly vſe the good meanes to beleeue. For God accepts the will to beleeue for faith it ſelfe, & the wil to repent for repentance. The reaſon hereof is plain. Euery ſupernaturall act preſuppoſeth a ſupernaturall power, or gift: and therefore the will to beleeue and repent, preſuppoſeth the power and gift of faith, and repentance in the heart. It my be obiected, that in the mindes of them that belieue in this maner, doubtings of Gods mercie doe abound. Anſw. Though doubtings abound neuer ſo, yet are they not of the nature of faith, but are contrarie to it. Secondly, we muſt put difference betweene true apprehenſion, and ſtrong apprehenſion. If wee truely apprehend, though not ſtrongly, it ſufficeth. The palſie-hand is able to receiue a gift, though not ſo ſtrongly as an other. The man in the Goſpel ſaid, Lord, I beleeue, helpe mine vnbeleefe, Mark 9.24. that is, helpe my faith, which by reaſon of the ſmalneſſe thereof, may rather be called vnbeleefe, then faith. This is the common faith of true beleeuers. For in this world wee rather liue by hungring and thirſting, then by ful apprehending of Chriſt: and our comfort ſtands rather in this, that we are knowne of God, then that we know God.

The higheſt degree of faith is, a full perſwaſion of Gods mercie. Thus ſaith the holy Ghoſt, that Abraham was not weake through vnbeleefe, but ſtrong in faith, Rom. 4.20. But wherein was his ſtrength? In that he was fully perſwaded, that God which had promiſed, would alſo performe it. This meaſure of faith is not incident to all beleeuers, but to the Prophets, Apoſtles, martyrs, and ſuch as haue beene long exercised in the ſchoole of Chriſt. And this appeares by the order, whereby we attaine to this degree of faith. Firſt, there muſt be a knowledge of Chriſt: then followes a generall perſwaſion of the poſſibilitie of pardon, and mercy, whereby wee beleeue that our ſinnes are pardonable. An example whereof we haue in the prodigall childe, Luk. 15.18. After this the holy Ghoſt worketh a will and deſire to beleeue, and ſtirres vp the heart to humble & ſerious inuocation for pardon. After prayer inſtantly made, followes a feeling and quieting of the conſcience, according to the promiſe, Matth. 7.7. Knocke, it ſhall bee opened: ſeeke, ye ſhall finde: aske, ye ſhall receiue. After all this, followes an experience in manifolde obſeruations of the mercies of God, & loue in Chriſt: and after experience, followes a full perſwaſion. Abraham had not this full perſwaſion, till God had ſundry times ſpoken to him. Dauid, vpon much triall of the mercy, and fauour of God, growes to reſolution, and ſaith, Pſal. 23.6. Doubtleſſe, kindneſſe and mercy ſhall follow mee all the daies of my life.

This diſtinction of the degrees of faith, muſt the rather be obſerued; becauſe the Papiſts ſuppoſe that wee teach, that euery faith is a full perſwaſion, and that euery one among vs hath this perſwaſion. Which is otherwiſe. For certaintie wee aſcribe to all faith, but not fulneſſe of certaintie. Neither doe wee teach, that all men muſt haue a full perſwaſion, at the firſt.

The vſe. If that bee the right faith, which apprehends and applies Chriſt vnto vs, then is it a poore and miſerable faith of the Papiſt, to be baptized, and withall to beleeue as the Church doth, when it is not knowne what the Church beleeues.

Of the ſame kinde is the faith of the multitude among vs: whoſe faith is their good meaning, that is, their fidelitie, and truth in their dealings.

Laſtly, if that bee faith which truly apprehends Chriſt, there is little true faith in theſe laſt daies. For though the merit of Chriſt be apprehended by faith, yet is not the efficacie of his death: and that appeares by the badde and vnreformed liues of them that profeſſe the Goſpel. Indeed, many ſay they haue, and euer had, a ſtrong perſwaſion of Gods mercy: but in the moſt of them it is but a ſtrong imagination: for their faith was conceiued without the word, prayer, ſacraments: and it is ſeuered from good life. Wee are then all of vs carefully to ſeeke for this true and liuely faith. And the rather, becauſe faith and repentance are poſſible to all that by grace doe will it. Nay, they which will to beleeue and repent, haue begun to beleeue and repent: God accepting the will for the deede, Luk. 21. 13. And hauing attained to a meaſure of true faith, we muſt goe on and ſeeke to iuſtifie our ſelues: but yet (as S. Iames teacheth, c. 2.) iuſtifie our faith by good workes: and then ſhall our faith be a meanes to iuſtifie vs in life and death.

The ſecond point to bee conſidered concerning faith, is the manner how it iuſtifieth. The Papiſts teach, that it iuſtifieth, becauſe it ſtirreth vp good motions and good affections in the heart, whereby it prepareth and diſpoſeth man, that hee may be fit to receiue his iuſtification; againe, becauſe it beeing an excellent vertue, meriteth that God ſhould iuſtifie. But this is falſe which they ſay. For if faith iuſtifieth by diſpoſing the heart, then there muſt bee a ſpace of time betweene iuſtification, and iuſtifying faith: but there is no ſpace of time betweene them. For ſo ſoone as a man beleeues, he is preſently iuſtified. For euery beleeuer hath the promiſe of remiſſion of ſinnes, and life euerlaſting. Againe, in the caſe of iuſtification, Paul oppoſeth beleeuing and doing, faith, and workes of the law: faith therefore doth not iuſtifie as a worke, or as an excellent vertue, bringing forth many diuine and gracious operations in vs. Nay the proper action of faith, which is Apprehenſion, doth not iuſtifie of it ſelfe: for it is imperfect, and is to be increaſed to the ende of our daies.

Faith therefore iuſtifieth, becauſe it is an inſtrument to apprehend, and apply that which iuſtifieth, namely, Chriſt and his obedience. As the Iſraelites ſtung of fierie ſerpents were cured, ſo are wee ſaued: Ioh. 3.16. the Iſraelites did nothing at all, but onely looke vpon the braſen ſerpent, ſo are we to do nothing for our iuſtification & ſaluation, but to fixe the eye of our faith on Chriſt. The bankrupt paies his debt by accepting the paiment made by the ſurety. It is the property of true religion to depreſſe nature, and to exalt grace: and this is done when wee make God the only worker of our ſaluation, & make our ſelues to bee no more but recieuers of the mercy and grace of God by faith, and receiuers not by nature, but by grace, reaching out the beggers hand, namely our faith in Chriſt, to receiue the gift or almes of mercie.

The laſt point is, that faith alone iuſtifies. For here Paul ſaith, that we are iuſtified by faith, without the workes of the law: and that is as much as if he had ſaid, by faith alone. Some Papiſts to helpe themſelues tranſlate the words of Paul thus, Knowing that a man is not iuſtified by the works of the law, [ἐὰν μὴ] if not by faith, that is, except faith go withall: then if faith be ioyned with workes, (ſay they) workes iuſtifie. I anſwer, that this manner of tranſlation corrupteth the text. For [ἐὰν μὴ] muſt here bee tranſlated, but: as appeares by the words following, Wee haue beleeued in Chriſt, that wee might bee iuſtified by faith in Chriſt without the workes of the law: We cannot doe more in the curing of our ſpirituall diſeaſes, then in the curing the diſeaſes of our bodie: of which Chriſt ſaith, Onely beleeue, Mar. 5.36. When Abraham abounded both in faith and works, Rom. 4. it is ſaid, that hee was iuſtified by faith without workes.

This doctrine is of great vſe. Firſt, wee learne hence, that a man is iuſtified by the meere mercie of God: and that there is excluded from iuſtification, all merit of congruitie, all meritorious workes of preparation wrought by vs, all Co-operation of mans will with Gods grace, in the effecting of our iuſtification.

Secondly, we learne that a man is iuſtified by the meere merit of Chriſt: that is, by the meritorious obedience, which he wrought in himſelfe, and not by thing wrought by him in vs. Here then our merits, & ſatisfactions, and all inward iuſtice is excluded from the iuſtification of a ſinner. To this ende Paul ſaith, that we are iuſtified freely by the redemption that is in Chriſt, Rom. 3.24. that we are made the iuſtice of God in him (and not in vs,) 2. Cor. 5.21. that he gaue himſelfe to deliuer vs, Gal. 1.4. that he hath purged our ſinnes by himſelfe. Heb. 1.3. and not by any thing in vs. Hence it appeares, that the Papiſts erre, and are deceiued, when they teach that Chriſt did merit, that we might merit, & ſatisfie for our ſelues: for then we ſhould not be iuſtified by our faith alone.

Thirdly, hence wee learne, that a ſinner is iuſtified by meere faith: that is, that nothing within vs concurres as a cauſe of our iuſtification, but faith; and that nothing apprehends Chriſts obedience for our iuſtification, but faith. This will more eaſily appeare, if wee compare faith, hope, and loue. Faith is like an hand, that opens opens it ſelf to receiue a gift, and ſo is neither loue, nor hope. Loue is alſo an hand, but yet an hand that giues out, communicates, & diſtributes. For as faith receiues Chriſt into our harts: ſo loue opens the hart, & poures our praiſe & thanks to God, and all maner of godnes to men. Hope is no hand, but an eye that wiſhly looketh, & waiteth for the good things which faith beleeueth. Therefore it is the onely property of faith to claſpe and lay holde of Chriſt and his benefits.

It is obiected, that true faith is neuer alone. I anſwer thus: Faith is neuer alone in the perſon iuſtified, nor in godly conuerſation: but is ioyned with all other vertues. Yet in the act and office of iuſtification, it is alone. The eye in the body is not alone: beeing ioyned with all other parts, hand, foote, &c. neuertheleſſe, the eye in ſeeing is alone. For no part of the body ſeeth, but the eye.

Secondly, it may be obiected, that beeing iuſtified by faith alone, wee are ſaued by faith alone; and ſo may liue as we liſt. I anſwer, faith muſt bee conſidered as an inſtrument, or as a way. If it be conſidered as an inſtrument to apprehend Chriſt to our ſaluation, wee are only ſaued by faith, on this manner. Yet if faith be conſidered as a way, we are not onely ſaued by faith. For all other vertues & works are the way to life, as wel as faith, though they be not cauſes of ſaluation.

Thirdly, it is obiected, that not only faith, but alſo the Sacramẽts ſerue to apply Chriſt: I anſwer, they are ſaid to apply, in that they ſerue to confirme faith, whoſe office is to apply. And here let vs take notice of the errour of the Papiſts, who teach, that our ſatisfactions ſerue to apply the ſatisfaction of Chriſt: and the ſacrifice of the Maſſe, to apply the ſacrifice of Chriſt vpon the croſſe: whereas nothing indeede applies but faith.

In the ſixth place, wee are to conſider the kinds of iuſtification. The Papiſts make two: one, when a man of an euill man is made a good man: the ſecond, when a good man is made better: and this, they ſay, is by workes. But it is falſe which they teach. For the Iewes which were borne an holy and peculiar people to God, by means of the couenãt, were iuſtified (as Paul here ſaith) by faith, without works. Againe, he ſaith, that the very end of our beleeuing is, that we may be iuſtified by faith, without works. Therefore there is one only iuſtification, and no more: and that by faith without workes.

The ſeauenth point is, the ground of this doctrine of iuſtification by faith without workes. And it is laid downe in the end of the 16. verſ. No fleſh ſhall be iuſtified by the workes of the law. And this ground is taken, as I ſuppoſe, from Pſal. 143. v. 2. It may be alleadged, that Dauid ſaith thus, No fleſh ſhall be hee iuſtified in thy ſight, and that the other words, [by the workes of the law] are not expreſſed. I anſwer, that the Apoſtles, and Chriſt in citing places of the olde Teſtament, apply them, and ex-

A pound them, and hereupon ſometime adde words without adding to the ſenſe. Moſes ſaith, Him ſhalt thou ſerue, Deut.6.16. Chriſt alleadging the ſame words, ſaith, Him onely ſhalt thou ſerue, Math.4.10. Dauid ſaith, Sacrifice and burnt offering thou wouldeſt not, but mine eares haſt thou pierced, Pſal.40.7. the author to the Hebrewes citing this text ſaith, Sacrifice and burnt offering thou wouldeſt not, but a bodie haſt thou fitted me, Heb. 10.5. And thus the peircing of the eare is explaned. For indeed it ſignifies to be made obedient: and to this end was a bodie giuen to Chriſt, that he might obey his Fathers will.

The eight and laſt point is, the practiſe of them that are iuſtified and that is, to beleeue, or put their truſt in Chriſt. Truſt in the Lord (ſaith the Prophet) and ye ſhall be aſſured, 2. Chro.20.20. And Salomon ſaith, Roll your care on the Lord, Prou.16.3. By meanes of this faith the heart of the righteous is fixed and ſtabliſhed. Pſal.112.7,8. For the better practiſe of this duty, two rules muſt be remembred. The one is, that faith and the practiſe thereof, muſt raigne in the heart, and haue all at command. We muſt not goe by ſenſe, feeling, reaſon, but we muſt ſhut our eyes, and let faith keepe our hearts cloſe to the promiſe of God. Nay, faith muſt ouer-rule nature, and command nature, and the ſtrongeſt affections thereof. Thus Abraham beleeued againſt hope, and by faith was content to offer his naturall and onely begotten ſonne. Heb.11. If faith ouerrule nature, then much more muſt it haue al the luſts and corruptions of nature at command. The ſecond rule is, that when we know not what to doe, by reaſon of the greatnes of our diſtreſſe, we muſt then fixe our hearts on Chriſt without ſeparation. He that climes vp a ladder, or ſome ſteppe place, the higher he goes, the faſter he holds. 2. Chro.20.12. Iob.13.12. Hence is true comfort, Pſal.27.13.

17. And if while we ſeeke to be made righteous by Chriſt, we our ſelues are found ſinners, is Chriſt the miniſter of ſinne? God forbid.

For the better vnderſtanding of the latter part of this chapter. It muſt be obſerued, that Paul directs his ſpeech not onely to Peter, but alſo to the Iewes that ſtood by, beeing maintainers of iuſtification by the law.

Some thinke, that in this verſe Paul makes an obiection in the perſon of the falſe Apoſtles, on this manner: If we be iuſtified by Chriſt alone, without the obſeruation of the law, then there is no difference betweene vs Iewes and the Gentiles; but we are as deepe ſinners as they: and if this be ſo, then Chriſt is the miniſter of ſinne. And then ſay they, to this Paul anſwers, God forbid. But I ſomewhat doubt, whether this be the ſenſe of the words, becauſe Paul doth not make a direct confutation of this obiection in the words following.

Therefore I rather ſuppoſe, that Paul continues his former ſpeech, euen to the end of the chapter: and that in theſe wordes he vſeth a third reaſon, to diſſwade Peter from halting betweene the Iewes and Gentiles. And the reaſon will the better appeare, if we ſearch the meaning of the words. If, while we be iuſtified by Chriſt, that is, by faith in Chriſt, without the workes of the law. We are found ſinners, that is, found in our ſinnes, not fully iuſtified, but are further to be iuſtified by the workes of the law. Is Chriſt the miniſter of ſinne? that is, doth it not hence follow, that Chriſt miniſtred vnto vs occaſion of ſinne, in that he hath cauſed vs to renounce the iuſtice of the law? God forbid, that is, ye doe all hold it with me as blaſphemie, that Chriſt ſhould be the miniſter of ſinne.

B The argument then is framed thus: If being iuſtified by Chriſt, we remaine ſinners, and are further to be iuſtified by the law, then Chriſt is the miniſter of ſinne: but Chriſt is no miniſter of ſinne: therefore they which are iuſtified, need not further to be iuſtified by the law.

The vſe. Firſt, we learne hence, that it is blaſphemie to make Chriſt the miniſter of ſinne, who is the miniſter of righteouſneſſe, yea iuſtice it ſelfe, Iſa.53.11. Dan.9.25. He brings euerlaſting righteouſneſſe, Ioh.1. He is the Lambe of God that takes away the ſinnes of the world. Of this all the Prophets giue teſtimony, Act.10.43.] Therfore Atheiſts are no better then diuels, that recken him among the C falſe Prophets of the world. And many of them that profeſſe Chriſt are greatly to be blamed, that make Chriſt the greateſt ſinner in the world: becauſe Chriſt died for them: therefore they preſume of mercie, and take libertie to liue as they liſt.

[Againe, Paul here teacheth, that they which are iuſtified by Chriſt, are perfectly to be iuſtified, and need not further to be iuſtified by any thing out of Chriſt, as by the workes of the law. It may be obiected, that they which are iuſtified feele themſelues to be ſinners, Rom.7.14. Anſ. The corruption of originall ſinne, is in them that are iuſtified: yet it is not imputed to them by God, and withall, it hath receiued his deadly wound by the death of D Chriſt. Therefore they which are iuſtified, are not reputed ſinners before God. Againe, it may be obiected, that they which are iuſtified, muſt confeſſe themſelues to be ſinners to the very death. Anſ. Confeſſion of ſinne is not a cauſe, but a way for the obtaining of pardon, Prou.28.14. 1.Ioh.1.9. The vncouering of our ſinnes is the way to couer them before God. The ſinnes therefore of men iuſtified, vpon their humble and ſerious confeſſion, are not ſinnes imputed, but couered.

Vpon this doctrine it followes, that there is not a ſecond iuſtification by workes, as the Papiſts teach. For he that is iuſtified by Chriſt, is fully iuſtified, and needs not further to be iuſtified by any thing out of Chriſt, as by the law. Againe, the ſame perſons teach, that our ſinnes are done away by the death of Chriſt, and we iuſtified in our baptiſme: and that if we fal and ſinne after baptiſme, we muſt doe workes of penance, that we may ſatisfie Gods iuſtice, and be further iuſtified by our workes and ſufferings. But then, by their leaues, after we are iuſtified by Chriſt, we are found ſinners, and we are further to be iuſtified by our owne workes. Now this is the point, which Paul here confuteth.

Againe, by this doctrine we learne, that Chriſt alone is by himſelfe ſufficient for our iuſtification. In him (ſaith Paul) are we complete, Col. 2. 14. He is a well of grace and life neuer dried vp, Ioh. 4. 14. Thirdly, we muſt content our ſelues with him alone, and with his obedidience for our iuſtification, deſpiſing (in reſpect of him) all merits and ſatisfaction done by man.

Laſtly, here we ſee what muſt be the care of men in this world, namely, to ſeeke to be iuſtified by the faith of Chriſt. It was Pauls principall deſire to be found in Chriſt, hauing not his owne righteouſneſſe, but the righteouſneſſe which is by the faith of Chriſt, Phil. 3. 10. The like deſire ſhould be in vs all.

18. For if I build againe the things which I haue deſtroyed, I make my ſelfe a tranſgreſſour.

By things deſtroyed, Paul meanes the workes or the iuſtice of the law, as appeares by the next verſe following, where rendering a reaſon of this, he ſaith, by the law I am dead to the law.

Theſe words, depend on the former thus: Paul had ſaid before, that Chriſt was not a miniſter of ſinne vnto vs: and here he prooues it thus. He that builds the iuſtice of the law which he hath deſtroyed, is a miniſter of ſin, or makes himſelfe a ſinner: but the Iewes, and Peter by his example build the iuſtice of the law which they haue deſtroyed, and ſo doth not Chriſt: therefore the Iewes and Peter make themſelues ſinners, and Chriſt doth not make vs ſinners.

Here let vs obſerue the modeſtie & meekeneſſe of Paul. The things which he ſpeakes, concerne Peter, and the Iewes: yet leſt he offend them, he applies them to himſelfe. This care not to offend, was in Chriſt, who was rather willing to depart from his right, then to offend, Mat. 17. 27. And Paul biddes vs pleaſe all men in that which is good.

Here againe, it is Pauls doctrine, that we make our ſelues offendours, when we build that which we haue lawfully deſtroyed. Thus Teachers are great offendours, when good doctrine is ioyned with badde conuerſation. For good doctrine deſtroies the kingdome of darkneſſe, and badde conuerſation builds it vp againe. Thus rulers are great offendours, when good counſell and badde example goe together. For good counſell beates downe wickednes, and bad example ſets it vp againe. Thus beleeuers in Chriſt are great offendours, when reformed religion, and vnreformed life are ioyned together, as often they are. For then vnreformed life builds the kingdome of ſinne, which Chriſt hath deſtroyed.

Further, we are here taught to be conſtant in that which is good, Tit. 1. 9. and to hold faſt the Goſpel which we profeſſe. We haue put vnder foote the Popiſh religion for this many yeares: our duty is to be conſtant herein, and no way to build either in word, or deede, that which we haue to the vttermoſt of our power deſtroyed.

19. For I through the law, am dead to the law, that I may liue vnto God.

In theſe words, Paul ſets downe a ſecond reaſon, to prooue Chriſt to be no miniſter of ſinne, in aboliſhing the iuſtice of the law. And the reaſon is framed thus: We Iewes, iuſtified by Chriſt, are dead to the law, not to liue as we liſt, but to liue to the honour of God. Therefore Chriſt in taking away the iuſtice of the law, is not the miniſter of ſinne.

Here three points are propounded: the firſt is, that the perſon iuſtified, is dead to the law: the ſecond, that he is dead to the law by the law: the third, that he is dead that he may liue vnto God.

For the better vnderſtanding of the firſt point, we muſt ſearch what is meant by dying to the law. Here the law is compared to an hard and cruell maſter: and we to ſlaues or bondmen: who ſo long as they are aliue, they are vnder the dominion, and at the command of their maſters: yet when they are dead, they are free from that bondage, and their maſters haue no more to doe with them. Here then, to be dead to the law, is to be free from the dominion of the law. And we are free, in foure reſpects. Firſt, in reſpect of the accuſing, & damnatorie ſentence of the law, Rom. 8. 1. Secondly, in reſpect of the power of the law, whereby as an occaſion it prouoketh and ſtirreth vp the corruption of the heart in the vnregenerate, Rom. 7. 8. Thirdly, in reſpect of the rigour of the law, whereby it exacteth moſt perfect obedience for our iuſtification. Thus Paul here ſaith, that he is dead to the law. Laſtly, in reſpect of the obligation of the conſcience, to the obſeruation of Ceremonies, Col. 2. 20. Thus are all perſons iuſtified, by the faith of Chriſt, free from the law.

Hence we learne, that the Papiſts erre, and are deceiued, when they teach, that the Law and the Goſpel are one for ſubſtance of doctrine. For then they which are iuſtified by Chriſt, ſhould not onely be dead to the law, but alſo to the Goſpell. Now the Scripture ſaith not, that perſons iuſtified are dead to the Goſpel.

They erre againe, in that they teach, that perſons iuſtified by the merit of the death of Chriſt, are further to be iuſtified by the workes of the law. For he that is iuſtified by Chriſt, is dead to the law: but if we be iuſtified by workes, then are we by Chriſt made aliue to the law.

Thirdly, here we ſee how long the dominion of the law continueth, and when it endeth.

A The law reignes ouer all men without exception, till they be iuſtified. When they once beginne to beleeue in Chriſt, & to amend their liues, then the dominion of the law ceaſeth, and they then are no more vnder the law, but vnder grace. Here all ſuch perſons as liue in the ſecuritie and hardneſſe of their hearts, are to be admoniſhed to repent of their ſinnes, and to beginne to turne vnto God. For they muſt know, that they liue vnder a moſt hard and cruell maſter, that will doe nothing but accuſe, terrifie, and condemne them, & cauſe them to runne headlong to vtter deſperation. And if they die beeing vnder the law, they muſt looke for nothing but death and deſtruction without mercie. For the law is mercileſſe. B This conſideration ſerueth notably to awake them that are dead in their ſinnes. Againe, all ſuch as with true and honeſt hearts haue begunne to repent and beleeue, let them be of good comfort. For they are not vnder the dominion of the law, but they are dead to the law, and vnder grace, hauing a Lord, who is alſo their mercifull Sauiour, who will giue them protection againſt the terrours of the law, and ſpare them as a father ſpares his child that ſerues him, and not breake them, though they be but as weake and bruiſed reedes, and as ſmoaking flaxe.

The ſecond point is, touching the meanes of our death to the law, and that is, the Law. Here ſome by the law, vnderſtand the law of faith, that is, the Goſpel. Rom. 3. 27. C And they make this to be the meaning of the words, By the law of Chriſt, that is, by the Goſpel, I am dead to the Law of Moſes. But this ſenſe, though it be a truth, yet will it not ſtand in this place. For it is the queſtion; whether by the Goſpel we be freed from the law? Now Paul, a learned diſputer, would not bring the queſtion to proue it ſelfe. Therefore, I take the true meaning of the words to be this: By the law of Moſes, I am dead to the law of Moſes. It may be demanded, how this can be, conſidering the law is the cauſe of no good thing in vs? For it is the miniſterie of death & condemnation. 2. Cor. 3. 8. 7. 9. Againe, that which the law cannot reueale, it cannot worke: but the law neither can, D nor doth reueale faith in Chriſt, the death to the law, nor repentance, &c. therefore the law is not cauſe to worke them. It may peraduenture be ſaid, that the law workes repentance, & ſorrow for ſinne. I anſwer, there is a double Repentance. One Legal, the other Euangelicall. Legall is when men haue a ſight of their ſinnes, and withall are grieued for the puniſhment thereof. This repentance is wrought by the miniſterie of the law: it was in Iudas: and it is no grace of God, but of it ſelfe it is the way to hell. Euangelicall Repentance is, when being turned by grace, we turne our ſelues to God. This repentance is a gift of grace, and is not wrought by the law, but by the miniſterie of the Goſpel. Againe, there is a Legall ſorrow, which is a ſorrow for ſinne, in reſpect of the puniſhment: this is no grace, and it is wrought by the law. Euangelicall ſorrow, is ſorrow for ſin, becauſe it is ſinne. This indeede is a grace of God; but it is not wrought by the law, but by the preaching of mercy and reconciliation: and it followes in vs vpon the apprehenſion of Gods mercy by faith. The law then being the cauſe of no good thing in vs, it may be demanded (I ſay) how we ſhould be dead to the law, by the law? Anſ. Though the law be not a cauſe of this death to the law, and ſo to ſinne: yet it is an occaſion thereof. For it accuſeth, and terrifieth, and condemneth vs: and thereby it occaſioneth, or vrgeth vs to flie vnto Chriſt, who is the cauſe that we die vnto the law. As the needle goes before, and drawes in the thrid, which ſowes the cloth; ſo the law goes before, and makes a way, that grace may follow after, and take place in the heart. Thus muſt this place be vnderſtood, and all other places that ſpeake of the law in this manner: as Rom. 7. 8. &c.

The third point is, touching the end of our death to the law: and that is, that we may liue to God. It may be demaunded, what life this is, whereby we liue to God? Anſ. There is a naturall, and a ſpirituall life. Naturall life is that, which we receiue from Adam by generation: and it is the function of naturall faculties, in liuing, moouing, vſe of ſenſes, and reaſon. Spirituall life, is that which we receiue from Chriſt by regeneration: and it is the action, motion, or operation of the ſpirit in vs. This life is called by Paul, the life of God, Eph. 4. 18. And this is the life which he ſpeakes of in this place. And it is deſcribed by many things. Firſt, by the end, and vſe of it. For it ſerues to make vs to liue to God, that is, to the honour and glorie of God. And we liue to God by liuing wiſely, godly, iuſtly: Tit. 2. 12. Wiſely, in reſpect of our ſelues: godly, in reſpect of God: iuſtly, in reſpect of men.

That we may liue wiſely, we muſt obſerue two rules. The firſt: we muſt labour with all diligence, and with all ſpeede, that we may be worthy to ſtand before the Sonne of man at his comming. And therefore we muſt labour to be in Chriſt, hauing true faith and good conſcience. Eph. 5. 15. Luk. 21. 36. Conſider alſo the example of Paul. Act. 24. 16. It is true wiſdome to be wiſe for our ſoules, and for euerlaſting happineſſe: and it was the folly of the fooliſh virgins, that they did not furniſh themſelues with the oyle of grace in time conuenient. The ſecond rule: we muſt in this world come as neare heauen and the happineſſe of life euerlaſting, as may be. Phil. 3. 14. And for this cauſe we muſt ioyne our ſelues to the aſſembly where the word is preached, prayer made, and Sacraments adminiſtred: for there is the gate of heauen. Conſider the practiſe of Moſes, Heb. 11. 25. 26. and that of Dauid, Pſal. 84. 10. Againe, being abſent from heauen both in bodie and ſoule, yet we muſt haue our conuerſation there, by the cogitation of our mindes; and by the affections of our hearts. Phil. 3, 21.

That we may liue godlily, ſeuen rules muſt be remembred. The firſt: we muſt bring our ſelues into the preſence of the inuiſible God: yea, we muſt ſet our thoughts, wills, affections, and all we doe in his ſight & preſence: and we muſt euermore remember whatſoeuer we do, that we haue to deale with God himſelfe. In this regard Enoch is ſaid to walke with God, Gen. 5. 24. Abraham and Iſaac before God, Gen. 17. 1. and 48. 15. and Dauid, Pſal. 116. 9. and 139. all. and Cornelius, Act. 10. 33. and Paul, 2. Cor. 7. 12.

The ſecond: we muſt take knowledge of the will of God in all things, whether it be reuealed in the word, or by any euent. It is not enough to know Gods wil, but when time and place ſerues, we muſt acknowledge it. Rom. 12. 2. Col. 1. 19.

The third: we muſt bring our ſelues in ſubiection to the knowne will of God, and captiuate all our ſenſes vnto it: and ſuffer God to ſet vp his kingdome in vs. Rom. 12. 1.

The fourth: when we haue offended God, we muſt inſtantly humble our ſelues before his maieſtie, confeſſing our offences, and making inſtant deprecation for mercie. Thus did Ezra chap. 9. and Daniel, chap. 9. and Dauid, Pſal. 32. 3.

The fifth: in all our miſeries and aduerſities, we muſt be ſilent in our hearts, by quieting our wills in the good will of God. Pſal. 4. 4. Examine your ſelues, and be ſtill. Pſal. 37. 7. Be ſilent to Iehoua. Conſider the example of Aaron Leuit. 10. 3. of Dauid, Pſal. 39. 9. of the Iewes, Act. 11. 18.

The ſixth: in all things we doe or ſuffer, we muſt depend on the goodneſſe, prouidence, and mercie of God, for the ſucceſſe of our labours, and for eaſe or deliuerance out of miſerie. This is to liue by faith: and, as Peter ſaith, 1. Pet. 3. 17. to ſanctifie God in our hearts.

The laſt: in all things we muſt giue praiſe and thankes to God; and that for our miſeries and afflictions, Iob. 1. 21. for in them God mingles his iuſtice, with mercie, whereas he might vtterly condemne vs.

That we may liue iuſtly in reſpect of men, two rules muſt be obſerued. The firſt: we muſt make God in Chriſt, our treaſure & our portion; and his fauour and bleſſing, our riches. Then ſhall not the vile ſinnes of auarice, and ambition, beare ſway in vs: and then ſhall we learne with Paul to be content in any eſtate, Phil. 4. 11. becauſe howſoeuer the world goes, we haue our portion and treaſure. The ſecond, we muſt loue God in louing of man: & ſerue him in doing ſeruice to men by the offices and duties of our callings. They which labour in their callings for this end to get riches, honours, and to ſet vp themſelues in this world, prophane their callings, and practiſe iniuſtice. For not ſelfe-loue, but loue to God, in duties of loue to men, muſt beare ſway in all our actions.

Thus we ſee what it is to liue to God. Now we are all to be exhorted, to order our liues in this manner. For firſt of all, we are Gods: and therefore we muſt glorifie God both in our bodies and ſoules, 1. Cor. 6. 20. Secondly, the end of our iuſtification and redemption is, that we may liue to God. And it is great wickedneſſe to peruert the order of God, by liuing to our ſelues and the luſts of our hearts. Thirdly, there be three degrees of life: one is in this life, a ſpirituall and a renewed life: the ſecond in death, when the body goes to the earth, and the ſoule to heauen: the third, in the laſt iudgment, when bodie and ſoule reunited, enter into the preſence of God. Therefore that we may be ſaued, we muſt liue vnto God in this life: for we can neuer come to the ſecond degrée of life, but by the firſt. And we muſt not imagine, that we can ſteppe immediately out of a leud and wicked life, into euerlaſting happineſſe in heauen. Laſtly, the grace of God in the miniſterie of the Goſpel hath appeared, and long taught vs, and called vpon vs, to liue vnto God. Therefore vnleſſe we be aſhamed and confounded for our ſinnes, and beginne with all ſpeede to liue vnto God, it will be worſe with vs, then with Sodom and Gomorrha, and many other nations.

20. I am crucified with Chriſt: Thus I liue, yet not I any more, but Chriſt liues in me. And in that I now liue in the fleſh, I liue by the faith of the ſonne of God, who hath loued me, and giuen himſelfe for me.

Whereas, Paul ſaid before, I am dead to the lawe, here he declares the reaſon of it, when he ſaith, I am crucified with Chriſt. Againe, here Paul ſets downe the true preparation to ſpirituall life. For God firſt kills, & then he makes aliue. And the meaſure of ſpirituall life, is according to the decay of originall ſinne. This preparation, ſtands in two things: the firſt is, fellowſhippe with Chriſt in his croſſe & paſſion, in theſe words, I am crucified with Chriſt. The ſecond, is Abnegation, or Annihilation (as ſome call it) in theſe words, Not I any more: I am crucified with Chriſt.

For the better vnderſtanding of theſe words, we muſt obſerue; firſt, that Paul ſpeakes not this of himſelfe particularly, but he ſpeakes in the perſon of the Chriſtian Iewes, before whome he now reaſoneth with Peter: nay in the perſon of al beleeuers. For al that beleeue are buried into his death, Rom. 6. 4. Secondly, it muſt be obſerued, that Paul ſpeakes this of himſelfe not as he is a man conſiſting of body and ſoule, but as he is a ſinner carrying about him the body of ſinne, Rom. 6. 6. Further, it may be demaunded, vpon what ground he ſhould ſay, I am crucified with Chriſt? Anſ. There be two reaſons of this ſpeech. One is, that Chriſt vpon the croſſe, ſtood not as a priuate perſon, but as a publicke perſon, in the room, place, and ſteade of all the Elect: and therefore when he was crucified, all beleeuers were crufied in him; as in the Parlament, when the Burgeſſe giues his voice, the whole corporation is ſaid to conſent by him, and in him. The ſecond reaſon is this. In the conuerſion of a ſinner, there is a reall donation of Chriſt, and all his benefits vnto vs: and there is a reall vnion, wherby euery beleeuer is made one with Chriſt. And by vertue of this vnion, the croſſe and paſſion of Chriſt, is as verily made ours, as if we had beene crucified in our owne perſons. Hereupon Paul ſaith in the time preſent, I am crucified with Chriſt. There are like phraſes in Paul, We are dead with Chriſt: we are riſen with him: we ſit with him in heauenly places. Eph. 2. 6. Col. 3. 1. and they are in the ſame manner to be expounded. Moreouer, the benefits that ariſe of this communion with Chriſt in his paſſion are two. One is, Iuſtification from all our ſinnes, Rom. 6. 7. The ſecond, is Mortification of ſinne by the vertue of the death of Chriſt, after we are ingrafted into him. Thus much of the meaning.

The vſe. Superſtitious perſons take occaſion by the paſſion of Chriſt, to ſtirre vp themſelues to ſorrow, compaſſion, and teares, by conſidering the pitifull handling of Chriſt, the ſorrow that pearced the heart of the virgin Marie, and the cruelty of the Iewes. But this is a humane vſe, that may be made of euery hiſtorie.

The right vſe is this: We are in minde and meditation to conſider Chriſt crucified: and firſt, we are to beleeue, that he was crucified for vs. This beeing done, we muſt goe yet further, and as it were ſpread our ſelues on the croſſe of Chriſt, beleeuing and withall beholding our ſelues crucified with him. Thou wilt ſay, this is a hard matter, I cannot doe it. I ſay againe, that this is the right practiſe of faith: ſtriue therfore to be ſetled in this, that the bodie of thy ſinne is crucified with Chriſt. Pray inſtantly by asking, ſeeking, knocking, that thou maieſt thus beleeue. This faith, and perſwaſion, is of endleſſe vſe. Firſt, it is the foundation of thy comfort. If thou beleeue thy ſelfe to be crucified with Chriſt: thou ſhalt ſee thy ſelfe freed from the dominion of the law and ſinne, from hell, death, and condemnation; and to thy great comfort ſhalt ſee thy ſelfe to triumph ouer all thy ſpirituall enemies. For this Chriſt doth, Col. 2. 14. and thou doſt the ſame, if thou be ſetled in this, that thou art crucified with him. Secondly, vpon this perſwaſion, thou ſhalt feele the vertue of the death of Chriſt to kill ſinne in thee, and to raiſe thy dead ſoule to ſpirituall life. When the Shunamites child was dead, Eliſha went & lay vpon him, applying face to face, hand to hand, and foot to foot: and then his fleſh waxed warme, and reuiued, 2. King. 4. 34. euen ſo apply thy ſelfe to Chriſt crucified, hand to hand, foot to foot, heart to heart: & thou ſhalt feele in thy ſelfe a death of ſin, and the heate of ſpirituall life to warme and inflame thy dead heart. Thirdly, if thou beleeue thy ſelfe to be crucified with Chriſt, thou ſhalt ſee the length, the breadth, the height, the depth of the loue of God in Chriſt. For thy ſinnes are the ſwords, and the ſpeares that crucified Chriſt: and yet thou haſt all the benefit of his paſſion. Laſtly, if thou canſt beleeue that thou art crucified with Chriſt, thou ſhalt further be aſſured, that he is partner with thee in all thy miſeries and afflictions, to eaſe thee, and to make thee to beare them. 1. Pet. 4. 13. Col. 1. 24.

The duties hence to be learned, are theſe. Firſt, if thou be crucified with Chriſt, then muſt thou apply thy heart to crucifie the body of corruption in thee, by prayer, faſting, by auoiding the occaſions, by abſtaining from the practiſe of ſinne, and by all good meanes. Behold a man hanged vpon a gybbet: Thou ſeeſt he hath ſatiſfied the law: and there is no further iudiciall proceeding againſt him: and withall thou ſeeſt how he ceaſeth from his thefts, murders, blaſphemies: euen ſo, if thou canſt behold thy ſelfe ſpred vpon the croſſe of Chriſt, and crucified with him, there will be in thee a new mind and diſpoſition, and thou wilt ceaſe from thine old offences. Againe, being crucified with Chriſt, thou muſt be conformable to Chriſt in thy ſufferings. He ſuffered in loue: and the more his paſſion increaſed, the more he ſhewed his loue: euen ſo in thine afflictions and ſufferings, thy loue to God and man muſt be increaſed, though man be the cauſe of thine afflictions. Secondly, Chriſt ſuffered in obedience: Not my will, but thy will be done: euen ſo, in all thy ſufferings, thou muſt reſigne thy ſelfe to God, and quiet thy ſelfe in his will. Thirdly, Chriſt ſuffered in all humilitie, humbling himſelfe to the death of the croſſe: euen ſo we, in, and vpon our afflictions, are to humble our ſelues vnder the mighty hand of God, confeſſing our ſinnes, and intreating for pardon. Fourthly, he ſuffered in faith, as man depending on his Fathers goodneſſe, euen in the middeſt of his paſſion: euen ſo are we to doe. Fifthly, he went on conſtantly in his ſufferings to the very death: euen ſo are we to ſuffer in the reſiſting of ſin, euen vnto the ſhedding of our blood. Laſtly, the principall care of Chriſt was, to ſee the fruit of his ſufferings: ſo when we are diſtreſſed, our care muſt rather be to ſee the fruite of our diſtreſſe, then to ſeeke deliuerance. This conformity with Chriſt in his paſſion, is an infallible worke & token of the child of God, and a ſigne, that we are crucified with Chriſt.

Againe, here we are to take notice of the falſe faith of many men. They can be content to beleeue that Chriſt was crucified for them: but there they make a pauſe: for they doe not beleeue that they are crucified with Chriſt. Their faith therefore is but a falſe faith: and their profeſſion is according. For they haue the forme of godlineſſe without the power thereof. They thinke, that they beleeue the Articles of faith aright: but they are deceiued. For to beleeue in Chriſt crucified, is not onely to beleeue that he was crucified, but alſo to beleeue that I am crucified with him. And this is to know Chriſt crucified.

Laſtly, here we are to conſider the abomination of the church of Rome. For it moſt abuſeth that, which is the greateſt treaſure in the world, namely, Chriſt crucified. For they make a very idoll of him, in that they worſhip him, in, at, and before painted and carued crucifixes. For there is no ſuch Chriſt in heauen, or in earth, that will be preſent when we pray, and heare vs at crucifixes. Againe, they giue Latria, diuine honour, to deuiſed and framed crucifixes: and thus they robbe Chriſt of his honour.

Thus much of our communion with Chriſt in his paſſion: now followes the ſecond part of preparation, namely, Abnegation, I liue yet not I any more: that is, I liue a ſpirituall life, yet not I as a naturall man. For in that regard, I carry my ſelfe as a man crucified, or after the manner of a dead man, ſuffering nothing that is in me by nature, to raigne in me, that Chriſt alone may liue and raigne in me. Here is a notable duty to be learned: we being crucified with Chriſt, muſt carry our ſelues as men crucified, and that in three reſpects. Firſt, in reſpect of corruption of ſinfull nature. For in regard of our ſinnes, we are to eſteeme our ſelues vnworthy of meat, drinke, ſleepe, breathing: yea we are to eſteeme our ſelues to be as vile as any of the creatures vpon earth: and we are to denie vngodlineſſe, and worldly luſts, not ſuffering any of them to raigne ouer vs. Secondly, we muſt carrie our ſelues as dead men, in reſpect of the good things that belong to nature, as honours, riches, pleaſures, friends: all which in reſpect of preparation of minde, we muſt daily forſake for Chriſts ſake, not ſuffering any of them to take place in our hearts. Laſtly, we muſt be as dead men in reſpect of our owne reaſon and will, and we muſt tread them vnder foote, making Gods wil our wiſedome, and wil, and giuing it Lordſhip and dominion ouer vs, our owne wils in the meane ſeaſon lying dead in vs. Thus are we to carrie our ſelues as dead men: and we are to be carefull of it that God may haue pleaſure in vs, we muſt forget our owne people, and our fathers houſe. Pſal. 45. 10. That we may buy the pearle, we muſt ſell all we haue, our wills, our affections, and the deareſt things in the world. He that would liue when he is dead, muſt die while he is aliue: and we muſt now lay out our ſelues as dead perſons. Corruption of nature, reaſon, and will, muſt be dead in vs, that Chriſt alone may liue and reigne in vs.

The third point concerning ſpirituall life is, touching the Originall and well-ſpring thereof, in theſe words, That Chriſt may reigne in me. For the better conceiuing whereof, three points are to be obſerued. The firſt, that Chriſt is not onely the Author, with the Father and the holy Ghoſt, but alſo the Roote of life, hauing life in himſelfe that he may conuaie it to all that beleeue in him. He is the true vine, and we are the branches. Ioh. 15. 1. he is an appointed head to his Church. Eph. 1. 22. he is the prince of life. Act. 3. 15. he is a quickening ſpirit. 1. Cor. 15. 45. And in this regard is he ſaid to liue in vs, namely, as a roote in the branch, or as the head in the members. The ſecond point is, that there muſt be an vnion with Chriſt, before we can receiue life from him, and he liue in vs. If ye abide in me, and I in you, ye ſhall bring forth much fruit. Ioh. 15. 4. We muſt be grafted with him, before we can be conformable to his death and reſurrection. Rom. 6. 5. And againe we muſt be taken out of the wild oliue, and ſet in the true oliue. Thus much Paul ſignifieth, when he ſaith, Chriſt liues in me. Of this coniunction, two things muſt be noted. The firſt, that it is a ſubſtantiall vnion: in that the perſon of him that beleeueth, is vnited to the perſon of Chriſt. For we muſt eate the fleſh of Chriſt, and drinke his blood, before we can haue life abiding in vs, Ioh. 6. 53. and our bodies are members of Chriſt. 1. Cor. 6. 15. Againe, this Vnion is ſpirituall, becauſe it is made by the bond of one ſpirit. 1. Cor. 12. 13. By one ſpirit we are baptiſed into one bodie. And no man is to maruaile, that we on earth ſhould be ioyned to Chriſt in heauen. By ciuill contract man and wife are one fleſh, though diſtant many miles aſunder: why then may not we be ioyned to Chriſt by vertue of the couenant of grace? conſidering no diſtance of place can hinder the beeing of the ſpirit of Chriſt in vs. The third point is, that after this vnion with Chriſt, he muſt further communicate himſelfe vnto vs, before we can liue by him, and he in vs. To this purpoſe Saint Iohn ſaith, that God hath giuen vs life: that this life is in the Sonne: that he which hath the Son hath life. 1. Ioh. 5. 12. For the conceiuing of this truth, two queſtions may be demanded. One, in what order Chriſt giues himſelfe vnto vs? Anſ. Chriſt firſt of all, giues his fleſh & blood, that is, himſelfe: and then ſecondly, his gifts, namely the efficacie, and merit of his death. The inſtitution of the Lords Supper ſheweth plainely, that we are not partakers of the benefits of Chriſt, vnleſſe firſt of all Chriſt himſelfe be giuen vnto vs. The ſecond queſtion is, how Chriſt can be ſaid to liue in vs? Anſw. He is not in vs in reſpect of locall preſence, but by the ſupernaturall, and ſpeciall operation of the ſpirit, 1. Cor. 6. 17. The operation of the ſpirit, is threefold. The firſt is, when God imputes the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt to them that beleeue, and withal giues the Right of eternall life, and the earneſt of this right, namely, the firſt fruits of the ſpirit. Hereupon iuſtification is called the Iuſtification of life. Rom. 5. The ſecond is, Viuification by the vertue of the reſurrection of Chriſt. Phil. 3. 10. And this vertue is the power of the Godhead of Chriſt, or the power of the ſpirit, raiſing vs to newneſſe of life, as it raiſed Chriſt

Rom. 11, 14.

A from the death of ſinne. And by this power, Chriſt is ſaid to liue in them that beleeue. The third is, the reſurrection of the dead body to euerlaſting glory, in the day of iudgement, Rom.8.11.

Thus then the meaning of the words is euident: that Chriſt as a roote, or head, liues in them that are vnited to him, and that by the operation of his Spirit, cauſing them to die vnto their ſinnes, and to liue vnto God. And againe, it muſt be remembred, that Paul ſpeakes this not priuately of himſelfe, but generally in the name of all beleeuers. For hee ſaith, 2. Cor. 13.5. Know ye not that Chriſt is in you, except ye be reprobates?

The vſe. Hence it followes, that they which 1.Ioh.3.7. B are true beleeuers, cannot make a practiſe of ſinne: and againe, that they ſinne not with the full conſent, or ſwinge of their wils. Becauſe Chriſt liues in them, and reſtraines the will in part. When they ſinne therefore, they ſinne not of malice, but of ignorance, or infirmity.

Secondly, the true beleeuer, cannot wholly fall away from grace: becauſe the life of Chriſt cannot bee aboliſhed. As Chriſt died but once, and for euer after liues to God: ſo they that are in Chriſt, die once to ſinne, and liue eternally to God, Rom.6.10. The vertue, and power of God, that was ſhewed in raiſing Chriſt to life, is likewiſe ſhewed in quickning them that doe beleeue, Eph.1.19. He there- C fore that is made aliue to God, dies no more, but remaines aliue as Chriſt doth.

Thirdly, they which are true beleeuers, are a free and voluntary people obeying God, as if there were no law to compell them. For they haue Chriſt to liue in them. Reade Pſal. 110.3. The Spirit of life that is in Chriſt, is alſo in them; and that is their law, Rom.8.2. It is the property of the childe of God to obey God, as it is the nature and quality of the fire to burne when matter is put to it.

It may be here demaunded, how wee may know that Chriſt liues in vs? Anſ. By the Spirit of God, 1.*Ioh.*3.24. And the Spirit is known D by the motions and operations thereof. The firſt whereof is a purpoſe to obey God, according to all his commaundements that concerne vs, with an inclination of our hearts to the ſaid commaundements. Paul ſaith, he was ſolde vnder ſinne: and yet withall he addes, that he delighted in the Law of God according to the inward man, Rom.7.23. He that loues God, and keepes his commandements, hath the Father and the Sonne dwelling in him, Ioh. 14. 23. Let this bee obſerued. Pharaoh, when Gods hand was vpon him, confeſſed he was a ſinner, and his people, and requeſted Moſes and Aaron, to let the people goe. But after God had withdrawne his hand, he returned to his olde courſe. The like do ſicke men: they make promiſe to amend their liues, and they requeſt their friends to pray for them: but when they are recouered, they forget all their faire promiſes. The reaſon is this: There is conſcience in them; and by it they know themſelues to be miſerable ſinners: but they want this purpoſe to obey God, and the inclination to his lawes; and therfore indeed they hate not their ſins, but rather the commandement of God. The ſecond operation and ſigne of the Spirit, is a mind and diſpoſition, like to the mind and diſpoſition of Chriſt; which is to doe the will of God, to ſeeke his glory, and to apply himſelfe to the good of men, in all duties of loue. The third and laſt (to omit many) is to loue Chriſt for himſelf, and to loue them that loue Chriſt, and that becauſe they loue Chriſt. This is a true ſigne that wee haue paſſed from death to life; 1.Ioh.3.14. It may be here ſaid, how can Chriſt bee ſaid to liue in vs, conſidering we are laden with afflictions & miſeries? where Chriſt liues, there is no miſery. Anſw. In the midſt of all miſeries, the life of Chriſt doth moſt appeare. VVhere naturall life decaies, there ſpirituall life takes place, 2. Cor. 4.10. I beare in my body the mortification of our Lord Ieſus, that the life of Ieſus may be made maniſeſt in me. Gods power is made maniſeſt in weakneſſe, 2.Corinth.12. Againe, it may be ſaid, if Chriſt liued in vs, we ſhould not feele ſo many corruptions as we doe. Anſw. The life of Chriſt is conueyed vnto vs by little and little. God hauing wounded and ſlaine vs, firſt bindes vs vp, then he reuiues vs, and the third day he raiſeth vs up, Hoſ.6.1. Againe, nature feeles not nature, nor corruption feeles corruption, but grace: therfore it is the life of Chriſt in vs that makes vs feele the maſſe and body of corruption.

Furthermore, here we are to take notice of the common ſinne of our daies. Men will not ſuffer Chriſt to liue in them, and to rule ouer them. It is reputed a ſmall matter; but it is a grieuous offence. The Gentiles ſay, Let vs breake their bands, and caſt their cords from vs, Pſal.2.2. And it was the ſin of the Iewes to ſay, We will not haue this man to raigne ouer vs, Luk. 19.14. And therefore Chriſt ſaith, bring them hither, and ſlay them before me, verſ.27.

Laſtly, here we learne our duty: and that is, ſo to liue, that wee may bee able to ſay with good conſcience, that Chriſt liues in vs: we muſt ſeeke his kingdome aboue all things, & take his yoake on vs. It will be ſaid, what muſt we doe that Chriſt may liue in vs? Anſw. VVe muſt vſe the meanes appointed, meditation of the word, prayer, ſacraments: and withall we muſt ſpiritually eate the fleſh of Chriſt, and drinke his blood, Ioh. 6.57. And that wee may eat him, we muſt haue a ſtomack in our ſoules like the ſtomacke of our bodies, and we muſt hunger and thirſt after Chriſt: and therefore wee muſt feele our owne ſinnes, and our ſpirituall pouertie, and haue an earneſt luſt and appetite after Chriſt, as after meate & drinke. VVhen Siſera was purſued by the army of the Iſraelites, hee cried to Iael, and ſaid, Giue me drinke, I die for thirſt, Iudg. 4.19. euen ſo we being purſued by the ſentence of the law, by the terrours of hell, death, and condemnation, muſt flie to the throne of grace, and cry out, ſaying, Giue me of the tree of life, giue me of the water of life: I periſh for thirſt. Then ſhall our wretched ſoules bee quickened, and reuiued to euerlaſting life, Mat. 5. 6. Reu. 21. 6.

In the fourth place, here is ſet downe the Meanes of ſpirituall life, in theſe words, And in that I now liue in the fleſh, I liue by the faith of the Sonne of God, who hath loued mee, and giuen himſelfe for me. And that the doctrine may the better appeare, I will ſtand a while to ſhew the meaning of them. By fleſh, is meant the mortall body, or the fraile condition of this temporall life. Hebr. 5. 7. and 1. Pet. 4. 2. And therefore to liue in the fleſh, is to liue a naturall life by eating, drinking, ſleeping. Further, Paul ſaith, that liuing in the fleſh, hee liued by faith: and for the better conceiuing of this, two queſtions may bee demaunded. The firſt is, Why a beleeuer is ſaid to liue by faith? Anſwer. There bee two cauſes. Firſt, faith is an inſtrument to vnite vs to Chriſt: and by meanes of this vnion, wee receiue life from Chriſt: for Chriſt dwels in our hearts by faith, Eph. 3. 17. Secondly, faith is a Guide, to order & gouerne temporall life, in all good manner, according to the will of God. And this faith doth by a diuine kinde of reaſoning framed in the minde, whereby it vrgeth, and perſwadeth to good duties, Rom. 6. 11.

The ſecond queſtion is, How men liue by faith? Anſ. The childe of God liues a double life in this world: a ſpirituall, and a temporall. The ſpirituall ſtands ſpecially in three things; Reconciliation with God: renouation of life: and good workes. Now in our reconciliation with God, we liue in this world only by faith. For we haue, and enioy pardon of ſinnes, imputation of iuſtice, and acceptation to life eternall, onely by meanes of our faith, Rom. 4. 4. and 5. 1.

Againe, in the renouation and change of our liues, wee liue by faith. For our faith in Chriſt purifieth our hearts, Act. 15. 9. partly, by deriuing holines and puritie from Chriſt vnto vs, who is our ſanctification: and partly, by mouing and perſwading of vs to holines and newnes of life, 1. Ioh. 3. 3.

Laſtly, in the doing of euery good worke we muſt liue by our faith. For firſt there muſt be a generall faith, that the worke in his kinde pleaſeth God, Rom. 14. 25. Secondly, iuſtifying faith muſt giue a beginning to the worke, I beleeued, therefore I ſpake, Pſal. 116. 12. Thirdly, after the worke is done, faith muſt couer the defects thereof, that it may be acceptable to God, Heb. 11. 5.

Temporall life ſtands in cares, or miſeries: and miſeries are outward afflictions, or inward temptations. And in all our worldly cares, wee are to liue by faith. For our care muſt bee to doe our office, and the labour of our calling, with all diligence. This being done, we muſt there make a pauſe: and for the ſucceſſe of all our prayers, and labours, we muſt caſt our care on God, 1. Pet. 5. 7.

Likewiſe, in our afflictions wee are to liue by faith. For our faith is to aſſure vs, that God, according to his promiſe will giue a good iſſue, 1. Corinth. 10. 13. And though all temporall things faile vs, it makes vs retaine the hope of mercy, & of eternal life. Thirdly, it makes vs waite Gods leiſure for our deliuerance, Iſa. 16. 28.

Laſtly, in our Temptations wee are not to liue by feeling, but by faith: yea againſt feeling, to reſt on the bare promiſe of God; when we feele & apprehend nothing but the wrath of God. And thus wee ſee how the beleeuer liues by his faith in this world.

It may bee ſaid, What is the faith wee liue by? Anſwer is here made: It is the faith of the Sonne of God. And ſauing faith is ſo called, becauſe Chriſt is not only the Author of it, and the obiect or matter of it, but alſo the Reuealer of it. For there was a certaine faith in God, which was put into the heart of man in the creation, which alſo the morall law requireth: but this faith in the Meſſias, was not knowne till after the fall; and then it was reuealed to the world by the Sonne of God.

Againe, it may bee ſaid, What is this faith of the Sonne of God? Anſwer is here made: A faith whereby I beleeue that Chriſt hath loued me, and giuen himſelfe for me.

Theſe words then thus explaned, are an anſwer to an obiection, which may bee framed thus: VVhy ſhouldeſt thou ſay, that thou liueſt not, but that Chriſt liueth in thee; conſidering thou liueſt in the fleſh, as other men doe? Anſwer is made, Though I liue in the fleſh; yet I liue by the faith of the Sonne of God.

The vſe. Here firſt of all they are to be blamed, that liue by ſenſe, like beaſts: beleeuing no more then they ſee, and truſting God no further then they ſee him. For, if a man whome wee ſee and know, make a promiſe to vs, we are comforted: yet if God, who is inuiſible make in his word farre better promiſes (as he doth,) we are not in like ſort comforted. Againe, we put too much confidence in meanes. If wee haue good callings, houſe, land, liuing, wee can then truſt in God: but when meanes of comfort faile, wee are confounded in our ſelues, as if there were no God. Wee are like the vſurer; who will not truſt the man, but his pawne: euen ſo we truſt not God vpon his bare word, without a pawne. If he come to vs with a full hand, and with the pawne of his good gifts, and bleſſings, we truſt him, elſe not.

Againe, they are to bee blamed, that liue onely by the guidance of reaſon. For many diſpute thus: I deale truely and iuſtly with all men, and liue peaceably with my neighbours: therefore God will haue mee excuſed. But there muſt bee a better guide to euerlaſting life; namely, faith in Chriſt: elſe ſhall we miſſe of our marke.

Thirdly, they deceiue themſelues that think they may liue as they liſt, and call vpon God when they are dying, and ſo die by faith. It is wel if they can die by faith: but that they may ſo die, they muſt liue by faith.

Laſtly, they are to bee blamed, that ſpend their daies in worldly cares, ſo as no good thing can take place. This is the life of infidels. And where true faith raignes it cuts off the multitude of cares, & makes vs caſt them on God.

Moreouer, here wee ſee what we are to doe in perillous times, as in the time of plague, famine, ſword, when preſent death is before our eyes: we muſt then liue by faith. When Noah heard of the flood, hee prepared ſuch meanes as faith would affoard for the ſauing of himſelfe, and his family. Abraham, Iſaac, Iacob, by faith liued as pilgrimes in a ſtrange land, and were content. Moſes left Pharaohs court, & feared not the wrath of the king: becauſe by faith hee ſawe him that was inuiſible, Hebr. 11.27. Dauid in the feare of preſent death, comforted himſelfe in the Lord his God, 1. Sam. 30.6. When Iehoſaphat knew not what in the world to doe, hee lift vp the eyes of his faith to the Lord, 2. Chron. 20.12. Chriſt in his agony and paſſion of the croſſe, by faith commended his ſoule into the hands of his Father. Of the Saints of the new Teſtament, ſome were racked, ſome were ſtoned to death, and that by faith, Hebr. 11.36. Wee muſt therefore all of vs, learne to liue by faith: and for this cauſe wee muſt acquaint our ſelues with the word, & promiſes of God; and mingle them with our faith: elſe ſhall the life of a man in the world be worſe, then the life of a beaſt.

Againe, in theſe words [who hath loued mee, and giuen himſelfe for me,] the nature and propertie of iuſtifying faith is ſet downe, which is to apply the loue of God, and the merit of the paſſion of Chriſt, vnto our ſelues. And therefore the Papiſts are deceiued, who ſay, that hope applieth, and not faith. It may bee alleadged, that Paul ſpeakes theſe words priuately of himſelfe. Anſ. He ſpeakes them in the name of all beleeuers, Iewes and Gentiles. For (as we may ſee in the former verſes) that which concerned Peter, and the reſt of Chriſtian Iewes, hee applies to himſelfe, leſt his ſpeech ſhould ſeeme odious.

Againe, it may be obiected, that all beleeuers cannot ſay thus, Chriſt hath loued me, and giuen himſelfe for me. Anſ. If the minde bee fixed on Chriſt: and there bee alſo a will and endeauour to beleeue and apprehend Chriſt; there is faith indeede. For God accepts the true and earneſt will to beleeue, for faith. We are not ſaued for the perfection of our faith, but for the perfection of the obedience of Chriſt, which faith apprehendeth. The Iſraelites which looked vpon the braſen ſerpent with one eye, or with a ſquint-eye, with half an eye, or dimme ſight, were healed, not for the goodnes of their ſight, but for the promiſe of God. The poore in ſpirit, are bleſſed: now they are poore in ſpirit, who find themſelues empty of all goodnes, empty of true faith, full of vnbeliefe, and vnfainedly deſire to beleeue. So then if we greeue, becauſe wee cannot beleeue as we ſhould, and earneſtly deſire to beleeue, God accepts vs for beleeuers.

Againe, in theſe words [who hath loued me, and giuen himſelfe for me,] S. Paul ſets downe the reaſon or argument, which faith vſeth in the mind regenerate, to moue men to liue to God. And the reaſon is framed thus: Chriſt loueth thee, & hath giuen himſelfe for thee: therfore ſee thou liue to God. Reade the like, Rom. 12.1. and Pſal. 116.12.

By this we are to take occaſion, to conſider and to bewaile the hardneſſe of our hearts, who doe not relent from our euill waies, and turne vnto God vpon the conſideration of his loue in Chriſt. The waters of the Sanctuarie haue long flowed vnto vs: but they haue not ſweetned vs, and made vs ſauory: therefore it is to bee feared leſt our habitations be at length turned to places of nettles and ſaltpits, Ezec. 47.11.

21. I doe not abrogate the grace of God: for if righteouſneſſe be by the law, then Chriſt died without cauſe.

The meaning. Grace in Scripture ſignifieth two things: the free fauour of God; and the gifts of God in vs. And where the holy Ghoſt intreats of iuſtification, grace in the firſt ſenſe, ſignifies the good will and fauour of God, pardoning ſinnes, and accepting vs to life euerlaſting, for the merit of Chriſt, 2. Tim. 1.9. Eph. 2.8. And in this ſenſe is the word vſed in this place. And when Paul ſaith, I doe not abrogate the grace of God, his meaning is, I doe not make void, or fruſtrate the grace of God in reſpect of my ſelfe, or in reſpect of other beleeuers, by teaching the iuſtification of a ſinner by faith alone. He addes, If righteouſneſſe be by the law, that is, if a ſinner be iuſtified by his own obedience, in performing the law, then Chriſt died without cauſe. The word δωρεὰν, freely, tranſlated without a cauſe, hath a double ſignification. One is, when it ſignifies as much as without price, or merit. Matth. 10.8. Ye haue receiued freely, giue freely. The ſecond is, when it ſignifies raſhly, without iuſt, or ſufficient cauſe: as Pſalme 69.4. Mine enemies hate mee freely (as the Seuentie tranſlate) that is, wrongfully or without iuſt cauſe. Thus here is Chriſt ſaid to die freely, that is, in vaine or without cauſe: becauſe if wee bee iuſtified by obedience to the law, then Chriſt died in vaine, to make any ſatisfaction to the law for vs.

Theſe words are an anſwer to an obiection. The obiection is this: If thou teach that a ſinner is iuſtified onely by his faith in Chriſt, then thou aboliſheſt the grace of God. The anſwer is negatiue. I doe not by this doctrine abrogate the grace of God. And there is a reaſon alſo of this anſwer: If wee bee iuſtified by our owne fulfilling of the law, then Chriſt died in vaine to fulfill the law for vs.

The vſe. Firſt, let vs marke that Paul ſaith, he doth not abrogate the grace of God: and why? becauſe hee will ſuffer nothing in the cauſe of our iuſtification to bee ioyned with the obedience of the death of Chriſt. And hence we learne, what is the nature of grace. It muſt ſtand wholly, and entirely in it ſelfe. Gods grace cannot ſtand with mans merit. Grace is no grace, vnleſſe it bee freely giuen euery way. Romanes 4. 4. To him that worketh the wages is giuen, not of grace, but of deſert. Rom. 11. 6. If election bee of grace, then not of workes, elſe is grace no grace. Grace and workes of grace in the cauſing of iuſtification, can no more ſtand together, then fire and water. By this we are admoniſhed to be nothing in our ſelues, and to aſcribe all that wee are, or can doe, to the grace of God.

Againe, here we ſee our duty, and that is, to be carefull not to abrogate the grace of God vnto our ſelues. But how is that done? Anſ. We muſt ſtrippe and empty our ſelues of all righteouſneſſe, and goodneſſe of our owne, euen to the death, and withall hunger & thirſt after Chriſt and his righteouſneſſe, Mat. 5. 6. Luke 1. 53.

Thirdly, Paul here ſets downe a notable ground of true religion: that the death of Chriſt is made void, if any thing bee ioyned with it in the worke of our iuſtification, as a meanes to ſatisfie Gods iuſtice, and to merit the fauour of God. Therefore the doctrine of iuſtification by workes, is a manifeſt error. For if wee bee iuſtified by the workes of the law, then the iudgement of the holy Ghoſt is, that Chriſt died without cauſe. Againe, the doctrine of humane ſatisfactions is a deuice of mans braine: For if wee ſatisfie for our ſelues, then did Chriſt by death ſatisfie in vaine. Thirdly, it is a falſe and wicked (though a colourable inuention) to ſay, that Chriſt by his death merited, that wee ſhould merit by our workes. For if wee merit by workes, Chriſt dyed in vaine to merit by his owne death. This is the ſentence of God, who cannot erre. Laſtly, here wee ſee the Church of Rome erreth in the foundation of true religion: becauſe it ioynes the merit of mans workes, and the merit of the death of Chriſt, in the iuſtification of a ſinner. And therefore wee may not ſo much as dreame of any reconciliation to be made with that religion: for light and darknes cannot be reconciled, nor fire & water. Here the Papiſts anſwer, that Paul in this text ſpeakes againſt them, that looked to be iuſtified by the naturall obſeruation of the law, without the death of Chriſt. But it is falſe which they ſay. For Paul here ſpeakes againſt Chriſtian Iewes, who ioyned the law and the Goſpell; and looked to bee iuſtified both by Chriſt, and by the workes of the law: and not by workes of the law, done by ſtrength of nature, but by workes of grace.

CHAP. III.

1. O fooliſh Galatians, who hath bewitched you, that ye ſhould not obey the truth: to whome Ieſus Chriſt before was deſcribed in your ſight, and among you crucified?

That wee may ſee how this chapter depends on the former, wee muſt repeate the principall argument of the Epiſtle: If I was called of God, and my doctrine be true, then ye ſhould not haue reuolted to another Goſpell: but I was called of God, and my doctrine is true: therefore yee ſhould not haue reuolted to another Goſpell.

The firſt part of the minor, that Paul was called of God, was handled in the firſt and ſecond chapters. The ſecond part: that his doctrine is true, is handled in the third, fourth, and fifth: and is propounded in this verſe. Moreouer, the concluſion of the Argument ſet downe, chap. 1. verſ. 6. is here againe repeated, namely, that the Galatians ſhould not haue reuolted to another Goſpel. And withall Paul here notes the cauſes of their reuolt: and they are two. One is folly, O fooliſh Galatians. The other is, the deceit of falſe teachers, who hath bewitched you?

Whereas Paul ſaith, O fooliſh Galatians, that we miſtake not his example, three queſtions may be demaunded. The firſt is, in what reſpect hee giues this hard iudgement againſt them? Anſwer. Three things are ſubiected to iudgement, the doctrines of men, the liues of men, and the perſons of men. Doctrines are to bee iudged by the word, and the liues of men: yet ordinarily, the perſons of men are not to bee iudged. For the ſaying is true, that three things are not ſubiect to iudgement: the Counſels of God, the Scriptures, and the perſons of men. And in this place Paul giues iudgement, not againſt the Galatians themſelues, or againſt their perſons, but againſt their newconceiued doctrine, and againſt their practiſe in reuolting.

The ſecond queſtion is, whether this iudgement be righteous and true iudgement? Anſ. It is: becauſe it is vpon good ground. For firſt of all, Paul giues this cenſure, by vertue of his calling: becauſe his office was to reproue & correct vice, Titus 1. 9. and 2. 15. Secondly, it was in truth. For indeede they ouerturned the paſſion of Chriſt: and therefore he could not call them leſſe then fooles. Thirdly, this iudgement was giuen in loue. For Paul intended and deſired nothing in this ſpeech, but their good and amendment. Vpon like grounds Iſay cals the Iſraelites, people

A of Sodome and Gomorrha, Iſa.1. Chriſt cals the two diſciples fooliſh, and ſlow of heart to beleeue, Luke 24.25. Paul cals the Cretians lyers and ſlow-bellies, Titus 1.12. But Matthew 5.22. may be obiected, where he is ſaid to be in danger of a Councell, that ſaith, Thou foole. Anſ. The place is to be vnderſtood of them that charge men with folly, with a minde to reproch them, and in way of reuenge: which Paul in this place doth not.

The third queſtion is, whether we may vſe like iudgement againſt men? Anſ. Vpon like grounds wee may, if wee haue a warrant, and calling from God ſo to do. For all iudgement is Gods, Rom.14.10. if this iudgement bee in truth: if it bee in charity, for the amendment B of the parties, and for the good of others. Otherwiſe, if theſe grounds faile vs, we may not giue iudgment againſt any man, but muſt follow the iudgement of charity which thinkes no euill, hopes the beſt, and conſtrues all things in the beſt part, 1.*Cor.*13.

To come to the ſecond cauſe, Paul ſaith, Who hath bewitched you? that is, who hath deceiued you, as if ye were bewitched by ſome inchauntments? Here Paul takes it for a confeſſed truth, that there is witchcraft, and witches. And that wee may the better conceiue his meaning, two queſtions are to bee propounded. The firſt is, what is the witchcraft here meant? Anſw. It is a Satanicall operation, C whereby the ſenſes of men are deluded. For the diuell can by certaine meanes, delude and corrupt the phantaſie, or the imagination; and cauſe men to thinke that of themſelues, which is otherwiſe. There is a diſeaſe called Lycanthropia, in which, the braine being diſtempered, men thinke themſelues to bee wolues, and carry themſelues as wolues. And in this diſeaſe the diuell hath a great ſtroke. Againe, the diuell can delude the outward ſenſes, as the hearing, and the ſight. Thus Iannes and Iambres turned their roddes into ſerpents, before Pharaoh, and brought frogs, by deceiuing the eye, and not in truth, Exod. 7. and 8. Thus the witch of Endor made a D counterfeit Samuel to riſe out of the earth, 1. Sam.28.

The ſecond queſtion is, if this witchcraft bee an operation of Satan, how men ſhould bee ſaid to doe it? for Paul ſaith, who, or what man hath bewitched you? Anſw. Men doe it by league and confederacie with the diuell. The inchaunter charmes by ioyning ſocieties, Pſalm.58.5. The diuell ſeekes whom he may deuoure: and therefore, where he findes a fit perſon to worke vpon, he inſinuates and offers himſelfe. And after men be in league with him, hee hath a word & ſacraments for them, as God hath: and hee requireth faith, as God doth. And looke as theeues, ſome are in the way, ſome in the wood: and they in the way (when a bootie comes) giue a watch-word to the reſt, and then all are at hand together: Euen ſo, when a man in league with the diuell vſeth charmes, imprecations, curſes, praiſes, ſuperſtitious inuocations, according to his appointment, and other Satanicall ceremonies, a watch-word is likewiſe giuen vnto him, and hee is ſtraight at hand to the intended feate. Thus, and no otherwiſe, are men ſaid to bewitch, or deluſe the eye.

That which Paul ſaith to the Galatians, if hee were now liuing among vs, he would likewiſe ſay to vs, O fooliſh nation, who hath bewitched you? We are wiſe in matters of the world: but in matters concerning the kingdome of heauen, the moſt of vs are fooles, beſotted, & bewitched with worldly cares, and pleaſures, without ſenſe in matters of religion, like a peece of waxe without all forme: fit to take the forme and print of any religion. And we muſt take heed, leſt this our fooliſhneſſe, and intoxication of our ſenſes, leade vs headlong to perdition. And therefore we muſt learn the way of life in humility, *Pſal.*25.9. Wee muſt obey it, and in obedience wee ſhall learne it, Ioh.7.17. We muſt as heartily loue the word of God, as in minde we conceiue it, leſt by not louing of it wee be giuen vp to ſtrong illuſions, to beleeue lies, 2.Theſſ.2.10. Laſtly, we muſt pray to God to bee taught and guided by his word and Spirit, in things pertaining to euerlaſting life.

To proceede further, the deluſion or bewitching of the Galatians, is ſet forth by two argumẽts. The firſt is the end, in theſe words, That ye ſhould not obey the truth. Before I come to the conſideration of theſe words, a doubt muſt be reſolued. For ſome man may ſay, that this Epiſtle is corrupted: becauſe theſe words are wanting in ſundry tranſlations and editions of the Bible: and Ierome ſaith, that they were not found in the copies of the Bible in his daies. Anſ. In the editions and tranſlations of the Bible, there are ſundry differences, and diuerſities of readings: and theſe differences are not the fault of the Scripture, but of the men which vſed to write out the Bible. for the Bible heretofore was ſpread abroad, not by printing, but by writing. Againe, though in the bookes of the Bible there be ſundry varieties of reading, yet Gods prouidence hath ſo watched ouer the Bible, that the ſenſe thereof remaineth intire, ſound, & incorrupt, ſpecially in the grounds of religion: and not the words principally, but the ſenſe is the Scripture. And that which I ſay, appeareth in this text: for whether theſe words be left in, or put out, the ſenſe of the verſe is one and the ſame.

The words, That ye ſhould not obey the truth, are meant of the obedience of faith, Rom. 1.5. and 16.28. And the obedience of faith is propounded vnto vs without adding, detracting, or changing. And this the Galatians did not: for they added iuſtification by workes, to the doctrine of Paul, touching iuſtification by faith alone: by which addition they depraued the truth, and ſhewed that indeede they beleeued not the truth.

Here let vs obſerue the ſcope of all the malice of the diuell: and that is, to hinder or ouerthrow our faith. The firſt thing the diuell aimed at in our firſt parents, was to ouerthrow their faith, and to cauſe them to doubt of the truth of Gods word. The firſt temptation wherewith our Sauiour Chriſt was aſſaulted, was againſt his faith, as hee was man: If thou be the Sonne of God thou canſt cauſe theſe ſtones in thy hunger to bee made bread: but thou canſt not cauſe theſe ſtones to be made bread: therefore thou art not the Son of God. The diuel deſired to ſift out al the faith of the Apoſtles, & to leaue in them nothing but the chaffe of vnbeliefe, Luk. 22. The diuell blinds the eies of men, that the light of the Goſpel of Ieſus Chriſt may not ſhine vnto thẽ, 4. Cor. 4. 4. This muſt teach vs, that wee muſt not onely holde and know the true religion for the time, but alſo build our ſelues vpon our faith, Iud. v. 20. and bee rooted and ſtabliſhed vpon our faith and religion, Col. 1. 23. and the rather, becauſe it hath beene the manner of this nation, wickedly to change religion with the times. And that we may indeede be rooted vpon our religion, we muſt not boaſt of the greatneſſe and ſtrength of our faith, but rather labour to ſee in our ſelues a ſea of vnbeleefe: heartily to bewaile it, and to ſtriue to beleeue, and to go on from faith, to faith.

The truth here mentioned, is the heauenly doctrine of the Goſpell: ſo called for two cauſes. Firſt, becauſe it is an abſolute truth without errour. It is a principle not to bee called in queſtion, that the Apoſtles and Prophets, in writing and preaching, could not erre. It may be ſaid, they were men, as wee are: and therefore ſubiect to erre, and be deceiued in iudgement. Anſwer. Iudgement is two-folde. One, conceiued by the diſcourſe of naturall reaſon: the other, conceiued by the apprehenſion of things reuealed by God. In the firſt, the Apoſtles and Prophets might erre, and bee deceiued, as Nathan and Peter were. In the ſecond, they could not: becauſe it was framed in them by the inſpiration, and inſtinct of the holy Ghoſt. And therefore they neuer erred, either in preaching or writing. The ſecond cauſe why the Goſpel is called the truth, is, becauſe it is a moſt worthy truth, namely, the truth which is according to godlineſſe, Tit. 1. It may be ſaid, what is the truth? and how ſhall we know it, conſidering there be ſo many diſſentions? Anſ. Firſt, make thy ſelfe fit to know, and then ſhalt thou know the truth. And thou ſhalt be fitted to know the truth, if thou firſt of all giue thy ſelfe to obey it. Reade the golden text, Ioh. 7. 17. Obey, and ye ſhall know.

The ſecond thing, whereby the deluſion of the Galatians is expreſſed, is the ſigne thereof, in theſe words, to whome Ieſus Chriſt was deſcribed, &c. that is, to whome I haue preached the doctrine of ſaluation by Chriſt, in liuely and euident manner, euen as if Chriſt had beene painted before your eyes, and had beene crucified, in, or among you. And this is a manifeſt token that the Galatians were deluded, becauſe they could not acknowledge the truth, when it was ſet forth vnto them (as it were) in orient colours. And where Paul ſaith, that Chriſt was before deſcribed, I referre it to the time before their reuolt.

Here firſt wee are to obſerue the properties of the Miniſtery of the word. The firſt, that it muſt bee plaine, perſpicuous, and euident, as if the doctrine were pictured, and painted out before the eyes of men. Therefore the Church of Rome deales wickedly, in keeping the Scriptures in an vnknowne tongue. For this is to couer that from the people, which is to bee painted before the eyes of their mindes. Againe, that kinde of preaching is to be blamed, in which there is vſed a mixed kinde of variety of languages, before the vnlearned. For this is a ſigne to vnbeleeuers, 1. Cor. 14. 22. And in this kinde of preaching wee doe not paint Chriſt, but wee paint out our owne ſelues. It is a by-word among vs, It was a very plaine Sermon. And I ſay againe, the plainer, the better.

The ſecond property of the Miniſtery of the word, is, that it muſt be powerful and liuely in operation, & as it were crucifying Chriſt within vs, and cauſing vs to feele the vertue of his paſſion. The word preached muſt pearce into the heart, like a two-edged ſword, Heb. 4. 12. true prophecie iudgeth men, diſcouereth the things of the heart, and cauſeth men to ſay, The Lord is within you, 1. Cor. 14. 25. The ſcepter of Chriſt whereby hee ſmiteth the nations, is in his mouth, Iſa. 11. 4. that is, in the Miniſtery of the word, Ier. 15. 19. And it is the ſame Miniſtery, which ſhaketh heauen and earth, Agg. 2. 5. By this it appeareth, that to take a text, and to make diſcourſe vpon ſomething in the ſaid text, ſhewing much inuention of wit, & much reading, and humane learning, is not to preach Chriſt in a liuely manner. It will be ſaid: what then? I anſwer with Paul, who is ſufficient either for the ſpeaking, or doing of theſe things? yet ſomething may be ſhewed. Know therefore, that the effectuall and powerfull preaching of the word, ſtands in three things. The firſt is, true and proper interpretation of the ſcripture, and that by it ſelfe: for Scripture is both the gloſſe, and the text. The ſecond is, ſauory and wholeſome doctrine, gathered out of the Scriptures truly expounded. The third is, the Application of the ſaid doctrine, either to the information of the iudgement, or to the reformation of the life. This is the preaching that is of power. Let all the ſonnes of the Prophets thinke vpon theſe things, and ſtudy to be doers of them.

Furthermore, two queſtions are here reſolued. The firſt is, whether images be neceſſary in the congregations of the people of God? Anſ. There are Chriſtian Images, and Pictures, and they are very neceſſary. And theſe Images, are Sermons of Chriſt, and the right adminiſtration of the Sacraments. For in them Chriſt is deſcribed and painted out vnto vs. As for the painted and carued images of the Papiſts, we vtterly deteſt them, as Idols. They alleadge, that they are lay-mens bookes: but Habacucke ſaith, they are doctours of lies: Hab. 2. 18. And where the liuely preaching of the word is, there is no need of them. And therefore Images were not eſtabliſhed in Churches in theſe VVeſt parts, till after 700. yeares. As long as the church had golden teachers, they had no Images, but when the teachers did degenerate and become woodden teachers, then came both golden and woodden Images. It is further ſaid, why may not we paint Chriſt in our Churches with colours, as with words in ſermons? Anſ. The one the Lord alloweth, namely, the deſcription of Chriſt in ſpeech. But the caruing or painting of images in churches, and that for religious vſe, he condemneth, Exod. 20. 6.

The ſecond queſtion is, Whether there be now in the Church of God, any ſacrifice or oblation of Chriſt? Anſ. There is after a ſort. For there is a liuely repreſentation of the paſſion of Chriſt, in the preaching of the word, and in the adminiſtration of the Lords Supper, as if Chriſt were yet in crucifying, and as though his blood were now diſtilling from his hands and ſides. As for the ſacrifice of the Maſſe, it is an abomination, and a meere mockerie. For there the prieſt, when he ſaith, Accept theſe gifts, &c. is become a mediatour betweene Chriſt and God: and the body and blood of Chriſt is offered in an vnbloodie maner; that is, blood is offered without blood: and the prieſt, when he hath offered Chriſt, eates vp all that he hath offered. Yet for this damnable oblation many ſtand: becauſe they are bewitched and inchanted with pretended ſhewes of Fathers, Councels, Antiquitie, Succeſſion, &c.

Laſtly, here we learne, what is the duty of al beleeuers: namely, to behold Chriſt crucified, Cant. 3. 11. O daughter of Sion, behold your king. But where muſt we behold him? Not in Roodes & Crucifixes, after the Popiſh manner: but we muſt looke on him, as he propounds himſelfe vnto vs in the word and Sacraments. For this is he the true obiect of our faith. And how muſt we behold him? by the eye of faith, which makes vs both ſee him, and feele him, (as it were) crucified in vs. Here note, that implicite faith, (which is to beleeue as the Church beleeues) is a blind faith: for by it we cannot contemplate and behold Chriſt. And the common fault is here to be noted, whereby men neglect and paſſe by this contemplation of Chriſt. There is among vs the euill eye, that deuoureth all it ſeeth: there is the adulterous eye: but where is the eye of faith to behold Chriſt? where is the force of this eye to be ſeene, which maketh the thing which it beholdeth to be ours, and vs like vnto it? We loue to trick & paint our bodies, & ſome to ſet fine complexions on their faces, (and therefore complexions at this day are made a kinde of merchandize) but away with ſuch vanities. If ye loue to be painted, I will tell you what ye ſhall doe. The office of the Miniſters is to deſcribe, and paint out Chriſt vnto vs: let them paint Chriſt crucified in the heart, and ſet vp his image there, and then ſhalt thou haue a fauourable complexion in the eye both of God and man.

That this contemplation of Chriſt by faith, may take more place, and be the better practiſed, conſider the vſe of it. Firſt, by beholding Chriſt crucified, we ſee our miſerie and wickedneſſe. For our ſinnes are the ſwords and ſpeares which haue crucified him, Zach. 12. 10. Secondly, this ſight brings vs true & liuely comfort: for beholding Chriſt crucified, we ſee Paradiſe as it were in the midſt of hell: we ſee the hand-writing againſt vs, cancelled, Coloſſ. 2. 14. we ſee the remiſſion of our ſinnes, written with the heart blood of Chriſt, and ſealed with the ſame. Thirdly, this ſight of Chriſt makes an vniuerſall change of vs. The cameleon takes to it the colours of the things which it ſeeth, & are neere vnto it: and the beleeuing heart takes to it the diſpoſition and minde that was in Chriſt crucified, by viewing and beholding of Chriſt. This ſight makes vs mourne and bleed in our hearts for our offences, when we conſider, that Chriſt was crucified for vs: and it makes vs loue Chriſt, when we conſider the loue of God in Chriſt crucified.

Laſtly, this thing muſt be a terrour to all the vngodly. For they haue no care to behold Chriſt, but by their lewd liues they crucifie him: and for this cauſe in the day of iudgement, they ſhall ſee with heauie hearts, Chriſt to be their Iudge whome they haue pierced, Reuel. 1. 7. Better therefore it is, now in the day of grace to behold him with the eye of faith to our comfort, then now to deſpiſe him, and then, to behold him to our euerlaſting ſhame with the eye of confuſion.

2. This onely would I learne of you, Receiued ye the Spirit by the workes of the Law, or by the hearing of faith?

3. Are ye ſo fooliſh, that after ye haue begunne in the Spirit, ye would now be made perfect by the fleſh.

The ſenſe of theſe words. VVhen Paul ſaith, this would I learne of you, he meets with the conceit of the Galatians, who thought themſelues wiſe: and the effect of his ſpeech is this: I haue called you fooles: but it may be, that you thinke your ſelues wiſe, and me fooliſh: wel, let it be ſo: then with all your wiſdome teach me, and let me learne but one thing: and that is, by what meanes ye receiued the Spirit. Touching the phraſe, Receiued ye the Spirit, three things muſt be obſerued. The firſt, that the Spirit ſometimes ſignifies the eſſentiall ſpirit of the Father and the Sonne, as 1. Cor. 12. 4. There is a diuerſitie of gifts, but one ſpirit. Sometimes againe, it ſignifies the effects, operations, or gifts of the ſpirit, as namely when fleſh and ſpirit are oppoſed, as in this text. And further, when it ſignifies gifts, yet then the preſence of the ſpirit is not excluded, but included. The ſecond is, that here the Spirit ſignifies the ſpirit of adoption. Eph. 1. 13. Rom. 8. 16. The third is, that to receiue the ſpirit, is not barely to receiue the gifts of the ſpirit, (as we are ſaid to haue the ſunne in the houſe, when we receiue the beames, the body of the ſunne being in heauen:) but in this receiuing, there are two things. One is, that the ſpirit is preſent in vs; the other, that the ſame ſpirit teſtifieth his preſence, by his ſpeciall operation, and gifts of grace. Paul ſaith, Eph. 4. 30. Grieue not the ſpirit. Which is not meant of gifts, but of the very perſon of the ſpirit. And it muſt be remembred, that the effects and gifts of the ſpirit preſuppoſe the preſence of the ſpirit. By workes of the law we are to vnderſtand, the doctrine of iuſtification by the workes of the law. By the hearing of faith, is meant the doctrine of the Goſpel: hearing being put for the thing heard, namely, preaching: and faith, for the doctrine of iuſtification by faith in Chriſt crucified. For faith ſignifies not onely the gift whereby we beleeue, but alſo that which is beleeued.

In the third verſe, Spirit ſignifies the operation of the ſpirit, whereby the inward man is renewed, and made like to God, or againe, the exerciſes of the inward man: and fleſh ſignifies outward things or actions, that properly pertaine to the outward man, as circumciſion, and ſuch like. Thus 2. Cor. 5. 17. fleſh, and the new creature are oppoſed. And Paul ſaith, Rom. 2. 29. He is a Iew that is a Iew within in the ſpirit, hauing the circumciſion of the heart. To be gunne in the ſpirit, is to begin in godlineſſe and religion, inwardly in the exerciſes of the renewed heart.

The Reſolution. In theſe words, is contained the firſt argument, whereby Paul prooues the truth of his doctrine. It is framed thus: If ye receiued the ſpirit by my doctrine, my doctrine is true, and ye fooliſh that adde vnto it iuſtification by the workes of the law: but ye receiued the ſpirit by my doctrine: therefore it is true: and ye deale fooliſhly that haue added to it iuſtification by workes.

The maior or firſt propoſition, is not expreſſed, but the proofe thereof in the third verſe thus: it is a point of extreame folly when ye haue begun in the ſpirit to end in the fleſh: therefore it is folly in you hauing receiued the ſpirit by my doctrine, to adde any thing vnto it of your owne.

The vſe. When Paul ſaith, Let me learne one thing of you, he notes the fault of the Galatians, and of ſundrie others, who when they haue attained to a certaine meaſure of knowledge in Gods word, are preſently puffed vp with pride, and often thinke themſelues wiſer then their teachers. This was the fault of the Corinthians, 1. Cor. 8. 10. and of ſundrie in our daies, who ſeparate wholly from all our congregations, preſuming to know that which they neuer learned of their teachers. That this ouerweening pride may not take place, we muſt ioyne the knowledge of our ſelues, with the knowledge of Gods word, and mixe our knowledge with loue. For loue edifies, and bare knowledge ſwells the heart.

Againe, here when it is ſaid, Receiued ye the ſpirit? that is, ye did not receiue the ſpirit by the workes of the law, but by the hearing of faith. Here, I ſay, we ſee the difference between the law, and the Goſpel. The law doth not miniſter the ſpirit vnto vs: for it onely ſhewes our diſeaſe, and giues vs no remedie. The Goſpel miniſtreth the ſpirit. For it ſhewes what we are to doe: and withall the ſpirit is giuen, to make vs do that which we are inioyned in the Goſpel.

Here alſo we learne, that the preaching of the Goſpel, is neceſſarie for all men, becauſe it is the inſtrument of God to conferre the ſpirit. While Peter was yet ſpeaking, the ſpirit of God fell vpon the Gentiles, Act. 10. 44. Paul ſaith, his miniſterie is the miniſterie of the ſpirit, 2. Cor. 3. 5. ſauing the miniſters and others, 1. Tim. 4. 16. And the moſt learned haue need of this ordinance of God. For ſuppoſe they haue knowledge ſufficient, yet haue they neede of the ſpirit of God to guide, and gouerne them. Further, let it be obſerued, what is the ſcope of all our hearing and teaching, namely, that we may receiue the ſpirit of God: without which ſpirit, we can doe nothing.

Moreouer, Paul here ſets downe an infallible argument, whereby we may be aſſured that the Scripture is the word of God. For the Scriptures in their right vſe (which is in reading, hearing, meditation) haue the diuine and ſupernaturall operation of the ſpirit ioyned with them, to comfort in all diſtreſſes, and in the very pang of death, and to conuert the heart of man, making him in reſpect of righteouſneſſe, and holineſſe, like vnto God. This priuiledge haue the Scriptures, Iſa. 59. 21. and no word els.

Laſtly, let vs here obſerue the certen marke of true religion: and that is, that the preaching thereof conferres the ſpirit of adoption. This doth not the pretended Catholike Religion of the Papiſts: it doth not conferre vnto men the ſpirit to aſſure them that they are the children of God, becauſe it teacheth that we are to be in ſuſpence of our ſaluation. Againe, by teaching humane ſatisfactions, and merits, it miniſtreth the ſpirit of pride and preſumption, as alſo the ſpirit of crueltie, and not of meekeneſſe: for they of that religion, commonly delight in blood: and there haue bin no warres, or ſeditions, or rebellions in Europe, for many ages, but they of the Romiſh religion haue bin at one end of them.

When

VVhen Paul ſaith, verſ.3. Beganne ye in the ſpirit, &c. he teacheth a diuine inſtruction, that true godlineſſe and Religion ſtands in the ſpirit, that is, the grace of the heart, or in the exerciſes of the inner man, whether we reſpect the beginning, the middle, or the accompliſhment thereof. The kings daughter is all glorious within, Pſal.45.13. True worſhippers worſhip God in the ſpirit, Ioh.4.23. Rom. 1.12. He is a Iew, that is a Iew not without, but within the ſpirit in the circumciſion of the heart, Rom. 2.29. Gods ſeruice and kingdome ſtands in iuſtice, peace of conſcience, and ioy in the holy Ghoſt, Rom. 14.17. He that is in Chriſt muſt not know him in any carnall reſpects, but be a new creature, 2.Cor.5.17. Gal.6.17. Baptiſme is not the waſhing of the ſpots of the fleſh, but the promiſe that a good conſcience makes to God. By this doctrine we ſee the fault of the world, which for the moſt part placeth religion in ceremoniall performance of ſome outward duties. The Iew vſed to come to God with ſacrifices, and to draw neere to him with his lippe, his heart beeing farre from God. The Papiſt hath turned the Apoſtolike, and Catholike religion, into a a maſſe of ceremonies, borrowed partly from the Iewes, and partly from the Gentiles. And the multitude among vs, place their religion, in comming to the Church, in outward hearing, in receiuing the Sacrament, in ſome kind of formall praying. Theſe things may not be condemned, but the power and life of religion lies not in theſe things. Wherefore we muſt not ſtand vpon outward and painted ſhewes: but looke what thou art betweene God, and thy ſelfe, that onely are thou in religion. Thou praieſt in the Church: but thou maiſt deceiue the world in this. Tell me, doſt thou pray at home? doſt thou pray in thine owne hearr vnto God, by the ſpirit of praier? then thou praieſt indeede. If thou canſt approoue thy heart vnto God for any act of religion, then it is done indeed, els not. Remember this.

Furthermore, Paul here teacheth that our after-proceedings in religion, muſt be anſwerable to our firſt beginnings in the ſpirit. And hence we may be aduertiſed of many things. Firſt here we muſt take notice of the folly of Popiſh religion. For it beginnes in Gods mercy, and the merit of Chriſt: and it ends in our merits and ſatiſfactions. Secondly, we muſt take notice of the common ſin of our times. For in the practiſe of our religion we are deceiued. We are not now that which we haue beene twentie or thirtie yeares agoe. For now we ſee the world abounds with Atheiſts, Epicures, libertines, worldlings, newters, that are of no religion: and ſundry that haue heretofore ſhewed ſome forwardneſſe, begin to faulter, and ſtagger, and to looke an other way. This is not to beginne and end in the ſpirit: but to end in the fleſh. We are betime to amend this fault, leſt if our former zeale be turned to preſent luke-warmneſſe, God in his anger ſpue vs out.

Yong men muſt here be aduertiſed as they grow in yeares and ſtature, ſo to grow vp in good things, that both the firſt beginning, and the after proceedings may be in the ſpirit. Thus did Chriſt increaſe in grace, as he increaſed in ſtature.

Laſtly, aged perſons that haue begun in the ſpirit, muſt looke that they grow vp in the graces of the ſpirit more then others, that they may end in the ſpirit. It is ſaid of the angell of Thyatira, that his loue, ſeruice, and works, were moe at the laſt, then at the firſt, Reu. 2.19. The ſame ſhould be ſaid of all aged perſons. They which are planted in the houſe of God, bring forth fruit in their old age. Pſal.91.16. It is the commendation of the old man, that by reaſon of his manifold experience, he knowes the Father more then others. 1.Ioh.2.14. It is the praiſe of Anna, that ſhe continually ſerued God in faſting and prayer beeing 80. yeares old. When the outward man decaies, the inward man ſhould be renewed. I ſpeake al this the rather, becauſe aged perſons are much wanting in this duty. For none commonly are ſo ignorant in the things of God as they: they begin in the ſpirit, but the affections of their hearts vſually end in the loue of this preſent word. But they muſt be warned, that as they goe before others in age, ſo muſt they alſo exceede in the graces of the ſpirit. VVe vſe to ſay of children, God make them good old men: and it is well ſaid ſaid. An old man is to be regarded: but ſpecially, a good olde man, who is more to be reſpected then twentie of younger yeares. Now aged perſons when they grow in age, and not in the ſpirit, they loſe their honour; for age is a crowne of glorie when it is found in the way of righteouſneſſe, Prou. 16.31. Let them therefore pray with David, Forſake me not, O Lord, in mine old age. Pſal.71.9.

4. Haue ye ſuffered ſo many things in vaine? if ſo be it be euen in vaine.

The interrogation, haue ye is as much as, ye haue. Becauſe the queſtion in this place counteruailes a ſpeech affirmatiue. And the words carrie this ſenſe: Ye haue profeſſed the Goſpel, and ye haue ſuffered many afflictions for the ſame: but now haue ye reuolted from the Goſpel, and therefore all your former ſufferings are void, or in vaine.

The words [if they be in vaine] are a limitation or qualification of that which was ſaid before: and they carry this ſenſe: Whereas I haue ſaid that your ſufferings are in vaine, I ſpeake it not ſimply, but with ſome hope of your repentance: which if it be, then that which would be in vaine, ſhall not be in vaine.

In this verſe, Paul ſets downe a ſecond reaſon, to prooue the propoſition of his firſt argument, on this manner: If ye receiued the ſpirit by my doctrine, then is my doctrine true, and ye fooles in reuolting from it. For by this meanes the things which you ſuffered well, ye now ſuffer in vaine.

The vſe. VVhen Paul ſaith, Haue ye ſuffered, &c. he ſignifies vnto vs the eſtate and condition of all beleeuers in this life, that they muſt be bearers and ſufferers. The reaſon. To this are we called, 1. Pet. 2.21. for we are called to reſigne all reuenge to God, and therfore of our ſelues to be bearers and ſufferers. Matth. 5.39. Reſiſt not euill. And we are called to imitate the paſſion of Chriſt, who ſuffered beeing innocent, & being reuiled, reuiled not againe. Moreouer, it is for our good that we ſhould beare and ſuffer. 1. Pet. 1.6. and Pſal. 119.71. It may be demaunded, What if my cauſe be good, muſt I then ſuffer? Anſ. Yea. The better thy cauſe is, the better are thy ſufferings: they are bleſſed that ſuffer for righteouſneſſe. Paul commends himſelfe by the multitude of his ſufferings, 2. Cor. 11.13. Againe, it may be demanded, how long we muſt ſuffer? Anſ. Euen to the ſhedding of our blood, if it be for the reſiſting of ſinne, Heb. 12.4. Laſtly, it may be ſaid, how ſhall we be able to doe this? Anſw. God is faithfull, and will not lay on vs more then we ſhall be able to beare. 1. Cor. 10.13. By this we are admoniſhed, not to make a reckoning in this world, of pleaſure, and delight, as though the Goſpel were a Goſpel of eaſe, and as we vſe to ſay, a goſpell made of veluet; but euery one of vs muſt take vp his owne croſſe. Luk. 9.23. If thou wilt be my diſciple, denie thy ſelfe, take vp thy croſſe: that is, the particular affliction, and miſerie, which God laies on thee. Againe, if in this world we muſt be ſufferers by condition, then in diſſentions, and differences, we may neither giue nor take the challenge, but muſt be content to beare and put vp wrongs and abuſes. Laſtly, in theſe daies of our peace, we muſt looke for daies of triall, and affliction. For as yet we haue ſuffered litle for the name of Chriſt. The harueſt of the Lord hath beene among vs, more then fortie yeares: therfore (no doubt) the time of threſhing, fanning, and grinding comes on, that as the Martyr ſaid, we may be good bread to the Lord. And that we may be able to ſuffer for the name of God, we muſt pray for this gift at Gods hand. For power to ſuffer is the gift of God, Phil. 1.29. and we muſt obſerue the commaundement of God, not to feare the terrours of men. Reu. 2.10. 1. Pet. 3.14. And for this cauſe, we muſt (as Peter ſaith) ſanctifie God in our hearts: beeing aſſured by our faith, of the preſence, protection, and prouidence of God.

When Paul ſaith, Haue ye ſuffered ſo many things? he ſhewes, that we muſt endure manifold miſeries in this life. Iacob ſaid to Pharao, his daies were few and euill. Many are the afflictions of the righteous. Pſal. 34.20. Chriſt ſaith, Take vp thy croſſe euery day, Luk. 9.23. and therby he ſignifies, that euery new day that comes ouer our heads, we muſt looke for a new croſſe. And for this cauſe, it is not enough to be patient for a fit, but we muſt ſhew all patience, and long ſuffering, and that with ioyfulneſſe, Col. 1.11.

When Paul ſaith, Haue ye ſuffered ſo many things in vaine? he ſignifies, that our ſufferings are of great vſe, vnleſſe our ſinnes be the hinderance. It may then be demaunded, what is the vſe of our ſufferings? The Papiſts anſwer, that in our baptiſme or firſt conuerſiō, Chriſts ſufferings doe all, and aboliſh the whole fault and puniſhment: but if we ſinne after our conuerſion, then they ſay, Chriſts ſufferings aboliſh the fault and the eternall puniſhment, and our owne ſufferings aboliſh the temporall puniſhment. But this doctrine leſſens and obſcures the mercie of God: and it muſt be obſerued, that Paul holds all their ſufferings to be in vaine, that ſeeke remiſſion of ſinnes, or iuſtification, in any thing out of Chriſt.

Now we for our parts, make fiue other vſes of our ſufferings. Firſt, they ſerue for triall of men, that it may appeare what is hidden in their hearts, Deut. 8.2. Secondly, they ſerue for the correction of things amiſſe in vs, 1. Cor. 11.23. Thirdly, they ſerue as documents and warnings to others, ſpecially in publike perſons: thus Dauid ſuffers many things after repentance, for his murther and adultery. Fourthly, they are markes of adoption, if we be content to obey God in them, Heb. 12.7. Laſtly, they are the troden and beaten way to the kingdome of heauen, Act. 14.23.

When Paul ſaith, If they be in vaine, we are to obſerue his moderation. He reprooues and terrifies the Galatians, yet ſo as he is carefull to preſerue the hope of mercie in them, and the hope of their amendment in himſelfe. The like hath beene the practiſe of the Prophets. Ionas preached, yet fortie daies and Niniue ſhall be deſtroyed: but withall he addes, It may be the Lord will repent, and turne from his fierce wrath. Ion. 3.9. Peter ſaith to Simon Magus, Thou art in the gall of bitterneſſe: but withall he addes, Pray God that the thought of thy heart may be forgiuen thee, Act. 8.22. See the like, Ioel. 2.14. and Amos 5.15. And thus are Miniſters of the Goſpell to delay and qualifie their reprooſes and cenſures.

5. He therefore that miniſtreth to you the ſpirit, and worketh miracles among you, doth he it by the workes of the Law, or by the hearing of faith?

Theſe words are a repetition of the ſecond verſe, whence the expoſition muſt be fetched. The words [and worketh miracles among you] are added: and they carrie this meaning, That God gaue to the Galatians, not onely the ſpirit of adoption, but alſo other extraordinarie gifts of the ſpirit, as to ſpeake with ſtrange tongues, to cure diſeaſes, and ſuch like.

Repetitions in Scripture are not idle, but of great vſe, and ſignifie vnto vs the neceſſitie of the thing repeated, and the infallible certentie of it. The ſubſtance therefore of this verſe muſt carefully be remembred, and that is this. Ye receiued the ſpirit by my doctrine: therefore it is true, and of God. The argument is of great vſe. For by it we come to an infallible aſſurance of the certentie of Scriptures, and of true religion deriued thence.

The Galatians are now reuolted from Pauls doctrine, and they erre in this foundation: and yet Paul ſaith in the time preſent, He that miniſtreth the ſpirit vnto you. Hence it appeares, that fals of infirmitie in the child of God, doe not vtterly extinguiſh the ſpirit, but onely grieue, or make ſadde the ſpirit.

Againe, Paul here teacheth, that God is the only & proper author of miracles. For he that miniſtreth the ſpirit, worketh miracles, namely God. A miracle is, a worke aboue the ſtrength of nature: therefore it can be effected of none but the Author of nature. It may be obiected, the Apoſtles, Prophets, and others, had a gift to worke miracles. Ioſuah commaunded the Sunne to ſtand, Ioſ. 10.12. and Elias commanded fire to come downe from heauen, 2. King. 1. Anſw. God neuer gaue to any man power to worke and effect a miracle, either mediately or immediately. The gift was the faith of miracles. The faith was grounded vpon reuelation: and the reuelation was, that God himſelfe would worke ſuch or ſuch a miracle, when they prayed, commaunded, or impoſed hands. Men therefore properly, are but the mouth of God, and meſſengers to ſignifie what he will doe. Againe, it may be obiected, that the diuell can worke miracles. Anſw. He can worke a wonder, or things extraordinary, in reſpect of the ordinarie courſe of nature. Thus he cauſed fire to fall from heauen: and he cauſed vlcers to ariſe in the body of Iob, and that true vlcers. And this he did by the force of nature, better knowne to him, then all the world. But as for a true miracle, that exceedes the ſtrength of nature, he cannot poſſibly doe it: no not Chriſt himſelfe, as man, though he be exalted aboue all men and Angels. By this we ſee that they are deceiued, who thinke that the diuell can make raine, thunder, and lightening. Indeede when the matter of raine and thunder is prepared by God, he can haſten it, and make it more terrible: but raine, and thunder he cannot make, for that is indeed as much as any miracle. Againe, it is a falſehood to thinke, that Alchymiſts are able to turne baſer mettals into gold. For it is a worke of creation to turne a creature of one kind into a creature of another kind. It is alſo as fooliſh to imagine that witches, by the power of the diuell, are able to turne themſelues into cattes and other creatures. None can doe this, but God that made the creature.

Here againe we ſee the vſe of miracles, that is, to confirme doctrine in the Apoſtolike Churches. That their vſe is further to confirme doctrine euen at this day, it cannot be prooued.

Laſtly, here in the Galatians we ſee what an eaſie thing it is to fall from God, from our faith, & allegiance to him. They were taught by Paul: they had receiued the ſpirit of adoption: they were enabled to worke miracles: and yet for all this, they fall away to an other Goſpel. They muſt be a looking glaſſe to vs. In peace we are now conſtant: but if triall ſhall come, our frailty ſhal appeare. That our frailtie and weakeneſſe may not be hurtfull to vs, we muſt remember two rules. One is, not to haue a conceit of any thing in vs: but to holde our faith and religion in feare, as in the preſence of God, Rom. 11.20. The ſecond, to take heed that there be not in vs an euill, corrupt, and diſſembling heart. For if our heart be naught, our faith cannot be good. Heb. 4.12.

6. As Abraham beleeued God, and it was imputed to him for righteouſneſſe.

7. Know ye therefore, that they which are of faith, are the children of Abraham.

The words, Euen as Abraham, &c. haue reference to that which went before, on this manner. Ye Galatians receiued the ſpirit by my doctrine: and my doctrine was the preaching of iuſtification by faith without workes: which doctrine is like and ſutable to the example of Abraham, who beleeued God, and it was imputed for iuſtice.

Here Paul ſets downe the ſecond argument whereby he prooues the truth of his doctrine. And it is framed thus: As Abraham was iuſtified, ſo are the children of Abraham. Abraham was iuſtified by iuſtice imputed, and apprehended by faith, verſ. 6. Therefore the children of Abraham are thus iuſtified. This concluſion is the principall queſtion: it is not here expreſſed, but in the roome thereof a declaration is made, who are the true children of God, namely, they that are of Abraham, in reſpect of faith.

That which is ſaid here of Abraham, is a maine ground concerning the iuſtification of a ſinner, in the bookes of the old and new Teſtament: therefore I will more carefully ſearch the true interpretation of it.

Some expound the words thus: Abraham beleeued God, and the world reputed him for a good and vertuous man. But if this be the right ſenſe, then Paul is deceiued, who brings this text to prooue the iuſtification of Abraham, not onely before men, but alſo before God. Now vertue and goodneſſe, which is in eſtimation among men, is not ſufficient, to acquit and iuſtifie vs before God.

The ſecond expoſition is of the Papiſts, who by faith here vnderſtand, a general faith, wherby the articles of faith are beleeued. And by imputation, they vnderſtand reputation, whereby a thing is eſteemed as it is indeede. And they teach that faith is reputed for righteouſneſſe, becauſe (ſay they) faith formed with charitie, is indeede the iuſtice whereby a ſinner is iuſtified before God. But this Expoſition hath his defects, and errours. For firſt of all, Charitie is not the forme, or life of faith, but the fruit and effect of it, 1. Tim. 1.5. The end of teaching is loue out of a pure heart, good conſcience and faith vnfained. It is obiected, that as the bodie is dead without the ſoule, ſo is faith without workes, Iam. 2.26. and therefore that workes are the life of faith. Anſw. S. Iames by faith, vnderſtands a pretended faith, or the profeſſion of faith, as appeares by the words, v. 14. though a man ſay he hath faith: and v. 18. ſhew me thy faith. Now of this profeſſion of faith, workes are the life.

Secondly, this expoſition makes faith, or the act of beleeuing, to be our whole & intire iuſtice before God: whereas indeede if it be iuſtice, it is but one part thereof. And in the act of beleeuing, loue cannot be included.

Thirdly, faith ioyned with charitie, is not the iuſtice whereby a ſinner is iuſtified. For our faith and loue are both imperfect: and faith is imputed for righteouſneſſe without workes, Rom. 4. 6. and therefore without charitie. For this is charitie to keepe the commandements of God. Ioh. 15.10. Paul ſaith, that the righteouſneſſe whereby we are iuſtified, is by or through faith, Phil. 3. 9. & therfore our iuſtice, & our faith, are two diſtinct things.

The third expoſition is alſo from the Papiſts, that faith is reputed for righteouſneſſe: becauſe it is reputed to be a ſufficient meanes to prepare men to their iuſtification: but this cannot be the ſenſe of this place. For this was ſpoken of Abraham after he was iuſtified, and therefore needed no preparation to iuſtification.

Let vs now come to the true ſenſe of the words. In them I conſider two things, Abrahams faith, in theſe words, Abraham beleeued God: and the fruite of his faith, in theſe words, and it was imputed to him for righteouſneſſe. Touching his faith, I conſider three things. The firſt is, the occaſion, which was on this manner. After the conqueſt of the heathen kings, Abraham was ſtill in ſome feare: in this regard the Lord comforts him, Gen. 15. 1. I am thy buckler, and thy exceeding great reward. But to this Abraham replies, I want iſſue: and the Lord anſwers, I will make thy ſeede, as the ſtarres of heauen, Gen. 15. 5. Now then looke as God renewes and inlarges his promiſe to Abraham, ſo Abraham renewes his faith: and hereupon Moſes, and Paul, ſay, Abraham beleeued God. God doth not now inlarge his promiſes to vs as to Abraham: neuertheleſſe, the promiſes recorded in the Bible, are renewed to vs partly by preaching, and partly by the vſe of the ſacraments: and we accordingly are to renew our faith, ſpecially in the time of feare, and danger.

The ſecond thing is the obiect, or matter of his faith, and that is, the multiplication of his poſteritie. It may be ſaid, how could Abraham be iuſtified by ſuch a faith? Anſ. The promiſe of the multiplication of his ſeede, was a dependant of a more principall promiſe, I am thy God all-ſufficient. Gen. 17. 1. and, I am thy exceeding great reward. Gen. 15. 1. In this carnall ſeede, Abraham ſpecially reſpected (by the eye of faith,) the bleſſed ſeede of the woman. He therefore beleeued the promiſe of a ſeede, as it was a pledge vnto him of a thing more principall; namely, the fauour of God, and as it was a meanes to effect the incarnation of the Sonne of God. In his example we are taught how we are to reſpect, & vſe earthly things: we are to reſpect them as pledges of Gods fauour: and to vſe them as meanes to further vs to Chriſt, and to the attainment of our ſaluation.

The third point is, the properties of Abrahams faith, which was a faith againſt hope. For he beleeued a promiſe of a ſeede, when his bodie was halfe dead, and Sarai was barren. In like ſort we keeping true religion, and good conſcience, muſt in all our temptations, croſſes, miſeries, infirmities, againſt reaſon, ſenſe, and feeling, beleeue the promiſe of remiſſion of ſinnes, and life euerlaſting.

In this effect and fruite of Abrahams faith, three things muſt be conſidered. The firſt is, what is meant by Imputation. To impute properly, is a ſpeach borrowed from merchants: and it ſignifies to recken, or to keepe a reckening of expenſes, and receipts. Thus Paul ſaith, Philem. 18. If he haue done thee any wrong, impute it to me: that is, ſet it on my reckening. And this word is here applied to the Iudgement of God, becauſe he is our ſoueraigne Lord, and we are his debters: and he doth adiudge vnto men for their ſins, either pardon, or puniſhment.

Imputation in God, is two-fold: one, Legall: the other, Euangelicall. Legall is, when God willeth and adiudgeth the reward to him that fulfilleth the law. Thus Paul ſaith, Rom. 4. 5. that the wages is imputed to him that worketh, and that of debt. Euangelicall imputation is, when God accepts the ſatisfaction of Chriſt our ſuretie, as a paiment for our ſinnes. In this ſenſe is the word, Impute, taken tenne times in the 4. chapter to the Romanes, and in the ſame is it vſed in this place.

The ſecond point is, what is imputed? And it was imputed, that is, faith. Faith here muſt be conſidered two waies; firſt, as a qualitie in it ſelfe, and thus it is imperfect, and conſequently cannot be imputed to vs for our iuſtification. Againe, faith muſt be conſidered as an inſtrument, or hand holding and receiuing Chriſt: and in this regard beleeuing is put for the thing beleeued. And thus muſt this text be vnderſtood, It was imputed to him, that is, the thing which his faith beleeued was imputed to him by God: for the act of beleeuing is not our iuſtice, as I haue ſhewed.

The third point is, what is meant by righteouſneſſe? Anſ. That which is called in Scripture the Iuſtice of God, which is ſufficient to acquit a ſinner at the barre of Gods iudgement. Thus then the ſenſe is manifeſt: Abraham beleeued the promiſe of God, ſpecially touching the bleſſed ſeede, and that which he beleeued, namely, the obedience of the Mediatour (the bleſſed ſeede,) was accepted of God as his obedience for his iuſtification.

It is obiected, that the obedience of Chriſt is to be imputed to none, but to Chriſt, who was the doer of it. Anſ. It is to be imputed, that is, aſcribed to him as to the author thereof: and withall, becauſe he did performe it in our roome and ſtead, and that for vs, it is to be imputed to vs.

Secondly, it is obiected, that workes are alſo imputed as well as faith. Pſalme 106. 31. Phinees executed iudgement, and it was imputed to him for righteouſneſſe. Anſwer. There is iuſtice of the perſon, and iuſtice of the act. Iuſtice of the perſon, is that which makes the perſon of man iuſt: Iuſtice of the act, is that which makes the act of the perſon iuſt, and not the perſon it ſelfe. Now the Pſalme ſpeakes only of the iuſtice of Phinees action: and the meaning of the words is this, that God reputed his action as a iuſt action, whereas men might haply condemne it. This place therefore prooues not that workes are imputed for the iuſtification of any man.

Thirdly, it is obiected, that imputed iuſtice was neuer knowne in the Church till 1500. yeares after Chriſt. Anſ. It is falſe. Bernard ſaith expreſly, Death is put to flight by the death of Chriſt, and the iuſtice of Chriſt is imputed to vs: and againe, The ſatisfaction of Chriſt is imputed to vs. Againe, ſundry of the Fathers, as Auguſtine, Hierome, Chryſoſtome, Theodoret, Anſelme, entreating vpon the text of Paul, 2. Cor. 5. 21. auouch, that the iuſtice whereby we are iuſtified, is not in vs, but in Chriſt. And it is a receiued doctrine with them, that a ſinner is iuſtified by faith alone: now faith alone preſuppoſeth an imputation of iuſtice.

Serm. ad mil. Temp. c. 11. Epiſt. 190.

The vſe. Hence it followes, that there is no merit of mans works, either in the beginning, or in the accompliſhment of our iuſtification. For faith is imputed for iuſtice to him that beleeueth and worketh not, Rom. 4. 5.

Againe, by this wee ſee there is but one iuſtification; and that the ſecond by workes, whereby a man of a good man, is made better, is a meere fiction. For iuſt Abraham is not iuſtified by his good workes wherewith hee abounded, but after his firſt iuſtification, faith ſtill is imputed to him for righteouſneſſe.

Thirdly, here we ſee what is that very thing whereby we are to appeare iuſt before God, and to be ſaued, and that is, the obedience of Chriſt, imputed to vs of God, and apprehended by our faith.

Laſtly, here we ſee our duty. God ſits as a Iudge ouer vs, he takes a reckoning of vs for all our doings: the law is an hand-writing againſt vs: to ſome he imputes their ſinnes, to ſome hee remits them. Wee therefore muſt come into the preſence of God, plead guiltie, and acknowledge our ſelues to bee as bankrupts, and intreat him to graunt pardon to vs, & to accept the ſatisfaction of Chriſt for vs: then will God not impute our ſinnes, but the obedience of Chriſt for our iuſtification: and accept him as our ſurety in life and death.

The declaration of the concluſion followes in the ninth verſe, and it ſhewes who are the true children of Abraham. The meaning of the words muſt firſt be conſidered. To bee of faith, is to bee of Abrahams faith, Rom. 4. 16. And to bee of Abrahams faith, is to beleeue and apply the promiſe of righteouſnes, and life euerlaſting by Chriſt, as Abraham did: and to reſt in it for our iuſtification and ſaluation, verſ. 10. They are ſaid to be of works, who doe the workes of the law, and looke to bee iuſtified thereby: therefore they are of faith, who beleeue in Chriſt, and looke to bee ſaued and iuſtified thereby.

And they which thus beleeue with Abraham, are ſaid to bee his children. It may be demaunded, how? Anſwer. Children of Abraham, are of two ſorts: ſome by nature, ſome by grace. By nature are they which are of Abraham by the fleſh, or naturall generation, as Iſmael was. By grace, all beleeuers are children of Abraham; and that three waies. Firſt, by Imitation, in that Abraham is ſet forth vnto vs as a patterne, in the ſteppes of whoſe faith all true beleeuers walke, Romanes 4. 12. Secondly, beleeuers are children of Abraham, by ſucceſſion, in that they ſucceede him in the inheritance of the ſame bleſſing. Thirdly, they are children to him by a kinde of ſpirituall generation. For Abraham by beleeuing the promiſe of a ſeede, did after a ſort beget them. Indeede properly the promiſe and Election of God, makes them children: and Abraham by his faith, beleeuing the foreſaid promiſe, receiues them of God as his children. In this regard beleeuers are called children of the promiſe, Rom. 9. 8. and the ſeed, that is, of the faith of Abraham, Rom. 4. 16. Now then the meaning of the text is, that beleeuers, though vncircumciſed, are the children of Abraham. It may be ſaid, what priuiledge is this? Anſwer. Great; for the children of Abraham are children of the couenant, and children of God.

Act. 3. 25.
Rom. 9, 8,

The vſe. In this verſe Paul ſets downe one thing, namely, the true marke of the childe of Abraham, and that is, to be of the faith of Abraham. Here then marke firſt of all, the Iewes, though deſcending of Iſaac, are no children of Abraham, becauſe they follow not the faith of Abraham. Secondly, the Turkes are no children, though they plead deſcent from Agar ſometimes, and ſometime from Sara, tearming themſelues Agarens, and Saracens. For they treade vnder foote the faith of Abraham. Thirdly, the Papiſt will nothing helpe himſelfe by the plea of Antiquity, Succeſſion, and vniuerſall conſent, except he can ſhew ſome good euidence, that hee is of the faith of Abraham, which hee cannot: for this faith hee hath corrupted, as I haue ſhewed. Laſtly, our profeſſion of Abrahams faith, partly in teaching, and partly in hearing, and in the vſe of the ſacraments, is not ſufficient to prooue vs the children of Abraham. For as the bodie is dead without the ſoule, ſo is faith without workes, Iam. 2.26. and therefore that workes are the life of faith. Anſw. S. Iames by faith, vnderſtands a pretended faith, or the profeſſion of faith, as appeares by the words, v. 14. though a man ſay he hath faith: and v. 18. ſhew me thy faith. Now of this profeſſion of faith, workes are the life.

Secondly, this expoſition makes faith, or the act of beleeuing, to be our whole & intire iuſtice before God: whereas indeede if it be iuſtice, it is but one part thereof. And in the act of beleeuing, loue cannot be included.

Thirdly, faith ioyned with charitie, is not the iuſtice whereby a ſinner is iuſtified. For our faith and loue are both imperfect: and faith is imputed for righteouſneſſe without workes, Rom. 4. 6. and therefore without charitie. For this is charitie to keepe the commandements of God. Ioh. 15. 10. Paul ſaith, that the righteouſneſſe whereby we are iuſtified, is by or through faith, Phil. 3. 9. & therfore our iuſtice, & our faith, are two diſtinct things.

The third expoſition is alſo from the Papiſts, that faith is reputed for righteouſneſſe: becauſe it is reputed to be a ſufficient meanes to prepare men to their iuſtification: but this cannot be the ſenſe of this place. For this was ſpoken of Abraham after he was iuſtified, and therefore needed no preparation to iuſtification.

Let vs now come to the true ſenſe of the words. In them I conſider two things, Abrahams faith, in theſe words, Abraham beleeued God: and the fruite of his faith, in theſe words, and it was imputed to him for righteouſneſſe. Touching his faith, I conſider three things. The firſt is, the occaſion, which was on this manner. After the conqueſt of the heathen kings, Abraham was ſtill in ſome feare: in this regard the Lord comforts him, Gen. 15. 1. I am thy buckler, and thy exceeding great reward. But to this Abraham replies, I want iſſue: and the Lord anſwers, I will make thy ſeede, as the ſtarres of heauen. Gen. 15. 5. Now then looke as God renewes and inlarges his promiſe to Abraham, ſo Abraham renewes his faith: and hereupon Moſes, and Paul, ſay, Abraham beleeued God. God doth not now inlarge his promiſes to vs as to Abraham: neuertheleſſe, the promiſes recorded in the Bible, are renewed to vs partly by preaching, and partly by the vſe of the ſacraments: and we accordingly are to renew our faith, ſpecially in the time of feare, and danger.

The ſecond thing is the obiect, or matter of his faith, and that is, the multiplication of his poſteritie. It may be ſaid, how could Abraham be iuſtified by ſuch a faith? Anſ. The promiſe of the multiplication of his ſeede, was a dependant of a more principall promiſe, I am thy God all-ſufficient. Gen. 17. 1 and, I am thy exceeding great reward. Gen. 15. 1. In this carnall ſeede, Abraham ſpecially reſpected (by the eye of faith,) the bleſſed ſeede of the woman. A He therefore beleeued the promiſe of a ſeede, as it was a pledge vnto him of a thing more principall, namely, the fauour of God, and as it was a meanes to effect the incarnation of the Sonne of God. In his example we are taught how we are to reſpect, & vſe earthly things: we are to reſpect them as pledges of Gods fauour: and to vſe them as meanes to further vs to Chriſt, and to the attainment of our ſaluation.

The third point is, the properties of Abrahams faith, which was a faith againſt hope. For he beleeued a promiſe of a ſeede, when his bodie was halfe dead, and Sarai was barren. In like ſort we keeping true religion, and B good conſcience, muſt in all our temptations, croſſes, miſeries, infirmities, againſt reaſon, ſenſe, and feeling, beleeue the promiſe of remiſſion of ſinnes, and life euerlaſting.

In this effect and fruite of Abrahams faith, three things muſt be conſidered. The firſt is, what is meant by Imputation. To impute properly, is a ſpeach borrowed from merchants: and it ſignifies to recken, or to keepe a reckening of expenſes, and receipts. Thus Paul ſaith, Philem. 18. If he haue done thee any wrong, impute it to me: that is, ſet it on my reckening. And this word is here applied to the Iudgement of God, becauſe he is our ſoueraigne Lord, and we are his debters: and he doth adiudge vnto men for their ſins, either pardon, or puniſhment.

C Imputation in God, is two-fold: one, Legall: the other, Euangelicall. Legall is, when God willeth and adiudgeth the reward to him that fulfilleth the law. Thus Paul ſaith, Rom. 4. 5. that the wages is imputed to him that worketh, and that of debt. Euangelicall imputation is, when God accepts the ſatisfaction of Chriſt our ſuretie, as a paiment for our ſinnes. In this ſenſe is the word, Impute, taken tenne times in the 4. chapter to the Romanes, and in the ſame is it vſed in this place.

The ſecond point is, what is imputed? And D it was imputed, that is, faith. Faith here muſt be conſidered two waies; firſt, as a qualitie in it ſelfe, and thus it is imperfect, and conſequently cannot be imputed to vs for our iuſtification. Againe, faith muſt be conſidered as an inſtrument, or hand holding and receiuing Chriſt: and in this regard beleeuing is put for the thing beleeued. And thus muſt this text be vnderſtood, It was imputed to him, that is, the thing which his faith beleeued was imputed to him by God: for the act of beleeuing is not our iuſtice, as I haue ſhewed.

The third point is, what is meant by righteouſneſſe? Anſ. That which is called in Scripture the Iuſtice of God, which is ſufficient to acquit a ſinner at the barre of Gods iudgement. Thus then the ſenſe is manifeſt: Abraham beleeued the promiſe of God, ſpecially touching the bleſſed ſeede, and that which he beleeued, namely, the obedience of the Mediatour (the bleſſed ſeede,) was accepted of God as his obedience for his iuſtification.

It is obiected, that the obedience of Chriſt is to be imputed to none, but to Chriſt, who was the doer of it. Anſ. It is to be imputed, that is, aſcribed to him as to the author thereof: and withall, becauſe he did performe it in our roome and ſtead, and that for vs, it is to be imputed to vs.

Secondly, it is obiected, that workes are alſo imputed as well as faith. Pſalme 106. 31. Phinees executed iudgement, and it was imputed to him for righteouſneſſe. Anſwer. There is iuſtice of the perſon, and iuſtice of the act. Iuſtice of the perſon, is that which makes the perſon of man iuſt: Iuſtice of the act, is that which makes the act of the perſon iuſt, and not the perſon it ſelfe. Now the Pſalme ſpeakes only of the iuſtice of Phinees action: and the meaning of the words is this, that God reputed his action as a iuſt action, whereas men might haply condemne it. This place therefore prooues not that workes are imputed for the iuſtification of any man.

Thirdly, it is obiected, that imputed iuſtice was neuer knowne in the Church till 1500. yeares after Chriſt. Anſ. It is falſe. Bernard ſaith expreſly, Death is put to flight by the death of Chriſt, and the iuſtice of Chriſt is imputed to vs: and againe, The ſatisfaction of Chriſt is imputed to vs. Againe, ſundry of the Fathers, as Auguſtine, Hierome, Chryſoſtome, Theodoret, Anſelme, entreating vpon the text of Paul, 2. Cor. 5. 21. auouch, that the iuſtice whereby we are iuſtified, is not in vs, but in Chriſt. And it is a receiued doctrine with them, that a ſinner is iuſtified by faith alone: now faith alone preſuppoſeth an imputation of iuſtice.

Serm. ad mil. Temp. c. 11. Epiſt. 190.

The vſe. Hence it followes, that there is no merit of mans works, either in the beginning, or in the accompliſhment of our iuſtification. For faith is imputed for iuſtice to him that beleeueth and worketh not, Rom. 4. 5.

Againe, by this wee ſee there is but one iuſtification; and that the ſecond by workes, whereby a man of a good man, is made better, is a meere fiction. For iuſt Abraham is not iuſtified by his good workes wherewith hee abounded, but after his firſt iuſtification, faith ſtill is imputed to him for righteouſneſſe.

Thirdly, here we ſee what is that very thing whereby we are to appeare iuſt before God, and to be ſaued, and that is, the obedience of Chriſt, imputed to vs of God, and apprehended by our faith.

Laſtly, here we ſee our duty. God ſits as a Iudge ouer vs, he takes a reckoning of vs for all our doings: the law is an hand-writing againſt vs: to ſome he imputes their ſinnes, to ſome hee remits them. Wee therefore muſt come into the preſence of God, plead guiltie, and acknowledge our ſelues to bee as bankrupts, and intreat him to graunt pardon to vs, & to accept the ſatisfaction of Chriſt for vs: then will God not impute our ſinnes, but the obedience of Chriſt for our iuſtification: and

A accept him as our ſurety in life and death.

The declaration of the concluſion followes in the ninth verſe, and it ſhewes who are the true children of Abraham. The meaning of the words muſt firſt be conſidered. To bee of faith, is to bee of Abrahams faith, Rom. 4. 16. And to bee of Abrahams faith, is to beleeue and apply the promiſe of righteouſnes, and life euerlaſting by Chriſt, as Abraham did: and to reſt in it for our iuſtification and ſaluation, verſ. 10. They are ſaid to be of works, who doe the workes of the law, and looke to bee iuſtified thereby: therefore they are of faith, who beleeue in Chriſt, and looke to bee ſaued and iuſtified thereby.

And they which thus beleeue with Abraham, B are ſaid to bee his children. It may be demaunded, how? Anſwer. Children of Abraham, are of two ſorts: ſome by nature, ſome by grace. By nature are they which are of Abraham by the fleſh, or naturall generation, as Iſmael was. By grace, all beleeuers are children of Abraham; and that three waies. Firſt, by Imitation, in that Abraham is ſet forth vnto vs as a patterne, in the ſteppes of whoſe faith all true beleeuers walke, Romanes 4. 12. Secondly, beleeuers are children of Abraham, by ſucceſſion, in that they ſucceede him in the inheritance of the ſame bleſſing. Thirdly, they are children to him by a kinde of ſpirituall generation. For Abraham by beleeuing the promiſe of a ſeede, did after a ſort beget them. C Indeede properly the promiſe and Election of God, makes them children: and Abraham by his faith, beleeuing the foreſaid promiſe, receiues them of God as his children. In this regard beleeuers are called children of the promiſe, Rom. 9. 8. and the ſeed, that is, of the faith of Abraham, Rom. 4. 16. Now then the meaning of the text is, that beleeuers, though vncircumciſed, are the children of Abraham. It may be ſaid, what priuiledge is this? Anſwer. Great; for the children of Abraham are children of the couenant, and children of God.

Act. 3. 25. Rom. 9. 8.

The vſe. In this verſe Paul ſets downe one thing, namely, the true marke of the childe D of Abraham, and that is, to be of the faith of Abraham. Here then marke firſt of all, the Iewes, though deſcending of Iſaac, are no children of Abraham, becauſe they follow not the faith of Abraham. Secondly, the Turkes are no children, though they plead deſcent from Agar ſometimes, and ſometime from Sara, tearming themſelues Agarens, and Saracens. For they treade vnder foote the faith of Abraham. Thirdly, the Papiſt will nothing helpe himſelfe by the plea of Antiquity, Succeſſion, and vniuerſall conſent, except he can ſhew ſome good euidence, that hee is of the faith of Abraham, which hee cannot: for this faith hee hath corrupted, as I haue ſhewed. Laſtly, our profeſſion of Abrahams faith, partly in teaching, and partly in hearing, and in the vſe of the ſacraments, is not ſufficient to prooue vs the children of Abraham. For not euery one that ſaith Lord, Lord, ſhall enter into the kingdome of heauen, Mat.7.22.

Therefore we muſt labour to be indeed and in truth of the faith of Abraham, and to walke in the ſteppes of his faith. And to this ende, we muſt doe three things. Firſt, we muſt haue knowledge of the maine and principall promiſe, touching the bleſſing of God in Chriſt, and of all other promiſes depending on the principall: and we muſt know the ſcope and tenour of them, that we be not deceiued. Secondly, wee muſt with Abraham beleeue the power, & truth of God, in the accompliſhing of the ſaid promiſes, or in the working of our vocation, iuſtification, ſanctification, glorification, Rom.4.21. Thirdly, we muſt by faith obey God in all things, ſhutting our eyes, and ſuffering our ſelues (as it were) to be led blindfolde by the word of God. Thus did Abraham in all things, euen in actions againſt nature, Hebr.11. But this practiſe is rare among vs. For there are three things which preuaile much among vs, the loue of worldly honour, the loue of the pleaſures, and the loue of riches: and where theſe beare ſway, their faith takes no place. It will bee ſaid, that faith is much profeſſed. Anſwer. Faith was neuer more profeſſed, yet there was neuer leſſe true faith. For the common faith of men, is a falſe faith. For in ſome it is conceiued without the meanes of the word, prayer, ſacraments: and in others, it is ſeuered from the purpoſe of not ſinning. Now faith conceiued without the true meanes, and faith ioyned with a purpoſe to liue as we liſt, is nothing but preſumption. And ſurely, this is the faith, though not of all, yet of the moſt.

Moreouer, that which Paul hath ſaid of the children of Abraham, hee prooues by the teſtimonie of the Galatians, in theſe words, Know ye therefore, or ye know: that is, vpon the ſaying of Moſes, in the former verſe, ye your ſelues know this to bee a truth, which I ſaid. Marke here, Paul requires ſuch a meaſure of knowledge in beleeuers, that they muſt bee able to iudge of the gathering of this or that doctrin, out of this or that place of ſcripture. This ſhewes the contempt of knowledge in theſe our daies to bee great: for moſt men reiect the preaching of the Goſpel, and content themſelues with the teaching, and ſchooling of nature.

8 For the Scripture foreſeeing that God would iuſtifie the Gentiles through faith, preached before the Goſpel vnto Abraham, ſaying, In thee ſhall all the Gentiles be bleſſed.

9 So then, they which are of faith are bleſſed with faithfull Abraham.

Againſt the argument in the two former verſes, a doubt, or exception might bee mooued, on this manner: Wee graunt, that they which are of the faith of Abraham, are iuſtified as he was, ſo they be Iewes, and not Gentiles. Now this doubt, exception, or obiection, Paul remooues in theſe verſes, thus: When
A God ſaid to Abraham, In thee ſhall all the Gentiles be bleſſed; hee ſignified the iuſtification euen of the Gentiles by faith: therefore all that are of faith, euen the Gentiles, are bleſſed of God, as Abraham was.

In the 8. verſe, I conſider three things; the occaſion of the ſpeech of God to Abraham, namely, Gods foreknowledge: the manner of his ſpeech, the preaching of the Goſpel to Abraham: and the teſtimonie it ſelfe, In thee, &c.

Touching the occaſion; firſt, it may be demanded, whether this foreknowledge in God bee a bare foreknowledge, ſeuered from the will of God, or no? Anſ. No: Gods foreknowledge is in all things ioyned with his decree or B will. If God ſhould fore-ſee things to come, and in no ſort will or nill them, there ſhould be an idle prouidence. Chriſt was deliuered by the will and foreknowledge of God, Act.2.23. and the Iewes for their parts did nothing in the crucifying of Chriſt, but that which the hand and counſell of God had determined to be done, Act.4.28. Neither is God by this doctrine made the author of ſinne. For ſinne come to paſſe, not from the will of God, but according to his will: in that he fore-ſees euill, and withall wils not to hinder the beeing of it; and euill not hindred, comes to paſſe.

Againe, it may be demaunded: In what order the foreknowledge of God ſtands to his will. Anſ. The foreknowledge of things that
C may poſſibly come to paſſe, goes before his will: the foreknowledge of things that ſhall certenly come to paſſe, followes the will and decree of God. For things come not to paſſe, becauſe they are foreſeene, but becauſe they are come to paſſe according to the will of God, therefore they are foreſeene. Now then, becauſe foreknowledge in God, is ioyned with his will, and is alwaies a conſequent of it, it is often put for the counſell, will, and decree of God, as in this place.

In this text, two things are to bee conſidered of Gods foreknowledge. The firſt is, who or what foreſees? Anſwer is here made, The Scripture foreſees: that is, God foreſees, and the Scripture records things foreſeen by him.
D Hence it appeares, that the things of Moſes are the word of God. For they foretell things to come 2000. yeares after, as the calling and benediction of the Gentiles in the ſeed of Abraham. In the ſame regard the writings of Paul are the word of God. For there he reueales and ſets downe in writing more then 2000. yeares after, what was the intention of God, when he ſaid to Abraham, In thee ſhall all the Gentiles be bleſſed.

The ſecond point is, what is foreſeene? Anſwer is made, that God iuſtifieth the Gentiles, that is, God will as certainely iuſtifie them in time to come, as if he had then done it, when hee ſpake the words. Some teach, that the Predeſtination of God, is his decree, in which he purpoſeth to redeeme, and iuſtifie all men, of all ages, and times, ſo bee it they will beleeue. But I finde no ſuch decree in the word. Here wee ſee Gods decree, is onely to iuſtifie all the Gentiles in the laſt age of the world. And thus the text of Paul muſt be vnderſtood, God would haue all men to be ſaued, 1. Tim. 2. namely, all men, or all the Gentiles in the laſt age of the world, and not all the Gentiles of all ages and times.

In the next place, the maner of the ſpeech and teſtimonie of God muſt bee conſidered, in that hee is ſaid to preach the Goſpell to Abraham. Here marke the Antiquitie of the Goſpel: and the markes of true religion, which for his ſubſtance was knowne not only to the Apoſtles, but alſo to the Prophets and Patriarkes. So auncient is the true way of life, & the doctrine of iuſtification by faith without workes. Papiſts pleade Antiquitie for their Religion: but in vaine: for the proper points and heads of their religion, were taken vp ſince the daies of Chriſt, ſome two hundred yeares after: ſome 400, ſome 600, ſome 800; ſome a thouſand, and ſome 1400 yeares after.

The third point is, the ſpeech or teſtimonie it ſelfe: In thee ſhall all the Gentiles be bleſſed. In thee, that is, in thy ſeede, Chriſt, Gen. 22. 18. who is in thy loines: into whom the Gentiles are ingrafted by faith, and conſequently into thee. For they are the ſeed of Chriſt, Iſa. 53. 10. who is the ſeed of Abraham. Againe, here it is ſaid, All the Gentiles: but Gen. 17. 4. Abraham is called the father, not of all, but of many nations. Anſ. He is the father of many, in reſpect of his fleſh: and he is a father of all the Gentiles, in regard of his faith. Againe, it is vſuall in Scripture, to put the word, all, for many, Rom. 5. 15. 18. And the benediction here mentioned, comprehends al the ſpiritual graces of God, as vocation, iuſtification, glorification, Eph. 1. v. 3.

The vſe. In that the Lord ſaith, All the nations ſhall be bleſſed in Abraham, hence I gather, that the nations of the Iewes ſhall be called and conuerted, to the participation of this bleſſing: when, and how, God knowes: but that it ſhall bee done before the ende of the world, we know. For if all nations ſhall be called, then the Iewes.

Againe, that which was fore-told to Abraham, is verified in our eyes. For this our Engliſh nation, and many other nations are at this day bleſſed in this ſeed of Abraham. Vpon the conſideration of this, wee are admoniſhed of many things. Firſt, wee are to giue to God great thankes and praiſe, that wee are borne in theſe daies. For many Prophets, and great Kings, deſired to ſee that which we ſee, and could not obtaine it. Secondly, wee muſt euery one of vs in our hearts amend & turne vnto God, and vnfainedly beleeue in Chriſt, that wee may now in the acceptable day bee partakers of the promiſed bleſſing. The Lord ſaith, Gen. 22. 18. In thy ſeed all the nations of the earth ſhall be bleſſed, or, bleſſe themſelues: because they ſhall vſe all good meanes, that they may bee filled with the bleſſings of God. Thirdly, we muſt bleſſe all, doe good to all, and hurt none: for, we are heires of bleſſing, 1. Pet. 3. 8. Laſtly, wee muſt here marke our comfort: if we truly turne to God, and beleeue in the holy ſeede of Abraham, all things ſhall goe well with vs: God ſhall bleſſe them that bleſſe vs, and curſe them that curſe vs, Gen. 12. 3.

The ninth verſe, is the concluſion of Pauls anſwer: and it is in effect and ſubſtance one & the ſame with verſe 7. and it ſignifieth that all men that bee of Abrahams faith, (though otherwiſe forrainers and Gentiles to Abraham) ſhall be partakers of the ſame bleſſing of God with him. It may be ſaid: How ſhall we haue the ſame bleſſing, when wee haue not the like faith? Anſ. God reſpects not the greatnes of our faith, ſo much as the truth of it. And if faith erre not in his obiect: that is, if wee make Chriſt crucified our Redeemer, and ioyne nothing to him: if there be further, a will to beleeue, and to apprehend Chriſt, with care and conſtancy to increaſe in faith, and a purpoſe not to ſinne, God will accept this true and honeſt will, for the deede.

10 For as many as be of the workes of the law, are vnder the curſe. For it is written, Curſed is euery one that continues not in all things written in the law, to doe them.

In theſe words, Paul ſets downe a ſecond reaſon, whereby hee prooues, that not onely the Iewes, but alſo the Gentiles, are bleſſed as Abraham was, by faith. And the reaſon is drawne from the contraries, thus: They that are of workes, that is, that looke to be iuſtified by workes, are vnder the curſe. Therefore, they that are of faith, are bleſſed and iuſtified with Abraham. Moreouer, Paul addes the proofe of this ſecond reaſon, in the next words, and it is framed thus: They which fulfill not the law, are accurſed, they which are of workes, fulfill not the law: therefore they are accurſed.

Whereas Paul ſaith, that they are vnder the curſe, that will bee of workes, wee ſee the whole world almoſt, walkes in the way of perdition: it is a concluſion of nature, that wee muſt be ſaued and iuſtified by our workes. The young Prince in the Goſpel, ſaid, Good maſter, what muſt I doe to be ſaued? The Iewes would not bee ſubiect to the iuſtice of God, but they eſtabliſhed their owne righteouſneſſe of the law, Romanes 10. 3. Our common people, and they that ſhew to be wiſe, ſay, they looke to be ſaued by faith: but indeede they turne their faith to workes. For what is their faith? ſurely nothing elſe (as they ſay) but their good meaning, or their good dealing, or their good ſeruing of God.

Hence againe it followes, that the Papacy or Popiſh religion, is the way to perdition, in that it preſcribeth and teacheth iuſtification by workes. On the contrarie, our religion is the ſafeſt and ſureſt from daunger, because

A it teacheth the free iuſtification of a ſinner, by the blood of Chriſt. And this makes the Papiſts, in the day of death, to renounce iuſtification by their workes. Steuen Gardiner, a bloody perſecutor, beeing on his death-bed tolde of free iuſtification by the blood of Chriſt, ſaid, You may tell this to me, but doe not open this gappe to the people. One of late in a publike execution of iuſtice, ſaid, hee would die a Catholike, and withall hee added, that hee looked to bee ſaued onely by the paſſion of Chriſt.

In the proofe of the reaſon, three things are to bee conſidered; what the curſe is; who are accurſed; and when?

The curſe is eternall woe and miſerie; and B it is either in this life, in the end of this life, or in the life to come.

The curſe in this life, is either within man, or without him. The curſe within man is manifolde. In the minde there is ignorance of God, of our ſelues, of true happineſſe, and of the meanes to attaine to it. Againe, there is a great difficulty with much paine to learne & retaine things to bee learned and retained. And this is a curſe of God vpon our mindes. In the conſcience there are manifolde accuſations, terrors, and feares, ariſing vpon euery occaſion, and they are flaſhings (as it were) of the fire of hell, vnleſſe they bee quenched in this life, by the blood of Chriſt. In the will, there is an inclination to all manner of ſinnes C without exception. Againe, there is hardneſſe of heart, whereby the will of man is vnpliable to that which is good, vnleſſe it be renewed. In the body there are more diſeaſes then the Phyſitians bookes can expreſſe: and as many diſeaſes as there bee in vs, ſo many fruites of ſinne there are, Ioh. 5. 14.

The curſe without vs, is three-folde. The firſt is, a ſpirituall bondage vnder the power of the diuell; who by reaſon of ſinne, workes in the hearts of vnbeleeuers, Epheſ. 2. 2. and hath the power of death, Heb. 2. 14.

The ſecond is, an Enmitie of all the creatures with man, ſince the fall. And this appeares, becauſe when God receiues vs to bee D his people, he makes a couenant with al creatures in our behalfe, Hoſ. 2. 18.

The third containes all loſſes, calamities, miſeries, in goods, friends, good name. Reade Deut. 28.

The curſe in the ende of this life, is death, which is the ſeparation of bodie and ſoule, Rom. 5. 13. and death in his owne nature, is a fearefull curſe, and the very downefall to the pitte of hell.

The curſe after this life, is the ſecond death; which is ſeparation of body and ſoule from God, with a full apprehenſion of the wrath of God. And if the paine of one tooth or finger, bee oftentimes ſo great, that men rather deſire to die then liue: how great then ſhall the paine bee, when all the parts of body and ſoule ſhall bee tormented? And the eternitie of this death increaſeth mans miſerie. If a man might ſuffer ſo many yeares as there are drops in the ſea, and then haue an ende, it were ſome comfort: but when that time is expired, man is as farre from the ende of his woe, as euer he was.

This in ſumme and ſubſtance is the curſe here mentioned: and it were to bee wiſhed, that men would more thinke and ſpeake of it, then they doe: then would there be more conſcience of ſinne.

The next point is, who are curſed. Anſwer. They which doe not all things according to the law. Here is an item for them, that will keep ſome commaundements, but not all. Herod would doe ſome things at the motion of Iohn Baptiſt, but hee would not leaue his inceſtuous marriage, with his brothers wife, Marke 6. 20. There bee at this day, that are very forward in good things: yet ſome of them will not leaue their ſwearing, ſome their lying, ſome their vncleanneſſe, ſome their vſurie. But God will not part ſtakes with man; hee will haue all, or none. He that breakes one commaundement, is guilty of all, Iam. 2. And there is good reaſon, that hee which obeyes, ſhould obey in all. For where God renewes, hee ſanctifies throughout, and fils him with the ſeed of all grace, that they may performe obedience according to all the commandements of the law.

Againe, hee is curſed that doth not all things which the law preſcribeth; or if hee doe them, yet doth not continue in all. So then hee is curſed, that breakes the law but once, and that onely in one thought: for ſuch an one doth not continue in all things. Now then, O ſinnefull man, what wilt thou doe, to auoide the curſe? for thou haſt in thought, word, and deede, broken the law. Doſt thou thinke to appeaſe the wrath of God with gold and ſiluer? the whole world, and all things therein, are the Lords. And thou maiſt not thinke to hide or withdraw thy ſelfe from the preſence of God: for all muſt come and appeare before his tribunall ſeate, in their owne perſons. Neither may we thinke to eſcape becauſe God is mercifull. What wilt thou then doe to eſcape this horrible curſe? when thou haſt done all thou canſt do, thou canſt no way helpe or releeue thy ſelfe.

The only way of helpe is this: Thou muſt flie from this ſentẽce of the law, to the throne of grace for mercie, inſtantly asking, ſeeking, knocking at the gate of mercy, for pardon of thy ſinnes. And that thou maieſt bee encouraged to this dutie, conſider with mee, that at thy firſt purpoſe to amend, and to turne vnto God, thy ſinnes are pardoned in heauen. Dauid ſaith, Pſalme 32. 5. I thought I will confeſſe my ſinnes againſt my ſelfe, and thou forgaueſt me. Marke the ſpeech, I thought. The prodigall childe, Luk. 15. vpon his purpoſe to returne to his father, (before he had indeed humbled himſelfe in word) was receiued to mercy.

A When Dauid ſaid, I haue ſinned: Nathan in the name of God ſaid, Thy ſinne is forgiuen thee. It may be, thou wilt ſay, the curſe is abſolute. An. The threatning of the law muſt bee vnderſtood with an exception, which the Goſpell makes, on this manner: The Law ſaith, curſed is the tranſgreſſour: and the Goſpel ſaith, Except he repent. Ionas preached, yet forty daies, & Niniue ſhall be deſtroyed: yet withall there is added an exception: It may be the Lord will repent of his fierce wrath, Ion.3.9. Againe, thou wilt ſay, my ſinnes are very grieuous, therfore I feare I ſhall not eſcape the curſe. Anſ. Forgiueneſſe is promiſed without any limitation, to any number or kindes of ſinne: (onely the ſin againſt the holy Ghoſt excepted.) There- B fore appeale with boldnes in thy heart to the throne of grace, intreat for forgiuenes, as for life & death, and thou ſhalt eſcape the curſe.

The third point is, when is a ſinner accurſed? Anſ. In preſent, in the time of this life. For the Lord ſaith not, he ſhall be accurſed: but, he is accurſed. There be among vs whome no ſermons or exhortations will amend: and ſuch perſons thinke themſelues without the reach of any danger. For they thinke the time is very long to the laſt iudgement. But they are deceiued touching themſelues. For God with his owne mouth hath giuen the ſentence, that they are accurſed; there remaines nothing but the execution. The halter is already about their neckes: & there remaines nothing but the turning of the ladder. C Nay, the execution is already in blindneſſe of minde, and hardnes of heart. He that beleeues not, is already condemned, Ioh.3.

Laſtly, a memorable concluſion of Paul is here to be obſerued. That it is impoſſible for any man, within himſelfe, for the time of this life, to fulfill the law of God. For Paul here takes it for a confeſſed and granted concluſion: otherwiſe his argument will not hold; which muſt be framed on this manner: Hee which fulfils not the law, is curſed: hee which is of workes, fulfils not the law: therefore hee is accurſed. I further prooue it thus: If wee could fulfill the law, wee might bee iuſtified by the law: but no man can bee iuſtified by D the law, or by workes: therefore no man can fulfill the law. Againe, Paul ſaith, Rom. 7. 14. that the law was ſpirituall, requiring inward and ſpirituall obedience, and that hee was carnall, and therefore not conformable to the law: that hee was ſolde vnder ſinne: that when hee would doe good, euill was preſent: that he carried about him the body of death. And all this he ſaith of himſelfe, about twenty yeares after his owne conuerſion. Such as our knowledge is, ſuch is our loue to God and man. Now wee know God onely in part: therefore wee loue in part; and conſequently wee doe not fulfill the law. Againe, the Scripture puts all men, euen the regenerate, vnder the name of ſinners to the very death, Iſa.64.4. All our righteouſneſſe is as a defiled cloth. Pro.20.9. Who can ſay, my heart is cleane? Iob cannot anſwer God for one of a thouſand, Iob 9. The righteous man ſhall pray for the pardon of his ſinnes in a time when he may be heard, Pſalm.32.6. If we ſay we haue no ſinne, we deceiue our ſelues, 1.Iohn 1.9. The Papiſts ſay, that all theſe places are ment of veniall ſinnes. Anſ. There are no veniall ſinnes, which in their owne nature, are not againſt the law of God, but onely beſide it. The ſtipend of euery ſinne is death, Rom.6.23. If we were perfectly ſanctified, and conſequently fulfillers of the law in this life, then Chriſt ſhould not be a Sauiour, but an Inſtrument of God, to make vs our owne Sauiours. And to ſay this, is blaſphemy. Laſtly, that which man could doe by creation, ſo much the law requires at our hand: but man by creation could loue God with all the powers of his ſoule, and with all the ſtrength of all the powers: which now (ſince the fall) no man can doe. It remaines then for an infallible concluſion, that it is impoſſible for any man in the time of this life, to fulfill the law.

The vſe. This point ſerues notably to condemne the folly of the world. The Iſraelites ſay at Mount Sinai, that they will doe all things which the Lord ſhall commaund them, Exodus 19. 8. The young prince ſaid, that hee had kept all the commaundements from his youth, Mar. 10. 20. Our common people ſay, that they can loue God with all their hearts, and their neighbours as themſelues.

Secondly, this doctrine ſerues to confute ſundry errours of the Papiſts, who blaſphemouſly teach, that a man after iuſtification, may fulfill the law in this life: that a man may for a time be without all ſinne: that workes of the regenerate are perfect, and may be oppoſed to the iudgement of God: that men may ſupererogate, and doe more then the law requires. The ground of all theſe concluſions, is this: They ſay, there is a double degree of fulfilling the law. The firſt is, in this life, and that is, to loue God truly aboue all creatures, and to loue our neighbour as our ſelues, in truth. The ſecond is, to loue God with all the powers of the ſoule, and with all the ſtrength of all the powers: and this meaſure of fulfilling the law, is reſerued to the life to come. I will briefly conſider the reaſons & the ground of this blaſphemous doctrine.

Obiect. I. God promiſeth the Iſraelites, that he will circumciſe their hearts, that they may loue him with all their hearts, with all their ſoules, and with all their ſtrength, Deuteron.30.6. And thus Ioſia turned to God with all his heart, with all his ſoule, and with all his ſtrength according to all the law of Moſes, 2.King.23.25. Anſw. The phraſe [with all thy heart] is taken in a double ſignification. Sometime it is oppoſed to a double heart, and then it ſignifies, a true and vpright heart, without guile or diſſimulation. Thus they of Zebulon are ſaid, not to fight with a double heart, 1.Chron.12.33. but with a perfect heart, v.28. Where marke the oppoſition of an whole or perfect heart, to a double hart. In this ſenſe are the places before-named, to be vnderſtood. Neuertheles the whole heart, ſoule, and ſtrength, in the ſumme of the morall law, ſignifies all powers of the ſoule, and all the ſtrength of all the powers. Thus doth Paul, Rom. 7. expound the law, when he ſaith, the law is ſpirituall; and by the prohibition of luſt, giues the meaning of the whole law. For concupiſcence, or luſt, comprehends the firſt thoughts, or motions.

Obiect. II. Noah is ſaid to be iuſt and perfect, Gen. 6. and God commaunds Abraham to walke before him, and to be perfect, Gen. 17. 1, Paul ſaith, Let as many as bee perfect bee thus minded, Philippians 3. 15. Anſwer. There is a double perfection; perfection of parts, and perfection of degrees. Perfection of parts is, when a man hath in him, after hee is regenerate, the beginnings of all vertues, and the ſeedes of all graces: by which hee endeauours to obey God in all his lawes and commaundements. Perfection of degrees is, when the law is fulfilled both in matter, and manner, according to the rigour of the law. Now the former places ſpeake onely of the perfection of parts: and that is ſuch a perfection in which we are to acknowledge our imperfection, & it is no more but a true and generall endeauour to obey God, Iſa. 38. 1.

Obiect. III. Sundry holy men are ſaid to fulfill the law: Dauid turned from nothing that God commaunded him all the daies of his life, ſaue in the matter of Vriah, 1 King. 15. 5. Zacharie and Elizabeth walked in all the commandements of God, and that without reproofe before God, Luk. 1. 6. Anſ. There are two kindes of fulfilling the law: one Legall, the other Euangelicall. Legall is, when men doe all things required in the law, and that by themſelues, and in themſelues. Thus none euer fulfilled the law, but Chriſt, and Adam before his fall. The Euangelicall manner of fulfilling the law, is to beleeue in Chriſt, who fulfilled the law for vs: and withall to endeauour in the whole man, to obey God in all his precepts. Aud this endeauour ioyned with the purpoſe of not ſinning, is called the righteouſnes of good conſcience, and though it be not really a fulfilling of the law, yet it is accepted of God as a fulfilling of the law in all them that are in Chriſt. For God accepts the endeauour to obey, for perfect obedience, Thus Dauid, Zacharie, Elizabeth, and others, are ſaid to fulfill the law.

Obiect. IV. We pray that wee may fulfill the law, when we ſay, Let thy wil be done in earth, as it is in heauen, Mat. 6. 10. Anſ. We pray not that we may fulfill the law in this, but that we may ſtriue as much as may be, to attain to the fulfilling of the law. That is the ſcope of the petition. VVe deſire not to be equall to the Angels, and Saints, but only to imitate them more and more, and to be like to them.

Obiect. V. Rom. 7. 18. To will is preſent with mee: therefore (ſay they) to will the law may be kept, though the fleſh relent. Anſwer. When Paul ſaith, that to will was preſent, hee doth not ſignifie that hee could perfectly will that which is good. For his will being partly renewed, and partly vnrenewed, the good which he willed, he partly nilled, and the euill which he nilled, he partly willed.

Obiect. VI. Chriſt tooke our fleſh, that the righteouſneſſe of the law might bee fulfilled in vs, Rom. 8. 4. Anſwer. The righteouſneſſe of the law is fulfilled in vs, not becauſe wee doe all things required in the law, but becauſe wee haue faith in vs, and by that faith wee apprehend the obedience of Chriſt in fulfilling of the law.

Obiect. VII. Rom. 13. 8. Loue is the fulfilling of the law: and the regenerate loue their neighbours. Anſ. If we could loue our neighbour as our ſelues perfectly, wee ſhould then fulfill the whole law. But our loue is imperfect.

Obiect. VIII. Hee that is borne of God, ſinneth not: 1. Iohn 3. 9. hee that ſinneth not, fulfilleth the law. Anſwer. Hee that is borne of God, ſinneth not, that is, hee doth not commit ſinne, or make a practiſe of ſinne. Hee may fall of frailty, yet then hee recouers himſelfe, and doth not keepe a courſe in ſinning. This is the meaning of Saint Iohn.

Obiect. IX. The commandements of God are not grieuous, 1. Ioh. 5. 3. Anſwer. They are not grieuous three waies: firſt, in reſpect of remiſſion, becauſe they that beleeue in Chriſt, haue the tranſgreſſion of the law pardoned. Secondly, in reſpect of imputatiō: becauſe Chriſts obedience in fulfilling the law, is imputed to euery beleeuer. Thirdly, in reſpect of inchoation. For they that beleeue receiue the Spirit of God, whereby they are inabled to endeauour themſelues to obey God in all his commaundements. Otherwiſe, in reſpect of our owne perſonall obedience, they are a yoke that no man can beare.

Obiect. X. The workes of God are perfect, Deut. 32. 4. Good workes are workes of God: therefore they are perfect. Anſwer. Workes that are meerely workes of God, which hee worketh by himſelfe, and not by man, they are all perfect: and thus muſt the text in Moſes bee vnderſtood. Now good workes are workes of God in vs: and withall they are our workes, hauing their beginning in the minde and will of man: and hence they are defiled. For when the firſt and ſecond cauſe concurre in a worke, the ſaid worke takes vnto it the condition of the ſecond cauſe. Water pure in the fountaine, is defiled when it paſſes by the filthy channell.

Obiect. XI. If God haue giuen vs an impoſſible law, hee is more cruell then any tyrant. Anſ. VVhen God firſt gaue the law, hee alſo gaue power to fulfill the law. If the law bee impoſſible, it is not Gods fault, but mans, who by his owne fault hath loſt his power of keeping the law.

The ground before-named of the double fulfilling of the law, one for this life, the other for the life to come, is falſe. For there is onely one generall and vnchangeable ſentence of the law, Curſed is euery one that continues not in all things written in the law to doe them.

I now come to other vſes of the former concluſion. If the law be impoſſible, then muſt we ſeeke for the fulfilling of it, forth of our ſelues in Chriſt, who is the end of the law for righteouſneſſe to them that beleeue. Hence it followes neceſſarily, that our iuſtification muſt be by the imputation, or application of Chriſts iuſtice vnto vs.

Becauſe we cannot fulfill the law, we muſt make it a glaſſe to ſee our impotencie, & what we cannot doe: and it muſt be our ſchoolemaſter to driue vs to Chriſt. And by our impotency we muſt take occaſion to make prayer to God for his Spirit to inable vs to obey the lawes of God. Thus come we to be doers of the law, and no otherwiſe.

Againe, it may be demanded, (conſidering we cannot fulfill the law) how our workes can pleaſe God? Anſ. In euery good worke, there is ſomething that is Gods, and ſomething that is ours alone. The defect of the worke is ours alone, and that is pardoned to the beleeuer. That which is good in the worke, is from God, and that he approoueth as beeing his owne. And thus euery good worke is ſaid to pleaſe God.

Laſtly, after that we haue begun to pleaſe God in obedience to his lawes, conſidering we fulfill them not, all boaſting of our goodneſſe muſt be laid aſide; and we muſt humble our ſelues vnder the hand of God euen to the death. Reade the practiſe of Dauid, Pſal. 143. 2. and Pſal. 130. 3. Iob. 9. 1.

11. And that no man is iuſtified by the law in the ſight of God, it is manifeſt. For the iuſt liueth by faith.

12. And the law is not of faith: but he that ſhall doe theſe things, ſhall liue in them.

The meaning. [By the law] that is, the law not onely ceremoniall, but alſo iudiciall and morall. Indeed the occaſion of Pauls diſputation in this place, is taken from Circumciſion, pertaining to the ceremoniall law: but he inlargeth his diſputation, from one part to the whole law. For they which thought Ceremonies neceſſary to iuſtification, would much more thinke morall duties neceſſarie. And that Paul ſpeakes here of the morall, it appeares by the 10. verſe, where he alleadgeth a ſentence that ſpecially appertaines to the morall law: Curſed is euery one, &c. Againe, the law may be conſidered two waies, in the iuſtification of a ſinner: firſt, as it iuſtifieth without Chriſt: ſecondly, as it iuſtifieth with Chriſt: and both waies it is excluded from iuſtification, and here ſpecially in the ſecond regard. For the intent of the Galatians was, to ioyne Chriſt and the law, in the worke of our iuſtification.

Before God] that is, in the iudgement of God, before whoſe iudgement ſeate we muſt all appeare, and be iudged.

The iuſt ſhall liue by faith.] The ſcope of theſe words is this. The Iewes were oppreſſed by the Babylonians, and it was further told them by the Prophet, that they ſhould be ledde into captiuitie by the ſaid Babylonians. Now in this diſtreſſe of theirs, the Lord ſets downe the duty of the faithfull Iewes, namely, that they muſt ſtay themſelues by their faith in the Meſſias, and conſequently, that they ſhall haue ſafetie in this life in the middeſt of all dangers, and in the end haue eternall life. And Paul applies this text to his purpoſe, thus. Life eternall comes by faith: and therefore true righteouſneſſe before God is by faith. For righteouſneſſe is the foundation of life eternall: and therefore it is called iuſtification of life, Rom. 5. 17.

The law is not of faith.] The meaning of theſe words muſt be gathered, by the oppoſition in the latter part of the verſe: but he that doth theſe things ſhall liue in them. And the meaning is this. The law doth not preſcribe faith in the Meſſias: neither doth it promiſe life to him that beleeueth in the Meſſias, but to him that doth the things contained in the law.

In theſe words, Paul addes a new argument to the former, thus. Iuſtice is by faith: the law is not of faith: therefore the law is not our iuſtice. Or againe, thus. He that is iuſtified, is iuſtified by faith: the law iuſtifies no man by faith: therefore the law doth not iuſtifie. The concluſion is firſt, in the 11. verſ. The propoſition is expreſſed, and confirmed by the teſtimonie of the Prophet Habacuck. The aſſumption is in the 12. verſe.

The vſe. When Paul ſaith, No man is iuſtified by the law in the ſight of God: he makes a double iuſtification: one, before God: the other before men. Iuſtification before God is, when God reputes a man iuſt, and that only for the merit, and obedience of Chriſt. Iuſtification before men, is, when ſuch as profeſſe faith in Chriſt, are reputed iuſt of men. By this diſtinction, Paul, who ſaith, that a man is iuſtified by faith without workes, Rom. 3. 28. and Iames, who ſaith, that Abraham was iuſtified by faith, and workes, Iam. 2. 24. are reconciled: for Paul ſpeakes of iuſtification before God, as he himſelfe expreſſely teſtifieth, Rom. 4. 2. and S. Iames ſpeakes of iuſtification before men, which is not onely by the profeſſion of faith, but alſo by workes.

In the ſame ſort, there is a double Election. One ſpeciall, whereby God knowes who are his. The other, is more generall, whereby we repute all men to be Elect, that profeſſe faith in Chriſt, leauing ſecret iudgements to God. Thus Paul writes to the Epheſians, Philippians, &c. as Elect. And the Miniſters of the word, are to ſpeake to their congregations, as to the Elect people of God.

In the ſame manner, there is a double ſanctification: one before God, in truth, Eph. 4. 28. the other before men, in the iudgement of charitie. Thus men are ſaid, to tread vnder foote the blood of Chriſt wherewith they were ſanctiſied. Heb. 10. 29. Thus all that are of right to be baptiſed, are holy and regenerate; not in the iudgement of certeintie, which is Gods; but in the iudgement of charitie, which is mans: ſecrets alwaies reſerued to God.

Againe, when Paul ſaith, in the ſight of God, he giues vs to vnderſtand, that there is an vniuerſall iudgement of God, before whom we muſt all appeare, and be iudged. And when Paul ſaith in the time preſent, that God iuſtifieth (though not by workes) he ſignifies, that this iudgement is alreadie begun vpon vs, euen in this life. This muſt teach vs, to walke in godly and holy conuerſation, in the feare of God: and to watch and pray, that we may be found worthy to ſtand before God. Malefactours, when they are going to iudgement, and when they ſee the Iudge ſet, lay aſide skorning, and bethinke themſelues what to ſay or doe. Now we are theſe malefactours: and we know that God hath alreadie begun to giue iudgement of vs, and therefore we muſt prepare our ſelues to make a good reckoning.

In the teſtimonie of the Prophet our dutie is ſet downe, and that is, that we muſt in this world liue by faith. That we may liue by faith, we muſt doe two things. One is, to chooſe the true God for our God: the ſecond is, in our hearts to cleaue vnto him, and that according to his word. Firſt therefore, we muſt cleaue faſt to his commaundements, by entring into the way of his precepts, and by walking in them. For this cauſe we muſt haue alwaies about vs the eye of knowledge, to direct our ſteps in the waies of God, that we euer keepe our ſelues in our callings, that is the duty we owe to God and man. Secondly, while we ſtand in the waies of God, we ſhall be aſſailed with many Temptations on the right hand, and on the left: therefore we muſt further cleaue to the promiſes of God: beleeuing his preſence, protection, and aſſiſtance, in al temptations and dangers. And this our faith muſt be as it were a hand to ſtay vs. Here two caueats muſt be remembred. One, that we muſt not preſcribe vnto God the maner of his aſſiſtance; but leaue it, with other circumſtances of time, and place to God. The ſecond is, when al earthly things faile vs, we muſt reſt vpō the bare word of God, and beleeue the promiſe of remiſſion of ſinnes, and life euerlaſting. This is to liue by faith. And this duty muſt be practiſed, when we are in the field to fight for our countrey: when we lie on our death beds: and when we are in any danger.

Marke further, Paul ſaith, the iuſt man liues by faith: he therefore that is iuſtified continues to be iuſtified by his faith: and therefore the ſecond iuſtification, that is ſaid to be by our workes, is a meere fiction. And in that none liues by faith, but he that is a iuſt man, we ſee that true faith is alwaies ioyned with the purpoſe of not ſinning, or with the iuſtice of good conſcience: and where they are ſeuered, there is no more but a meere pretence of faith.

When Paul ſaith [the law is not of faith] he ſets downe the maine difference betweene the Law and the Goſpel. The law promiſeth life, to him that performes perfect obedience, and that for his workes. The Goſpel promiſeth life, to him that doth nothing in the cauſe of his ſaluation, but onely beleeues in Chriſt: and it promiſeth ſaluation to him that beleeueth, yet not for his faith, or for any work elſe, but for the merit of Chriſt. The law then requires doing to ſaluation, and the Goſpel beleeuing, and nothing elſe.

Obiect. I. The Goſpel requires repentance, and the practiſe of it. Anſ. Indeed the law doth not teach true repentance; neither is it any cauſe of it, but onely an occaſion. The Goſpel onely preſcribes repentance, and the practiſe thereof: yet onely as it is a fruit of our faith, and as it is the way to ſaluation in which we are to walke, and no otherwiſe.

Obiect. II. The law requires and commands faith. Anſw. The law requires faith in God, which is, to put our affiance in him. But the Goſpel requires faith in Chriſt, the Mediatour, God man: and this faith the law neuer knew.

Obiect. III. In the Goſpel there are promiſes of life, vpon condition of our obedience. Rom. 8. 13. If by the ſpirit ye mortifie the deedes of the fleſh, ye ſhall liue. 1. Ioh. 1. 9. If we confeſſe our ſinnes, God is faithfull to forgiue them. Anſw. The promiſes of the Goſpel are not made to the worke, but to the worker: and to the worker not for his worke, but for Chriſts ſake, according to his worke. As for example: promiſe of life is made not to the worke of mortification, but to him that mortifieth his fleſh, and that not for his mortification, but becauſe he is in Chriſt, and his mortification is the token or euidence thereof. And therefore it muſt be remembred, that al promiſes of the Goſpel that mention workes, include in them Reconciliation with God in Chriſt.

Obiect. IV. Faith is a vertue, and to beleeue is a worke: therefore one worke is commaunded in the Goſpel, and is alſo neceſſarie to ſaluation. Anſw. The Goſpel conſiders not faith as a vertue, or worke, but as an inſtrument, or hand, to apprehend Chriſt. For faith doth not cauſe, effect, or procure our iuſtification and ſaluation, but as the beggers hand, it receiues them, beeing wholly wrought and giuen of God.

This Diſtinction of the law and the Goſpel, muſt be obſerued carefully. For by it we ſee that the Church of Rome hath erroniouſly confounded the law and the Goſpel, for this many hundred yeares. The law of Moſes (ſay they) written in tables of ſtone, is the law: the ſame law of Moſes, written in the hearts of men by the holy Ghoſt, is the Goſpel. But I ſay againe, that the law written in our hearts, is ſtill the law of Moſes. And this ouerſight in miſtaking the diſtinction of the Law and the Goſpel, is and hath beene, the ruine of the Goſpel.

We muſt here further obſerue, that * beleeuing, and doing, are oppoſed, in the article of our iuſtification. In our good conuerſation they agree: faith goes before, and doing followes: but in the worke of our iuſtification, they are as fire and water. Hence I gather, that to the iuſtification of a ſinner, there is required a ſpeciall and an applying faith, for generall faith is numbred among the workes of the law: and the diuels haue it. This kind of beleeuing therefore, and doing, are not oppoſite. Againe, hence I gather, that workes of faith and grace, are quite excluded from iuſtification: becauſe the oppoſition doth not ſtand betweene beleeuing, and the workes of nature: but ſimply, betweene beleeuing, and doing.

* Credere. Facere.

Laſtly, it may be demanded, why the Lord ſaith, He that doth the things of the law ſhall liue; conſidering no man ſince the fall, can doe the things of the law? Anſ. The Lord ſince mans fall, repeates the law in his old tenour, not to mocke men, but for other waightie cauſes. The firſt is to teach vs, that the law is of a conſtant, and vnchangeable nature. The ſecond is, to aduertiſe vs, of our weakenes, and to ſhew vs, what we cannot doe. The third is, to put vs in mind, that we muſt ſtill humble our ſelues vnder the hand of God, after we haue begun by grace to obey the law; becauſe euen then we come farre ſhort in doing the things which the law requires at our hands.

13. Chriſt hath redeemed vs from the curſe of the law, when he was made a curſe for vs: (for it is written, Curſed is euery one that hangeth on the tree.)

14. That the bleſſing of Abraham might come to the Gentiles, through Chriſt Ieſus, that we might receiue the promiſe of the ſpirit by faith.

Paul hauing prooued the truth of his doctrine by ſundry arguments, in the former part of this chapter, he here anſwereth an obiection, the occaſion whereof is from the 10. verſe. It may be framed on this maner: If they be accurſed that continue not in all things written in the law to doe them, then all men are accurſed: and the Gentiles are not partakers of the bleſſing of Abraham (as you haue ſaid.) Anſwere is here made, that to them that beleeue, there is full redemption from the curſe of the law. And Paul for the better inlightening of his anſwere, here makes a deſcription of our redemption by foure arguments. The firſt is the authour: Chriſt hath redeemed vs from the curſe of the law. The ſecond is the forme or manner of our Redemption, in theſe words, When he was made a curſe for vs. And this forme is further declared by the ſigne, in theſe words: for it is written, Curſed is euery one that hangeth on the tree. The A third argument is in the end, in theſe words, that the bleſſing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles. The laſt is alſo an other end, that we might receiue the promiſe of the ſpirit.

Touching the Author, in theſe words, Chriſt hath redeemed vs from the curſe of the law, ſundry things may be learned. Firſt of all comparing theſe words with the 10. verſe, or comparing the anſwer, and the obiection together, we ſee and are to obſerue, that the threatnings of the law, are to be vnderſtood with an exception from the Goſpel. All are curſed, ſaith the law, that doe not continue to doe all things written therein, Except they haue pardon, and be redeemed by Chriſt, ſaith the B Goſpel. And thus are all curſes of the law to be conceiued, with a limitation or qualification, from the Goſpel.

Againe, in that Chriſt hath redeemed vs from the curſe of the law, here is our comfort, that neither hell, nor death, nor Satan, hath any right or power ouer vs, ſo be it we do vnfainedly beleeue in Chriſt. For we are bought with a price. And for this cauſe, we muſt be admoniſhed, not to feare any euill ouermuch, as the reuilings, & curſes of euill tongues, witchcraft, the plague, peſtilence, famine, the ſword, or death. For the curſe which makes all theſe, and many other things hurtfull vnto vs, is remooued from them that are in Chriſt. And therefore all immoderate feare ſhould be C reſtrained.

Thirdly, our dutie is, to glorifie God and Chriſt, who hath redeemed vs, and that both in bodie and ſoule. The redeemed muſt liue according to the will of their redeemer. 1. Cor. 6. 20. This is all the thankfulneſſe that we can ſhew to our Redeemer for his mercie.

Laſtly, here an obiection made by ſome, may be anſwered. If (ſay they) we were redeemed by Chriſt, beeing captiues to the diuell, the price of our Redemption was paid to him, and not to God. Anſw. We were captiues properly to the iuſtice of God in the law, to the order whereof we ſtand ſubiect: and by this meanes we are captiues to the curſe of the law, and conſequently to the diuell, who is the D miniſter of God, for the execution of the ſaid curſe. And beeing captiues to the diuell, no otherwiſe then as he is the miniſter of God, for the inflicting of puniſhment: the price muſt not be paid to him, but to God, who is the principall, and hath a ſoueraigntie ouer him and vs.

I come now to the forme of our Redemption, Who was made a curſe for vs. For the better vnderſtanding of theſe words, foure points are to bee handled. The firſt is, what is this curſe? Anſwer. A double death: the firſt of the bodie, the ſecond of the ſoule. The firſt is, the ſeparatiō of the body & ſoule. The ſecond is, the ſeparation of the whole man from God: not in reſpect of his vniuerſall power and preſence (for the very damned haue their moouing and being from him,) but in reſpect

A of his fauour, and ſpeciall loue, whereby God ceaſeth to be their God. And this is death indeede, whereof the firſt, is but a ſhadow: and this is the curſe of the law.

The ſecond point is, How Chriſt was a curſe, or accurſed, who is the fountaine of bleſſedneſſe? Anſw. He is not ſo by nature: for he is the naturall Sonne of God: nor by his owne fault: for he is the vnſpotted lambe of God: but by voluntarie diſpenſation: and therefore Paul ſaith, he was made a curſe. And he was made a curſe, firſt, becauſe he was ſet apart in the eternall counſell of the Father, Sonne, and holy Ghoſt, to be our redeemer, and conſequently to be a curſe. In this regard, the Father is ſaid to haue ſealed him, Ioh. 6. 27. and he is ſaid againe to be preordained before all worlds, 1. Pet. 1. 20. and giuen according to the counſell and foreknowledge of God. Act. 3. 22. Secondly, he was made a curſe, in that he was in time conſecrated to be our mediatour and ſo a curſe. And this conſecration was firſt in his baptiſme, in which he put vpon him our guilt, as we put off the ſame in ours; and ſecondly on the croſſe and paſſion; in which he tooke vnto him the puniſhment of our ſinne. And thus was he made a curſe. It may be obiected, that he is the Sonne of God: and therefore no curſe. Anſ. Chriſt muſt be conſidered as the Sonne of God, and againe as our pledge and ſuretie, Heb. 7. 22. In the firſt reſpect he was not accurſed, but in the ſecond.

The third point is, In what nature was Chriſt accurſed? Anſw. Whole Chriſt God-man, or Man-god, was accurſed? For the Lord of life (ſaith Paul) was crucified, and conſequently accurſed, 1. Cor. 2. 8. Yet this limitation muſt be added, that the curſe was not vpon the godhead of Chriſt, but onely in his fleſh or manhood. For he ſuffered (ſaith Peter) in the fleſh, 1. Pet. 4. 1. Moreouer, the ſoule of Chriſt was the more principall ſeate of the curſe, as it was the principall ſeate of ſinne. Therefore the Prophet ſaith, he made his ſoule an offering for ſinne, Iſa. 53. 10. and Chriſt ſaid, My ſoule is heauy to the death.

The fourth point is, How farforth Chriſt was accurſed? Anſw. In the firſt death there are two degrees, ſeparation of the bodie and ſoule, and the putrifaction of the bodie ſeparated. And Chriſt entred onely into the firſt, and not into the ſecond. For his body beeing dead indured no corruption. Againe, in the ſecond death there are two degrees. The firſt is, a ſeparation from God in ſenſe and feeling: and the ſecond is, an abſolute ſeparation from God. Into this ſecond degree of death Chriſt entred not, becauſe he ſaid in the midſt of his paſſion, My God, my God. And this abſolute ſeparation could not be without the diſſolution of the perſonall vnion. Into the firſt degree of the ſecond death he entred: namely, into the apprehenſion and feeling of the wrath and indignation of God due to mans ſinne. And this appeares by his bloudie ſweate of thicke and clottered blood, by his complaint he was forſaken: by his feares and ſorrowes in the time of death; in which he comes ſhort of ſundry martyrs; vnleſſe we acknowledge that he indured further paines of death then euer they did: by his condition, in that he takes vpon him the condition of the firſt Adam, who vpon his fall was to indure the firſt and ſecond death. Here two queſtions are to be demanded: the firſt; How and in what manner Chriſt ſuffered the wrath of God? Anſw. He indured it willingly of his owne accord: he did not onely in minde ſee it before his eyes, but alſo he felt it: it was laid and impoſed on him, and he encountred with it: but it had no dominion or lordſhip ouer B him, Act. 2. 24. The ſecond is, How much he ſuffered of the wrath of God? Anſ. The puniſhment he ſuffered was in value and meaſure anſwerable to all the ſinnes of all the Elect, paſt, preſent, and to come: the Godhead ſupporting the manhood, that it might be able to beare and ouercome the whole burden of the wrath of God. If it be ſaid, that a creature cannot haue an infinite apprehenſion of the wrath of God: I anſwer, it ſufficeth that God laid infinite wrath vpon him, and that he apprehended it according to the condition of a creature. For in ſo doing, he incountred with the whole wrath of God. One man in a breach, or at a bridge, may ſtand againſt a whole armie, C and beare the brunt of it: why may not then the manhood of Chriſt ſupported by the Godhead, beare the ſtreſſe of the whole wrath of God? Againſt this doctrine, ſundry things may be obiected.

Obiect. I. The Scripture aſcribes all to the blood of Chriſt, and therefore to the death of the bodie. Anſ. By blood, is meant a bloodie death: by the bloodie death, the death of the croſſe: by the death of the croſſe, a death accurſed, or the death of the body, ioyned with the malediction of the law.

Obiect. II. The ſuffering of the anger of God was not figured in Sacrament or ſacrafices. Anſ. The beaſt, whereof the burnt offering was made, was firſt tyed to the hornes of the altar: his blood then was ſhed: and laſtly, D he was all burnt vpon the altar vnto God; and hereby was figured the fierie wrath of God.

Obiect. III. Temporall death, or the curſe for halfe a day, cannot counteruaile eternall death. Anſ. Yes, in Chriſt. For if man could ſuffer and ouercome puniſhment in meaſure infinite, he ſhould not ſuffer eternally: but this no man nor angell can doe: & therefore man muſt ſuffer puniſhment for meaſure finite, for time infinite: becauſe the puniſhment muſt be anſwerable to God, whoſe maieſtie is infinite. Now Chriſt beeing God and man, ſuffered puniſhment indeede infinite: and therfore it was not neceſſary that he ſhould indure it eternally. Againe, here the dignitie of the perſon helpeth: for in that the Sonne of God ſuffered the curſe of the law for halfe a day, it is more, then if all men had ſuffered eternall death. Therefore the death of Chriſt in reſpect of the meaſure of the puniſhment, as alſo in reſpect of the value, and dignitie thereof, counteruailes death euerlaſting.

Obiect. IV. It is hard to ſay, that Chriſt ſuffered the paines of hell. Anſw. The Latine tranſlation (commonly receiued,) hath as much, that he could not be holden of the ſorrowes of hell, Act. 2. 24. And there is no offence to ſay, he ſuffered the paines of hel, ſo farre forth as this ſuffering may ſtand with the purity of his manhood, and with the truth of the perſonall vnion.

The vſe. Friers teach, that if Chriſt had pricked his finger, and let fall but one drop of blood, it had beene ſufficient to redeeme all the world. But they dreame. For Paul ſaith, He was made the curſe of the law, to redeeme vs. This had bin a needleſſe worke, if a pricke in the finger, or any puniſhment without death, would haue done the deede.

That Chriſt became a curſe for vs, it ſhews, the greatneſſe and horribleneſſe of our ſinnes: it ſhewes the grieuous hardneſſe of our hearts, that neuer almoſt mourne for them: it ſhewes the vnſpeakable loue and mercie of God, for which we are to be thankful for euer, and that all manner of waies.

In that the Sonne of God became a curſe for our ſinnes, we are put in minde, to ſee, acknowledge, and conſider them, and withall to bewaile them, and to humble our ſelues for them: and to deteſt them more and more, vnto the very death. For what is more worthy of hatred, then that which cauſeth the Sonne of God to be accurſed? They which beleeue that Chriſt by beeing a curſe hath redeemed them from the curſe of the law, doe in truth die vnto all their ſinnes, and liue vnto God. Many indeede profeſſing Chriſt, make no change of life at all: and the reaſon is, becauſe a ſecret Atheiſme makes them ſay in their hearts, There is no Chriſt, there is no curſe that was endured by Chriſt. Clenſe your hearts of this hidden Atheiſme, and looke that inwardly in your ſpirits, you die vnto your ſins, and liue to God.

In that Chriſt was obedient to his Father in bearing the curſe of the law, we are taught in all things to ſubiect our ſelues to the will of God. Our obedience muſt not only be in doing this or that, but alſo in ſuffering the miſeries laid on vs to the death: this is the beſt obedience of all, and the trueſt marke of Gods child, to obey in our ſufferings.

Moreouer, that Chriſt was accurſed, it is confirmed by the ſentence & decree of God: Curſed is euery one that hangeth on the tree. Deut. 21. 23. The ground of this ſentence is the ſinne of the malefactour: for whome God curſeth, he curſeth for his offence. And here it may be demaunded, why he that is ſtoned to death is not likewiſe accurſed? Anſw. He alſo is accurſed: but there are ſpecial reaſons, why the man hanged on the tree is curſed. Firſt, among the Iewes, they which were hanged, were moſt grieuous malefactours, as blaſphemers, and Idolatours: and their puniſhment was accordingly, moſt grieuous. Secondly, hanging (as among all nations, ſo among the Iewes) was a moſt odious, and infamous death. Thirdly, God did foreſee that the Meſſias ſhould die on the croſſe, and therefore he accurſed this kind of death. If it be ſaid, that there was no fault or offence in Chriſt; and therefore he could not be accurſed. I anſwer, that he became ſinne for vs, in that our ſinne was applied and imputed to him. It may be further obiected, that the theefe which repented, was not accurſed, though he were hanged on the tree. Anſw. As a theefe, he was accurſed; as he was a theefe, and repented, the curſe was remooued. For the law in the curſes thereof, giues place to the Goſpel: iudgement yeelds to mercie: and the Goſpel puts an exception to the law.

The vſe. If the malefactour hanged, be accurſed, and defile the earth: how vile and accurſed is the liuing malefactour, the blaſphemer, adulterer, murtherer, &c. who hath entred no degree of puniſhment? Let this be conſidered, to terrifie offenders.

Againe, let vs conſider the ſcope of this law. Becauſe he that hangs on the tree, is accurſed: therefore ſaith the law of God, he muſt be taken downe and buried. Marke the equity of this law: and that is, that things euill and accurſed, are to be remooued from the eye and ſenſe of man. This charge the Lord giues of leſſe matters, namely, of ſights vndecent, and vnſeemely. Deut. 23. 15. Againe, we are commanded not ſo much as to name fornication, vncleanneſſe, couetouſneſſe, ieſting, fooliſh talking, &c. Eph. 5. 3. Here we are to be put in mind, that the Plaies (commonly in vſe) are to be baniſhed out of all Chriſtian ſocieties. For they doe nothing els but reuiue and repreſent the vile and wicked faſhions of the world, and the miſdemeanour of men, which are things accurſed, and therefore to be buried, and not once to be ſpoken of. Againe, all euill in our example, whether in word, or in deede, muſt be buried, as much as may be: for it defileth, and is accurſed.

Here it may be demanded, how this law of God, (he is accurſed: therefore let him be taken downe, and buried) ſtands with the order vſed in this and other countries, in which men are hanged in chaines for the terror of the world? Anſw. Iudiciall lawes, if they haue in them morall equitie, and ſerue directly to fence in the precepts of the Decalogue, are perpetual, and bind all men, els not. As for the iudiciall determinations of this or that manner of puniſhment, they concerne vs not: for God hath left euery nation free, though not in reſpect of puniſhment, yet in reſpect of the manner and order thereof.

The third point, whereby our redemption is deſcribed, is the end thereof, that the bleſſing of Abraham, that is, righteouſneſſe and life euerlaſting, may come vpon the Gentiles. Here two things are to be conſidered. The firſt is, whence comes the benediction of Abraham? Anſw. From the curſed death of Chriſt. For thus are the words, He was made a curſe for vs, that the benediction of Abraham might come on the Gentiles. Marke here how God workes one contrarie by the other. In the creation, he made ſomething, not of ſomething, but of nothing: he called light out of darkeneſſe: he kils, and then makes aliue, Hoſ. 6. he ſends men to heauen, by the gates of hell: he gaue ſight by a temper of ſpittle and clay, a fitte meanes to put out ſight. In the worke of our redemption he giues life, not by life but by death, and the bleſſing by the curſe. This ſhewes the wiſedome, and power of God: and it teacheth vs in the worke of our conuerſion and ſaluation, not to goe by ſenſe and feeling; becauſe God can, and doth work one contrarie, in, and by the other.

The ſecond point is, where this benediction of Abraham is to be found? Anſ. The text ſaith, It is extant in Chriſt Ieſus, who is as it were the ſtore-houſe of Gods bleſſing, and the diſpenſer of it to all nations. In him are hid all treaſures of wiſedome, and knowledge. Col. 2. God and the Lambe are all things to all the Elect in the kingdome of heauen. Reu. 21. Here we ſee the right way to become rich: and that is, aboue al things to ſeeke to be true and liuely members of Chriſt: for if he be ours we can want nothing. Rom. 8. 32. Matth. 6. 33. Pſal. 34. 10. This is a moſt ſure way to procure vnto vs all good things that he ſees to be neceſſarie for vs. For Chriſt is the ſtore-houſe of the benediction of Abraham. Againe, this muſt teach them that beleeue in Chriſt, to be content in any eſtate, be it better or worſe, for true riches is the bleſſing of God, and this bleſſing is in Chriſt. This is the truth, if we could diſcerne of things that differ. Thirdly, in our pouertie, and in the middeſt of all our wants and loſſes, we muſt comfort our ſelues. For though we loſe neuer ſo much, yet we retaine the principall, and that is Chriſt, who is the benediction of Abraham.

The fourth point is, an other end of our Redemption, That we might receiue the promiſe of the ſpirit by faith. For the better vnderſtanding of this, foure queſtions may be demaunded. The firſt is, what is meant by the promiſe? Anſw. The promiſe of God made in the old Teſtament, that he would powre out his ſpirit vpon all fleſh. Iſa. 44. 3. and Ioel. 2. 28. And here it is ſaid, that this promiſe is fulfilled to the nations, when they beleeue. Marke here how the promiſes of God lie as voide, dead, and of none effect, til the particular time of their accompliſhment. God promiſed Iacob that his poſteritie ſhall be a great nation after 430. yeares: for which time they remaine in thrall and bondage; but the very night after the former time was expired, nothing, no not the raging ſea could ſtop their deliuerance. Exod. 12. 41. God promiſed deliuerance after 70. yeares captiuitie to the Iſraelites in Babylon. When this time was expired, Daniel prayed, and at the very beginning of his ſupplications, the decree of God for deliuerance came forth. Dan. 9. 23. The viſion of God (ſaith the Prophet) is for an appointed time. Hab. 2. 1. and ſo is the promiſe. This muſt teach vs to be content, if after much praying, we finde not the fruite of our praiers: becauſe there is an appointed time for the accompliſhing of them. In this reſpect Dauid ſaith, that his eyes failed, and he was hoarſe in praying. Pſal. 69. 4.

The ſecond queſtion is, what is meant by the giuing, or ſending of the Spirit? Anſw. Without any alteration or change of place, it ſignifies two things. The firſt is, Order betweene the perſons, whereby the Father, and the Sonne worke mediately by the holy Ghoſt, and the holy Ghoſt immediatly from them. The ſecond is, that the Spirit doth maniſeſt his preſence by diuine effect in vs. In this reſpect he is ſaid to be ſent, or giuen of the Father and the Sonne.

The third point is: In what order is the ſpirit giuen? For it ſeemes, that we firſt our ſelues beleeue, and then receiue the ſpirit? Anſ. Men are ſaid to receiue the ſpirit, when they receiue ſome new gift of the ſpirit, or the increaſe of ſome old gift. Ioh. 20. 22. Againe, to ſpeake properly, faith and the receiuing of the ſpirit, are for time both together. For firſt of all, we heare the promiſe of God; then we begin to meditate, and apply the ſaid promiſe to our ſelues to ſtriue againſt doubting, and to deſire to beleeue: and in doing of all this, we receiue the ſpirit. To beleeue, is the firſt grace in vs that concernes our ſaluation: and when we begin to beleeue, we begin to receiue the ſpirit; and when we firſt receiue Gods ſpirit, we begin to beleeue. And thus by our faith receiue we the ſpirit: & thus alſo the ſpirit dwels in vs by faith. Eph. 3. 17. And we muſt not imagine, that we may, or can beleeue of our ſelues, without the operation of the ſpirit.

The fourth point is, for what end we receiue the ſpirit? Anſ. For ſixe. For illumination of our minds, 1. Ioh. 2. 27. 1. Cor. 2. 12. for regeneration, whereby the image of God is reſtored in vs, Ioh. 3. for the gouernement of our counſels, wils, affections, actions, Iſa. 11. 1. Rom. 8. 14. for the effecting of that coniunction, whereby we are vnited to Chriſt our head. 1. Cor. 6. 17. for conſolation, Rom. 8. 16. Laſtly, for confirmation in our faith and euery good duty, 2. Cor. 1. 22. Ephe. 1. 13.

This receiuing of the ſpirit, is one ſpeciall end of our redemption: and therefore it is moſt neceſſarie for vs, to haue the Spirit of God dwelling in vs. If we haue not the Spirit, we are not Chriſts: and without it, we can doe nothing.

Wee muſt for this cauſe doe ſuch things, whereby we may obtaine and receiue a plentifull meaſure of Gods ſpirite. Repent (ſaith Peter) and ye ſhall receiue the holy Ghoſt.

Againe, we muſt carefully retaine and preſerue the grace of the ſpirit in vs; by meditation in the word of God; by earneſt and frequent prayer; by auoyding all ſuch acts, in word, or deede, that may make a breach in conſcience: for whatſoeuer offends conſcience, quenches the ſpirit. Laſtly, by ſauouring the things of the ſpirite, Rom. 8.5. that is, by thinking on things ſpirituall, by affecting of them, and delighting in them.

15 Brethren, I ſpeake as men doe: though it be but a mans couenant, when it is confirmed, no man doth abrogate it, or adde any thing thereto.

16 Now to Abraham and his ſeede were the promiſes made. Hee ſaith not, And to the ſeedes, as of many; but, And to thy ſeede, as of one, which is Chriſt.

17 And this I ſay, that the Lawe which was 430. yeares after, can not diſanull the couenant that was before confirmed of God in reſpect of Chriſt, that it ſhould make the promiſe of none effect.

18 For if the inheritance be of the Lawe, it is no more by promiſe; but God gaue it vnto Abraham by promiſe.

In theſe words, Paul meetes with a ſecond Exception, or obiection, made againſt that which hee heere principally ſtands vpon: namely, that the bleſſing of Abraham is conueyed to the Gentiles, and that by Chriſt. The obiection may bee framed thus: The promiſe made to Abraham, cannot now pertaine to the Gentiles, becauſe the Lawe was added to it, and by the Law it is abrogated: and therefore the Gentiles are to be iuſtified and ſaued by the obſeruation of the Law. To this obiection, Paul makes a double anſwer. One is, that the promiſe can not be abrogated: the ſecond, that if it might bee abrogated, yet the Lawe can not doe it. The firſt he confirmes on this manner:

The Teſtament of God confirmed, cannot be abrogated:
The promiſes made to Abraham and his ſeede, which is Chriſt, are his Teſtament confirmed:
Therefore they cannot be abrogated.

The Propoſition is expreſſed in the 17. verſe, and is confirmed by compariſon, thus. The teſtament of man after it is confirmed, may not be abrogated: much leſſe the teſtament of God, verſe 15. The minor is propounded in the 16. and 17. verſes. Now I come to ſpeake of the words as they lie.

Brethren] Paul had before called them fooles, and that iuſtly, becauſe they fell from the doctrine which hee taught them, to another Goſpell. And yet heere he calls them Brethren. And hence let vs learne, that in diuiſion of iudgement and opinion, there muſt be no diuiſion but vnity of affection. It is, and hath been alwayes the plague of the church, that diuiſion of heart and affection there takes place, where any diuiſion is in iudgement, though men erre of infirmitie. This euill cauſeth more to be condemned for heretikes, then indeede ought to bee: it maketh ſchiſmes where none ſhould bee: it maketh diſſentions to be incurable, which otherwiſe might be cut off. And therefore if diſſentions in iudgement ariſe, wee muſt remember to ſuppreſſe enuy, hatred, pride, ſelfe-loue, and let chriſtian loue beare ſway.

Againe, heere we ſee it is lawfull, to ſpeake in Sermons as men doe, ſo it bee done after the example of Paul, with theſe cautions. Firſt, it muſt be done ſparingly, and ſoberly, without oſtentation. Secondly, it muſt bee done vpon a iuſt cauſe, as when the ſayings of men ſerue to conuince the hearers, and that in their conſciences. Thirdly, a differẽce muſt be made between the word of man, and the word of God; leſt in adding the one to the other, the word of God loſe his grace and excellencie. Laſtly, Gods word onely muſt bee the foundation of the doctrine which is taught, and the word of man is too added, in reſpect of our infirmitie to giue light, or to conuince.

That which Paul ſpeakes after the maner of men, is a principle of Lawe, or a concluſion of the light of nature, namely, that a couenant or teſtament confirmed, may not be abrogated. Paul ſaith, it is the propertie of them that are of reprobate minds to be trucebreakers, Rom. 1.30. Hence ſundry queſtions may be reſolued. The firſt is, whether Legacies giuen to the maintenance of the Maſſe, may bee applied to the maintenance of the true worſhip of God? Anſwer. The teſtatour in the giuing of ſuch Legacies, hath a double intention: one is generall, and that is to preſerue the worſhip of God: the other is ſpeciall, and that is, to preſerue the idolatrie of the Maſſe. In this hee erreth, and therefore his will may be changed. For teſtaments vnlawfully made, may be abrogated. In the generall hee erred not: and therefore the goods may lawfully be applied to the maintenance of the true worſhip of God. But it may be ſaid, that the next heires may recall them when the Maſſe is aboliſhed. I anſwer, No. Becauſe they may ſtill bee applied to the publique good of the Church. The affection of the dead was good in this caſe, though their iudgement was naught: and therefore regard is to be had of their affection and intent.

The ſecond queſtion is, whether we are to keepe couenant with heretikes, and enemies? Anſwer. Yea: for the principle, A couenant confirmed, may not be abrogated, is the concluſion of Nature, which bindes all men without exception, at all times, if the couenant be lawfull.

The third queſtion is, what if dammages and loſſes follow vpon the couenant made and confirmed, muſt it then be obſerued? Anſwer. Of couenants ſome are ſingle, that is, bare promiſes, not confirmed by oath; and ſome againe are with oath. Againe, ſome couenants are meere ciuill, being made of man to man; and ſome are more then ciuill, being made of man to God, as contracts of marriage. Now if couenants be ſingle couenants, and meerely ciuill, then may they bee changed by the makers, or by their ſucceſſours, if hurts and loſſes ariſe. Yet if couenants bee confirmed by oath, and if they bee made to God, they may not be changed, ſo long as they are lawfull, though great loſſes inſue. Reade the example of Ioſua, Ioſ.9.18. A good man ſweareth, and changeth not, though hee loſe thereby, Pſal 15.4.

The fourth queſtion is, whether a contract may not be diſſolued, when one of the parties hath a diſeaſe contagious in deadly maner, and incurable? Anſ. If ſuch a diſeaſe follow the contract, the marriage not conſummate, wee may preſume that God doth diſſolue the contract. And the couenant diſſolued by God, we may without danger hold to be abrogated.

The laſt queſtion is, Whether the church of Rome hath not dealt wickedly in altering the laſt teſtament of Chriſt, when it miniſtreth the Lords Supper vnder one kinde? Anſwer. They ſinne againſt the light of nature, which teacheth vs not to abrogate the teſtaments of men, much leſſe the teſtament of God, It is alleadged, that wee receiue whole Chriſt vnder one kinde. Anſwere. True indeede. But wee muſt conſider the end of the Sacrament is to ſignifie and repreſent perfect nouriſhment, in, and by Chriſt: now perfect nouriſhment is not in bread alone, but in bread and wine, and by them both ioyned together, is ſignified, that Chriſt is the bread and the water of life: now to aboliſh the cuppe, is to aboliſh the principall vſe of the Sacrament, and to leſſen our comfort.

In the 16. verſe Paul ſaith, The promiſes were made to Abraham, in the plurall number: becauſe they were ſometime made to Abraham, ſometime to his ſeede, and ſometime to both: and they were often repeated to Abraham, and therefore are called promiſes, though in ſubſtance they are but one. The ſeed of Abraham here mentioned, is the ſeed not of the fleſh, but of the promiſe, Rom. 9.7. and this ſeede is firſt Chriſt Ieſus, and then all that beleeue in Chriſt. For all theſe are giuen to Abraham as children by the promiſe and Election of God. Moreouer, this ſeed is not many (as Paul obſerueth) but one: that is, one in number. It is obiected that the word [ſeed] is a name collectiue, and ſignifies the whole poſteritie of Abraham. Anſwer. It doth ſometime, but not alwaies: for Eue ſaith of Seth, God hath giuen me another ſeede, Geneſ. 4.25. that is, another ſonne.

Laſtly, it is ſaide, that this one particular ſeed of Abraham is Chriſt Ieſus. Here by the name Chriſt, firſt and principally the Mediatour is meant, and then ſecondly all Iewes and Gentiles beleeuing, that are ſet and grafted into Chriſt by their faith. For Paul ſaith, Rom.9.8. that the children of God, or the children of the promiſe, are the ſeede of Abraham: Againe, Gal.3.29. They which are of Chriſt, are the ſeede of Abraham. And the name Chriſt ſignifies, not onely the head or Mediatour, God and man, but alſo the Church gathered partly of Iewes, and partly of Gentiles. The bodie (ſaith Paul) *is one, but the members are many: euen ſo is Chriſt, 1.Corin.*12.12. that is, the church of Chriſt. Againe, *I beare in my bodie the remainders of the ſufferings of Chriſt, Coloſſ.*1.24. and the church is called *the complement of Chriſt, Epheſ.*1.23. It may be obiected, that by this meanes the ſeede of Abraham, is many, and not one: becauſe Chriſt and all beleeuers are the ſeede. Anſw. They are all one in reſpect of one and the ſame bleſſing of God, which is firſt giuen to Chriſt, and by Chriſt to all that beleeue in him. *All are one in Chriſt, Gala.*3.28. and *hee gathers things in heauen and earth into one head, Epheſ.*1.10.

It is here to be obſerued, that the promiſes made to Abrahã, are firſt made to Chriſt, and then in Chriſt to all that beleeue in him, be they Iewes or Gentiles. This concluſion is of great vſe. Firſt, by it wee learne the difference of the promiſes of the Lawe and the Goſpell. The promiſes of the Lawe, are directed and made to the perſon of euery man particularly: the promiſes of the Goſpel are firſt directed, and made to Chriſt, and then by conſequent, to them that are by faith ingrafted into Chriſt.

Secondly, by this wee learne to acknowledge the communion that is betweene Chriſt and vs. Chriſt as Mediatour, is firſt of all elected, and we in him: Chriſt is firſt iuſtified, that is, acquit of our ſinnes, and wee iuſtified in him: hee is heire of the world, and wee heires in him: hee died vpon the croſſe, not as a priuate perſon, but as a publike perſon repreſenting all the Elect: and all the Elect died in him, and with him. In the ſame maner they riſe with him to life, and ſit at the right hand of God with him in glorie.

Thirdly, heere wee ſee the ground of the certaintie of perſeuerance, of all them that are the true children of God. For the office of Chriſt to which hee is ſet apart, is to receiue the promiſe of God for vs, and to applie it vnto vs. And this worke is done by Chriſt without impediment, and without repentance on his part. The ſeale and foundation of our ſaluation is this, that God accepts and knowes vs for his, 2.Timoth. 2.19. and that which concernes vs, is, that we muſt worſhip God in ſpirit and trueth, and depart from iniquitie.

Laſtly, here is comfort againſt the conſideration of our vnworthines. Thou ſaieſt thou art vnworthie of the mercy of God, and therefore haſt no hope. And I ſay againe: doeſt thou truely exerciſe thy ſelfe in the ſpirituall exerciſes of faith, inuocation, repentance? be not diſcouraged: thou muſt not receiue the promiſe immediately of God, but Chriſt muſt doe it for thee. Though thou be vnworthie, yet there is dignitie, and worthineſſe ſufficient in him. If thou ſay that thou muſt at the leaſt receiue the promiſe at the hand of Chriſt, I adde further, that hee will not quench the flaxe that doth but ſmoake, neither will he breake the bruiſed reede. He accepts the weake apprehenſion, if it bee in trueth. And our ſaluation ſtãds in this, not that we know and apprehend him, but that hee knows and apprehends vs firſt of all.

V. 17. This I ſay] In the former verſes Paul hath laid downe two grounds: one is, that teſtaments of men confirmed, may not be abrogated: the other, that the promiſes were made to Abraham and his ſeede, which is Chriſt. Now, what of all this, may ſome man ſay? Paul therefore addes theſe words, This I ſay, that is, the ſcope & intent of all my ſpeech is, to ſhew, that the couenant or teſtament confirmed by God, can not be abrogated: and ſecondly, if it might ſo bee, yet that the law could not abrogate the teſtamẽt, becauſe it was giuen 430. yeares after the confirmation of the ſaid teſtament. And becauſe it might be doubtfull what Paul meanes, when he ſaith, the couenant confirmed can not be abrogated, he explaines himſelfe in the end of the verſe by ſaying, the promiſe cannot be made of no effect.

It is here to be obſerued, that Paul ſaith, the promiſe made to Abraham is a couenant or teſtament. It is a Couenant or compact, becauſe God for his part promiſeth remiſſion of ſinnes and life euerlaſting, and requireth faith on our part. In reſpect of this mutuall obligation, it hath in it the forme of a couenant. It is alſo a Will, or Teſtament in two reſpects. Firſt, becauſe the promiſe is confirmed by the death of the mediatour, Hebr. 9.15. Secondly, the things promiſed, as remiſſion of ſins, and life euerlaſting, are giuen after the manner of legacies, that is, freely, without our deſert, or procurement. In this we ſee the great goodnes of God, who vouchſafeth to name them in his Teſtament, that haue made couenant with the deuill, and are children of wrath by nature, as we all are.

Againe, in that the promiſe is a teſtament, remiſſion of ſinnes, and life euerlaſting, is a Legacie: and for the obtainment of them, we muſt bring nothing vnto God, but hunger and thirſt after them, and make ſuite vnto God for them, by asking, ſeeking, knocking. Thus are all Legacies obtained, and there is A no more required on our part, but to receiue and accept them. And though wee be neuer ſo vnworthie in our ſelues, yet ſhall it ſuffice for the hauing of the bleſſing of God, if our names bee found in the Teſtament of God.

Againe, Paul ſaith, that the promiſe made to Abraham is a couenant confirmed of God. It may be demaunded, by what meanes it was confirmed? Anſ. By oath, Heb. 6.17. Againe, it may be demanded, to whom it was confirmed? Anſ. To Abraham, as being the father of all the faithfull, and then to his ſeede, that is, firſt to the Mediatour Chriſt, and conſequently, to euery beleeuer, whether Iew, or B Gentile. For Abraham in the firſt making, and in the confirmation thereof, muſt bee conſidered as a publike perſon, repreſenting all the faithfull.

Here againe we ſee Gods goodneſſe. We are bound ſimply to beleeue his bare word; yet in regard of our weakeneſſe, he is content to ratifie his promiſe by oath, that there might be no occaſion of vnbeliefe.

Againe, here we are admoniſhed to reſt by faith on the promiſe of God, as Abraham did, when there is no hope. Some may ſay, I could doe ſo, if God would ſpeake to mee, as he did to Abraham. I anſwer againe, when God ſpake to Abraham, in him he ſpake to all his ſeed: and therefore to thee whoſoeuer C thou art, that beleeueſt in Chriſt.

And hence wee are to gather ſure hope of life euerlaſting. For in the perſon of Abraham, God hath ſpoken to vs: he hath made promiſe of bleſſing to vs: he hath made couenant with vs: and hee hath ſworne vnto vs. What cã we more require of him? what better ground of true comfort? Heb. 6.17, 18.

Laſtly, in that God thus confirmes vnto vs the promiſe of life euerlaſting, it muſt incourage vs to all diligence in the vſe of all good meanes, whereby we may attaine to the condition of Abraham: and it muſt arme vs to al patience in bearing the miſeries and calamities that fall out, in the ſtrait way to eternall life.

D Further, Paul ſaith, that the promiſe is a couenant confirmed, and that in reſpect of Chriſt: becauſe he is the ſcope and foundation of all the promiſes of God: partly by merite, and partly by efficacie. By merit: becauſe he hath procured by his death and paſſion, remiſſion of ſinnes and life euerlaſting. By his efficacie, becauſe he ſeales vp vnto vs in our conſciences, remiſſion of ſinnes, and withall reſtores in vs the Image of God. The vſe. If Chriſt be the ground of the promiſe, then is he the ground and fountaine of all the bleſſings of God. And for this cauſe, the right way to obtaine any bleſſing of God, is firſt to receiue the promiſe, and in the promiſe, Chriſt; and Chriſt being ours; in him, and from him, we ſhall receiue all things neceſſary.

The ſecond anſwer of Paul to the former obiection, is, that if the promiſe made to Abraham might be diſannulled, yet the lawe could not doe it. And hee giues a double reaſon. The firſt is drawne from the circumſtance of time. Becauſe the promiſe or couenant was made with Abraham, and continued by God 430. yeares before the lawe was giuen: therefore, ſaith Paul, the lawe was not giuen to diſannull the promiſe.

Againſt this reaſon it may bee obiected, that Abrahams ſeede, was but 400. yeares in a ſtrange land, Geneſis 15. 13. Anſwer. Moſes ſpeakes of the time that was from the beginning of Abrahams ſeede, or from the birth of Iſaac to the giuing of the lawe: and Paul here ſpeakes of the time that was betweene the giuing of the promiſe to Abraham, and the giuing of the law: and that was 30. yeares before the birth of Iſaac.

Againe, it may be obiected, that the Iſraelites were in Egypt 430. yeares, Exod. 12.40. The dwelling of the children of Iſrael, while they dwelled in Egypt was 430. yeares. Therefore it ſeemeth there was more time betweene the promiſe, and the lawe. Anſwer. The meaning of Moſes in this place, is thus much: that the dwelling of the children of Iſrael, while they dwelt as pilgrims, was for the ſpace of 430 yeares: & that in part of this time they dwelt in Egypt as ſtrangers, The words may thus be tranſlated, The dwelling or Peregrination of the children of Iſrael, in which they dwelt in Egypt, was 430. yeares. And this peregrination beginnes in the calling of Abraham, and ends at the giuing of the law.

In Pauls example, we ſee what it is to ſerch the Scriptures, not only to conſider the ſcope of whole bookes, and the parts thereof, but to ponder and weigh euery ſentence, and euery part of euery ſentence, and euery circumſtance of time, place, perſon. This is the right forme of the ſtudy of diuinitie to bee vſed of the ſonnes of the Prophets.

The ſecond reaſon vſed by Paul, is in the 18. verſe, it may be framed thus. If the lawe aboliſh the promiſe, then the inheritance muſt come by the law: but that cannot be. He prooues it thus: If the inheritance of life eternall be by the law, it is no more by the promiſe: but it is by the promiſe: becauſe God gaue it vnto Abraham freely by promiſe: therefore it comes not by the law.

The oppoſition betweene the law and the promiſe ſhews that Paul in this Epiſtle ſpeaks not onely of the Ceremoniall, but alſo of the Morall. For the greateſt oppoſition is betweene the morall lawe, and the free promiſe of God.

Let vs againe marke heere the difference betweene the Law and the Goſpel. The Law promiſeth life but to the worker, for his workes, or vpon condition of obedience. The Goſpel (called by Paul, the promiſe,) offers and giues life freely without the condition of any worke, and requires nothing but A the receiuing of that which is offered. It may be obiected, that the Goſpel promiſeth life vpon the condition of our faith. Anſ. The Goſpel hath in it no morall condition of any thing to be done of vs. Indeed faith is mentioned after the forme and manner of a condition: but in truth it is the free gift of God, as well as life eternall: and it is to be conſidered not as a worke done of vs, but as an inſtrument to receiue things promiſed. This difference of the law and the Goſpel muſt be kept as a treaſure: for it is the ground of many worthie concluſions in true religion. And the ignorance of this point in the Church of Rome hath beene the decay of Religion, ſpecially in the article of Iuſtification.

B Thirdly, we muſt here obſerue, the oppoſition betweene the law and the free promiſe of God, in iuſtification of a ſinner. For if life come by the lawe, it comes not by the promiſe, ſaith Paul. And *Rom.*4.14. If they which are of the law are heires, the pomiſe is of none effect. By this we ſee the Church of Rome ouerturnes and abrogates, the free promiſe of God. For they of that Church teach, that the firſt iuſtification is by meere mercie: and that the ſecond, is by the workes of the lawe. But the Law and the Promiſe cannot be mixed together, more then fire and water: the Law ioyned with the free promiſe, diſannulls the ſaid promiſe.

Laſtly, in that Paul ſaith, God gaue and C freely beſtowed the inheritance by the promiſe, it muſt be conſidered, that this Giuing is no priuate, but a publike donation. For Abraham muſt be conſidered as a publike perſon: and that which was giuen to him, was in him giuen to all that ſhould beleeue as he did. Art thou then a true beleeuer? doeſt thou truely turne vnto God? heere is thy comfort: the inheritance of eternall life is as ſurely thine, as it was Abrahams, when he beleeued. For thou art partaker of the ſame promiſe with him: and when God gaue him life, hee gaue thee alſo life in him. Againe, perſons backward, and careleſſe, muſt be ſtirred vp with all dili- D gence to vſe all good meanes that they may beleeue truely in Chriſt, and truely turne to God. For ſo ſoone as they begin to beleeue, and to turne vnto God, they are entred into the condition of Abraham, and if they continue, they ſhall ſit downe with Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob, in the kingdome of heauen: and after this life they ſhall reſt in the boſome of Abraham. For that which was done to Abraham, ſhall be done to all that walke in his ſteppes.

19. Wherefore then ſerues the Lawe? it was added, becauſe of tranſgreſſions, vntill the ſeede was come to which the promiſe was made: and it was ordained by Angels in the hand of a Mediatour.

20. Now a Mediatour is not of one: but God is one.

Paul hath prooued before, that the Law doth not aboliſh the promiſe: his laſt reaſon was,

A way; becauſe then the inheritance ſhould be by the law which cannot be. Againſt this reaſon in the nineteenth & twentieth verſes, there is an obiection made, and anſwered. The obiection is this. If life and iuſtice come not by the Lawe, the law then is in vaine. And this obiection is expreſſed by way of interrogation, Wherefore then ſerues the Lawe? The anſwer is in the next words, It is added for tranſgreſſions, that is, for the reuealing of ſinne, and the puniſhment thereof, and for the conuincing of men touching their ſinnes. *Rom.*3.19, 20. Moreouer, Paul ſets downe the time or continuance of this vſe of the Lawe, when he ſaith, Till the ſeede came to which the promiſe B was made: that is, till Chriſt come and accompliſh the worke of mans redemption. Here two queſtions may be demanded. The firſt is, whether the law ſerue to reueale ſinne after the comming of Chriſt? For Paul ſaith, It is added for tranſgreſſions, till Chriſt. Anſ. The Law ſerues to reueale ſinne, euen to the end of the world: yet in reſpect of the legall or Moſaicall manner of reuealing ſinne, it is added, but till Chriſt. For the Lawe before Chriſt did conuince men of ſinne, not onely by precepts and threatnings; but alſo by Rites and Ceremonies. For Iewiſh waſhings, and ſacrifices, were reall confeſſions of ſinne. And they were an handwriting againſt vs, as C Paul ſaith. And this manner of reuealing ſinne, ended in the death of Chriſt. Coloſſians 2.14. Againe, the Miniſterie of condemnation which was in force till Chriſt, at his comming is turned into the Miniſterie of the ſpirit, and of grace. 2.*Cor.*3.11. For vnder the law there was plentifull reuelation of ſin, with darke and ſmall reuelation of grace: but at the comming of Chriſt, men ſaw heauen opened, and there was a plentifull reuelation of ſinne, with a more plentifull reuelation of grace and mercie. And in this reſpect alſo the law is ſaid to be till Chriſt.

The ſecond queſtion is, whether the ſeed of Abraham were before Chriſt, or not? Anſwer. All that followed the ſteppes of Abrahams faith before Chriſt, were his ſeede. D Yet were they not that ſeede, that is, the principall ſeede, who is Chriſt, who is the ſeede bleſſed in himſelfe, and giuing bleſſedneſſe to all other. And the beleeuers that were before Chriſt or after him, are the ſeede of Abraham, in reſpect they are ſet into Chriſt, who is principally the ſeed mentioned in this text.

When Paul ſaith, ordained by Angels, in the hand of a Mediatour, hee makes a declaration of that which hee had ſaid before by an euident ſigne, on this manner. That the Lawe ſerueth to diſcouer tranſgreſſions, it appeares by this, that the Iewes could not abide to receiue the Lawe immediately from God, but it was deliuered by Angels, and receiued by the hand of a Mediatour: and this argues mans guiltines, and his diſagreement with God; becauſe a Mediator is of two, at leaſt, & of two being at difference between themſelues.

The law is ſaid to be ordained or diſpoſed by Angels, becauſe they were attendants on God in the Mount, when the law was deliuered. Secondly, they were witneſſes and approouers of the deliuerie. Thirdly, it may be, the voice of God whereby the lawe was publiſhed in the hearing of all the Iſraelites, was vttered and pronounced by the miniſterie of Angels: for the holy Ghoſt ſaith, *the word ſpoken by Angels was ſtedfaſt. Hebr.*2.2. that is, the law. It may be ſaid, all this prooues not, that Angels ordained the law. Anſ. Often in Scripture, the worke or action of the principall Agent, is aſcribed to the inſtrument, or miniſter. The Saints are ſaid to iudge the world, 1.*Cor.*6. whereas indeed they are no more but witneſſes and approouers of this iudgement. In the ſame manner Timothie is ſaid to ſaue himſelfe and others. 1.*Tim.*4.16. The laſt trumpet is ſounded by Angels. *Math.*24.31. and it is called the voyce of an Archangel, and the trumpe of God. 1.*Theſſ.*4.

Moreouer Paul ſaith, The lawe was deliuered by the hand of a Mediator; that is, of Chriſt, (as ſome thinke:) but that cannot be: for the hand of a Mediatour ſignifies the miniſterie and ſeruice of a Mediatour, and this ſeruice is inferiour to the ſeruice of Angels: becauſe the law was deliuered by Angels, and receiued of them by a Mediatour. Therefore the Mediatour here mentioned, is Moſes, who ſtood betweene the people and God, in the deliuery of the law. *Deut.*5.5. It may be obiected, that there is but one Mediator, Chriſt. 1.*Tim.*2.8. Anſwer. Mediator of reconciliation is onely one, and that is Chriſt: and Moſes is a Mediatour onely in the relating and reporting the law from God to the Iſraelites.

Paul addes, that a Mediatour is not of one, that is, that euery Mediatour is of two at the leaſt, and of two at variance, and diſagreement. And he ſaith further, that God is one: that is, alwayes the ſame, and like himſelfe, without change. And the reaſon of the ſpeech is this. Paul hath taught, that the lawe was giuen by a Mediatour, and that this declared a difference betweene God and man. Now it might be ſaid, where is the fault in this difference, and who is the cauſe of it? Paul ſaith, not God, but man: becauſe God is alwayes one and the ſame.

The vſe. In that the Law is for tranſgreſſions, wee are taught to examine and ſearch our hearts and liues by the lawe of God. *Zephan.*2.1. Fanne you, O nation, not worthy to be loued. *La.*3.40. Let vs ſearch our hearts, and turne againe to the Lord. That we may the better examin our ſelues, 4. rules muſt be obſerued.

The firſt, when any one ſinne is forbidden in any commandement of the Law, vnder it all the ſinnes of the ſame kind are forbidden, all cauſes of them, and all occaſions.

The ſecond, a commandement negatiue includes the affirmatiue, and bindes vs not onely to abſtaine from euill, but alſo to doe the contrary good.

The third is, that euery commaundement muſt be vnderſtood with a curſe annexed to it, though the curſe be not expreſſed.

The fourth is, that we muſt eſpecially examine our ſelues by the firſt and laſt commaundements. For the firſt forbids the firſt motions of our hearts againſt God, and the laſt forbids the firſt motions of our hearts againſt our neighbour: though there be no conſent to doe the euill which we thinke. Paul ſaith of himſelfe, that the commaundement, Thou ſhalt not luſt, was it that eſpecially humbled him, Rom. 7.

According to theſe and other rules, (which now I omit) wee muſt with ſpeciall care examine our ſelues. The want of this duetie, cauſeth men to rot away in their ſinnes, without remorce or true repentance: and it is the cauſe that ſo many men profit ſo litle in hearing the word preached; becauſe they know not what ſinne meanes, neither can they ſearch aright their conſciences and liues.

Moreouer, after we haue begunne to practiſe this duety, we muſt often (as occaſion ſhall be giuen) renue it to the end. Conſider Dauids example, Pſal. 119. 59.

Where Paul ſaith, that the law is added till Chriſt, we ſee that the Legall miniſterie of death is aboliſhed now; and that wee are vnder the miniſterie of the ſpirit and life. And for this cauſe we in theſe laſt dayes, that are Miniſters of the word, muſt preach the doctrine of ſaluation plainely, to the very conſciences of men, 2. Cor. 4. 1. Againe, the people of theſe dayes ought to abound in knowledge, and their obedience ſhould be anſwerable to the meaſure of their knowledge. And if after much preaching in theſe dayes of light, the Goſpel be hid, (as it is to very many, who remaine ſtill in ignorance, and diſobedience) it is a fearefull ſigne vnto them of their condemnation, 2. Cor. 4. 4.

In that the Lawe of God was ordained or deliuered by Angels, wee are put in minde to reuerence it, and to eſteeme it as a treaſure. Secondly, we are to feare to breake the leaſt commandement of the law, becauſe the Angels that were ordainers of the lawe, doe (no doubt) obſerue the keepers & the breakers of it, and are ready preſt to be witneſſes and reuengers againſt them that offend. Stephen vpbraides the Iewes, that the Law was giuen by the diſpenſation of Angels, and yet they brake it, Act. 7. 53. Thirdly, if thou offend and breake the lawe, repent with ſpeede: for that is the deſire & ioy of Angels. They that deliuered the law, reioyce to ſee the keeping of it. Laſtly, if thou ſinne and repent not, looke for ſhame and confuſion before God and his Angels.

Becauſe Moſes was a mediatour to the Iewes, Papiſts gather, that therefore Angels and Saints may be mediatours. Anſwer. It followes not. Moſes was ordained a mediator, ſo are not they. Moſes was preſent with the Iewes, and had fellowſhip with them whoſe mediatour he was. Saints are abſent in heauen, and Angels though they bee about vs, haue no fellowſhip with vs. Moſes was a mediator but once, and that onely in one thing: Saints are made continuall mediators. Laſtly, Moſes was a mediatour in relating and reporting the Lawe from God to the people: Saints and Angels are made mediators to relate and report our prayers, and the ſecrets of our hearts to God.

Whereas Paul ſaith, that a mediatour is not of one, but a third, betweene two at the leaſt: it may be demaunded, how Chriſt can be mediatour betweene man and God, conſidering he is God? Anſwer. Though Father, Sonne, and holy Spirit, be one and the ſame in reſpect of Godhead, yet are they diſtinct in reſpect of perſon, or in reſpect of the manner of ſubſiſting: ſo as the Father is the father, not the Sonne, or holy Ghoſt; the Sonne, the ſonne, and not the Father, or the holy Ghoſt; the holy Ghoſt, the holy Ghoſt, and not the father, or the ſonne. The ſonne then, and the father, being perſons really diſtinct, the ſonne may be, and is Mediatour, firſt of all, in reſpect of order to the father, and in him, to the ſonne, and the holy Ghoſt. For the three perſons beeing of one nature and will, when the father is appeaſed, in him alſo the ſonne, and the holy Ghoſt are appeaſed. Thus Iohn ſaith, If any man ſinne, wee haue an aduocate with the father. It may be ſaid, that Chriſt can not bee Mediatour to himſelfe. Anſwer. In Chriſt conſider his nature, and his office. By nature, he is the ſonne of God: by office, he is Mediatour, and thus he is God-man, or Man-god: and as Mediatour by voluntarie diſpenſation, he is inferiour to himſelfe as he is the eſſentiall ſonne of God. And in the ſame manner, Chriſt as God-man is Mediatour to himſelfe as he is the ſonne of God. For as he is the ſonne of God, he is the partie offended; as he is Mediatour God-man, he is the party that makes reconciliation.

Laſtly, the property of God muſt be obſerued, that he is vnchangeable. Iames 1. 17. Mal. 3. 16. It may be obiected that God is ſaid in Scripture to repent. Anſ. God is ſaid to repent, not becauſe he changeth eyther nature or will, but becauſe he changeth his actions of mercie and loue into effects of anger after the manner of men. Againe, it may be obiected that God changed the Lawe and aboliſhed ceremonies. Anſwer. This God did by an vnchangeable decree, before all worlds: and ſo the change is in the lawe, and not in God. For God can decree to change this or that, without change.

The vſe. Gods vnchangeableneſſe is the foundation of our comfort. S. Paul ſaith, If we loue God, we are knowne of him, 1. Cor. 8. 3. Now the firſt we may certenly finde in our ſelues, namely, the loue of God, and Chriſt: and for the ſecond, God is vnchangeable. For they which are once knowne of God, are euer knowne of him; and that euen then when they feele nothing but Gods anger.

Againe, we are put in minde to be vnchangeable in good things, as in faith, hope, loue, good counſels, honeſt promiſes, and ſuch like, ſpecially in the maintenance of true religion. For we ought to be like vnto God. It is the poeſie of our gracious Queene, Semper eadem, Alwaies one and the ſame; no doubt in good things, ſpecially in the religion eſtabliſhed among vs. The ſame muſt be the minde of all good ſubiects and all good people, 1. Cor. 15. 58.

21. Is the law then againſt the promiſe of God? God forbid: for if there had bin a law giuen, which could haue giuen life, ſurely righteouſneſſe ſhould haue beene by the law.

22. But the Scripture hath included all vnder ſinne, that the promiſe by the faith of Ieſus Chriſt, ſhould be giuen to them that beleeue.

In theſe words, Paul propounds and anſwers an other obiection, in number the fourth. The occaſion of the obiection, is taken out of the former words, in which Paul ſaith, the law is for tranſgreſſions. It may be framed on this manner. If the law ſerue to conuince and condemne vs of ſinne, it ſerues not to giue life but to kill, and ſo it is contrarie to the promiſe which giueth life. The anſwer is made negatiuely, God forbid. And a double reaſon is rendred of the deniall. The firſt is this: If the law could giue life, it ſhould alſo giue iuſtice, or iuſtifie: & ſo it ſhould be contrarie to the promiſe (becauſe then there ſhould be two contrarie waies of iuſtification, one by faith alone, the other by faith with workes.) Therefore in that it kills and condemnes, it is not contrarie to the promiſe. The ſecond reaſon is in the 22. verſe. Things ſubordinate, whereof one ſerues for the other, are not contrarie: the law and the promiſe are ſubordinate; for the law prepares the way for the accompliſhing of the promiſe, in that it ſhuts all vnder ſinne, that the promiſe may be giuen to them that beleeue in Chriſt.

The vſe. In that Paul reiects the blaſphemous obiection, with God forbid: we are taught to auoid things ſaid or done to the diſhonour of God, with loathing and deteſtation. When it was related to Ahab and Iezabell, that Naboth had blaſphemed God, they being idolaters, ſolemnize a faſt pretending danger by the ſinne. 1. King. 21. 12. Caiphas ſuppoſing that Chriſt had blaſphemed, rent his garments. Matth. 26. When Iob did but ſuſpect his children of blaſpheming God, he called them and ſanctified them. Iob 1. 5. It is the fault of our daies, that many blaſpheme A by curſing, ſwearing, &c. without feare, and many doe it (as many diſſolute ſouldiers) in a brauerie: and hearers thereof for the moſt part are nothing mooued thereat, ſo ordinary is the offence. This ſhewes the wickedneſſe of our times.

In the firſt reaſon, Paul deliuers a notable concluſion, namely, that the thing which is the meanes to procure life vnto vs, is alſo the meanes of our iuſtice or iuſtification before God. And good reaſon. For iuſtice cauſeth life, and that which giueth life, firſt of all giueth iuſtice. Hence it followes that workes cannot meritoriouſly deſerue eternall life. For if life be by the workes of the law, B then iuſtice alſo: but that cannot be: for we muſt firſt of all be iuſtified, before we can doe a good worke. Let the Papiſts conſider this. Againe, they which teach, that faith is alone in iuſtification, and that both faith and workes concurre as cauſes of ſaluation, are deceiued. For by the former concluſion of Paul, if workes be cauſes of ſaluation, then muſt they alſo haue a ſtroake in our iuſtification, which they haue not. And therefore they are the way of our ſaluation, but not any cauſe at all. Laſtly, here we ſee that many among vs doe not hold Chriſt, or beleeue in him aright, for their iuſtification: becauſe they hold him without change of heart and life. For by Pauls concluſion, whome Chriſt quickneth, them he iuſtifieth: and whome he doth not quicken, them C he doth not iuſtifie. Examine thy ſelfe then: if Chriſt haue ſanctified and renued thy heart, thou art iuſtified: if thy heart be yet vnſanctified, and thy life vnreformed, deceiue not thy ſelfe with fond imaginations: thou art not yet iuſtified.

The 22. verſe followeth, containing the ſecond reaſon. And firſt let vs conſider the meaning of the words. The Scripture] the words are in the Originall thus, That Scripture, namely, the Scripture before named, the written law in the bookes of the old Teſtament. And further, by the law, we muſt vnderſtand, God in the law, Rom. 11. 32. God hath concluded all vnder vnbeleefe.

Concluded] The law is compared to a Judge, D or ſergeant: ſinne, to a priſon. And the law is ſaid to conclude, or incloſe men vnder ſinne, becauſe it doth to the full accuſe and conuince vs of ſinne, ſo as our mouthes are ſtopped, and we haue no way to eſcape.

All] All men that came of Adam by generation, with all that comes from them, their thoughts, deſires, words, and deedes.

The promiſe] The thing promiſed, which is remiſſion of ſinne, and life euerlaſting.

By the faith of Chriſt] That is, the faith whereof Chriſt is both the author, and matter. This is added, to ſignifie vnto vs, who are true beleeuers, namely, they which are beleeuers by the faith of Chriſt.

Againſt this text of Paul, blinde reaſon mooueth many queſtions, as namely why

God created man, and then ſuffered him to fall? why God did not reſtraine the fall of Adam to his perſon, but ſuffers it to inlarge it ſelfe to all mankind, ſo as all be ſhut vp vnder ſinne? why the promiſe is not giuen to al, but onely to beleeuers? But there are two ſpeciall grounds, vpon which we are to ſtay our mindes. The firſt is, that God hath an abſolute ſoueraignty & lordſhip ouer all his creatures. We may not therefore diſpute the caſe with God, Rom 9.20. He may doe with his owne what he will, Math. 20.15. The ſecond is, that the waies and iudgements of God are a gulfe, into which the more we ſearch, the more we plunge our ſelues: becauſe they are vnſearchable. Rom. 11.33.

Marke the phraſe of Paul [the Scripture concludes all vnder ſinne] if it conclude or ſhut vp, then it determines what is ſinne, what not. And if this be ſo: then it may alſo determine what is true, and what is falſe: and ſo be truly tearmed a Iudge of controuerſies in religion. If it ſhut vp ſinners vnder their ſinne, then alſo it ſhuts them that erre vnder their errour, for errours be ſinnes and fruits of the fleſh. It is ſaid blaſphemouſly, that if the Scripture be a Iudge, it is but a dumme Iudge. And I ſay againe, that offenders may plead for themſelues on this ſort, that the law is but a dum Iudge, when it condemnes them, and ſhuts them vnder ſinne: but they ſhall finde it hath a loud voice in their conſciences, when they reade it ſeriouſly, and examine themſelues by it: euen ſo the Scripture ſpeakes ſufficiently for the determination of truth and falſhood, in matters of ſaluation, when it is ſearched with care and humility.

When Paul ſaith, We are all ſhut vp vnder ſinne, he puts vs in minde of our moſt miſerable condition, that we are captiues of ſinne and Satan, incloſed in our ſins as in a priſon, like impriſoned malefactours that waite daily for the comming of the Iudge, and ſtand in continuall feare of execution. And ſeeing our condition is ſuch, we muſt labour to ſee and feele by experience this our ſpirituall bondage, that we may ſay with Paul, We are ſold vnder ſinne, and that we know there is no goodneſſe dwelling in our fleſh. Rom. 7.14.18. This is one of the firſt leſſons that we muſt take out in the ſchoole of Chriſt. Againe, if we ſeriouſly bethinke our ſelues that we are captiues of ſinne and worthy of death, it will make vs with contentation of minde to beare the miſeries of this life, ſickneſſe, pouerty, reproch, baniſhment, &c. conſidering they come farre ſhort of that we haue deſerued, who are no better then ſlaues of ſinne and Satan.

Whereas Paul ſaith, that all men with all that proceeds from them, is ſhut vnder ſinne, he teacheth that all actions of men vnregenerate are ſinnes. The wiſedome of the fleſh, that is, the wiſeſt cogitations, counſels, inclinations of the fleſh, are enmity with God. Rom. 8.5. To the vncleane all things are vncleane. Tit. 1.15. A An euill tree cannot bring forth good fruit. Math. 7. It may be obiected, that naturall men may doe the workes of the morall law, as to giue almes, and ſuch like. Rom. 2.14. Anſw. Sinnes be of two ſorts. One is, when any thing is done flatte againſt the commaundement of God. The ſecond is, when the act or worke is done which the law preſcribes, yet not in the ſame manner which the law preſcribes, in faith, in obedience, to the glory of God. In this ſecond regard, morall workes performed by naturall men, are ſinnes indeede. Hence it followes, that Liberty of will in the doing of that which is truly good, is loſt by the fall of Adam: and that man cannot by the ſtrength of naturall will helped by grace, apply himſelfe B to the calling of God.

Whereas Paul ſaith, that the promiſe is giuen to beleeuers, it is manifeſt that the promiſe is not vniuerſall in reſpect of all mankind, but onely indefinite, and vniuerſall in reſpect of beleeuers. Wherefore their doctrine is not ſound, that teach the Redemption wrought by Chriſt, to be as general as the ſin of Adam: Indeed, if we regard the value and ſufficiencie of the death of Chriſt, it is ſo: but if we reſpect the Communication and donation of this benefit, it is not. For though all be ſhut vnder ſinne, yet the promiſe is onely giuen to them that beleeue. It is obiected, that God was in Chriſt reconciling the world to himſelfe, 2. Cor. 5.19. Anſw. The text in hand ſhewes, that by C the world, we are to vnderſtand all beleeuers through the whole world. And whereas Paul ſaith, God ſhut vp all vnder vnbeleefe, that he might haue mercy vpon all, Rom. 11.32. his meaning is here ſet downe, that he ſhut both Iewes and Gentiles vnder vnbeleefe, that he might haue mercy vpon all that beleeue, both of Iewes and Gentiles.

Marke further, the end of the law is conuiction: and the end of our conuiction is, that the promiſe of mercy may be giuen to them that beleeue. Here is notable comfort, with D incouragement to all good duties. Doth the law as it were in the name of God arreſt thee? doth it accuſe and conuince thee of manifold ſinnes? doth it arraigne thee at the barre of Gods iudgement, and fill thy ſoule with terrour? doſt thou by the teſtimonie of the law and thine owne conſcience, ſee and feele thy ſelfe to be a moſt miſerable and wretched ſinner? well. It may be thou thinkeſt that all this is a preparation to thy damnation; but it is not. For it is contrariwiſe a preparation to thy ſaluation. For the law with a loud voice in thy heart, proclaimes thee a ſinner, and threatens thee with perdition; but the end of all this is, that Ieſus Chriſt may become a Sauiour vnto thee, ſo be it thou wilt come vnto him, and beleeue in him. For he ſaues no ſheepe, but the loſt ſheepe, and he calles not iuſt men, but ſinners to repentance. Let vs therefore with all our hearts come vnto Chriſt and beleeue in him, and that by the faith of Chriſt, A that is, with a faith ioyned with hope, loue and new obedience. Then ſhall the promiſe of pardon and life euerlaſting be giuen to vs. Vpon this ground, perſons in deſpaire and grieuous offenders, may ſee a plaine way to helpe and ſuccour themſelues. For the worke of the law concluding vs vnder ſinne, by the mercy of God tends to our ſaluation, if we wil vſe the good meanes.

Laſtly, Paul ſaith, the promiſe is made not to euery one that beleeueth according to any faith of his owne, but to them that are true beleeuers by the faith of Chriſt. Therefore euery man ſhall not be ſaued in his own faith and religion, but onely they that are of the faith of Chriſt.

B Verſ. 23. For before faith came, we were kept vnder the law, and ſhut vp vnto the faith which ſhould afterward be reuealed.

24. Wherefore the law was our ſchoolemaſter to Chriſt, that we might be made righteous by faith.

25. But after that faith is come, we are no more vnder the ſchoolemaſter.

Paul in the 19. ver. had ſaid, that the law was for tranſgreſſions, till the ſeed come, to which the promiſe was made. And here he makes a more large declaration of his owne meaning. The ſumme of all that he ſaith may be reduced to a compariſon of things vnlike, on this manner. Before the comming of faith, we were vnder the dominion of Moſes law: but after faith C was come, we were free. The firſt part of the compariſon is amplified by a double ſimilitude: the law was a guard vnto vs, v. 23. and the law was our ſchoolemaſter, verſ. 24. The ſecond part of, the compariſon is in the 25. verſ.

Faith] That is, the Goſpel, or, the doctrine of remiſſion of ſinnes and life euerlaſting by Chriſt exhibited in the fleſh.

We] We Iewes: I Paul a Iew, and the reſt of that nation.

Law] That is, the whole Oeconomie, Policie, and Regiment of Moſes, by lawes partly morall, partly ceremoniall, & partly iudiciall.

Kept] Compaſſed or guarded. Becauſe the law before Chriſt was to the Iewes as a guard D of armed men, to incloſe and keepe them, that they ſhould not depart from God, and from their allegiance to him, vnto the ſinnes, idolatries, and ſuperſtitions of the Gentiles.

Vnto the faith] That is, till the faith come.

Afterward reuealed] From the creation, to the law, the Church of God was in one family; and the reſt of the world beſide was no people of God. From the law till Chriſt, the Church of God was incloſed in the nation of the Iewes, and all the world beſide no Church or people of God. And this diſtinction of a people, and no people, ſtood ſometime after the comming of Chriſt, Math. 10. 5. Goe not into the way of the Gentiles, and into the cities of the Samaritans enter ye not. After the aſcenſion of Chriſt, this diſtinction ended: becauſe the myſterie of mans redemption was then more plainly reuealed; and it began then to be reuealed, to the whole world, Coloſſ. 1. 26, 27. 16. 25. and Rom.

Thus we ſee that the law ſerued for tranſgreſſions: becauſe it was to the Iewes as a guard to keepe them in the compaſſe of their duty, that they fell not away to ſundry tranſgreſſions.

The vſe. This ſhewes the greatneſſe of our corruption, and that the very frame of our heart is euill continually, that the Lord muſt be faine to ſet his law about vs as a guard of armed men, to keepe vs, that we ſinne not.

Againe, here we ſee the vſe of Gods lawes, which ſerue to preuent, reſtraine, and cut off ſinne, into which otherwiſe men would fall, vnleſſe they were compaſſed and guarded by lawes. Some obiect for freedome of will, on this manner: If the lawes of God cannot be kept; they are in vaine: but they are not in vaine: therefore they may be kept. Anſw. The maior, or firſt part of the reaſon, is not true. For there are other vſes of the law of God, then the keeping of them: for they ſerue to reſtraine, and preuent open offences: and to keepe men in order, at the leaſt outwardly.

An other vſe of the law of God, was to conclude and ſhut vp the Iewes into the vnitie of one faith & religion. For this cauſe the Iewes had but one Temple, one Mercie-ſeate, one high Prieſt, &c. Hence it followes, that in a godly and Chriſtian Common-wealth where true religion is eſtabliſhed, there may be no tolleration of any other religion. For that which is the end of Gods lawes, muſt alſo be the end of all good lawes in all Commonwealthes and kingdomes, namely, to ſhut vp the people into the vnity of one faith.

The Church of the Iewes, is called a fountaine ſealed, a garden incloſed, Cant. 4. 13. a vineyard hedged in. Iſa. 5. 5. Pſal. 80. 13. And here we ſee what is the hedge or wall of this garden, or vineyard: namely, the regiment or policie of Moſes by a threefold kind of law. This admoniſheth vs to reſpect and with care to obſerue good lawes: becauſe they are as it were hedges and fences of all good ſocieties: and the breaking of them is the pulling downe of our fence.

Where Paul ſaith, till the faith be reuealed. Note, that the faith, or the Goſpel, was not reuealed to the world, till the laſt age, after the comming of Chriſt. It may be ſaid, it was alwaies reuealed to all men, but not ſo cleerely as in theſe laſt daies. Anſw. It was not reuealed to all, either darkely or cleerely, before the comming of Chriſt. Act. 14. 16. God ſuffered the Gentiles to walke in their owne waies. Eph. 2. 12. they were without God, and without Chriſt. Rom. 15. 26. Paul preached where Chriſt was not ſo much as named. Hence it followes, that the Vocation of men to life euerlaſting, is not Vniuerſal: becauſe Chriſt was neuer Vniuerſally reuealed. Neither is mans redemption vniuerſall in reſpect of the whole world. For Redemption by Chriſt was not reuealed to all nations before the comming of Chriſt: and a benefit to be apprehended by faith, if it be vnknowne, is no benefit. Laſtly, it is erronious that ſome teach, namely, that grace ſupernaturall is vniuerſall: that is, that the power to beleeue in Chriſt, and the power to turne to God, if men wil, is generally giuen to all. But this cannot be: becauſe it is not giuen to all men, ſo much as to heare of Chriſt, and to know him.

Seeing faith is now come, it may be demaunded, what is the guard whereby we are kept now? Anſw. The precepts of the morall law. The ſayings of the wiſe are as nailes or ſtakes faſtened, to range men in the compaſſe of their owne duties, Eccleſ. 12. 11. Againe, the peace of God, or the aſſurance of our reconciliation with God, is a guard, to keepe our hearts and ſenſes in Chriſt, Phil. 4. 7. If this wil not doe the deed, God hath in ſtore, his corrections, and iudgements, to be as an hedge to hemme vs in. Hoſ. 2. 6. This beeing ſo, our duty is to guard and incloſe our ſelues, ſpecially our hearts, Prou. 4. 23. and all the ſenſes and powers of our ſoules, Pſal. 141. 3. by the wholeſome precepts and counſels of God. Conſidering we lie open to ſo many enemies, we ſhould continually be armed and fenced from the head to the foote, Eph. 6. 13. otherwiſe we ſhal vpō euery occaſiō be ouerturned.

To come to the 24. verſe, the Iewes might haply ſay, ſeeing we are thus kept and ſhut vp by the law, what meanes haue we of comfort and of ſaluation? The anſwer is made, the law is further our ſchoolemaſter. Here by ſchoolemaſter, vnderſtand one that teacheth little children or petits, the firſt rudimēts or elements, A. B. C. And the law is a ſchoolemaſter to Chriſt, for two cauſes. One, becauſe it points out and ſhadowes forth vnto vs Chriſt, by bodily rudiments of ceremonies and ſacrifices. The ſecond is, becauſe the law, ſpecially the morall law, vrgeth and compelleth men to goe to Chriſt. For it ſhewes vs our ſins, & that without remedie: it ſhewes vs the damnation that is due vnto vs: and by this meanes, it makes vs deſpaire of ſaluation in reſpect of our ſelues: and thus it inforceth vs to ſeeke for helpe out of our ſelues in Chriſt. The law is then our ſchoolemaſter, not by plaine teaching, but by ſtripes and correction.

In this verſe, Paul ſets downe the manner & way of our ſaluation, which is on this manner, firſt, the law prepares vs by humbling vs: then comes the Goſpel, and it ſtirres vp faith. And faith wrought in the heart, apprehends Chriſt for iuſtification, ſanctification, and glorification. Paul ſets this forth by a fit ſimilitude. They that would be the ſeruants and children of God, muſt come into the ſchoole of God, and be taught of him. In this ſchoole are two formes, and two maſters. In the firſt

A forme, the teacher and maſter is the law. And he teacheth men to know their ſinnes, & their deſerued damnation, and he cauſeth vs to deſpaire of our ſaluation in reſpect of our ſelues. And when men haue beene well ſchooled by the law, and are brought to acknowledge their ſinnes, and that they are ſlaues of ſinne and Satan, then muſt they be taken vp to an higher forme, and be taught by another ſchoolemaſter, which is Faith, or the Goſpel. The leſſon of the Goſpel is, that men after they are humbled, muſt flie to the throne of grace, beleeue in Chriſt, and with al their hearts turne vnto God: that they may be iuſtified and glorified. When we haue by the teaching of this ſecond maſter, learned B this good leſſon, we are become children and ſeruants of God.

By this then it is manifeſt, that there are two ſorts of badde ſchollers in the ſchoole of Chriſt, among vs. One ſort are they which come to the Lords table, and yet learne nothing, either from the law, or from the Goſpel: but content themſelues with the teaching of nature. The ſecond ſort are they, which learne ſomething, but in prepoſterous manner. For they haue learned that mercie and ſaluation comes by Chriſt: and with this they content themſelues: not ſuffering themſelues firſt of all to be ſchooled by the law till they deſpaire in reſpect of themſelues: nor to be ſchooled by the Goſpel, till they beleeue in C Chriſt and repent of their ſinnes.

In a word, he is a good ſcholler in the ſchoole of Chriſt, that firſt learnes by the law to humble himſelfe, and to goe out of himſelfe: and beeing humbled, ſubiects his heart to the voice and precept of the Goſpel, which biddes vs beleeue in Chriſt, turne to God, and teſtifie our faith by new obedience.

In the ſecond part of the compariſon 25. verſe, Paul ſets downe one point, that at the comming of the faith, the Iewes were freed from the dominion of the law of Moſes, and D cōſequently that the ſaid law was abrogated. The lawgiuer, that is, the expounder of Moſes law was to laſt but till the comming of Shilo, Gen. 49. 10. The law of commaundements ſtanding in ordinances, was abrogated by the fleſh of Chriſt, Eph. 2. 15. And the change of the prieſthood, brought the change of the law. Heb. 7. 12.

For the better cleering of this point, three queſtions are to be demaunded. The firſt is, when was the policie, regiment, or law of Moſes abrogated? Anſw. At the comming of the faith, or when the Goſpel firſt began to be publiſhed to the world: which was at the Aſcenſion of Chriſt. And he in his death cancelled the ceremoniall law, and tooke it out of the way, Coloſſ. 2. 14. When the old Teſtament ended, and the new began, then was the abrogation of the law: now the ending of the old Teſtament, and the beginning of the new, was in the Reſurrection of Chriſt. For then

A then was the beginning of the new world, as it were.

The ſecond queſtion is: How farre forth the law is abrogated? Anſw. The law is threefold: Morall, Ceremoniall, Iudiciall. Morall is the law of God, concerning manners, or duties to God and man. Now the morall law is abrogated, in reſpect of the Church, and them that beleeue, three waies. Firſt, in reſpect of iuſtification: and this Paul prooues at large in this Epiſtle. Secondly, in reſpect of the malediction, or curſe. There is no condemnation to them that are in Chriſt. Rom. 8. 1. Thirdly, in reſpect of rigour. For in them that are in Chriſt, God accepts the endeauour to obey, for obedience it ſelfe. Neuertheleſſe, the B law, as it is the rule of good life, is vnchangeable, and admits no abrogation. And Chriſt in this regard did by his death eſtabliſh it, Rom. 3. 31.

The Ceremoniall law, is that which preſcribed rites and geſtures in the worſhippe of God, in the time of the old Teſtament. Ceremonies are either of figure and ſignification, or of order. The firſt are abrogated at the comming of Chriſt, who was the accompliſhment of them all, Coloſſ. 2. 17. The ſecond beeing ceremonies of particular order to the times of the old and new Teſtament, concerne not vs. For example: In the commaundement of the Sabbath, ſome things are morall, ſome ceremoniall, ſome iudiciall. That in C one day of ſeuen there ſhould be an holy reſt, it is morall. Reſt vpon the ſeuenth day from the creation is ceremoniall, in reſpect of order. Strictnes of reſt from all labour, is ceremoniall in reſpect of the ſignification of reſt from ſinne, and reſt in heauen. Therefore the particular day of reſt, and the manner of reſt, is abrogated: and Chriſt by his owne example, and by the example of the Apoſtles (examples not being contradicted in Scripture) appointed the eight day, or the day of Chriſts reſurrection, to be the Sabbath of the new Teſtament.

Iudiciall lawes are ſuch as concerne inheritances, lands, bargaines, controuerſies, cauſes criminall; and they pertaine to the regiment D of the Common-wealth. If the Common-wealth of the Iewes were now ſtanding, they ſhould be gouerned by theſe lawes. For to them were they giuen. The caſe is not like with vs. Some are of minde, that all Iudiciall lawes are abrogated: and ſome are of contrarie minde, that all Common-wealths are to be gouerned by them. But they are both deceiued: and the meane betweene both, is the truth. Know then that of Iudiciall lawes of Moſes, ſome are abrogated, ſome are not. Such lawes as are meerely Iudiciall, that is, Iudiciall and not morall, and doe particularly concerne the nation of the Iewes, the land of Canaan, the times before Chriſt, the things of the old Teſtament, are abrogated. Of this kind is the law that commands the brother to raiſe vp ſeede to his brother. Deut. 25. 5. The law of tenths is partly ceremoniall, and partly iudiciall, and ſpecially concernes the land of Canaan. For as countries are richer or poorer then Canaan; ſo muſt their allowance to the Miniſterie be more or leſſe: The ſeuenths, the eights, the ninths, the eleuenths, the twelfths, and not the tenths. And the allowance of the Tenths, ſtands not in force in this and other Common-wealths by the Iudiciall law of God, but by poſitiue lawes of countries. For if it did, then Miniſters ſhould not meddle with their Tenths, either for the gathering, or for the diſpoſing of them, but they ſhould be brought into the ſtore-houſes by certaine ouerſeers, and they ſhould diſpoſe of them according to the neede of euery Miniſter. 2. Chro. 31. Malac. 3. The law, that the theefe muſt reſtore foure-fold, or be a bondman, concernes Canaan, and thoſe countries. In Europe, (ſpecially in the Northerne and Weſterne parts,) a ſtraighter law is required. For the people are much giuen to idleneſſe, and conſequently to robbing: and they are of fierce diſpoſition, and therefore with theft ioyne violence, and diſturbance of the common peace. And for this cauſe (excepting in ſome caſes) theft is puniſhed with death. And this muſt not ſeeme hard. For euen the Iewes, when the theft was aggrauated with other circumſtances, might puniſh it with death, 2. Sam. 12. 6. And it is in the power of the Magiſtrate, when ſinnes are increaſed, to increaſe the puniſhment.

Now Iudiciall lawes that are in foundation and ſubſtance morall, are not abrogated, but are perpetuall. For the better diſcerning of them, I giue two notes. The firſt is this: If a Iudiciall law ſerue directly and immediately, to guard and fence any one of the ten Commaundements, in the maine ſcope and end thereof, it is morall in equitie, and perpetuall: becauſe the end and vſe of is perpetuall. I will giue ſundry examples. It is the law of God that he of the Iſraelites that ſhall intice them to goe and worſhip other gods, ſhall be put to death, Deut. 13. 6. This law ſerues to maintaine and vphold the firſt commaundement, the end whereof is to inioyne vs to take the true God for our God: and this end is moſt neceſſarie both for Gods glory, and for the ſaluation of men: and therefore whatſoeuer thing or perſon ouerturneth or aboliſheth this end, it muſt be cut off from the ſociety of men. Here note by the way, that they which haue beene borne, baptiſed, and brought vp among vs, and yet afterward become Maſſe-prieſts, ſeeke maliciouſly and obſtinately, without ceaſing to ſeduce our people, deſerue in this reſpect, to be put to death.

Example 2. Thou ſhalt not ſuffer a witch to liue, Exod. 22. 18. This law againe, is a fence to the firſt commaundement. For witches renounce God, and humane ſociety: and therefore are worthily cut off: though they doe no hurt: euen becauſe they make a league with the diuell.

Example 3. He that blaſphemeth the name of God, ſhall be put to death, Leuit. 24. 16. Vnderſtand this law of manifeſt and notorious blaſphemies, that pearce through God, as the words import: and then it is a maine ſenſe to the third commaundement. For Gods name may in no wiſe be abuſed, and troad vnder foote: and therefore blaſphemers pearcing God are to be cut off. This is the very law of Nature, as apeares by Nabuchadnezzar, who gaue in commaundement to his people, that whoſoeuer blaſphemed the name of the true God, ſhould be put to death, Dan. 3. 29. Here note, that manifeſt and conuicted Atheiſts, if they be put to death, haue but their deſerts.

Example 4. He that curſeth father or mother ſhall die the death, Leuit. 4. 9. This law is a neceſſarie ſenſe to the fifth commaundement, and vpholds the honour that is due to parents.

Example 5. He that ſmites a man that he die, ſhall die the death, Exod. 21. 12. To this law there is no exceptiō made but one, & that is, when a man is killed at vnawares. And it is for his equitie perpetuall. For it is a maine & direct ſenſe to the ſixth commaundement. Conſider an other reaſon, Numb. 35. 33. The whole land (ſaith the Lord) ſhall be defiled with blood, till his blood be ſhed that killed a man.

Example 6. The adulterer and the adultereſſe ſhall both be put to death, Leuit. 20. This Iudiciall ſerues to vphold and maintaine chaſtitie, which is the end of the ſeuenth commaundement. Marke withall, the reaſons, Leuit. 20. 22, 23, Leſt the land ſpue you out: and for theſe things, that is, for ſuffering this and other ſinnes vnpuniſhed, the Gentiles were caſt out. It may be ſaid, that Chriſt did not condemne the woman to death, which was taken in adultery. Anſw. He came to be a Mediatour, and not a Iudge, or Magiſtrate. It is alleadged, that Dauid was not put to death for adulterie. Anſwer. He was the higheſt in the kingdome: there was none to iudge him. Againe, it may be ſaid, that if adultery be death, then innumerable perſons muſt die. Anſ. We muſt doe that which we finde to be the will of God, and the euents of things muſt be left to God.

The ſecond note, whereby we may diſcerne a iudiciall law to be morall for his equity, is this, If it follow neceſſarily and immediately from the light, principles, and concluſions of nature. For example, Deut. 22. 5. The man ſhal not put on the things that appertaine to the woman, nor the woman the things that appertaine to the man. This law is more then Iudiciall: for it is a Rule of common honeſtie: practiſed in thoſe countries, by the light of nature, where the written law was neuer knowne. And things good and honeſt which nature teacheth, are morall and muſt be done. This is Pauls rule, Doth not nature teach this? 1. Cor. 11. 14.

This I ſpeake, not to cenſure and condemne the lawes of this or any other Common wealth: but onely to ſhew how farre Iudiciall lawes haue morality in them, & ſtand in force.

The third queſtion is, what is our guide now in the time of the new Teſtament, ſeeing the Regiment and law of Moſes is abrogated? Anſw. The outward guide is the Doctrine of the morall law, and of the Goſpel. It is therefore called the rodde and the ſtaffe of God, Pſal. 23, and the rodde of his mouth, Iſa. 11. 4. The inward guide, is the Spirit of God, writing the lawes of God in our hearts, and by them guiding vs, and being a law vnto vs, Rom. 8. 3, 14. Thirdly, God by manifold afflictions nurtures and ſchooles vs partly to preuent ſinnes to come, and partly to humble vs for that which is paſt, 1. Cor. 11. 32. Ier. 31. 18.

The vſe. Seeing the law is abrogated, (as I haue ſaid) we muſt be a free and voluntarie people, ſeruing God not of conſtraint, but willingly, as if there were no law to compell vs. All nations ſhal flow as waters to the mountaine of the Lord. Iſa. 2. 2. Thy people ſhall come willingly in the day of aſſembly. Pſal. 110. 3. In the daies of Iohn Baptiſt, the kingdome of heauen ſuffered violence. Ieremie ſaith, they ſhall teach euery man his neighbour and his brother, Ierem. 31. 31. becauſe men ſhall learne freely without compulſion, or calling vpon. Here is the fault of our times. Many ſay in heart to Chriſt, Depart from vs, wee will none of thy waies; and many againe are zealous for the things of this life, but for duties pertaining to Gods worſhip, and the ſaluation of their ſoules, they are neither hot nor cold. This negligence and ſlackneſſe is ful of danger: & therefore with ſpeede to be amended. For curſed is he that doth the worke of God negligently: and the Lord will ſpue out ſuch perſons.

26. For ye are all the ſonnes of God by faith in Chriſt Ieſus.

27. For all ye that are baptiſed into Chriſt, haue put on Chriſt.

28. There is neither Iew nor Grecian: there is neither bond nor free: there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Chriſt Ieſus.

Paul had ſaid before, v. 25. that the beleeuing Iewes after the publiſhing of the Goſpel, were no more vnder the law as vnder a ſchoolemaſter: In this 26. verſe, he renders a reaſon hereof: and it may be framed on this manner: If we Iewes were ſtill vnder the law as vnder a ſchoolemaſter, then we ſhould be ſtill after the manner of ſeruants: but we are not after the manner of ſeruants: becauſe we are children: for euen ye Galatians, and that all of you, are children of God, not by circumciſion, or by the keeping of the law, but by faith in Chriſt. Againe, that they are children of God, he prooues it thus: Ye are baptiſed into Chriſt, and in baptiſme ye haue put on Chriſt, in that ye are ioyned with him, and haue fellowſhip with him, who is the naturall ſonne of God: therefore ye are ſonnes A of God. It may be ſaid, All children of God? all baptized? all put on Chriſt? how can this be? ſeeing ſome are Iewes, ſome Gentiles; ſome bond, ſome free; ſome men, ſome women. The anſwer is made verſe 27. there are differences of men indeed, but in Chriſt all are as one.

In theſe words, I conſider two things. The firſt is, the benefit or gift beſtowed on the Galatians, which is ſonne-ſhip, adoption, or the condition of Gods children. The ſecond is, the deſcription of this benefit by foure arguments. The firſt is, by the circumſtance of the perſons, ye all are children of God. The ſecond is, the inward meanes, namely, faith in Chriſt Ieſus. The third is, the outward meanes, or B the pledge of adoption, ye are all baptized into Chriſt. The laſt is, the foundation of adoption, and that is, to put on Chriſt, or, to bee one with him.

For the better conceiuing of the benefite, 3. queſtiõs may be moued. The firſt is, whoſe ſons the Galatians were? Anſ. The ſonnes of God. It may be ſaid, how the ſons of God? I anſwer againe, God is called a father, in 2. reſpects: firſt, he is a father in reſpect of Chriſt, the eſſentiall word: & then God ſignifies the firſt perſon. Againe, God is called a father in reſpect of men elect to ſaluation; then the name God is put indefinitely: and it comprehends not onely the firſt perſon, but alſo the ſon, & holy Ghoſt. For all three doe equally C regenerate them that are adopted. And Paul ſaith of the godhead indefinitely: there is one God & father of all. Eph.4.6. And whẽ we pray, ſaying, Our father &c. we inuocate not onely the firſt perſon, but alſo the Sonne, and holy Ghoſt. And the ſon of God, is expreſly called the father of eternitie, in reſpect of vs, Iſa.9. verſ. 6. and he is ſaid to haue his ſeed, Iſa. 53. verſ.11.

The ſecond queſtion is, in what reſpect are the Galatians the children of God? Anſwer. A childe of God is two wayes: by nature, by grace. The child of God by nature, is Chriſt, as he is the eternall ſonne of God. A childe D by grace, is three wayes. By creation: thus Adam before his fall, and the good Angells are the childrẽ of God. Secondly, by the perſonall vnion: thus Chriſt as he is man is the child of God. Thirdly, by the grace of adoption: thus are all true beleeuers, and in this text the Galatians are ſaide to bee the children of God. In this grace of adoption, there bee two acts of God: one is Acceptation, whereby God accepts men for his children. The other is Regeneration, whereby men are borne of God, when the Image of God is reſtored in them, in righteouſneſſe, and true holineſſe.

The third queſtion is, what is the excellencie of this benefit? Anſ. Great euery way, Iohn 1.12. hee which is the childe of God, is heire and fellow heire with Chriſt, Rom.8.17. and that of the kingdome of heauen, and of all things in heauen and earth, 1.Cor.3.22. he hath title in this life, and ſhall haue poſſeſſion in the life to come. Againe, he that is Gods childe hath the Angells of God to tend on him, and to miniſter vnto him for his good and ſaluation, Hebr.1.14.

The firſt argument whereby the adoption of Gods children is ſet forth, is concerning the perſons to whome it belongeth, in theſe words, All yee are the children of God. So Paul ſaith, all the Epheſians are Elect, Epheſ.1.3. And Peter calles all them to whom he writes, 1.Pet.1.1. Elect; and Iohn 1.epiſt.3. the children of God. And herein they folow the iudgement of charitie, leauing all ſecret iudgemẽts to God. Heere I obſerue one thing, that euery greeuous fall doth not aboliſh the fauour of God, and extinguiſh the grace of regeneration. For the Galatians erred in the foundation of religion, and had fallen away to another Goſpel: and yet Paul ſaith, that they were (for all this) the children of God, and not ſome, but all of them. This truth may be ſeene by experience. The child of God before his fall, hath a purpoſe not to ſinne: in the time of temptation when he is in falling, hee hath a ſtrife: after he is fallen, he lieth not in his fall, as wicked men doe, but hee recouereth himſelfe by new repentance. And this ſhews, that the child of God by his fall doth not returne againe to the eſtate and condition of wicked men. When Saint Iohn ſaith, hee that is borne of God ſinneth not, his meaning is this; he that is borne of God, if he fall into any offence of frailty, yet doth he not make a practiſe of ſin, as the wicked and vngodly doe.

It may be ſaid, the Galatians, and all the Galatians are the children of God: but what is that to vs? Anſ. They among vs that profeſſe true faith in Chriſt, with care to keepe good conſcience, are likewiſe to hold themſelues to be children of God. Hee beleeueth not the Goſpell, that dooth not beleeue his owne adoption. For in the Goſpel there is a promiſe of all the bleſſings of God, to them that beleeue? and there is alſo a commaundement to apply the ſaide promiſe, and conſequently, to applie the gift of Adoption to our ſelues. When wee are bidden to ſay, Our father, we are bidden to beleeue our ſelues to be children of GOD, and ſo to come vnto him. Therefore with Paul I ſay, that all we that truely beleeue in Chriſt, and haue care to leade a good life, all I ſay, are indeede the children of God.

The vſe. Comforts ariſing by this benefite, are many. Firſt, if thou be Gods childe, ſurely hee will prouide all things neceſſarie for thy ſoule and body, Math. 6.26. Our care muſt bee to doe the office and dutie that belongs vnto vs: when this is done, our care is ended. As for the good ſucceſſe of our labours, we muſt caſt our care on God, who wil prouide that no good thing be wanting vnto vs, Pſal.34.10. They that drowne themſelues in worldly cares, liue like fatherleſſe children.

Secondly, in that we are children, we haue libertie to come into the preſence of God, and to pray vnto him, Eph. 3.12.

Thirdly, nothing ſhall hurt them that are the children of God. The plague ſhall not come neere their tabernacle: they ſhall walke vpon the lyon and the aſpe, and treade them vnder foote. Pſal. 91.13. All things ſhall turne to their good. Rom. 8. 28. And the rather; becauſe the Angels of God pitch their tents about them.

Laſtly, God will beare with the infirmities and frailties of them that are his children, if there be in them a care to pleaſe him, with a purpoſe of not ſinning. Mal. 3. 7. If a child be ſicke, the father or mother doe not caſt it out of dores: much leſſe will God.

The duties. Firſt, if ye be Gods children, then walke worthie your profeſſion and calling. Be not vaſſalls of ſinne and Satan: carrie your ſelues as kinges ſonnes: bearing ſway ouer the luſts of your owne hearts, the temptations of the deuill, and the leud cuſtomes & faſhions of this world. When Dauid kept his fathers ſheepe, he behaued himſelfe like a ſhepheard: but when he was called from the ſheepefold, and choſen to be king, he carried himſelfe accordingly. So muſt we doe, that of children of the diuill, are made the children of God. And if we liue according to the luſts of our fleſh, as the men of this world doe, whatſoeuer we profeſſe, we are in truth the children of the diuill. Iohn 8. verſ. 44. 1. Ioh. 3.

Secondly, we muſt vſe euery day to bring our ſelues into the preſence of God, and we muſt doe all things as in his ſight, & preſence, preſenting our ſelues vnto him, as inſtruments of his glorie in doing of his will. This is the honour that the childe of God owes vnto him. Mal. 1.6.

Thirdly, our care muſt be (according to the meaſure of grace) to reſemble Chriſt in all good vertues, and holy conuerſation. For he is our eldeſt brother the firſt borne of many brethren: and therefore we ſhould be like vnto him, 1. Ioh. 3.2,3.

Fourthly, we muſt haue a deſire and loue to the word of God, that we may grow by it, in knowledge, grace, and good life. For this is the milke and foode whereby God feeds his children, 1. Pet. 2.2. Such perſons then among vs, that haue no loue or liking of the word, but ſpend their daies in ignorance, and ſecurity, ſhew themſelues to be no children of God. The child in the armes of the mother or nource, that neuer deſires the breſt, is certenly a dead child.

Laſtly, we muſt put this in our accounts, that we muſt haue many afflictions, if we be Gods children: for he corrects all his children. And when we are vnder the rod of correction, we muſt reſigne our ſelues to the will A and good pleaſure of God. This is childlike obedience: and this muſt be done in ſilence, & with all quietneſſe: then God is beſt pleaſed.

The internall meanes of Adoption, is Faith in Chriſt. And for the better conceiuing of it, three queſtions are to be propounded. The firſt, what a kinde of faith is this? Anſ. A particular or ſpecial faith: and it hath three acts or effects. The firſt is, to beleeue Chriſt to be Ieſus, that is, a Sauiour: the ſecond is, to beleeue that Chriſt is my or thy Sauiour: the third is, to put the confidence of hart in him. When Thomas felt the wounds of Chriſt, he ſaid, My Lord, and my God: and thereupon Chriſt ſaid, Becauſe thou haſt ſeene, thou beleeueſt, Iohn 20.29. Here marke, that to B beleeue Chriſt to bee my Chriſt, is faith. Againſt this ſpeciall faith, the Papiſts obiect 3. arguments. The firſt is this: Euery ſpeciall faith muſt haue a ſpeciall word of God for his ground: but there is no ſpeciall word that thy ſinnes, or my ſinnes, are forgiuen by Chriſt: therefore there is no ſpeciall faith. Anſwer. We haue that which in force and value is equiualent to a ſpeciall word: namely, a general promiſe, with a commandement to apply the ſaid promiſe to our ſelues. Secondly, I anſwer, that the word and promiſe of God generally propounded in Scripture, is made particular in the publike Miniſterie, in which when the word is preached to any people, God reueales 2. things vnto them: one, that C his will is to ſaue them by Chriſt: the other, that his will is that men ſhould beleeue in Chriſt. And the word thus applied in the publike Miniſterie in the name of God, is as much as if an Angell ſhould particularly ſpeake vnto vs from heauen.

The ſecond Argument. Speciall faith (ſay they) is abſurde; becauſe by it a ſinner muſt beleeue the pardon of his ſinnes, before hee hath it: in as much as faith is the meanes to obtaine pardon. Anſ. The giuing and receiuing of pardon & faith, are both at one moment of time: for when God giues the pardon of ſinne: at the ſame inſtant hee cauſeth men to receiue the ſame pardon by faith. For order of nature, faith goeth before the recei- D uing of the pardon (becauſe faith is giuen to them that are to be ingrafted into Chriſt, and pardon to them that are in Chriſt) for time it doth not: and therefore this ſecond Argument is abſurd.

The third Argument. The full certentie and perſwaſion of Gods mercie in Chriſt, followes good conſcience and good workes: and therfore faith follows after Iuſtification. Anſ. There be 2. degrees of faith. A weake faith, & a ſtrong faith. A weake faith is that, againſt which doubting much preuailes, in which there is a ſorrow for vnbeleefe, a will & deſire to beleeue in Chriſt, with care to vſe good means, and to increaſe in faith. Strong faith is that, which preuailes againſt doubting, and it is a full perſwaſion, or reſolution of the loue and mercie of God in Chriſt. This ſecond degree of faith followes iuſtification, vpon the obſeruation and experience of the prouidence, and goodneſſe of God: but the firſt degree of ſpeciall faith before named, for order goes before iuſtification, and for time is together with it.

The ſecond queſtion is, when faith begins firſt to breede in the heart? Anſw. When a man beginnes to be touched in his conſcience for his ſinnes, and vpon feeling of his owne ſpirituall pouertie, earneſtly hungers and thirſts after Chriſt and his righteouſnes aboue all things in the world. Chriſt ſaith, I will giue to him that thirſteth of the well of the water of life freely, Reu. 21. 6. This promiſe declares that in thirſting there is a meaſure of faith. To eate and drinke Chriſt the bread and water of life, is to beleeue in him: and to hunger and thirſt, hauing as it were a ſpiritual appetite to Chriſt, is the next ſtep to this eating and drinking. Therefore this muſt be remembred, that profeſſours of the Goſpel, yea teachers of the ſame, that want this ſenſe of their vnworthines, and this thirſting, are far wide, what gifts ſoeuer they haue: for they are not yet come to the firſt ſtep of true faith.

The third queſtion is, how faith in Chriſt is conceiued in the heart? Anſ. It is not faith to conceiue in minde a bare perſwaſion, that Chriſt is my Sauiour: & thereupon to think to be ſaued. But faith in Chriſt is conceiued in ſpirituall exerciſes of inuocation & repentance. When I ſee mine owne ſins, and Gods anger againſt me for them by the Law; when I ſee mine owne guiltines, I draw my ſelfe into the preſence of God, making confeſſion of mine offences, & prayer for pardon of them, and in this prayer I ſtriue againſt mine vnbeleefe, I will, deſire, and indeuour to aſſent to the promiſe of God touching forgiuenes: & withall, I purpoſe with my ſelfe to ſinne no more. This is my daily practiſe: and thus is faith truly conceiued, and confirmed. Again, faith is conceiued in the vſe of holy meanes, namely, the preaching of the word, and Sacraments. For in hearing, and receiuing the Lords Supper to meditate vpon the promiſe of mercie, & in meditation to apply the ſaid promiſe to my ſelfe, is the right way to conceiue true faith. Therefore it muſt be remembred, that faith conceiued without the exerciſes of inuocation and repentance, or conceiued without the vſe of the word and Sacraments (as commōly it is) is not true faith, but an imagination or fiction of the braine, which will faile in the end.

The third point to bee conſidered, is the ſigne, or the outward meanes of Adoption, and that is Baptiſme. It may be demaunded, how Baptiſme can be a marke or ſigne of the childe of God, conſidering all ſorts of men are partakers of it? Anſwer. Baptiſme alone is no marke of Gods child, but baptiſme ioyned with faith: for ſo muſt the Text bee conceiued, All yee Galatians that beleeue, are baptized into Chriſt. For Paul had ſaid immediatly before, Ye are the ſons of God by faith. Again, the Scripture ſpeaking of baptiſme, comprehends both the outward and the inward baptiſme, which is the inward baptiſme of the ſpirit, Math. 3. 11. and 1. Pet. 3. 21. And thus is baptiſme always an infallible marke of the child of God.

It may further be demanded, what are the markes of the inward baptiſme? Anſ. The new birth, whereby a man is waſhed and clenſed by the ſpirite of God, hath three ſpeciall markes. The firſt is, the ſpirit of grace and ſupplications, Zachar. 12. 10. that is, the ſpirit of regeneration, cauſing men to turn to God, and withall, to make inſtant prayer and ſupplication for mercy and forgiueneſſe of ſins paſt. The ſecond, is to heare and obey the voyce of God in all things, Iohn 8. 47. and 10. 27. The third is, not to ſinne, that is, not to liue in the practiſe of any ſinne after this new birth is begunne, 1. Iohn 3. Hee that is borne of God, doth not commit ſinne. He may faile in this or that ſpeach, and doe amiſſe in this or that action; but after his calling and conuerſion, the tenour and courſe of his life, ſhall bee according to the commaundements of GOD. And this is a ſpeciall marke to diſcerne the inward baptiſme.

Some alleadge, that hauing long agoe beene baptized with water, yet they feele not the inward baptiſme: and therefore they feare that they are not the children of God. Anſwer. If there bee in thee a ſorrow for thy corruption and ſins paſt: if thou haſt a purpoſe to ſinne no more; if thou auoydeſt the occaſions of ſin, and feareſt to offend: if hauing ſinned, thou lieſt not in thy ſinne, but recouereſt thy ſelfe by new repentance: thou art verily borne of God, and baptized with the baptiſme of the holy Ghoſt.

Others alleadge, that although they haue beene baptized, yet they feare they haue no faith: and therefore they thinke they are not the children of God. Anſ. If there be in thee a ſorrow for thine vnbeliefe, a will and deſire to beleeue, and a care to increaſe in faith by the vſe of good meanes, there is a meaſure of true faith in thee, and by it thou maiſt aſſure thy ſelfe that thou art the childe of God.

Others again alledge, that they haue long made prayer vnto God, and that according to his will; and yet their prayers haue not bin heard: and therefore they often doubt they are not Gods children. Anſwer. If thou canſt pray, though thy prayer be not heard according to thy deſire, content thy ſelfe. For the prayer of the heart is the marke of the ſpirit of adoption Rom. 8. 16. 26. And by it thou maiſt know that thou art the child of God.

Thus then we ſee what is the infallible marke of the child of God, namely, baptiſme ioyned with true faith in Chriſt, or the outward baptiſme ioyned with the inward baptiſme of the Spirit. The vſe. Many auouch the preſent church of Rome to bee the true Church of God: & that becauſe, they ſay, in it there is true baptiſme, which is a marke of the Church of God. But they are deceiued: for baptiſme in the church of Rome is ſeuered from true faith, or from the Apoſtolike doctrine: & the outward baptiſme is ſeuered from the inward baptiſme. For they of that church, ouerturne iuſtification by the meere mercie of God, which is the principall part of the inward baptiſme. Againe, the tenne Tribes retained circumciſion after their apoſtaſie: yet for al that condemned to be no people of God, Oſe. 1. 9. The light in the lanthorne pertains not to the lanthorne, but to the paſſengers in the ſtreete: euen ſo the confeſſion of faith in the Symboll of the Apoſtles, and baptiſme, that are retained in the Papacie, pertaine not to the Papacie, but to another hidden church, which by theſe and other meanes is gathered out of the middeſt of Romiſh Babylon. And therfore baptiſme is rather a ſigne of this, then of the Romiſh church.

Again, we muſt be warned to take heed that we deceiue not our ſelues, thinking it a ſufficient matter that we haue bin baptized. For except Chriſt inwardly waſh vs by his ſpirit, we haue no part in him, Ioh. 13. 8. Circumciſion) ſaith Paul) auaileth not, vnleſſe thou be a doer of the law, Rom. 2. 25. Baptiſme indeed ſaueth, 1. Pet. 3. 21. but that is not the baptiſm of water, but the ſtipulation of a good conſcience, by the reſurrection of Chriſt. The outward baptiſme without the inward, is not the marke of Gods child, but the marke of the foole that makes a vow, and afterward breakes it, Eccleſ. 5. 3.

Moreouer, baptiſme is not only a ſigne of our adoption, but alſo a ſeal thereof, and a meanes to conuay it vnto vs: and for the better vnderſtanding of this point, and for a further clearing of the 27. verſe, I will ſpeake of the whole nature of baptiſme. That which is to be deliuered, I reduce to eight heads. I. the name of baptiſme, & the phraſes. II. the matter. III. the forme. IV. the end. V. the efficacie of baptiſme. VI. the neceſſity therof. VII. the circumſtances. VIII. the vſe.

Touching the name; Baptiſme is taken ſixe waies. Firſt, it ſignifies the ſuperſtitious waſhings of the Phariſes, who bound themſelues to the baptiſmes or waſhings of cups & pots, Mar. 7. 4. Secondly, it ſignifies the waſhings appointed by God in the Ceremoniall Law, Hebr. 9. 10. Thirdly, it ſignifies that waſhing by water which ſerues to ſeale the couenant of the new Teſtament, Mat. 28. 19. Fourthly, it ſignifies by a metaphor, any grieuous croſſe or calamity. Thus the paſſion of Chriſt, is called his baptiſme, Lu. 12. 50. Fiftly, it ſignifies the beſtowing of extraordinary gifts of the holy Ghoſt, and that by impoſition of hands of the Apoſtles, Acts 1. 5. and 11. 16. Laſtly, it ſignifies the whole Eccleſiaſticall A ministerie. Thus Apollos is ſaid to teach the way of the Lord, knowing nothing but the baptiſme (that is, the doctrine) of Iohn, Act. 18. 25. In the third ſenſe is baptiſme taken in this place, when Paul ſaith, ye are all baptized into Chriſt.

The phraſes vſed in Scripture of baptiſme, are ſtrange in reaſon: and therefore they are to be explaned. Heere it is ſaid, Yee that are baptized into Chriſt, put on Chriſt. The reaſon of this ſpeech is threefold. The firſt is this: the waſhing of the body with water, is an outward ſigne to repreſent to our eies and mind, the inward waſhing, and our vnion or coniunction with Chriſt: therfore they that are baptiſed, are ſaid to put on Chriſt. The ſecond reaſon B is, becauſe the waſhing by water, ſeals vnto vs our inward ingrafting into Chriſt: for as certenly as the body is waſhed with water, ſo certenly are they that beleeue ingrafted into Chriſt. The third reaſon of the ſpeech is, becauſe baptiſme is, after a ſort, an inſtrument whereby our inſition into Chriſt, and fellowſhip with him is effected. For in the right and lawfull vſe of baptiſme, God according to his owne promiſe ingrafts them into Chriſt that beleeue: and the inward waſhing is conferred with the outward waſhing. For theſe cauſes, they that are waſhed with water in baptiſme, are ſaid to put on Chriſt. In the ſame manner muſt other phraſes be vnderſtood, as when it C is ſaid, that baptiſme ſaueth, 1. Pet. 3. 21. that men muſt be baptiſed for the remiſſion of ſins, Acts 22. 16. that wee are buryed by baptiſme into the death of Chriſt, Rom. 6. 3.

The ſecond point, concerns the Matter of baptiſme. Heere I conſider three things, the ſigne, the thing ſignified, the analogy of both. The ſigne, is partly the element of water, Act. 8. 36. & partly the Rite by diuine inſtitution appertaining to the element, which is the ſacramentall vſe of it in waſhing of the bodie: & theſe 2. water, and external waſhing of the body, are the full & compleat ſigne of baptiſme.

Heere a queſtion may be made: Whether waſhing of the body in baptiſme, muſt be by dipping, or by ſprinkling? Anſ. In hot countries, & in the baptiſme of men of yeares, dip- D ping was vſed, & that by the Apoſtles: and to this Paul alludes, Rom. 6. 3. and dipping doth more fully repreſent our ſpirituall waſhing, then ſprinckling. Neuertheles in colde countries, & in the baptiſme of infants new borne, ſprinckling is to be vſed, and not dipping, in reſpect of their health and life. For the Rule is, Neceſſitie and charity diſpenſe with the Ceremoniall law. Vpon this ground, Dauid did eate the ſhewbread: circumciſion was not alwaies the eight day, as appeares by the Iſraelites in the wilderneſſe: and for the ſame cauſe in theſe countries dipping may be omitted, though otherwiſe a ſacramentall rite. And it muſt be remembred, that baptizing ſignifies not only that waſhing which is by diuing of the bodie, but alſo that which is by ſprinckling.

A The thing ſignified, or the ſubſtance of baptiſme is Chriſt himſelfe our Mediatour, as he gaue himſelfe to waſh and cleanſe vs. Thus Paul ſaith, that he cleanſeth his Church by the waſhing of water, Eph.5.6.

The Analogie, or proportion of both, is on this manner. Water reſembles Chriſt crucified, with all his merits. Saint Iohn ſaith, The blood of Chriſt cleanſeth vs from all our ſinnes, 1.Ioh.1.7. that is, the merit and efficacie of Chriſt crucified, freeth vs from our ſinnes, and from the guilt and puniſhment thereof. Externall waſhing of the bodie, reſembles inward waſhing by the ſpirit, which ſtands in iuſtification and ſanctification, 1.Cor.6.11. B Tit.3.5. The dipping of the body, ſignifies mortification, or fellowſhip with Chriſt in his death: the ſtaying vnder the water, ſignifies the buriall of ſinne: and the comming out of the water, the reſurrection from ſinne, to newneſſe of life. Rom.6.3,4.

The third point concernes the Forme of baptiſme. Matth.28.19. Goe teach all nations, baptizing them into the Name of the Father, &c. I explane the words thus: Marke, firſt it is ſaide, Teach them, that is, make them my diſciples, by calling them to beleeue, and to repent. Heere we are to conſider the Order which God obſerues in making with man the couenant in baptiſme. First of all, hee calles men by his word, and commaunds them to C beleeue and repent: when they beginne to beleeue and repent, then in the ſecond place God makes his promiſe of mercie and forgiueneſſe: and thirdly, hee ſeales his promiſe by baptiſme. This diuine Order Chriſt ſignifieth when he ſaith, make them diſciples: and it was alwayes obſerued of God. Before hee made any couenant with Abraham, and before he ſealed it by circumciſion, hee ſaith to him, Walke before me and be vpright, Gen.17.1. And of his ſeede, he ſaith, they muſt firſt doe righteouſneſſe and iudgement, and then hee will bring vpon them all that he hath ſpoken, Geneſ.18.19. to the Iſraelites hee ſaith, that they muſt turne and obey, and then hee will make all his promiſes and couenants good, Deut.30.1.6. and Iſa. D 1.16.17,19. To the Iewes Peter ſaith, Repent firſt, and then they ſhall be baptized for the remiſſion of ſinnes, Acts 2.38.42. And Philip ſaid to the Eunuch, If thou beleeueſt with all thy heart, thou maieſt be baptized, Acts 8.37.

The vſe. By this order wee ſee, that the commaundement to beleeue and to repent, is more large and generall, then the promiſe of mercie in Chriſt. For the commaundement is giuen to all hearers to turne and beleeue, and the promiſe is made onely to ſuch hearers, as doe indeed turne and beleeue: therefore it is a falſhood to imagine, that the promiſe of ſaluation belongs generally to al mākinde.

Againe, by this order it appeareth, that Repentance belongs to baptiſme: and it is one of the firſt things that are required: and therefore it is follie to make repentance a diſtinct meanes of ſaluation, and a diſtinct Sacrament from baptiſme.

Thirdly, if it be demaunded, why ſo many perſons that haue beene baptized, liue for all this, as if they had not beene baptized in the common ſinnes of the world, like prophane Eſaus: and yet doe comfort themſelues in their baptiſme? Anſw. They doe not know and conſider the order which God vſed in couenanting with them in baptiſme: but they deale prepoſterouſly, ouerſlipping the commandement of repenting and beleeuing, and in the firſt place lay holde of Gods promiſe made to them in baptiſme. This is the cauſe of ſo much prophaneneſſe in the world.

Againe, there bee many perſons that haue beene baptized, who neuertheleſſe cannot abide to heare and reade the word of God: & the reaſon is, becauſe they obſerue not the order of their baptiſme, firſt of al to become diſciples, and then to lay hold of the promiſes of God.

They likewiſe are to be blamed, that bring vp their youth in ignorance. For they are baptized vpon condition that they ſhall become diſciples of Chriſt, when they come to yeares of diſcretion. And they are by this meanes barred from all the mercies of God: for we muſt, as good diſciples, obey the commandement, that bids vs turne and beleeue, before we can haue any benefite or profit by any of the promiſes of God.

Laſtly, we are heere taught in the working of our ſaluation, to keepe the order of God, which he hath ſet downe vnto vs in baptiſme which is, firſt of all to turne vnto God, according to all his lawes: and ſecondly, vpon our conuerſion to lay holde of the promiſes of God, and the confirmation thereof by the Sacraments. Thus ſhall we finde comfort in the promiſes of God, and haue true fellowſhip with God, if we beginne where he begins in making of his couenant with vs, and end where he ends. And this we muſt do not onely in the time of our firſt conuerſion, but alſo afterward in the the time of diſtreſſe and affliction, and at ſuch times as by frailtie wee fall and offend God. In a word, if for practiſe wee alwayes keepe our ſelues to this order, wee ſhall finde true comfort in life and death.

It followes, Baptizing them into the name, or, in the name of the Father, Sonne, and holie Ghoſt. Theſe words ſignifie: firſt, to baptize by the commandement and authority of the Father, Sonne, and holy Ghoſt: ſecondly, to baptize by and with the inuocation of the name of the true God. Whatſoeuer yee doe in word or deede, doe it in the name of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, that is, by the inuocation of the name of Chriſt, Coloſſ.3.17. Thirdly, to baptize in the name, &c. ſignifies to waſh with water, in token that the partie baptized hath the name of GOD named vpon him, and that he is receiued into the houſhold or family of God, as a child of God, a member of Chriſt, and the temple of the holy Ghoſt. Thus Iacob ſaith in the adoption of Ephraim and Manaſſes, Let them be mine, & let my name be called vpon them. Gen. 48. 5. 16. And Paul ſaith, that the Corinthians might not be named and diſtinguiſhed by Paul, Cephas, Apollos, becauſe they were not baptized into their names, but into the name of Chriſt, 1. Cor. 1. 13. And this I take it to be the ful ſenſe of the phraſe.

Here we ſee what is done in baptiſme; the couenant of grace is ſolemnized betweene God and the partie baptized. And in this couenant ſome actions belong to God, and ſome to the parties baptized. Gods actions are two. The firſt is, the making of promiſe of reconciliation, that is, of remiſſion of ſinnes, and life euerlaſting, to them that are baptized and beleeue. The ſecond is, the obſignation or ſealing of this promiſe: and that is twofold: outward, or inward. The outward ſeale, is the waſhing by water: and this waſhing ſerues not to ſeale by nature, but by the inſtitution of God, in theſe words, baptize them, &c. and therefore Paul ſaith, clenſing the Church by the waſhing of water in the word, Eph. 5. 26. The inward ſealing is by the earneſt of Gods ſpirit, Eph. 1. 13. The action of the partie baptized, is a certaine ſtipulation, or obligation, whereby he bindes himſelfe to giue homage to the Father, Sonne, and holy Ghoſt. This homage ſtands in faith, whereby all the promiſes of God are beleeued, and in obedience to all his commandements. The ſigne of this obligation is, that the partie baptized willingly yeelds himſelfe to be waſhed with water.

It is not ſaid, In the name of God, but in the name of the Father, Sonne, and holy Ghoſt: to teach vs the right way to know & to acknowledge the true God. This knowledge ſtands in ſixe points, all here expreſſed. The firſt is, that there is one God, and no more. For though there be three that are named, yet there is but one name, that is, one in authoritie, will, & worſhip of all three. And elſewhere, men are ſaid to be baptized in the name of the Lord, Act. 10. 48. The ſecond is, that this one true God, is the Father, Sonne, and holy Ghoſt. A myſterie vnſearchable. The third, that theſe three are really diſtinct, ſo as the Father is firſt in order, the Sonne the ſecond, and the holy Ghoſt, not the firſt or ſecond, but the third. The fourth is, that they are all one in operation, Ioh. 5. 19. and ſpecially in the act of reconciliation, or couenant making. For the Father ſends the Sonne to be our Redeemer: the Sonne workes in his owne perſon, the worke of redemption: & the holy Ghoſt applies the ſame by his efficacie. The fift is, that they are all one in worſhip: for the Father, Sonne, and holy Ghoſt, are ioyntly to be worſhipped together, & God in them. The laſt is, that we are to know God, not as A he is in himſelfe, but as he hath reuealed himſelfe vnto vs in the couenant of Grace: and therfore we muſt acknowledge the Father to be our father, the Sonne to be our Redemer, the holy Ghoſt to be our comforter, and ſeeke to grow in the knowledge and experience of this.

It may be demaunded, whether baptiſme may not be adminiſtred in the name of Chriſt alone, or in the name of God, without mention of the perſons in the Godhead? Anſ. No. For the true forme of baptiſme is here preſcribed. If it be ſaid, that Peter bids them of Ieruſalem, repent and be baptized into the name of Chriſt, Act. 2. 38. I anſwer, that Peters B intent in that place is, to ſet downe not the forme of baptiſme, but the ende and ſcope thereof, which is, that we may attaine to true fellowſhip with Chriſt.

The fourth point is, concerning the endes of baptiſme, which are foure. The firſt is, that baptiſme ſerues to be a pledge vnto vs in reſpect of our weakeneſſe, of all the graces and mercies of God, and ſpecially of our vnion with Chriſt, of remiſſion of ſins, and of mortification. Secondly, it ſerues to be a ſigne of Chriſtian profeſſion before the world: and therefore it is called the ſtipulation or interrogation of a good conſcience. 1. Pet. 3. 21. Thirdly it ſerues to be a meanes of our firſt entrance or admiſſion into the viſible Church. Laſtly, C it is a meanes of vnitie. Reade Eph. 4. 5. 1. Cor. 12. 13.

The fifth point concernes the Efficacy of baptiſme. Of which there be foure neceſſarie queſtions. The firſt is, whether the Efficacy of baptiſme extend it ſelfe to all ſinnes, and to the whole life of man? For anſwer, I will ſet downe what we teach, and what the Papiſts. We teach, that the vſe of baptiſme inlargeth it ſelfe to the whole life of man, and that it takes away all ſinnes paſt, preſent, & to come: one caution remembred, that the party baptiſed, ſtand to the order of baptiſme, which is, D to turne vnto God, and to beleeue in Chriſt, and ſo to continue by a continuall renouation of faith and repentance, as occaſion ſhall be offered. Reaſons may be theſe. Firſt, the Scripture ſpeakes of them that had long before beene baptiſed, and that in the time preſent, baptiſme ſaueth, 1. Pet. 3. 21. and, ye are buried by baptiſme, into the death of Chriſt. Rom. 6. 4. And in the future tenſe it is ſaid, he that beleeueth & is baptiſed, ſhall be ſaued. And Paul ſaith, that the Church is cleanſed with the waſhing of water, that it may be preſented glorious and without ſpot vnto God. Eph. 5. 26. And all this ſhewes that baptiſme hath the ſame efficacie after, which it had before the adminiſtration thereof. Secondly, the couenant of grace is euerlaſting, Iſa. 54. 10. Hoſ. 2. 19. and the couenant is the foundation or ſubſtance of baptiſme: therefore baptiſme is not to be tied to any time: but it muſt haue his force ſo long as the couenant is of force. And this appeares by the example of the Galatians, who are now fallen away to another Goſpell after their baptiſme, and yet are inſtructed and directed by their baptiſme. Laſtly, it hath bene the doctrine of the ancient Church, that all ſins are done away by baptiſme, euen ſins to come.

Au. de nupt. & concup. l.c.33. ad Bon. l.2. c. 13.

The doctrine of the Papiſts is, that baptiſme takes away all ſinnes that go before the adminiſtration thereof: and that ſinnes after baptiſme are not taken away by baptiſme, but by the Sacrament of penance. But the doctrine is erroneous, as may appeare by the arguments which they vſe.

Argum. firſt. Circumciſion had no vſe after the adminiſtration thereof, for the aboliſhing of ſinne. Therefore neither hath baptiſme. Anſ. Circumciſion had. And this appeares, becauſe the Prophets put the Iewes in minde of their circumciſion, when they fell away from God, bidding them to circumciſe the foreskinne of their hearts, Ieremie 4.4.

Argum. ſecond. The Apoſtles vſed to call them that ſinned after baptiſme, to confeſſion of ſinne, and to repentance, or penance, *Act.*8.21. 1.*Ioh.*1.9. Anſ. This makes for vs: for in ſo doing they bring men to their baptiſme, and to the order ſet downe there, which is, that the party baptiſed, muſt firſt of all turne to God, & beleeue in Chriſt: and there is no new order ſet downe afterward, but onely a renewing of this firſt baptiſmall order, both in the miniſterie of the word, and in the ſupper of the Lord. And whereas they make a diſtinction of penance the vertue, and penance the Sacrament, placing the vertue before and after baptiſme, and the Sacrament onely after: for this, they haue no word of God.

Argum. third. If a man be inlightned, that is, baptiſed, and then fall againe, he cannot be renewed by repentance, which is in baptiſme, Heb. 6.6. Anſ. The text ſpeaks not of them that fall after baptiſme, but of them that fall away by an vniuerſall apoſtaſie, denying Chriſt. For it is ſaid, v.7. that they crucifie Chriſt againe, that is, crucifie Chriſt crucified, and ſo make a mocke of him, and treade vnder foote the blood of Chriſt. Heb.10.29. Againe, the text ſpeakes not particularly of repentance in baptiſme, but of all repentance whatſoeuer; yea of repentance after baptiſme. For there is no place for repentance where Chriſt is renounced.

Arg. 4. Penance (as Hierome ſaith) is a ſecond table after ſhipwracke. Anſw. Repentance indeede is a ſecond table or boord, whereby a ſinner fallen from his baptiſme returnes againe to it, and ſo comes to the hauen of euerlaſting happineſſe. Thus then wee ſee that baptiſme is the true ſacrament of repentance: for repentance pertaines to the inward baptiſme.

The vſe. If baptiſme ſerue for the whole life of man: then if thou be in any miſerie or diſtreſſe, haue recourſe to thy baptiſme, and there ſhalt thou finde thy comfort, namely, that God is thy God if thou truely turne and beleeue in him. Secondly, remember euery day the obligation of homage, wherewith thou haſt bound thy ſelfe to God: ſpecially in thy temptations remember it: and ſee thou ſtand to it, and make it good.

The ſecond queſtion is, whether baptiſme aboliſh Originall ſinne, or no? The anſwer of the Papiſt is, that it doth: ſo as in the partie baptiſed, there remaineth nothing that God may iuſtly hate: and therefore he ſaith, that Originall ſinne after baptiſme, ceaſeth to be ſinne properly. We teach, and are to hold, that the perfect and intire baptiſme (in which the outward and inward baptiſme are ioyned together) aboliſheth the puniſhment of ſinne, and the guilt, that is, the obligation to puniſhment, and the fault: yet not ſimply, but in two reſpects: firſt, in reſpect of imputation; becauſe God doth not impute Originall ſinne to them that are in Chriſt: ſecondly, in reſpect of dominion; becauſe Originall ſinne reigneth not in them that are regenerate. Neuertheleſſe, after baptiſme, it remaines in them that are baptiſed, and is ſtill, and that properly, ſin. Paul ſaith, Rom.7.20. If I doe that I would not, it is no more I that doe it, but ſinne that dwelleth in me doth it. Here marke, Paul calles concupiſcence in himſelfe after regeneration, ſinne; and that properly: becauſe he ſaith it is the ſame that maketh men to ſinne. And Coloſſ. 3.5. he ſaith, Mortifie your earthly members: and among the reſt he nameth, euill concupiſcence. And to the Epheſians 4.22. Be ye renewed in the ſpirit of your mindes. Therefore after baptiſme ſome portions remaine ſtill of the old man, or of originall ſinne. Saint Iohn ſaith, 1.*Ioh.*1.8. If we ſay we haue no ſinne, we deceiue our ſelues. Anſwer is made, that this is ſpoken of veniall, or ſmall ſinnes: but how can they be ſmall ſinnes that are to be waſhed away with the blood of Chriſt, as he ſaith, verſe 7? And if theſe words be ſpoken of infants (as they are) then muſt concupiſcence be a ſinne in them: for they haue no actuall ſinnes. Laſtly, Chriſt ſaith, *Ioh.*13.10. He that is all waſhed muſt haue his feete, that is, his carnall affections, waſhed. Here obſerue two things. One, that defilements of ſinne remaine in them that are waſhed. The ſecond, that they are after the firſt waſhing, to be done away by Chriſt, and not by the acts of our penance.

The grounds of Popiſh doctrine in this point, are two. The firſt is this. They make three degrees of Concupiſcence. The firſt is, the proneneſſe in the fleſh to rebell againſt the law of the minde, or the proneneſſe to euill. The ſecond ſtands in the firſt motions to ſinne, which goe before conſent of will. The third, ſtands in acts of luſt ioyned with conſent of will. The third, they ſay, is forbidden in the morall law, which forbiddes and condemnes voluntarie concupiſcence: and the two firſt are not. Becauſe (as they ſpeake) concupiſcence it ſelfe with the firſt motions are not in mans power: and therefore they are rather to be tearmed defects or infirmities, then ſinnes: and that men are no more to be blamed for them then for the diſeaſes of their bodies. Anſw. The doctrine is falſe: for it is an euident truth that Concupiſcence with the firſt motions thereof to euill, is condemned in the Morall law. It is a Principle in expounding the law: where any actuall ſinne is forbidden, there all cauſes, occaſions, and furtherances thereof, are likewiſe forbidden. Therefore conſidering actuall concupiſcence ioyned with conſent, is forbidden in the law, Originall concupiſcence with the firſt motions thereof, beeing cauſes of the former, are likewiſe forbidden. And Paul ſaith, he had not knowne Luſt to be ſinne, vnleſſe the law had ſaid, Thou ſhalt not luſt. Rom. 7. 7. Now he was a Doctor of the law, and knew that luſt with conſent was a ſinne: for thus much the light of nature teacheth: therefore the law ſpeakes of an higher degree of luſt, namely, of luſt going before conſent.

The ſecond ground is this. When ſinne is remitted, it doth not make men guilty, but ceaſeth to be a fault: Originall ſinne therefore ceaſeth to be ſinne after baptiſme. Anſw. Though actuall guilt be taken away, yet potentiall guilt remaineth, namely, an aptneſſe in Originall ſinne, to make men guilty: and though it be not the fault of this or that perſon, yet it is a fault in nature, or as it is conſidered in it ſelfe.

The vſe. If originall ſinne remaine after baptiſme to the death, then we muſt humble our ſelues, and vſe to the very death, the plea of mercy and pardon, denying our ſelues, and reſting on Chriſt.

Againe, if perſons baptiſed be ſinners to the death, it may be demaunded, what difference there is betweene the godly and vngodly? Anſw. In them that are regenerate, there is a ſorrow for their inward corruptions, and for their ſins paſt, with a deteſtation of them: and withall there is a purpoſe in them to ſinne no more, and with this purpoſe there is ioyned an endeauour to pleaſe God in all his commandements: ſo as if they do ſinne, they can ſay with good conſcience, that they ſinned againſt their purpoſe and reſolution. This cannot the vngodly man doe.

The third point is, how baptiſme conferres grace? Anſw. It conferres grace: becauſe it is a meanes to giue and exhibit to the beleeuing minde Chriſt with his benefits; and this it doth by his ſignification. For it ſerues as a particular and infallible certificate to aſſure the partie baptized, of the forgiueneſſe of his ſinnes, and of his eternall ſaluation. And whereas the Miniſter, in the name of God, applies the promiſe of mercy to him that is baptiſed, it is indeed as much as if God ſhould A haue made a particular promiſe to him. In this regard, baptiſme may be well ſaid to conferre grace, as the Kings letters are ſaid to ſaue the life of the malefactour, when they do but ſignifie to him and others, that the Kings pleaſure is to ſhew fauour. Againe, baptiſme may be ſaid to confer grace, becauſe the outward waſhing of the body is a token or pledge of the grace of God: and by this pledge faith is confirmed; which is an inſtrument to apprehend or receiue the grace of God. And this confirmation is made by a kind of reaſoning in the minde, on this manner: He that vſeth the ſigne aright, ſhall receiue the thing ſignified: I (ſaith the partie baptiſed, being of yeares) vſe the ſigne aright in faith and re- B pentance: therefore I ſhall receiue the thing ſignified, remiſſion of ſinnes, and life euerlaſting. A king ſaith to his ſubiect: He that brings the head of ſuch a traytour, ſhall haue a thouſand poundes. Well: the head of the foreſaid traytour is cut off: and he that hath the head may ſay, Here is a thouſand pounds, or, this will bring me a thouſand pounds, becauſe it is vnto him as a pledge vpon the kings word of the reward of a thouſand pounds. And ſo is the waſhing in baptiſme an infallible pledge to him that beleeues, of the pardon of his ſinnes. Thus doe the ſacraments conferre grace, and no otherwiſe. One reaſon for many may be this. The word of God conferres grace (for it is the power of C God to ſaluation to them that beleeue) and this it doth by ſignifying the will of God, by the eare to the mind: now euery ſacrament is the word of God made viſible to the eye: the ſacrament therefore conferres grace by vertue of his ſignification, and by reaſon it is a pledge by the appointment of God, of his mercie and goodneſſe. It may be ſaid, a ſacrament is not onely a ſigne and a ſeale but alſo an inſtrument to conuay the grace of God to vs. Anſw. It is not an inſtrument hauing the grace of God tyed vnto it, or ſhut vp in it: but an inſtrument to which grace is preſent by aſſiſtance in the right vſe thereof: becauſe in and with the right vſe of the ſacrament, God conferues grace; and thus is it an inſtrument, D and no otherwiſe, that is, a morall and not a phyſicall inſtrument.

The doctrine of the Papiſt is, that the ſacrament conferres grace by the worke done: that is, that the outward action of the Miniſter conferres grace by his owne force, when the ſacrament is adminiſtred. And that it may confer grace, ſome ſay, that the ſaid action hath vertue in it for this purpoſe, which paſſeth away when the action is ended: others ſay, it hath no vertue in it, but that Gods vſing of the action eleuates it, and makes it able to conferre grace. But this doctrine is a fiction of the braine of man. Iohn the Baptiſt, Matth. 3. 11. makes two baptiſers, himſelfe, and Chriſt; and he diſtinguiſheth their actions: his owne action is, to waſh with water; and the action of Chriſt is, to waſh with the holy Ghoſt. This diſtinction he would not haue made, if he by the waſhing of water had conferred the holy Ghoſt. Paul ſaith, Chriſt ſanctifieth his Church by the waſhing of water, through the word, Eph.5.26. Baptiſme therefore doth not conferre grace, becauſe the bodie is waſhed with water: but becauſe when it is waſhed, the word of promiſe is beleeued and receiued. The Apoſtles are called, fellow-workers with God, 1. Cor. 3. 9 and yet in the worke of regeneration, and in giuing life, they are not any thing, verſe, 7. Peter ſaith directly, that the waſhing away of the filth of the fleſh doth not ſaue, but the ſtipulation that a good conſcience makes to God, 1.Pet.3.21. The worke of creation is from God immediately and only: now regeneration is a worke of creation: and therfore it is of God immediately, and not immediately from the Sacrament, and mediately from God. The fleſh of Chriſt is eleuated and exalted aboue the condition of all creatures: neuertheleſſe vertue to giue life, is not in the fleſh of Chriſt, but in the godhead: much leſſe then ſhall the Sacraments haue vertue in them to conferre grace. Faith is ſaid to iuſtifie, yet not by his owne vertue: for it doth not cauſe our iuſtification, but ſerue as a meanes to apprehend it, when it is cauſed by God: how then ſhall the Sacraments cauſe iuſtification? Laſtly, if the outward waſhing of the body be eleuated aboue his naturall condition, in the adminiſtration of baptiſme, then ſo oft as the outward element is vſed in any Sacrament, there is a miracle wrought: and Miniſters of Sacramenrs are workers of miracles, which may not be ſaid.

Againe, their doctrine is erronious, in that they teach, that the outward act in the Sacrament performed by the Miniſter, conferres grace, where there is no gift of faith to receiue that which is conferred: contrarie to that ſaying, Ioh.1.12. As many as receiued him, he gaue this power to be the ſonnes of God. Indeed they ſay, there muſt be faith and repentance to diſpoſe the partie: but this diſpoſition ſerues onely to take away impediments, and not to inable vs to receiue that which God giueth.

The vſe. We muſt not thinke it ſufficient that we come to the Church, heare Gods word, and pray, contenting our ſelues in the worke done. For thus ſhall we deceiue our ſelues: but in doing theſe acts of religion, we muſt in our hearts turne vnto God, and by faith imbrace his promiſes: otherwiſe the beſt actions we doe ſhall be vnprofitable vnto vs, Heb.4.2.

Againe, if the vſing of the element in the Sacrament doe not conferre grace, then be aſſured that charmes and ſpels, be the words neuer ſo good, haue no vertue in them to doe vs good but by diabolicall operation.

The laſt queſtion is, whether baptiſme imprint a Character or marke in the ſoule, A which is neuer blotted out? Anſ. In Scripture there is a two-fold marke of diſtinction, one viſible, the other inuiſible. Of the firſt kinde, was the blood of the paſchall lambe, in the firſt paſſeouer: for by it the firſt borne of the Iſraelites were marked, when the firſt borne of the Egyptians were ſlaine. Of this kind is baptiſme: for by it Chriſtian people are diſtinguiſhed from Iewes, Turkes, and infidels. The inuiſible marke is two-fold. The firſt, is the eternall election of God, 2. Tim. 2, 19. The foundation of God ſtands ſure, and hath this ſeale, The Lord knowes who are his. By vertue of this, Chriſt ſaith, I know my ſheepe, Ioh.10. And by this the Elect of all nations are marked, Apoc.7. and 9. The ſecond is the gift of rege- B neration, which is nothing elſe but the imprinting of the image of God in the ſoules of men: and by this beleeuers are ſaid to be ſealed, Eph.1.13 2.Cor.1.22. And baptiſme is a meanes to ſee this marke in vs; becauſe it is the lauer of regeneration.

The Papiſts haue deuiſed another worke, which they call the Indeleble character: and they make it to be a diſtinct thing from regeneration: and they ſay, it is imprinted in the ſoules of all men, good and badde, and remaines in them when they are condemned. What this marke ſhould be they cannot tell; ſome make it a qualitie; ſome, a relation: but indeede there is no Scripture for it, the truth is, it is a meere fiction of the braine of C man.

The ſixth point to be handled concernes the Neceſſity of Baptiſme. Here we muſt put difference betweene the couenant of grace, and baptiſme, which is the confirmation or ſeale of the couenant. To make couenant with God, and to be in the ſaid couenant, is abſolutely neceſſarie to ſaluation: for vnleſſe God be our God, & we the ſeruants of God we cannot be ſaued.

Baptiſme it ſelfe is neceſſarie in part: firſt, in reſpect of the commaundement of God, who hath inioyned vs to vſe it: ſecondly, in reſpect of our weakneſſe; who haue need of al D helps that may confirme our faith. Yet baptiſme is not ſimply neceſſarie to ſaluation: for the want of baptiſme (when it cannot be had) doth not condemne; but the contempt of it when it may be had: and the contempt is pardonable, if men repent afterward: for the children of beleeuing parents are borne holy. 1.Cor.7.14. and theirs is the kingdome of of God: and therefore, if they die before baptiſme, they are ſaued. The theefe vpon the croſſe, and many holy Martyrs, haue died without baptiſme, and are in the kingdome of heauen.

It is obiected, that the male child, which is not circumciſed muſt (by Gods commaundement) be cut off from the people of God, Gen.17.14. and therefore he that is not baptiſed muſt alſo be cut off. Anſw. The text is ſpoken and meant, not of infants, but of men

A of yeares, who being till then vncircumciſed, deſpiſe the ordinance of God, and refuſe to be circumciſed. And this appeares by the reaſon following: for he hath made my couenant voide: now infants doe not this, but their parents, or men of yeares.

Secondly, the ſpeech of Chriſt is obiected, Ioh. 3. 5. Except a man be borne of water and the holy Ghoſt, he cannot enter into the kingdome of God. Anſw. Chriſt alludes to the waſhings of the old Teſtament, Ezec. 36. 25. and withall giues an expoſition of them, on this manner. Thou art a Phariſie, & loueſt much waſhing: but if thou wouldeſt enter into the kingdome of heauen, thou muſt be waſhed with cleane B water, that is, borne anew by the holy Ghoſt. Againe, I anſwer, that if the words be meant of baptiſme, they carry this ſenſe. The kingdome of heauen doth not ſignifie life eternall, but the Church of the new Teſtament, and that in his viſible eſtate, Mark. 9. 1. and baptiſme makes men viſible members of the Church, & regeneration by the ſpirit makes them true and liuely members. Here then baptiſme is made neceſſarie, not in reſpect of eternall life, but in reſpect of our admiſſion and entrance into the Church whereof it is now the onely meanes.

The ſeauenth point, is touching the Circumſtances of baptiſme, which are fiue. The firſt, concernes the perſons which are to C adminiſter baptiſme, of whome I propound foure queſtions.

The firſt is, whether not onely Miniſters of the word, but alſo lay-perſons (as they are called) or meere priuate men, may adminiſter baptiſme? Anſw. Miniſters of the word onely. For, to baptiſe is a part of the publike Miniſtery, Matth. 28. 18. Goe teach all nations baptizing them. And marke how preaching and baptizing are ioyned together: and things which God hath ioyned, no man may ſeparate. Againe, he that muſt performe any part of the publike Miniſtery, muſt haue a calling, Rom. 10. 14. Heb. 3. 5. but meere priuate perſons haue no calling to this buſineſſe. And whatſoeuer is not of faith, is ſinne: now the D Adminiſtration of baptiſme by priuate perſons is without faith. For there is neither precept, nor fitte example for it in the word of God.

The example of Zippora is alleadged, Exod. 4. 28. who circumciſed her child. Anſw. The example is many waies diſcommendable. For ſhe did it in the preſence of her husband, when there was no neede: ſhee did it in haſt, that ſhe might haue preuented her husband: ſhee did it in anger: for ſhee caſt the fore-skin at the feete of Moſes. And it ſeemes ſhee was no beleeuer, but a meere Madianite. For ſhee contemned circumciſion, when ſhee called her husband a man of blood, by reaſon of the circumciſion of the child. verſ. 26. and in this reſpect it ſeemes, Moſes either put her away, or ſhee went away when he went downe to Egypt.

Againe, it is obiected, that priuate perſons may teach: and therefore baptiſe. Anſw. Priuate teaching, and miniſteriall teaching are diſtinct in kind, as the authoritie of a maſter of a family, is diſtinct in kind from the authority of a Magiſtrate. A priuate perſon, as a father or maſter, when he teacheth the word of God, he doth it by right of a maſter or father, and he is mooued to doe it by the law of charitie: but Miniſters when they teach, are mooued to teach by ſpeciall calling, and they doe it with authoritie, as Embaſſadours in the roome and ſtead of Chriſt, 2. Cor. 5. 21. Againe, though a priuate man might diſpenſe the word alone: yet doth it not follow that he may adminiſter both the word and the ſeale thereof, both which are ioyned in baptiſme, and ioyntly adminiſtred.

The ſecond queſtion is, whether baptiſme adminiſtred by a wicked man, or an heretike, be indeed true baptiſme? Anſw. If the ſaid party be admitted to ſtand in the roome of a true paſtor or Miniſter; and keepe the right forme in baptiſing, according to the inſtitution, it is true baptiſme. The Scribes and Phariſies the chiefeſt Doctours of the Iewes, were not of the tribe of Leui, but of other tribes: & they were indeede, euen the beſt of them, but heretikes and apoſtataes, and conſequently to be depoſed and excommunicate: neuertheles, becauſe they were in the place of good teachers, and ſate in Moſes chaire, that is, taught ſundry points of Moſes doctrine: therefore Chriſt ſaith, heare them, Matth. 23. 1. And to this effect was the concluſion of the Churches in Africa, againſt Cyprian.

Vpon the ſame ground the ſame anſwer is to be made, if it be demaunded, whether baptiſme adminiſtred by him that cannot preach, be of force or no? It were indeed to bee wiſhed that all Miniſters of holy things were preachers of the word: neuertheleſſe, if ſuch as preach not, ſtand in the roome of lawful paſtors, and keepe the forme of baptiſme, it is baptiſme indeed.

The third queſtion is, whether an Intention to baptiſe, be neceſſarie in him that baptiſeth? Anſw. If the word of Inſtitution come to the Element, it is a Sacrament whatſoeuer the miniſter intend. Paul reioyced that Chriſt was preached, though many preached him of enuie or contention, intending no good. Phil. 1. 16. And the Prieſt in the Maſſe pronouncing the words of conſecration, if he intend not to conſecrate (in Popiſh learning) there is no conſecration: and thus the bread eleuated is meere bread, and not the bodie of Chriſt: and conſequently the people adore not Chriſt, but an idol. The intention therefore of the minde is not neceſſarie, ſo be it the Inſtitution be obſerued. And the efficacy of the Sacrament depends not on the will of man, but on the will of God.

The laſt queſtion is, what is the duty of the

A Miniſter in baptiſing? Anſw. He ſtands in the roome of God: and what he doth according to the Inſtitution, it is as much as if God himſelfe had done it with his owne hand from heauen. And therefore, when the Miniſter applieth water, (which is the ſigne and pledge of grace,) to the body, he doth withall apply the Promiſe of remiſſion of ſinnes and life euerlaſting, to the partie baptiſed. And that is as much as if God ſhould ſay to the partie, calling him by his name, I freely giue vnto thee the pardon of thy ſinnes, and life euerlaſting, vpon condition thou keepe the order ſet downe in baptiſme, which is, to turne vnto me, and to beleeue in Chriſt. Here we ſee a B ground of ſpeciall faith: for if God for his part by the hand of the Miniſter apply the promiſe of mercie vnto euery particular beleeuer: euery particular beleeuer is againe by a ſpeciall faith to receiue the promiſe. Again, the conſideration of this which God hath done for vs in baptiſme, muſt mooue vs ſeriouſly to turne vnto him according to all his lawes, and by faith of our hearts to apprehend his mercifull promiſes, and to reſt on them. For when God ſhall ſpeake vnto vs particularly, and as it were, aſſure vs of his mercies with his owne hand and ſeale, we muſt needes be much mooued and affected therewith.

The ſecond circumſtance is concerning C the perſons to be baptiſed: and they are all ſuch as be in the Couenant, in likelihood, or in the iudgement of charitie. For the ſeale may not be denyed to them that bring the tables of the couenant. And they are of two ſorts: Men of yeares, and Infants.

Men of yeares that ioyne themſelues to the true Church, are to be baptiſed: yet before their baptiſme, they are to make confeſſion of their faith, and to promiſe amendment of life. Act. 2. 38. and 10. 38. And thus places of Scripture that require actuall faith, and amendment of life in them that are baptiſed, are to be vnderſtood of men of yeares.

Infants of beleeuing parents are likewiſe to be baptiſed. The grounds of their bap- D tiſme are theſe. Firſt, the commandement of God, Matth. 28. 18. Baptiſe all nations, &c. in which words the baptiſme of infants is preſcribed. For the Apoſtles by vertue of this commiſſion baptiſed whole ſamilies. Act. 16. 15. and 33. Againe, circumciſion of Infants was commanded by God, Gen. 17. 14. and Baptiſme in the new Teſtament, ſucceedes in the roome of Circumciſion. Col. 2. 11. therefore baptiſme of infants is likewiſe commanded. The ſecond ground is this: Infants of beleeuing parents, are in the couenant of grace: for this is the tenour of the couenant. I will be thy God, and the God of thy ſeede, Gen. 17. 7. It may be ſaid, that this promiſe was made in this ſort onely to Abraham, becauſe he was to be the father of the faithfull. Anſw. It pertaines to all beleeuing parents. Exod. 20. God promiſeth to ſhew mercie to thouſands of them that loue him. Act. 2. 39. Peter ſaith to the Iewes that heard him preach, The promiſes belong to you, and to your children, Paul ſaith, If the parents beleeue, the children are holy, 1. Cor. 7. 14. If holy, then are they in the Couenant: now they are holy, becauſe we are in the iudgement of Chriſtian charitie, to eſteeme them all as regenerate and ſanctified, ſecret iudgements (in the meane ſeaſon) left to God. Now then, becauſe infants are in the couenant, they are to be baptiſed. For this is the reaſon of Saint Peter: To whom the promiſes belong, to them belongeth baptiſme: but to you and your children belong the promiſes: therefore you & your children are to be baptiſed. Act. 2. 38, 39.

It may be obiected, that we cannot tell, whether infants be indeede the children of God, or no: & if they be not children of God, we may not baptiſe them. Anſw. The ſame may be ſaid of men of yeares: for we know not whether they be indeed the children of God. And therefore we may by the like reaſon exclude them from all Sacraments. Againe, we are to preſume (in all likelihood) that infants of beleeuing parents, are the children of God, becauſe in their conception and birth, God begins to manifeſt his election: ſhewing himſelfe a God, not onely to the parents, but alſo to their ſeede.

Secondly, it is obiected, that infants haue no faith; & conſequently, that baptiſme is vnprofitable vnto them. Anſw. Some thinke, they haue faith, as they haue regeneration, that is, the inclination or ſeede of faith. Others ſay, that the faith of the parents is alſo the faith of their children: becauſe the parents by their faith, receiue the promiſe of God, both for themſelues and their children: and thus to be borne in the Church of beleeuing parents, is in ſtead of the profeſſion of faith. To this ſecond opinion I rather incline, becauſe it is the auncient and receiued doctrine of the Church.

Thirdly, it is alleadged, that infants know not what is done, when they are baptiſed. Anſw. For all this, baptiſme hath his vſe in them: for it is a ſeale of the couenant, and a meanes to admit them into the fellowſhip of the viſible Church, whereof for right they are members. A father makes a purchace for himſelfe and his children: at the time of the ſealing the children know not what is done; & yet the purchaſe is not made in vaine for them.

It may be demanded, whether the children of Turkes and Iewes are to be baptiſed? Anſ. No: becauſe the parents are forth of the couenant.

Secondly, it is demaunded, whether the children of profeſſed Papiſts, are to be baptiſed? Anſw. The parents are perſons baptiſed in the name of the Father, Sonne, and holy Ghoſt. And though the Papacie be not the of yeares, who being till then vncircumciſed, deſpiſe the ordinance of God, and refuſe to be circumciſed. And this appeares by the reaſon following; for he hath made my couenant voide: now infants doe not this, but their parents, or men of yeares.

Secondly, the ſpeech of Chriſt is obiected, Ioh.3.5. Except a man be borne of water and the holy Ghoſt, he cannot enter into the kingdome of God. Anſw. Chriſt alludes to the waſhings of the old Teſtament, Ezec.36.25. and withall giues an expoſition of them, on this manner. Thou art a Phariſie, & loueſt much waſhing: but if thou wouldeſt enter into the kingdome of heauen, thou muſt be waſhed with cleane water, that is, borne anew by the holy Ghoſt. Againe, I anſwer, that if the words be meant of baptiſme, they carry this ſenſe. The kingdome of heauen doth not ſignifie life eternall, but the Church of the new Teſtament, and that in his viſible eſtate, Mark.9.1. and baptiſme makes men viſible members of the Church, & regeneration by the ſpirit makes them true and liuely members. Here then baptiſme is made neceſſarie, not in reſpect of eternall life, but in reſpect of our admiſſion and entrance into the Church whereof it is now the onely meanes.

The ſeauenth point, is touching the Circumſtances of baptiſme, which are fiue. The firſt, concernes the perſons which are to adminiſter baptiſme, of whome I propound foure queſtions.

The firſt is, whether not onely Miniſters of the word, but alſo lay-perſons (as they are called) or meere priuate men, may adminiſter baptiſme? Anſw. Miniſters of the word onely. For, to baptiſe is a part of the publike Miniſtery, Matth.28.18. Goe teach all nations baptizing them. And marke how preaching and baptizing are ioyned together: and things which God hath ioyned, no man may ſeparate. Againe, he that muſt performe any part of the publike Miniſtery, muſt haue a calling, Rom.10.14. Heb.3.5. but meere priuate perſons haue no calling to this buſineſſe. And whatſoeuer is not of faith, is ſinne: now the Adminiſtration of baptiſme by priuate perſons is without faith. For there is neither precept, nor fitte example for it in the word of God.

The example of Zippora is alleadged, Exod. 4.28. who circumciſed her child. Anſw. The example is many waies diſcommendable. For ſhe did it in the preſence of her husband, when there was no neede: ſhee did it in haſt, that ſhe might haue preuented her husband: ſhee did it in anger: for ſhee caſt the fore-skin at the feete of Moſes. And it ſeemes ſhee was no beleeuer, but a meere Madianite. For ſhee contemned circumciſion, when ſhee called her husband a man of blood, by reaſon of the circumciſion of the child. verſ. 26. and in this reſpect it ſeemes, Moſes either put her away, or ſhee went away when he went downe to Egypt.

Againe, it is obiected, that priuate perſons may teach: and therefore baptiſe. Anſw. Priuate teaching, and miniſteriall teaching are diſtinct in kind, as the authoritie of a maſter of a family, is diſtinct in kind from the authority of a Magiſtrate. A priuate perſon, as a father or maſter, when he teacheth the word of God, he doth it by right of a maſter or father, and he is mooued to doe it by the law of charitie: but Miniſters when they teach, are mooued to teach by ſpeciall calling, and they doe it with authoritie, as Embaſſadours in the roome and ſtead of Chriſt, 2. Againe, though a priuate man might diſpenſe the word alone: yet doth it not follow that he may adminiſter both the word and the ſeale thereof, both which are ioyned in baptiſme, and ioyntly adminiſtred.

The ſecond queſtion is, whether baptiſme adminiſtred by a wicked man, or an heretike, be indeed true baptiſme? Anſw. If the ſaid party be admitted to ſtand in the roome of a true paſtor or Miniſter, and keepe the right forme in baptiſing, according to the inſtitution, it is true baptiſme. Col. 2. 11. therefore baptiſme of infants is likewiſe commanded. The ſecond ground is this: Infants of beleeuing parents, are in the couenant of grace: for this is the tenour of the couenant. I will be thy God, and the God of thy ſeede, Gen. 17. 7. God promiſeth to ſhew mercie to thouſands of them that loue him. Act. 2. 39. Peter ſaith to the Iewes that heard him preach, The promiſes belong to you, and to your children, Paul ſaith, If the parents beleeue, the children are holy, 1. Cor. 7. 14. If holy, then are they in the Couenant: now they are holy, becauſe we are in the iudgement of Chriſtian charitie, to eſteeme them all as regenerate and ſanctified, ſecret iudgements (in the meane ſeaſon) left to God. Now then, becauſe infants are in the couenant, they are to be baptiſed. For this is the reaſon of Saint Peter: To whom the promiſes belong, to them belongeth baptiſme: but to you and your children belong the promiſes: B therefore you & your children are to be baptiſed. Act. 2. 38, 39.

It may be obiected, that we cannot tell, whether infants be indeede the children of God, or no: & if they be not children of God, we may not baptiſe them. Anſw. The ſame may be ſaid of men of yeares: for we know not whether they be indeed the children of God. And therefore we may by the like reaſon exclude them from all Sacraments. Againe, we are to preſume (in all likelihood) that infants of beleeuing parents, are the children of God, becauſe in their conception and birth, God begins to manifeſt his election: ſhewing himſelfe a God, not onely to C the parents, but alſo to their ſeede.

Secondly, it is obiected, that infants haue no faith; & conſequently, that baptiſme is vnprofitable vnto them. Anſw. Some thinke, they haue faith, as they haue regeneration, that is, the inclination or ſeede of faith. Others ſay, that the faith of the parents is alſo the faith of their children: becauſe the parents by their faith, receiue the promiſe of God, both for themſelues and their children: and thus to be borne in the Church of beleeuing parents, is in ſtead of the profeſſion of faith. To this ſecond opinion I rather incline, becauſe it is the auncient and receiued doctrine of the Church.

Thirdly, it is alleadged, that infants know not what is done, when they are baptiſed. D Anſw. For all this, baptiſme hath his vſe in them: for it is a ſeale of the couenant, and a meanes to admit them into the fellowſhip of the viſible Church, wherof for right they are members. A father makes a purchace for himſelfe and his children: at the time of the ſealing the children know not what is done; & yet the purchaſe is not made in vaine for them.

It may be demanded, whether the children of Turkes and Iewes are to be baptiſed? Anſ. No: becauſe the parents are forth of the couenant.

Secondly, it is demaunded, whether the children of profeſſed Papiſts, are to be baptiſed? Anſw. The parents are perſons baptiſed in the name of the Father, Sonne, and holy Ghoſt. And though the Papacie be not the Church of God, yet is the Church of God A hidden in the papacie, and to be gathered out of it: & for this cauſe, baptiſme remaines ſtill in the church of Rome. For this cauſe I thinke, that infants of profeſſed Papiſts may be baptized, two cautions obſerued: the firſt, that the foreſaid parents deſire this baptiſme: the ſecond, that there be ſureties which promiſe the education of the children in the true faith.

Thirdly, it may be demaunded, whether the children of wicked Chriſtians, that is, of ſuch as hold in iudgement true religion, and deny it in their liues, may be baptiſed? Anſw. They may: for all without exception, that were borne of circumciſed Iewes, (whereof many were wicked) were circumciſed. And we B muſt not onely regard the next parents, but alſo the aunceſtours: of whom it is ſaid, If the roote be holy, the branches are holy, Rom. 11. Vpō this ground, children borne in fornication, may be baptized, ſo be it, there be ſome to anſwer for them, beſide the parents. And there is no reaſon, that the wickedneſſe of the parent, ſhould preiudice the child in things pertaining to life eternall.

Laſtly, it may be demaunded, whether the children of parents excommunicate, may be baptiſed? Anſw. Yea, if there be any beſide the parents to anſwer for the child. For the parents after excommunication remaine ſtill (for Right) members of the Church, hauing ſtill a right to the kingdome of heauen: out of C which they are not caſt abſolutely, but with condition, vnleſſe they repent: and in part; that is, in reſpect of communion, or vſe of their libertie, but not in reſpect of right or title: euen as a freeman of a corporation impriſoned, remaines a freeman, though for the time he hath no vſe of his libertie.

The third circumſtance concernes the time. Here one queſtion may be mooued: How oft baptiſme is to be adminiſtred? Anſ. But once: for the efficacie of baptiſme extends it ſelfe to the whole life of man: and we are but once borne againe, and once ingrafted into Chriſt. Here let it be obſerued, that the gift of regeneration is neuer vtterly extinguiſhed: for if a man be the ſecond time D borne againe, he muſt be baptized againe & againe: becauſe baptiſme is the Sacrament of initition. It may be ſaid, that a man may remain ſtill ingrafted into Chriſt, & by his own wickedneſſe make himſelfe a dead member. I anſwer, that al the members of the myſtical body of Chriſt, are liuing members. The ſpirituall temple is made of liuing ſtones, 1. Pet. 2. 5. And marke what Paul ſaith, All the body of Chriſt increaſeth with the increaſing of God, Col. 2. 19. & Eph. 2.21. Beleeuers are of the bone and fleſh of Chriſt: now there is no part of the bone and fleſh of Chriſt that dieth.

The laſt circumſtance is touching the place: & that is, the publike aſſembly or congregation of the people of God. Becauſe baptiſme is a part of the publike miniſterie, and a dependance vpon the preaching of the word of God. Secondly, the whole congregation is to make profite by the enarration of the inſtitution of baptiſme: and laſtly, the ſaid congregation is by praier to preſent the infant baptiſed vnto God, and to intreate for the ſaluation thereof, the praier of many beeing moſt effectuall.

The Eight and laſt point followes, concerning the vſe of baptiſme. And firſt of all, our baptiſme muſt put vs in minde, that we are admitted and receiued into the family of God: and conſequently, that we muſt carrie our ſelues as the ſeruants of God. And that we may doe ſo indeede, we muſt deuide our liues into two parts, the life paſt, and life to come. Touching the life that is paſt, we muſt performe three things. The firſt is Examination, whereby we muſt call our ſelues to an account for all our ſinnes, euen from the cradle: the ſecond is Confeſſion, whereby we muſt with ſorrowfull hearts bewaile and acknowledge the ſame ſinnes, in the preſence of God, accuſing & condemning our ſelues for them. The third is, Deprecation, whereby we are to intreat the Lord, in the name of Chriſt, and that moſt inſtantly from day to day till we receiue a comfortable anſwer, in the peace of conſcience and ioy of the holy Ghoſt.

And for the life to come, there muſt be two things in vs? the firſt is, the purpoſe of not ſinning; and it muſt be a liuely and diſtinct purpoſe, daily renewed in vs, euen as we renue our daies: ſo as we may ſay, if wee ſinne it is againſt our purpoſe and reſolution. The ſecond is, an indeauour to performe new obedience, according to all the commaundements of God. Theſe things if we doe, we ſhall ſhew our ſelues to be the ſeruants of God. And of all theſe things, baptiſme muſt be (as it were) a daily ſermon vnto vs: and ſo oft to thinke on them, as oft as we thinke or ſpeake of our names giuen vs in baptiſme. This is the doctrine of Paul, who teacheth vs that we muſt be conformable to the death and reſurrection of Chriſt, becauſe we haue beene baptiſed, Rom. 6. 3.4.

Againe, our baptiſme into the name of the father, &c. muſt teach vs, that we muſt learne to know and acknowledge God aright; that is, to acknowledge him to be our God, and father in Chriſt: to acknowledge his preſence and therefore to walke before him; to acknowledge his prouidence, and therefore to caſt our care on him; to acknowledge his goodneſſe and mercie, in the pardon and free forgiueneſſe of our ſinnes.

Thirdly, Our baptiſme muſt be vnto vs a ſtore-houſe of all comfort in the time of our neede. If thou be tempted by the diuell, oppoſe againſt him thy baptiſme, in which God hath promiſed and ſealed vnto thee the pardon of thy ſinnes, and life euerlaſting.

If thou be troubled with doubtings & weakneſſe of faith, conſider that God hath giuen thee an earneſt & pledge of his louing kindneſſe to thee. We vſe often to looke vpon the wills of our fathers and grand-fathers, that we may be reſolued in matters of doubt: and ſo, often looke vpon the will of thy heauenly father ſealed & deliuered to thee in thy baptiſme, and thou ſhalt the better be reſolued in the middeſt of all thy doubts. If thou lie vnder any croſſe or calamitie, haue recourſe to thy baptiſme, in which God promiſed to be thy God, and of this promiſe hee will not faile thee.

Laſtly, if a man would be a ſtudent in Diuinity, let him learne & practiſe his baptiſme. Commentaries are needefull to the ſtudie of the Scriptures: and the beſt commentarie to a mans own ſelfe is his own baptiſme. For if a man haue learned to know aught, and to practiſe his owne baptiſme, he ſhal the better be able to vnderſtand the whole: and without this helpe, the Scriptures themſelues ſhall be as a riddle vnto vs.

The fourth point wherby the gift of adoption is deſcribed, is the ground thereof, in theſe words, Ye haue put on Chriſt: and all are one in Chriſt. The phraſe which Paul vſeth is borrowed from the cuſtome of them that were baptized in the Apoſtles dayes, who put off their garments, when they were to be baptiſed, and put on new garments after baptiſme. To put on a garment, is to apply it to the body, and to vſe or weare it. And to put on Chriſt, is to be ioyned neerely to Chriſt, and to haue ſpirituall fellowſhip with him. Here then the foundation of our adoption is in two things, our vnion with Chriſt, and our communion with him. Of which we are ſomwhat to be aduertiſed, for the better vnderſtanding of the text.

The vnion with Chriſt, is a worke of God whereby all beleeuers are made one with Chriſt. Here two queſtions are to be demanded. The firſt, in what reſpect, or for what cauſe are they ſaide to bee one with Chriſt? Anſwer. They are not one with him in conceit or imagination: for this coniunction is in trueth a reall coniunction. Iohn 17. 22. Chriſt prayes, That all beleeuers may bee one with him, as he is one with the Father. Secondly, they are not one barely by conſent of heart and affection: for thus all families & friends are one: and they of Ieruſalem are ſaid thus to be of one heart and minde, Acts 4.32. Thirdly, they are not one in ſubſtance, for ſo many beleeuers as there are, ſo many diſtinct perſons are there: & euery one of them diſtinct from the perſon of Chriſt: and the ſubſtance of the godhead of Chriſt is incommunicable: and the fleſh of Chriſt is in heauen, and ſhall there abide vntill the laſt iudgement: whereupon it can not be mixed or compounded with our ſubſtances. Laſtly, beleeuers are not one with Chriſt by transfuſion of the properties and qualities of the godhead or manhood vnto vs. It may be ſaid, how then are they one with him? I anſwer by one and the ſame ſpirite dwelling in Chriſt and in all the members of Chriſt, 1.*Cor.*6.17. Hee that cleaueth to the Lord, is one ſpirite. Paul ſaith in this ſenſe, *Ephe.*2.14. that Chriſt maketh the two diſtinct nations of Iewes and Gentiles one new man. Saint Iohn ſaith, that Chriſt dwels in vs, and we in him by the ſpirite, 1.Iohn 3.23. For the better conceiuing of this, ſuppoſe a man whoſe head lies in Italie, his armes in Germany and Spaine, his feete in England: ſuppoſe further, that one and the ſame ſoule extends it ſelfe to all the foreſaid parts, and quickens them all: they are all now become one in reſpect of one and the ſame ſoule, and all concurre as members to one and the ſame body: euen ſo, all the Saints in heauen, and all beleeuers vpon earth, hauing one and the ſame ſpirit of Chriſt dwelling in them, are all one in Chriſt.

The ſecond queſtion is, how are all beleeuers made one with Chriſt? Anſ. By a donation on Gods part, whereby Chriſt is giuen vnto vs, and by a receiuing on our part. The donation is whereby Chriſt is made ours for right, ſo as a man may ſay truely, Chriſt is mine with al his benefits. Of this donation 4. things are to be obſerued. The firſt is, that Chriſt himſelfe and whole Chriſt is giuen to vs: for here we are ſaid to put on Chriſt. Here a diſtinction muſt be obſerued: the godhead of Chriſt is giuen to vs, not in reſpect of ſubſtance which is incommunicable, but only in reſpect of operation. But the very fleſh or manhood of Chriſt is really giuen to the beleeuing heart, *Ioh.*6.54,56. By it we receiue eternall life from the godhead, and by it God is ioyned to man, and man to God. The 2. is, that Chriſt giues his merite & ſatisfaction to them that beleeue. And this ſatisfaction imputed, is the couer whereby our ſins are couered, *Pſa.*32.1. & the white robes dipped in the blood of Chriſt, *Reuel.*7.14. Thirdly, Chriſt giues the efficacy of his ſpirit to make vs conformable to himſelfe in holines and newnes of life: and thus *he makes vs put off the old man, and put on the new man, created after God in righteouſnes and holines, Eph.*4.24 The 4. is, that the word preached and the ſacraments, are (as it were) the hand of God whereby he exhibites and giues Chriſt vnto vs with all his benefits.

Of our receiuing of Chriſt giuen by God, two things muſt be obſerued: one is, that we muſt there receiue Chriſt, where God offers and giues him, that is, in the word and ſacraments. The ſecond is, that faith is our hand, whereby wee receiue Chriſt, and this receiuing is done by a ſupernaturall act of the mind, whereby wee beleeue Chriſt with his benefits to be ours, Iohn 1.12. Thus wee ſee how wee are one with Chriſt, and Chriſt with vs.

Communion with Chriſt is, whē we haue, poſſeſſe, and inioy Chriſt and his benefites: and that is partly in this life, and fully in the life to come. Of this communion ſpeakes Salomon at large in the Song of Songs, and Dauid, Pſal.45.

The vſe. In that we are to put on Chriſt, we are put in minde to conſider our fearefull nakedneſſe. What is that? Anſ. There is a nakednes of creation, and a nakednes following the fall. The nakednes of creation is, whē the body without all couering, is in health, ful of glory and maieſty in reſpect of other creatures. Nakednes ariſing of the fall of man, is either inward, or outward. Inward, is the want of the Image of God, the want of innocencie, of good conſcience, of the fauour of God, and affiance in him. For theſe are (as it were) the couerings of the ſoule. Outward nakednes is, when the body beeing vncouered, is full of deformitie and ſhame. Now that inward nakednes of heart is noted as a ſpeciall euill, Gen.3.7. Exod.32,25. Pro.29.18. Reu.3.17. we muſt labour to ſee and feele this nakednes in our ſelues. For by it, we are deformed and odious in the eie of God.

Secondly, we are here put in mind to haue a ſpeciall care of the trimming and garniſhing of our ſoule. And for this cauſe we muſt put on the Lord Ieſus, Rom. 13.14. And that is done two wayes. Firſt, by vncouering our nakednes before God, and by praying him to couer it. To vncouer our ſhame, is the way to couer it, Pſalme 32.1,2,3. The ſecond way is, to ſubiect our ſelues to the word and ſpirit of God, and to be conformable to Chriſt both in his life and death. It ſtands vs in hand thus to put on Chriſt. For the King of heauen hath long inuited vs to the marriage of his Sonne: wee haue yeelded our ſelues to be his gueſts: and there is a time when the king will take a ſuruey of all his gueſts, whether they haue the wedding garment, which is Chriſt himſelfe: and they which are not clad with this robe, ſhall be caſt into vtter darkeneſſe. Wee are as naked infants expoſed to death, Ezech. 16.7. The merite and obedience of Chriſt is as ſwadling clothes and ſwadling bands. If we would then liue, we muſt lappe and infold our ſelues in them. The rather I ſpeake this: becauſe in theſe dayes men and women are intoxicated with a ſpirituall drunkenneſſe, or rather madneſſe, whereby they are always tempering and trifling about their bodies, and let their ſoules lie naked. It may be ſaid, we haue al put on Chriſt in baptiſme. I anſwer: we haue had in England peace and proſperitie theſe 43. yeares: and wee haue liued all this while, as it were in the warme ſunne-ſhine: and therefore many of vs (no doubt) haue worne this garmēt very looſely.

Thirdly, there is a great temptation ariſing vpon the conſideration of our owne indignity. For when our ſins come to our remembrance, they driue vs from the preſence of God, and make vs that wee dare not pray. A Now the remedy is this. We muſt come clothed with Chriſt into the preſence of God: we may not come in our owne names, but we muſt come in his name, and preſent the merite of Chriſt vnto the Father, euen as if wee were one and the ſame perſon with him: thus ſhall we be accepted.

Fourthly, it may be demaunded, what wee muſt doe for our ſelues in the time of plague, famine, ſword? We muſt put on Chriſt, then ſhall we walke in ſafetie in all dangers. This garment ſerues not onely for a couering of our ſhame, but alſo for protection, Iſa.4.6. And if wee bee taken away in any common iudgement, being clothed with Chriſt, there B is no more hurt done to vs then to him: and he carrieth vs in his breaſt, as if we were part of his bowells.

Laſtly, though wee be clothed with Chriſt in baptiſme, yet we muſt further deſire to bee cloathed vpon, 2.*Cor.*5.4. In this life wee are clad with the iuſtice of Chriſt, 1.*Corint.*1.30. this is one garment. In the life to come, wee ſhall be clad with immortalitie. This is the ſecond garment to be vpon the former.

Verſ. 28. There is neither Iew nor Grecian. &c. Theſe words (as I haue ſaid) containe an anſwer to an obiection, which is this: If all beleeuers among the Gentiles be children of God, and all put on Chriſt, then there is no difference betweene Iew and Gentile, and the C prerogatiue of the Iew is nothing. Paul anſwers thus: there bee ſundry differences of men in reſpect of nation, condition, ſexe: yet in reſpect of Chriſt, all are one. Moreouer, I haue ſhewed, that theſe words containe the ground of the adoption of the Galatians, which is an vnion with Chriſt, whereby all beleeuers are made one with him. There remaine other things to be added.

By occaſion of this text, two queſtions are mooued, the anſwer whereof, ſerues much to cleare the meaning of Paul. The firſt is, whether Magiſtracie and gouernment be neceſſary in the ſocieties of Chriſtians? Anſ. Yea: Kings and Queenes ſhall bee nourſing fathers and nourſing mothers to the Church of God (ſaith the D Prophet Eſay 49.23.) Paul biddes vs pray for Kings, and all in authoritie, that wee may liue in peace and godlines, 1.*Timot.*2.1. The fiſt commandement, Honour thy father, &c. requires ſubiection to authority: and this commaundement is eternall.

Obiect. I. All beleeuers are one in Chriſt: therfore there is no ſubiection among them. Anſ. Beleeuers are vnder a twofold eſtate or regiment: the firſt is, the regiment of this world, in ciuil ſocietie: the ſecond is, the regiment of the kingdom of heauē, which ſtands in iuſtice, peace of conſcience, ioy in the holy Ghoſt. In the firſt eſtate, there are ſundry differences of perſons that beleeue: ſome fathers and mothers, ſome children, ſome maſters and ſeruants, ſome magiſtrates & ſubiects. In the ſecond eſtate, there are no outward differences of men,but all are members of Chriſt,and all one in him. Thus muſt the text be vnderſtood.

Obiect.II. Beleeuers are gouerned by Gods ſpirit,and therefore outward gouernment by magiſtrates is needeleſſe. Anſ. In the viſible Church, hypocrites are mingled with true beleeuers, & they are not gouerned by Gods ſpirit,but by the ſpirit of the diuell: and therfore in reſpect of them, ciuill authority is requiſite. Againe,true beleeuers are but in part gouerned by the ſpirite, for the time of this life. And for this cauſe, ciuill gouernement is requiſite, for the ordering of the outward man, and for the protection of the Church.

Obiect. III. They that are in Chriſt,are freed from ſin, and conſequently, from ſubiection which followes vpon ſin. Anſ. Subiection is either politike, or ſeruile. Politike is,when men are ſubiect for their owne good: and this was before the fall, yeelded by Eue to Adam. Seruile ſubiection, when they are ſubiect for the good of their maſters: & this only comes of ſin. Again,ſubiection with ioy was before the fall: ſubiection ioyned with paine and miſery,follows vpon ſin,*Gen.*3.16.

The ſecond queſtion is, whether bondage, in which ſome are Lords, others bondmen, or ſlaues, may ſtand with Chriſtian religion? Anſw. It may, in the Countries where it is eſtabliſhed by poſitiue lawes, if it be vſed with mercie and moderation. Righteous Abraham had in his owne houſe,bondſlaues,Geneſis 17.13. God did permit the Iewes to buy the children of the Canaanites, Leuiticus 25.45. Paul ſaith, If any man be called being a ſeruant or bondman, let him not care for it, 1.Corin. 7.21.

Obiect.I. Be not ſeruants of men, 1.*Corint.*7.23. Anſ. That is,in reſpect of conſcience,the ſubiection whereof muſt be reſerued to God.

Obiect. II. Chriſtians haue libertie by Chriſt: and where libertie is, there may bee no bondage. Anſw. Chriſtians obtaine by Chriſt ſpirituall libertie in this life, and bodily libertie in the life to come.

Obiect. III. Bondage is againſt the Lawe of nature. Anſ. Againſt the law of pure nature created in innocency, not againſt the lawe of corrupt nature,the fruit whereof is bondage.

Obiect. IV. All are one in Chriſt: therefore the difference of bond-men and free-men muſt ceaſe. Anſ. All are one in reſpect of the inward man,or in reſpect of faith and fellowſhip with Chriſt: but al are not one in reſpect of the outward man, and in regard of ciuill order.

The ſenſe then of the text is this. There are diſtinctions of men in reſpect of Nation, ſome Iewes, ſome Gentiles: in reſpect of condition, ſome bond, ſome free, ſome rich, ſome poore, ſome in authoritie, ſome in ſubiection, &c. In reſpect of ſexe; ſome men, ſome women: yet in Chriſt Ieſus, all are euen as one man.

The vſe. By this Text wee may expound another, 1.*Tim.*2.4. God would haue all men to be ſaued: that is, not all particular perſons vpon earth,but all kinds. For here Paul ſaith, all are one in Chriſt: that is,men of all nations, of all conditions,and of all ſexes.

Againe, the name [Iew] oppoſed to Gentiles, ſignifies not onely men of the tribe of Iuda,but all circumciſed perſons of all tribes, *Rom.*2.28. and thus it is all one with an Iſraelite. And thus wee ſee how to expound the place of Scripture, 2.Chron. 21.2. where Iehoſaphat king of Iuda is called King of Iſrael. The words Iuda and Iſrael, are ſometime oppoſed, Iuda ſignifying the kingdome of the two Tribes, Iuda and Beniamin: and Iſrael ſignifying the ten tribes. Sometimes againe, they are Synonima, and are put one for another,as *Pſal.*114.1,2. and in this Text. And Iuda at this time was indeed the true Iſrael of God, and Iehoſaphat without any fault in the text (as ſome ſuppoſe) is truely called King of Iſrael.

Thirdly,they which are of great birth,and of high condition,muſt be put in mind not to be high minded, nor to deſpiſe them that are of low degree, for all are one in Chriſt: the obſcure and baſe perſon hath as good part in Chriſt,as the greateſt men that bee. Therefore wee may not ſwell in pride for outward things, *The king muſt not lift vp his heart againſt his brethren, Deu.*17.20. Rich men (ſaith Paul) muſt not be high minded, 1.*Tim.*6.17. Iob would not diſpiſe the cauſe of his handmaid, Iob 31.13. Naaman a great man,reſpected the counſell of his ſeruants, 2.*King.*5.13.

Fourthly,all beleeuers muſt be of one hart and mind, 1.*Cor.*1.10. In the kingdome of Chriſt the Wolfe and the Lamb dwell together, *Eſa.*11.6. And good reaſon: for all are one in Chriſt. And we haue great cauſe to be humbled, when ſchiſmes, contentions, and differences ariſe in points of religion. For that ſhewes that hypocrites are mingled with true beleeuers, and that we are but in part (as yet) vnited to Chriſt.

Laſtly, hence wee learne not to hate any man, but alwayes to carry in mind a purpoſe to doe good to all, by thought,word, & deed; and to doe good to men in reſpect of their names, their goods,their liues. And this holy mind and purpoſe,muſt always beare ſway in vs. *There is no hurt in the mount of the Lord, Eſa.*11.9. Men turne their ſwords & ſpeares into mattockes and ſythes, that are of the kingdome of Chriſt, Eſa. 2.4. becauſe they are one with Chriſt by the bond of one ſpirit.

Verſe 29. And if ye be Chriſts, then are yee Abrahams ſeed and heires by promiſe.

Before, Paul had taught, verſes 7,8,9. that all beleeuing Gentiles were the children of Abraham, and not the Iewes onely. Here hee returnes to the ſame point againe, and prooueth it by a new Argument, thus: Chriſt is the ſeede of Abraham,ver.16.and al Gentiles beleeuing in Chriſt, are parts of him, and one with him, therefore they alſo are children of Abraham, and heires of all the bleſſings of God.

The intent of Paul in theſe words, is to eſtabliſh and confirme an argumēt which before he had vrged in this chapter againſt patrons of workes in the caſe of our iuſtification: it may be framed thus. As Abraham was iuſtified, ſo are al they that beleeue in Chriſt, iuſtified: for they are Abrahams children, & ſucceeded him, verſe 29. but Abraham was iuſtified by faith without works: therefore all beleeuers in Chriſt are ſo iuſtified. Let the argument be obſerued: for it makes againſt the Papiſt, who if he ſtudy til his head and heart ake, ſhall neuer anſwer it.

In this verſe, Paul ſets downe the fruit and benefit, that comes by the gift of adoption, to them that beleeue. And that is, to be children of Abraham, and heires of all the bleſſings of God. And therefore learne here one golden leſſon, namely, that the baſeſt perſon that is, if he beleeue in Chriſt, is in the place of Abraham, and ſucceeds him in the inheritance of the kingdome of heauen. Some man may ſay; O this is excellent comfort, if I might know that I were in the caſe of Abraham. Anſ. Thou maiſt know it certenly, if thou wilt doe as Abraham did; namely, follow the calling of God, and obey the Goſpell, that is, ſubiect thy heart to the commandements of God, which bid thee repent and beleeue in Chriſt: for then all the good things reuealed in the Goſpell, ſhall bee thine.

The vſe. Beleeuers in this world muſt bee content with any eſtate that God ſhall lay vpon them. For they are heires with Abraham of heauen and earth. In this regard, Abraham was content to forſake his countrey, and his fathers houſe, and as a pilgrime to dwell in tents to the death, Hebr. 11. 8, 9.

Secondly, they that beleeue in Chriſt, muſt moderate their worldly cares, and not liue as drudges of the world. For they are heires of God, & haue a title or right to al good things promiſed in the couenant. Therefore they ſhall neuer want any good thing that is needful for them. He that hath made them heirs, will carefully prouide for them. Therefore our care muſt be, to do the duties that belong vnto vs: and all other cares we muſt caſt vpon God. They in this world, that are borne to land and liuing, are content to liue ſparingly, and oftentimes very barely with a little, vpon hope of further inlargement, after the deceaſe of ſome friends.

Laſtly, our ſpeciall care muſt be for heauen: for the things of this world are but trifles in reſpect. The city of God in heauen is thy portion, or childs part. Seeke for the aſſurance of that aboue all things. Thus did Abraham, Hebr. 11. 15, 16.

CHAP. IIII.

1 And I ſay that the heire, as long as hee is a childe, differeth nothing from a ſeruant, though he be Lord of all.

2 But is vnder tutours and gouernours till the time appointed of the father.

3 Euen ſo we, when we were children, were in bondage vnder the rudiments of the world.

4 But when the fulneſſe of time was come, God ſent foorth his ſonne made of a woman, and made vnder the law,

5 That he might redeeme them that were vnder the law, that we might receiue the adoption of ſonnes.

6 And becauſe yee are ſonnes, God hath ſent foorth the ſpirit of his ſonne into your hearts, which crieth, Abba, father.

7 Wherefore thou art no more a ſeruant, but a ſonne: and if thou bee a ſonne, thou art alſo an heire of God through Chriſt.

THeſe words depend on the former chapter, as an anſwer to an obiection, which may bee framed on this manner: Paul, thou ſaiſt that the Iewes before Chriſt, were vnder the Lawe as vnder a Schoolemaiſter, cap. 3. verſe 24. and that wee are free from the ſame Schoolemaſter, verſe 25. beeing children of God, and heires by Chriſt, verſe 29. but wee for our parts thinke our ſelues ſeruants vnder the Lawe, as well as the ancient Iewes, and that they are as well the children of God, as we. To this obiection, Paul maketh anſwer in theſe ſeuen verſes, as the very firſt words import. And I ſay that is; whatſoeuer you ſuppoſe, I ſay thus. And then he propounds the reaſon of his anſwer, which may be framed thus. If the time of our bondage be ended, and the full time of our libertie come, then are wee ſonnes, and not ſeruants: but the time of our bondage is ended, and the full time of our libertie is come: therefore we are not ſeruants, but ſonnes.

The maior is omitted, becauſe it is manifeſt. The minor is in the ſixe firſt verſes: the concluſion is expreſſed in the ſeuenth verſe.

Againe, the minor, [the time of our bondage is ended, and the time of our libertie is come] is firſt of all declared by a ſimilitude, and then confirmed. The ſimilitude is borrowed from the Ciuill Law; and it may be framed thus. Heires in their minoritie, liue in ſubiection to Tutors and Gouernors: but when they are of riper yeeres, at the appoyntment of their parents, they are at their owne libertie. Euen ſo, the people of God before Chriſt were in their infancie, vnder the Law, as vnder a Tutour: but when the fulneſſe of time was come, which God had appoynted, they entred into the fruition of their libertie. The firſt part of the ſimilitude is expreſſed

A in the two firſt verſes, and the ſecond, in the third and fourth.

Againe, the minor is confirmed by two reaſons. The firſt is this: Your liberty is procured by Chriſt: therefore the time of your liberty is come. This reaſon is in the 4. and 5. verſes. The ſecond reaſon is taken from the ſigne, You haue receiued the ſpirit of adoption: therfore the time of your liberty is come, verſe 6. Of theſe points in order.

Firſt, where he ſignifies, that the father hath authoritie to diſpoſe of his childe. This is the law of Nature, and the law of Nations. Paul ſaith, Col.3.10. that children muſt obey their parents in all things. When the diuell had obtained liberty to afflict Iob in all things that be-B longed to him, ſaue his perſon, he deſtroyed his children, Iob 1.12,18. And this ſhews, that the children in reſpect of their bodies, are the goods of their parents. In this reſpect, the Iews are permitted to ſell their children, Exod.21.7. And ſo ſacred a thing was the authoritie of the parent, that he which rebelliouſly deſpiſed the ſame, was put to death, Deut.21.21.

This authoritie ſhewes it ſelfe, ſpecially in two things: in the marriage, and in the calling of the child. In the marriage of the child the parent is the principall agent, and the diſpoſer thereof, Deut.7.3. Exod.34.16. 1.Cor.7.38. Where obſerue, that the commandement touching the marriage of the childe, is C giuen, not to the childe, but to the parent: and the parent hath authoritie by the ſaide commandement to giue & beſtow his childe, and to take wiues to his ſonnes. Thus Abraham tooke a wife for Iſaac, and Iſaac ſuffered himſelfe to be diſpoſed at the appointment of his father. For a more full declaration of this authoritie, I propound theſe three queſtions.

The firſt is, whether the father may command his childe to marrie? Anſ. Preſuppoſe two things; one, that the commandement is without compulſion; the ſecond, that the father knows what is for the good of the child: the I anſwer, that he may command his child to marry, and to marry a perſon thus or thus D qualified. Thus Iſaac commaunded Iacob to marry in the houſe of Laban, Geneſis 28. 1,2. and Iacob obeyed. Now whether a father may commaund his childe to marrie this or that perſon, I doubt, and therefore ſuſpend.

The ſecond queſtion is, whether parents may make voyd the contract ſecretly made by their children, without or againſt their conſent? Anſ. The Scripture giueth them authoritie either to ratifie ſuch contracts, or to make them void, Nu.30.6. the father may make voyde the vow of the child pertaining to Gods worſhip: much more a matrimoniall promiſe. If a yong man deflowre a maide, and this be found, in equity he is to bee compelled to marrie her, Deuteron.22.28. yet by Gods law this may not be, except the father conſent, Exod.22.17.

The third queſtion is, whether a marriage made without and againſt the conſent of parents, be a marriage or no? Anſ. It may be called a politike or ciuill marriage, becauſe it is ratified in the courts of men, according to humane lawes, and by this meanes the iſſue is freed from baſtardy. Neuertheleſſe it is not a diuine or ſpirituall coniunction, or mariage (as it ought to be) becauſe it is flat againſt the commandement of God.

Touching the callings of children, they are to be ordered and appointed at the diſcretion of parents. For if the parent may order the vow and the marriage of the childe, then much more the calling.

Here take notice of the impietie of the Romane religion. There are three ſpeciall eſtates whereby man liueth in ſocietie with man: the Church, the common-wealth, the familie. In the church, that religion ſets vp another head, beſide Chriſt: in the common-wealth it ſets vp an authoritie that ſerueth to curbe and reſtraine the Supremacie of Princes in cauſes Eccleſiaſticall. In the family, it puts downe the authority of the father: for it ratifieth clandeſtine contracts, and it giues liberty to children paſt 12. or 14. yeares of age, to enter into any order of Religion againſt the conſent of their parents.

Againe, parents muſt be put in minde to know their authoritie, to maintaine it, and to vſe it aright, for the good of their childrē, ſpecially for their ſaluatiō. And childrē muſt be warned in all things honeſt and lawfull, to yeeld ſubiection to their parents: and in this ſubiection ſhal they find the bleſſing of God.

Againe, here is ſet downe the office of parents, and that is, to prouide meete ouerſeers and Tutors for their children after their departure. When Chriſt vpon the croſſe had the pangs of death vpon him, he commends his mother to the tuition of Iohn, Ioh.19.26. When widowes and orphanes are wronged, God himſelfe takes vpon him the office of a Tutor in their behalfe, Exod.22.22. And this ſhews that it is a neceſſary duty to be thought vpon.

Thirdly, heere the duety of children is ſet downe, and that is, that they muſt be ſubiect to their Tutors and Gouernours, as to their owne fathers and mothers. Ruth loued Naomi, and claue vnto her as to her owne mother. Ruth 1.16. Chriſt was ſubiect to Ioſeph, who was but a repuited father, Luke 2. laſt. The ſonnes of the Prophets obey their maſters as their owne fathers, 2.Kings 2.12. and ſo doe the ſeruants to their maſter, 2.Kings 5.13.

Now I come to the ſecond part of the ſimilitude verſe 3. Euen ſo we] that is, the Iewes, and all the people of God in the olde Teſtament Were children] were as children in reſpect of the chriſtian Church, in the new Teſtament.

Were in bondage] The Iewes are ſaid to be in bondage in reſpect of vs: becauſe they were ſubiect to more lawes then we are, and they wanted fruition of the libertie which we inioy. They had the right of ſonnes; but they inioyed not their right as we doe: and this is their bondage. For otherwiſe libertie in conſcience from hell, death, and ſinne, they had euen as we now haue.

Rudiments of the world] that is, the law or miniſterie of Moſes, and it is ſo called, in reſpect of a more full and plentifull doctrine, in the miniſterie of the new Teſtament. And it is called the Rudiments of the world, becauſe Iewrie was as it were, a litle ſchoole ſet vp in a corner of the world, the law of Moſes was as it were, an a,b,c, or Primar, in which Chriſt was reuealed to the world, in darke and obſcure manner, ſpecially to the Iewes.

The vſe. Here we ſee, that the people of the old Teſtament, were for right, heires as well as we, and therefore they had right to all the bleſſings of God. The difference betweene vs and them, is only in the manner which God vſed in diſpenſing the foreſaid bleſſings to vs.

Againe, the fathers of the old Teſtament before Chriſt, were but as children in reſpect of vs now. Thus much ſaith Paul in expreſſe words. And they were ſo, two waies. Firſt, in reſpect of the Moſaicall regiment: becauſe they were kept in ſubiection to more lawes then we. Secondly, they were ſo in reſpect of reuelation: becauſe God hath reuealed more to vs, then to them. Reade Luk. 10. 24. It may be ſaid, we now are (the beſt of vs,) but children to Abraham and the Prophets, whether we reſpect knowledge, or faith. Anſw. It is ſo if we compare perſon and perſon: but it is otherwiſe, if we compare body with body, and compare the Chriſtian Church, with the Church of the Iewes before Chriſt: then we excede them, and they are but children to vs. This muſt teach vs all, to be carefull to increaſe in knowledge, and in the grace of God, that we may be anſwerable to our condition. For to liue in ignorance (as the moſt do) is the ſhame of vs all. For in reſpect of the time, we ſhould all be teachers, Heb. 5. 12. and yet God knowes, the moſt are very babes. For aske a man how he lookes to be ſaued, he will anſwer, by ſeruing God, and by dealing truly. Now his ſeruing of God, is his ſaying of his praiers; and his praiers are the Beleefe & the ten Commandements. This is a poore ſeruing of God, fitter for babes, then for men of yeares. It is further to be obſerued, that Paul ſaith, the fathers of the old Teſtament, were in bondage under the law, after the manner of ſeruants, ſpecially by reaſon of rites and ceremonies. And hence it followes, that the obſeruation of a religion, in which are manifold bodily rites and figures, is a kind of bondage, and pertaines to the Church, for the time of her infancie or minority. Let this be remembred againſt the Romiſh religion: for it is like to that of the Iewes, in the old Teſtament, ſtanding for the greateſt part, in bodily rites, differences of times, places, garments, in exerciſes, and afflictions of the body, in locall ſucceſſion, in the collation of grace by the worke done, and ſuch like. This is manifeſt to them which know the maſſe, which indeede is nothing but a maſſe of ceremonies. Therefore the Romane religion is a childiſh and babiſh religion: and if it were of God, yet is it not fit for the Church of the new Teſtament, that is come forth of her minoritie. Religion that ſtands in the afflicting of the body, is but a ſhadow, and an appearance of humilitie, Col. 2. 23. And the true worſhippers of God in the new Teſtament, worſhip him in Spirit and truth, Ioh. 4. v. 24.

The fulneſſe of time, or the full time, is that time in which the captiuitie of the Church endeth, and her libertie beginnes. This time was ended 4000. yeares from the creation: and it is called a full time, becauſe it was deſigned and appointed, by the will and prouidence of the heauenly Father. For he is Lord of time, and all ſeaſons are in his hand: and his will or prouidence makes times fit or vnfit. Marke then, that is the onely full and fit time for the inioying of any bleſſing of God, which he by his prouidence appointeth. This muſt teach vs, when by prayer we aske any good thing at Gods hand, not to preſcribe any time vnto God, but to leaue it to his prouidence. Againe, if thou liue in any miſerie, waite on the Lord, and be content. For that is the fit and beſt time of thy deliuerance, which God hath appointed. Laſtly, thou muſt be admoniſhed to pray to God for grace and mercie, and to turne to him this day before to morrow. For this is the time which God hath appointed for theſe duties: this is the day of grace, and therefore the onely fit time. Heb. 3. 7. Pſal. 32. 6.

Thus much of the ſimilitude: now I come to the firſt reaſon, whereby Paul confirmes his maine argument. Chriſt hath purchaſed and procured your libertie: therefore the time thereof is come and paſt. For the better clearing of this reaſon, Paul ſets downe the way and order which was vſed in procuring this libertie. And it containes fiue degrees. The firſt is, the ſending of the ſonne, the ſecond, his incarnation, the third his ſubiection to the law; the fourth, our redemption from the law, the fift, the fruition of our adoption, verſ. 5.

The firſt, the ſending of the ſonne is in theſe words, In the fulneſſe of time, God ſent forth his ſonne. That we may attaine to the ſenſe of this great Myſterie, ſixe queſtions are to be propounded.

The firſt is, what is meant by God? Anſw. The father, the firſt perſon. Eph. 1. 3. Bleſſed be God the Father of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. 2. Cor. 1. 3. and Ioh. 20. 17. And he is called

God, not becauſe he partakes more of the godhead then the ſonne, or the holy Ghoſt: but becauſe he is the firſt in order of the three diuine perſons: and he is the beginning of the ſonne, and the holy Ghoſt; and hath no beginning of his own perſon: becauſe he doth not receiue the godhead by communication from any other. In this reſpect he is called God more commonly then the ſonne, or the holy Ghoſt.

The ſecond queſtion is, How the father ſends the ſonne? Anſ. By his counſell & eternall decree whereby the ſonne was deſigned to the office of a Mediatour, and conſequently to become man. Act. 2. 23. And thus is he ſaid to be ſealed of the father, Ioh. 6.27. and to be ſanctified, and ſent into the world, Ioh. 10.36. And therefore this ſending implies no alteration or change of place.

The third queſtion is, whether the ſonne was ſent with his owne conſent or no? Anſw. Yea, the decree of the father in the decree of the ſonne, and the holy Ghoſt: becauſe as they are all one in nature, ſo are they all one in will. All the perſons then haue a ſtroke in this ſending, yet for orders ſake, the father is ſaid to ſend, becauſe he is firſt.

The fourth queſtion is, how the father can ſend the ſonne, conſidering they are both one? Anſ. In the doctrine touching the Trinitie, Nature, and Perſon muſt be diſtinguiſhed. Nature, is a ſubſtance common to many, as the godhead. A perſon is that which ſubſiſteth of it ſelfe, and hath a proper manner of ſubſiſting, as the father begetting, the ſonne begotten, the holy Ghoſt proceeding. Now the father and the ſonne are one indeede for nature, or godhead, but they are not one for perſon. Nay thus they are really diſtinct. The father is not the ſonne, nor the ſonne the father: And thus doth the father ſend the ſonne.

The fift queſtion is, why the ſonne is ſo called? Anſw. Becauſe he was begotten of the father, by a perfect and eternall generation, not to be vttered of man, or conceiued. And we muſt be warned, not to conceiue it in any carnall or humane manner. For an earthly father is in time before the ſonne, & the ſonne after: but God the father and the ſonne are coeternall, and not one before or after the other for time. An earthly father is forth of the ſonne, and the ſonne forth of the father: but God the father is in the ſonne, and the ſonne in the father. An earthly child is from his father by propagatiō, but the ſonne is frō the heauenly father not by propagation, but by communication of ſubſtance. Laſtly the heauenly father begets the ſonne by communication of his whole ſubſtance, and ſo doth no earthly father.

The laſt queſtion is, whether the Son be God? For it is here ſaid, God ſent his Sonne. Anſ. He is God. For he that is ſent forth from God, was before he was ſent forth. And the A ſonne is ſaid to be ſent forth, becauſe he was with God the father before all worlds. Ioh. 1.1. & becauſe he came frō the boſome of his father, v.18.

Obiect. I. The ſonne is ſent of the father: and he that is ſent is inferiour to the father; and he that is inferiour to God, is not God. Anſ. Two equalls by common conſent may ſend each other: & therefore ſending alwaies implies not inequalitie. Againe, inferioritie is of two ſorts, inferioritie of nature, and inferioritie of condition. The firſt doth not befall Chriſt: becauſe for nature he is one and the ſame with the father. The ſecond agrees vnto him, becauſe of his owne voluntarie accord, he abaſed himſelfe, & tooke vpon him the ſhape of a man, Ph. 2. 7.

B Obiect. II. God hath his beginning of none: the ſonne hath his beginning of the father: therefore he is not God. Anſ. The ſonne in reſpect of his perſon is of the father: but in reſpect of his godhead, he is of none. The Son of God conſidered as he is a ſonne, is of the father, God of very God. But conſidered as he is God, he is God of himſelfe, becauſe the godhead of the ſonne is not begotten, more then the godhead of the father.

Obiect. III. The ſonne was made Lord in time. Act. 2. 36 therefore no God. Anſ. Chriſt as he is the ſonne of God, was not made Lord in time, but is by nature an eternall Lord, as the father. And he is ſaide to be made Lord in reſpect of his condition as hee is God-man, C and that in time, in reſpect of both his natures. In reſpect of his manhood, becauſe it is receiued into the vnitie of the ſecond perſon, and exalted to the right hand of God in heauen. In reſpect of his godhead, the maieſtie and Lordſhip whereof, he declared and made manifeſt in the fleſh after his reſurrection. Thus was he made Lord by declaring himſelfe to be ſo indeede, Rom. 1. 4. 1. Tim. 3. 16.

Thus we ſee how God ſent forth his ſonne: the vſe followes. This act of God in ſending, declares his infinite loue: for this ſending was D for their ſakes that were the enemies of God. And it further ſignifies vnto vs the moſt free loue of God. For nothing in vs mooued him to ſend, but his owne goodnes. This loue of God muſt mooue vs to loue God againe, and to be thankfull.

The ſonne of God takes not to himſelfe the office of a Mediatour, but he is called and ſent forth of the father: whereby two things are ſignified; one, that the office of a Mediatour was appointed of the father: the other, that the Sonne was deſigned to this office in the eternall counſell of the bleſſed Trinitie. And ſo, that we may pleaſe God in our callings & places, we muſt haue a double aſſurance in our conſciences: one, that the offices and callings which we performe, are good, pleaſing vnto God: the ſecond, that we are deſigned and called of God to the ſaid offices and callings. By this meanes we ſtay our minds in all our miſeries.

A The ſonne is ſent forth, that is, he comes from his father, laies aſide his maieſtie, and takes on him the condition of a ſeruant. The ſame minde muſt be in vs, to humble and abaſe our ſelues before God, to thinke better of others then of our ſelues, to be content with our condition, to be well pleaſed when we are deſpiſed and contemned, becauſe we are worthie of it. This is to conforme our ſelues to Chriſt.

That the ſonne of God himſelfe muſt be ſent forth from the boſome of his father, this ſhewes the greatneſſe of our ſinne and miſery, which was the occaſion of this ſending. And this muſt teach vs with bitternes to hate and B deteſt our ſinnes, which fetched the ſonne of God from heauen, and to humble our ſelues with Dauid euen to the deepes, and thence to pray to God for his mercie. Pſal. 130.1.

The ſecond point, namely, the Incarnation of the ſonne, is expreſſed in theſe words, Made of a woman that is, made man, or made fleſh of a woman. The word was made fleſh, Ioh. 1.14. Here three queſtions are to be handled. The firſt is, why the Sonne was made fleſh? Anſ. There be two ſpeciall cauſes hereof. Firſt, the order of diuine iuſtice requires that Gods wrath ſhould be appeaſed, and a ſatisfaction made, in the ſame nature in which his maieſtie was offended. Now the offence was in mans nature: and therefore in it muſt ſatisfa- C ction to God be performed. Secondly, the Mediatour betweene God and man, muſt be both for nature and condition in the meane betweene God and man, that is, both God and man: and thus the ſonne of God is a perfect Mediatour.

The ſecond queſtion is, how farreforth the ſonne of God, was made fleſh? I anſwer three things. The firſt, that he tooke vnto him the whole and perfect nature of man in reſpect of eſſence, namely, the intire ſubſtance of a reaſonable ſoule, and humane bodie. Here remẽber, that quantitie, that is, length, breadth, and thickneſſe, is not an accident which may paſſe and repaſſe, but it is of the ſubſtance of euery body, and therefore of the body of D Chriſt. And for this cauſe it is impoſſible that the bodie of Chriſt in his quantity, beeing foure or fiue foote in length, ſhould be included in the compaſſe of a peece of bread that is but two or three inches in quantitie. The ſecond is, that the ſonne of God tooke vnto him the properties of mans nature, the powers of life, ſenſe, motion, the faculty of reaſon, will, and affection. The third is, that he tooke to him the infirmities, and miſeries of mans nature. Here two caueats muſt be remembred. The firſt, that he tooke to him onely ſuch infirmities as are meere infirmities, and no ſinnes. For example, vpon the words of Chriſt, Let this cuppe paſſe, Math. 26. ſome ſay, that there was obliuion in Chriſt: but this may not be ſaid. For obliuion is a ſin, namely, a forgetting of that which a man ought to remember: and there may be in Chriſt or other men, a ſuſpending of the memorie, by ſome external and violent cauſe, without obliuion. The ſecond caueat is, that the ſonne of God tooke to him the infirmities which pertaine to the nature of man, and not ſuch as pertaine to the perſons of men, as dropſies, gouts, conſumptions, and ſuch like. For he tooke not the perſon of any man, but the nature of all men, with all the appurtenances thereof, except ſinne.

The third queſtion is, How was he made fleſh? Anſw. The fleſh or manhood of Chriſt, was firſt framed, then ſanctified, and then vnited to the godhead of the ſonne. And thus was he made man. Remember here that the forming of the fleſh of Chriſt, the ſanctifying of it, and the perſonall Vnion are all together for time: and I diſtinguiſh them in this ſort, onely for doctrines ſake.

In the framing of the manhood, I conſider the matter, and the manner. The matter was the ſubſtance of the Virgin ſignified in theſe words, Made of woman. By this Chriſt is diſtinguiſhed from all men in the world: from Adam, becauſe he was neither of man nor woman, but of redde clay. From Eue, becauſe ſhee was made of man, and not of woman. From all that come of Adam and Eue, for they are both of man and woman; whereas Chriſt is of woman, and not of man. Againe, Paul addes theſe words [made of a woman] to note the accompliſhment of the promiſe, The ſeede of the woman ſhall bruiſe the ſerpents head, Gen. 3.15.

The manner of framing is expreſſed, when Paul ſaith, made, not begotten of a woman. The manhood then of Chriſt, was framed without naturall generation, by an extraordinary worke of the holy Ghoſt. Here a doubt is anſwered. Some man may ſay, if he were made of a woman, he comes of Adam; and conſequently he is a ſinner. Anſw. The order ſet downe by God with Adam in the creation is, that whatſoeuer he loſeth, all his poſteritie ſhall loſe that comes of him by generation. Vpon this order all that are begotten of Adam, with the nature of man, receiue the ſin and corruption of nature. And ſo ſhould Chriſt haue done, if he had deſcended of Adam by generation. But conſidering his fleſh was made of the ſubſtance of a woman, and not begotten of any man: therefore he takes the nature of man, and not the corruption of nature.

The ſanctifying of the manhood of Chriſt, is a worke of diuine power, whereby at the time of the framing thereof, it was filled with the gift of the holy Ghoſt aboue meaſure, that he might in both natures be a perfect Sauiour. Here obſerue, that Chriſt by the actions of his life, did not merit for himſelfe glorie, and eternall happineſſe: becauſe he was moſt worthie of all glorie and honour at the very firſt moment of his conception. Againe, obſerue that Chriſt in his manhood increaſed in grace, as in age, and ſtature, Luk. 2. And this increaſe was without all imperfection: for in his infancie, Chriſt receiued a full meaſure of grace fitte for that age: when he was twelue yeares old, he receiued a further meaſure, fitte for that age: and ſo when he was thirtie yeares old. And thus increaſe of greae, and the perfection thereof, ſtand both together. And this increaſe is not onely in reſpect of experience, and the manifeſtation of grace before God and men, but alſo in reſpect of the habit or gift: though the Schooles for 400. yeares haue taught the contrarie, euer ſince the daies of Lumbard.

The third thing is, the vniting of fleſh to the godhead of the Sonne: and that is done, when the ſonne of God makes the fleſh, or nature of man, a part of himſelfe, and communicates vnto it his owne ſubſiſtance. The like example to this is not to be found againe in the world: yet haue we ſome reſemblance of this myſterie in the plant called Miſſelto, which hath no roote of his owne, but growes in a tree of an other kind, and thence receiues his ſappe. And ſo the manhood of the ſonne hath no perſonalitie or perſonall ſubſiſtance, but is receiued into the vnitie of the ſecond perſon, and is ſuſtained of it. It muſt be obſerued, that there is a difference betweene the manhood of Chriſt, and all other men. Peter is a perſon ſubſiſting of himſelfe, & ſo is Paul, and euery particular man: but ſo is not the manhood of Chriſt: and therefore it is to be tearmed a nature, and not a perſon. And it is no diſgrace, but an exaltation to the nature of man, that it ſubſiſts by the vncreated ſubſiſtance of the ſecond perſon.

It may be obiected, that all beleeuers are ioyned to the ſonne of God, as well as the fleſh of Chriſt: I anſwer, they are ſo, but in an other kind, and in a lower degree, by communication of grace, and not by communication of perſonall ſubſiſtance.

Thus we ſee how the ſonne was made fleſh: the vſe followes. Hence we learne to vſe all meanes, that we may become new creatures, and be borne of God. God becomes man, that we men might be partakers of the diuine nature. Chriſt is made bone of our bone, and fleſh of our fleſh, by his incarnation, that we might be made bone of his bone, and fleſh of his fleſh by regeneration. The ſonne of God was made the ſonne of man, that we which are the ſonnes of men might be made the ſonnes of God.

To be made fleſh, is the abaſement of the ſonne: in this abaſement he goes on, till he become euen as a worme of the earth, Pſal. 22. 7. ſo muſt we abaſe our ſelues, till we be annihilated and brought to nothing: then ſhall we be like to Chriſt, and filled with the good things of God.

Our ſinnes are a wall of partition betweene God and vs: ſo as we are farre from God, and God from vs. Iſa. 59. 2 and this partition is of our owne making: and by this meanes we haue no acceſſe to God of our ſelues, though we pray vnto him, and fill heauen and earth with our crie. Now the ſonne of God made man, is Immanuell, that is, God with vs. Iſa. 7. 14. and his incarnation is a meanes whereby we haue acceſſe to God, and he is neere vnto vs when we pray vnto him in truth. 2. Chron. 15. 2. This muſt teach vs to draw neere to God in the hearing and obeying of his word, in prayer, and in the vſe of the holy Sacraments. If this be not done, great is our wickednes, and great ſhall be the puniſhment, Iob. 21. 14. Pſal. 73. 27.

The incarnation of Chriſt, is the foundation of all our comfort, and all good things which we inioy. By it God comforts Adam, The ſeede of the woman ſhall bruiſe the ſerpents head. Iacob is comforted by the viſion of a ladder, reaching from heauen to earth: & this ladder is the ſonne of God made man, Ioh. 1. 51. Iob comforts himſelfe in this, that his Redeemer of his owne fleſh (as the word ſignifieth) liueth, Iob 19. 25. In the old Teſtament, they which ſought vnto God, came to the Arke or Propitiatorie, and there were they heard, and receiued the bleſſings of God. Now Chriſt, God and man, is in ſtead of the Arke, Rom. 3. 25. and therefore we muſt come to him, if we would receiue any good thing of God. The godhead is the fountaine of all good things, and the fleſh or manhood is a pipe or conduit to conuay the ſame vnto vs. If we would then receiue true comfort, we muſt hunger and thirſt in our hearts after Chriſt, and by our faith eate his fleſh and drinke his blood, Ioh. 6. 54. 56.

The third point or degree, is the ſubiection of the ſonne of God to the law, expreſſed in theſe words, made vnder the law.

Here two queſtions are to be anſwered. The firſt is, who is made ſubiect to the law? The ſonne of God. And this may not ſeeme ſtrange, that he which is Lord of the law, ſhould be ſubiect to the law: for he muſt be conſidered, as he is our pledge and ſuretie, Heb. 7. 22. and as one that ſtands in our place, roome, and ſtead; and before God repreſents the perſon of all the elect: and in this reſpect is he ſubiect to the law, not by nature, but by voluntarie abaſement and condition of will.

The ſecond queſtion is, how the ſonne of God was ſubiect to the law? Anſ. By a twofold obedience: namely, by the obedience of his paſſion, and by his obedience in fulfilling the law. The obedience of his paſſion ſtands before God as a ſatisfaction for the breach of the law. In it conſider two things, the foundation of the paſſion, & the paſſion it ſelfe. The foundation is, that the ſonne of God was made ſinne for vs, 2. Cor. 5. 21. that is, all the ſinnes of all the Elect were imputed to him, and he in our roome and place was accounted a ſinner.

A The paſſion it ſelfe, is the curſe of the law, laid on the ſonne of God, namely, the firſt death, and the paines of the ſecond death, which is in effect and ſubſtance, the paines of hell, as I haue ſhewed in the 3. chap. ver. 13. of this Epiſtle.

By the ſecond Obedience in fulfilling the law, the ſonne of God performed for vs, all things contained therein, that we might haue right to life euerlaſting, and that according to the tenour of the law, Leuit. 18. 5. Doe theſe things and liue. Of this obedience two queſtions are demanded. The firſt is, whether it be neceſſary for the iuſtification of a ſinner? Anſ. It is, The ſumme of the law is, Loue God with B all thy heart, and thy neighbour as thy ſelfe: now euery iot and title of the law muſt neceſſarily be fulfilled. Math. 5. 18. Much more then the ſumme and ſubſtance of the law. And it cannot be fulfilled by vs, beeing ſinners: therfore there muſt needs be a tranſlation of the law from our perſons, to the perſon of the Mediatour, who is to accompliſh euery iot of the law for vs. Againe, He that doth not all things contained in the law, is accurſed, Gal. 3. 13. He therefore that would eſchew the curſe of the law, and come to life euerlaſting, muſt by himſelfe accompliſh all things contained in the law: and if this cannot be done, the law and all the contents thereof, muſt needes be accompliſhed in the perſon of the Mediator: C otherwiſe the curſe cannot be auoided. Laſtly, we owe vnto God a double debt or tribute. The firſt is, homage or ſubiection to be performed with all the powers of the ſoule, and with all the ſtrength of al the powers, and that from the firſt conception. The ſecond is, a ſatisfaction by death for the breach of the law. And the law is the bond that binds vs to the paiment of this double debt. And till the iuſtice of God in the law be anſwered to the full, this bond cannot be cancelled. Therfore the ſonne of God the Mediatour, muſt not onely die for vs, but alſo performe homage for vs to God, according to the tenour of the law. Therefore he ſaith, that he muſt performe all righteouſneſſe, Matth. 3. 15. And D Paul, that Chriſt is the end of the law for righteouſneſſe, Rom. 10. 4.

It is alleadged, that Chriſt as man fulfilled the law for himſelfe: and therefore not for vs. Anſw. The fleſh or manhood of Chriſt conſidered by it ſelfe apart from the godhead of the Sonne, is a creature that owes homage vnto God. Yet if it be conſidered as it is receiued into the vnity of the ſecond perſon, and is become a part thereof, it is exempted from the common condition of all other men, and is not bound to performe ſubiection, as all men are. For if the ſonne of man be Lord of the Sabbath, then alſo is hee Lord of the whole law. And Paul here ſaith, that the ſonne of God, is not borne, but made vnder the law.

Againe, it is alleadged, that the blood of Chriſt taketh away all ſinne, 1. Ioh. 1. 7. and when all ſinne is taken away, the law is fulfilled, and the perſon iuſtified. Anſw. When Saint Iohn ſaith, the blood of Chriſt purgeth vs from all ſinne, he excludes the blood of beaſts, and all meritorious meanes of ſaluation in man, out of Chriſt, and he excludes not the obedience which the Mediatour yeelded to the Father in all his ſufferings. Againe, it is not true that a ſinner is iuſtified when all ſinne is aboliſhed, vnleſſe iuſtice be added. For iuſtification is an alteration of a ſinner from one contrary to another, from euill to good, from life to death: and therefore ſinne muſt depart, and iuſtice come in the roome thereof. That a darke houſe may be inlightened, darkeneſſe muſt firſt be aboliſhed, and light muſt come in the ſtead thereof. And that a man may be iuſtified, ſinne muſt be couered, and righteouſneſſe imputed.

The ſecond queſtion is, how the ſonne of God performed this obedience? Anſ. He was obedient to his Father to the death, and that according to all the duties of loue in the firſt table: and for the ſecond table, he loued his enemies as himſelfe; yea more then himſelfe, becauſe he gaue his life for man. Marke then, he did all things contained in the law, and more too, in reſpect of the duties of the ſecond Table. For the law binds vs to loue our neighbours as our ſelues, and not more then our ſelues. This obedience therefore is truly to be tearmed a worke of ſupererogation: and there is none in the world beſide.

The vſe. That the ſonne of God was conformable to the law, it argues the goodneſſe, perfection, and excellencie thereof. Here againe marke the difference, betweene the man Chriſt, and all other men. He was not borne ſubiect to the law, but made ſubiect: not ſubiect by nature, but by will and by voluntarie abaſement. Al other men are ſubiect not by will, but by nature: not made, but borne ſubiect. Therefore Paul ſaith, the Gentiles doe by nature the things of the law. The remainders of the law ſince the fall are naturall in all men: therefore the whole law was naturall before the fall. Man was at the firſt created in righteouſneſſe and holineſſe, Eph. 4. 24. and therefore in a perfect ſubiection and conformitie to the law. It is a naturall propertie of a reaſonable creature, to doe homage to the creator. It is an errour then in the papiſt to teach, that the Image of God in our firſt parents was ſupernaturall.

The fourth point or degree is, the Redemptiō of man from vnder the law, in theſe words [that he might redeeme them which were vnder the law.] Here fiue things are to be conſidered. The firſt is, what is meant by beeing vnder the law? Anſ. The law muſt be conſidered two waies: firſt, as the Rule of life. Thus Angels are vnder the law, and Adam before his fall, and the Saints now in heauen. And none yeeld more ſubiection to the lawe then they:and this ſubiection is their libertie. Againe, the law muſt be conſidered as a grieuous yoke which none can beare It is a yoke three waies: firſt, becauſe it did binde the Church of the old Teſtament to the obſeruation of many and that very coſtly ceremonies, for the maintenance of the altar at Hieruſalem was a matter of great charges. Secondly, it is a yoke becauſe it bindes euery offendour to euerlaſting death, Gen. 2. 17. Gal. 3. 13. Thirdly, it is a yoke as it increaſeth ſinne, and as it is the ſtrength of it, 1. Cor. 15. 56. Rom. 5. 20. and 7, 8. And it increaſeth ſinne, not as a cauſe, but as an occaſion: For the wicked nature of man is, the more to doe a thing, the more he is forbidden. The Iſraelites are bidden to goe on to Canaan, then they like Egypt well. They are forbidden to goe to Canaan, and commaunded to ſtay in the wilderneſſe: but then they will needs goe to Canaan. Circumciſion commanded, was lothed of all nations: when it was aboliſhed: then men of ſundry nations imbraced it as needfull to ſaluation. To be vnder the law then, is to be in ſubiection to it, as it is a burden and yoke in the three former reſpects, ſpecially to be ſubiect to the curſe of the law.

The ſecond point is, who are vnder the law. Anſwer. The Iewes before the comming of Chriſt were vnder the law in reſpect of ceremonies: and all men naturally are vnder the law in reſpect of the malediction and curſe thereof, all beeing borne children of wrath, Eph. 2. 3. Here comes a lamentable matter to be conſidered. Very few in reſpect, know themſelues to be in bondage to the curſe of the law. For they thinke it an eaſie matter to obſerue the law: and it is vſed for a forme of prayer whereby men vſe to bleſſe themſelues morning and euening. Learne therefore this one leſſon, that thou are by nature in thy ſelfe vnder the curſe of the law, & for thine offences by it bound ouer to euerlaſting death, If thou ſhouldſt be proclaimed an outlaw, or a writ of rebellion ſhould be ſerued on thee, it would make thee at thy wits end. Now behold, the law proclaimes thee a traitor and rebell againſt God, through heauen and earth. The law ſhuts heauen againſt thee: it ſets hell and death wide open for thee, and it armes al the creatures of God againſt thee. Therefore it ſtands thee in hand to looke about thee, & to flie from the ſentence of the law, to the throne of grace for mercy and forgiueneſſe. It hath bin the faſhion of all holy men to acquaint themſelues with this one leſſon, that they were by nature vnder the law, ſpecially then when they were to humble themſelues in the preſence of God. Daniel in his prayer, aſcribes ſhame and confuſion to himſelfe, Dan. 9, according to the voice and crie of the law: and the prodigall ſonne confeſſeth, that he had ſinned againſt his father, and againſt heauen, and that he was vnworthie to be A accounted a child of God; according to the law, iudging and condemning himſelfe.

The third point is, what is the price wherby men are bought or redeemed from vnder the law? Anſw. The obedience of the Sonne, whereby he ſtood in ſubiection to the law for vs, as Paul ſignifies in the words immediatly going before. It may be ſaid, how can the obedience of one man be a price of redemption for an other? I anſwer, we muſt conſider Chriſt not as a meere man, but as God-man, and by this meanes his obedience is of infinite merit and efficacie. Againe, we muſt conſider him not as a priuate, but as a publike perſon, repreſenting all the Elect in his obedience to his Father. And by this meanes his B obedience ſerues for all that beleeue in him. Again, it may be alleadged, that the law ſaith, Thou ſhalt loue, thou ſhalt not luſt, &c. And, The ſoule that ſinnes, that ſoule ſhall die, Ezec. 18. 20. And, A man ſhall not redeeme the life of his brother. Pſal. 49. 7. Anſw. The law requires that euery man performe obedience and make ſatisfaction in his owne perſon, and the law knowes no other obedience. But this muſt be conſidered, that the law is but one part of the reuealed will of God: and that the Goſpell is an other diſtinct part, reuealing more then the law euer knew. And the Goſpel teacheth a Tranſlation of the law in reſpect of obedience, from our perſons to the perſon of the Mediatour: and thereby it addes an Excepti- C on to the law.

The fourth point is, who are partakers of this Redemption? Anſ. They which ſee, and feele, and bewaile their condition that they are vnder the law, and flie from the ſentence thereof to the throne of grace for mercie. Chriſt came to ſaue ſinners, Matth. 9. that is, ſuch as are conuicted by the law, and know themſelues to be ſinners. He offers eaſe to them that trauell and are heauie laden, Math. 11. 28. Hee preacheth deliuerance to captiues, Luke 4. 18. Here wee are to bewaile the miſerie of our people, that know not themſelues to be vnder the law: nay they loue and delight to be vnder it. For they alleadge for themſelues, that they ſay their prayers duely D and truly, that they meane wel to God-ward, and deale truly with men: and therefore they thinke God will haue mercy on them, and haue them excuſed for all their offences.

The laſt point is, what benefits ariſe of this deliuerance from vnder the law? Anſ. They which turne to God, and beleeue in Chriſt, reape foure benefits hereby. The firſt is, that no ſinne ſhall haue dominion ouer them, Rom. 6. 14. Here marke by the way, that they which are in Chriſt, cannot wholly fall from grace. For they which wholly fall away, are vnder the dominion of ſinne.

The ſecond is, that God wil accept the indeauour to obey, for obedience, becauſe they are freed from the rigour of the law. Reade Malac. 3. 17.

The third is, that they haue libertie to liue and ſerue God without feare of damnation, or any other euill. Luk. 1.74.

The laſt is, that afflictions ceaſe to be curſes, and are turned to bleſſings: and for this cauſe they are delaied and qualified for the good of them which are afflicted. Pſal. 89.32. I will correct them that offend with a rod, but I will not take my mercy from them. Prou. 3.11. Grieue not for the correction of the Lord: for hee loueth, whome he correcteth. Ierem. 10.24 Correct vs in iudgement: and powre forth thy wrath vpon the nations, that haue not knowne thee. This muſt teach men that profeſſe or teach Chriſt, not to be diſcouraged when they bee abuſed, railed on, ſlaundered, or curſed. For if they be from vnder the lawe, and ſo from vnder the ſting of a guilty conſcience, nothing ſhal hurt them. They muſt bee content for a while to ſuffer the ſnatches, and bitings of the deuill: for in the end his head ſhall bee bruiſed in peeces.

To end this point, it may be ſaid, if wee that beleeue be not vnder the lawe, then wee may liue and die as we liſt. Anſ. We are free from the lawe, as a yoke, but not free from it, as it is the rule of obedience, and good life. And becauſe we are freed from the bondage of the law, therefore we muſt be a lawe to our ſelues: we muſt be Voluntaries, Pſal. 110.4. without conſtraint, freely yeelding ſubiection to the will of God, and not for feare of hell, and the laſt iudgement.

The third and laſt degree, is the Fruition of adoption, in theſe words [that we might receiue the adoption of ſonnes.] Heere two queſtions are to be conſidered. The firſt is, How the Church of the new Teſtament is ſaide to receiue the adoption which was before receiued in the olde Teſtament? Anſ. In Scripture a thing is often ſaid to be done, when it is done more fully and plentifully. Chriſt tells Nathanael, that hee ſhall ſee heauen open, Iohn 1.51. that is, more plainely opened. For it was not ſhut in the old Teſtament. And, The holie Ghoſt was not yet, Iohn 7.39. that is, in the full meaſure. And, The way into the Holieſt, was not open while the Tabernacle was ſtanding, Hebr. 9.8. that is, plainely made manifeſt. And in this place, Beleeuers of the new Teſtament receiue the adoption: becauſe they receiue it in a more full and plentifull manner, in that the ſpirit of children is powred forth vpon them in larger meaſure, whether wee regard Illumination, or the gifts of Regeneration. This muſt teach vs that liue in theſe latter dayes, to put on the condition of ſons and daughters of GOD, in reuerence, obedience, and thankefulneſſe. But alas, among the multitude, it is farre otherwiſe. For the moſt liue euen as Atheiſts in ignorance, according to the luſts of their owne hearts. The faith and repentance, which they profeſſe, is but Ceremoniall faith, and Repentance.

The ſecond queſtion is, whence ſprings our A adoption? The anſwer is plaine in the wordes: from the obedience of the ſonne, whereby he ſtood in ſubiection to the law. Here the queſtion of all queſtions is anſwered, namely, what is that thing by which, and for which, a ſinner is iuſtified before God, and ſaued? Anſ. The obedience of the ſonne of God made man, and made vnder the law for vs. For this is it that frees vs from vnder the law, & giues vs the adoption of ſonnes. And this alone is it, whereby we ſtand before the tribunall ſeat of God, which alſo wee are to oppoſe to the iudgement of God, to hell, death, and condemnation.

Therefore our common people erre, that look to be ſaued by their good deeds, that is, B by their good meaning, and dealing. They thus treade the bloud of Chriſt vnder their owne feete, and become Ieſuſes or Sauiours to themſelues.

Secondly, they erre, that teach iuſtification by the eſſentiall iuſtice of the godhead of the ſon: for that is incommunicable: & they which are iuſtified by it, are alſo deified.

Thirdly, the Papiſt erreth, which teacheth iuſtification, partly by remiſſion of ſins, and partly by that which we call inward ſanctification: which is imperfect and mixed in this life with our corruption, and therefore vnfit to acquit and abſolue vs before God.

It may be ſaid, what muſt wee doe that we may be iuſtified and ſaued by this obedience C of the Mediatour? Anſw. In the old Teſtament, when a man had ſinned, he brought a ſheepe or an oxe to the doore of the Tabernacle, and when the Prieſt cut the throat of it, the party laid his hand vpon the head of it, Exod. 29.10. And hereby he ſignified, that the beaſt had done no hurt, and that he as a guiltie malefactour had deſerued death. Now all this was done in figure: and it teacheth vs, that we miſerable ſinners muſt come to God; that we muſt bring our ſacrifice with vs, namely, the Lambe of God, which is the Son of God, made man, and made vnder the law: that we muſt preſent this lambe and the ob- D lation thereof, to the Father for vs, laying our hands on the head of it: that is, confeſſing our guiltineſſe, and that we haue iuſtly deſerued death and perdition from the preſence of God. In the laſt place, wee muſt intreate the Lord to accept the blood of the Lambe for vs, and the whole obedience of the Mediatour. Thus ſhall we be iuſtified and ſaued. Thou wilt ſay: I will therefore doe this, when I am dying. I ſay againe, let it be thy daily exerciſe to the very death. Thou waſt ſeauen yeares in learning of thy trade; thinke not therefore in an houre or two, to worke thy reconciliation with God. If thou art many yeares in learning ſuch things as are done by the ſtrength of nature, think not to attaine to things aboue nature, when and how thou wilt. It is a rule receiued of all men, that they muſt bleſſe themſelues: now the right way to bleſſe thy ſelfe, is to pleade guilty before God, and to intreate him to accept the obedience of the Mediatour for thee.

Verſe 6. Sonnes] that is, ſuch as enioy the liberty of ſonnes. Sent forth] a ſpeech borrowed from Embaſſadors, which are ſent forth with inſtructions, what they ſhall ſay or doe: & it ſignifies, that the ſpirit reueales nothing but that which is the will of the Father and Sonne, Ioh. 16.14. Crying] making vs to crie, Rom. 8.26. For if the words be taken properly, the ſpirit muſt pray to it ſelfe. Abba] the next word is the expoſition, Father.

The ſenſe. The Father hath ſent forth the ſpirit of his ſonne vnto you; this ſpirite ſent forth, dwels in your hearts; dwelling in your hearts, it maketh you pray to God as to a father: and all this it doth, becauſe you are indeed ſonnes of God.

The ſcope. The queſtion is, whether beleeuers of the new Teſtament bee ſeruants to the law, or children? Paul anſwers, No: and he giues two reaſons. The firſt, was in the former verſe: the ſecōd in this. And it is drawne from the ſigne, thus. Yee haue receiued the ſpirit, crying, Abba, father: therefore ye are ſonnes indeed.

In the words, I conſider fiue things: the perſon ſent foorth, the ſpirit of the Sonne: the perſon ſending, God: the manner of ſending: the place, whither the ſpirit is ſent, your hearts: the office of the ſpirit, crying, Abba.

Of the firſt: the ſpirite of the ſonne it is, who is ſent forth. Hee is ſo called; firſt, becauſe he proceedes by communicatiō of ſubſtance, or godhead, not onely from the Father, but alſo from the Sonne. Secondly, becauſe in his manhood he is annoynted and filled with the holy Ghoſt aboue meaſure: Thirdly, becauſe by his death, hee hath merited the giuing and ſending the holy Ghoſt vnto vs.

Moreouer, the ſpirit of the Sonne is here deſcribed. Firſt, he is a perſon ſubſiſting of himſelfe, in that hee is ſaid to bee ſent forth: ſecondly, he is a diuine perſon and no creature, becauſe he dwells in the hearts of all beleeuers: thirdly, he proceedes from the Father, and the Sonne; from the Father, becauſe he is ſent of him; from the Sonne, becauſe he is the ſpirit of the Sonne.

The vſe. By this we learne, that the interceſſion of Chriſt, is of force with God. For he prayed for the ſending of the ſpirite, and it is accompliſhed, Reade Iohn 14.16.

And it is a ſuperfluous doctrine, to teach the Real preſence of the fleſh of Chriſt in the Sacrament. For Chriſt is departed from vs in reſpect of his manhood: becauſe the ſpirite is ſent, Iohn 16.7.

Thirdly, that which the Spirite inwardly teacheth, is the ſame with that which the Sonne hath reuealed by the miniſterie of the Prophets, and Apoſtles, becauſe the Spirite is the ſpirite of the Sonne, Reade Iohn 16.14. Doctrines then concerning ſaluation, that are beſide, or contrary to the Scriptures (as a great part of the Romiſh Religion is) are not reuealed by the ſpirite of God, but are the fictions of the deuill.

The perſon ſending is God, that is, the Father, in theſe words, God ſent foorth the ſpirit of his ſonne. Where marke the diſtinction of the perſons in Trinity. There is the Father, the Sonne, and the ſpirite of the Sonne. And here remember, that this action of ſending foorth, argues not ſuperiority in the perſon ſending, nor inferiority in the perſon ſent: (for equalls may ſend ech other by common conſent) but it argues Order, and a diſtinction of perſons in reſpect of their beginning. For the Father is of none, the Sonne is of the Father, and the holy Ghoſt is of both: and hence it is that he is ſent of both.

The maner of this ſending forth, was on this ſort. We may not imagin that in this ſending, there was any change of place, for the holy ghoſt is euery where. But he is ſaid to be ſent forth, when he manifeſts his preſence by his diuine operation, or by ſpecial and ſupernaturall gifts in the hearts of beleeuers, as by the gift of illumination, faith, regeneration, life, ſenſe & motion, are the gifts of the ſpirit, & ſo are ciuill vertues: but the ſending of the ſpirit is only in reſpect of ſuch gifts as are beſtowed in the Church, in the receiuing of which, the ſpirit is acknowledged.

The place or manſion of the ſpirite is the heart, that is, the mind, wil, and affection. The heart is the very ſinke of ſinne; yet that doth the Spirite chuſe for his abode. Hence wee learne:

1. That the beginning of our new birth is in the heart, when a new light is put into the minde, a new and heauenly diſpoſition into the will and affection.

2. The moſt principal part of our change or renouation, is in the heart, where the ſpirite abides. The end of all teaching is, loue out of a pure heart, good conſcience, and faith vnfained, 1. Tim. 1.5.

3. The beginning and principall part of Gods worſhip is in the heart. Hee that ſerues God in the righteouſneſſe of his heart, in peace and ioy in the holy Ghoſt, is accepted, Rom. 14.17.

4. In our hearts no wicked or carnall thought, will, deſire, or luſt muſt raigne, but onely Gods word and ſpirit. For thy heart is the houſe where the Spirite dwelles, and hee muſt be Lord of his owne houſe.

5. Aboue all things keepe watch & ward about thy heart: and fill it with all good cogitations and deſires, that it may be a fit place of intertainement for the ſpirite, who is (as it were) an Embaſſadour ſent from the great God vnto thee.

The laſt thing is, the office of the ſpirite, which is to make beleeuers crie Abba. Here I conſider foure things: 1. The meanes whereby this Crie is cauſed. 2. The nature of it. 3. To whom it is directed. 4. The manner of direction.

For the firſt, in the effecting or cauſing of this Crie, there are foure works of the ſpirit. The firſt is Conuiction, when a man in his iudgement and conſcience is conuicted, that the ſcriptures of the Prophets and Apoſtles, are indeede the word of God. To this purpoſe there are many arguments which now I omit. This conuiction is a common worke of the ſpirit, yet neceſſarie, becauſe much Atheiſme lies lurking in our harts, which maketh vs call into queſtion euery part of the word of God.

The ſecond worke is Subiection, whereby a man conuicted, that the ſcripture, and euery part of it, is the word of God, ſubiects himſelfe in his hart to the cōmandement of God, which bids him turne to God and beleeue in Chriſt. And this ſecond, is a worke of the ſpirit of grace proper to the Elect.

The third is, the Certificate or teſtimonie of the ſpirit, which is a diuine manner of reaſoning framed in the minds of them that beleeue and repent, on this manner:

Hee that beleeues and repents, is Gods childe.
Thus ſaith the Goſpel.
But I beleeue in Chriſt, and repent: at the leaſt I ſubiect my will to the commaundement which bids me repent and beleeue: I deteſt mine vnbeliefe, and all my ſinnes: and deſire the Lord to increaſe my faith.
Therefore I am the childe of God.

This is the practicall ſyllogiſme of the holie Ghoſt. It is the teſtimonie of the ſpirite, that we are the ſonnes of God: it is the earneſt of the ſpirit, and the ſeale whereby we are ſealed to the day of our redemption: and it containes the certaintie of ſpeciall faith.

The fourth thing that followes vpon this Teſtimony, is peace of conſcience, ioy, and affiance in God. And from this affiance comes the crying heere mentioned, whereby euery true beleeuer with open throate (as it were) cries vnto God the father. This doctrine is of great woorth, it is the hinge vpon which the gate of heauen turnes: and therefore to be remembred.

The vſe. By this we ſee a manifeſt errour in the Popiſh Religion, which teacheth that wee can haue no other ſaluation in this life, but that which is probable or coniecturall, that is, a certaintie ioyned with feare, ſuſpition, and ſome doubting. Certainty in reſpect of God, that promiſeth: feare and doubting in reſpect of our owne indiſpoſition. But this doctrine is falſe. For they which are Gods children, receiue the ſpirit crying Abba: and this crying argues affiance or confidence in God. By faith wee haue confidence in God, and entrance with boldneſſe, Epheſ. 3. 12. and boldneſſe is oppoſite to feare, and excludes doubting in reſpect of our ſelues.

Againe, by this doctrine wee ſee it is ordi- A narie, and poſſible, for all that beleeue and repent, to be certainely aſſured that they are the childrē of God. For if they haue the ſpirite of God crying in them (as all Gods children haue) they cannot but perceiue this cry, and withall they haue the teſtimony of the ſpirit in thē, which is the ground of this crie. Rom. 8. 16. And ſeeing this is ſo, wee muſt be admoniſhed to vſe all meanes, that we may be aſſured that we are the children of God. 2. Pet. 1. 10. Giue all diligence to make your election ſure. Paul bids rich men lay vp a good foundation againſt the time to come, 1. Tim. 6. 18. And this foundation muſt be laid, not in heauen, but in the conſcience. God of his mercy hath B made a couenant or bargaine, with vs that beleeue and repent: in this bargaine he hath promiſed to vs pardon of our ſinnes, and life euerlaſting: let vs then neuer be at reſt till wee haue receiued earneſt from the hand of God, and haue his promiſe ſealed vnto vs by the ſpirite of our hearts. You will ſay, what ſhal I do to be aſſured that I am Gods child? Anſw. Thou muſt examine thy ſelfe of two things. The firſt is, whether thou art conuicted in thy iudgement, that the ſcripture is indeede the word of God: if thou art not yet conuicted, then inquire and vſe means that thou maiſt indeed be conuicted: otherwiſe al is in vaine. Secondly, inquire whether thou C doeſt indeed, and in good earneſt, ſubmit and ſubiect thy will to the commaundement of God, which bids thee beleeue in Chriſt, and turne vnto God. For if thou canſt ſay, that thou doſt will to beleeue, and will to repent, if thou ſhew this will indeede in the vſe of good meanes, if thou condemne and deteſt thy vnbeleefe and all other thy ſinnes, thou haſt receiued the earneſt of the ſpirit, & thou art indeed the childe of God. And this aſſurance ſhall be vnto thee of great vſe. For it will make thee reioyce in afflictions: and it will worke patience, experience, hope, Rom. 5. 5. It will make thee deſpiſe this world, it wil take away the feare of death, and kindle in thy heart a deſire to be with Chriſt.

D II. Touching the nature of this Cry, it ſtands in the deſires and groans of the heart, directed vnto God. And theſe deſires may be diſtinguiſhed from al carnall deſires by three properties. Firſt of all, they are in the hearts of thē that are turned to God, or at the leaſt begin to turne vnto him. For God heareth no ſinners. Secondly, they are conceiued in the minde, according to the reuealed will of God, Rom. 8. 27. 1. Ioh. 5. 14. Thirdly, they are diuine & ſpirituall, touching things which concerne the kingdome of God, Rom. 8. 5.

Deſires thus qualified, haue the force of a lowd crie in the eares of God. Pſal. 10. 17. God heareth the deſire of the poore. Pſalme 38. 9. All my deſires are before thee. Pſalme 145. 19. Hee fulfilleth the deſire of them that feare him. Eſay 64. 24. Before they crie I will anſwer: that is, ſo ſoone as a deſire of my helpe is conceiued, and before it be vttered, I wil anſwer.

That the deſires of our hearts are cries, it is by meanes of the interceſsion of Chriſt. This Interceſsion is not a vocall, but a virtual prayer, in that the Sonne of God preſents his manhood and his merites before the Father in heauen, willing as GOD, and deſiring as man, that the Father ſhould accept the ſaide merits for vs. Now this will and deſire of the Sonne is of great force with the Father. It is a Crie in which the Father is well pleaſed: & by it the deſires of our hearts are cries in the eares of God.

Of theſe deſires there be two ſpeciall examples in the Scriptures. The firſt is, when wee are touched in our hearts for our ſinnes, to flie to the throne of grace, and to deſire reconciliation with God in Chriſt. When Dauid did but deſire the pardon of his ſinnes, and therfore purpoſed in his hart to humble himſelfe, he receiued pardon, Pſalme 32.5. I ſaid I will confeſſe my wickedneſſe againſt my ſelfe vnto the Lord, and thou forgaueſt the puniſhment of my ſinne. When the prodigall ſonne conceiued a deſire to be reconciled to his father, with a purpoſe to confeſſe his offence, before he had vttered his deſire, hee is receiued to mercie, Luke 15.21.

The ſecond example is a deſire of Gods preſence and protection in common iudgements. When Moſes ſtoode at the red ſea, in great danger, hauing the ſea before him, and Pharaohs chariots behind him, no doubt hee lifted vp his heart vnto God; but wee reade not of any thing that hee ſaide; and yet the Lord ſaith, why crieſt thou to me? Exod. 14.15. When Iehoſaphat was in great diſtreſſe by reaſon of the army of the Ammonites, confounded in himſelfe, he ſaith, O Lord, we know not what to doe, but our eyes are towards thee. 2. Chron. 20.12. and hereupon he obtained deliuerance.

The vſe. By this we learne to lay aſide formall praying and lippe-labour, and to learne to lift vp our harts to God in heauenly ſighs and deſires: for this is indeede to pray. It is the very firſt thing, that the child of GOD doth, inwardly to ſigh and deſire reconciliation with God in Chriſt: and he which cannot doe this, is not as yet borne of God.

Againe, many are caſt down in themſelues, becauſe they ſee their mindes full of ignorance, their willes full of rebellion, and ſubiect to many temptations, and they finde little goodnes in themſelues; but they muſt be comforted by this: If they can but grone and ſigh vnto God in their hearts for mercie and forgiuenes, they haue the ſpirit of God crying in them Abba, and they haue receiued the firſt fruits of the ſpirit. The deſires & cries of our hearts are fruits of the Interceſsion, or crie of the Sonne of God in heauen for vs.

Others are grieued, becauſe they haue prayed long, and they finde not the fruit of their praiers: but if they can pray, ſighing &

A groaning in their harts for grace and mercy, let them be content, for it is the ſpirit of grace and praier, that makes them ſigh and grone. And euery ſigh of a contrite heart, hath a lowd crie in the eares of God.

It falles out often, that men in extremitie of daunger confounded in themſelues, know not what in the world to ſay, or do. Ezechias in his ſickeneſſe could not ſay any thing, but chatter in his throat, and mourne like a doue Iſa. 38.14. Some lie vnder the ſword of the enemy, others in a tempeſt are caſt ouer ſhipboard into the ſea. Now this muſt bee their comfort, if they can lift vp their hearts vnto God, if they can but ſigh and groane for his
B preſence and aſſiſtance, the Lord will heare the petitions of their hearts: for the inward ſobs, groanes, and ſighs of repentant ſinners, are lowd and ſtrong cries in the eares of God the father.

The third point is, that the crie of the ſpirit is directed to God; becauſe it makes vs cry, Abba, father. Heere firſt obſerue, that Praier to Saints and Angels, is carnall prayer. For the praier which is cauſed by the Spirit, is directed to the Father. And good reaſon: for it is the propertie of God to heare the crie of the hart, Rom. 8.27. Some ſay, that the Saints in heauen are with GOD, and that in him they ſee the deſires of our harts: but it is falſe which they ſay. For the Scripture ſaith, that God alone ſearcheth the heart, 1. Kings 8.39.
C None knowes what is in man but God, and the ſpirite of man, 1. Corin. 2.11. Though Abraham had the light of God, yet it is ſaide, Thou art our Father, and Abraham knowes vs not, Eſay 63.16. And for this cauſe, Inuocation of Saints, whether it be called Latria, or Dulia, is flat Idolatrie.

Againe, Prayer is to be made to God as he hath reuealed himſelfe in the word; that is, to God, who is the father of Chriſt, and in him our father, who alſo ſends his ſpirite into our hearts, crying Abba. It is an heathenish practiſe (which is alſo the practiſe of many among vs) to pray to an abſolute god,
D that is, to God out of the Father, Sonne, and holy Spirit.

Thirdly, here we ſee that true and ſpirituall Inuocation of God, is a marke of the childe of God; becauſe it is a fruit of the ſpirite of God in them that are the children of God. And by this the people of God are noted, Act. 9.14. 1. Cor. 1.2. and on the contrary, it is the marke of an Atheiſt not to pray, Pſal. 14.4.

The laſt point is, the manner of directing our cries to God. Firſt of all, they are to bee directed to him with reuerence, as being preſent with vs: for to crie Abba, is not to ſpeak words into the aire, but to direct our hearts to one that is preſent with vs in all dutifull and childe-like manner. Thus did Dauid, Pſal. 119.58. and Paul, Epheſ. 3.14. Secondly, our cries are to be directed to God, with ſubiection to his will. Reade the example of Chriſt, Mar. 14. 36. and of Dauid, 2. Sam. 15. 26. This condemnes the practiſe of many men. Balaam deſired to die the death of the righteous, but without ſubiection to God: for hee would not liue the life of the righteous. And many among vs haue often good motions & deſires in their mindes, but there is no ſoundnes in them: becauſe they are not ioyned with a change & conuerſion of heart and life. Thirdly, our deſires are to be directed vnto God with importunity and inſtancy. For the ſpirit makes vs cry Abba, Father: that is, My father, and thy father. God requires this importunity of vs, Luke 18. 1. It is practiſed by Dauid, Pſal. 69. 4. by the woman of Canaan, Math. 15. We muſt doe as Iacob did, wraſtle with God, and giue him no reſt til hee fulfill the deſires of our hearts, and giue vs the bleſſing. And our conſtant deſires and groanes to heauen for mercy, ſhall neuer bee in vaine. For if we aske any thing according to his will, hee heareth vs indeede, 1. Iohn 5. 14.

Verſe 7. Theſe words, are the concluſion of the former doctrine of Paul. The time of your liberty is come, in that your liberty is procured and purchaſed by Chriſt, and yee haue receiued the ſpirit of ſonnes crying Abba: therefore ye are not ſeruants to the Law, but ſonnes of God. And from this concluſion Paul deriues a ſecond, which is the ſumme and ſubſtance of the whole diſputation, from the beginning of the third chapter, to this place; namely, that they which are ſons, are alſo heires, not by the Lawe, and the workes thereof, but by Chriſt.

This verſe is a repetition of the 26. and 29 verſes of the third chapter: therefore I will not ſtand any longer in the handling of it.

One thing is to bee obſerued, namely, the change of the number. Paul ſaid before, Yee are ſonnes: here he ſaith, Thou art a ſonne. And this hee dooth to teach vs, that they which turne to God and beleeue in Chriſt, muſt be aſſured that they are the ſonnes and heires of God. Paul hath ſet downe immediately before, the infallible ſigne, whereby a man may know himſelfe to be the child of God: therefore in the next words he ſaith, therefore thou are the ſon of God. S. Iohn ſaith, Theſe things we write vnto you that beleeue, that yee may know that ye haue life euerlaſting, 1. Iohn 5. 13. Thus muſt euery beleeuer apply the Goſpell, and the benefits thereof to himſelfe.

The meditation of this point ſerues greatly to ſweeten all the croſſes vnto vs: for if we know that we be Gods children, that is comfort enough: and wee may then aſſure our ſelues that in euery croſſe, God comes vnto vs as a father. Againe this meditation works a contentation in euery loſſe. For if thou be the child of God, thou canſt haue no great loſſe. For all things are thine, thou Chriſts, and Chriſt Gods. 1. Cor. 3. 22. Laſtly, this meditation muſt ſtirre vp in vs, a care to leade a heauenly & ſpirituall life, 1. Ioh. 3. 3. that we may be like our eldeſt brother Chriſt Ieſus.

Verſe 8. But euen then when ye knew not God, ye did ſeruice vnto them, which by nature are not Gods.

Verſe 9. But now ſeeing yee know God, or rather are knowne of God, how turne yee againe vnto impotent and beggarly rudiments, whereunto as from the beginning, yee will be in bondage againe.

Verſe 10. Ye obſerue daies and moneths, and times, and yeares.

Verſe 11. I am in feare of you, leſt I haue beſtowed labour on you in vaine.

Here Paul returnes againe to the principal concluſion of the whole Epiſtle, which is on this maner. If I Paul be called to teach, and my doctrine be true: ye haue done euil to reuolt from it to another goſpel: But I am called to teach, & my doctrine is true: this Paul prooued in the firſt, ſecond, and third chapters. Therefore ye haue done euill to reuolt from my doctrine. This concluſion he propounded before, and here againe he repeates it: and withall amplifies it two waies. Firſt, by ſetting downe the particular matter of the reuolt and apoſtaſie of the Galatians, verſe 9. 10. Ye returne to impotent rudiments: Ye obſerue daies and times. Secondly, he ſets downe the greatneſſe of their reuolt: firſt, by compariſon thus: Once yee ſerued falſe gods; but there is ſome excuſe of that offence: becauſe ye did not know God: but that yee haue returned to the Rudiments of the world, there is no excuſe of it: for ye then knew God, or rather were knowne of God. Againe he ſets forth the greatneſſe of their reuolt, by the effect, verſe 11. It makes mee feare leſt I haue loſt my labour among you.

Here Paul ſets downe a threefold eſtate of the Galatians: their eſtate in Gentiliſme before their conuerſion, their eſtate in their conuerſion, and their eſtate in the apoſtaſie.

Their eſtate in Gentiliſme ſtands in two things; Ignorance of God [then ye knew not God.] Idolatrie or ſuperſtition, [ye ſerued them which are not gods by nature.]

Touching their ignorance of God, it may be demaunded, how they can be ſaid not to know God, whereas Paul ſaith, That which may be knowne of God, is made manifeſt vnto the Gentiles? Rom. 1. 20. And that God did not leaue himſelfe without witneſſe? Act. 14. 17. Anſw. Knowledge of God is twofold, Naturall, or reuealed knowledge. Naturall is, that which all men haue in their minds by the light of nature which alſo they may gather by the view and obſeruation of the creatures. This knowledge hath two properties. The firſt is, it is imperfect: becauſe by it we know ſome few and generall things of God: as namely, that there is a God, and that he is to be worſhipped, &c. In this reſpect, this knowledge is like the ruines of a princely pallace. Againe, A it is weake: becauſe it ſerues onely to cut off excuſe, and it is not ſufficient to direct vs in the worſhip of God. Nay when by it we begin to ſet downe the worſhip of God, we then run headlong into ſuperſtition, & vanity. Reuealed knowledge is, that which is ſet downe in the written word, whereby wee may know what God is in himſelfe, & what he is to vs: namely, a father in Chriſt, giuing pardon of ſinne & life euerlaſting. This knowledge the Gentiles altogether want: nay, by reaſon of the blindnes and impotencie of their minds, they iudge it fooliſhneſſe. Thus then in effect, though the Gentiles by nature know ſome things of God, yet doe they not know God as he will be knowne of vs. B

Againe, it may be demanded, whether this ignorance be a ſinne in the Galatians? Anſ. Yea. For all men are bound to know God by the firſt commaundement. And this ignorance is a want of the Image of God in the mind, Coloſſ. 3.10. And euery defect of the Image of God, is a braunch of originall ſinne. And vengeance is the puniſhment of this ſinne, 2 Theſſ. 1.8.

It may be obiected, that Paul heere excuſeth the Galatians by their ignorance. Anſ. It excuſeth à tanto, non à toto, that is, the degree and meaſure of the ſinne, and not the ſinne it ſelfe, Luke 12.48.

C Againe, it may be ſaide, that this their ignorãce is inuincible, becauſe as the Gentiles do not know God, ſo they cannot know him. Anſw. That they cannot know him, it is not Gods fault, but the fault of their firſt parẽts, and conſequently their fault: and this ignorance ſpreads it ſelfe ouer all mankinde, as a puniſhment of the firſt offence.

The third point is, that this ignorance is a great and grieuous ſin: for here Paul makes it the mother of ſuperſtition and Idolatrie. This muſt teach vs all to deteſt this ignorance of God and his will, and to ſeeke by all meanes to know God. God hath a controuerſie with men, becauſe they know him not, Hoſea 4.1.6.

D Againe, this ſerues to warne all Miniſters of the word, to be carefull to roote out ignorance out of the minds of the people, and to plant the knowledge of God. And by this we ſee, it is falſe which the Papiſt teacheth, that Ignorance is the mother of Deuotion.

The ſecond ſinne of the Galatians is, that they ſerued them, which are not gods by nature, that is, falſe gods, not gods indeed, but gods in opinion.

It may be obiected, that the wiſeſt of the Gentiles, worſhipped the true God, Creator of heauen and earth. Anſ. Falſe gods are ſet vp two waies. The firſt is, when that which is not God, is placed and worſhipped in the roome of the true God; as when the ſunne, moone, and ſtarres are worſhipped, &c. and this is the groſſeſt kinde of idolatry. The ſecond is, when men acknowledge the true God, but doe not conceiue him, as hee will be conceiued, and as he hath reuealed himſelfe in the word. In this reſpect, the Epheſians are ſaide to bee without God, Epheſ. 3.12. and the Samaritans to worſhip they knew not what, Ioh. 4.22. For they conceiued the true God in a falſe manner, becauſe they conceiued him forth of the Father, Sonne, and holy Ghoſt: and therefore they ſet vp a falſe god vnto themſelues. Falſe worſhip giuen to God, preſuppoſeth a falſe opinion of God: and a falſe opinion of God, ſets vp an idol or falſe god, in the roome of the true God. For it is not ſufficient to conceiue ſome true things of God, but wee muſt preciſely conceiue him, as he hath reuealed himſelfe, without addition or detraction. And thus did the wiſeſt of the Galatians worſhip falſe gods.

This Idolatrie is a common ſin, and bred (as it were) in the bone. The Turkes at this day worſhip a falſe and fained God. For they conceiue and worſhip a God creatour of heauen and earth, that is neither father, ſonne, nor holy ghoſt: and the Iewes worſhip God out of Chriſt: and ſo a fained god. For Hee which hath not the Sonne, hath not the Father, 1. Iohn 2.23. Likewiſe the religion of the Papiſt teacheth & maintaineth the worſhip of falſe gods. For it giues to Angels and Saints a faculty or power to know the deſires of our hearts, to heare, and help vs in all places, at al times: and hereupon praier is made to them: but al this is indeed the prerogatiue and priuiledge of the true God: and in as much as it is giuen to Angels and Saints departed, they are ſet vp in the roome of the true God.

Again, that religion teacheth men to worſhip God, in, at, and before Images. And this worſhip preſuppoſeth an Opinion or imagination that there is a God that will bee preſent to heare and help vs, in, at, and before Images: now this God is a God deuiſed by the braine of man. Papiſts alledge, that their intention is to worſhip the true God, the Father, Sonne, and holy Ghoſt. And I ſay againe, that the true God hath reuealed his will, that hee doth deteſt this manner of worſhip: and therefore the worſhip is directed eyther to the Images themſelues, or to the God deuiſed in the braine.

Thirdly, they of the Popiſh religion worſhip a fained Chriſt of their owne deuiſing: namely, a Chriſt that ſits at the right hand of the Father in heauen, and is withall in the hands of euery Prieſt, after the words of cõſecration. And they worſhip a god ſet vp by themſelues, namely, a God that will bee appeaſed by humane ſatisfactions, & at whoſe hands a ſinfull man may merite euerlaſting life, that is to ſay, a God all of mercy, and little or no iuſtice.

Though our Religion teach no Idolatry, yet certaine it is, that many among vs practiſe a ſpirituall Idolatrie in their hearts. For looke what a man loues moſt, and cares moſt

A for, and delights moſt in, that is his God; ſome therefore haue their riches for their god, ſome their pleaſures, ſome their beaſtly luſts. For where thy heart is, there is thy God. Againe, the ignorant multitude worſhip a god of their owne coining, which is a god made all of mercie, and no iuſtice. For they perſwade themſelues, that there is mercy with God, though they repent not, but go on in their ſinnes: whereas the true God is infinite, not onely in mercy, but alſo in iuſtice, *Exod.*34.

That this ſinne of Idolatry may be rooted out of the minds of men, there muſt be firſt an Illumination of the minde, with the knowledge of the true God and his will: and there B muſt alſo be a renouation of the heart and affections, that they ſet not vp ſomething elſe in the roome of God.

The eſtate of the Galatians after their conuerſion is in theſe words, Yee know God, or rather are knowne of God.

The knowledge wherby men know God, is either literall knowledge, or ſpirituall knowledge: literall, is when the doctrine of God, & his wil is known, without reformation of life. Spirituall knowledge is, when the mind is inlightned by the ſpirit of God, with the knowledge of God, by the word, and according to the word; ſo as thereupon men are transformed into the Image of God, 2.*Cor.*3.18. And this kinde of knowledge is here meant, when C Paul ſaith, Yee know God.

The foundation of this knowledge is, that GOD is to be knowne in Chriſt: for in him God hath manifeſted his infinite wiſedome, iuſtice, mercy. Therefore hee is called The ingrauen image of the perſon of the father, *Heb.*1.2. And Paul ſaith, That we haue the knowledge of the glorie of God, in the face of Ieſus Chriſt, 2.*Cor.*4.6.

The properties of this knowledge are three. The firſt is, that it muſt be a Speciall knowledge, whereby wee muſt acknowledge God to be our God in Chriſt. The firſt commandement of the law requires, that we take D the true God for our God. The commandement of Chriſt is, Beleeue the Goſpel. Now the ſtipulation of the couenant of grace (which alſo is the ſubſtance of the goſpel) is this, I am thy God, *Ier.*31.33. this therfore muſt we beleeue: and to this knowledge is the promiſe of life euerlaſting annexed, *Ioh.*17.3. *Iſa.*53.11.

The ſecond property is, that this knowledge muſt not bee confuſed, but diſtinct. Firſt, we muſt acknowledge the true God in reſpect of his preſence with vs in all places. Thus Moſes is ſaide to know the inuiſible, *Hebr.*11.27. Secondly, we muſt know and acknowledge God in reſpect of his particular prouidence ouer vs. Thus Dauid knew God, when he ſaid, that hee numbred his flittings, and put his teares into his bottle, Pſalme 56.8. Thirdly, we muſt know God in reſpect of his will, in all things to be done, and to be ſuffered: and this is the right knowledge of God, to haue regard to his will, *Rom.*12.2. *Epheſ.*5.17. Dauid ſaith, All thy lawes are before me, 2.Samuel 22.23. and when Shemei reuiled, hee ſpake thus, Hee raileth becauſe God biddes him raile, 2.Samuel 16.10. Laſtly, wee muſt knew and acknowledge God in the power which hee ſhewed in the death & reſurrection of Chriſt. Reade and conſider *Epheſ.*1.17. where Paul placeth the knowledg of God in two things: in the knowledge of the riches of eternal life, and in an experimentall knowledge of the vertue of the reſurrection of Chriſt in our ſelues.

The third property is, that this knowledge muſt be an effectuall and liuely knowledge, working in vs new affections and inclinations, He that ſaith he knowes God, and keeps not his commandements, makes him a lyar, 1.*Ioh.*2.4. and 3.6. *Tit.*2. verſe laſt.

The vſe. Seeing the conuerſion of a ſinner ſtands in this ſpiritual knowledge of God, we muſt be ſtirred vp to ſeeke to know God according as he will be knowne of vs. We deſire to ſerue God: and we can not ſerue him, vnleſſe we know him: nay, ſo long as we know him not, wee doe nothing but ſerue the falſe gods of our owne hearts. Againe, wee deſire life eternall: and this is life, in right manner to acknowledge God, Iohn 17.3. And the whole matter of our boaſting, muſt bee the knowledge of God, *Ierem.*9.24. God himſelfe miniſtreth vnto me a further argument to mooue you to this deſire: namely, by the moouing of the earth yeſterday. For though Philoſophers aſcribe all to nature, yet the truth is, that the trembling and the ſhogging of the earth, is a ſigne of the great and extraordinary anger of God. The cauſe of this anger is, that we know not God, neyther doe we for the moſt part care to know him. We haue had the goſpel long, but we bring forth but ſmall fruits. For this cauſe the earth in his trembling doth, as it were, groane to be diſburdened of ſo rebellious a nation, and it doth after a ſort craue leaue of God, that it may deuoure a ſinfull people, as it once deuoured Dathan, and the company of Abiram. Now our duety is, in this iudgement of God to acknowledge his maieſty, his anger, and his iuſtice: and with feare and trembling to humble our ſelues for our ſinnes paſt, thereby to preuent his anger to come. The earth a brute and dumbe creature in his kinde, is become a preacher vnto vs: and his trembling muſt teach vs to tremble in our hearts, and to ſinne no more.

Againe, if we muſt know God, wee muſt remember God and Chriſt: and as we muſt know God, ſo muſt we remember him. Now wee muſt not know Chriſt according to the fleſh, 2.*Corint.*5.17. and therefore wee may not remember Chriſt according to the fleſh, that is, in any worldly and carnall manner. This therefore is not to keepe a Memory of Chriſt, to ſpend twelue daies in reuell and riot, in masking and mumming, in carding and dicing (as many doe:) this is rather to burie the memorie of Chriſt, and to doe homage to the god of pleaſure. Of them that ſaid, Let vs eate, drinke, and ſleepe, Paul ſaith thus: Awake and doe righteouſly: for ſome of you doe not know God, 1. Cor. 15, 34.

Paul ſaith further, But rather ye are knowne of God. The knowledge whereby God knowes men, ſtands in two things: his Election of them to his ſpeciall loue, 2. Tim. 1. 19. and the execution of Election, whereby he makes men his peculiar people, by calling, iuſtifying, and ſanctifying of them. Tit. 2. verſ. 14.

Hence obſerue: firſt, that Gods Election is the roote of all the gifts of God in vs. We know God, becauſe he firſt knowes vs. Paul ſaith, that we were elected that we might be holy, Eph. 1. 4. Therefore we are not elected (as ſome teach) either for our faith, or according to our faith, but to our faith, that is, Elected that we might beleeue.

Secondly, hence we learne, that we can neither thinke, will, or doe that which is good, vnleſſe God preuent vs with his grace. God muſt firſt vouchſafe to acknowledge vs, before we can acknowledge him. Ioh. 10. 14. Preuenting grace, is two-fold. The firſt, and the ſecond. The firſt, when God in our firſt conuerſion takes away the ſtonie heart, and puts a fleſhie heart in the roome. The ſecond is, after we are regenerate: for then God ſtill preuents vs with good motions and deſires. Of both reade Ezec. 36. 26. Some teach, that if we doe that which we can, God will giue vs his grace: but this is falſe: for then we ſhould preuent God.

Thirdly, by this we ſee, that the workes of grace in God imprint their image in the hearts of them that belong to God. And this is worth the marking. There is a knowledge in God whereby he knowes who are his: and this knowledge brings forth another knowledge in vs, whereby we know God for our God. There is an Election in God which workes in the Elect another election, whereby they chuſe God for their God. The loue, whereby God loues vs, workes in vs an other loue whereby we loue God, 1. Ioh. 4. 19. Chriſt firſt apprehends vs: and this apprehenſion of his, workes in vs the apprehenſion of faith, whereby we lay hold vpon him, Phil. 3. 12. When Chriſt makes interceſſion for vs in heauen, there is another interceſſion wrought in our hearts by the ſpirit, whereby we cry Abba father, Rom. 8. 26. The death of Chriſt hath a vertue in it, to worke in vs the death of ſinne. Thus doth the ſpirit of God ſeale vs to the day of our redemption. By this may we know that we belong to God, if we finde any impreſſion of the grace of God in vs. The ſunne by his light ſhines vpon vs, and by the ſame light we view and behold the ſunne.

Laſtly, here is the foundation of true comfort. A Our faith doth not ſaue vs, becauſe it is a perfect vertue; but becauſe it apprehends a perfect obiect; namely, the perfect obedience of Chriſt. So then, if our faith erre not in his obiect, but be rightly fixed on the true cauſes of our ſaluation, though it be but a weake faith, and doe no more but cauſe vs to will, deſire, & indeauour to apprehend Chriſt, it is true faith, and iuſtifieth: the weakeneſſe of it ſhall not hinder our ſaluation, which ſtands not in this, that we doe know God, but in this, that God knowes vs, whoſe knowledge is perfect and cannot faile. Againe, our ſaluation ſtands not in our apprehenſion of Chriſt, but in Chriſts apprehending of vs, B Phil. 3. 12.

This knowledge of God wherby he knowes vs, hath two properties. Firſt, it is ſpeciall, whereby he knowes all the Elect euen by name, Exod. 33. 17. Againe, it is a perpetuall and vnchangeable knowledge. For whome God once knowes, he neuer forgets, Iſa. 49. 15.

The third eſtate of the Galathians is their eſtate in their reuolt or Apoſtaſie, in theſe words, How turne ye againe to impotent and beggarly rudiments, whereunto as from the beginning ye will be in bondage againe? or thus, to which ye will doe ſeruice againe as from the beginning?

The words carrie this ſenſe: How turne ye againe? that is, it is an intollerable offence in C you, hauing knowne God, to returne againe to the rudiments of the law. By rudiments we are to vnderſtand circumciſion, the Iewiſh ſacrifices, and all the ceremonies of the law of Moſes. And it may not ſeeme ſtrange, that they are called impotent and beggarly rudiments. For they muſt be conſidered three waies, with Chriſt, without Chriſt, and againſt Chriſt. With Chriſt, when they are conſidered as types and figures of Chriſt to come, and as ſignes of grace by diuine inſtitution for the time of the old Teſtament. Without Chriſt, when they are vſed onely for cuſtome, whether before or after the death of Chriſt. Againſt Chriſt, when they are eſteemed as meritorious cauſes of ſaluation, and D the iuſtification of a ſinner is placed in them, either in whole, or in part: as though Chriſt alone were not ſufficient. In this reſpect Paul cals them impotent and beggarly rudiments.

And Paul hauing ſaid, that the Galathians returned againe to the rudiments of the law, in the next words he ſhewes how they doe it: namely, by ſeruing them againe. They ſerued, or yeelded ſeruice to them three waies: In opinion, becauſe they iudged them to be neceſſarie parts of Gods worſhip, and meanes of their ſaluation. In conſcience, becauſe they ſubiected their conſciences to them. In affection, becauſe they placed part of their affiance in them for their iuſtification and ſaluation.

It may be demanded, how the Galathians can be ſaid to returne again to the rudiments

A of the law, and ſerue them againe, that were neuer vſed to them before? Anſ. In the ſpeech of Paul there is that which is called Catachreſis, that is, a kind of ſpeaking ſomewhat improper in reſpect of fineneſſe and Elegancie. The like we haue, Ruth. 1. 22. when Ruth is ſaid to returne to Iuda with Naomi; and yet ſhee was neuer there before. Neuertheleſſe, the ſpeech in ſenſe is moſt ſignificant & proper. For Paul (no doubt) ſignifies hereby, that when the Galathians ſubiected themſelues to the rudiments of the law, and placed their ſaluation in part euen in them, they did in effect and in truth as much as returne againe to their old ſuperſtitions, and ſerue againe their falſe gods.

B Here then we haue a deſcription of the Apoſtaſie of the Galathians. It is a voluntarie ſin (for Paul ſaith, ye will ſerue) after the knowledge of the truth, in which they returne again to the rudiments of the law, by yeelding ſubiection, and ſeruice to them: which act of theirs is indeed as much as if they had ſerued againe their falſe gods. Here ſome may ſay, if this be ſo, then they ſinned againſt the holy Ghoſt. Anſwer. The ſinne againſt the holy Ghoſt, is indeed a voluntarie ſinne: but that is by reaſon of the obſtinacie and malice of the will: and this offence in the Galathians was voluntarie onely by infirmitie. Againe, the ſinne againſt the holy Ghoſt is an vniuerſall Apoſtaſie, in reſpect of all the Articles C of religion: for that ſinne makes men crucifie Chriſt crucified, Heb 6. 6. and to tread vnder foot the ſonne of God: the Apoſtaſie of the Galathians was particular, onely in the article of iuſtification.

The vſe. In that the Ceremonies of the law ſet vp againſt Chriſt, in the cauſe of our iuſtification and ſaluation, are called impotent and beggarly rudiments, Paul teacheth a waightie concluſion: that Chriſt ſtands alone in the worke of redemption, without collegue or partner, without deputy, or ſubſtitute, whether we reſpect the whole worke of redemption, or the leaſt part of it. Againe, that all the workes of mediation ſtand alone by themſelues, and admit nothing to be added D and adioyned to them, There is no other name whereby we can be ſaued beſide the name of Chriſt, Act. 4. 12. Chriſt ſaues them perfectly that come vnto him, Heb. 7. 25. In him we are complete, Col. 2. 10. He alone treades the wine-preſſe of Gods wrath, and none with him, Iſa. 63. 3. If Chriſt be a Sauiour, he muſt be a perfect Sauiour, conſidering he is God and man: and beeing a perfect Sauiour in himſelfe, he needes no partner, and becauſe he is euery where at all times, therefore he needs no deputie in his ſtead. Againe, euery worke of redemption is acted by whole Chriſt, according to both his natures: and as there are in him two natures, ſo are there two operations of the ſaid natures, & as both natures concurre to make the compound worke of a mediatour, which is an admirable worke, not meerely humane, but theandricke, that is, humane-diuine. For this cauſe no action pertaining to redemption, can be performed by a meere creature, whether man or Angell.

Obiect. I. Ioh. 20. 23. The Apoſtles haue the power to remit and retaine ſinnes: therefore it is not proper to Chriſt. Anſ. To remit by meriting and by efficacie in the conferring of pardon, is proper to the Mediatour. The Apoſtles and other Miniſters remit by preaching and by declaring remiſſion. The Miniſters of the word doe not procure our reconciliation with God as Chriſt doth, but they exhort men to be reconciled to God, 2. Cor. 5. 20.

Obiect. II. 1. Pet. 3. 18. Baptiſme ſaueth: therefore not Chriſt alone. Anſw. Baptiſme ſaueth by ſignifying and by ſealing vnto vs the grace and mercie of God: and the effecting of our ſaluation, is in the ſame place aſcribed to Chriſt and his reſurrection.

The concluſion then of Paul is to be remembred: for it ſerues as an engine to ouerturne the maine grounds of Poperie. The primacie of the Pope is a certaine eſtate, in which hee is ſubſtituted into the place and roome of Chriſt: for he takes vpon him to make lawes, that properly & truly bind conſcience, euen as the lawes of God. Againe, he takes vnto him a proper and iudiciall power, to remit or retaine the ſinnes of men. Now theſe actions indeede, are the proper actions of God and Chriſt, no meere creature is capable of them. In this reſpect the primacie of the Pope is an impotent and beggarly inuention. Againe, the Romiſh religion, beſide the al-ſufficient oblation of Chriſt vpon the croſſe, ſets vp the ſacrifice of the Maſſe fur the ſinnes of the quicke and the dead: beſides the interceſſion of Chriſt, it ſets vp the interceſſion of Saints and Angels: beſide the perfect ſatisfaction of Chriſt, it ſets vp humane ſatisfactions: beſide the infinite merit of Chriſt, it maintaines and magnifies the merit of humane workes. But all theſe are but impotent and beggarly deuiſes of men. For Chriſt in his Sacrifice, Satisfaction, Interceſſion, Merit, admits no corriuall or aſſociate. All actions of his are perfect in their kinde, and need no ſupply.

This againe muſt teach vs, to content our ſelues with Chriſt alone, and not to ſet vp any thing with him, or againſt him. This is the ſafeſt and the ſureſt courſe. A certaine Papiſt writeth to this effect, that we Proteſtants in our iuſtification, cleaue only to the body of the tree, and that the Papiſts cleaue both to the body and the braunches. And I ſay againe, it is the ſafeſt with both the hands to cleaue to the body of the tree: and he that with one hand laies holde vpon the body of the tree, and with the other ſtaies himſelfe vpon the braunches, is in great daunger of falling.

The ſecond concluſion of Paul is, that to ſet vp any thing out of Chriſt, as a meritorious cauſe of ſaluation, and to place our iuſtification in it, either in whole, or in part, is indeed the ſeruice of idols. And the reaſon is plaine. For this is to ſet vp ſomething in the place and roome of Chriſt: and men put a confidence in that which they make a cauſe of their owne ſaluation.

The doctrine then of Iuſtification by workes, is a doctrine that maintaines idolatry; for if they iuſtifie, we may put our truſt in them: and if we put our confidence in them, we make idols of them. That workes may merit at Gods hand, they muſt not only be ſanctified, but alſo deified.

The diſtinction vſed by the Papiſts, of Latria, and Dulia, that is, of worſhip, and ſeruice, falles to the ground. They ſay they giue worſhip to God, and ſeruice to Angels & Saints. It is a toy. For here Paul condemnes the very ſeruice to heathen gods: and the ſeruice of the rudiments of the law, is the Apoſtacie of the Galatians. And to giue ſeruice or worſhip to any thing, are all one.

The third concluſion of Paul is, that they which haue giuen their names to God, and Chriſt, muſt not returne to any thing, that they haue forſaken, or ought to forſake. He that puts his hand to the plough, muſt not looke backe: he that goes to the land of Canaan, muſt not looke backe to Egypt. We in England haue bene long deliuered from the ſuperſtition of Poperie, and we muſt not ſo much as dreame of any returne. It is a common fault among vs, that in outward profeſſion we cleaue to Chriſt, and yet in affection and practiſe we cleaue to the world, and walke after the luſts of our owne hearts. This is in ſhew to goe forward, but indeede to turne backe againe. But our duty is, in thought, conſcience, will, affection, word, and deed, to goe on forward, and no way to goe backe.

Verſ. 10. In the former verſe, Paul ſets downe the Apoſtaſie of the Galatians in generall tearmes, ſaying, How turne ye againe to the Elements of the world? In the 10. verſe, he ſhewes, what theſe Elements be; To obſerue daies, and moneths, and times, and yeares. By daies, are meant Iewiſh Sabbaths: by moneths, the feaſts obſerued euery moneth in the day of the new Moone. By times, ſome vnderſtand the feaſt of the Paſſeouer, the feaſt of Pentecoſt, and the feaſt of Tabernacles. But the word (καιρὸς) ſignifies ſeaſons, or fit times, for the doing of this or that buſineſſe. So is it tranſlated, Act. 1.7. It is not for you to know the times and ſeaſons. It was the manner of the Gentiles to make difference of times in reſpect of good or bad ſucceſſe, and that according to the ſignes of heauen. And it is very likely, that the Galatians obſerued daies not onely in the Iewiſh, but alſo in the heatheniſh manner. By yeares, are meant euery ſeuenth yeare, and the Iubilie yeares, which the Galatians obſerued after the faſhion of the Iewes.

Againe, there is a foure-fold kind of obſeruation of daies; one naturall, the other ciuill, the third Eccleſiaſticall, the fourth ſuperſtitious. Naturall is, when daies are obſerued according to the courſe of the Sunne and Moone, Gen. 1. 14. thus day followes night, and night followes day, and euery yeare hath foure ſeaſons, Spring, Sommer, Autumne, Winter. And the obſeruation of theſe times is according to the law of nature. Ciuill obſeruation is, when ſet times are obſerued for husbandrie, in planting, ſetting, reaping, ſowing: for houſhold affaires, and for the affaires of the common-wealth, in keeping of faires, and markets, &c. And thus to obſerue daies, is not vnlawfull. Eccleſiaſticall obſeruation of times is, when ſet daies are obſerued for orders ſake, that men may come together to worſhippe God: theſe daies, are either daies of thankſgiuing, or daies of humiliation. Of daies of thankſgiuing, take the example of the Iewes, Heſt. 9. 26. who obſerued yearely the feaſt of Purim, for a memorie of their deliuerance. In like manner they appointed and obſerued the feaſt of Dedication: and it ſeemes that Chriſt was preſent at Ieruſalem, as an obſeruer of this feaſt, Ioh. 10. 22. And thus for orders ſake, to obſerue certaine daies of ſolemnitie, is not forbidden. Superſtitious obſeruation of daies, is twofold, Iewiſh, or heatheniſh. Iewiſh, when ſet daies are obſerued with an opinion, that we are bound in conſcience to obſerue them, and when the worſhip of God is placed in the obſeruing of this or that time. Heatheniſh, when daies are obſerued in reſpect of good or bad ſucceſſe. Now then, to come to the point, the intent of Paul is onely to condemne the Iewiſh manner of obſeruing of daies, in theſe words, Ye obſerue daies, moneths, yeares: and the heatheniſh manner, in theſe words, ye obſerue ſeaſons.

Againſt this interpretation, the place of Paul may be obiected, Rom. 14. 6. He that obſerues the day, obſerues it to the Lord. Anſ. Indeed Paul in theſe words excuſeth the Romanes that obſerued daies, and ſaith, that their intention was to obſerue them to the honour of God: and this he ſaith, becauſe as yet they were not fully inſtructed touching Chriſtian libertie: but withall, let it be remembred, that in mild ſort he notes this to be a fault in them, when he ſaith, that they were weake in faith. Now the caſe was otherwiſe with the Galatians: becauſe they obſerued daies after they had beene informed touching their libertie in Chriſt: and withall they placed their ſaluation, in part, in the obſeruation of daies: and thus they mixed the Goſpell with the law. And therefore they were iuſtly to be blamed.

Againe, it may be obiected, that now in the time of the new Teſtament, we in religious manner obſerue the Lords day. Anſ. Some men both godly and learned are of opinion, that the Lords day was appointed by the Apoſtles for orders ſake: and that it is in the libertie of the Church to appoint the Sabbath vpon any other day in the weeke, becauſe they ſay, all daies without exception are equall: and they adde further, that when the publike worſhip of God is ended, men may then returne to their labours, or giue themſelues to recreation, on the Lords day. But this doctrine ſeemes not to ſtand with the fourth commandement.

It ſeemes to be a truth more probable, that euery ſeauenth day in the weeke, muſt be ſet apart in holy reſt vnto God: for this is the ſubſtance of the fourth commaundement. And it is alſo very probable, that the Sabbath of the new Teſtament is limited and determined by our Sauiour Chriſt to the Lords day. For Paul and the reſt of the Apoſtles obſerued the firſt day of the weeke for a Sabbath day, Act. 20.7. and he ſaith, Whatſoeuer ye haue heard, and what ye haue ſeene in me, that do, Phil. 4.9. Againe, it was the decree or conſtitution of Paul, that the collection for the poore ſhould be the firſt day of the weeke at Corinth: now this collection in the Primitiue Church, followed preaching, prayer, Sacraments, and it was the concluſion of all other exerciſes in the aſſembly, 1. Cor. 16.2. And this firſt day of the weeke is called the Lords day, Apoc. 1.10. and it is ſo called, becauſe it was dedicated and conſecrated to the honour of Chriſt our Lord. And who is the author of this dedication but Chriſt himſelfe the Lord of the Sabbath? It is alleadged, that the Sabbath, and the commaundement touching the Sabbath, is Ceremoniall: & vpon this ground, they take libertie, and keepe no Sabbath at all. But the truth is, that the commandement touching the Sabbath is not wholy Ceremoniall. It may be, the firſt words, Remember the Sabbath day to ſanctifie it, and the words, In it thou ſhalt doe no manner of worke, &c. are ſpoken of the Iewes Sabbath: but the words, Sixe daies ſhalt thou labour, and the ſeuenth day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God, are morall, and containe a perpetuall truth. Therefore the words of Paul muſt be conceiued with an exception of the Sabbath day, which is the ſeuenth day in euery weeke, which day Chriſt hath limited by his Apoſtles, to the Lords day.

The vſe. This text of Paul diſcouers vnto vs a great part of the ſuperſtition of the Popiſh Church, in the obſeruation of holy daies. Firſt, beſide the Lords day, they appoint many other Sabbaths: whereas it is the priuiledge of God to appoint an ordinarie day of reſt, and to ſanctifie it to his owne worſhip. Secondly, they bind mens conſciences to the obſeruation of their holy daies: which Paul here forbids, and Col. 2.16. Thirdly, they place the worſhip of God in the obſeruation of their holy daies: but God is worſhipped in vaine by mens precepts, Matth. 15. Fourthly, they place a great holineſſe in their feſtiuall daies, A more then in other daies. Fiftly, they dedicate many of their holy daies to the honour of Saints and Angels: whereas the dedication of ordinarie and ſet daies, is a part of diuine or religious worſhip. Laſtly, their holy daies for number are more then the feſtiuall daies of the Iewes: & thus they bring people into their old bondage, nay to a greater bondage then euer the Iewes indured, in reſpect of daies and times. It may be ſaid, that the Church of the Proteſtants obſerues holy daies. Anſw. Some Churches do not: becauſe the Church in the Apoſtles daies, had no holy day, beſide the Lords day: and the 4 commaundement inioynes the labour of ſixe daies. Indeed the B Church of England obſerueth holy daies, but the Popiſh ſuperſtition is cut off. For we are not bound in conſcience to the obſeruation of theſe daies: neither do we place holines or the worſhip of God in them: but we keepe them onely for orders ſake, that men may come to the Church to heare Gods word. And though we retaine the names of Saints daies, yet we giue no worſhip to Saints, but to God alone. And ſuch daies as contained nothing in them but ſuperſtition, as the conception, and aſſumption of the virgin Mary, we haue cut off. Thus doth the Church with vs obſerue holy daies, and no otherwiſe. Indeed the ignorant multitude among vs faile greatly in the obſeruing of daies. For they greatly C ſolemniſe the time of the birth of Chriſt, and then they keepe few or no markets: but the Lords day is not accordingly reſpected: and men will not be diſſwaded from following of faires on that day.

Againe, to obſerue daies of good and bad ſucceſſe, according to the conſtellations of the heauens, is an heatheniſh faſhion to be auoided. For it is here condemned in the Galatians. Here therefore, we muſt be put in mind, not to obſerue the planetary houres: for men ſuppoſe that the houres of the day are ruled by the planets, and hereupon, that ſome houres are good, and luckie (as they ſay) and ſome vnluckie: that men are taken with planets, and borne vnder vnluckie D planets. But theſe are heatheniſh conceits. Neither muſt we reſpect our Horoſcopa, or the time of our birth, and the conſtellation of the heauens then, as though we could hereby know, what ſhould befall vs to the end of our daies. And we muſt not put difference of daies, as though ſome were luckie vnto vs, and ſome vnluckie, according to the courſe of the ſtarres. The like I ſay of the Criticall daies, that is, the 7. and the 14. day after that a man begins to be ſicke. For they are grounded vpon the aſpects of the moone, which are not to be regarded. And the Climactericall yeares are not to be obſerued as dangerous and diſmall. The obſeruation of the ſignes, is of the ſame nature. For the 12. ſignes are nothing els, but 12. parts of the firſt moueable, which is but a ſuppoſed heauen. Therefore

A there is no danger in the thing, but in our conceit. We are to feare God, & not to feare the ſtarres: neither are we to make differences of daies in reſpect of them, as though the affaires we take in hand, ſhould proſper the better or the worſe, in reſpect of their different operation. Gods commaundement is, Feare not the ſignes of heauen, Ierem. 10.2. And good reaſon. For no man can by learning know the operation of the ſtarres: becauſe their lights and operations are all mixed together in all places vpon earth: and therefore no obſeruation can be made of this or that ſtarre, more then of this or that hearbe, when all hearbes are mixed and compounded together. Againe, the operation of the ſtarres is by their light, and light hath no operation but in heat or cold, moiſture or drineſſe. In this reſpect, (though we may well obſerue the full and change of the moone) it is fooliſhneſſe to aſcribe the regiment of our affaires to the ſtarres, they being matters contingent, which depend on the will & pleaſure of man. Laſtly, it is a great ouerſight to hold ſundrie of the ſtars to be malignant and infortunate, in reſpect of vs: wheras they are the creatures of God, and their light ſerues for the good of man. In a word, we are not to make difference of daies, neither in reſpect of holineſſe, nor in reſpect of good or bad ſucceſſe.

Verſ. 11. I am afraid, &c. In theſe words the Apoſtle ſets forth the greatneſſe of the apoſtaſie of the Galatians, by the effect thereof, which was to cauſe him to feare, leſt he had beſtowed labour in vaine among them.

Firſt, the occaſion of the words muſt be conſidered, and that is expreſſed in the former words, Ye obſerue daies and moneths. And hereupon he ſaith, I am in feare of you. And thus Paul teacheth, that workes ſet vp as cauſes of ſaluation with Chriſt, make void the Miniſterie and grace of God. It may be ſaid, that is meant of ceremoniall workes, and ſo it is true. I anſwer, it is indeed ſpoken of ceremoniall workes, but it muſt be inlarged to all workes without exception. For Paul ſaith, c. 5. v. 3. If ye be circumciſed, ye are bound to fulfill the whole law. Hence then it followes, that the doctrine of iuſtification by workes, is an errour in the foundation, and beeing diſtinctly, and obſtinately maintained, there is no hope of ſaluation.

Againe, here we ſee the fidelitie of the Apoſtle Paul, and it ſtands in two things: the firſt is, his painfull and weariſome labour, to gain the Galatians to God. The ſecond is, his care that the foreſaid labour be not in vaine. And in this example of his, we learne three things. The firſt, that they which are or deſire to be diſpenſers of the word, muſt doe it not for the belly, or for lucres ſake, or for the praiſe of men, but ſimply for this end, that they may gaine ſoules to God. The Scribe that would haue followed Chriſt for gaine, was repelled with this anſwer, that Chriſt had not ſo much as a place where to lay his head, Mat. 8.20. and to preach for by-reſpects, is to make a merchandiſe of the word of God, 2. Cor. 2.17. The ſecond is, that Miniſters after the example of Paul, muſt be labourers indeed, 1. Cor. 3.9. and workemen, 2. Tim. 2.15. And they muſt ſhew themſelues to be ſo, by their care and induſtrie in winning ſoules to God. And it is not ſufficient now and then to make a diſcourſe vpon a text. Thirdly, Miniſters of the word muſt be watchmen. Ezec. 3.14. and Heb. 13.17. their office is not onely to gaine and call men to God, but alſo to preſerue and keepe them in Chriſt, which are already called.

Thirdly, here we ſee the condition of the B Church of Galatia, and of all other viſible Churches vpon earth, that they are ſubiect to Apoſtaſie. It may be ſaid, how can this be, conſidering true beleeuers cannot fall away? Anſ. In the viſible church on earth, there are foure kinds of beleeuers. The firſt are they, which heare the word without zeale, and they are like the ſtonie ground. The ſecond are they, which heare, know, and approoue the word. The third are they, which heare, know, and approoue the word, and haue a taſt of the power thereof, and accordingly yeeld ſome outward obedience. The fourth are they, which heare, know, approoue, and keepe the word, in that they beleeue it, and are turned into the obedience of it. The three firſt may C fall quite away, the fourth cannot. And by this meanes it comes to paſſe, that viſible churches vpon earth may fall away: becauſe of them that profeſſe the faith, three to one may vtterly fall away.

The vſe. This muſt teach vs that are members of the viſible Church, to feare and to ſuſpect our ſelues: and not to content our ſelues, becauſe we haue ſome good things in vs: but wee muſt labour to be ſealed vp to the day of our redemption, and to lay vp a good foundation againſt the time to come, 1. Tim. 6.18. by ſeeking to haue in vs ſuch good things, as are proper to the Elect, as vnfained faith in Chriſt, and conuerſion to God from all our ſinnes.

D It may be demaunded, how Pauls labour ſhould be in vaine? Anſ. It was in vaine in reſpect of his owne deſire and affection to ſaue all the Galatians: ſecondly, it was in vaine, in reſpect of the whole bodie of that Church, whereof many were hypocrites. It was not in vaine in reſpect of the elect, nor in reſpect of the counſell of God, Iſa. 55.11.

Againe, it may be demaunded, what muſt be done when the labours of our callings are in vaine? Anſw. We muſt follow the calling and commaundement of God, whether wee haue good ſucceſſe or no, and whatſoeuer come of it. Paul feares leſt his labour is in vaine, and yet he ſtill labours. When Peter had laboured all night and caught nothing, he ſaith, at the commandement of Chriſt, In thy word will I caſt out my net, Luk. 5. 5. And thus to doe, (whatſoeuer followes) is true wiſedome, and the feare of God. For it muſt ſuffice vs, that the worke we take in hand is pleaſing vnto God. And though it be in vaine, in reſpect of men, it is not ſo before God, Iſa. 49. 4 and 2. Cor. 2. 18. This muſt euery man remember in his place and calling, for the eſtabliſhing of his minde againſt all euents.

Verſ. 12. Be you as I, for I am euen as you: I beſeech you brethren ye haue not hurt me at all.

The words in this verſe, to the ſixteenth verſe, are an anſwer to an obiection. The obiection is this, we ſee now by theſe ſharpe reproofes, that Paul hath changed his mind toward vs, and that he hath turned his loue into hatred. The anſwer is, be as I, I am as you. the ſpeech is very effectuall and ſignificant, and it is like the common prouerb, Amicus, alter ego, alter idem. that is, a mans friend is all one with himſelfe. The ſenſe of the words is, Be as I, looke that your minds be not eſtranged from me, but tender me euen as your owne ſelues: for I Paul am the ſame that euer I was, I reſpect and tender you euen as mine owne ſelfe. And leſt the Galatians ſhould ſay, ſee ye not how Paul commands imperiouſly, be ye as I? therfore he addes, I beſeech you brethren, I command you not. In the next words he addes a reaſon of his anſwer, thus, Hatred preſuppoſeth a hurt or wrong to be done: ye haue done me no hurt or wrong: therefore ye may not thinke that I hate you.

When Paul ſaith, be as I: I am as you: we learne, that there muſt be a ſpeciall and mutuall loue betweene the teachers and the people. Paul ſaith, that he did inlarge his heart for the Corinthians, and he requires the like of them, 2. Cor. 6. 11. 13. Teachers muſt ſhew their loue, by tendering the ſaluation of the people by all meanes, euen as their owne ſoules. Paul could haue found in his heart to haue beene accurſed for his countrimen the Iewes, Rom. 9. 1. He deſired that he might be offered vp as a drinke offering vpon the ſacrifice of the faith of the Philippians, Phil. 2. 17. When the Iſraelites had ſinned, Moſes ſtands in the breach, as it were in the face of the Canon, betweene the wrath of God and them, by his prayer to ſtay the iudgement of God, Pſal. 106. 23. Againe, the people muſt ſhew their loue to their teachers, firſt, by praying for them, as for themſelues, Rom. 15. 30. ſecondly, by hauing in ſingular price the worke of the Miniſtery, 1. Theſſ. 5. 13. and that is, by wholſome doctrine to repaire the image of God, and to erect the kingdome of God in the hearts of men. When this thing is loued and deſired, then are Miniſters loued. This mutuall loue is of great vſe, it encourageth people to obey, and the Preachers of the word to labour in teaching.

When Paul ſaith, I beſeech you brethren, he ſhewes what moderation is to be vſed in all reproofes. He tels the Galatians his minde plainely to the full: and withal he indeauours to ſhew his owne loue to them, and to keepe theirs.

It may be asked, how Paul can ſay, Ye haue done me no hurt at all. For when a beleeuer in Corinth committed inceſt, Paul tooke it for a wrong to himſelfe? 2. Cor. 2. 10. And no doubt to call the doctrine of the Apoſtle into queſtion, was a great wrong vnto him? I anſwer, the wrong was no wrong in his eſtimation and affection, who was content to put vp and to forgiue the wrong. Here we ſee the meekeneſſe of Paul, in that he quietly beares the croſſes and wrongs laid vpon him. The like was in Moſes, who 40. yeares together indured the bad manners of the Iſraelites, Act. 13. 18. but the perfect example of this vertue is in Chriſt, who ſaued them that crucified him. We likewiſe are to exerciſe our ſelues in this vertue. And that we may indeed ſo doe, we muſt firſt of all haue a ſenſe of our ſpirituall pouertie, and a faith in the mercie, preſence, and protection of God.

Againe, marke the mind of the Apoſtle, that he may winne ſoules to God, he is content to ſuffer any wrong. The Prieſts and Ieſuits among vs in England, are content to venter life and limme that they may winne Proſelytes to the Church of Rome: much more then muſt the true Miniſters of the Goſpel be content with any condition, ſo they may gaine men to God. In this caſe, hurts & abuſes, muſt be no hurts, nor abuſes.

13. And ye know how through the infirmitie of the fleſh, I preached the Goſpell vnto you at the firſt.

14. And the triall of me which was in my fleſh ye deſpiſed not, neither abhorred: but receiued me as an Angel of God, yea as Chriſt Ieſus.

15. What then was your felicitie? for I beare you record, that if it had beene poſſible, you would haue plucked out your eyes to haue giuen them to me.

16. Am I therefore become your enemie, becauſe I tell you the truth?

The anſwer to the Obiection in the former verſe was this; Be as I: I am as you. And the reaſon was this: hatred preſuppoſeth an offence: ye haue done me no offence or hurt: therefore ye may not thinke that I hate you. The minor is in the 12. v. the concluſion in the 16. verſ.

Againe, the minor [ye haue done me no hurt] is confirmed in the 13, 14, 15. verſes. The ſum of the Argument is this: Though my outward condition was ſubiect to contempt; yet did the Galatians ſhew loue and reuerence to me: therefore ye did me no hurt. Againe, Paul ſets forth both the parts of his argument. And firſt of all he deſcribes his owne condition, by three things: that he preached in weakeneſſe of the fleſh: that he preached the firſt: that he preached hauing the triall of himſelfe in his owne fleſh. Secondly, the loue and reuerence of the Galatians is ſet out by three ſignes, or effects: they deſpiſed him not: they receiued him as an Angel, or as Chriſt himſelfe: they would haue plucked out their eies to haue done him good.

The firſt thing in Pauls condition, is, that he publiſhed the Goſpel in the infirmitie of his fleſh, that is, in a meane and baſe eſtate, without the ſhew of humane wiſedome, and authoritie, & ſubiect to many miſeries. In this ſenſe Paul oppoſeth infirmitie to the excellencie of humane wiſedome, 1. Corint. 2. 1, 3. and vnder it hee comprehends all the calamities and troubles that befell him, 2. Cor. 12. 10.

This was the condition of the reſt of the Apoſtles. For they were but fiſhers, & preached the word in their fiſher-like ſimplicitie. Nay, this was the condition of Chriſt himſelfe. For hee hid the maieſty of his godhead vnder the veile of his fleſh: and his outward man was ſubiect to reproach, and contempt, Eſay 53. 3. And this is the order of God. The word muſt bee diſpenſed in the infirmitie of mans fleſh for ſundrie cauſes. Firſt, that wee might not exalt our teachers aboue their condition, who are no more but inſtruments of grace. When the men of Derbe and Liſtra would haue offered ſacrifice to Paul, and Barnabas, Paul forbids them, ſaying, that they were men ſubiect to the ſame paſſions with themſelues, Acts 14. 15. The ſecond cauſe, that we might aſcribe the whole worke of our conuerſion, not to men, but to God alone, 2. Cor. 4. 7. The third is, that God might by this meanes confound the wiſedome of the world, and cauſe men that would bee wiſe, to become fooles, that they might be wiſe, 1. Cor. 3. 18. The laſt is, that we might be aſſured, that the doctrine of the Apoſtles is of GOD: becauſe it preuailes in the world without the ſtrength and policie of man.

And as the word is preached in weakenes, ſo it is beleeued of men; and the grace of God is conferred to vs, and continued in vs, in the weakeneſſe of the fleſh. Gods loue is ſhed abroad in the hearts of men: but when? Euen then, when wee were in the middeſt of manifolde afflictions. Rom. 5. 2. 5. Paul beares about him the mortification of our Lord Ieſus, not for his damnation, but that the life of God might bee manifeſt in his mortall fleſh. 2. Corinth. 4. 10. And hee ſaith plainely, that the grace of god is made perfect through weakneſſe, 2. Corinth. 12. 9. By this wee are taught a high point in Religion, and that is, not onely to bee content with the miſeries and troubles of this life, but to reioyce therein: becauſe when we are weakeſt, we are ſtrongeſt: and when wee thinke our ſelues forſaken of God in the time of diſtreſſe, we are not forſaken indeed, but haue his ſpeciall fauour and protection, 2. Cor. 12. 10. Let this be thought vpon: for the workes of God in the cauſe of mans ſaluation, are in, and by their contraries. This is the manner of Gods dealing.

The ſecond thing is, that Paul preached the Goſpell to the Galatians at the firſt, as it were breaking the ice, where none had preached before. In this hee claimes his priuiledge, that hee was to be eſteemed as a maſter-builder, that laide the foundation of the Church of Galatia: and withall, hee giues a cloſe item to the falſe apoſtles, who did not plant Churches, but onely corrupt them after they were planted. Againe, Paul heere notes the condition of Gods church, or kingdome: in which firſt comes the husbandman and ſowes good ſeede, and then after comes the diuell with his tares, Matthew 13. 24. and all this is euident in the church of Galatia, firſt planted by Paul, and then ſeduced by falſe teachers.

The third thing is, that Paul preached, bearing about him the triall of God. This triall is a worke of God whereby he diſcouers vnto vs, and to the world, either the grace, or the corruption of our hearts. Thus God tried Abraham, Hebr. 11. 17. the Iſraelites, Deuteronomie 6. 1. and Ezechias, 2. Chron. 32. 31. and Paul in this place.

The vſe. We muſt not thinke it ſtrange, when we are afflicted any way. Nay, we muſt looke for trialles, and bee content when they come, 1. Pet. 4. 12. Iames 1. 2. Wee are either golde in deede, or golde in ſhew: if in deede, we muſt be caſt into the furnace, that we may be purged: if we be gold in appearance, wee muſt againe into the furnace, that we may be knowne what wee are. The beſt vine in the vineyard muſt be lopped and cut off with the pruning knife, that it may beare the more fruit, Iohn 15. 2.

Againe, we muſt take heede leſt there be any hidden corruptions reigning in our harts: and we muſt labour to be indeede that which we appeare to be. For wee muſt bee tried by God: and then that which now lies hid, ſhall be diſcouered to our ſhame.

Laſtly, wee muſt looke to it, that there be ſoundnes of grace in vs, that we may be able to beare the trials of God, & ſhew forth ſome meaſure of faith, patience, obedience.

The 1. ſigne of reuerence in the Galatians is, that they did not deſpiſe Paul in his baſe condition. This is a matter of commendation in them, & it is to be followed of vs. And he is a bleſſed man that is not offended at Chriſt. Math. 11. 6.

The ſecond ſigne of reuerence is, that they receiued Paul as an Angell of God, or as Chriſt Ieſus. Here firſt we muſt diſtinguiſh betweene Pauls perſon, and his doctrine or miniſterie. And he is ſaid to be receiued as an Angell, or as Chriſt; becauſe his doctrine was receiued euen as if an Angell, or Chriſt had deliuered it. Secondly, wee muſt put a difference betweene an Apoſtle, and all ordinarie paſtors & teachers. And to be receiued as an Angel, or as Chriſt, properly and ſimply concernes Paul, & the reſt of the Apoſtles. For to them it was ſaid, It is not you that ſpeake, but the ſpirit of the father in you, Mat. 10.20. Againe, he that heareth you, heareth mee, hee that deſpiſeth you, deſpiſeth me, Lu. 10.16. The apoſtles were called of God immediately, taught and inſpired immediatly, & immediately gouerned by the ſpirit, both in preaching & writing, ſo as they could not erre in the things which they deliuered to the church: and therefore they were to be heard euen as Chriſt himſelfe.

As for other ordinarie Teachers, they are in part, and in the ſecond place to be heard as Angels, and as Chriſt, ſo farre forth as they follow the doctrine of the Apoſtles. Thus are they alſo called the Angells of the Lord of hoſtes, Mal. 2.7. And Embaſſadours in the ſtead of Chriſt, 2. Cor. 5.21.

Here Paul notably expreſſeth the Authoritie and honour of an Apoſtle, which is to be heard euen as Chriſt himſelfe: becauſe in preaching, he is the mouth, and in writing, the hand of God. This authoritie is to bee maintained: and the conſideration of it is of great vſe. The Papiſts ſay, we know the ſcripture to be the word of God, by the teſtimonie of the church: but indeede the principall meanes whereby we are aſſured touching the truth of Scripture, is, that the books of ſcripture were penned by men, whoſe writings, and ſayings, we are to receiue, euen as from Chriſt himſelfe, becauſe they had either propheticall or apoſtolicall authority, and were immediatly taught and inſpired in writing: & all this may bee diſcerned, by the matter, forme, & circumſtāces of the foreſaid books.

De conſid. ad Eugen.

Secondly, they are to be blamed that call the Pope, the ſpouſe of the Church, and Chriſt by annoyntment (as Bernard did:) for thus is hee more then an Apoſtle.

Thirdly, here we ſee the goodnes of God, that doth not ſpeake to vs in his maieſtie, but appoints men in his ſtead, who are his embaſſadours to beſeech vs to bee reconciled vnto him.

Fourthly, there muſt bee fidelitie in teachers, becauſe they ſtand in teaching, in the ſtead of Chriſt: and therefore muſt only deliuer that which they know to be the will of Chriſt.

Fiftly, they muſt haue a ſpeciall care of holineſſe of life, becauſe they ſpeake in the name and roome of God, Reade Leuit. 10.2.

Sixtly, the people are to heare their Teachers with all reuerence, euen as they would heare the very Angells of God, or Chriſt himſelfe.

Seuenthly, the comfort of the Miniſterie, is as ſure and certaine, as if an Angell came downe from heauen, or Chriſt himſelfe to comfort vs, ſo be it we do indeede truly turne to God, and repent.

Verſ. 15. What was your felicitie?) that is, you eſteemed it to be your felicitie, that you receiued me and my doctrine. Yee would haue plucked out your eies, and haue giuen them to mee:) a prouerbiall ſpeech, ſignifying the ſpeciall loue of the Galatians to Paul, ſo as nothing which they had could be too deare for him. If it had bin poſſible:) this he ſaith, becauſe no man can pluck out his eie to do another man good: or thus, no man can poſſibly giue his eie and the ſight therof to another.

In theſe words Paul ſets downe the third ſigne of the loue & reuerence which the Galatians ſhewed to him: and that is, that they thought themſelues happy by reaſon of Pauls miniſterie, and would haue parted with their owne eies for his good.

Hence wee learne, that there is a felicitie in the time of this life, and that is, to receiue and imbrace the doctrine of the Goſpel. So ſaith Chriſt elſewhere, Luke 8.21. and 11.28. Math. 7.26. True happines ſtands in our reconciliation with God in Chriſt. And this reconciliation is offered and giuen vs on Gods part by his word and promiſe, and it is receiued of vs, when we turne to God, and by faith reſt on the ſaid promiſe. To be in Gods kingdome is happineſſe: and this is the kingdom of God, when wee reſigne our ſelues in ſubiection to his will and word. The preaching of the word, is the key of this kingdome, Math. 16.19. and when it is receiued into our harts by faith, heauen is ſet open vnto vs euen in this life, Iohn 1.51.

The Philoſophers therefore haue erred, that place our happineſſe in honours, riches, pleaſures, or in ciuill vertue.

Secondly, our common people are deceiued, who thinke becauſe they deale truly and iuſtly before men, that they are in as good a caſe, as they that heare all the ſermons in the world: as though true happineſſe ſtood in ciuill conuerſation.

Thirdly, this doctrine ſerues to beat down a point of naturall Atheiſme in the heart of man, which makes many thinke it a vaine thing to ſerue GOD, and to heare his word, Iob 21.15. Malac. 3.14. Dauid was troubled with this corruption, Pſalme 73.15. Many of them which profeſſe the name of Chriſt, will not be brought to keep the Sabbath day: and in their dealings they vſe fraud, and lying, as other men do: and all is becauſe they thinke they cannot liue by their religion.

Fourthly, the only way to eſtabliſh a kingdome or common wealth, is to place the goſpel there: for this makes an happie people. And this is the maine cauſe of our happines and ſucceſſe in this Church and land. And the obedience of the Goſpel is it that makes euery man in his trade, office, and calling whatſoeuer it be, to proſper. Reade Pſal. 1.3.

5. On the contrary, they are wretched & miſerable that liue without the Goſpel, Prou. 29.18. 2. Cor. 4.3. 2. Tim. 3.7.

6. To receiue the doctrine of the apoſtles, is an vnfallible marke of the church of God. For this is it that makes a people bleſſed and happy.

7. We may not deſpiſe the preaching of the word, 1.*Theſſ.*5.20. If we doe, we deſpiſe our owne happineſſe. If it be ſaid, Preachers ſometime are deceiued: Anſ. Marke the addition of Paul, Prooue all things, hold that which is good, 1.*Theſſ.*5.21.

Touching the ſpeciall loue of the Galatians to Paul, Firſt it may be demaunded, what was the cauſe of it? Anſ. The very Miniſterie of the Apoſtle, whoſe office it was to make Diſciples, Matth. 28.19. and ſo to plant the church of the new Teſtament. And for this cauſe, hee had a priuiledge to preach the truth, ſo as he could not erre in things which he deliuered to the church. 2. He preached with authoritie, as hauing power to correct rebellious offenders, 2.*Cor.*10.6. 1.*Cor.*4.20. 3. He preached with vnſpeakeable diligence. Reade *Act.*20.31. 4. He had a prerogatiue, (as the reſt of the apoſtls had) after he had made Diſciples, by impoſition of hands to giue vnto them the extraordinarie gifts of the Holy Ghoſt. Act. 8.17. And theſe are the meanes whereby this ſpeciall loue was procured.

Secondly, it may be demaunded, whether the Galatians did not more then keepe the law, when they would haue plucked but their owne eies, and haue giuen them to Paul? for thus they loue him more then their owne ſelues. Anſ. The commaundement [Thou ſhalt loue thy neighbour as thy ſelfe] doeth not preſcribe that wee muſt in the firſt place loue our ſelues, and then in the ſecond loue our neighbor: but it ſets downe the right maner of louing our neighbor, & that is, to loue him as hartily, and vnfainedly, as our owne ſelues.

The meaſure of loue is expreſſed when Chriſt ſaith, we muſt loue one another, as Chriſt loued vs, Iohn 13.34.

There is a certaine caſe in which wee muſt conſider our neighbour, not only as a neighbor, but alſo as a ſpeciall inſtrument of God: and thus are we in ſome reſpects to loue, and to preferre him before our ſelues. Thus a ſubiect is more to loue the life of his Prince then his owne life. Thus Paul was content to be accurſed for the Iſraelites, *Rom.*9.1. And the Galatians would haue giuen their eyes to Paul, that was ſo worthy an inſtrument of the grace of God.

In their example we are taught to be willing to forſake the deareſt things in the world for the goſpel of Chriſt, euen our eies, hands, feete, yea and our life.

Verſe 16. Becauſe I tell you the truth] We muſt after Pauls example ſpeake the truth to all men, *Eph.*4.25. Am I therefore your enemie] the concluſion of the Apoſtles argument. Heere wee ſee a corruption of nature, which makes vs that wee can not abide to heare the truth in things that are againſt vs. We hate them that ſpeake the truth; ſelfe loue makes vs conceiue the beſt things of our ſelues. Here then learne,

1. To ſearch thy heart and life, that thou maieſt know the very worſt by thy ſelfe: If thou wilt not know it now, thou ſhalt know it to thy ſhame in the day of iudgement.

2. Be vile and baſe in thine owne opinion, Iob 39.37,38.

17. They are ielous ouer you amiſſe: yea they would exclude you, that you ſhould altogether loue them.

18. But it is good to loue earneſtly alwaies in a good cauſe; and not onely when I am preſent with you.

The word Zeale, hath many ſignifications; heere it is fitly tranſlated Iealouſie: They are zealous) hereby much is ſignified; that there is a ſpirituall marriage betweene Chriſt and his Church: that the Church is the Bride, Chriſt the Bridegroome, or Husband; the Goſpel an inſtrument drawne touching the marriage: the ſacraments as ſeales, the graces of the ſpirit as loue-tokens, the Miniſters of Chriſt, as friends of the Bridegroome, and ſuters for him. In this reſpect they put on the affection of Chriſt, and are zealous for him. This Iealouſie is twofold, pretended zealouſie, and true iealouſie. Pretended iealouſie is, when men falſely pretend the loue of the Church for Chriſts ſake. Thus Paul ſaith, They are iealous, that is, they pretend a loue vnto you for Chriſts ſake, but indeed they do it amiſſe. And the reaſon followes, They would exclude you, namely, from louing of me. Others reade the words thus; they would exclude ἡμᾶς, vs: the difference in the originall is onely in one letter, and the ſenſe is the ſame, that the falſe apoſtles would exclude Paul from the loue of the Galatians, that they only might be honoured and loued.

It is good) Theſe words may be vnderſtood either of the Galatians, or of Paul. I rather chuſe to apply them to Paul, that for iealouſie he may make an oppoſition between himſelfe, and the falſe teachers. The ſenſe is this: that Iealoſie is a good thing, if it be in a good cauſe, that is, if it be indeed for Chriſts ſake, and be alwayes the ſame. And Paul addeth further, that this kinde of iealouſie is in himſelfe: becauſe hee is iealous ouer the Galatians, not onely when he is preſent with them, but alſo when hee is abſent: and this hee further confirmes in the two next verſes.

The ſcope. In theſe words Paul meetes with a conceit of the Galatians: for they might happily ſay, that their new Teachers loued them exceedingly, and were zealous for their ſaluation. Paul therefore anſwers by a compariſon, thus: they are ielous ouer you, but it is amiſſe: my iealouſie for you is good. The firſt part of the compariſon is in the 17. verſe, the ſecond in the 18.

The vſe. When Paul ſaith, that the falſe Apoſtles were iealous ouer the Galatians amiſſe, hee ſets out the faſhion of men in the world, which is to do things which are good in their kinde, but to doe them for wrong ends. It is an excellent office to preach the word, but ſome do it of enuie and contention, Phil. 1. 15. others made merchandiſe of the word. It is an excellent thing to imbrace the Goſpel: and yet many men doe it amiſſe, for feare, or for honour, or for profite, or for other ſiniſter reſpect: and not for the Goſpels ſake. This temporal life is an excellent thing, yet few there are that know the end of this life. For men commonly ſpend not their time to ſeek the kingdome of heauen, and to ſerue GOD in ſeruing of men, but with all their might, they ayme at honours, profites, pleaſures: and thus they liue amiſſe, not for the honour of God, but for themſelues. This muſt teach vs, not onely to doe good, but to do it well, and to propound good ends to our ſelues: and to ſeeke to be vpright in the Statutes of God, Pſalme 119. 80. To this end, three things muſt be done. Firſt, we muſt ſet before vs the will and commaundement of God, and this muſt moue vs to doe the good we do. Secondly, the outward action muſt be conformable to the inward motions of the inward man: and they muſt both goe together. Thirdly, we muſt directly intend to obey God in the things we do, and to approue our hearts and doings to him.

In that the falſe apoſtles are ſaid to be iealous, or zealous, we ſee how Nature can counterfeit the grace of God: and that which the childe of God doth by grace, that the naturall man can doe by nature. Thus Pharaoh fained repentance, Exodus 9. 27. and Ahab, that ſold himſelfe to worke wickedneſſe, 1. Kings 21. 27. and Iudas in the midſt of his deſpaire is ſaid to repent, Matt. 27. 1. Daily experience ſhewes the like in ſuch perſons, who in their extremitie, with teares vſe to bewaile their liues paſt, and with many vowes, and proteſtations, promiſe amendment: and yet afterward when they are on foote againe, they returne to their old bias. In a word, there is nothing that the godly man doth by the ſpirite of God ſpiritually, but an hypocrite may doe the like carnally. Nature can play the part of the Ape in imitating good things. Therefore it ſtands vs in hand to pray, & examine our hearts, leſt wee be deceiued in our ſelues. For there may lie a depth of deceit and falſhood lurking in the heart. And that wee be not deceiued, two things muſt be obſerued. One is, that we muſt cheriſh in our hearts an vniuerſall hatred of all and euery ſinne; firſt in our ſelues, & then in others. The ſecond is, that we muſt be changed and renewed in our mindes, conſciences, and affections.

Thirdly, heere we ſee the propertie of enuie, and ambition, in theſe falſe teachers. Paul muſt be excluded from the loue of the Galatians, that they alone may be loued. Thus Ioſua would haue excluded Eldad and Medad from prophecying, and he would haue Moſes to be the onely Prophet, but Moſes ſaith, I would to God all the people could propheſie, Num. 11. 29. Iohns diſciples would haue excluded Chriſt from baptiſing: but Iohn ſaith, He muſt increaſe, and I muſt decreaſe. Iohn 3. 30. The diſciples of Chriſt would haue excluded one that caſt out diuels in the name of Chriſt, but did not follow him, and Chriſt forbad them, Luke 9. 49.

Laſtly, we heere ſee the propertie of deceiuers is to make a diuiſion between the Paſtor and the people.

Verſe 18. Beſide the former pretended ielouſie, there is a good iealouſie, which the Apoſtle takes to himſelfe, and elſewhere hee calles it the iealouſie of God, 2. Cor. 11. 2.

This iealouſie preſuppoſeth the office of the Apoſtles and all Miniſters, which ſtands in three things. The firſt, is, to become ſuiters to the Church, or to the ſoules of men, in the name of Chriſt, and to make the offer or motion in his name, of a ſpirituall marriage: and this is done in the miniſterie, and diſpenſation of the Goſpell. The ſecond is, to make the Contract betweene mens ſoules and Chriſt. Now to the making of a Contract, the conſent of both the parties (at the leaſt) is required: Chriſt giues his conſent in the word, Oſe. 2. 20. and we giue our conſent to him, and chooſe him for our head, when we turne to God, and beleeue in Chriſt. And the miniſterie of the word ſerues to ſignifie the will of Chriſt vnto vs, and to ſtirre vp our hearts to an holy conſent. The third is, after the contract, to preſerue them in true faith, and good life, that they may be fit to be preſented to Chriſt in the day of iudgement, and ſo be married to him eternally: for then, and not before, is the marriage of the Lambe. Theſe duties are all noted by Paul, when he ſaith, That he prepared the Corinthians that hee might preſent them as a pure Virgin vnto Chriſt, 2. Cor. 11. 2. And becauſe this charge and office is laid vpon the Apoſtles and Miniſters: therefore they are ſaid to be iealous.

This Iealouſie ſtands in three things. The firſt is, to loue the Church, in deed and truth, for Chriſts ſake. The ſecond is, to feare leſt by reaſon of weakneſſe, and by meanes of the temptations of the diuell, the Church and they that beleeue, ſhould fal away frō Chriſt. The third is, after the fall of the Church, to bee angrie with holy anger and indignation, for Chriſts ſake. Thus Moſes was iealous, when the Iſraelites worſhipped the golden Calfe and Elias with like zeale ſlue the prieſts of Baal. Thus is Paul ſaid to be iealous in this place, and Act. 14. 14.

If the Apoſtle be thus iealous, how much more then is Chriſt himſelfe iealous, who hath eſpouſed himſelfe to his Church? This plainly ſhewes, that he cannot brooke, either partner, or deputie. And therefore his ſacrifice on the croſſe muſt ſtand without the ſacrifice of the Maſſe, his interceſſion without the interceſſion of Saints, his merites without the merite of workes, his ſatisfaction without any ſatisfaction of ours. Hee will haue the heart alone, and all the heart, or nothing: and he wil not giue any part of his honour to any other.

This Ielouſie in the Miniſters muſt teach all faithfull ſeruants of God, that they keepe themſelues as pure virgins for Chriſt, and ſet their hearts on nothing in the world, but on him. Therefore they muſt hunger after Chriſt: they muſt account all things dung for him: they muſt haue their conuerſation in heauen with him: and loue his comming vnto them by death, Pſal. 45.10. Contrariwiſe, they that ſet their hearts on anie other thing, beſide him, are ſaid to goe a whoring from him, and therefore they are accurſed, Pſalme 73.27. Thus many Proteſtants do in their practiſe, whatſoeuer they profeſſe. Thus doeth the Church of Rome both in word and deede. For beſide Chriſt ſhe hath many other louers; and ſhee goes a whoring after them when ſhee worſhips Angells, and Saints, the Images of God, and Chriſt, with religious worſhip.

Againe, by this wee are put in minde to yeelde an vniuerſall ſubiection to Chriſt: for this is the duety of the eſpouſed wife to her husband.

Laſtly, that good things may be wel done, good ends muſt be propounded: and we muſt bee conſtant in the good which wee doe. And thus Paul ſaith, It is a good thing to bee iealous.

19. My little children of whome I trauell in birth againe, till Chriſt be formed in you.

20. I would I were now with you, that I might change my voice: for I am in feare of you.

Paul hath ſaid before, that his ielouſie ouer the Galatians was good: becauſe it was in a good cauſe, and it was conſtant, not only in his preſence, but euen in his abſence: and this he declares here by two ſignes: his loue now in his abſence, in the 16. verſe, and his deſire in the 20. verſe.

The word, ὠδίνω, tranſlated, I trauell in birth, ſignifies not onely, the trauell of the woman at the birth of the child, but alſo the painful bearing thereof, before the birth. And the words haue this ſenſe, O ye Galatians, once heeretofore I bare and brought you foorth, when I firſt preached Chriſt vnto you: and becauſe now yee are reuolted from my doctrine, I am conſtrained once againe to beare you, and to trauell with you in my miniſterie, till by the operation of the holy Ghoſt, the right knowledge, & the true Image of Chriſt defaced by the falſe Apoſtles, be once againe reformed and reſtored.

In theſe wordes (my little children) Paul takes to him the condition of a mother, and hee ſignifies his moſt tender and motherly affection to the Galatians. It is the faſhion of mothers, when their children proſper and doe well, to reioyce; when they are ſicke, or die, to mourne exceedingly, and to be moo-ued with pitie and compaſſion. The Galatians deſerued no loue at Paules hand: for A their apoſtaſie was very foule: yet becauſe there were ſome good things remaining in them, and there was hope of recouerie, hee inlargeth his bowells towards them, and ſhewes his loue with compaſſion. If this bee the caſe with Paul, then great is the loue and compaſſion of God to his children. If the childe be ſicke and froward, the mother doth not caſt it forth of the doores, when ſhee tenders it, and carefully lookes vnto it: much more then will the Lord haue pity and com-paſſion. Here then a maine comfort is to be remembred: if we be of the number of them that beleeue in Chriſt, hating vice, and ha-
uing a care to pleaſe God, our weakeneſſes
B and falls of weakeneſſe, doe not aboliſh the mercy of God, but are occaſions to illuſtrate the ſame. The weakeneſſe of the child ſtirres vp compaſſion in the mother: and Dauid
ſaith, As a father hath compaſſion on his chil- dren, ſo hath the Lord compaſſion on them that feare him: and marke the reaſon, for hee
knowes our frame, and that we are but duſt, Pſa.
103.14.

When Paul ſaith, I trauell, hee ſignifies the meaſure of his miniſteriall paines, that they were as the trauel of a womā with child:
and this he ſhewes plainly in the particulars,
2. Cor. 11.23. Elias that was ſent in his time to reſtore Religion, was at length ſo wearied in this buſineſſe, that hee deſired the Lord to C take him out of the world, 1. Kings 19.4. The paines of the Prophet Eſay, made him crie,
My leaneneſſe, my leaneneſſe: and Ieremie cri-eth, My belly, my belly: ſignifying that his griefes and his paines in the Miniſterie, were as the paine of the Colicke. By this wee ſee, that they haue much to anſwere for before God, that are in this calling, and yet take little or no paines therein. And that they which take the moſt paines, come farre ſhort of their duety.

Againe, when he ſaith, I trauell, hee ſignifies the dignitie of the miniſterie, that it is an inſtrument appointed of God for the worke of regeneration: for Paul compares himſelfe to a woman in trauell; and the worke of his
D miniſtery, to the trauel it ſelfe, whereby children are borne to God. This ſerues very well to ſtoppe their mouthes, that condemne the vocall and externall miniſterie.

When hee ſaith, I trauell againe, hee teacheth, that if men fall after their firſt initiall repentance, there is ſtill a poſſibilitie of mercie, and a place for a ſecond repentance. We muſt forgiue till ſeuentie times ſeuen times, Mat. 18.22. Much more will God doe it. The parable of the prodigall ſonne ſhewes, that they which fall from God after their calling and firſt conuerſion, may againe by new repentance be recouered.

An obiection: Pauls ſecond trauel preſuppoſeth a ſecond regeneration in the Galatians: and if they are borne againe the ſecond time, then in their apoſtaſie they fell wholy from God. Anſ. When Paul ſaith, I trauell againe, hee doth not preſuppoſe any ſecond ſpirituall generation: for the child of God is but once begotten to the Lord, and Paul here calls the Galatians, little children, becauſe euen in the time of their fall, the ſeede of God ſtill remained in their hearts. And becauſe the Image of Chriſt was againe to bee reformed and reſtored in the Galatians, in this reſpect he ſaith, I trauell againe of you.

The end of Pauls miniſtery is expreſſed in the words, till Chriſt bee formed in you: that is, till (as it were) the counterfeit or Image of Chriſt bee ſtamped and imprinted in your hearts. This Image hath two parts. The firſt is, a right knowledge of Chriſt in reſpect of his natures and offices, as they are ſet forth in the word. This knowledge was defaced in the Galatians, when they ioyned workes with Chriſt: for then they made him to be an imperfect Sauiour. The ſecond part of this Image, is a conformity with Chriſt, Rom. 8. 29. It is twofold, conformitie in qualitie, and conformitie in practiſe.

Conformitie in quality is again twofold. The firſt is, a conformitie to the death of Chriſt, when the vertue thereof works in vs a death of ſin, and when wee ſuffer as Chriſt ſuffered, in ſilence, contentation, obedience, ſubiecting our ſelues to the will of God. The ſecond is a conformitie to the reſurrection or life of Chriſt, and that is, when we liue not only a naturall, but alſo a ſpirituall life, which is, to ſubmit our ſelues to be ruled by the word and ſpirite of Chriſt.

Conformitie in practiſe is, when we carry our ſelues as Prophets in the confeſſion of the name of Chriſt, in teaching, exhorting, and admoniſhing one another: as prieſts to offer our bodies and ſoules in ſacrifice to GOD: as ſpirituall Kings, bearing ſway ouer the luſts and corruptions of our owne hearts. And thus is Chriſt to be framed in the harts of men.

The vſe. Here we ſee the end of all preaching, is to make ſinfull men to become new creatures, like vnto Chriſt; this is the drift of the Miniſtery: and the doctrine that tends to this purpoſe, is ſound and wholſome. Again, here we ſee, that in the new Teſtament, there is but one rule and order of al men, and that is the rule of Chriſt, Take vp thy croſſe, and follow me: and for this cauſe the miniſterie ſerues to frame Chriſt in the hearts of all beleeuers. Therefore the ſeuerall rules and orders of Monkes and Friars in the church of Rome, are meere ſuperſtitions.

Furthermore, Paul here makes two degrees of Gods children, one is, when they are begotten of God, and Chriſt is formed in them. The ſecond, when they are begotten of God, yet ſo, as they are yet vnformed. Such were the Apoſtles when they confeſſed Chriſt to be the Sonne of the liuing GOD, Matth. 16. for then they knew not the article of Chriſts death, reſurrection, aſcenſion, at that time, nor the maner of his kingdome. Of this ſort was Rahab, when ſhe receiued the ſpies, Hebr. 11. for then ſhe was not informed in the religion of the Iewes, but only acknowledged the God of Iſrael to be the true God, and had a reſolution to ioyne her ſelfe to the people of God. Of this ſort were the Corinthians at the firſt. For they were carnall more then ſpirituall, euen babes in Chriſt, 1. Cor. 3. 3. This muſt teach vs, where we ſee any good thing in men, to cheriſh it. For though as yet they be not Chriſtians formed, yet they may be Chriſtians in forming.

When Paul ſaith, vntill Chriſt bee formed, he ſhewes that the conuerſion of a ſinner, is not wrought in one moment, but by litle and little, in proceſſe of time. In the generation of infants, firſt the braine, heart, and liuer are framed: then the bones, veines, arteries, nerues, membranes: and after this, fleſh is added. And the infant firſt begins to liue the life of a plant, by growing & nouriſhing: then it liues the life of a beaſt, by ſenſe & motion: & thirdly, the life of a man, by the vſe of reaſon. Euen ſo God outwardly preuents vs with his word, and inwardly he puts into vs knowledge of his will, with the beginnings or ſeeds of faith & repentance, as it were a braine and a heart: from theſe beginnings of faith and repentance, ariſe heauenly deſires: from theſe deſires followes asking, ſeeking, knocking: and thus the beginnings of faith are increaſed, and men goe on from grace to grace, till they be tall mē in Chriſt. And for this cauſe, we muſt with conſtancie vſe the good means in hearing, reading, praying.

Laſtly, we are all here put in minde to ſtudy, and to vſe all good meanes, that we may be like to Chriſt, ſpecially in the diſpoſition of the inward man. There is a ſpirituall madnes in the minds of many men: they thinke of nothing but of the faſhion of their apparell, and of the trimming of their bodies: but let vs thinke how to imprint the gracious Image of Chriſt in our hearts: thus ſhall we bee louely, and haue fauour in the eyes of God.

Thus much of Pauls loue: now followes his deſire in the 20. verſe. In which I conſider three things: the deſire it ſelfe, I would I were with you now: the end of his deſire, that I might change my voice: the occaſion thereof, for I am in doubt of you.

When Paul ſaith, I would I were with you now, he ſhews, that the preſence of Paſtours with their people, is a thing moſt neceſſary. And there are two reaſons thereof. One is, to preuent ſpirituall dangers, which are manifold and continuall, in that the diuell ſeekes continually whom hee may deuoure: and we fight againſt principalities and powers in heauenly things. In this reſpect Paſtours are called Watchmen and Ouerſeers. Secondly, the preſence of Paſtours with their people, ſerues to redreſſe

1. Pet. 5. 8.
Ephe. 6. 12.

A things amiſſe, and to recouer them that be in apoſtaſie: as Paul ſaith in this place. Therefore it were to be wiſhed, that this minde of Paul were in all Paſtours, that with one conſent they might ſay to their people, I would I were with you now.

In the words, [that I might change my voice] Paul continues the alluſion (which he made in the former verſe) to a woman with childe: and hereby he ſignifies two things. The firſt is, that he will leaue further diſputing with the Galatians, and fall to lamenting and crying, as mothers doe in the time of their trauell, by reaſon of their paine. This is to change the voice. It was the manner of Paul B to abaſe himſelfe, and to mourne for the ſins of others, 2.Cor.12.24. and he reproues the Corinthians, that they were puffed vp, & did not mourne for the inceſtuous perſon. Like was the practiſe of Dauid, Pſal.119.136. of Lot, 2.Pet.2.7. of Ieremie, Lam.2.11. of the friends of Iob, Iob 2, laſt. of the godly in the daies of Ezechiel. c.9.4. of Chriſt in reſpect of Ieruſalem, Luk.19.41. And it hath beene alwaies the practiſe of holy men, when there was no helpe, with teares to commend the caſe to God.

If ſorrow for other mens offences make Paul change his voice, much more are men to doe it for their owne. Peter, in his repentance left his preſumptuous ſpeaking, and fel C to bitter and ſecret teares: and ſo did the woman that ſtood at the feete of Chriſt weeping, & waſhed his feete with her teares, Luk.7.38. The like ought we to doe for our offences and ſinnes. The earth-quake this winter paſt muſt ſtirre vs vp to this duty. For it is a matter full of terrour. 1. Sam.14.15. and the ſicknes which hath taken hold of thouſands, as a gentle warning muſt be reſpected. And it muſt be conſidered, that the changes of the great world bring with them like changes in the little world, that is, in the bodies of men.

Againe, to change the voice, is to conferre with the Galatians, and vpon conference to temper his voice to their manners and conditions, as nources ſtammer and liſpe with D children. For ſome are with pitie to be recouered: and ſome with terrour. Iude 22, 23. Hence I gather,

That the Conference of Paſtours and people, is a thing very neceſſarie. Paul here aſcribes more to it then to his Epiſtle. It is the life of preaching. For by it the teachers know better what to teach, & the people better to conceiue things that are taught. Here thē we ſee a common fault. Men are content to heare, but they will not confer with their teachers: and in the time of ſicknes, the firſt perſon that is conferred with, is the Phyſitian, and the Miniſter is laſt ſent for: whereas on the contrarie, the cure of the ſoule is the cure of the bodie. Iob.33.23.25.

Againe, here is ſet downe the way to attaine all good learning: and that is, that learners be preſent with their teachers: and the teachers againe temper their voices to the capacitie of the learners. Thus Samuel was with Eli at the dore of the Tabernacle: thus Chriſt was in the Temple among the doctours, hearing them and asking them queſtions. Luk.2.44.

Thirdly, Paul here ſets downe the way to make a pacification for religion in theſe laſt daies: and the way is, that the Paſtours of the Church be aſſembled together by the authoritie of Princes: and beeing aſſembled, they temper their voices one to another according to the written word. Thus may they that lie now vnder the Apoſtaſie of Antichriſt, be recouered, Act.15.6. And the promiſe of God is, that when two or three come together in his name, he will be with them. Matth.18.18.

Laſtly, the Miniſters (as here we ſee) are to temper their gifts and ſpeech to the condition of their hearers. The Corinthians were babes in Chriſt, and Paul feedes them with milke. 1.Cor.3.3. To the Iew he became a Iew, to the Gentile a Gentile, that he might winne ſome. 1.Cor.9.18. For this cauſe it were to be wiſhed, that Catechiſing were more vſed then it is of our Miniſters. For our people are for the moſt part rude and vncatechiſed: and therefore they profit little or nothing by ſermons. A ſermon to ſuch perſons is like a great loafe ſet before a child. And it is no diſgrace for learned Miniſters, in plaine and familiar manner to catechiſe: for this is to lay the foundation, without which all labour in building is in vaine. Againe, our ignorant people ſhould be content euen in their olde age to learne the catechiſme: for by reaſon of their ignorance, they lie as a prey to the Atheiſt and Papiſt: and in much hearing, they learne little; becauſe they know not the grounds of doctrine that are vſually in all ſermons. And it is a fault in many, that they loue to heare ſermons, which are beyond their reach, in which they ſtand and wonder at the Preacher: and plaine preaching is little reſpected of ſuch.

The occaſion of Pauls deſire is in theſe words, I doubt of you, or thus, I am in perplexitie for you: and this Paul ſpeakes as a mother in ſome dangerous extremity, in the time of her trauel; as Rachel was in the birth of Beniamin, Gen.35. And the words carrie this ſenſe, I am troubled for your recouerie, and I feare it wil neuer be.

Here we learne, how dangerous a thing it is to fall from grace, though it be but in part. For a man cannot recouer himſelfe when he will. We doe not the good we can, vnleſſe God makes vs doe it. Ezech.36.27. Cant.1.verſ.4. Ierem.31.verſ.29. Therefore it is an errour to thinke that we may repent and turne to God when we will, as many ſuppoſe. And this muſt be a warning vnto vs to preſerue the good things that God hath

A put into vs,and not to quench the ſpirit.

And though Paul doubt of the recouerie of the Galatians,yet he ſpares not to ſend his Epiſtle to them,and to vſe meanes. And thus in deſperate caſes,we muſt vſe the beſt means, and leaue the ſucceſſe to God. Thus the Iſraelites when there was no other helpe,went into the ſea,as into their death bed,or graue,by faith ſtaying themſelues on the promiſe of God.Heb.11.29. 2.Chron.20.12.

That which Paul here ſaith, may be ſaid of many among vs in whome Chriſt is not yet framed, whether we reſpect knowledge, or good life:for they giue iuſt occaſion of doubting whether they will euer turne to God or no.

B 21.Tell me ye that will be vnder the law, doe ye not heare the law?

22. For it is written,that Abraham had two ſonnes,one by a ſeruant,and an other by a free-woman.

23. But he which was of the ſeruant, was borne after the fleſh:& he which was of the free-woman, by promiſe.

From the 8. verſe of this chapter to the 20. verſe, Paul hath handled the concluſion of the principall argument of this Epiſtle, touching the apoſtaſie of the Galatians:and here he returnes again to his former doctrine touching the iuſtification of a ſinner by faith, without the workes of the law: and he confirmes it by an other Argument, the ſumme C and ſubſtance whereof is this: Your libertie from the law was prefigured in the family of Abraham: therefore ye are not bondmen to the law,but free-men.

The argument is at large propounded, and it hath foure parts: a preface in the 21. verſe:an hiſtorie of Abraham and his family, verſ. 22. 23. the Application of the hiſtorie from the 24. verſe to the 30. the concluſion, verſ. 31.

And firſt of the Preface. Law]the word(law) in the firſt place, is taken properly for the morall and Ceremoniall law of Moſes: and in the ſecond place,for the bookes of Moſes,and namely, for the booke of Geneſis. And in this ſenſe the word is taken, when Chriſt is D ſaid to expound the law and the Prophets, Luk. 24. And ſometime it ſignifies all the bookes of the old Teſtament,Ioh.15.25.

Vnder the law]to be vnder the law, is to hold our ſelues bound to the fulfilling of the law,and to looke for life eternall thereby.

Doe ye not heare the law?] that is, ye reade and heare indeed,but ye vnderſtand not the ſcope and drift of that which you reade.

In this preface, firſt Paul meetes with the pride of mans nature, wherby the Galatians went about to eſtabliſh their owne righteouſneſſe by the law, when he ſaith, ye that will be vnder the law,&c. With this pride were the Iewes tainted, Rom. 10.3. and the young Prince that came to Chriſt and ſaid, Good maſter what muſt I doe to be ſaued? And the Papiſts of our time, who will not be ſubiect to the iuſtice of God, but ſet vp their owne iuſtice in the keeping of the law. The like doe the ignorant people among vs, who hold that they are able to fulfill the law, and that they are to be ſaued thereby. And when they ſay,they look to be ſaued by their faith, they vnderſtand thereby their fidelitie, that is, their good dealing.

Againe, Paul here notes the ſeruile diſpoſition of men that loue rather to be in bondage vnder the law, then to be in perfect libertie vnder the grace of God. This we ſee in daily experience. All profeſſe Chriſt among vs: yet is it euen a death to the moſt, to forſake the bondage of the fleſh. Chriſt we profeſſe,yet ſo as we take libertie to liue after the luſts of our owne hearts.

When Paul ſaith, doe ye not heare the law? he notes the cauſe of our ſpirituall pride, and of the ſeruile diſpoſition before named, namely, ignorance in miſtaking & miſconceiuing the true ſcope of the law: for the Galatians did not conſider that Chriſt was the ſcope of the law, but they ſuppoſed that the very obſeruation of the law euen ſince the fall of man,did giue life and iuſtifie. This ignorance was to the Iewes as a vaile before their eyes in the reading of the law, 2.Cor.3.14. And this ignorance hath blinded the Papiſt at this day: for he ſuppoſeth that the Goſpel is nothing els but the law of Moſes, and that Chriſt indeed is but an inſtrument to make vs keepers of the law, and conſequently ſauiours of our ſelues.

In the hiſtorie of Abraham I conſider three things, the fact of Abraham in taking two wiues:the Euent vpon this fact, he had two ſonnes by them: the condition of theſe ſonnes.

Touching the fact of Abraham, it may be demaunded, what is to be iudged thereof? The ground to the anſwer ſhall be this: that marriage is the indiuiſible coniunction of one man and one woman onely. This Chriſt of purpoſe teacheth, Matth. 16. where he ſaith that God created them at the firſt man and woman,and not women,v.4.that a man muſt forſake father and mother,and cleaue to his wife, not to his wiues, v.5.that they twaine ſhall be one fleſh, v. 6. And in all this Chriſt makes no new law, but onely reuiues the firſt inſtitution of marriage made in Paradiſe. And Moſes hauing ſet downe this diuine inſtitution, addes withall, that Lamech was the firſt that brake it, by taking many wiues.

Now then, the anſwer to the queſtion is two-fold. Some ſay, that Abraham and the reſt of the Patriarks had a diſpenſation from God to marrie many wiues, and therefore that it was no ſinne in them. Of this minde are ſundrie learned men, both Proteſtants and Papiſts. But the anſwer is onely coniecturall, and hath no euidence in Scripture.

The ſecond anſwer is, that God did not approoue the polygamie of the fathers, or commend it, but did onely tolleratee it, as a leſſer euill, for the preuenting of a greater. This tolleration appeares, in that God commaunded, that the King muſt not multiplie his wiues, Deut.17.17. and that the child of the hated wife, (though ſhee be the ſecond wife) if it be firſt borne, ſhalbe the heire, Deut.21.15. The occaſions of this tolleration were two. One was, a deſire in the Patriarches to multiply their poſteritie, that if it were poſſible, the Meſſias might deſcend of their line. The ſecond was, the common cuſtome of men in the eaſt countries, who made no matter of it to marry many wiues: and common cuſtome bred a common errour, and a common error, bred common ignorance, whereby that which was indeede a ſinne, was eſteemed no ſinne.

It may be obiected, if the hauing of many wiues were an offence, that Abraham and the reſt of the holy Patriarches liued and died in a ſinne without repentance: becauſe we finde nothing in Scripture teaching their repentance for this ſinne. Anſw. Knowne ſins require particular repentance: but if ſinnes be vnknowne, or vnconſidered, by reaſon that men are carried away with a ſway of the times (as the Patriarches were) a generall repentance ſufficeth, Pſal.19.12.

Againe, it may bee alleadged, that Abraham tooke Agar by the conſent of Sara. Anſwer. That ſufficeth not to make a full excuſe for Abraham. For if marriage were a meere ciuil contract, as it is made by the conſent of men and women, ſo it might bee diſſolued by like conſent: But it is more then a ciuill contract: becauſe in the making of it, beſide the conſent of the parties, the authoritie of God is interpoſed: and therefore Saraes conſent (in giuing Agar to Abraham) is nothing, without the allowance of God: and wee may not thinke that God will allow of that which is directly againſt his owne ordinance.

Thirdly, it may be alleadged, that if the hauing of many wiues be a fault, then Abraham and the reſt were adulterers. Anſ. Not ſo, the polygamie of the fathers is to bee placed in the middle, betweene adultery, and holy wedlocke. They tooke not wiues of a lewd minde, for the ſatisfying of their luſt, but of a conſcience not rightly informed in this point.

The euent vpon the fact of Abraham was, that his two wiues bare him two ſonnes. He had indeede more ſonnes by Ketura, Geneſis 25.2. but theſe two, Iſmael and Iſaac are onely here mentioned: becauſe by the ſpeciall appoyntment of God, they were ordained as types of true beleeuers, and hypocrites: reade Rom.9.7,8.

The condition of the two children is ſet forth, by a double difference. The firſt is, that one was borne of a bondewoman, and therefore a bondman; the other of a free woman, and therefore a free man, and the heire. Heere it may be demaunded, how the ſame perſon can bee both a wife and a bond woman? Anſwer. Among the heathen (as alſo among the Iewes) there were two ſorts of wiues. Of the firſt kinde were they, that were ioynt gouernours of the family with the husband, and they were called miſtreſſes of the houſe. Of the ſecond ſort were they, that ſerued onely for propagation, and were in all other reſpects as ſeruants or ſtrangers. Of the firſt kinde, was Sara; and of the ſecond, Hagar, and Ketura.

Vxor materfamilias.

Vxor Vſuaria.

The ſecond difference of the children was this. One, that is Iſmael, was borne after the fleſh; that is, by the ſtrength of nature, and according to the fleſhly counſel of Sara, who did ſubſtitute Hagar into her owne roome. The other, namely Iſaac, was borne by the promiſe, that is, according to the order of nature, yet not by the ſtrength of nature, but by the vertue of the promiſe of God.

In the birth of Iſmael Saraes deſire was good, that the promiſe of God might be accompliſhed: but the meanes was carnall, the ſubſtitution of her handmaide. This is the condition of the godly: they entend and deſire the beſt things, but they faile in the maner of doing. The ſpirit ſtirres vp good motions, and the fleſh corrupteth them. Paul ſaith, That to will was preſent with him, but hee could not doe that which was good, as he ought. This muſt cauſe vs alwayes to humble our ſelues for our beſt workes.

Againe, wee are heere taught not to make haſte to accompliſh our deſires, but when God promiſeth any thing, to wait his leaſure, and in the meane ſeaſon to liue in ſubiection. Sara with all her haſte could not preuent Gods prouidence. She hath her deſire in the birth of Iſmael, but yet he is borne according to the fleſh, in bondage, and he is not the promiſed ſeede.

In the birth of Iſaac wee ſee the vertue of the promiſe of God, when it is mixed with our faith: for then it makes things poſſible, that are otherwiſe impoſſible, Matth.17.20. If then wee deſire any good things at the hands of God, our duetie is in ſilence and patience to reſt on the promiſes of God, and then our deſire ſhall indeede bee accompliſhed.

24. By the which things an other thing is meant. For theſe mothers are the two Teſtaments, the one (which is Agar*) of mount Sina, which gendreth to bondage.*

25. For Agar, or Sina, is a mountaine in Arabia, and it anſwereth to Ieruſalem which now is, and ſhe is in bondage with her children.

The application of the former hiſtorie heere beginneth: and the ſenſe of the words is. Another thing meant] the words are thus: Theſe things are ſpoken by an allegorie: that is, one thing is ſaid, and another thing is meant.

Two mothers] Agar and Sara. Are two] they repreſent or ſignifie the two Teſtaments. Eſt is put for ſignificat. Of the two Teſtaments I will ſpeake afterward.

The one] the one Teſtament, which is the couenant of workes [which is Agar] which Teſtament is figured by Agar [is of mount Sina] came from mount Sina, where the law was deliuered to the Iſraelites. And gendreth to bondage] that is, it makes all them bondmen that looke to be iuſtified and ſaued by the workes of the law.

For Agar or Sina] here the tranſlatours are deceiued, ſuppoſing that mount Sina had two names, Agar and Sina: but this opinion of theirs hath no ground, & the words are thus to be read, Agar is Sina. Here Agar ſignifies not ſo much the perſon of Abrahams handmaid, as that which is ſaid in the former hiſtorie of Agar. For the words are, τὸ Ἄγαρ. And Sina muſt bee conſidered as a place, where it pleaſed God to publiſh the law. And the wordes thus conſidered, haue this ſenſe, Agar is Sina, that is, Agar figures Sina, two waies. Firſt, in condition: for as Agar was a bondwoman, ſo Sina in reſpect of the law, was a place of bondage: and in this reſpect alſo it is called Sina of Arabia, which was a deſert out of the land of Canaan. Secondly, in effect: for as Agar bare Iſmael a bondman to Abraham; ſo Sina or the law, makes bondmen. And it anſwereth] Sina anſwereth to Ieruſalem, that is, as Agar figures Sina; ſo Agar figures Ieruſalem: and by this meanes, Sina and Ieruſalem are like, and ſtand both in one order. Now Agar figures Ieruſalem two waies, in condition, and effect. In condition: for as Agar was a bondwoman, ſo Ieruſalem, or the nation of the Iewes refuſing Chriſt, and looking to be ſaued by the law, are in ſpirituall bondage. In effect: for as Agar brings forth Iſmael a bondman; ſo Ieruſalem by teaching the law, makes bondmen. Therefore Paul ſaith in the laſt place of Ieruſalem; and ſhee is in bondage with her children.

The vſe. Theſe things are ſaid by allegorie) here the Papiſts make a double ſenſe of ſcripture, one literall, the other ſpirituall. Literall is twofold. Proper, when the words are taken in their proper ſignification. Figuratiue, when the holy Ghoſt ſignifies his meaning in borrowed tearmes.

Spirituall ſenſes they make three. One allegoricall, when things in the old Teſtament are applyed to ſignifie things in the new Teſtament. The ſecond is, Tropologicall, when Scripture ſignifies ſomething touching manners. The third is, Anagogicall, when things are in Scripture applied to ſignifie the eſtate of euerlaſting life. Thus Ieruſalem properly is a citie: by allegorie, the Church of the new Teſtament: in a tropologicall ſenſe, a ſtate well ordered: in an analogicall ſenſe, the eſtate of eternall life. Theſe ſenſes they vſe to A apply to moſt places of the Scripture, ſpecially to the hiſtorie. But I ſay to the contrarie, that there is but one full and intire ſenſe of euery place of Scripture, and that is alſo the literall ſenſe, ſometimes expreſſed in proper, and ſometimes in borrowed or figuratiue ſpeeches. To make many ſenſes of ſcripture, is to ouerturne all ſenſe, and to make nothing certen. As for the three ſpirituall ſenſes (ſo called) they are not ſenſes, but applications or vſes of Scripture. It may be ſaid, that the hiſtorie of Abrahams family here propounded, hath beſide his proper and literall ſenſe, a ſpirituall or myſticall ſenſe. I anſwer, they are not two ſenſes, but two parts of one full B and intire ſenſe. For not only the bare hiſtorie, but alſo that which is thereby ſignified, is the full ſenſe of the holy Ghoſt.

Againe, here wee ſee the Scripture is not onely penned in proper tearmes, but alſo in ſundrie diuine figures and allegories. The ſong of Salomon is an Allegorie borrowed from the fellowſhip of man and wife, to ſignifie the communion betweene Chriſt and his Church: and ſo is the 45. Pſal. The booke of Daniel, and the Reuelation, is an allegoricall hiſtorie. The Parables of the old and new Teſtaments, are figures or allegories. When David ſaith, Pſal. 45. 4. Ride on vpon the word of truth, meekeneſſe, and iuſtice, he deſcribes a Princes chariot by allegorie. The Guide is the word, the horſes that draw it, are three, C Truth, meekeneſſe, and iuſtice. And thus the throne of God is deſcribed by like allegorie. Pſal. 89. v. 14. the foundation of the throne, are righteouſnes and equitie: the maine bearers to goe before the throne, are mercy and truth.

It may be demanded, when doth the Scripture ſpeake properly, and when by figure? Anſw. If the proper ſignification of the words be againſt common reaſon, or againſt the analogie of faith, or againſt good maners, they are not then to be taken properly, but by figure. The words of Chriſt, Ioh. 15. 1. I am the true vine, and my father is an husbandman; If D they be taken properly, they are abſurd in common reaſon: therefore the words are figuratiue, and the ſenſe is this: I am as the true vine; and my father as an husbandman. The words of Chriſt, Take, eate, this is my bodie, 1. Cor. 11. 24. taken properly, are againſt the articles of faith, He aſcended into heauen, and ſits at the right hand of God. And they are againſt the ſixt commaundement, Thou ſhalt not kill. And therefore they muſt be expounded by figure, thus, This bread is a ſigne of my body. The like is to be ſaid of other places: they muſt be taken properly, if it be poſſible; if not, by figure.

Here then they are to be blamed, that make the vſe of Rhetoricke in the Bible, to bee a meere ſopperie. For to this purpoſe there is a booke in Engliſh heretofore publiſhed. As alſo they of the Family of loue are iuſtly to

A be condemned, who in another extremitie, turne all the Bible to an Allegorie, yea euen that which is ſaid of Adam, and of Chriſt.

They are two Teſtaments] they are, that is, they ſignifie: and ſo Agar is Sina a mountaine in Arabia, that is, ſignifies Sina. Thus the Rocke in the wilderneſſe is Chriſt, 1. Cor. 10.4. that is, figures Chriſt. Like to this is the Sacramentall phraſe, This is my bodie, that is to ſay, this bread ſignifies my bodie. Great is the madneſſe of men that hence gather tranſubſtantiation, or the reall conuerſion of bread into the bodie of Chriſt. They might as well gather hence the conuerſion of Agar into mount Sina.

B The two Teſtaments are the Couenant of workes, and the Couenant of grace, one promiſing life eternall to him that doth al things contained in the law: the other to him that turnes and beleeues in Chriſt. And it muſt be obſerued, that Paul ſaith, they are two, that is, two in ſubſtance, or kinde. And they are two, ſundrie waies. The law, or couenant of workes, propounds the bare iuſtice of God, without mercie: the couenant of grace, or the Goſpel, reueales both the iuſtice and mercie of God, or the iuſtice of God giuing place to his mercie. Secondly, the law requires of vs inward and perfect righteouſneſſe, both for nature, and action: the Goſpel propounds vnto vs an imputed iuſtice reſident in the C perſon of the Mediatour. Thirdly, the law promiſeth life vpon condition of workes: the Goſpel promiſeth remiſſion of ſinnes & life euerlaſting vpon condition that we reſt our ſelues on Chriſt by faith. Fourthly, the law was written in Tables of ſtone, the Goſpel in the fleſhie tables of our heart, Ier. 31. 33. 2. Cor. 3.3. Fiftly, the law was in nature by creation: the Goſpel is aboue nature, and was reuealed after the fall. Sixtly, the law hath Moſes for the Mediatour, Deut. 5.27. but Chriſt is the Mediatour of the new Teſtament. Heb. 8.6. Laſtly, the law was dedicated by the blood of beaſts, Exod. 24.5. and the new Teſtament by the blood of Chriſt. Heb. 9. 12.

D Here then fals to the ground a maine pillar in Popiſh religion, which is, that the law of Moſes, and the Goſpel, are all one law for ſubſtance: and that the difference lies in this, that the law of Moſes is darke and imperfect, and the Goſpell, or the law of Chriſt more perfect: becauſe he hath (as they ſay) added Counſels to precepts. Againe, the law (they ſay) without the ſpirit, is the law properly, and with the ſpirit, it is the Goſpel. But all this is falſe which they teach. For the two Teſtaments the law and the Goſpell, are two in nature, ſubſtance, or kinde: and the difference lies not in the preſence or abſence of the ſpirit.

And whereas the Papiſts make two iuſtifications, the firſt meerely by grace, the ſecond by workes: beſides the two Teſtaments, they muſt eſtabliſh a third Teſtament compounded of both: and it muſt be partly legall, and partly Euangelicall; otherwiſe the two-fold iuſtification cannot ſtand. For the law propounds onely one way of iuſtification, and the Goſpell a ſecond. The doctrine therefore that propounds both, is compounded of both.

God did not approoue the polygamie of Abraham, yet doth hee vſe it to ſignifie the greateſt myſterie of our religion. Here we ſee a great point of the diuine prouidence of God, who ordereth and vſeth well the things which hee doth not approoue. This is the foundation of our patience, and a meanes of true comfort. Ioſeph thus comforts himſelfe and his brethren, that God ordered and diſpoſed their badde enterpriſe, to his and their good, Gen. 45.6,7.

Here againe Paul ſets downe two properties of the Teſtament of works, or of the law. The firſt is, that it came from mount Sina. And here lies the difference betweene the law and the Goſpel: the law is from Sina, the Goſpel from Sion or Ieruſalem. For there it was firſt to be preached, and thence conueied to all nations, Mich. 4. 1. Ezech. 47. 1.

The ſecond propertie of the law is, that it gendreth to bondage: becauſe it maketh them bondmen, that looke to be ſaued & iuſtified thereby. And this it doth, by reuealing ſinne and the puniſhment thereof, which is euerlaſting death, and by conuincing all men of their ſinnes, and of their deſerued cōdemnation. In this reſpect, it is called the miniſterie of death, 2. Cor. 3.6. and Paul ſaith, that after he knew his ſinnes by the law, he died, & the law was the meanes of death vnto him, Rom. 7.10. Here is another difference betweene the law and the Goſpel. The law genders to bondage: the Goſpel genders to life. For it is an inſtrument of the ſpirit for the beginning and confirming of our regeneration and ſaluation: & ſo is not the law, which is no cauſe, but onely an occaſion of the grace of God in vs.

Whereas Ieruſalem that now is, is ſaid to be in bondage, as Sina and Hagar. It is to be obſerued, that there is no Church in the world, nor people, which is not ſubiect to apoſtaſie. For God had made great and large promiſes to Ieruſalem, Pſal. 122. and 132, and yet for all this, Ieruſalem by refuſing Chriſt, and by eſtabliſhing the iuſtice of the law, is come into bondage, and depriues her ſelfe of the inheritance of eternall life. Therefore it is a falſhood which the Papiſts teach, that the infallible aſſiſtance of the Spirit is tyed to the Chaire, and Conſiſtorie of the Pope, ſo as he, and conſequently the Church of Rome, cannot erre. Here againe, we ſee what may be the future condition of England. For it may be ſaid of it hereafter, England that now is, is not that which it hath bin, namely, a maintainer of the Goſpel of Chriſt. Therefore we muſt not be high minded, but feare, and now take heed of the firſt beginning of apoſtaſie. The holy Ghoſt, Heb. 3. 12. 13. ſets downe the degrees thereof, and they are fiue in number. The firſt is, the deceit of ſinne: the ſecond is, the hardening of the heart after men are deceiued by ſin: the third is, an euill heart, which growes vpon hardneſſe of heart: the fourth is, vnbeleefe, whereby the word of God is called in queſtion, and the truth thereof: and after vnbeleefe ſollowes a departure from God and Chriſt. That this may not be, we muſt carefully avoid all the deceits of ſinne, as namely, couetouſneſſe, ambition, luſt, &c.

Againe, as Agar ſignifies the law, ſo doth Iſmael all iuſticiaries, that looke to be ſaued by the law. Here then we ſee the condition of the world, the greateſt part whereof are Iſmaelites. For the Turke, and the Iew, looke at this day to be ſaued by their workes. The Papiſt aſcribes his conuerſion not wholly to grace, but partly to grace, & partly to nature, or the ſtrength of mans will helped by grace. And thus are they borne after the fleſh as Iſmael was. And our common people, though in ſhew they profeſſe reformed religion, yet indeede a great part of them are Iſmaelites. For they looke to be ſaued by their good ſeruing of God, and by their good deedes: and they little thinke on Chriſt and his merits. And thus they depriue themſelues of all title to eternall life. Therefore it ſtands them in hand to condemne nature & the ſtrength thereof, and to renounce their owne workes, and to reſt onely on the promiſe of mercie for eternall ſaluation; thus ſhall they be the children of the promiſe, and heires of God.

Laſtly, in that Ieruſalem is in bondage like Agar or mount Sina, we ſee how vaine are the pilgrimages to the holy land, and how needleſſe were the warres made for the recouerie thereof.

26. But Ieruſalem which is aboue, is free: which is the mother of vs all.

Here Paul ſhewes what is figured by Sara, namely, the new Ieruſalem, which is the Catholike Church, Heb. 12. 22, 23. Reuel. 21. 2. And it is here ſo tearmed, becauſe Ieruſalem was a type thereof in ſixe reſpects. Firſt, God choſe Ieruſalem aboue all other places to dwell in, Pſal. 132. 13. And the Catholike Church is the company of predeſtinate, choſen to be a peculiar people to God. Secondly, Ieruſalem is a citie compaſt in it ſelfe, by reaſon of the bond of loue and order among the citizens, Pſal. 122. 3. In like ſort, the members of the Catholike Church are linked together by the bond of one ſpirit. Thirdly, in Ieruſalem was the ſanctuary, a place of Gods preſence, and of his worſhip, where alſo the promiſe of the ſeed of the woman was preſerued till the comming of the Meſſias: and now the Catholike Church is in the roome of the ſanctuarie: in it we muſt ſeeke the preſence of God, and the word of life: therefore it is called the pillar and ground of truth, 1. Tim. 3. 15. Fourthly, in Ieruſalem was the throne of Dauid, Pſal. 122. 5. and in the Catholike Church is the throne or ſcepter of Chriſt, figured by the kingdome of Dauid, Reu. 3. 7. Fiftly, the commendation of a citie (as Ieruſalem) is the ſubiection and obedience of the citizens: now in the Catholike Church all beleeuers are citizens, Eph. 2. 19. and yeeld voluntarie obedience, and ſubiection to Chriſt their king, Pſal. 110. 2. Eſa. 2. 5. Laſtly, as in Ieruſalem the names of the citizens were inrolled in a regiſter; ſo the names of all the members of the Catholike Church, are inrolled in the booke of life, Reuelations 20. 15. Hebrewes 12. 23.

Againe, the Catholike Church dwelling here below, is ſaid to be aboue in heauen for two cauſes. Firſt, in reſpect of her beginning, which is from the Election & grace of God, & from Chriſt the Mediatour, of whoſe fleſh and bone we are that beleeue, Eph. 5. 30. The iuſtice whereby we are iuſtified is in Chriſt: our holineſſe and life, flowes from the holines and life of Chriſt, as from a roote. Secondly, the Church is ſaid to be aboue, becauſe it dwels by faith in heauen with Chriſt: for the propertie of faith is to make vs preſent after a ſort, when we are abſent, Heb. 11. 2.

The vſe. This being ſo, we are admoniſhed to liue in this world as Pilgrimes & ſtrangers. 1. Pet. 2. 11. and therefore we muſt not ſet our loue vpon any earthly thing, but our mindes muſt be vpon the countrie to which we are travelling. And whatſoeuer is an hinderance to vs in our iourney, we muſt caſt it from vs, that we may goe lightly: and if we haue any wrong done vs either in goods or good name, we muſt the rather be content, becauſe we are out of our countrie in a ſtrange place: and hereupon wee muſt take occaſion to make haſt to our iourneies end, that is, to our owne citie, & laſt abode. Thus did the Patriarches, Heb. 11. 13. 15.

Secondly, we muſt carry our ſelues as Burgeſſes of heauen, Phil. 3. 20. And this we ſhall doe by minding, ſeeking, affecting of heauenly things, by ſpeaking the language of Canaan, which is, to inuocate and praiſe the name of God. Laſtly, by leading a ſpirituall life, that may beſeeme the citizens of heauen. Many faile in this point, when they come to the Lords table, they profeſſe themſelues to be citizens of the city of God, but in their common dealings in the world, they play the ſtarke rebels againſt God and his word, and liue according to the luſts of their blind and vnrepentant hearts.

Thirdly, when Paul ſaith, that Ieruſalem which is aboue is free, &c. he ſhewes that the Catholike Church is one in number, and no more. Cant. 6. 8. My doue is alone, and the onely daughter of her mother. Ioh. 10. 16. One ſheepe-fold. There be many members, but one body, 1. Cor. 12. 12.

Fourthly, hence we gather, that the Catholike Church is inuiſible. For the company of them that dwell in heauen by their faith, cannot be diſcerned by the eye. Iohn ſaw the heauenly Ieruſalem deſcending from heauen, yet not with the bodily eye, but in ſpirit, Reu. 21, 19. The things which make the catholike church to bee the Church, namely, election, vocation, iuſtification, glorification, are inuiſible. The Papiſt therefore erreth, when hee teacheth, that the catholike church is a viſible company vnder one Paſtor, namely the Pope. And the places which they bring to prooue the viſibility of the vniuerſal church, concerne either particular churches, or the churches which were in the daies of the Apoſtles; or againe, they ſpeake of the inward glory, and beauty of the Church.

Free] that is, redeemed from the bondage of death and ſinne: and ſo from the curſe of the law. Of this freedome I will ſpeake more afterward.

The mother of vs all] ſhee is called a mother, becauſe the word of God is committed to the keeping of the Church, which word is ſeede, 1.Pet. 1.23. and milke, 1. Corin. 3.2. and ſtrong meate, Hebr. 5.14. And the church as a mother, which by the miniſtery of the ſaid word, brings forth children to God, and after they are borne and brough forth, ſhee feeds them with milke out of her owne breaſts, which are the Scriptures of the olde and new Teſtament.

Here a great queſtion is to bee propounded, namely, where wee ſhall finde this our Mother? For it is the duty of all children to haue recourſe vnto their mother, and to liue vnder her wing. The aduocates of the Popiſh church, Prieſts and Ieſuites ſay, wee muſt be reconciled to the church and See of Rome, if wee would be of the catholike church. To this purpoſe they vſe many motiues, I will here propound ſeauen of them: becauſe heretofore they haue beene ſcattered abroad among vs.

The firſt motiue. The church of Rome hath meanes of ſure and certen interpretation, tradition, councels, fathers: wee haue nothing but the priuate interpretation of Luther, Melancthon, Caluin, &c. Anſw. Scripture is both the gloſſe and the text; And the principall meanes of the interpretation of Scripture, is Scripture it ſelfe. And it is a meanes, when places of Scripture are expounded by the Analogie of faith, by the words, ſcope, and circumſtances of the place. And the interpretation which is ſutable to all theſe, is ſure, certen, and publike: for it is the interpretation of God. Contrariwiſe, the interpretation which is not agreeable to theſe, though it be from Church, Fathers, & Councels, is vncerten, and it is priuate interpretation. Now this kinde of interpretation wee allow: and therefore it is falſe, that we haue only priuate interpretations: and that all interpretations of the church of Rome are publike. Secondly, I anſwer, that we are able to iuſtifie our interpretations of Scripture for the maine points of religion, by the conſent of Fathers, and Councels, as well as they of the church of Rome.

The ſecond motiue. We haue no diuine and infallible authority to reſt on in matter of religion: but they of the church of Rome haue. Anſ. In the Canonicall ſcriptures of the Prophets and Apoſtles, there is diuine and infallible authority: for they are now in the new teſtament, in ſtead of the liuely voice of God. And this authority wee in our Church acknowledge. Secōdly, I anſwer, that the church hath no diuine and infallible authority diſtinct from the authority of ſcriptures (as the Papiſts teach) but only a Miniſtery, which is to ſpeake in the name of God, according to the written word.

The third motiue. We haue no limitations of opinion, and affection, but they of the church of Rome haue. I anſwer firſt: we ſuffer our ſelues to bee limited for opinion, by the analogy of faith, and by the written word, and ſo doth not the Papiſt, which addes tradition to the Scripture. And for affection we ſuffer our ſelues to bee limited by the doctrine of repentance, and new obedience. Secondly I anſwer, that the church of Rome vſeth falſe meanes of Limitation. For it teacheth, that for opinion, wee muſt captiuate our ſenſes to the determinatiō of the church, by beleeuing as the church beleeues, though it be not knowne what the church beleeueth. And it limits affection, by auricular confeſſion, and by canonicall ſatisfactions, meere inuentions of men.

The fourth motiue. The Romane religion drawes the multitude. Anſw. It drawes them indeede, becauſe it is a naturall religion: but it doth not turne them from darknes to light, from death to life. Secondly I anſwer, that Antichriſt in his comming ſhall drawe the multitude, 2. Theſſ. 2.9.

The fifth motiue. There were neuer but two alterations of religion. One, in the daies of Elias; the other, in the daies of Iohn the Baptiſt. Anſw. I will ſhew a third. Paul ſaith, that before the ende, there ſhall be a departure, 2. Theſſ. 2. and this departure is generall in all nations, Reuelat. 13. 16. and after a thouſand yeares there ſhall bee the firſt reſurrection, Reuelat. 20. 5. and this reſurrection is the reuiuing and the reſtoring of the Goſpell after long ignorance and ſuperſtition.

The ſixth motiue. The church of Rome hath a Iudge to ende controuerſies: we haue none. Anſ. Chriſt is our Iudge: and the ſcripture is the voice of this Iudge, determining all things pertaining to ſaluation, fully, and plainely, to the contentation of any conſcience.

The ſeauenth motiue. The Romane religion is ſutable to ancient Tradition. Anſw. It is contrary. For it aboliſheth the ſecond commandement touching images, and the tenth, touching luſt. And it ouerturneth ſundry Articles of faith. For it aboliſheth one of the natures of Chriſt by the reall preſence, and his three offices, by ioyning partners, and aſſociates with him.

To theſe ſeauen I adde three other. The eight motiue then is this: Our Miniſters (they ſay) tooke vnto themſelues new callings: and conſequently that wee are but ſchiſmatickes. Anſw. The offices of the firſt reſtorers of the Goſpell were ordinarie: and their vocation to the ſaid offices was ordinary: for they were all either Prieſts, or Schoole-doctors. It may bee ſaid, that they departed onely from the common abuſe of their callings, which they reſtored to their right vſe.

The ninth motiue. The church of Rome hath true baptiſme, and therefore it is a true church. Anſw. Baptiſme in the Papacie, pertaines not to it, but to another hidden church in the middeſt of the Papacie: as the light in the lanthorne, pertaines not to it, but to the paſſenger. Secondly, though the church of Rome holde the outward baptiſme, yet doth it ouerturne the inward, which ſtands in the iuſtification of a ſinner by imputation of the obedience of Chriſt. Thirdly, baptiſme ſeuered from the preaching of the Goſpell, is no marke of a church. Circumciſion was vſed in Samaria, & yet they were no people of God, Hoſ. 1.9.

The tenth motiue. The church of Rome hath antiquitie and ſucceſſion from the Apoſtles. Anſwer. They are no markes of the church, vnleſſe they be ioyned with propheticall and Apoſtolicall doctrine. The kingdome of darkeneſſe, hath alſo antiquitie, ſucceſſion, vniuerſalitie, and vnitie.

Now then wee are to holde the church of Rome as a ſtepmother, nay as a profeſſed harlot: ſhee is no mother of ours. For the Lord ſaith, Come out of her my people, Reu. 18. Let vs therefore come to the true anſwer.

The Catholike Church, our Mother, is to be ſought for, and to be found in the true viſible churches, the certen markes whereof are three. The preaching of the word of God, out of the writings of the Prophets and Apoſtles, with obedience, Ioh. 10.28. Epheſ. 2.20. True inuocation of God the Father, in the only name of Chriſt by the aſſiſtance of the Spirit, Act. 9.14. 1. Cor. 1.2. the right vſe of the ſacraments, baptiſme, and the Lords ſupper, Mat. 28.18. And by theſe ſhall wee finde the true Church of God in England, Ireland, Scotland, Germany, France, &c.

Againe, in that the church is called our Mother, the Papiſt gathereth, that her commaundements muſt be obeyed, Pro. 1.8. and therefore in their catechiſmes, beſide the commaundements of God, they propound the commaundements of the church. But I anſwer, that the precepts of the father and the mother muſt bee one: and then the mother muſt be obeyed.

The church is called the mother of vs all, that is, of all true beleeuers. Hence it followes, that wicked men are not members of the catholike church (as Popiſh Doctours erroniouſly teach) for then the church ſhall bee a mother, not onely to the children of God, but alſo to the children of the diuell.

Laſtly, in that the church is our mother, wee are taught that wee muſt deſpiſe our firſt birth, & ſeeke to be borne againe vnto God, and ſucke the breaſt of our mother, feeding on the milke of the word, Pſal. 45. 11. 1 Pet. 2.2. Thus to be borne a member of the new Ieruſalem, is a great priuiledge, Pſalm. 87. 5. Reu. 3.12.

27. For it is written, Reioyce thou barren that beareſt no children, breake forth and crie thou that trauelleſt not: for the deſolate hath many more children, then ſhee which hath an husband.

Theſe words are the teſtimony of the Prophet Iſay, cap. 54. 1. and they are brought to prooue that which Paul ſaid in the former verſe, that the catholike Church is the mother of vs all, that is, not onely of the Iewes, but alſo of all beleeuing Gentiles.

In the words I conſider the preface to the Teſtimonie, and the Teſtimony it ſelfe. The preface, It is written: where two points are to be conſidered. The firſt is, who ſaith, It is written? Anſ. The Apoſtle Paul, whoſe authority was diuine and infallible, becauſe hee was led into all truth by the Spirit of God, ſo as hee could not erre in deliuering doctrine to the church. And yet for all this hee followes the rule of the written word. And his manner was ſo to do, Act. 26.22. This ſhewes the ſhameleſſe impudency of the church of Rome, which takes to it ſelfe an abſolute power of iudgement in all matters, without, and beſide the Scripture, yea a power to iudge of the Scripture it ſelfe, and of the ſenſe thereof, without the helpe of Scripture, vpon a ſuppoſed infallible aſſiſtance of the Spirit.

The ſecond point is, In what queſtion ſaith Paul, It is written? Anſ. In a controuerſie betweene him and the falſe Apoſtles, touching the iuſtification of a ſinner. This ſhewes that the Scripture it ſelfe is the meanes to determine and decide controuerſies. There was for this purpoſe in the olde Teſtament, the liuely voice of God vttered in the Oracle at the mercy ſeate: but in the new Teſtament there is no ſuch voice of God, but the written word is in ſtead thereof, to the ende of the world. And therefore Paul ſaith, It is written.

In the teſtimonie I conſider three things, the condition of the two churches, the chaunge of the condition, the ioy that is vpon the change.

The condition of the church of the new Teſtament, in theſe words, Barren that beareſt no children: thou that trauelleſt not: the deſolate.

Barren] The Chriſtian church is ſo called, becauſe by the vertue and ſtrength of nature it beares no children to God, no more then Sara did to Abraham, Iohn 1.13. 1.*Corint.*3.7. Secondly, it is ſo called in reſpect of the beginning thereof, when the Iewiſh church was yet ſtanding, til the ſpirit of God was powred foorth vpon all fleſh, after the aſcenſion of Chriſt: and before this, the number of them which were conuerted to GOD, was very ſmall: and therefore Chriſt himſelfe complained, that he ſpent his ſtrength in vaine, Eſay 49.4. Thirdly, it is ſo called in reſpect of the latter times of the church, in which Chriſt ſhal ſcarſe find faith vpon the earth, Luke 18. 8. Further that the church is barren, it is declared by the ſigne, becauſe ſhe neither brings forth child, nor beares.

Deſolate] that is, without husband in appearance, by reaſon of the croſſe and affliction: and without children, becauſe at the firſt the chriſtian Church was conſtrained to hide her ſelfe in the wilderneſſe, Reu. 12. 14. It may bee demaunded how the catholike church ſhould be deſolate? Anſ. The eſtate of the church is twofold: inward, or outward. The inward eſtate ſtands in the true knowledge of God in Chriſt, in comfort touching remiſſion of ſinne, and life euerlaſting, in the hearing of our prayers, in protection and deliuerance from all ſpirituall enemies, in the gifts of the ſpirit, faith, hope, loue, &c. In reſpect of this eſtate, the Church is all glorious within, & neuer deſolate, Pſal. 45. 13. The outward eſtate of the catholike church, ſtãds in viſible aſſemblies, in the publike Miniſtery of the word and ſacraments, in a gouernment according to the word of God. In reſpect of this ſecond eſtate, the Church may be in deſolation. This was the condition of the church in paradiſe vpon the fall of our firſt parents, of the Iſraelites at Mount Horeb, when they worſhipped the golden calfe, and in the daies of Elias, Rom. 11.3. and afterward, 2. Chron. 15. 3. When Chriſt ſuffered, the ſhepheard was ſmitten, and the ſheepe were ſcattered. After Chriſts aſcenſion all the earth worſhipped the beaſt, Reu. 13. 12.

Hence it followes, that the catholike church is not a viſible eſtate or company of men vnder one viſible head: becauſe in reſpect of her outward eſtate ſhee may be for a time in deſolation. And as this is the eſtate of the church, ſo is it alſo the eſtate of the members thereof. They ſhall be hated of all men, Luk. 21. 17. Men ſhall thinke they doe God good ſeruice, when they kill them, Ioh. 16. 2. And Chriſt himſelfe was a man without forme or beauty, Iſa. 53. 2.

Hauing an husband] in theſe wordes the condition of the Iewiſh Church is ſet forth, that ſhee is married or eſpouſed to God, who is her husband, Ezechiel 16. 8, 9. Oſea 2. 19. The like may bee ſaid of any other church, & namely of the Church of England.

The vſe. This muſt teach vs to dedicate our bodies and ſoules to God and Chriſt, and to giue the maine affections of our hearts vnto him, as our loue, and our ioy, &c.

Secondly, we muſt adorne and trimme our ſelues with grace, that we may pleaſe our husband, Pſal. 45. 12.

Thirdly, wee muſt be the glory of Chriſt, as the wife is to her husband, 1. Cor. 11. 7. and that is, by ſubiecting our ſelues to Chriſt and his lawes.

Againe, if we betroth our ſelues to Chriſt indeede, we may aſſure our ſelues that Chriſt is our Chriſt, and that he hath giuen himſelfe vnto vs: and conſequently, that hee will ſanctifie vs, Ezech. 16. 9. protect vs as an husband doth his wife, Gen. 20. 16. and indowe vs with all things needfull for this life, and the life to come, Ezec. 16. 10, 11.

The ſecond point is the change of the church of the new Teſtament, becauſe ſhee ſhall ceaſe to be barren, and bring forth many children. This is the promiſe of God: and hereupon Paul concludes, that the church is a mother of all beleeuers, both Iewes and Gentiles. Obſerue, that the promiſe of God is of infinite vertue in this time and place. In the beginning God ſaid, let there be this or that, and it was ſo. Of like vertue is Gods promiſe, if we can waite his leiſure. God promiſed that after 430. yeares, the Iſraelites ſhould be deliuered out of Egypt, preſently when the time was expired, nothing could hinder the promiſe. Reade Exodus 12. 41. Therefore our duty is, to reſt on Gods promiſes in all times, both in life and death.

The third point is the ioy vpon the change. Reioyce] Here are two things to bee conſidered. The firſt, who muſt reioyce? Anſ. The church. Gods kingdome is the place of ioy, Rom. 14. 17. Reioycing belongs to the people of God, Pſal. 68. 3. and 106. 5. The muſicke of the Temple was typicall, and figured the ioy of the catholike church, where is the aſſurance of remiſſion of ſinnes, and life eternall.

The ſecond point is, in what muſt the church reioyce? Anſwer. In the redemption of Chriſt, and the fruit thereof, the conuerſion of ſinners to God. For the Prophet had ſhewed at large the paſſion and ſufferings of Chriſt: Iſa. 53. and hereupon he ſaith, Reioyce thou barren. The Iſraelites were commaunded to feaſt, and to bee merrie before the Lord, Leuit. 23. 40. 1. Chronicles 29. 22. that is, before the Lords Arke, which was the pledge of his preſence. Now this Arke was a figure of Chriſt; and the myrth before the Arke, ſignified, that the foundation of all our ioy, lies in our Reconciliation with God in Chriſt. The angels in heauen greatly reioyce at the conuerſion of a ſinner: and at the returne of the prodigall ſonne, the fatte calfe is killed.

The vſe. It is falſe, that religion breeds Melancholy, and cuts off all mirth. It doth not aboliſh mirth, but rectifie it: nay, it brings men to true and perfect ioy.

Our firſt and principall ioy muſt be, that we are in Gods fauour, reconciled to God by Chriſt, Luke 10. 20. In Dauid, the head of his ioy, was the good eſtate of the Church, Pſal. 137. 6. And all other pettie ioyes muſt flow from this, and be ſutable to it.

Breake forth] this ſignifies, that the church vpon earth is (as it were) pent in with preſent griefe. Our ioy in this life is mixed with ſorrow. The Paſchall Lambe was eaten with ſowre herbs, to ſignifie, that we feele no ſweetneſſe in the blood of Chriſt, till wee feele the ſmart of our ſinnes. We here muſt reioyce in trembling, Pſal. 2. 11. Ioy is ſowne for them that are vpright in heart, Pſal. 97. 12.

Crie] in our earthly ioyes, we muſt be moderate and ſparing: wee muſt not eate too much hony leſt wee ſurffet. Yet in ſpirituall ioyes the meaſure is to reioyce without meaſure, if we be rauiſhed with ioy in Chriſt, that we crie againe, it is the beſt of all.

28 Therefore brethren, wee are after the maner of Iſaac, children of the promiſe.

Here Paul ſhewes, that as Sara figured the Catholike church: ſo Iſaac was a figure of all true beleeuers the children of God.

Therefore] or thus, And we brethren.

We] not only the Iewes, but alſo beleeuing Gentiles.

Promiſe] the promiſe made to Abraham, I will be thy God and the God of thy ſeede: or the promiſe made to the Church, that being barren ſhe ſhall beare many children.

Children of promiſe] beleeuers are ſo called, not becauſe they beleeue the promiſe (though that bee a truth) but becauſe they are made children of God, by the vertue of Gods promiſe. For thus was Iſaac the child of promiſe, in that he was borne to Abraham, not by the ſtrength of nature, but by Gods promiſe. And Paul oppoſeth the children of the promiſe to the children of the fleſh, which were borne by naturall ſtrength, Rom. 9. 8.

Hence it followes, that the meere grace of God, is the cauſe of our election and adoption, and not any thing in vs. For the promiſe of God makes vs Gods children: and the promiſe is of the meere grace of God: and therfore we are Gods children by the meere grace of God. For the cauſe of the cauſe, is the cauſe of the thing cauſed. Therefore Paul ſaith, that the Epheſians were predeſtinate to adoption, Epheſ. 1. 5. And hee ſaith, the 7000. that neuer bowed knee to Baal, were reſerued by the election of grace, Rom. 11. 5. And it is a falſe poſition, to teach, that Election and Adoption, are according to Gods foreknowledge of our faith and obedience. For thus ſhall we elect our ſelues, and be children, not of Gods promiſe, but of our owne free will, and faith. Moreouer, God foreſees our future faith and obedience, becauſe hee firſt decreed to giue the grace of faith vnto vs: becauſe the foreknowledge of things, which are to come to paſſe, depends vpon a precedent will in God.

Marke further, the children of God are called the children of the Promiſe, and this promiſe is abſolute and effectuall. Heere a queſtion may be reſolued: and that is, whether the child of God in his conuerſion haue a libertie and power to reſiſt the inward calling of God? Anſ. No. The abſolute will of God cannot bee reſiſted: now the promiſe whereby men are made the children of God, is the abſolute will of God. Againe, with this promiſe is ioyned the infinite power of God, which without all reſiſtance bringeth that to paſſe which GOD hath promiſed. For hee makes men to do that which he commaunds, Ezech. 36. 26. he giues the will and the deed, Phil. 2. 13. ſo as men effectually called, cannot but come, Iohn 6. 45.

It may be ſaid, that this is to aboliſh al freedome of will. Anſ. It ſufficeth to the libertie of the will, that it be free from compulſion: for conſtraint takes away the libertie of the will, and not neceſſitie. Secondly, the determination of mans will, by the will of God, is the libertie of the will, and not the bondage therof: for this is perfect libertie, when mans will is conformable to the will of God.

29. But as hee which was borne according to the fleſh, perſecuted him that was borne after the ſpirit, ſo is it now.

Theſe wordes are, an anſwer to an Obiection, on this manner: Wee are hated of the Iewes; and therefore we are not the children of promiſe. The anſwer is twofolde. One in this verſe, thus; No maruell: this is the olde faſhion: it was thus in Abrahams familie. For Iſmael (borne after the fleſh) perſecuted Iſaac (borne after the ſpirit:) & ſo it is at this day.

Obſerue that there is a perpetuall enmitie and oppoſition betweene true beleeuers and hypocrites. God put enmitie betweene the ſeede of the Serpent, and the ſeede of the woman, Geneſ. 3. 15. The world hates them that are choſen out of the world, Ioh. 15. 19. Carnall men cannot abide that their opinions and doings, ſhould be iudged and condemned of others, Iohn 3. 20. And hence comes the oppoſition that is betweene beleeuers, and hypocrites, who cannot abide ſuch as are not like themſelues.

This hatred and oppoſition, ſhewes it ſelfe in perſecution: of which, three things are to be conſidered.

The firſt is, who perſecutes? Anſ. Carnall Iſmaelites, ſuch as are of the ſame Religion and family with Iſaac. Thus the Iewes perſecuted their owne Prophets, and the Theſſalonians were perſecuted of their owne prophets, 1. Theſſal. 2. 14. Thus Prieſts and Ieſuites that haue beene heretofore borne, baptized and brought vp among vs, are the cauſes of many ſeditions, conſpiracies, and ſeeke the ſubuerſion of Church and Land.

The ſecond is, who are perſecuted? Anſw. Spirituall men, the children of the promiſe. They ſuffer wrong, but they doe none: In the mount of the Lord there is no hurt done, Eſay 11. 9. they turne their ſpeares and ſwords into mattockes and ſithes, Eſay 2.4. And they which do no wrong, but are content to ſuffer wrong (& that for a good cauſe) are in this reſpect bleſſed, Mat. 5.10.

The third point is, touching the kinde of perſecution: and that was ſcorning or mocking, Gen. 21.9. It may be demaunded, how mocking can be perſecution? Anſ. Mocking and deriſion, which riſeth of the hatred and contempt of our brother, is a degree of murder. He which ſaith Raca to his brother, is guiltie of a Councell, Mat. 5.22. Here Raca ſignifieth al ſignes & geſtures which expreſſe contempt, as ſnuffing, tuſhing, ieering, gerning, &c. Cain is rebuked of God, euen for the caſting downe of his countenance, Gen. 4.6.

Againe, the mocking wherewith Iſmael mocked Iſaac, proceeded from a contempt & hatred of the grace of God in Iſaac: which Paul notes when he ſaith, that hee was perſecuted which was borne after the ſpirit. This hatred of Gods grace in men, is the beginning of all perſecution, and the deriding of the grace of GOD, is as much as the ſpoiling of our goods, and the ſeeking of our liues. Thus Cain hated his brother, by reaſon of the grace of God, becauſe his deedes were good, 1. Iohn 3.12. A great part of the ſufferings of Chriſt, ſtood in this, that he was mocked for his confidence in God, Pſalme 22.8. Matth. 27.43. The children of Bethel mocke Elizeus: firſt, for his perſon, calling him Balde pate: ſecondly, for the fauour of God ſhewed vpon Elias his maſter, in ſaying, Aſcend, bald pate: that is, *aſcend not to Bethel, but aſcend to heauen as Elias did. And this prophane ſcorning hee curſed in the name of God, 2. Kin. 2.23. The like ſcorning is vſed among vs at this day. For the practiſe of that religion which ſtands by the law of God, and the good lawes of this land, is nicke-named with termes of Preciſeneſ, and Purity. A thing much to be lamented: for this bewraies that there is a great want of the grace of God among vs. Therefore take heede of it.

*Iuſt. in quæſt.

30. But what ſaith the Scripture: put out the bond-woman, and her ſonne: for the ſonne of the bond-woman ſhall not bee heire with the ſonne of the free-woman.

The ſecond anſwer to the former obiection, is in theſe words, that they which hate the children of promiſe, ſhall at length be caſt out of the houſe of God.

Obie. I. Theſe words, caſt out the bond-woman are the words of Sara to Abraham: therfore they are not the words of Scripture. Anſwer. The wordes were vttered by Sara, but they were afterward approoued by GOD, Geneſis 21.12. and thus they are the voyce of Scripture.

Obie. II. Sara is commended for her ſubiection to Abraham, 1. Pet. 3.6. yet here ſhee ſpeakes imperiouſly, caſt out the bond-woman. Anſw. Shee ſpeakes this, not as a priuate woman, but as the voice and mouth of GOD, and that (no doubt) by inſtinct from God. And therefore the words ſhe vttereth, are to be eſteemed as the commandement of God. This her caſe is extraordinarie, and not to be followed.

The vſe. I. All carnall hypocrites, mockers of the grace of God, ſhal be caſt forth of Gods family, though for a time they beare a ſway therein. This is the ſentence of GOD. Let vs therefore repent of our mocking, and hereafter become louers of the grace of God as Chriſt was, Marke 19.17.

II. Conſolation: the perſecution of the people of God ſhall not be perpetuall. For the perſecuting bond-woman, and her ſonne muſt be caſt out. The rod of the wicked ſhall not reſt vpon the lot of the righteous, Pſal. 125.3. This is our comfort.

III. All iuſticiarie people, and perſons that looke to bee ſaued and iuſtified before God by the law, and the workes of the lawe, either in whole, or in part, are caſt out of the church of God, and haue no part in the kingdome of heauen. The caſting out of Agar and Iſmael, is a figure of the reiection of all ſuch. Behold here the voyce of God caſting downe from heauen the greateſt part of the earth, the Turk, the Iew, the obſtinate Papiſt, with the ſtepmother, the Romiſh church.

31. Then brethren, we are not children of the ſeruant, but of the freewoman.

The concluſion of the whole Argument following directly from the 27. verſe. If wee be children of the promiſe, then are we children of the free-woman, and not of the bond-woman, and conſequently we are iuſtified and ſaued without works of the law, by the meere grace of God, cauſing vs by faith to reſt on the promiſe of God, whoſe ſubſtance and foundation is Chriſt.

CHAP. V.

1 Stand faſt therefore in the libertie wherewith Chriſt hath made vs free, and be not intangled againe with the yoke of bondage.

THeſe words, are a repetition of the principal concluſion of the whole Epiſtle. Which was on this manner: I Paul am called to teach, and my doctrine is true: therefore ye did euill to depart from it, and your dutie was to haue ſtoode vnto it.

Further, they are collected and inferred vpon the concluſion of the laſt argument vſed in the laſt Chapter, thus: Yee are children of the freewoman: and therefore ye are free: & therefore ye ſhould hold faſt your liberty.

In the words, 2. maine points of doctrine are propounded. The firſt is, that by nature wee are all intangled with the yoake of bondage. For the better conceiuing of this, I will handle three points, the nature of this bondage, the ſigne of it, and the vſe.

Touching the nature of it. Our ſpirituall bondage ſtands in three things. The firſt, is bondage vnder ſinne, which Paul teacheth when he ſaith, I am carnall, ſolde vnder ſinne, Rom. 7. 14. Remember, that by ſin is meant originall ſinne, which hath two parts: Guiltineſſe in the firſt offence of Adam, which is imputed to all mankind; and the diſpoſition of all the powers of the ſoule to all manner of euill whatſoeuer. And this rebellious diſpoſition is like a leprouſie infecting the whole man: and it reignes like a tyrant ouer the ſoule of man, by tempting, inticing, and drawing him from one actuall ſinne to another, ſo as he can do nothing but ſinne, Rom. 7. 14.

The ſecond thing is obligation or ſubiection to all puniſhment both temporall and eternall. And it hath three parts. The firſt is, Bondage vnder Satan, who keepes vnrepentant ſinners in his ſnare according to his owne will, 2. Timot. 2. 26. hee rules in their hearts like a God, 2. Corint. 4. 4. and hath power to blinde them, and to harden their hearts, till he haue brought them to eternall death, Hebr. 2. 14. The ſecond is, bondage vnder an euill conſcience, which ſits in the hearts of offendours as an accuſer, and a terrible iudge, and lies like a wild beaſt at a mans doore, ready euer & anon to pluck out his throat, Gen. 4. 7. The third is, bondage vnder the wrath of God, & the feare of eternall death, Heb. 2. 15.

The third part of this bondage, is, the obligation to the ceremoniall law. It pertaines not to all mankind, but onely concernes the Iewes, to whom it was a yoake of bondage, Acts 15.

The ſigne of this bondage, whereby it may be diſcerned, is to keepe a courſe or practiſe in ſinning, Iohn 8. 34. Hee that commits ſinne, is a ſeruant of ſinne: or againe, a life led according to the cuſtome and faſhion of this world in the luſt of the fleſh, or the luſt of the eie (which is couetouſnes,) or in the pride of life, Epheſ. 2. 2. 1. Iohn 2. 16.

The vſe. We muſt learne to ſee, feele, acknowledge, and bewaile this bondage in our ſelues. Deliuerance belongs only to ſuch captiues, as know themſelues to be captiues, Luk. 4. 18. and labour vnder this bondage, Matth. 11. 28. Thus did Paul when he ſaith, I am ſold vnder ſinne: and, O miſerable man! who ſhall deliuer me from this body of death? To feele this bondage, is a ſtep out of it: and not to feele it, is to be plunged into it.

Secondly, wee muſt pray earneſtly for deliuerance. The dumbe creatures ſigh and trauell till they bee deliuered from their bondage: much more then muſt we doe it, Rom. 8. 22.

Thirdly, we muſt learne to deteſt whatſoeuer is of our ſelues: becauſe it wholly tends to bondage.

Laſtly, we muſt be content with any affliction that God laies on vs, though it be lingring ſickeneſſe, pouerty, impriſonment, baniſhment. For God might worthily lay on vs all ſhame and confuſion: becauſe wee are by nature ſlaues of ſinne and Satan.

The ſecond main doctrine is, that by grace there is a liberty pertaining to the people of God. Here I conſider foure things: firſt, what this liberty is: ſecondly, the author of it: thirdly, the perſon to whom it belongs: fourthly, our duty touching this libertie.

For the firſt, chriſtian liberty is called, the good, or commoditie of Chriſtians, Rom. 14. 16. It is a ſpirituall right or condition, loſt by Adam, and reſtored by Chriſt. I ſay, Spirituall, becauſe it pertaines to the conſcience. The vſe indeede of our liberty is in outward things, as meate, drinke, apparell, &c. but the libertie it ſelfe is in the conſcience. And thus it differs from ciuill libertie, which ſtands in the mouing of the body, in the choice of bodily actions, and in the free vſe of our goods.

Chriſtian liberty hath two parts, a Deliuerance from miſerie, and Freedome in good things.

Deliuerance hath foure parts. The firſt is a Deliuerance from the curſe of the Lawe for the breach thereof, Rom. 8. 1. There is no condemnation to them that are in Chriſt. And this comes to paſſe, becauſe there is a tranſlation made of the curſe from our perſons to the perſon of Chriſt, Galat. 3. 13.

The ſecond deliuerance is from the obligation of the law, wherby it binds vs to bring perfect righteouſneſſe in our owne perſons for the attainement of euerlaſting life, according to the tenour thereof, Doe this, and liue. And this deliuerance is procured, becauſe there is a tranſlation made of the fulfilling of the Lawe, from our perſons to the perſon of our Sauiour Chriſt.

From theſe two deliuerances ariſeth the pacification of the conſcience, partly for our iuſtification, and partly for our conuerſation.

Touching Iuſtification: A ſinner in his humiliation and conuerſion hath by this doctrine a Libertie without reſpect to his owne workes, or to his owne fulfilling of the Law, to reſt on the meere mercie of God for the forgiueneſſe of his ſinnes, and the ſaluation of his ſoule, and to appeale from the throane of diuine Iuſtice, to the throne of Grace, and to oppoſe the merit of Chriſt againſt the wrath and iudgement of God. And this hath beene alwayes the helpe of the godly in their diſtreſſe, reade 2. Chron. 33. 12. Ezra 9. Dan. 9. Pſal. 32. 51, 130, 143. Conſider the example of the Publican, and the prodigall ſonne, who condemne themſelues, and make their appeale to the court of mercie and grace.

Here ſome man may ſay, how ſhall I know that I am freed from the rigour of the lawe, and from the curſe thereof? Anſ. Thou muſt firſt ſet thy ſelfe at the barre of Gods iudgement: and there muſt thou arraigne, accuſe, and condemne thy ſelfe: this done, thou muſt vſe thy libertie, and make thine appeale to Gods mercie and grace for pardon, by asking, ſeeking, knocking: and thus at length ſhalt thou be reſolued touching thy deliuerance.

Moreouer, touching Conuerſation, our cōſciences are ſetled thus: In that we are freeed from the rigour of the law, God in mercie accepts the will and indeauour to beleeue, repent, and obey, for faith, repentance, obedience. He ſpares them that feare him, as a father ſpares his childe when he indeauours to doe that which he can. Mal. 3. 17. The law requires perfect obedience at our hands: yet God of his mercie lookes more at the will to obey, then the perfection of obedience. This muſt be a ſtay to our mindes, when we ſee more corruption, then grace in our ſelues, and our obedience tainted with many ſpots of diſobedience.

The third deliuerance, is from the obſeruation of the Ceremoniall law of Moſes, Col. 2. 16. And hence ariſeth an other deliuerance from the bondage of humane Traditions, as Paul ſaith, If ye be dead with Chriſt from the Elements of the world, why are ye burdened with traditions? Col. 2. 20.

The fourth deliuerance, is from vnder the tyranny and dominion of ſinne. Rom. 6. 14. Let not ſinne haue dominion ouer you. For ye are not vnder the law, but vnder grace. In the firſt conuerſion of a ſinner, Originall ſin receiues his deadly wound, and the dominion thereof is diminiſhed according to the meaſure of grace receiued.

The ſecond part of Chriſtian libertie, is a Freedome in good things: and it is foure-fold. The firſt, is a freedome in the voluntarie ſeruice of God. Luk. 1. 74. We are deliuered from our enemies, that we may ſerue God in righteouſneſſe and holineſſe before him all the daies of our liues without feare. Paul ſaith, that the law is not giuen to the righteous man, 1. Tim. 1. 9. becauſe he is a law to himſelfe, and freely does good duties, as if there were no law to binde him. The cauſe of this freedome, is the gift and donation of the free ſpirit of God. Therfore Dauid praies, Stabliſh me with thy free ſpirit. Pſal. 5. 1. And Paul ſaith, Where the ſpirit is, there is libertie. 2. Cor. 3. 17. And, The ſpirit of life which is in Chriſt (is a Law to vs, and) frees vs from the power of ſinne, and death.

It may be obiected, that this freedome in the voluntarie ſeruice of God, is bondage. For Chriſt ſaith, Matth. 11. 29. Take my yoke vpon you. And we are ſtraightly bound to the obedience of the law of God, as Adam was by creation, nay more ſtraightly, by reaſon of our redemption by Chriſt. Anſ. The more we are bound to obedience, the freer we are: becauſe the ſeruice of God is not bondage, but perfect libertie.

The ſecond freedome, is in the free vſe of all the creatures of God. Tit. 1. 15. To the pure, all things are pure. Rom. 14. 14. And the reaſon is, becauſe the dominion ouer the creatures, loſt by Adam, is reſtored by Chriſt, 1. Cor. 3. 22. And hence it is, that Paul calles the forbidding of marriage, and of meates, with obligation of conſcience, a doctrine of diuells. 1. Tim. 4. 1.

The third freedome, is a Liberty to come vnto God the Father in the name of Chriſt, and in prayer to be heard, Rom. 5. 2. Eph. 3. 12. Whereas according to our naturall condition, our ſinnes are a wall of partition betweene vs and God, and cauſe vs to flie from the preſence of God: and though we crie vnto God, and fill heauen and earth with our cries, ſo long as we are in our ſinnes, we are not heard of him.

The fourth freedome, is a Libertie to enter into heauen in the day of our death: Chriſt by his blood hauing made a way. Heb. 10. 19.

Thus we ſee what Chriſtian libertie is. The vſe followes. The Anabaptiſts gather hence, that among Chriſtians there muſt be no magiſtrats, for if there muſt be magiſtrates, they muſt haue power to make lawes beſide the lawes of God: but this power they haue not, becauſe Chriſtians haue a free vſe of all creatures of God by Chriſtian libertie. Anſw. We muſt diſtinguiſh betweene the libertie it ſelfe, and the vſe of it. And the Magiſtrates authoritie deales not with the libertie which is in the conſcience, but with the vſe of it: and he doth neither diminiſh nor aboliſh the vſe of any of the creatures, but reſtraines the abuſe, and moderates the ouer common vſe for the common good. Thus Magiſtracie and Chriſtian libertie may ſtand together: and the rather, becauſe libertie is in conſcience, and the Magiſtrates authority pertaines to the body.

Here is further comfort for all the godly: for euen by Chriſtian libertie, their conſciences are exempted from the power of all creatures, men, and Angels. 1. Cor. 7. 23. Ye are bought with a price, be not ſeruants of men, that is, let not your hearts and conſciences ſtand in ſubiection to the will of any man. Here then falles to the ground the Opinion of the Papiſts, namely, that the lawes and traditions of the Church binde conſcience as truly and certenly as the word of God. This doctrine is not of God, becauſe it is againſt Chriſtian libertie.

Obiect. I. Rom. 13. 5. Be ſubiect to the higher powers for conſcience. Anſw. Conſcience here is not in reſpect of the lawes of the Magiſtrate, but in reſpect of the law of God, that bids vs in conſcience to obey the law of the Magiſtrate.

Obiect. II. Heb. 13. 17. Obey them that haue the ouerſight of you, and be ſubiect. Anſ. We muſt be ſubiect to them: becauſe as Miniſters of God, they deliuer the word of God in the name of God vnto vs, and that word binds conſcience. Againe, the lawes which they make touching order and comelineſſe in the ſeruice of God, are to be obeyed for the auoiding of ſcandall and contempt.

Obiect. III. A thing indifferent vpon the commandement of the Magiſtrate, becomes neceſſarie. Anſw. It is true. But it muſt be obſerued, that neceſſitie is twofold; Externall, internall. And the lawe of the Magiſtrate makes a thing indifferent to bee neceſſarie onely in reſpect of externall neceſſity, for the auoiding of the contempt of authoritie, and for the auoiding of ſcandall. Otherwiſe the thing in it ſelfe is not neceſſarie, but remaines ſtill indifferent, and may be vſed, or not vſed, if contempt and ſcandall be auoided. The Apoſtles made a law, that the Gentiles ſhould abſtaine from ſtrangled and blood, & things offered to idols, Act.15.28. yet Paul ſaith afterward to the Corinthians, All things are lawfull, 1.Cor.10.23. and whatſoeuer is ſold in the ſhambles eate, and make no queſtion for conſcience ſake, v.25. becauſe their intent was not, that the law ſhould ſimply binde, but onely in the caſe of offence: and therfore where there was no offence to be feared, they leaue all men to their libertie.

Againe, here is an other comfort to al that beleeue in Chriſt, that nothing can hurt thē, and that no euill can befall them, Pſal.91.v.10. nay all things ſhall in the end turne to their good, though in reaſon and ſenſe they ſeeme hurtfull. To beleeue this one thing, is a ground of all true comfort.

The conſideration of this benefit of Chriſtian libertie, teacheth three duties. The firſt is, from our hearts to imbrace, loue, & maintaine Chriſtian religion, becauſe it is the meanes of this libertie. The ſecond is, carefully to ſearch the Scriptures: for they are as it were the Charter in which our liberties are contained. Thirdly, our Chriſtian libertie puts vs in minde to become vnfained ſeruants of God in the duties of faith, repentance, new obedience. Rom.6.22. For this ſeruice is our libertie.

The ſecond point is, touching the Author of this libertie, in theſe wordes, wherewith Chriſt hath made vs free. Chriſt then is the worker of this libertie, Ioh.8.36. he diſſolues the workes of the diuell 1.Ioh.3.8. he binds the ſtrong man, and caſts him out of his hold, Matth.12.29.

He procures this libertie by two meanes, by his merit, and by the efficacie of his ſpirit. The merit of his death, procures deliuerance from death, and it purchaſeth a right to life euerlaſting. The efficacie of his ſpirit aſſures vs of our adoption, and withall abates by little and little the ſtrength and power of ſinne.

The vſe. Hence we learne the greatneſſe and grieuouſneſſe of our ſpirituall bondage, becauſe there was none that could deliuer vs from it, but Chriſt by his death and paſſion. Hence therefore we are to take occaſion to acknowledge and bewaile this our moſt miſerable condition in our ſelues.

Secondly, the price that was paid for the procurement of our libertie, namely, the pretious blood of the immaculate lambe of God, ſhewes that the liberty it ſelfe is a thing moſt pretious and excellent, and ſo to bee eſteemed.

Thirdly, for this libertie we are to giue all praiſe and thankes to God. This did Paul at the remembrance of it. Rom.7.25. 1.Cor.15.57. And not to be thankfull is an height of wickedneſſe.

The third point is, concerning the perſons to whome this liberty belongs, and they are noted in theſe wordes, Stand ye faſt, he hath made vs free. Whereby Paul ſignifies himſelfe and the Galatians that beleeued in Chriſt. Beleeuers then are the perſons to whom this libertie belongs, Ioh.1.12. 1.Tim.4.3. And true beleeuers are thus to be diſcerned. They vſe the ordinarie meanes of grace and ſaluation, the word, and ſacraments: in the vſe of the meanes, they exerciſe themſelues in the ſpirituall exerciſes of inuocation and repentance: & in theſe exerciſes they bewaile their vnbeleefe, and ſtriue by al meanes to beleeue in Chriſt. As for them that conceiue a perſwaſion of Gods mercie without the meanes of ſaluation, and without the exerciſes of inuocation and repentance, they are not true beleeuers, but hypocrites.

When Paul ſaith, Chriſt hath made vs free, that is, me Paul, and you the Galatians, he teacheth that euery beleeuer muſt by his faith apply vnto himſelf the benefit of Chriſtian libertie. But to doe this well, is a matter of great difficultie. The Papiſts in their writings report our doctrine to be this: that a man muſt conceiue a perſwaſion that he is in the fauor of God, the adopted child of God: and that vpon this perſwaſion he hath the pardon of his ſinnes, and the benefit of Chriſtian libertie. But they abuſe vs in this as in many other things. For we teach that the Application of Chriſt and his benefits, is to be made by certaine degrees. The firſt is, to vſe the meanes of ſaluation, the word, praier, ſacraments: the ſecond is, to conſider and to grow to ſome feeling of our ſpirituall bondage: the third is, to will and deſire to beleeue in Chriſt, and to teſtifie this deſire by asking, ſeeking, knocking: the fourth is, a certen perſwaſion, or a certentie conceiued in minde of the mercie of God by meanes of the former deſire, according to the promiſe of God, Aske, and it ſhall be giuen vnto you. The fifth is an experience of the goodneſſe of God after long vſe of the meanes of ſaluation, and then vpon this experience followes the full perſwaſion of mercie and forgiueneſſe.

The fourth point, concernes the office of beleeuers, and that is, to ſtand faſt in their Chriſtian libertie, and in the doctrine of the Goſpel, which reueales this libertie. And by this, we in England are admoniſhed to ſtand faſt to the religion which is now by law eſtabliſhed among vs, and not to returne vnder the yoke of Popiſh bondage. For the Popiſh religion is flat againſt Chriſtian libertie, two waies. For our libertie which wee haue in Chriſt, frees vs from the law three waies, in reſpect of condemnation, in reſpect of compulſion to obedience, and in reſpect of iuſtification, (as Paul ſhewes at large in this Epiſtle:) and yet the Popiſh doctrine is, that we are to be iuſtified by the workes of the law. Againe, Chriſtian libertie frees our conſciences from the Traditions of men, Col. 2. 20. and yet the Popiſh religion bindes vs in conſcience to the Traditions of men: nay, it is nothing els but an heape of Traditions.

Here two things are to be conſidered, the manner of ſtanding, and the time. The manner, is ſignified in the very words. For to ſtand faſt, is to hold and maintaine our libertie with courage and conſtancy, whatſoeuer comes of it, as the ſouldier keepes his ſtanding, though it coſt him his life. We are readie to defend the libertie of our countrie euen with the hazard of our liues: much more are we to defend Chriſtian libertie with the loſſe of all that we inioy: ſinne muſt be reſiſted euen vnto blood. Heb. 12. 4. If men be fearefull, they muſt pray to God for the ſpirit of boldneſſe and courage: and if God vouchſafe not this gift when opportunitie is offered, they may withdraw themſelues, and by flying preſerue their libertie.

The time of ſtanding, is the euill day, that is, the day of triall. Eph. 6. 13. And then to ſtand faſt, is a matter of great difficultie. And for this cauſe we are before hand to prepare our ſelues by obſeruing theſe rules following. Firſt, we muſt labour that religion be not onely in minde, & memorie, but alſo be rooted in the affection of our hearts, ſo as we loue it, reioyce in it, & eſteeme it aboue all things. Secondly, we muſt not onely be hearers of the word of God; but alſo doers of it in the exerciſes of faith, repentance, new obedience. Thirdly, we muſt ioyne with our religion, the ſoundneſſe of good conſcience: for if conſcience faile, we cannot be ſound in our religion. Laſtly, we muſt pray to God with al manner of praier and ſupplication for all things needfull, Eph. 6. 18.

2. Behold, I Paul ſay vnto you, that if ye be circumciſed, Chriſt ſhall profit you nothing.

Theſe words, are a reaſon of the former concluſion, thus: If ye be circumciſed, and goe backe from your Chriſtian profeſſion, Chriſt ſhall profit you nothing: therefore ſtand faſt.

In the words I conſider a ſentence, and the proofe of it. The ſentence, If ye be circumciſed, &c. the proofe, I Paul ſay vnto you. For the better vnderſtanding of the ſentence, Circumciſion muſt here bee conſidered according to the circumſtance of time, three waies. Before Chriſt it was a ſacrament, and a ſeale of the righteouſneſſe of faith, Rom. 4. 11. after the death of Chriſt, till the deſtruction of the Temple, it was a dead ceremonie, yet ſometime vſed as a thing indifferent. After the deſtruction of the Temple, when the Church of the new Teſtament was planted among the Gentiles, it was a deadly ceremonie, and ceaſed to be indifferent: and in this laſt reſpect Paul ſaith, If ye be circumciſed, &c. Againe, circumciſion muſt be conſidered according to the opinion which the falſe Apoſtles had of it: now they put their confidence in it, and made it a meritorious cauſe of their ſaluation, and ioyned it with Chriſt. The words therefore carrie this ſenſe: If ye will be circumciſed, with this opinion, that circumciſion ſhall be vnto you a meritorious cauſe of your ſaluation, Chriſt ſhall profit you nothing.

The vſe. Hence it followes, that the doctrine of iuſtification by workes, is an errour ouerturning the foundation of religion, which whoſoeuer obſtinately maintaineth, cannot be ſaued. It will be ſaid, this is true of ceremoniall workes, but not of morall workes. Anſw. Yea euen of morall. For that which Paul ſaith here of circumciſion, he ſpeaks generally of the whole law, verſ. 4. Ye are aboliſhed from Chriſt whoſoeuer are iuſtified by the law. And circumciſion muſt be conſidered as an obligation to the obedience of the whole law. Againe, it may be ſaid, this is true of the workes of nature, but not of workes of grace. Anſw. Yea euen of workes of grace: for the Galatians were regenerate, and therefore looked not to be iuſtified, and ſaued, by the workes of nature, but by workes of grace.

Secondly, hence we gather, that to adde any thing to the paſſion, as a meritorious cauſe of our iuſtification, and ſaluation, is to make Chriſt vnprofitable. For he muſt be a perfect Sauiour, or no Sauiour: he admits neither partner, nor deputie in the worke of our redemption. And the grace of God admits no mixture or compoſition with any thing. Grace is no grace, vnleſſe it be freely giuen euery way. Therefore the Popiſh religion is a damnable religion: becauſe with the merit and ſatisfaction of Chriſt, it ioynes humane merits and ſatisfactions, in the caſe of our iuſtification. It may be alleadged, that the Popiſh religion maintaines all the articles concerning Chriſt, as we doe. Anſw. It doth ſo in word: but withall it addes to the foreſaid articles the doctrine of humane merits and ſatisfactions, which make voide the death of Chriſt. Againe, Papiſts alleadge that it is the glorie of Chriſt, that he merits for vs, and withall makes vs to merit for our ſelues; as it is the glorie of an Emperour to make other kings vnder him. Anſw. It is not the glorie of the Emperour to make kings as partners with him, in his kingdome. And workes ſet vp as meritorious cauſes of ſaluation, diſhonour Chriſt, for they make him vnprofitable, as Paul here teacheth.

Popiſh religion therefore is in no wiſe, in any place to be tollerated, where it may be aboliſhed: but it is to be wiſhed that it were baniſhed forth of towne and countrey: and ſtudents are to be warned with great circumſpection to reade Popiſh writers. For no good can be looked for of that religion that makes Chriſt vnprofitable.

Laſtly, we are here taught to content our ſelues with Chriſt alone, and with his workes, merits, and ſatisfactions. For in him we are complete. Col. 2. 10.

The confirmation of the ſentence followeth, I Paul ſay it: therefore it is ſo. This kinde of reaſoning may not ſeeme ſtrange: for the Apoſtles in writing and preaching, had the diuine and infallible aſſiſtance of the ſpirit, ſo as they could not erre. This muſt be held as a Principle in religion: and beeing denied, there is no certentie of the Bible.

3. For I teſtifie againe to euery man that is circumciſed, that he is bound to keepe the whole law.

4. Ye are aboliſhed from Chriſt, whoſoeuer are iuſtified by the law, ye are fallen from grace.

The meaning. Paul ſaith, I teſtifie againe: becauſe he hath ſpoken thus much in effect before. Gal. 3. 10.

That is circumciſed] who is of opinion of the falſe Apoſtles, that will be circumciſed, and looke for iuſtification thereby.

Bound to the whole law] that is, to the whole ceremoniall law, to the iudiciall law, and to the whole morall law. And further, bound in reſpect of iuſtification, and life, to doe all things in the law. For he that will be iuſtified by one act of the law, is bound to performe the reſt for his iuſtification.

Aboliſhed from Chriſt] that is, Chriſt is become an idle and emptie Chriſt vnto you.

Whoſoeuer are iuſtified by the law] that is, are of opinion that they are to be iuſtified by the workes of the law. For indeede a ſinner cannot be iuſtified by the lawe, but onely in his owne falſe opinion.

Grace] that is, the loue, and fauour of God.

The reſolution. The 3. verſe is a confirmation of the reaſon in the 2. verſe, and it may be framed thus: He which is bound to keepe the whole lawe, hath no part in Chriſt: hee which is circumciſed, is bound to keepe the whole law: therfore he which is circumciſed, hath no part in Chriſt. The 4. verſe is a repetition of the 2. verſe, with a declaration thereof: for he ſhewes what he meanes by circumciſion, namely, iuſtification by circumciſion, & conſequently by the whole law. And therefore when he ſaid, If ye be circumciſed, he changeth his ſpeech ſaying, Whoſoeuer is iuſtified by the law. Againe, leſt men might thinke A it a ſmall matter to be aboliſhed from Chriſt, he ſhewes that it is indeed to fall from grace.

The vſe. Theſe verſes are as it were a thunderbolt againſt all Poperie. And firſt of all, I vrge the argument of Paul againſt the Popiſh Church, and againſt the Popiſh religion: If ye be iuſtified by the lawe, ye are aboliſhed from Chriſt, and fallen from Chriſt. Anſwer is made, that the words are to be vnderſtood of ſuch workes of the law, as are from nature, and goe before faith: and not of ſuch workes as are from grace, and follow faith: for ſuch workes (they ſay) are from Chriſt, and ſtand with him. I anſwer, the words of Paul are to be vnderſtood of all workes of the law, whe- B ther they be from nature, or from grace. For this Epiſtle of Paul was written about ſixe yeares after the conuerſion of the Galatians: therefore they were and had beene long regenerate perſons: now men regenerate looke not to be iuſtified by worker of nature, but by good workes, which are workes of grace. And Paul ſaith, Eph. 2. 10. We are not ſaued by workes which God hath ordained, that we ſhould walke in: and theſe are the beſt workes that are or can be. Againe, Tit. 3. 5. Of his mercie he ſaued vs, and not of workes of righteouſneſſe.

By this text we further ſee, that we and the Papiſts differ not about circumſtances, vnleſſe Grace and Chriſt be circumſtances. Againe, we ſee that the Church of Rome is in- C deede no Church: becauſe by maintaining iuſtification by workes, it is aboliſhed from Chriſt, and fallen from grace.

Againe, I vrge Pauls argument againſt them, on this manner. He which is debter to the whole law, hath no part in Chriſt: hee which is iuſtified by workes, is debter to the whole law: therefore he which is iuſtified by workes, hath no part in Chriſt. Let them anſwer, if they can.

I turne the ſame argument another way, thus: He which is iuſtified by works, is bound to keepe the whole law: but no man can keep the whole law: therefore no man can be iuſtified by workes.

They anſwer to the minor, by making a D double fulfilling of the law, one for this life, the other for the life to come: and both in their kinde perfect. The fulfilling of the law for the time of this life (they ſay) it is to loue God aboue all creatures in truth: and that he which doth thus much, fulfils the law, and is no offender. Hereupon they infer, that works may be anſwerable to the law, and bee oppoſed to the iudgement of God. And for this doctrine, they alleadge S. Auguſtine. I anſwer againe, that Paul in this place takes it for a confeſſed truth, that no man can fulfill the law: and he vrgeth it as a great inconuenience, that any man ſhould be bound to keepe the whole law. And before he had ſaid, He which is of the workes of the law, is curſed. Gal. 3. 10. which could not be, if there were a fulfilling of the law for the time of this life. As for

A for Auguſtine, it is true he makes two fulfillings of the law, and one of them for the time of this life: but this he ſaith is imperfect; and this imperfection he makes to be a ſin, wheras the Papiſts of our time teach, that men may fulfill the lawe for the time of this life without ſinne.

Where Paul ſaith, If ye be circumciſed: marke how the falſe Apoſtles abuſe circumciſion. It is by diuine inſtitution a ſeale of the righteouſneſſe of faith, and they make it a meritorious cauſe of ſaluation. It is indeede rather Gods worke, then our worke: and they make it their owne worke, and that meritorious before God. Like doe the Papiſts at this day. Baptiſme is a ſigne and ſeale of Gods B mercie, by diuine inſtitution: and they turne it into a phyſicall cauſe which containes and conferres grace. In like ſort they turne the workes of the ſpirit, almes, prayer, faſting, contrition; yea their own traditions, confeſſion, ſatisfaction, and ſuch like, into meritorious cauſes of iuſtification, and life. And this is the faſhion of deceiuers, to retaine the names of holy things, but not to retaine the right vſe of them.

As here we ſee Circumciſion was an obligation to the keeping of the whole law in the old Teſtament: ſo is baptiſme in the new, an obligation or bond, whereby we haue bound our ſelues to liue according to all the lawes of God. Matth. 28. 19, 20. This diſcouers the A-C theiſme and vnbeleefe of perſons baptiſed in theſe our daies: for few there be that thinke vpon, and performe this obligation.

We are further to obſerue the condition of the law. It is wholly copulatiue. All the parts of it are linked one to another. Hee that is bound to one commaundement, is bound to all: he that keepes one indeede, keepes all: he that breakes one, in reſpect of the diſpoſition of his heart, is a breaker of all, Iam. 2. 10. he that makes no conſcience to keepe ſome one commaundement, if occaſion be offered, will breake any. Hence it followes, that true regeneration is that which is a reformation and change according to the whole law of God, & containes in it the ſeedes of all good duties. D Chriſt ſaith, He that is waſhed is all cleane, Ioh. 13. 10. Ioſias turned to God according to the whole law. Zacharie and Elizabeth walke in all the commaundements of God without reproofe. Luke 1. Dauid ſaith, He ſhall not be confounded, when he hath reſpect to all the commaundements of God, Pſal. 119. 6. On the contrarie, he which hath many excellent things in him, if he liue in the manifeſt breach of ſome one commandement, is found in none, nay indeed he is guilty of all. Herod did many good things: and yet all was nothing: becauſe he liued in inceſt. Mark. 6. 20. The diuell is able to bring a man to perdition as well by one ſinne, as by many.

Whereas Paul ſaith, If ye be iuſtified by the law, ye are aboliſhed from Chriſt: Firſt, I gather, A that the Law and the Goſpel are not one in ſubſtance of doctrine, as the Papiſts teach: for they ſay the Goſpel is nothing but the law made more perfect, and plaine: which if it were true, a man might be iuſtified both by Chriſt and the law, which Paul ſaith cannot be. Secondly, I gather hence, that it is a meere deuice of mans wit, to ſay that Chriſt by his death and paſſion merited, that wee ſhould merit by our owne workes our iuſtification and ſaluation. For if this were true, that the merit of our workes, were the fruit of Chriſts paſſion, Paul would not haue ſaid that iuſtification by the law, ſhould aboliſh Chriſt vnto vs. For the cauſe and the effect, both ſtand together: whereas Chriſts merit, and the B merit of our workes, agree euen as fire and water. And no maruell. For the reaſon why Chriſt meriteth, is the perſonall vnion of the godhead with the manhood: which vnion, becauſe it is not to bee found in any meere man, neither is there any true and proper merit to be found.

Whereas Paul ſaith, Ye are fallen from grace, ſome gather, that the children of God may fall quite from the fauour of God. Anſ. Men are ſaid to be vnder grace, two waies. Firſt, in the iudgement of infallibilitie: and thus onely the Elect are vnder the grace of God. Secondly, in the iudgement of Chriſtian charitie: and thus al that profeſſe Chriſt, (though indeede hypocrites,) are vnder the grace of C God. And in this ſenſe Paul ſaith, that the whole Church of Galatia is vnder the grace of God. And they are ſaid to fall from grace, not becauſe all were indeed vnder the fauour of God, and at length caſt out of it: but becauſe God makes it manifeſt to men, that they were neuer in the fauour of God. Thus Chriſts enemies are ſaid to be blotted out of the booke of life, Pſal. 69. 28. when God makes it manifeſt that their names were neuer written there. Secondly, I anſwer, that Paul ſpeakes this not abſolutely, but vpon condition, If ye will be iuſtified by the law. And therefore verſ. 10. he ſaith, that he is perſwaded better things of them.

Laſtly, here we ſee it is falſe that euery man D ſhall be ſaued by his religion: for he that is aboliſhed from Chriſt, is quite out of the fauour of God. And therefore no religion, but that which is truly Chriſtian, ſaueth.

5. For we in the ſpirit by faith waite for the hope of righteouſneſſe.

6. For in Ieſus Chriſt neither circumciſion nor vncircumciſion auaileth any thing, but faith which worketh by loue.

The meaning. We] I Paul, the reſt of the Apoſtles, and, all other Chriſtian churches. In ſpirit] that is, in the powers of the ſoule ſanctified and renewed. In this ſenſe Paul ſaith that the true circumciſion is that which is in the heart, in ſpirit, Rom. 2. 29. and Chriſt ſaith, that the true worſhip of God is in ſpirit, Ioh. 4. 24. and that ſpirit is here taken in this ſenſe, it is manifeſt, becauſe it is oppoſed to circumciſion which is in the fleſh.

By faith we wait] Faith apprehends the promiſe, and thereby brings forth hope: and faith by meanes of hope makes them that beleeue to waite. Hope of righteouſneſſe] that is, ſaluation or life eternall, which is the fruit of righteouſneſſe, Tit.2.13 or againe, righteouſneſſe hoped for. Righteouſneſſe indeede is imputed to them that beleeue, and that in this life, yet the fruition and the full reuelation therof is reſerued to the life to come, when Chriſt our righteouſneſſe ſhall appeare, and when the effect of righteouſneſſe, namely ſanctification, ſhall be accompliſhed in vs. Rom.8.23; 1.Ioh.3.2.

The ſenſe then is this. All the Apoſtles and Chriſtian churches with one conſent in ſpirit by meanes of their faith, waite for the full reuelation of their imputed righteouſneſſe, and for euerlaſting life: whereas the falſe Apoſtles place their righteouſneſſe in circumciſion of the fleſh, and looke to haue the fruition of it in this life.

v.6. In Chriſt] that is, in the Church, kingdome, or religion of Chriſt. 2.Cor.5.17. If any be in Chriſt, that is, if any be a Chriſtian, he is a new creature.

Vncircumciſion] that is, the condition and workes of men vncircumciſed.

Auaileth any thing] is of no vſe, reſpect, or acceptation with God. Faith working] faith effectuall in duties of loue.

The reſolution. Theſe words containe a ſecond reaſon, where Paul confirmes the former concluſion, and it may be framed thus. That thing which makes vs waite for the hope of righteouſneſſe, that iuſtifies: not circumciſion, but faith makes vs waite for the hope of righteouſneſſe: therefore not circumciſion but faith iuſtifies. The propoſition is omitted: the minor is in the 5.v. And it is confirmed by two arguments. The firſt, is the conſent of all churches, We waite. The ſecond, is taken from the propertie of faith in the ſixt verſe, thus: It is faith, and not circumciſion that auailes before God: therefore faith and not circumciſion makes vs waite.

Againe, in theſe two verſes, Paul meetes with an Obiection, which may bee framed thus: If ye aboliſh circumciſion and the ceremoniall law, ye aboliſh the exerciſes of religion. The anſwer is, in ſtead of them we haue other exerciſes in our ſpirit, namely, the inward exerciſes of faith, hope, and loue. The vſe. In the 5. verſe, foure thing are to be conſidered. The firſt is, who waits? Paul ſaith, we waite. Before he hath iuſtified his doctrine by the Scriptures, now he addes the conſent of the churches. Here then we ſee what is the office of all faithfull diſpenſers of the word, namely, to declare ſuch doctrines as are founded in Scriptures, and approoued by the cōſent of the true Church of God. Paul an Apoſtle that could not erre, reſpected conſent, much more are all ordinarie Miniſters to doe it.

Againe, it is the office of all chriſtian people to maintaine & defend all ſuch doctrines and opinions as are founded in the Scriptures, and ratified by the conſent of the true churches of God, and no other. This to doe, is to walke in the way of vnity and peace: and to doe otherwiſe is to walke in the way of ſchiſme and hereſie.

The ſecond point is, what is waited for? Paul ſaith, the reuelation of righteouſneſſe, and eternall ſaluation. Here I obſerue, that there is no iuſtification by the obſeruation of the law: and I prooue it thus: The righteouſneſſe whereby a ſinner is iuſtified, is apprehended by faith, and expected by hope: but if righteouſneſſe were by the law, men ſhould haue the fruition of their righteouſnes in this life, and conſequently the hope thereof ſhould ceaſe.

Secondly, here is comfort for the godly. They complaine of the want of ſanctification: but they are to know, that in this life they ſhall neuer feele righteouſneſſe, as they feele ſinne; here they muſt hunger and thirſt after righteouſneſſe, liuing in ſome want of it. If we haue the firſt fruites of the ſpirit, the hatred of our ſinne, the purpoſe of not ſinning, the feare of God, and ſuch like, we muſt content our ſelues, and waite for the fruition of further grace till the life to come.

Thirdly, we muſt become waiters for the mercie of God, and for life euerlaſting, Gen. 49.18. Iud.v.11. For this cauſe we muſt do as they doe which waite and attend for ſome great benefit: wee muſt daily ſtand with our ſupplications knocking at the mercie gate to the death: and wee muſt daily prepare our ſelues againſt the day of death, and it muſt be welcome vnto vs: for then is the end of all our waiting and attending.

The third point is, by what are we to waite? Paul ſaith, We waite by faith. Hence it followes, that faith brings with it a ſpeciall certentie of the mercie of God, and of life euerlaſting. For men vſe not to waite for the things whereof they are vncerten. Waiting preſuppoſeth certentie. The papiſts therefore that make ſpeciall hope, ſhould alſo make ſpeciall faith.

The laſt point is, where is this waiting? Paul ſaith, in ſpirit. Here obſerue, that all the exerciſes of Chriſtian religion, are to be in the ſpirit. God muſt be worſhipped in ſpirit, Ioh. 4.24. Rom.1.9. The heart muſt be rent, and not the garment, Ioel 2. The inward motions of the ſpirit, are of themſelues the worſhip of God, whereas our words and deedes are not ſimply, but ſo farreforth as they are founded in the renewed motions of the heart. Men in our daies thinke they doe God high ſeruice, if they come to church, heare Gods word, and ſay ſome few prayers. Indeed theſe things are not to be condemned: yet are they not ſufficient, vnleſſe withall we bring vnto God a renued ſpirit, endued with faith, hope, loue.

In the 6. verſe, Paul propounds three concluſions. The firſt is this: that externall and bodily priuiledges are of no vſe & moment in the kingdome of Chriſt. Paul ſaith, 1.Tim. 4.8. Bodily exerciſe profiteth little; and that godlineſſe is profitable for all things. It was a great priuiledge to bee familiarly acquainted with Chriſt, and to haue eaten & drunk with him: yet is it of no vſe in the kingdome of Chriſt. For of ſuch Chriſt ſaith, Luk. 13.26. Depart from me ye workers of iniquity. It was a great priuiledge to bee allied to Chriſt in reſpect of blood, yet in the kingdome of Chriſt, it is of no vſe: and therefore Chriſt ſaith, Hee that doth the will of my Father, is my brother, ſiſter, & mother, Mar. 3.33. To conceiue and beare Chriſt, was a great honour to the virgin Marie: yet was ſhee not by this meanes a member of the kingdome of Chriſt, but by her faith in him. And if ſhee had not borne him in her heart, as well as ſhee bare him in her wombe, ſhee had not bin ſaued. To prophecie or preach, and that in the name of Chriſt, is a great dignity: and yet many hauing this prerogatiue ſhall be condemned, Mat. 7.22. It may bee alleadged, that ſome outward exerciſes, as Baptiſme, and the Lords ſupper, are of great vſe in the Church of Chriſt. I anſwer, the outward Baptiſme is nothing without the inward. Not the waſhing of the fleſh, but the ſtipulation of a good conſcience ſaueth, 1.Pet. 3.18. Circumciſion is profitable, if thou keepe the law, Rom. 2.35.

By this wee are taught, not to eſteeme of mens religion by their riches, & external dignities. For the faſhion of the world is, if a man haue riches and honour, to commend him for a wiſe, vertuous, and godly man. This is fooliſhly to haue faith in reſpect of perſons, Iam. 2.1.

Secondly, by this we are taught to moderate our affections in reſpect of all outward things, neither ſorrowing too much for them, nor ioying too much in them, 1.Cor. 7.30.

The ſecond concluſion. Faith is of great vſe & acceptation in the kingdom of Chriſt. By it, firſt our perſons, and then our actions pleaſe God: and without it, nothing pleaſeth God. It is the firſt and the greateſt honour we can doe to God, to giue credence to his word: and from this flowes all other obedience, to all other commandements. Hence we learne, Firſt, that wee muſt labour to conceiue faith aright in our hearts, by the vſe of the right meanes, the word, prayer, ſacraments: as alſo in, and by the exerciſes of ſpirituall inuocation, and repentance. This beeing done, wee muſt reſt vpon the bare word and teſtimony of God, without, and againſt ſenſe and feeling: and quiet our hearts therein, both in life and death.

Secondly, faith in Chriſt muſt raigne and beare ſway in our hearts, and haue the command ouer reaſon, will, affection, luſt. And by it whatſoeuer wee doe or ſuffer, ſpecially the maine actions of our liues, are to be ordered and diſpoſed.

Laſtly, it is a thing to bee bewailed, that the common faith of our daies is but a ceremoniall faith, conceiued without the ordinary meanes, and ſeuered from the exerciſes of inuocation and repentance.

The third concluſion is, that true faith workes by loue. Hence the Papiſts gather, that loue is the forme and life of faith, not becauſe it makes faith to bee faith; but becauſe it makes it to bee a true faith, a good faith, a liuely faith. But this their doctrine is falſe and erronious. For faith is the cauſe of loue, and loue is the fruit of faith, 1.Tim. 1.5. Loue out of a pure heart, good conſcience, and faith vnfained. Now euery cauſe as it is a cauſe, hath his force and efficacie in it ſelfe, and receiues no force or efficacie from his effect. Secondly, true faith is liuely and effectuall in it ſelfe, and hath a peculiar forme of his owne, and that is a certaine power to apprehend Chriſt in the promiſe. For in faith, there are two thinges, knowledge, and apprehenſion, which ſome call application, or ſpeciall affiance; which affiance, becauſe the Papiſts cut off, they are conſtrained to make a ſupply by loue. Thirdly, the operation of faith (according to the doctrine of the Papiſt) is to prepare and diſpoſe a ſinner to his future iuſtification. Now, if this operation be from loue, then loue is before iuſtification; and that cannot bee: becauſe (as they teach) iuſtification ſtands in loue. Loue therefore is not the forme of faith. They alleadge for themſelues this very text in hand, where it is ſaid, Faith worketh by loue: or (as they tranſlate it) faith is acted and mooued by loue. Anſ. The meaning of the text is, that faith is effectuall in it ſelfe: and that it ſhewes and puts forth his efficacie by loue, as by the fruite thereof. And it cannot hence bee gathered, that faith is acted and mooued by loue as by a formall cauſe.

Againe, they alleadge, Iam. 2.26. As the bodie is dead without the ſpirit: ſo is faith without workes. Anſwer. 1. The ſoule of man is not the forme of his bodie, but of the whole man. 2. Spirit may as well ſignifie breath, or breathing, as the ſoule. And ſo it carries a fit ſenſe. For as the bodie without breath is dead, and it ſhewes it ſelfe to be aliue by breathing: ſo faith that is without workes, is dead, and it ſhewes it ſelfe to bee aliue by workes. 3. There is a falſe compoſition of the words to bee conſidered: faith that is without workes is dead, is true: but to ſay, faith is dead without workes (as though workes gaue life to faith) is falſe; and not the meaning of Saint Iames, but the former onely.

Againe, the Papiſts hence gather, that faith and loue are ioynt cauſes in the iuſtification of a ſinner, and that faith worketh by loue in iuſtifying men before God. But this Interpretation is againſt the whole ſcope of this Epiſtle, in which Paul prooues that there is no iuſtification by the law, c. 5. v. 4. and therfore no iuſtification by loue. Againe, Paul ſaith, Rom. 3. 21. that righteouſneſſe is reuealed without the law: and therefore without loue. And againe, that wee are made the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt, as Chriſt is made our ſinne, namely, by imputation, and therefore not by infuſion of loue, 2. Cor. 5. 21. Thirdly, faith iuſtifies by apprehending Chriſt in the promiſe, and therefore not by loue. The conſequent I prooue thus: Faith and loue are two hands of our ſoule. Faith is an hand that laies holde of Chriſt, and it doth (as it were) pull him & his benefits into our ſoules. But loue is an hand of another kinde, for it ſerues not to receiue in, but to giue out the good it hath, and to communicate it ſelfe vnto others. Therefore faith cannot iuſtifie by loue. Laſtly, loue in order of nature followes iuſtification, and therfore it doth not iuſtifie. For firſt of all, faith laies holde on Chriſt: then followes iuſtification: vpon iuſtification followes ſanctification, and loue is a part of ſanctification.

They vrge for themſelues the wordes of Paul, that faith workes by loue. Anſwer. Paul doth not ſhew in this verſe, what iuſtifieth, but what are the exerciſes of godlineſſe in which Chriſtians muſt be occupied. And he doth not ſhew how faith iuſtifieth, but how it may be diſcerned to be true faith, namely, by loue.

Secondly, they obiect, that faith and loue are alwaies ioyned: and therfore ioyntly work in iuſtification. Anſ. They are ioyned in one perſon or ſubiect; and they are ioyned in the exerciſe of Chriſtian life: but they are not ioyned in the acte of iuſtification.

Thirdly, they vrge the 2. of Saint Iames, where it is ſaid, that a man is iuſtified not onely by faith, but alſo by workes, verſ. 24. Anſ. Faith in Saint Iames, is put for an hiſtoricall knowledge of religion; or for the bare confeſſion and profeſſion of faith. Againe, iuſtification is two-folde: one of the perſon, the other of the faith of the perſon. Iuſtification of the perſon is, when a ſinner is abſolued of his ſinnes, and accepted to life euerlaſting, for the merit of Chriſt. Iuſtification of the faith of the perſon is, when faith is approoued and found to bee true faith: and a beleeuer iuſtifies himſelfe to be a true beleeuer. Of this ſecond iuſtification ſpeakes Saint Iames; and it is not onely by faith, but alſo by workes.

Laſtly, it may bee obiected, that loue is of no vſe, if it doe not iuſtifie. Anſ. Iuſtifiaction, and ſanctification, are two diſtinct benefits, 1. Cor. 1. 30. and 6. 11. Iuſtification miniſters vnto vs deliuerance from hell, and a right to life euerlaſting. Sanctification is a fruite of the former, and ſerues to make vs thankfull to God, for our iuſtification: and loue ſerues for the ſame vſe, becauſe it is a ſpeciall part of Sanctification.

Thus much of the deprauation of the text by the Papiſts. Hence further I gather, that many falſely in theſe laſt daies boaſt of faith: becauſe it is not ioyned with profiting in knowledge, with true conuerſion vnto God, with fruits of loue to God and man: whereas all true faith is fruitfull in good workes.

7 Ye did runne well: who did let you, that ye ſhould not obey the trueth?

The meaning. Ye did runne well] In theſe words Paul alludes to the games of running, vſed among the heathen. And he compares the word and precepts of God, to a way or race; beleeuers to runners, life eternall to the price, God to the Vmpire or Iudge, the lookers on are men and Angels, good and bad; and the Exerciſe of religion, is the running of this race. Reade of this, 1. Corinth. 9. 24. Phil. 3. 13, 14.

Who] the interrogation hath in it the force of a reproofe or complaint. And the ſenſe is this: they did euill, which turned you forth of the way, and you haue done euill that you obeyed not the truth. The like is, Pſal. 2. 1. Why do the heathen rage? that is, it is great wickedneſſe for them to rage.

Let] ſtoppe, intercept your courſe, turne you out of the way.

That you ſhould not obey] that you ſhould not giue credence to the doctrine of Paul, and not obey it.

The ſcope. Theſe words are a repetition of the principall concluſion of the whole Epiſtle. And this repetition is not in vaine. For it ſerues to bring the Galatians to a conſideration of their offence, and to amendment of life. Hence I obſerue, that the often and ſerious conſideration of our ſinnes & liues paſt, is a meanes to worke in vs a deteſtation of our ſinnes, and a reformation of life. Thus Dauid ſaith, that vpon conſideration of his waies, he turned his feet to Gods commandements, Pſal. 119. 59. And the cauſe why there is ſo little amendment among vs, is, becauſe wee neuer ſo much as thinke what we haue done.

In theſe words, Paul ſets downe three duties of Chriſtian people. The firſt is, that they muſt be runners in the race of God. Indeede the Sabbath of the Iewes figured a reſt which is contrary to running: but this reſt is from ſinne, and not from good duties. This duty of running teacheth vs foure things. The firſt is, that we muſt make haſt without delay to keepe the commandements of God, ſpecially the commandements of faith, repentance, new obedience, Pſal. 119. 32, 60. Contrariwiſe, it is a great fault for youth and others, to deferre amendment till olde age, or till the laſt and deadly ſicknes. For that is the time to end our running, and not to begin.

The ſecond is, that we are to increaſe and A profit in all good duties, ſpecially in knowledge, faith, repentance. But wee in this age doe otherwiſe. For either wee ſtand at a ſtay, or go backe, and very few of vs proceede forward in good duties. And there are two cauſes of this. One is blindneſſe of minde, which makes vs that wee ſee not how little our faith and repentance is, and how great is the maſſe of our corruption: the ſecond is our vnbeliefe in the article of life euerlaſting.

The third dutie is, that wee muſt neither looke to the right or left hand, or looke to thinges behinde vs, to ſet our affection on them, but wee muſt preſſe on forward to the price of eternall life, Phil. 3. 13. Luk. 9. 62. B Here comes a common fault to bee conſidered: wee in reſpect of profeſſion go forward: yet we looke backe in our courſe, and minde earthly things.

Laſtly, wee muſt not bee mooued with the ſpeeches of men which are giuen of vs either to or fro. They are lookers on, and muſt haue their ſpeeches, and our care muſt bee not to heed them, but to looke to our courſe.

The ſecond duty of Chriſtian people is, that they muſt not only be runners, but they muſt runne well. And that is done by beleeuing, and by obeying the true religion, or as Paul ſaith, by hauing faith and good conſcience, 1. Timothie 1. 18. Theſe are as it were the two feete by which wee runne to life euerlaſting. Vnder faith wee are to comprehend C the true acknowledgement of God, affiance in him, and inuocation, &c. Vnder good conſcience, is compriſed the purpoſe of not ſinning, and the care to obey God in all his commaundements. To apply this to our ſelues: runners wee are, but alas, fewe of vs are good runners. We haue one good foote, & that is our faith or religion which is ſound and good: but wee halt on the other foote: our care to keepe conſcience is not ſutable to our religion. And three things cauſe a lameneſſe or feebleneſſe in this foot, the luſt of the eye, that is, couetouſneſſe: the luſt of the fleſh, and pride of life. D

The third duty is, that wee muſt runne the race from the beginning to the ende, and finiſh our courſe, ſo as wee may apprehend life euerlaſting, 1. Tim. 6. 11. 2. Tim. 4. 7. 1. Cor. 9. 24. And for this cauſe wee muſt cheriſh in our hearts a loue and feruent deſire of eternall life, and by this meanes wee ſhall be drawne on through all miſeries, and ouerpaſſe them to the ende. Secondly, wee muſt hold and maintaine a conſtant and daily purpoſe of not ſinning. And where wee are the weakeſt, there muſt our reſolution bee the ſtrongeſt. And thus ſhall we be conſtant to the death.

8 It is not the perſwaſion of him that calleth you.

The meaning. This opinion of iuſtification by the workes of the law, is not from God, who hath called you from bondage to liberty.

The ſcope. Paul here meetes with a conceit of the Galatians, which was this: Why doeſt thou ſo often and ſo ſharpely reprooue vs? for we holde nothing againſt conſcience, but are perſwaded of the thing which we ſay. To this Paul anſwers here: this perſwaſion is not of God: becauſe it is againſt the calling of God, for he cals you to liberty: and this your opinion drawes you into bondage.

Here wee ſee the cauſe of mens declining from God and his word, and that is this: Men denie credence to Gods word, and liſten to plauſible perſwaſions, and ſo fall away. Thus Eue fell in the eſtate of innocencie by liſtening to the falſe perſwaſions of the diuell. The Papiſts nuſle themſelues in their ſuperſtitions, by a preſumption that the Church cannot erre, and that God will not leaue his Church deſtitute of the aſſiſtance of his Spirit. Our common people boulſter themſelues in their blinde waies by a preſumption that God is all of mercy, and that if they doe their true intent, ſerue God, ſay their prayers, deale iuſtly, and doe as they would bee done vnto, they ſhall certainely bee ſaued. Tradeſmen often vſe many practiſes of fraude and iniuſtice, and that vpon a perſwaſion, that they haue a charge and familie which muſt bee maintained. If men now adaies will not blaſpheme, drinke, and riot, as others doe, they ſhall be charged with preciſeneſſe: and that comes vpon a perſwaſion, that it ſufficeth to auoid the outward and notorious crimes which are mentioned & condemned in the law. Thus the whole world is miſled by blinde perſwaſions.

Secondly, hence we learne to cloſe vp our eyes (as it were) and abſolutely to follow the calling of God, and to ſubiect all the powers of our ſoules vnto it. Thus did Abraham when hee was called to goe he knew not whither, and Paul without vſing conſultation, went and preached in Arabia at the calling of Chriſt.

Thirdly, Paul here ſets downe a note to diſcerne of falſe doctrines and opinions in religion. If they be ſutable to the calling of God, they are good: if they bee againſt the calling of God, they are naught. This is Pauls rule. God cals vs to liberty: therefore the doctrine of iuſtification by the workes of the law is naught: for it drawes vs into bondage. In like ſort God cals vs to free iuſtification: and therefore the doctrine of humane ſatisfactions, and of the merit of works is naught. Againe, God cals vs to an vtter deniall of our ſelues: and therefore the Popiſh doctrine of preparation, and of freedome of will in the conuerſion of a ſinner, is naught.

Laſtly, it is to bee obſerued, that Paul ſaith in the time preſent [of him that calleth you] for hence it appeares, that God continues to call the Galatians, euen after their fall, in which they fel away to another Goſpel, and as much as in them lay, aboliſhed themſelues from Chriſt. This ſhewes Gods patience: and that there is a poſſibility of mercy after great and grieuous fals.

It may bee ſaid, how long doth God continue to call men vnto him? Anſw. So long as he vouchſafeth them the benefit of the publike Miniſtery. Thus then more then forty yeares hath God called vs in England. And for this cauſe, it is our part to pray to God for hearing eares, to be pearced in our hearts: and we muſt anſwer the calling of God, Pſal. 27.8. at the leaſt in the deſires and groanes of our hearts. And laſtly, we muſt in life and conuerſation be ſutable to the calling of God.

9 A little leauen, leaueneth the whole lumpe.

The ſenſe. As a little leauen leaueneth and ſauoreth the whole lumpe of dowe: euen ſo, one errour or point of corrupt doctrine, corrupteth the whole body of Chriſtian religion: becauſe all the points of religion are linked and compounded together, ſo as if one be corrupt, the reſt cannot remaine ſound and incorrupt.

The ſcope. The obiection of the Galatians is: Put caſe, that wee erre in ioyning Circumciſion and Chriſt: yet there is no cauſe why thou ſhouldeſt ſo ſharpely reprooue vs: for it is no great errour to ioyne workes and Chriſt in the cauſe of our Iuſtification. Paul anſwers to this obiection by a prouerbe, ſaying, that a little leauen of falſe doctrine, corrupts the whole body of religion: and one error, though it ſeeme to bee of ſmall moment at the firſt, may at length bring with it the corruption and deprauation of many other points.

The vſe. In the example of the Galatians, we ſee what is the common faſhion of men, namely, to extenuate their faults, and to make ſmall matters of great offences. The Phariſies taught, that ſundrie of Gods commaundements, were ſmall and little commaundements, Matth. 5.19. To them that make no conſcience of ſinne, great ſinnes are little ſinnes, and little ſinnes are no ſinnes. Pride is cleanlineſſe, couetouſneſſe is nothing but worldlineſſe, drunkenneſſe good fellowſhip, fornication a tricke of youth. Thus men put viſards vpon their vgly ſinnes. The Polititian that is of no religion, ſaith, that wee and the Papiſts differ not in ſubſtance, but in ſmall circumſtances: and that if they erre, it is but in ſmall points. But on the contrarie, wee are to eſteeme euery ſinne for a great ſinne, to humble our ſelues for the leaſt ſinnes, and to bring our ſelues in ſubiection to God in the leaſt of our actions.

Here we are taught by all meanes to maintaine the purity of ſound religion, whatſoeuer befall vs. And for this cauſe we are to reſiſt and withſtand euery erronious opinion that ſhall be broched. For it is the policie of the diuell, by foiſting in ſome one errour, to depraue and confound the whole bodie of truth. It may be ſaid, how may wee diſcerne errour from ſound doctrine, conſidering oftentimes they are like, as leauen is like dowe? Anſ. Leauen is diſcerned from dowe, not by colour, but by taſte: euen ſo they which are ſpirituall, and haue the gift of diſcerning, directed by the analogie of faith, diſcerne truth from falſhood. For whatſoeuer is againſt one Article of faith, or againſt any of the commandements of the decalogue, is not ſound doctrine, but leauen.

Againe, that which is ſaid of falſe doctrine, may be ſaid proportionally of bad manners. Here therefore wee muſt bee put in minde of three duties. The firſt, to reſiſt and withſtand euery particular ſinne. For euen one ſinne is able to defile the whole life of man. One flie is ſufficient to marre a whole boxe of ſweete ointment. One offence in our firſt parents, brought corruption vpon them and all mankinde, yea vpon heauen and earth. Hee that makes no conſcience of ſome one ſinne, is guilty of the whole law, Iam. 2.

Secondly, wee muſt doe our endeauour to the vttermoſt, to cut off euery bad example in the ſocieties of men. For one bad example is ſufficient to corrupt a whole family, a whole towne, a whole countrey. The example of one inceſtuous man was ſufficient to corrupt all Corinth. Therefore Paul ſaith, Purge out the olde leauen, 1. Cor. 5.6. The law of God is, that blaſphemers, murderers, adulterers, &c. ſhall be put to death: the reaſon is, that euill may be taken away out of Iſrael, that is, the euill of wicked example, which beeing ſuffered, ſpreads abroad, & doth much hurt. The barren figge tree muſt be cut downe, leſt it make the whole ground barren, Luk. 13.7.

Thirdly, wee are to withſtand and cut off the firſt beginnings and the occaſions of euery ſinne. Wee ſay of arrand theeues, that firſt they beginne to practiſe their wickednes in pinnes, and points. For this cauſe idleneſſe, fulnes of bread in exceſſiue eating, drinking, and ſwilling, riot, and vanity in apparell, are to be ſuppreſſed in euery ſociety, as the breeders of many vices.

On the contrary, as one point of euill doctrine brings with it many other: ſo any one little grace of God, brings many other with it. The entrance into Gods word, giues light, Pſal. 119.130. In this reſpect Chriſt ſaith, The kingdome of heauen is like leauen, hid in three peckes of meale: becauſe Gods kingdome is ſet vp in the heart at the firſt vpon very ſmal beginnings, Matth. 13.33. This muſt teach vs to vſe the meanes of our ſaluation, and not to bee diſcouraged, though wee haue in vs but ſome ſmall beginnings of Gods grace.

10 I haue an affiance of you in the Lord, that ye will bee no otherwiſe minded: but hee that troubleth you, ſhall beare his iudgement, whoſoeuer he be.

The ſenſe. In the Lord] by the gracious aſſiſtance of God, who no doubt will giue a bleſſing to my Miniſtery.

No otherwiſe minded] that is, thinke no otherwiſe then ye haue done, and ought to thinke; and thinke no otherwiſe then I haue taught you.

Hee that troubleth you] the Church is troubled three waies: 1. by falſe doctrine. Thus Ahab troubled Iſrael, 1. King. 18. 18. and the falſe Apoſtles trouble Galatia. 2. By wicked example: thus Achan troubled Iſrael, Ioſ.7.25. 3. By force and cruelty: thus tyrants and perſecutors trouble the Church.

Shall beare] ſhall haue his due and deſerued puniſhment, partly in this life, and partly in eternall death. See this verified in the ende of the booke of Engliſh Martyrs, in the deſperate, horrible, and ſtinking endes of perſecutors. But yet this threat muſt be vnderſtood with the Exception of repentance.

The ſcope. The words are an Anſwer to an Obiection, which may be framed thus: It ſeemes by your former prouerbe of leauen, that you holde vs to bee a people corrupted, and vnſauorie vnto God. To this Paul anſwers by a diſtinction: I hope better things of you: but the falſe Apoſtles for troubling the Church, ſhall ſurely be puniſhed.

The vſe. When Paul ſaith, I haue an affiance in you, hee teacheth in his owne example, that we are to hope the beſt of men ſo long as they are curable. It may bee ſaid, they that hope the beſt are ſometimes deceiued. Anſ. They are onely deceiued in their iudgement, and that in things whereof they haue no certen knowledge, and they are not deceiued in practiſe. For it is a duty of loue to hope the beſt. And they which vſe to ſuſpect the worſt, are oftner deceiued. Againe, it may bee ſaid, that wee muſt iudge of things as they are indeede. Anſ. Iudgement of things, and iudgement of perſons muſt bee diſtinguiſhed. Of things, vpright iudgement is to iudge of them as they are: and if they bee doubtfull, to ſuſpend. Now our iudgement of the perſons of men, muſt be to take things in the better part as much as poſſibly may be. Laſtly, it may be alleadged, that we muſt loue our neighbour as our ſelues: and that wee deſpaire in reſpect of our ſelues. An. We are to deſpaire in reſpect of our ſelues, becauſe we are priuy to our own eſtate: but wee are not priuy to the eſtate of any other man: and therefore we are to hope the beſt of them. This ſhewes the fault of our times: if any profeſſing the Goſpel fall vpon frailty, there are numbers of men that will make no bones of it to condemne them to the pit of hell, for hypocrites: but ſuch perſons are not carried by the ſpirit of Paul, who hopes the beſt of them that fall.

Againe, here wee ſee how wee are to put affiance in men. Wee are to put affiance in God for all things whatſoeuer, whether concerning body or ſoule: but our affiance in men, muſt bee onely for ſuch things as they are able to performe. Secondly, wee muſt put affiance in God abſolutely for himſelfe, and therefore wee ſay, I beleeue in God, &c. but all our affiance in men whatſoeuer, muſt bee in the Lord.

When Paul ſaith, that hee had affiance of them in the Lord, hee ſhewes that renewed repentance is the gift of God. And there are two graces required vnto it, helping grace, and exciting grace. Helping grace preſerues and confirmes the firſt and initiall repentance. Exciting grace giues the will and the deede, And without theſe graces the childe of God, if hee fall, cannot repent, and recouer himſelfe. They therefore are deceiued, who think that they may haue repentance at commaund, and that they may repent when they will.

It may be demanded, why Paul vſeth milde tearmes, and doth not excommunicate the Galatians? Anſ. So long as men are curable, meanes muſt be vſed to recouer them. The ſheepe or oxe that goes aſtray, muſt bee brought home againe, Exodus 23. 4. much more thy neighbour. Chriſt himſelfe brings home againe the loſt ſheepe, and ſo muſt euery ſhepheard, Ezech. 34. 4. Now the Galatians were in all likelihood perſons curable: and therefore not to be cut off. For the Cenſure of Excommunication pertaines to them alone, of whoſe recouery there is no hope.

Some there be that miſlike the preaching vſed in theſe daies, becauſe wee vſe not ſeuerity, and perſonall reproofes, after the manner of Iohn Baptiſt. But theſe men are deceiued. We haue not the like calling that he had, nor like gifts: neither are we in the like times. For Iohn the Baptiſt was in the very time of the change betweene the olde and the new Teſtament. Chriſt did not follow him in the ſame manner of teaching, neither doth the Apoſtle in this place, when hee ſaith of the Galatians in apoſtaſie, that hee hoped better things of them.

In the laſt place, the commination which the Apoſtle vſeth, is to be obſerued, that troublers of the Church ſhall beare their iudgement. Hence I gather,

1. That God watcheth ouer his Church with a ſpeciall prouidence. Wee in England haue found this by experience: and we are to be thankfull for it.

2. That the doctrine of the Apoſtles is of infallible certenty: becauſe the oppugners of it are plagued by the iuſt iudgement of God.

3. On the contrary, our duty is, to pray for the good eſtate of the Church of God, and for the kingdomes where the Church is planted, and for the continuance of the Goſpell ſpecially in England. For what will all the things we haue doe vs good, if we be forth of Gods kingdome, and loſe our ſoules?

11 And brethren, if I yet preach Circumciſion, why doe I yet ſuffer perſecution? Then is the ſcandall of the croſſe aboliſhed.

12 Would to God they were cut off that trouble you.

The ſenſe. Yet preach] now while I am an Apoſtle. Here Paul takes it for granted, that when he was a Phariſie hee taught and maintained Circumciſion: but he denies that he euer taught it after his conuerſion in his Apoſtleſhip. The croſſe] the Goſpel which is a doctrine teaching deliuerance from hel, and life euerlaſting, to bee obtained by the death and paſſion of Chriſt crucified, 1. Cor. 1. 18. 23.

More plainely, the words are thus much in effect: It is reported, that I Paul an Apoſtle, preach circumciſion: but the truth is, there is no ſuch matter: For if I taught circumciſion, the Iewes, maintainers of circumciſion, would not perſecute mee as they doe: neither would they take offence at the preaching of Chriſt crucified, if I ioyned circumciſion with Chriſt.

The drift. Paul here anſwers a new obiection, which is on this manner: There is no cauſe, Paul, why thou ſhouldeſt thus reprooue vs, for thou thy ſelfe art a teacher of circumciſion. To this Paul makes a double anſwer. Firſt, hee denies the report, and prooues his deniall by a double reaſon; one is, becauſe the Iewes ſtill perſecuted him; the other is, becauſe they tooke offence ſtill at his preaching of Chriſt crucified. Secondly, Paul anſwers by pronouncing a curſe vpon the falſe Apoſtles.

The vſe. In the words, I conſider two things, the report giuen forth of Paul, and his Apologie. The report was, that Paul preached circumciſion. In this we ſee what is the condition of the Miniſters of the word, namely, to be ſubiect to ſlander and defamation, not onely in reſpect of their liues, but alſo in reſpect of their Miniſterie and doctrine, as if they were heretickes. Thus the Papiſts at this day reproch the Miniſtery of the Church of England, charging it with ſundry foule hereſies. And many among vs ſpare not to charge it with the hereſie of Puritaniſme. And I doubt not to auouch it, that ſome are condemned for heretickes in the hiſtorie of the Church, who (if all were knowne) ſhould bee found to bee good ſeruants of God.

1. This verifies the ſaying of Eccleſiaſtes, c. 8. v. 14. There are righteous men to whome it befals according to the worke of the wicked.

2. Miniſters muſt hence be put in minde to vſe circumſpection both for the matter and the manner of their preaching.

3. Beeing defamed, and that wrongfully, they muſt hence take occaſion to bee more careful to pleaſe God, as Dauid did in the like caſe, Pſal. 119. 69.

But how came this report of Paul? Anſw. Sometime hee tolerated circumciſion, as a thing indifferent for a time: and hereupon circumciſed Timothie. And vpon this A occaſion a report is raiſed that Paul preached circumciſion. In this wee ſee the faſhion of the world; which is to raiſe fames, reports, and ſlaunders of all perſons, ſpecially vpon Magiſtrates and Miniſters, and that vpon euery light and vniuſt occaſion. But good men will take no ſuch occaſions of raiſing reports, Pſal. 15. 3.

But how did Paul take this report? Anſw. He did not requite euill for euill (as the manner of men is,) but he returnes loue and goodnes for euill: and for this cauſe (no doubt of purpoſe) he beginnes his ſpeech on this manner, Brethren, if I yet preach circumciſion.

The apologie and defence followes. And B firſt hee denies the report. And his proofe is this: becauſe for his preaching hee is perſecuted of the Iewes. Here obſerue, that they which are called to teach, muſt preach the Goſpel, what trouble or daunger ſoeuer follow, as Paul did. It may be demaunded, whether a Miniſter may not in teaching conceale any part of the truth at any time without ſin? Anſw. In the caſe of Confeſſion when a man is called to giue an account of his faith, no truth, no not the leaſt truth may be concealed. Againe, when the ſoules of men are to bee releeued, and ſaued, all concealements are damnable. Yet in the planting or in the reſtoring of the Church, doctrines moſt neceſſary may be concealed. Paul was about two C yeares at Epheſus, and ſpake nothing againſt Diana, but in generall tearmes. If he had, he had planted no Church at Epheſus. Againe, when people be vncapable of doctrine, it may bee concealed, till they bee prepared for it. Chriſt tolde his diſciples, that hee had many things to tell them, which they could not then learn. Some beleeuers muſt haue no ſtrong meate, but milke onely. Thirdly, when the teaching of a leſſer truth hinders the teaching of a fundamentall truth, the leſſer truth may be concealed, that the fundamentall truth may bee taught, and take place.

Here wee ſee the fidelity of Paul: if he had ſought himſelfe, his honour, profit, or plea- D ſure, he would not haue taught any doctrine that ſhould haue cauſed perſecution. The like minde muſt bee in all teachers, nay in all beleeuers, who are to receiue the Goſpell for it ſelfe, without reſpect to honour, profit, or pleaſure.

Paul addes further in way of defence, that the ſcandall of the croſſe was not aboliſhed. Hence it followes, that the Goſpell muſt be preached, though all men be offended. God muſt not bee diſpleaſed, though all men bee diſpleaſed, Act. 5. 29. Indeede Chriſt pronounceth a woe againſt them by whome offences come: but that is meant of offences giuen, and not of offences taken: of which Chriſt hath an other rule, Matth 15. 14. Let them alone, they are the blind leaders of the blind.

Againe, by the offence of the Iewes, wee ſee the minde of men, who cannot be content with the death and paſſion of Chriſt, vnleſſe they may adde workes, or ſomething els of their owne, for their iuſtification and ſaluation. Thus doe the Papiſts at this day: and the like do many of the ignorant people among vs, that will be ſaued by their good dealing, and their good ſeruing of God.

Touching the imprecation in the 12. verſ. three queſtions are to be propounded. The firſt is, whether Paul did well thus to curſe his enemies? I anſwer, yea: for firſt we muſt put a difference between the priuate cauſe of man, and the cauſe of God. Now Paul accurſeth the falſe Apoſtles, not in reſpect of his owne cauſe, but in reſpect of the cauſe of God; and not as his owne enemies, but as the enemies of God. Secondly, we muſt diſtinguiſh the perſons of euill men. Some are curable, and ſome againe are incurable, of whoſe ſaluation there is no hope. Now Paul directs his imprecation againſt perſons incurable. And hee knew them to bee incurable by ſome extraordinary inſpiration or inſtinct, (as the Prophets and the reſt of the Apoſtles did in ſundry caſes) and hereupon he curſeth ſometime euen particular perſons, as Alexander the copperſmith, 2. Tim.4. 14. Thirdly, we muſt diſtinguiſh the affections of men. Some are carnal, as raſh anger, hatred, deſire of reuenge, &c. ſome againe are more ſpirituall & diuine, as a zeale of Gods glorie, and of the ſafetie of Gods Church. Now Paul in pronouncing the curſe, is not carried with a carnall affection, but with a pure zeale of Gods glory, and with the ſame ſpirit by which hee penned this Epiſtle.

The ſecond queſtion is, whether we may not curſe our enemies as Paul did? Anſw. No: for we haue not the like ſpirit to diſcerne the perſons of men what they are: and our zeale of Gods glorie is mixed with many corrupt affections, and therefore to be ſuſpected. We in our ordinarie dealings haue an other rule to follow, Matth. 5. Bleſſe and curſe not. If we dare goe beyond the limits of this rule, wee muſt heare the ſpeach of Chriſt, ye know not of what ſpirit ye are. Luk.9.55.

The third queſtion is, how we ſhould vſe the imprecations that are in the Pſalmes of Dauid: as Pſal. 109. and in other places of Scripture? Anſw. They are to be directed generally againſt the kingdome of the diuell: and they are further to bee vſed as Prophecies of the holy Ghoſt cōforting his Church, and procuring a finall ſentence vpon the enemies of God.

The word which is tranſlated, diſquiet, is to be conſidered, for it ſignifies to put men out of their eſtate, and to driue them out of houſe and home, as enemies doe when they ſacke and ſpoile a towne.

By this we ſee that the doctrine of iuſtification by workes or by the law, is a doctrine full of danger and perill, becauſe it puts men out of their eſtate, in Chriſt, and bereaues them

A of their ſaluation in heauen. Therefore let all men flie from the religion of the Papiſt, as if they would flie from an armie of Spaniards or Turkes.

Contrariwiſe, they that would prouide well for themſelues and their poſteritie, and plant themſelues in a good eſtate, muſt take this courſe. They muſt conſider that there is a citie of God in heauen, the gates and ſuburbes whereof bee vpon earth in the aſſemblies of the Church: that this citie hath many roomes and habitations, and many liberties: that the law whereby this citie is ruled, is the whole word of God, ſpecially the doctrine of the Goſpell. In this citie is all happineſſe, and out of it there is nothing but woe and miſery. B Enter therefore into the ſuburbes of this citie of God: as ye profeſſe the Goſpell, ſo ſubiect your mindes and conſciences, and all your affections to it, and bee doers of it in the exerciſe of faith, repentance, new obedience. Thus ſhall you haue a good eſtate in Chriſt, and ioyfull habitation in heauen.

13. For brethren, ye haue beene called to libertie: only vſe not your libertie as an occaſion to the fleſh: but by loue ſerue one another.

The firſt part of the Epiſtle touching the faith of the Galatians is ended: and here begins the ſecond part touching good life, and it continues from this verſe to the 11. verſe of the ſixt chapter. In it Paul doth 2. things: C firſt he propounds the ſumme of his doctrin, and then after makes a particular declaration of it. The ſumme of all is propounded in this 13. verſ. in which Paul firſt ſets downe the ground of all good duties, and then 2. maine rules of good life. The ground is in theſe words, Brethren, ye haue beene called to libertie. And it muſt be noted, that as theſe words are the foundation of that which followes, ſo are they alſo the reaſō of that which goes before, and therefore Paul ſaith, for brethren, &c. The 2. rules are in the words following: One in theſe, Vſe not your libertie as an occaſion to the fleſh: the other in theſe, Do ſeruice one to another by loue.

In the ground of all good duties, namely D the calling to libertie, 4. things are to be conſidered. 1. who cals. 2. who are called. 3. what is the calling of God. 4. why it is here mentioned by Paul.

To the firſt, who calles? I anſwer, God the Father in Chriſt by the Spirit, for he is abſolute Lord of all his creatures: and therefore he may call out of the kingdome of darkenes into his owne kingdome whome he will. And it is God alone that calleth the things that are not, as though they were, Rom.4.17.

The ſecond is, who are called? Anſw. All they that any way anſwer the calling of God, for Paul ſaith indifferently of all the Galatians, that they were called. Now men anſwer the calling of God, ſome in profeſſion, ſome in heart, and ſome in both. And all theſe are ſaid to be called, yet with ſome difference. The calling of God is directed firſt of all and principally to the Elect: and then in the ſecond place, it pertaines to them which are not Elect, becauſe they are mixed in ſocietie with the Elect. And hence ariſeth a diſtinction of the calling of God, ſometime it is operatiue: becauſe God ſignifies and withall workes his will in the Elect: ſometimes againe in reſpect of others it is onely ſignificatiue, when God reueales his will to men, but ſpares to worke it for iuſt cauſes knowne to himſelfe.

The third point is, what is the calling to libertie? Anſw. An action of God tranſlating men from the kingdome of darkeneſſe to his owne kingdome. It hath two parts, inuitement and admiſſion. Inuitement is, when God offers remiſſion of ſinnes & life euerlaſting to them that beleeue, outwardly by the preaching of the Goſpel, inwardly by the inſpiration of heauenly deſires. Admiſſion is, when men are entred into the kingdome of grace: and it is either outward or inward. Outward admiſſion is, when men are taken out of old Adam, and by faith ingrafted into Chriſt: for by this inſition into Chriſt, men are made reall members of Gods kingdome.

The laſt queſtion is, why Paul mentions the calling to libertie in this place? Anſw. It is the ground of all comfort, by it Paul comforts the Corinthians, 1.Cor.1.9. Againe, it is the ground of good life. Therefore Peter ſaith, Be ye holy, as he that hath called you is holy, 1.Pet.1.15. And Paul, Walke worthy the calling wherewith he hath called you, Eph.4.1. If the calling of God doe not mooue vs to amendment of life, nothing will doe it.

VVe in England haue heard the calling of God more then fortie yeares: and yet very fewe of vs are mooued to change and amend our liues. This ſhewes our Atheiſme and vnbeleefe: here is almoſt nothing but heauing, ſhouing, and lifting for the world. Some are held captiues of their couetouſnes, ſome of their pride, ſome of their damnable and fleſhly luſts: and all this ſhewes that few or none, ſo much as dreame of a calling to ſpirituall libertie.

The firſt Rule followes: Only vſe not your libertie, as an occaſion to the fleſh.

The ſenſe. Fleſh] hereby the Papiſts vnderſtand Senſualitie or carnall appetites: but hereby is meant the corruption of all the powers of the ſoule, euen of reaſon and conſcience. Paul ſaith, that the wiſedome or vnderſtanding of the fleſh is enmitie to God, Rom.8.7. fleſhlineſſe therefore pertaines to the vnderſtanding. Againe, he ſaith of ſome, that they are puffed vp in the minde of the fleſh, Col.2.18. and he willes the Epheſians to be renewed in the ſpirit of their minds, Eph.4.23.

The meaning then of the rule is this, vſe not the benefit of ſpirituall libertie as an occaſion to the fleſh to liue according to the A fleſh. Here I conſider three things, what is the abuſe of libertie? where is this abuſe to be found? and what is the right vſe thereof?

The firſt queſtion is, what is the abuſe of Chriſtian libertie? Anſw. To vſe it as an occaſion of fleſhly and carnall libertie: and that is done three waies. The firſt is, whē men make more things indifferent then God euer made. Thus the Corinthians vſed fornication as a thing indifferent, 1.Cor.6. To many in theſe daies drunkenneſſe and ſurfetting is but a thing indifferent. Men vſe not to diſtinguiſh a thing indifferent and the vſe of it: but they commonly thinke that if the thing be indifferent in it ſelfe, then alſo the vſe of it is B indifferent. Thus all abuſes of meate, drinke, apparell, all rioting and gaming, dicing and carding, &c. are excuſed by the names of things indifferent.

Secondly, our libertie is abuſed by an immoderate vſe of the gifts of God. The vſe of them is immoderate three waies, firſt in reſpect of time, as when Diues fared deliciouſly, and was arraied in rich attire euery day. Thus many gentlemen and others offend, when they turne recreation into an occupation. Secondly, the gifts of God are immoderately vſed, in reſpect of themſelues; as when men Exceed in eating & drinking, as the Prophet ſaith, Deut.29.19. Adding drunkenneſſe to thirſt. C Thirdly, in reſpect of the callings and conditions of men: for euery man is to vſe the gifts of God according to his place and condition. They then offend, that beeing but meane perſons and liuing by trades, yet for their diet and apparell, are as great gentlemen and gentlewomen.

Thirdly, libertie is abuſed when the bleſſings of God are made inſtruments, and (as it were) flagges and banners to diſplay our riot, vanitie, oſtentation, pride; for this cauſe ſundry things, whereof ſome are indifferent in themſelues, are condemned, Iſa.3.16.

The ſecond queſtion is, where is this abuſe? Anſw. Euen among vs in England. It is the faſhion of men to take vnto themſelues a Toleration of ſinning, ſome vpon the patience of God, D others vpon the doctrine of the gracious Election of God, ſaying that they will liue as they liſt, becauſe, if they be Elected to ſaluation, they ſhall certainly bee ſaued whatſoeuer they doe. And ſome there be that take occaſion to continue in their ſinnes, vpon the mercie of God in the death and paſſion of Chriſt. A certen dweller in this towne of Cambridge made away himſelfe. In his boſome was found a writing to this effect, that God did ſhew mercy on great, grieuous, and deſperate ſinners: and therefore hee ſaid that he hoped of mercie though he hanged himſelfe. Of this minde are many ignorant perſons who perſeuering in their ſinnes, yet perſwade themſelues of mercy: becauſe they haue heard that Chriſt died for mankinde. And thus the death of Chriſt is as it were a licence or letters patents to commit ſinne. Againe, great is the abuſe of meate, drinke, and apparell. To Elias there came an Angell and ſaid, Ariſe and eate, 1. King. 19. 7. but to the men of our daies, there had neede come an Angel and ſay, Ceaſe to eate, ceaſe to drinke, ceaſe to game.

The third queſtion is, what is the right vſe of Chriſtian libertie? Anſw. It ſtands in two things: firſt of all we our ſelues muſt bee renewed and ſanctified. To the pure all things are pure. Tit. 1. 15. The perſon muſt firſt pleaſe God before the action can pleaſe him. The ſecond is, that beſide the lawfull vſe of the creatures, we muſt haue a ſpirituall and holy vſe of them. The lawfull vſe of the creature I call the politicke vſe thereof, commonly allowed and taken vp among men. The ſpirituall vſe is whereby we receiue and vſe the creature as from the hand of God the Father in Chriſt according to his will and word. And the godly are not to ſeparate the one vſe from the other, but are bound by vertue of the 3. commandement to take vp an holy vſe of euery gift of God. When Noe came out of the Arke, ſo ſoone as he ſet foote vpon the earth, he built an altar, offered ſacrifice, and called on the name of God: not onely for this end to worſhip God, but alſo to ſanctifie the earth and all the creatures of God vnto his vſe. The like did Abraham when he came into the land of Canaan. And to this end we muſt obſerue 5. rules. The firſt, that the creatures of God muſt be ſanctified by the word and prayer. 1. Tim. 4. The word muſt ſhew vs, what we may doe: and prayer obtaines the doing of it. The 2. rule: we muſt be circumſpect leſt we ſinne in the vſe of the creatures. In this reſpect Iob ſends for his children after they had feaſted together, and he ſanctifies them. Iob. 1. 5. The 3. rule: We muſt vſe the gifts of God with thankſgiuing. Rom. 14. 6. Commonly in theſe daies there is no feaſting or reioycing, vnleſſe al memory of God be buried: for that is ſaid to breed melancholy. The 4. rule: We muſt ſuffer our ſelues to be limited and moderated in the vſe of our libertie, partly by the law of the magiſtrate, and partly by the law of charitie, in the caſe of offence. I ſay in the vſe: becauſe libertie it ſelfe is inwardly in the conſcience: and the vſe of it is often in the outward action: and therfore vnder the order of humane law. The 5. rule: Our liberty muſt be vſed for right ends, as namely the glorie of God. 1. Cor. 10. 31. the preſeruation of nature, and not the pampering of the fleſh, Rom. 13. 13. the good of our neighbour.

Make conſcience to obſerue this rule: and the rather, becauſe the holy and ſpirituall vſe of Chriſtian libertie, is a ſigne and token that thou art in the kingdome of God, and a true member thereof: as on the contrarie, the abuſe of Gods bleſſings ſhewes thee to be ſtill in the kingdome of darkenes. When men ſel things of great worth for a little value, and then afterward giue themſelues to rioting & ſpending, wee commonly ſay that they are theeues, and no right owners of the goods which they ſolde. The like may bee ſaid of them that abuſe ſpirituall libertie, that they are but vſurpers, and no right owners of it.

Laſtly, it muſt be obſerued, that this rule hath 2. branches. The firſt is, that we muſt not miniſter to the fleſh any occaſion of ſinning. The ſecond is, that we muſt giue no occaſion of ſinning by meanes of chriſtian libertie.

The ſecond maine rule followes, Serue one an other by loue. For the right conceiuing of it, I will propound three queſtions. The firſt is, why is this rule propounded in this place? Anſ. It ſets downe the end of all Apoſtolike doctrine, as Paul ſheweth. 1. Tim. 1. 5. The end of the commaundement is loue out of a pure heart, good conſcience, faith vnfained. Here men commonly vnderſtand by the commaundement, the morall law. That is indeede a truth, but it is not the meaning of the place. In the third verſe Paul ſets downe a commandement or denunciation to Timothie, that he and the Paſtours of Epheſus, teach no other doctrine, but the doctrine of the Apoſtles: then in the 5. verſe he propounds the ſumme and ſubſtance or the end of the foreſaid commandement: in the 18. verſe after a long ant apodaton he inioynes Timothie to obſerue it carefully. So then the end of all ſound doctrine is loue out of a pure heart: and all our Preaching muſt tend to this.

The ſecond queſtion is, what is the loue of our neighbour, ſpecified in this rule? Anſ. It is an affection renewed, whereby we are mooued to wiſh well to our neighbour in the Lord. I ſay an affection, to confute Lumbard, who ſaith that loue is not an habit in vs, (as other vertues are,) but the holy Ghoſt. I ſay it is an affection renewed, to confute the Papiſt, who teacheth that we haue the true loue of God and our neighbour by nature, and that we want nothing but the ſecond act, or the exerciſe of loue, which they ſay is from grace. Further, I adde that loue inclines vs to wiſh well to our neighbour: for this is the formall and proper effect of loue, and all this is done when wee thinke well, ſpeake and doe well, and that in reſpect not onely of the bodie, but alſo in reſpect of the ſoule of our neighbour. Laſtly I ſay, that loue to our neighbour muſt be in the Lord. Becauſe we are to loue him in reſpect that he is a creature of God, and beares his image: and not in reſpect of honour, profit, or pleaſure, which we receiue from him. Loue for ſuch ends, is ſelfe-loue.

The third queſtion is, what is the vſe of loue? Anſ. It ſerues to make vs ſeruiceable to our neighbour. Loue ſeekes not her owne things, 1. Cor. 13. Chriſt was ſeruant to his enemies in bearing their ſinnes vpon the croſſe. Paul that was free from all, became a ſeruant to all to winne ſome, 1. Cor. 9. 19. To Chriſt we are to doe ſeruice: and he hath put our neighbour in his ſtead, ſo as that which is done to our neighbour, ſhall be done to him: our neighbour therefore muſt bee ſerued of vs. And this is not againſt our libertie. For we are free inwardly in conſcience, yet in the outward vſe of our libertie, wee muſt be ſeruants to men.

The vſe. If we examine our liues by this rule, we ſhall find that there is very little power of religion among men. There are ſixe ſorts of men that liue in the breach of this rule. The firſt are vſurers who lend for aduantage, when they ſhould lend freely to them that are in neede; theſe ſerue themſelues and make a prey of all. The ſecond ſort are ingroſſers, who gather in commodities to inrich themſelues. The third ſort are idle perſons of what degree ſoeuer, that ſpend their time in eating, drinking, ſleeping, gaming: ſuch are but vnprofitable burdens of the earth. To this ſort I referre beggars & vagabonds. The fourth ſort are riotous perſons that vſe to goe from alehouſe to alehouſe, from tauerne to tauerne, and miſſpend that wherby they ſhould maintaine their families, and be ſeruiceable to their country. The fift ſort are Tradeſmen, who in their dealing vſe lying, diſſembling, fraud, iniuſtice. They ſeeke nothing but their priuate aduantage. And this kind of men abounds in the world. The laſt ſort are drowſie and carnall Proteſtants, who onely ſeeke the things of this world, and neuer ſo much as giue good example to ſeruants or children, or any good counſell. Beſide all this, it is the common fault of the world, for men to ſerue themſelues, according to the common ſaying, Euery man for himſelfe, and God for vs all. And the beſt men that are, if they examine thēſelues, ſhall finde that they faile many waies, and come ſhort in the duties of loue to men with whom they liue.

This beeing ſo, we are to acknowledge before God this maine offence of ours: and to intreat for the pardon of it for Chriſts ſake. And euer hereafter to change our liues, and to reforme them according to this rule. And that is done on this maner. Euery man hath, or ought to haue 2. callings, a generall, and a particular. The generall is, whereby we are called to be Chriſtians. In this calling we are to doe good to all men by teaching, admoniſhing, exhorting, and by example of good life. A particular calling is, whereby men are called to ſome eſtate of life in the family, Church, or common wealth. And according to the ſeuerall conditions of particular callings, muſt euery man in his place, doe the good hee can. The Magiſtrate muſt vſe his office firſt for the maintenance of the Goſpell, and then for the execution of iuſtice. The Miniſter muſt preach ſound religion in loue of the ſoules of men. The Maſter of the family muſt cauſe his houſhold to imbrace the Goſpell, and frequent the exerciſes of religion. Laſtly, euery man that is in a trade or office, muſt apply himſelfe to the vttermoſt of his power to doe all he can for the good of his country: & he muſt ſo deale that he may be helpefull to all with whom he deales, and hurtfull to none. We are, or ſhould be, trees of righteouſneſſe: our fruite muſt be meate for others, and our leaues for medicines. Wee muſt be as candles that ſpend themſelues to giue light to others.

14. For all the Lawe is fulfilled in one word, which is this, Thou ſhalt loue thy neighbour as thy ſelfe.

Fulfilled] compriſed, Rom. 13. 9. One word] One precept: for the holy Ghoſt calles precepts, words. It may be demaunded, how the whole law ſhould bee fulfilled in the loue of our neighbour? Anſw. The loue of God, and the loue of our neighbour are ioyned together, as the cauſe and the effect: and the loue of God is practiſed in the loue of our neighbour. For God that is inuiſible, will be loued in the perſon of our neighbour, whom we ſee, and with whome we conuerſe. And the firſt commandement of the law, muſt be included in all the commaundements following, and thus the loue of God is preſuppoſed in euery commaundement of the ſecond table: hee therfore that loues his neighbour, loues God alſo.

Thou ſhalt loue] vnderſtand both the affection, and the duties of loue. Thy neighbour] any one that is neare vnto vs in reſpect of mans nature, Iſa. 58. 7. though he be our enemie, yet if by any occaſion he be offered vnto vs of God, he is our neighbour.

As thy ſelfe] theſe words ſignifie not the meaſure of our loue: as though wee ſhould loue our ſelues in the firſt place, and then our neighbour in the ſecond place, for there are ſome caſes in which we are to loue our neighbour more then our ſelues. As for example, we are more to loue the ſoule of our brother, then our temporall life: and a good ſubiect is more to loue the life of his Prince then his owne life: here then the holy Ghoſt ſignifies, what muſt be the manner of our loue, the word [ὡς] ſignifies not quantitie, but qualitie: and that wee are as truly and earneſtly with loue to imbrace our neighbour, as our ſelues.

The ſcope. The words containe a reaſon of the ſecond Rule, which may bee framed thus: to ſerue our neighbour in duties of loue, is the keeping of the whole law: therefore this ſeruice muſt carefully be performed.

The vſe. Here wee ſee that the end of a mans life is to ſerue God in ſeruing of man, for this is the ſumme of the whole law. Seruants are commanded in ſeruing their maſters, to ſerue God, and to doe whatſoeuer they doe, as vnto God, Col. 3. 23. And ſo euery man in his place, in dealing with men muſt ſo deale, as if he were to deale with God himſelfe.

ſelfe. Therefore moſt men prophane their liues, when they make the ſcope and drift thereof, to be the getting of riches and honours. And though they haue great charges, that is no excuſe: for the principall end of our liuing here is to performe ſeruice to men, and in this ſeruice to doe homage to God, for which homage God will giue the honour and riches, which he ſees to bee conuenient for vs.

Secondly, here wee may obſerue what is true religion and godlineſſe, namely, to loue and ſerue God in ſeruing of man. Hee that ſaith he loues God, and yet hates his brother, is a lyer, 1.Ioh.4. 20. And hence it followes, that to liue out of all ſocietie of men, though it be in prayer & faſting, (after Monkiſh faſhion) is no ſtate of perfection, but meere ſuperſtition: for that is true and perfect loue of God, that is ſhewed in duties of loue, and in the edification of our neighbour. Againe, the hypocriſie of ſundry Proteſtants is here diſcouered. If they come to the Church, and heare Sermons, and frequent the Lords table, they thinke they may do afterward what they will; and many ſuch are frequenters of tauernes, and alehouſes, and are giuen to riot & licentiouſneſſe. But it is not enough for thee to be holy in the Church; thou maiſt be a Saint in the Church, and a diuell at home. True religion is that which ſhewes it ſelfe in thy priuate houſe, priuate dealings, & in the courſe of thine owne life: ſuch as thou art in thy particular calling, ſuch art thou indeede and truth, what ſhowes ſoeuer thou makeſt before men.

15. If ye bite and deuoure one another, take heed that ye be not conſumed one of another.

The ſenſe. If ye bite] Here Paul alludes to the faſhion of wild beaſts, as lyons, wolues, &c. And by biting we are to vnderſtand all iniuries in words, as railing, curſing, ſlandering, backbiting, &c. Deuoure] Here Paul vnderſtands all iniuries in deed, or violence, euen to the ſhedding of blood. Take heed leſt] Here Paul ſignifies, that contentions and diſſentions, breed the deſtruction and deſolation of the Church.

The ſcope. Theſe words are a ſecond reaſon of the ſecond rule drawne from the dangerous effect of the contrarie, thus: Contentions breed the deſolation of the Church: therefore doe ſeruice one to another by loue.

The contents. In the words Paul deliuers 3. things. The firſt is, that there were grieuous contentions in the Church of Galatia. The like alſo were in the Church of Corinth, 1. Cor.3. The cauſe of the former contentions were differences in points of religion. Some of the Galatians (no doubt) withſtanding circumciſion, and the moſt of them ſtanding for it. For hereupon great were the diſſentions of the Churches in Iudea, Act. 15.2. Obſerue then, that vnitie is not an infallible and an inſeparable marke of the Church of God. A Vnitie may be out of the Church, and diſſention in the Church, as here we ſee. It may bee obiected, that there is a peace in the kingdome of God, and that there the wolfe & the lambe dwell together, Iſa. 11. Anſ. This is but in part verified in the kingdome of grace vpon earth: and it is fully accompliſhed in the kingdome of glory in heauen. Againe, it may be alleadged, that the Church is the company of them that truly conſent in one and the ſame faith. Anſw. That is properly meant of the Catholike Church: but the caſe is otherwiſe in particular Churches, where true beleeuers are mixed with hypocrites, whereupon ariſeth much diſſention. And of true beleeuers, ſome are more carnall then ſpiritu-B all: and that is another cauſe of diſſention, 1. Cor.3.3.

The 2. point, concernes the quality of theſe diſſentions. When Paul ſaith, If ye bite and deuoure, &c. hee ſignifies that they were fierce and violent. And ſuch commonly are diſſentions for religion, as appeares by the perſecution in Queene Maries daies, the heate whereof nothing could ſlake but mans blood. Againe, hee ſignifies in theſe very words, that they were brutiſh, and beaſtlike, more beſeeming wolues, lyons, dogges, then men. This muſt teach vs to deteſt railing, curſing, euill ſpeaking, fighting, vnleſſe it be in the caſe of neceſſarie defence, for by theſe actions we degenerate to the condition of beaſts, and re-C pell from vs the worke of grace: for Chriſt of lyons, wolfs, beares, hath made vs his ſheepe and lambes, Iſa. 11.

The third point is touching the effect of contention, and that is the ruine & deſolation of the church. The diuiſion of the members among themſelues, is the diſſolution of the whole bodie. Differences in points of religion, breed doubting; doubting hinders faith and inuocation, & the free courſe of the Goſpel: and where theſe be hindred, the church goes to decay. And by reaſon of the diſſentions that be in theſe laſt daies, many liue as Atheiſts, and will be of no religion.

By this we are to be admoniſhed to ſtudie and to vſe all meanes to maintaine Chriſtian D peace and concord, Eph.4.3. To this end we muſt remember one generall rule, Rom. 12. 18. Haue peace with all men. And withall we muſt obſerue the cautions which Paul addes: one is, if it may be with good conſcience, for there are ſome, with whome there is no peace, vnleſſe we ſooth them in their vices, or deny our religion, either in whole, or in part. The ſecond is, If it be in you, for ſometime men are accuſed, and muſt of neceſſitie defend themſelues. Theſe two cautions obſerued, peace muſt be had with all men.

It may then be demaunded, why doe not the Proteſtants make a Pacification with the Papiſts? Anſw. VVe are content ſo to doe in reſpect of ciuill ſocietie, but not in reſpect of religion. VVe haue a commaundement to the contrarie, Reu. 18.4. Come out of Babylon my people, and touch no vncleane thing. VVhere a pacification is made, both the parties muſt yeeld ſomewhat:but we may not yeeld in any point of our religion, to the Papiſts. In an inſtrument of muſicke, the ſtrings out of tune are ſet vp, or ſet downe, to the reſt: and the ſtrings that are in tune are not ſtirred: euen ſo the Papiſts are to turne to vs, we are not to turne to them: our religion beeing the doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles.

Peace is threefold, Church peace, Ciuill peace, Houſhold peace. All theſe are to bee maintained. Touching Church peace, I giue three rules. The firſt is, that for the ending of differences in religion there muſt be conferences in a free or Chriſtian Councell; The ſpirits of the Prophets, are ſubiect to the Prophets, 1. Cor. 14.32. VVhen there aroſe differences in the Churches of Iudea, The Apoſtles and Elders came together to inquire of the matter. Act. 15.6. And this is a thing much to bee deſired in theſe daies, ſpecially in theſe VVeſterne parts of the world. It may be demanded, why did not the Proteſtants ioyne with the Papiſts at the Councell of Trent? Anſw. From the firſt ſeſſion it was more then ſixe yeares before any ſafe conduct was giuen to the Proteſtants: and at their appearing in the Councel, exception was taken againſt their letters, and they diſmiſſed. And when they appeared the ſecond time vpon the new ſafe conduct, the Councell was the next day reiourned for 2. yeares. And when ſafe conduct was giuen the 3. time, the Proteſtant Princes refuſed to ſend their Diuines; becauſe they had beene twice mocked. Moreouer the Councell was not a free Councell; becauſe the Pope himſelfe was both party and Iudge.

The ſecond rule. There muſt be a Chriſtian toleration one of another. Eph. 4.2. Here that we miſtake not, I propound two queſtions. One is, in what muſt there be a toleration? Anſw. A toleration preſuppoſeth an errour or defect in our brother. An errour is either in iudgement or manners. An errour in iudgement is either in the foundation of religion, or beſide the foundation, in lighter matters: if the errour be in the foundation, there is no toleration of it. If it be in ſome leſſer matter, a toleration is to bee vſed according to the rule of the Apoſtle, If ye be otherwiſe minded God will reueale it, Phil. 3.15. When others ſee not that which we ſee, we muſt not preſently condemne them, but tolerate their ignorance, till God reueile his truth vnto them. Againe, errours in manners, bee of 2. ſorts, ſome without offence, as haſtineſſe, frowardneſſe, vaine glorious neſſe, &c. theſe wee muſt tolerate, Prou. 19.11. And others with open offence, and ſuch admit no toleration, 1. Cor. 5.11.

The ſecond queſtion is, to what end muſt we tolerate the infirmities and ignorances of our brethren? Anſ. Toleration muſt tend to the good and edification of men, Rom. 15.2. We muſt not ſo tolerate as that we approoue of the leaſt vice, or betray the leaſt part of Gods truth.

It may here be demaunded, whether there may not be a toleration for Poperie? Anſw. No: The toleration of two religions in one kingdome, is the ouerthrow of peace. Again, Poperie is a religion both hereticall & ſchiſmaticall. It may be ſaid, that faith and conſcience is free. I anſwer, though faith in the heart, and conſcience in it ſelfe bee free in reſpect of mans authoritie: yet is not the publiſhing of faith and the profeſſion of conſcience free in like ſort, but it ſtands ſubiect to the power of the Magiſtrate.

The third rule. Euery man in his place, ſpecially teachers muſt ſet themſelues to builde the Church. Iud. v. 20. Eph. 4.12. Indeed the truth is to be defended: but marke how. The truth muſt be confeſſed, when time and occaſion ſerues, without oppoſition: this done, all contentions laid aſide, wee muſt ſet our ſelues to build the Church. And the rather Miniſters of Gods word in England muſt remember this: becauſe while we are ſtriuing among our ſelues in ſundry points of difference, the Papiſt our common enemie, gets ground.

Touching Ciuill peace, it muſt bee remembred, that the peace and good eſtate of Ieruſalem ſtood in this, that it was made the ſeate of Gods ſanctuarie, and the throne of iuſtice, Pſal. 122. When the Arke was in the houſe of Obed-Edom, all things proſpered with him. Now in the new Teſtament the preaching of the Goſpel, inuocation of Gods name, with the vſe of the Sacraments, come in the roome of the Sanctuarie. Ciuill peace then is maintained, when men yeeld ſubiection to the Goſpell of Chriſt, which brings peace to all that receiue it.

Touching Houſhold peace, I giue 2. rules. One is, that gouernours of families muſt vrge and compell all vnder them to admit (at the leaſt outwardly) the practiſe of religion in the exerciſes of faith, repentance, new obedience. Thus did Abraham, Gen. 17. and Ioſ. cap. 24. They that doe not firſt of all conſent in Chriſt, cannot conſent among themſelues. Secondly, it muſt be obſerued, that a family is the ſchoole of God, in which he will exerciſe our faith, inuocation, loue, patience, long-ſuffering, &c. And there is more vertue to be ſeene in the well ordering of a family, then in the pretended holineſſe of Monkiſh cloiſters.

Thus we ſee how we are to maintaine the vnitie of the ſpirit in the bond of peace. For the better inforcing of this duty, Paul (Eph. 4.4.) giues 7. reaſons: one bodie, one ſpirit, one hope of eternall life, one Lord, one faith, one baptiſme, one Father of all. It may bee ſaid, we are at peace, what needs all this adoe? Anſw. The peace of many is peace in drunkenneſſe, (called good fellowſhip) peace in prophaneneſſe and wickedneſſe. This is the diuels peace, where he beares the ſway. The peace of which I now ſpeake, is in the Lord, & in the true worſhip of God: of which reade Iſa. 2. where men are ſaid hand in hand to go vp to the mountaine of the Lord, that they may heare his will, and ioyntly obey it.

16 Then I ſay, walke in the ſpirit, and ye ſhall not fulfill the luſts of the fleſh.

The ſcope. Here Paul returnes to the firſt rule, verſ. 13. and ſhewes the way, how it is to be obſerued, thus: If ye walke in the ſpirit, ye ſhall not fulfill the luſts of the fleſh: and when the luſts of the fleſh are not fulfilled, there ſhall not occaſion bee giuen to the fleſh, by the vſe of chriſtian liberty.

The words containe two parts: a Rule, walke in the ſpirit: and the benefit that comes by the rule, ye ſhall not fulfill the luſts of the fleſh.

In the rule I conſider two things; what is the ſpirit, and what is walking. The ſpirit is the gift of regeneration, loſt by Adam, reſtored by Chriſt. I ſay it is a gift: and this gift is tearmed by the name of the ſpirit: becauſe the ſpirit worketh it immediatly in vs, from the Father and the Sonne. Againe I ſay, it is a gift of regeneration, to make a diſtinction betweene it, and ciuill vertue. For there is a gift of regeneration, which mortifies corruption; and a gift of reſtraint, which ſerues onely to keep in corruption. Of this ſecond kinde, are all ciuill vertues, in naturall and heathen men, & not of the firſt. Ioſeph is chaſte, and ſo was Xenocrates. Ioſephs chaſtity is a part of regeneration, and proceedes from the ſpirit here mentioned, but the chaſtity of Xenocrates is not ſo, proceeding onely from the the generall prouidence of God, and not from the ſpirit of ſanctification. The like I ſay of all other ciuill vertues.

More plainely, The ſpirit is a Diuine nature, quality, or condition, whereby we are made conformable to Chriſt, in righteouſneſſe, and holineſſe.

The ſpirit hath fiue properties. The firſt, that it is a rich & liberall grace of God. For it containes in it the ſeede of all vertues, and all neceſſary graces of God: becauſe it comes in the roome of originall ſin, which containes in it, the ſeedes of all vices or ſinnes.

The ſecond is the largeneſſe of it, for this ſpirit is in all the powers of them that are regenerate, that is, in the minde, conſcience, will, affections, and in the ſenſuall appetite, 1. Theſſ. 5. 23. And he that is ſanctified in one part, is ſanctified in all. Hence it followes, that they which haue plenty of illumination, without change of affection, and life, are indeede carnall, and not ſpirituall.

The third property is ſincerity, for the grace of God is without falſehood or guile. Pſalme 32. 2. hence ariſeth the difference betweene the godly man, and an hypocrite: betweene the works of nature, and the works of grace. There are men that in diſtreſſe deſire the aſſiſtance and fauour of God: and they A doe it without the Spirit of God: for they do it deceitfully, deſiring Gods fauour not for it ſelfe, but in reſpect of ſome euill from which they would be deliuered, as the Mariners in Ionas, and Pharao did. Againe, there are men that mourne for their ſinnes without the Spirit of God. For there is much falſehood in their mourning: becauſe they mourne for ſinne in reſpect of the puniſhment thereof, and not in reſpect of the offence of God. Laſtly, there are that pretend a loue to God, and yet want the ſpirit, for they loue God in reſpect of his benefites, as Saul loued God for a Kingdome: ſuch loue is mercenary, and a worke of nature, whereas the loue which B is from the ſpirit, maketh vs loue God for himſelfe.

The fourth property is excellency, for the ſpirit of grace in Chriſtians is more excellent then the grace of creation, in two reſpects. Firſt, in reſpect of the beginning thereof. For the ſpirit is from Chriſt the ſecond Adam, both God and man: the grace of creation ſhould haue beene conuaied vnto vs from the firſt Adam, but a meere man, if he ſtood. Secondly, in reſpect of conſtancy, for God gaue to Adam the will to perſeuere if hee would: he giueth further to beleeuers, both the will to perſeuere, and the deede.

The fiſt property is liuelineſſe, whereby the ſpirit is effectual in operation. Elihu ſaith that the ſpirit compelled him, & was in him C as a veſſell of new wine which muſt haue a vent, Iob 32. 19. Of the operation of the ſpirit, I deliuer three things. The firſt, that the ſpirite workes in and by the word of God: which therefore is called the Miniſterie of the ſpirit, 2. Corint. 3, 6. The ſecond, that the ſpirit worketh by certain degrees. The firſt degree & the very firſt beginning of his diuine operation, is, to make vs feele in what great neede we ſtand of Chriſt, and to deſire to be reconciled and turned vnto God. This is the firſt motion of the ſpirit in vs: & they which want this, haue nothing as yet of the grace of God in them. The third, that the whole work of the ſpirit may be reduced to 3. actions: The firſt is, to caſt downe euery thing in vs, D that exalts it ſelfe againſt God, 2. Cor. 10. as namely, to beate downe erronious reaſon, & rebellious affection, and to put a man out of heart with his chiefe delights, and with his owne ſelfe. The ſecond action is, to kindle in our hearts a care and deſire of reconciliation with God in Chriſt: hence the ſpirit is called the ſpirit of grace and ſupplication, Zachar. 12. The third action is, to write the Lawe in our hearts, & that is done by putting a new light of knowledge into the minde, and new inclinations into the will, and affections.

Thus much of the ſpirit. Walking in the ſpirit, is, to order our liues according to the direction and motion of the ſpirit. For, as the ſpirit renewes our nature within, ſo it makes vs to change and renew our actions, in three reſpects. Firſt, it makes vs put a further beginning to our actions, then nature can affoard, cauſing vs to doe them in faith, whereby wee beleeue, that our perſons pleaſe God in Chriſt, that our worke to be done pleaſeth God, that the defect of the worke is pardoned. Secondly, the ſpirit makes vs doe our actions in a new maner, namely, in obedience to the written word. Thirdly, it makes vs put a new end to our actions, that is, to intend & deſire to honour God in the things that wee doe. For example. A man is wronged by his neighbour: and nature tels him that hee muſt requite euill with euill: yet he reſolues to do otherwiſe: for (ſaith hee) God in Chriſt hath forgiuen me many ſinnes: therefore muſt I forgiue my neighbour. And he remembreth that vengeance is Gods: and that hee is taught ſo to aske pardon, as he forgiues others. And hereupon hee ſets himſelfe to requite euill with goodneſſe. This is to liue in the ſpirit.

The vſe. By this rule we ſee that moſt of vs faile in our duties. For many of vs profeſſing Chriſt, liue not according to the lawes of nature, in our common dealings. Wee minde earthly things: and therefore we are carnall. It is a principle with many, that if wee keepe the Church, obſerue the Kings lawes (which are indeede to be obſerued) and auoide open and groſſe ſinnes, we do all that God requires at our hands. Hereupon to walke in the ſpirit, is thought to bee a worke of preciſeneſſe, more then needes. And they which deeme it to be a worke of preciſeneſſe, walke not in the ſpirit. And indeede they which haue receiued the greateſt meaſure of the ſpirite, muſt ſay with Paul, that they are carnall, ſolde vnder ſinne, Rom. 7.14.

Secondly, this rule telleth vs, that we muſt become ſpirituall men, ſuch as make conſcience of euery ſinne, and doe things lawfull in ſpirituall maner, in faith, and obedience, and not as carnall men do them carnally. It may be ſaid, that Miniſters of the word muſt bee ſpirituall men. I anſwer, if thou, whatſoeuer thou art, be not ſpirituall, thou haſt no part in Chriſt, Rom. 8. And the rather, thou muſt be ſpirituall; becauſe a naturall man may do the outward duties of religiō in a carnal ſort.

Thirdly, wee muſt not iudge any mans eſtate, before God, by any one, or ſome few actions, either good or bad: but by his walking, or by the courſe of his life, which, if it be carnall, it ſhewes the party to be carnall: if it be ſpirituall, it ſhews him to be ſpirituall.

The benefit that ariſeth by the keeping of the rule followes, in theſe words, Yee ſhall not fulfill the luſts of the fleſh.

Fleſh] the corruption of nature, the roote of all ſinnes.

Luſts] inordinate motions of the minde, will, and affections. Thus largely is luſt taken in the tenth Commaundement, which condemneth the firſt motions to euill.

Fulfill] fulfilling is not a ſimple doing of A euill, but the accompliſhing of luſt with loue, pleaſure, and full conſent of will: as alſo perſeuerance in euill, by adding ſinne to ſinne.

A queſtion. How farre doth the childe of God proceede in the luſt of the fleſh? Anſw. Hee is aſſaulted by the luſts of the fleſh: but he doth not accompliſh them. More plainely: there are fiue degrees of luſt, Suggeſtion, delight, conſent, the act, perſeuerance in the act. Suggeſtion, and delight, whereby the minde is drawne away, are incident to the childe of God: Conſent is not, ordinarily: and if at any time the childe of God conſent to the luſts of his fleſh, it is but in part, againſt his purpoſe, becauſe he is ouercarried. Likewiſe the B act or execution of luſt, is not ordinarily and vſually in the childe of God: if at any time he fall, hee may ſay with Paul, I doe that which I hate. Laſtly, perſeuerance in euill doth not befall the childe of God: becauſe vpon his fall he recouers himſelfe by new repentance. In this ſenſe Saint Iohn ſaith, He that is borne of God, ſinneth not, 1. Ioh. 3.9.

The vſe. Hence it followes, that the luſt of the fleſh is in the childe of God to the death: and conſequently they do not fulfill the law, neither can they bee iuſtified thereby, as Popiſh doctrine is.

Secondly, our duty is, not to accompliſh the luſts of the fleſh, but to reſiſt them to the C vttermoſt, Rom. 13.14.

Thirdly, here is comfort for the ſeruants of God. Some man may ſay, I am vexed and turmoiled with wicked thoughts and deſires, ſo as I feare I am not Gods child. I anſwer againe, for all this deſpaire not. For, if thou hate and deteſt the luſts, that are in thee: if thou reſiſt them, and wage battell againſt them: if beeing ouertaken at any time, thou recouer thy ſelfe by new repentance, they ſhall neuer be laid to thy charge to condemnation, Rom. 8.1. It is here made a prerogatiue of Gods child, when the luſts of the fleſh are in him, not to accompliſh them, or to liue in ſubiection to them.

17 For the fleſh luſteth againſt the ſpirit, and D the ſpirit againſt the fleſh, and they are contrarie one to another, ſo that ye cannot doe the things which ye would.

Theſe words are a reaſon of the former verſe, thus: If ye walke in the ſpirit, ye ſhal not fulfill the luſts of the fleſh: for the fleſh and ſpirit being contrary, mutually reſiſt & withſtand one another, ſo as ye can neither doe the good, nor the euill, which ye would.

Paul here ſets forth a ſpirituall combate, of which ſixe things are to be conſidered. The firſt is, concerning the parties by whome the combate is made: namely, the fleſh, & the ſpirit. The fleſh ſignifies the corruption of the whole nature of man: and the ſpirit is the gift of regeneration, (as hath been ſhewed.) It may be demaunded, how theſe twaine being but qualities can be ſaid to fight together? Anſ. The fleſh and the ſpirit are mixed together in the whole man regenerate, and in all the powers of the ſoule of man. Fire and water are ſaid to bee mixed in compound bodies: light and darknes are mixed in the aire at the dawning of the day. In a veſſell of luke-warme water, heat and cold are mixed together: we cannot ſay, that the water is in one part hotte, and in another colde, but the whole quantity of water is hot in part, & colde in part. Euen ſo the man regenerate, is not in one part fleſh, & in another part ſpirit, but the whole minde is partly fleſh, and partly ſpirit, and ſo are the will, and affections throughout, partly ſpirituall, and partly carnall. Now vpon this mixture it comes to paſſe, that the powers of the ſoule are carried and diſpoſed diuers waies: and hereupon followes the combate.

The ſecond point concernes the meanes whereby this combate is made: and that is, a two-folde Concupiſcence, expreſſed in theſe words, The fleſh luſteth against the ſpirit, and the ſpirit against the fleſh. The luſt of the fleſh ſhewes it ſelfe in two actions. The firſt is, to defile and repreſſe the good motions of the ſpirit. In this reſpect Paul ſaith, when I would do good, euill is preſent: and the law of the fleſh rebels against the law of the minde, Rom.7.21.23. Hereupon the fleſh, is fitly reſembled by the diſeaſe called Ephialtes or the mare, in which men in their ſlumber, think they feele a thing as heauy as a mountain lying on their breſts, which they can no way remooue. The ſecond action of the fleſh, is, to bring forth, and to fill the minde with wicked cogitations, and rebellious inclinations. In this reſpect concupiſcence is ſaid to tempt, intice, and drawe away the minde of man, Iam.1.14. Againe, the luſt of the ſpirit hath two other actions. The firſt is, to curbe and reſtraine the fleſh. Thus S. Iohn ſaith, that the ſeede of grace keepes the regenerate that they cannot ſinne, 1.Ioh.3.9. The ſecond action of the ſpirit is, to ingender good motions, cogitations, and inclinations, agreeable to the will of God. Thus Dauid ſaith, that his raines did teach him in the night ſeaſon, Pſal.16. And the Prophet Iſai ſaith, Thine eare ſhall heare a voice, ſaying, here is the way, walk in it, when thou turneſt to the right hand or to the left, cap.30.v.21. And this voice, (no doubt) is not onely the voice of ſuch as bee teachers, but alſo the inward voice of the Spirit of God in vs. And thus by the concurrence of theſe contrary actions in one & the ſame man, is this combate made.

The third point is, concerning the cauſe of this combate, in theſe words (and theſe are contrary one to another.) The contrariety of the fleſh and the ſpirit, makes the combate. And the contrariety is very great, for the ſpirit is the gift of righteouſnes: and the fleſh ſtands in a double oppoſition to it, for it is firſt of all, the want of righteouſneſſe, and ſecondly, a proneneſſe to all vnrighteouſneſſe: that is to ſay, not a ſingle, but a double priuation or want of the grace or gift of God. Hence I gather, that man hath no freedome of will in good duties, before his conuerſion, becauſe hee is then wholly fleſh, and wants the Spirit of God: and the fleſh is flat contrary to the ſpirit: and one contrary hath no power at all to bring forth the effect of his contrary. And hence it followeth, that there are no ſuch works, whereby a man may prepare himſelfe to his owne iuſtification; for though the minde bee enlightened with a generall faith, yet man before he be iuſtified, is nothing but fleſh: and fleſh beeing in nature oppoſite to the ſpirit, can make no preparation for the ſpirit, no more then darkneſſe can make preparation for the entrance of light.

B The fourth point is, concerning the perſons in whome this combate is to bee found. And they are beleeuers, (not vnbeleeuers or wicked men:) ſuch as the Galatians were, to whom this combate is ſaid to belong. It may bee alleadged, that naturall men haue a combate in them. For they can ſay, I ſee and approoue that which is good, but I doe that which is naught. Anſ. This combate is betweene the naturall conſcience, and rebellious affection: and it is incident to al men that haue in them any conſcience, or light of reaſon. But the combate of the fleſh and the ſpirit, is of another kind, for in it the mind is carried againſt it ſelfe, the will againſt it ſelfe, and the affections againſt themſelues: by reaſon they are
C partly ſpirituall, and partly carnall. Secondly, not all beleeuers haue this combate in them, but onely ſuch as be of yeares: for infants, though they haue the ſeede of grace in them, yet doe they want the act or exerciſe therof: and therfore they feele not this combate, becauſe it ſtands in action. Thirdly, this combate is in the godly for the time of this life onely, becauſe in death the fleſh is aboliſhed, and conſequently the combate it ſelfe.

The fift point is, in what things doth this combate ſhew it ſelfe? Anſ. In all the actions of men regenerate, which Paul ſignifies, when hee ſaith, ye cannot doe the things which ye would. For example: in praier, ſometime we feele feruent deſires, and ſometime againe deadneſſe
D of ſpirit; ſometimes faith, ſometimes doubting. This combate is in all the actions of the godly, ſpecially in good actions. Thus much Paul teacheth, when he ſaith, I finde by the law of God, that when I would doe good, euill is preſent, *Rom.*7.21. And, I do not the good which I would, but the euill which I would not, that doe I, v.19. And that we miſtake not, it muſt be remembred, that Paul ſpeakes all this of himſelfe, as being regenerate: that he ſpeaks it not of this or that action, but of the courſe of his life, in which he willed and endeauoured to doe that which was good, & acceptable to God. And that appeares by the very words, when hee ſaith, to will is preſent with me. And, I would doe good, but I doe it not. Marke further, while Paul wils & endeuours to do that which is good, if he faile & do amiſſe, he may well ſay, It is not I that do it, but the fleſh that dwels in me. And vngodly men for the couering of their wickednes, if they ſay (as they doe) that it is their fleſh that ſinneth, and not they, they abuſe the holy doctrine, and example of Paul.

The laſt point, concernes the effect of the combate, which is to hinder the godly, that they cannot doe that which they would, and that three waies. Firſt, it makes them that they cannot ſinne, that is, liue in practiſe of any one ſinne, 1. Ioh. 3. 9. Secondly, if at any time they fall, it ſtaies and keepes them, that they ſinne not with full conſent of will. For they ſay when they ſin, The euill which I hate, that doe I. Thirdly, though in the ordinarie courſe of their liues they doe that which is good, yet by reaſon of this combate, they faile in the doing of it. Rom. 7. 18. To will is preſent with me, but I finde no meanes to fulfill or accompliſh that which is good. Euen as a ſicke man that is in recouery, for his affection, thinkes hee is able to walke a mile or twaine, and yet by reaſon of faintnes and weaknes, is ſcarce able to walke once or twice about his chamber: So the regenerate man, for affection, inclines to the beſt things, and yet by reaſon of the fleſh, failes in the doing of them.

Thus much of the combate, the vſe followes. Hence I gather, that concupiſcence or luſt after baptiſme, in the regenerate, is a ſinne. For the luſt of the ſpirit, is the thing that God requireth and approoueth: now the luſt of the fleſh is directly contrarie to it, as a defect or priuation thereof: and therefore the luſt of the fleſh is properly a ſinne, whether conſent of will go with it, or no.

Againe, hence it followes, that workes of the regenerate, are mixed workes, that is, good workes indeed, yet not perfectly good, but partly euill: for ſuch as the cauſe is, ſuch is the effect: now the minde and will of man, are the cauſe of his workes, and the minde is partly carnall, and partly ſpirituall: ſo alſo is the will: and therefore the workes that proceede from them, are partly ſpirituall, and in part carnall. Vpon this ground it followes, that all the works of regenerate men, are ſinfull, and in the rigour of iuſtice deſerue damnation. Obiect. Sinne is the tranſgreſſion of the law: good workes are no tranſgreſſion of the law: therfore good workes are no ſinnes. I anſwer to the minor. The tranſgreſſion of the law is two-folde; One, which is directly againſt the law, both for matter, and manner: the ſecond is, when that is done which the law requires, but not in that manner it ſhould be done. And thus good workes become ſinneful. The duty which the law requires, is done, but it is not done perfectly as it ought to bee done, by reaſon of the fleſh. Secondly, it is alleadged, that good workes are from the Spirit of God: and that nothing proceeding from the Spirit of God is ſinne. Anſw. Things proceeding from the Spirit of God alone, or from the Spirit immediately, are no ſinnes: now good workes proceed not only from the ſpirit, but alſo from the minde and will of man, as inſtruments of the ſpirit. And when an effect proceedes from ſundry cauſes that are ſubordinate, it takes vnto it the nature of the ſecond cauſe: hereupon workes are partly ſpirituall, and partly carnall, as the minde and will of the doer is. Thirdly, it is alleadged, that good workes pleaſe God: and that things pleaſing God, are no ſinnes. Anſ. They pleaſe God, becauſe the doer is in Chriſt, and ſo pleaſeth God. Againe, they pleaſe not God before, or without pardon; for they are accepted, becauſe God approoues his owne worke in vs, and pardons the defect thereof. Laſtly, ſome obiect on this maner. No ſinnes are to be done: good workes are ſinnes: therefore not to be done. Anſ. They are not ſimply ſins, but onely by accident. For as God commaunds them, they are good: and as godly men doe them, they are good in part. Now the reaſon holds onely thus: That which is ſin, ſo far forth as it is a ſin, or if it be ſimply a ſinne, is not to bee done. Now then vpon this doctrin it follows, that there is no iuſtification by works, nor no fulfilling of the law, for the time of this life.

Thirdly, hence it followes, that the grace of God for the time of this life, is mixed with his contrary, the corruption of the fleſh. This mixture the godly feele in themſelues to the great griefe of their harts. When they would beleeue, their mindes are oppreſſed with vnbeleefe. They ſee more ignorance in themſelues, then light of knowledge. There are a number amongſt vs, that ſay, they know as much as all the world can teach them, that they do perfectly beleeue in Chriſt, and euer did, that they loue God with all their hearts, and did neuer ſo much as doubt of the mercy of God. But theſe men are voide of the grace of God: they are like empty barrels that make a great ſound: they neuer knew what is meant by the combate of the fleſh and ſpirit.

Fourthly, we are here to be admoniſhed, in al duties of religion to vſe induſtry, & paines, by willing, ſtriuing, and endeauouring to the vttermoſt, to do that which we ought to doe. We muſt vſe asking, ſeeking, knocking. Mat. 7. 7. We muſt with Paul vſe wraſtling in our praiers to God, Rom. 15. 30. They that would haue knowledge in the booke of God, muſt doe more then heare a Sermon: they muſt ſtriue againſt their ignorance, and blindnes, and laboriouſly exerciſe their ſenſes in the diſcerning of good and euill. They that would beleeue, muſt ſtriue againſt their naturall vnbeleefe, and endeauour to beleeue. Bleſſed (ſaith Salomon, Prou. 28.) is the man that feares himſelfe, or inures himſelfe to feare. Paul ſaith of himſelfe, that hee laboured and tooke paines to keepe a good conſcience, Act. 24. 16.

Laſtly, by reaſon of this combate, wee are put in minde to vſe ſobrietie, and watchfulneſſe ouer our owne corruptions, with much and

A and inſtant prayer, leſt we fall into temptation, Matth. 26. 41. We ſhould practiſe theſe more then wee doe: for beſide the enemies without, we haue an enemy within that ſeekes our perdition.

18 And if ye bee lead by the ſpirit, ye are not vnder the law.

In the 13. verſe Paul propounds a maine rule of good life, Giue no occaſion to the fleſh: and for the better keeping of this, hee giues a ſecond rule, verſ. 16. Walke in the ſpirit. Of this ſecond rule, he giues two reaſons. The firſt is taken from the contrariety of the fleſh and the ſpirit, v. 17. The ſecond is in theſe words: They that walke according to the ſpirit, are freede from the curſe of the law.

B In theſe words, Paul ſets down three things. The firſt is the office of the ſpirit, which is, firſt of all, to regenerate & renew all the powers of the ſoule; and ſecondly, to guide and conduct them that are regenerate, Pſal. 143. 10. In this guidance or conduction, there are foure actions of the ſpirit. The firſt is, Preſeruation, whereby the holy Ghoſt maintaines the gifts of regeneration in them that are regenerate. The ſecond is, Cooperation, whereby the will of God as the firſt cauſe, workes together with the regenerate will of man, as the ſecond cauſe. And without this cooperation mans will brings forth no good action: no more then the tree which is apt to bring forth fruite, yeelds fruit indeede, till it

C haue the preſence and cooperation of the Sunne, & that in the ſeaſon of the yeare. The third, is Direction, whereby Gods Spirit ordereth and eſtabliſheth the minde, will, and affections, in good duties, 2. Theſ. 3. 5. The laſt, is Excitation, whereby the ſpirit ſtirres and ſtill mooues the will & mind, after they are regenerate: becauſe for the time of this life, the grace of God is hindered and oppreſſed by the fleſh. Hereupon after regeneration, there muſt ſtill be new inclining, Pſal. 119. 36. new drawing, Cant. 1. 3. new working of the will and the deede, Phil. 2. 13.

Hence it followes, that beſide the antecedent, and firſt grace, there is neceſſary a ſubſequent, or ſecond grace. For we doe not that

D good which we can doe, vnleſſe God by a ſecond grace make vs doe it, as hee made vs able to doe it by the firſt grace.

The ſecond thing is, the office of all true beleeuers: and that is, to reſigne themſelues in ſubiection to the worke of Gods Spirit. Now Gods Spirit workes in and by the word of God. And hereupon this ſubiection hath two parts. The firſt is, to make triall, inquiry, & examination, what is the good wil of God, in euery thing, Rom. 12. 2. Thus did Dauid, Pſal. 119. 49. I am thine, ſaue me, for I ſeeke thy commandements. The ſecond part is, to denie our ſelues, and to conforme our mindes, conſciences, wils, affections, in all things, to the fore-ſaid will of God, Rom. 12. verſ. 2. Let all ſuch as deſire to be ſpirituall, remember and make conſcience to practiſe this.

The third is, the Priuiledge of beleeuers, in the laſt words, Ye are not vnder the law. Vnderſtand this, in reſpect of the curſe and condemnation of the law: for otherwiſe we are all vnder the law, as it is the rule of good life. The priuiledge then is, that God doth not impute the defects of obedience to ſuch as truly beleeue & repent, but hee accepts their imperfect obedience, as perfect & abſolute. This ſerues to comfort them that greeue, becauſe they feele the want of ſanctification in themſelues. For if they can and doe will that which is good, & endeuour themſelues in the courſe of their liues according to their will, let them not feare ouermuch, when their obedience is defectiue: becauſe they are not vnder the rigour of the law: & therfore God accepts the will & endeauour to obey, for obedience. And the conſideration of Gods mercifull acceptation, muſt ſtirre vs vp to an earneſt care & conſcience of all good duties.

19 Moreouer, the workes of the fleſh are manifeſt, which are, adultery, fornication, vncleannes, wantonnes.

21 Enuie, murthers, drunkenneſſe, gluttonie, and ſuch like: whereof I tell you before (as I alſo haue tolde you before) that they which doe ſuch things, ſhall not inherit the kingdome of God.

Paul before deliuered this rule in generall tearmes, Giue no occaſion to the fleſh; and, fulfill not the luſts of the fleſh. Now hee proceedes further in way of declaration, to make a Catalogue or rehearſall of the particular works of the fleſh, which were in vſe, and knowne to the Galatians. And this he doth for waighty cauſe. For wee are full of blindneſſe, and ſee not our corruption: and we are full of hypocriſie, and therefore ready to eſteeme our ſelues ſpirituall, when wee are carnall. And therefore this Catalogue ſerues fitly as a table or glaſſe, to diſcouer the corruption of mans heart, by the fruits thereof.

After Pauls example, euery man ſhall doe well to make a Catalogue of the ſinnes of his whole life. By this meanes ſhall wee better know our ſelues, and take a manifeſt view of our ſinnefull condition.

In this Catalogue, I conſider three things: the condition of the workes of the fleſh: the kindes of them: and the puniſhment thereof. The condition is, that the workes of the fleſh are ſaid to be manifeſt, not only to God, but euen to men that haue the light of reaſon, & naturall conſcience. Hence it followes, that there is a matter ſufficient for the condemnation of them that neuer knew the Goſpel. For though the fleſh it ſelfe be ſecret and hidden, yet the workes of the fleſh are manifeſt to the naturall man. And this muſt further admoniſh vs, neuer to hide or excuſe our ſinnes, but freely to confeſſe them before God, & before men alſo, when need requires.

A Whether wee confeſſe them or no, they are manifeſt: and the ingenuous confeſſing or vncouering of thē, is the way to couer them, Pſal.32.1.4.

Touching the kinds or ſorts of the works of the fleſh, they are in number ſeauenteene: and I may reduce them to foure heads. The firſt ſort are againſt chaſtity, the ſecond againſt religion, the third againſt charity, the laſt againſt temperance.

The workes of the fleſh againſt chaſtity, are foure: and they are placed in the firſt ranke, for iuſt cauſe: for by them, men are brought to reprobate minds, Rom.1.28. and to be without ſenſe or feeling, Eph.4.19. and the body which ſhould be the temple of the holy Ghoſt, is made a ſtable and a ſtie for the diuell.

Deut.22.22,23,24.

Adultery] it is the incontinency of perſons married, or of perſons whereof one at the leaſt is married, or betrothed. I ſay betrothed: becauſe one and the ſame puniſhment is deſigned to married, and betrothed perſons: and therefore the ſinne is like in both.

If adultery, which is the breach of wedlocke, be a worke of the fleſh, then damnable is the decree of Pope Syricius, that mariage it ſelfe was the pollution of the fleſh. It may bee obiected, that young widowes by marrying haue damnation, and breake the faith of baptiſme, 1.Tim.5.12. Anſ. They are not ſaid to breake the faith of baptiſme, becauſe they marry: but becauſe they waxe wanton againſt Chriſt, and ſo marry: that is, caſt off the reines of obedience, by committing fornication, and then for to couer their offence, they marry. This I take to be the right ſenſe of that place.

Adulterie is named in the firſt place, and that for ſpeciall cauſe. For as it is a common, ſo is it alſo a great ſinne. For it is the breach of the couenant of marriage, made in the preſence of God, and vnto God: and therefore it is called the couenant of God, Prou.2.17. It is the puniſhment of idolatry, Rom.1.24. It is a ſinne greater then theft, Prou.6.30.32. The committers of this ſinne cut off themſelues from humane ſocietie, and become men of death, and women of death, according to Gods law. And it will neuer be well with humane ſociety, till adulterers be made fellons, their liues taken from them, and their goods confiſcate. Laſtly, this ſinne bringeth the ruine of the families of adulterous perſons: and it ſets a fire in them that burnes to deſtruction.

Fornication] it is the incontinencie of ſingle perſons. Marke how it is made a manifeſt worke of the fleſh. Hence it followes, that fornication is no light matter, or a thing indifferent, as ſome haue taught. It may be obiected, that it is numbred among things indifferent, Act.15.29. for with ſtrangled, and blood, is ioyned fornication. Anſwer. The Gentiles indeede eſteemed it as a thing indifferent: and hereupon it may bee, it is ioyned with things indifferent. But the iudgement of the Church was otherwiſe: and this opinion of the Gentiles is confuted by Paul, 1.Cor.6. Againe, it may be obiected, that the Lord commanded the Prophet Oſe to take vnto him an harlot, Oſe 1.2. Anſ. It was done in type or figure: and then the wordes of the Lord carrie this ſenſe, Take vnto thee a wife of fornications, that is, prophecy and publiſh, that thou art like one that takes a wife of fornication. Againe, if the thing were done indeede, yet did not the Prophet take an harlot, to liue in fornication with her, but at Gods commandement, to liue with her according to Gods ordinance, namely, in marriage.

B Againe, hence I gather, that there is no warrant for the tolleration of fornication. For it is a foule and manifeſt worke of the fleſh. Magiſtrates may not doe euill, that good may come thereof, Rom.3.8. Whoſoeuer doth euill, muſt feare: becauſe the Magiſtrate beares the ſword to puniſh, Rom.13.4. And the commandement of God was, that there muſt be no whore in Iſrael, Deut.23. Therefore the permiſſion of the Stewes in Rome is without warrant: and the rather, becauſe there the prohibition of marriage (in ſundry orders of men) beares ſway.

Vncleanneſſe] the incontinencie againſt nature, as inceſt, the ſinne of Sodome, and ſuch like. Marke, where theſe ſinnes were C knowne, there they are named particularly by Paul, as among the Romanes, Rom.1.27.28. and to the Corinthians, 1.Cor.6.9,10. but where they were not knowne, as in Galatia, there they are onely mentioned generally, leſt by the naming of them, he ſhould after a ſort teach them.

Wantonneſſe] that is, the open profeſſion and oſtentation of incontinency: by vnchaſt words, wanton geſtures, and wanton apparel, Hence it appeares, that wee are to deteſt all ſignes of incontinency: and that we are to be chaſt not only in deed, but alſo in our words, geſtures, and behauiours.

D The puniſhment of theſe ſinnes is in verſe 21. in theſe words, They which doe theſe things, ſhal not inherit the kingdome of God. And it muſt be remembred, that this threat or curſe muſt be applied to euery one of theſe ſinnes particularly.

The vſe. There are a number of men that liue ſecretly in theſe ſinnes, adultery, fornication, &c. And becauſe they profeſſe Chriſtian religion, and ſometime come to the Church, and to the Lords table, they thinke all is well, and they ſuppoſe there is no danger. Thus make they a couenant with hell and death, Iſa.28. But they deceiue themſelues: for God is vnchangeable, and all his threats ſhall bee accompliſhed. And no adulterer, no fornicatour, no vncleane perſon ſhall enter into the kingdome of God, whatſoeuer men ſuppoſe or dreame.

Secondly, by the conſideration of this threat, wee are admoniſhed to flie adulterie, A fornication, wantonneſſe, &c. They ſay, theſe are but trickes of youth. Belike then it is but a tricke, to loſe the kingdome of heauen. Salomon ſaith, Bleſſed is the man that feareth, or causeth himſelfe to feare. Prou. 28. 14. now that ſhall bee done, when wee terrifie our ſelues from theſe offences by ſetting Gods iudgements before vs.

Laſtly, ſome man may ſay, what ſhall they doe that are ouertaken with theſe ſinnes, if the doers thereof cannot enter into the kingdome of God? Anſ. Their caſe is dangerous: and there is but one way to helpe them in the world: and that is to ceaſe from adultery, fornication, B vncleannes, wantonnes, and to doe the contrary. Pſal. 34. 14. And this will do the deed: for the promiſe of God is, He that confeſſeth his ſinnes, and forſaketh them, ſhall haue mercie. Prou. 28. 14. And this promiſe of God is not contrarie to his threat. For ſo long as men are doers of theſe ſinnes, or any one of them, they are out of Gods kingdome: and when they ceaſe to be doers of them, and cōtrariwiſe exerciſe themſelues in the works of chaſtitie, poſſeſſing their veſſels, that is, their bodies, in ſanctification & honour, the caſe is altered, and they muſt no more bee reputed doers of theſe ſinnes. For God accepts men not as they haue bin, but as they are.

In that theſe foure ſinnes, Adulterie, fornication, &c. are manifeſt workes of the fleſh, we are C taught three things. The firſt is, that we muſt ſtocke vp the roote of theſe ſins, that is, mortifie the paſſion of concupiſcence, Col. 3. 5. 1. Theſſ. 4. 5. which is nothing els but an inordinate inclination to theſe vices. And it is mortified in vs, if wee learne to feare God in his word, & in the commandement that forbids adultery. For the feare of God cleanſeth both heart and life. Ioſeph tempted by his Miſtris to folly, by this meanes eſchewed the offence, ſaying, Shall I doe this, and ſinne againſt God? Further, it muſt be remembred, that without holineſſe, no man can ſee God, or haue fellowſhip with him. Heb. 12. 14. And while the luſt of concupiſcence beares the D ſway, there is no holineſſe: and therefore no fellowſhip with God.

The ſecond rule is, that all occaſions of theſe ſinnes muſt be cut off, two ſpecially, Idleneſſe, and the pampering of the bodie. For Idlenes, conſider David, who when he was out of ciuell warres, and free from baniſhment, at peace in his owne houſe, his wandring affection carried him to commit adulterie. And the Iſraelites when they were ſtored & pampered with all the bleſſings of God, gaue themſelues to the committing of theſe offences. Ier. 5. 7. 1. Cor. 10. 7. and the people of Sodom and Gomorrha, Ezech. 16. 49.

2. Sam. 11.

The third rule is, that all ſignes of theſe vices muſt be auoided and deteſted, that is, any ſpeech or action, that may ſignifie or giue ſuſpition of an incontinent diſpoſition, as light talke, wanton behauiour, curiouſneſſe and exceſſe in trimming of the body, ſuſpected companie, or companie that may in likelihood be ſuſpected. For it is Gods will, that not onely the vice it ſelfe, but alſo the appearance of euery vice ſhould be auoided. 1. Theſſ. 5. 22.

Idolatry] The ſecond ſort of ſinnes follow, which are againſt godlineſſe: and they are three, Idolatry, Witchcraft, Hereſie. Idolatrie is the worſhip of Idol-gods. An Idol is taken two waies. Firſt of all, a fiction, or a thing meerely deuiſed, is an Idol: againe, when we conceiue a thing that is, otherwiſe then it is, it is an Idol. So likewiſe Idolatrie is twofold. One is, whē ſome thing that is not God, is ſet vp in the roome of God: & that is done three waies. One is, when the godhead is aſcribed to a creature, as when it was ſaid to Herod, The voice of a God, & not of a man. The ſecōd is, whē any property of the godhead is aſcribed to the creature. The third is, when the affections of our hearts are giuen to the creature. Thus couetouſnes is called Idolatry, Col. 3. 5. becauſe it makes men put their affiance in riches.

Act. 12. 22.

The ſecond kind of Idolatry, is to worſhip the true God with deuiſed worſhip, as namely with, in, and at images, ſet vp to the honour of God. This Idolatrie is forbidden in the ſecond commaundement, as Moſes hath expounded the law, Deut. 4. 16. Thou ſaweſt no image in the day I appeared in Mount Sinai: therefore thou ſhalt make no image, namely of God. It is alleadged, that the commaundement onely forbids the making of the images of falſe gods. I anſwer, and of the true God alſo. Aarons calfe was an image of the true God. Exo. 32. 5. And it muſt be obſerued, that Iehu deſtroied the Idols of Baal, 2. King. 10. 26. and withall remained ſtill in the ſinne of Ieroboam, v. 31. which was to worſhip the calues in Dan and Bethel, which were images of Iehoua. And for this he is diſcommended.

The vſe. By this we ſee that the Romiſh religion is a carnall religion: for it teacheth Idolatrie foure waies. Firſt, it inioyneth men to giue to the Conſecrated Hoſt the name and honour of God. And thus they ſet vp vnto themſelues a breaden god made with mans hand. An Idol, as abominable as euer was among the Gentiles. Secondly, it teacheth men to inuocate Angels, and Saints departed: and thereby it giues vnto them the ſearching of the heart, the hearing and helping of all men, at all times, and places, according to their ſeuerall neceſſities: and theſe things are the properties of the godhead: and therefore, whether they call this inuocation, Latria, or Doulia, it matters not: it is flatte idolatrie, becauſe the honour of God is giuen to the creature. Thirdly, it teacheth that we may put confidence in workes, ſo it bee done in ſobriety. Laſtly, it adoreth God, in, at, and before Images: and ſo it bindes the preſence, grace, & operation of God to them, without his word. Papiſts alleadge for themſelues, that they intend to worſhip none in images but the true God. I anſwer, it is nothing that they ſay. Not mans intention, but Gods will makes Gods worſhippe. Let them ſhew Gods will, if they can. If they cannot, then they muſt know that it is but an Idol-god which they worſhip. For there is no ſuch God in nature that will bee worſhipped in images, but an Idoll of their owne braines. They alleadge againe, that God may as well be worſhipped in Images, as a Prince in the chaire of Eſtate. I anſwer, the reaſon is not like. The worſhip of Images is religious, the reuerence to the chaire of Eſtate, is meerely ciuill, and in ciuill reſpect, and according to the Princes will, and ſo is not the bowing to Images according to Gods will. Let them prooue it if they can. That God was worſhipped before the Arke, we approoue of it. For it was his word and will. Let vs heare the like word for Images of God & Chriſt, and then we are ready to reuoke the charge of idolatry.

Againe, by this we ſee that many of vs are very carnall. For though wee deteſt outward Idolatry yet the inward Idolatry of the heart abounds among vs. For looke where the heart is, there is the God. Now the hearts of men are vpon the world, and vpon the riches, and pleaſures thereof. For them we take the moſt care, and in them we place our chiefe delight, whereas God in Chriſt ſhould haue all the affections of our hearts.

Witchcraft] The word φαρμακεία properly ſignifies, poiſoning, but here it is fitly tranſlated, witchcraft: becauſe all poiſoning is comprehended vnder murther which followeth. And the Magitians of Egypt, Exod. 7. are called φαρμακοὶ, in the tranſlation of the Seauentie, as alſo the wiſe men, Dan. 2. Now if they had bin but poiſoners, they had not bin fit for Pharaohs and Nabuchadnezzars turne, neither would they haue deſired their preſence and helpe.

Witchcraft ſignifies all curious arts, wrought by the operation of the diuell. For the better conceiuing of it, I will conſider two things. The ground thereof, and the kindes of witchcraft.

The ground is a League or Compact with the diuell. It is twofold; an Expreſſe or open league, and a ſecret league. The open league is, when men inuocate the diuell in expreſſe words, or otherwiſe make any manifeſt couenant with him. The ſecret league is, when men vſe meanes, which they know haue no force, but by the operation of the diuell. And the very vſing of ſuch meanes in earneſt, is an implicit couenanting with the diuell. If by true faith, wee make a couenant with God; then a falſe faith, in the vſe of Satanicall ceremonies, makes a couenant with the diuell. And without this, there is no practiſe of witchcraft.

A There are three kinds of witchcraft. The firſt is, Superſtitious diuination, which ſerues to tell men their fortunes, or to reueale ſecrets by the flying of fowles, by the intralles of beaſts, by the obſeruation of ſtarres, by conſulting with familiar ſpirits, & ſuch like. Deut. 18. 11. The ſecond is, iuggling, which is to worke wonders, or feates, beyond the order of nature, as did the Magitians of Egypt. The third, is charming or inchanting; which is by the pronouncing of words, to procure ſpeedy hurt, or ſpeedie helpe.

The vſe. By this we ſee that we are a carnall people. For in the time of diſtreſſe vpon extremitie, figure-caſting, and charming, are ouermuch vſed. And yet both of them are B full of ſuperſtition, and folly. For the reuealing of things to come is Gods: & the ſtarres are vniuerſall cauſes, working vpon all things alike: and therefore it is not poſſible by them to foretell euents that are contingent, or caſuall. And words haue no force in them but to ſignifie. And therefore when they are applied to cure diſeaſes, they are abuſed to a wrong end, and their operation is from the diuell. And for this cauſe they are to be auoided of Chriſtian people. It may be ſaid, how may we diſcerne of charmes, that we may the better auoide them? Anſw. Keepe this Rule in memorie alwaies. Such obſeruations, of whoſe force and efficacie, there is no reaſon or cauſe either in the thing done, or in the C inſtitution of God, haue their operation and efficacie, from ſome compact and ſocietie with the diuell. As for example: ſcratching of the ſuſpected witch, is ſaid to be a meanes to cure witchcraft: but indeed it is a charme, and a practiſe of witchcraft. For it hath no ſuch force from the Inſtitution of God, becauſe it is againſt the ſixt commaundement: and no naturall reaſon can be rendred, why drawing of blood, ſhould cure witchcraft. The action therefore is a ſacrifice to the diuell: and in way of recompence, the cure is done by him.

It may be ſaid, what ſhould wee doe in D diſtreſſe, if ſuch helpes may not be vſed? Anſw. We are to vſe approoued & ordinary means: and for the reſt, namely the euent, to leaue it vnto God, liuing by faith, & caſting our care on God, and quieting our hearts in his will, whatſoeuer comes to paſſe. It is a want of faith thus to make haſt for deliuerie before the appointed time. And whereas it is thought that ſome perſons haue a gift of God, by words preſently to cure any diſeaſe, whereupon they are called wiſe or cunning men and women, it is falſe: it is no gift of God, but rather a curſe, that leaues them to be deluded by the diuell, who is the worker of theſe cures, when Satanicall and ſuperſtitious meanes, and that in a falſe faith, are vſed.

For the better conceiuing of the ſinne, it may be demanded what is a witch? Anſw. One that wittingly, and willingly, vſeth the aſſiſtance of the diuell himſelfe for the reuealing of ſecrets, for the working of ſome miſchiefe, or for the effecting of ſome ſtrange cure. I ſay wittingly, to put a difference betweene witches, and ſome ſuperſtitious perſons: who vſe charming, and by it do many cures, perſwading themſelues, that the words which they vſe, haue force in them, or that God hath giuen them a gift, to doe ſtrange things. Such people in a naturall honeſtie, deteſt all knowne ſocietie with the diuel; in that reſpect they are not the witches which the Scripture adiudgeth to death, yet are they at the next dore to them: and therefore they are to bee admoniſhed by Magiſtrates and Miniſters to relinquiſh their ſuperſtitious practiſes, and that vpon a double ground. I. Nothing hath efficacie but by the Ordinance of God. And this efficacie was either put into the thing in the creation, or ſince by ſome new Inſtitution in the word. And the efficacie of things that comes by any other meanes, is by Sataniˈcall operation. II. Charmes, inchantments, and ſpels whatſoeuer, haue no force, vnleſſe we beleeue that they can doe vs good. Now this faith is a falſe faith, and the ſeruice of the diuell. For wee muſt beleeue nothing, doe nothing, without, or againſt the word of God. If theſe two rules bee obſerued, not onely charming, but all witchcraft ſhall be baniſhed out of the world.

Againe, it may be demanded, what are the ſignes that ſerue to diſcouer a witch? Anſw. This diſcouerie is very hard. For witches doe their feates in cloſe manner, not onely by foule and open curſing, but alſo by faire ſpeaking, and by praiſing of things. And hereupon we haue a faſhion in England, when we praiſe any thing, withall to bleſſe it, (as to ſay, It is a goodly childe, God ſaue it) that our ſpeech may not be ſuſpected of witchcraft. Neuertheleſſe, there are fiue ſpeciall thing that ſerue to diſcouer a witch. One is, the free confeſſion of the accuſed, or ſuſpected witch. The ſecond is, the confeſſiõ of the aſſociates of the witch. The third is, Inuocation of the diuell. For that is to renounce baptiſme, and to make a league with the diuell. The fourth is, Euidence, that the partie hath intertained a familiar ſpirit, in the forme or likeneſſe of ſome viſible creature. The fifth is, Euidence of any action or actions, that neceſſarily preſuppoſe a league made with the diuell. As for example: if the partie ſhew a mans face in a glaſſe: though he profeſſe angelicall holineſſe, he is in league with the diuell, by whoſe meanes the feate is wrought.

There are beſides theſe, other ſignes, but they are either falſe, or vncerten. A man is ſicke, hee ſuſpects that he is bewitched: hee takes it on his death that ſuch a party hath bewitched him. All this is nothing, but the ſuſpition of one man, & therefore no proofe. Likewiſe the teſtimonie of ſome wizzard, is but the teſtimonie of one, and it is the diuels teſtimonie, and therefore not to be receiued.

A Againe, neighbours fall out; threatnings are vſed in anger: afterward, the partie threatned, is either ſicke, or he dies; hereupon the partie that vſed threatning wordes, is accuſed of witchcraft. And this is the common courſe. But great circumſpection muſt bee vſed, for ſickneſſe and death, may ariſe of many other cauſes. Laſtly, markes in the bodies of men and women, are vncerten ſignes of witches. All this I note the rather: becauſe if a iudgement befal a man in his family, preſently (according to the common faſhion) he ſaith hee is hurt by euill tongues, & challengeth ſome one or other, of witchcraft: whereas his owne ignorance, vnbeleefe, contempt of Gods B word, and Sacraments, &c. are the onely witches that hurt him, and pull downe Gods iudgements vpon him.

Hereſies] The word hereſie generally ſignifies any opinion, either good or bad. More ſpecially, it ſignifies any errour in religion. Thus Eccleſiaſticall writers take it. For they condemne for heretickes ſuch as erred in ſmaller points, holding the foundation, as Vigilantius, Nouatus, &c. And the very Opinion that there are Antipodes, was condemned for hereſie, though it bee a matter of ſmall moment. Yet moſt properly, Hereſie may bee thus defined: It is an errour in the foundation of Chriſtian religion, taught and defended with obſtinacie. Thus Paul ſaith, Tit. 3. 11. that an he- C retike is peruerted, that is, put beſide the foundation: and condemned of himſelfe in his ſinne, that is to ſay, he erres obſtinatly euen againſt his owne conſcience.

I ſay that hereſie is an errour in religion, to put a difference betweene an errour in Diuinitie, and an errour in Philoſophie, which is not tearmed hereſie: and againe, to put difference betweene ſchiſme, and hereſie: for hereſie is in doctrine, ſchiſme in manners, order, regiment. Againe, I ſay hereſie is an errour, in the foundation of religion, to diſtinguiſh it from errours that are in ſmaller points of Diuinitie. Some teach that Abraham was borne the 70. of Terah, ſome the 130. of Terah. Both cannot be true: yet neither of them are here- D ſie. Some teach that Daniels weekes beginne ſtraight after the returne out of captiuitie: others teach that they muſt begin 80. yeares after: both cannot be true: yet neither opinion is hereſie. So there are ſundry opinions touching Ophir, Tarſhiſh, (to which Ionah fled) and Decapolis in the Goſpell: and all cannot be true: yet they are not hereſies, becauſe they concerne onely times, and places, and other circumſtances of the Bible. Laſtly, I ſay that hereſie is maintained with obſtinacie, to diſtinguiſh hereſie, and a ſingle error. For there are three things in hereſie, an errour in the maine doctrine, conuiction of the partie touching his errour, and obſtinacie after conuiction.

The vſe. In that hereſie, an errour in the minde or vnderſtanding, is made a worke of the fleſh: hence it followes, that the word fleſh, ſignifies more then ſenſualitie: namely, the corruption of the higher powers, euen of the minde and conſcience: though Papiſts teach otherwiſe.

Againe, if hereſie be a worke of the fleſh, our dutie is, to deteſt & eſchew hereſies. And that wee may for euer preſerue our ſelues from them, three rules muſt be obſerued.

I. We muſt propound vnto our ſelues the right Principles of religion. For as euery Arte hath his confeſſed principles, ſo hath Diuinitie: The head and chiefe Principle whereof, is this; All Scripture of the Prophets, and Apoſtles, is giuen by inſpiration of God. This is the foundation of all true faith: here is the higheſt ſtay and ſtoppe. This principle is the demonſtration of all doctrines, and concluſions: and it hath no principle aboue it ſelfe, whereby it is to bee confirmed. As for humane reaſon, it is no principle of religion. For it is imperfect and erronious, and ſerues onely to make men without excuſe. Indeede in the minde of man, there are certaine naturall concluſions, that there is a God, and that he is to be worſhipped, &c. but the certenty of theſe is, in the written word. We can by reaſon diſpute of the creation of the world, but a full certenty we haue not by reaſon, but by faith in the word. Heb. 11.3. Againe, the Papiſt makes the authoritie of the Church a principle. For that is the firſt ground which they lay downe, that wee muſt captiuate our ſenſes, to the authoritie of the Church. But this is no principle in religion. For we cannot imagine a Church without faith: and faith cannot be without the word of God. It may be ſaid, that Scripture is the ſenſe of the written word: and this ſenſe muſt bee from the Church. Anſw. Scripture it ſelfe is both the gloſſe, and the text. Scripture is the beſt interpreter of it ſelfe. And the ſenſe which is agreeable to the words of the text, to the ſcope of the place, to other circumſtances, and to the analogie of faith, in the plainer places of Scripture, is the proper and infallible ſenſe of Scripture. Thus fetching the ſenſe of Scripture from it ſelfe, wee ſhall keepe our ſelues within the limits of Scripture, and in the matter of our ſaluation haue certenty of faith, which we ſhall neuer haue, if we liſten to reaſon, tradition, and the authority of men.

II. Reade the Scriptures: and be a doer of them in the exerciſes of inuocation, faith, repentance, then ſhalt thou neuer be a heretike. It is Gods promiſe, Ioh. 7. 17. If ye will obey, ye ſhall know whether my doctrine be of God or no. Pſal. 25 14. The ſecret of the Lord is reuealed to them that feare him. Marke them that make apoſtaſie, and become Papiſts: they are ſuch as neuer had a minde to loue and obey the religion, in which they haue beene baptized, and brought vp.

III. Col. 2. 8. Let no man ſpoile you through Philoſophie. Paul doth not condemne the Philoſophy of the Gentiles, but he puts a caueat, that it be vſed with circumſpection, as Merchants vſe the ſea, to wit, in eſchewing rockes, and ſands, and pirats. So ſtudents may vſe the Philoſophie of the Gentiles, but they muſt take heed, leſt their minds be corrupted with the errours thereof, which are to be conſidered. Natural Philoſophie giues too much to nature, or to ſecond cauſes; and too litle to God. It puts downe principles flatte againſt the word, as the eternity of the world, and the mortalitie of the ſoule. Moral Philoſophie, placeth happineſſe in ciuill vertue out of Chriſt: it teacheth, that vertue is a meane or mediocritie of affection, whereas in true vertue there is not onely a reſtraint or moderation of affections, but alſo the renouation of them by regeneration. It teacheth that Vrbanity in ieſting and frumping, is a vertue: Paul ſaith no, Eph. 5. 4. It teacheth that Magnanimitie, whereby a man thinkes himſelfe worthie of great honour, is a vertue: but it is contrarie to Chriſtian humility, Pſal. 131. 1, 2. Laſtly, it teacheth that man hath a freedome of will in good actions: which doctrine applied by the Schoolemen to matters of religion, is falſe and erronious.

The third head of ſinnes are ſuch as are againſt Charitie, & they are in number eight.

The firſt, is Enmitie: of it I conſider three things. The firſt is, whether it be a ſinne, or no? for ſomewhat may bee obiected to the contrarie.

Obiect. I. Pſal. 139. 21. Doe not I hate them that hate thee? Anſ. David here ſpeakes of the hatred, whereby he hated Gods enemies, not in reſpect of their perſons, but in reſpect of their ſinnes, whereby they were enemies of God. And this hatred is commendable, and not here to be vnderſtood.

Obiect. II. Luk. 14. 26. Hee that will be a diſciple of Chriſt, muſt hate father, and mother, and his owne ſoule. Anſw. This hatred is not ſimply commanded, but only in a certaine reſpect, namely, as father, and mother, and a mans owne ſoule, are in compariſon oppoſed to God, and Chriſt, in regard of whom they are vtterly to be deſpiſed.

Obiect. III. Rom. 9. 13. God choſe Iacob, and hated Eſau: and we muſt bee like vnto God. Anſ. We are to be like vnto God in holineſſe, and the duties thereof, and not in the ſoueraignty and Lordſhippe ouer the creatures, whereby he either loues or hates them.

Obiect. IV. It is the vniuerſall nature of all creatures to flie their contrarie: therefore men may hate their enemies. Anſw. Man and man are not contrarie in nature, or naturall properties, but are all one fleſh: the contrarietie that is, is by reaſon of the corruption of nature.

The ſecond point is, what is this Enmitie? Anſw. It is a peruerſe diſpoſition of minde, whereby men remember iniuries, diſcourteſies, and vnkindneſſes, and carrie about them a purpoſe, and deſire, to requite like for like, when time, and place ſhall ſerue. Thus did Eſau hate Iacob, Gen.27.41. and Abſolom his brother Ammon, 2.Sam.13.

The third point, where is this Enmitie? Anſ. Euery where among vs. For we daily ſee perſon diuided againſt perſon, familie, againſt family, and Corporation againſt Corporation. This ſhewes that we are carnall: and that Gods kingdome takes no place among vs as it ſhould. For in it the lambe and the wolfe quietly dwell together. Iſa.11. The remedy of this Enmitie is, That all be of one minde, deſire, and affection, in the receiuing and furthering of the Goſpel of Chriſt, 1.Cor.1.11. If in the maine point there bee a concord, in leſſer matters the agreement will be eaſie.

Debate] It is a contention in words, whereby men ſtriue, who ſhall ſhew moſt courage, who ſhall get the victorie, and who ſhall carry away the laſt word, no reſpect had of equitie, or truth. In this reſpect, crying, or lifting vp the voice, in reaſoning, is condemned, Eph.4.31.

Emulation] There is a good emulation, and that is when men ſtriue to bee like to them that excell in vertue, or to goe beyond them. And it is commanded by the holy Ghoſt, 1.Cor.14.12. and it were to bee wiſhed that it were more common then it is. Beſide this, there is a carnall emulation, whereby men that excell in any thing, grieue that any ſhould be equall to them, or goe beyond them.

The vſe. If to grieue at another mans excellency, be a worke of the fleſh, then it is our duty to reioyce in the excellencie of others. Thus did Moſes when Eldad and Medad prophecied. Numb.11.29. And Iohn the Baptiſt, when Chriſt increaſed, and he decreaſed. Ioh.3.29,30. And Paul gaue thankes as well for the graces beſtowed on the Churches, as for gifts beſtowed on himſelfe.

Anger] Of it I conſider three points. The firſt is, whether there bee any lawfull anger? Anſw. Yea: Chriſt (in whom was no ſinne) was angry. Mark.3.5. When there is a iuſt cauſe of anger, then is anger iuſt. When there is a manifeſt offence of God, there is a iuſt cauſe of anger: therefore anger is then iuſt.

The ſecond is, when is anger a ſinne? Anſw. When men are haſtie to be angrie. Eccleſ.7.11. and are offended at euery thing that goes againſt their mindes. Or againe, hauing a iuſt cauſe to be angrie, yet they keepe no meaſure in their anger.

The third point, is the Remedie. And that is here ſet downe. Haſtineſſe is a worke of the fleſh, or of corrupt nature, and it barres men from the kingdome of heauen: and therefore it is to be auoided.

Contention] There are ſundrie kindes of lawfull contention, as contention with the enemie in iuſt warre: contention at the barre with an aduerſarie in a iuſt cauſe: contention in diſputation with an heretike: contention in Schoole-diſputation for exerciſe and trialls ſake.

A Contention is carnall, and ſinfull, in reſpect of matter, and manner. In matter, when men contend for things, for which they ſhould not contend, as the diſciples for Primacie. Luk.22. or when contention is without forgiuing, forbearing, or ſuffering; and that in trifling matters. 1.Cor.6.7. Contention likewiſe is faulty, in reſpect of maner, when men wilfully defend their owne priuate cauſes, no regard had, whether they bee right or wrong, true or falſe: and by this meanes they often oppugne truth, or iuſtice, or both. Of this kinde are the warres of the Rebell in Ireland: the warres of the Spanyard in the low Countries: and the ſuites of many quarrelſome and contentious perſons among vs.

B The vſe. Doe nothing by contention. Phil.2.2. And therefore wee muſt forgiue, put vp, as much as may be, and yeeld of our right.

Seditions] The originall word ſignifies ſuch diſſentions in which men ſeparate one from another: and that is done two waies, either by ſchiſme in the Church, or by faction in the Commonwealth. διχοστασίαι, Queſt. Why are not wee ſchiſmatikes in England, Scotland, Germanie, conſidering we haue diſſented and ſeparated our ſelues, from the Church of Rome? Anſ. We indeed haue ſeparated our ſelues, but they of the Church of Rome are ſchiſmatikes: becauſe the cauſe of our ſeparation is in them: namely, their Idolatrie, and their manifold hereſies. C The caſe is the like: A man threatens death to his wife: hereupon ſhee ſeparates. Yet not ſhee, but he makes the ſeparation: becauſe the cauſe of ſeparation, and the fault, is in him.

For the auoiding of ſchiſme, and ſedition, remember two rules. I. So long as a church, or people, doe not ſeparate from Chriſt, we may not ſeparate from them. II. Pro.24.21. Feare the King, and meddle not with them that varie, that is, make alterations againſt the lawes of God, and the King. Indeed ſubiects may ſignifie what is good for the ſtate, and what is amiſſe: but to make any alteration in the ſtate, either ciuill, or eccleſiaſticall, belongs to the ſupreame Magiſtrate.

D Enuie] It is a compound of carnall griefe and hatred. For it makes men grieue and repine at the good things of others, and to hate the good things themſelues. Thus the high Prieſts of enuy hated Chriſt, and all his moſt excellent ſayings, and doings, Matt.27.18. At this day, they which haue any good things in them, are commonly condemned for hypocrites, and their Religion for hypocriſie. All this is but the cenſure of Enuie.

The vſe. That wee may depart from Enuy, we muſt loue them that feare God: and loue the gifts and graces of God whereſoeuer they be: euen in our enemies.

Murthers.] Obiection 1. A plant liues, a beaſt liues, and man liues: the cropping of

A plant, and the killing of a beaſt, is no ſinne: why is it then a ſinne to kill a man? Anſw. God hath giuen liberty for the two firſt, and hath reſtrained vs in the latter. Againe, the life of a plant is but the vigour in the iuyce, and the life of a beaſt is but the vigour in the bloud, Gen. 9.4. but the life of man is a ſpirit and ſpirituall ſubſtance. Thirdly, man is of the ſame fleſh with man, and ſo is neyther plant, nor beaſt.

Obiect. II. The Magiſtrate kils without ſinne. Anſ. The killing which is in the name of God, by publique reuenge, is not murther. And Paul only condemnes that killing, when men take the ſword, and vpon their owne wils ſlay and kill by priuate reuenge.

Obiect. III. Sampſon is ſaid to kill him-B ſelfe, Iudges 16, 30. and he ſinned not in ſo doing. Anſwer. Sampſon was a Iudge in Iſrael, and tooke publique reuenge of his enemies: and in this reuenge he hazarded his life, and loſt his life. Though he died in the execution, yet his intent was not to kill himſelfe, but onely to take reuenge. Secondly, his exāple is ſpeciall. For he was in his death a figure of Chriſt. The words, Matth. 2. Hee ſhall be called a Nazarite, are firſt ſpoken of Sampſon, & then applyed to Chriſt, in whom was verified that which Sampſon figured. For as Sampſon conquered his enemies more in his death, then in his life: euen ſo did Chriſt.

Obiect. IV. For the auoiding of ſome great C danger, or ſome great ſinne, as the deniall of Chriſt in perſecution, men may make away themſelues: ſo ſaid the Donatiſts. Anſ. Death is no remedy in this caſe, but faith in the promiſe of God: which is, that he will giue an iſſue in euery temptation, 1. Cor. 10.13.

The vſe. Seeing murther is a worke of the fleſh: our duty is by all meanes to preſerue both our own, and our neighbours liues. Life is a treaſure. For by it we haue time and libertie to glorifie God, to doe good to our neighbours, and to ſaue our owne ſoules.

The ſinnes of the fourth ſort, are againſt temperance: and they are two: drunkenneſſe, gluttonie. For the better conceiuing of the na-D ture of theſe ſinnes, we are firſt of all to conſider the right manner and meaſure of eating and drinking, of which I deliuer two rules. I. We may vſe meate and drinke, not onely for neceſſitie, but alſo for delight, Pſal. 104. 15. II. That meaſure of meate and drinke, which in our experience makes vs fit both in bodie and mind for the ſeruice of God, and for the duties of our callings, that meaſure (I ſay) is fit, conuenient, and lawfull. This is a confeſſed principle in the light of nature.

Drunkenneſſe then is, when men drinke, either in wine or ſtrong drinke, beyond this meaſure: ſo as there followes an intoxication of the powers of the ſoule. And in the ſin there are two things: exceſſiue drinking, & the diſtempering of the powers of the ſoule.

Gluttonie is, when men in eating, goe beyond the meaſure before preſcribed. This gluttonie, is that, which now a daies is called reuelling, rioting, ſwaggering. And it is fitly ioyned with drunkenneſſe. For there are men that vſe to drinke exceedingly, and will not be drunke: and for all this, they are not free from blame: becauſe they drinke out of meaſure. To be giuen to drinking, and to loue to ſit by the cuppe, when there is no drunkenneſſe, is a ſinne, 1. Tim. 3.3.

Theſe ſinnes are ſaid to be rife among vs. The manner of many is, to meete together, and to fill themſelues with wine or ſtrong drinke, while their ſkinnes will hold. Afterward they giue themſelues to dicing, carding, dauncing, ſinging of ribauld ſongs: and thus they paſſe the day, the night, the weeke, the yeare.

But we muſt be put in mind, to deteſt, and to flie theſe vices. Inducements to this dutie are many.

I. Gods commaundement, Keepe not company with drunkards, and gluttonous perſons. Pro. 23. 20. Be not drunke with wine, in which is exceſſe, Eph. 5.18.

II. The puniſhment of drunkenneſſe, is plague, peſtulence, famine, captiuitie, Iſa. 5. 11, 12, 13.

III. The example of the bruite beaſt, that in eating and drinking, keepes meaſure, and takes no more then will ſuffice nature. The horſe and the aſſe, may be ſchoolemaſters to many of vs.

IV. If we cannot forſake a cup of wine, or beere, which is not needfull for vs, we ſhal neuer be able to forſake wife & children, houſe and land, for Chriſts ſake. If we haue not the command of our ſelues in a trifle, we may neuer hope for it in waightie matters.

V. There are dangerous effects of drunkenneſſe. Firſt, it deſtroies the bodie. For it inflames the blood with an vnnaturall heate: & this vnnatural heate, ingenders vnnaturall thirſt, which ingenders immoderate drinking, whence comes dropſies, conſumptions, all cold diſeaſes, and death. Secondly, it hurts the minde: for the ſpirits of the heart and braine (beeing the immediate inſtruments of the ſoule) are by drinking diſtempered and inflamed: and hereupon ariſe wicked imaginations, and diſordered affections. And thus the diuell in the roome of Gods image, ſets vp his owne image: and makes the minde a ſhoppe of all wickedneſſe. Thirdly, the vile imaginations and affections that are in men when they are drunke, remaine ſtill in them when they are ſober: ſo as beeing ſober they are drunke in affection.

In fauour of drunkenneſſe, it is alleadged, that Noahs drunkenneſſe is remembred in Scripture, but no where condemned. Anſw. VVhile Moſes ſets downe the foule effects that followed Noahs drunkenneſſe, hee doth indeed condemne it. Secondly, his example is noted in Scripture: as a warning to all ages following. Thirdly, his ſinne may bee leſſened, though not excuſed, becauſe hee had no experience of wine.

Obiect. II. Ioſeph and his brethren, did drinke and were drunke together, Gen.43. verſe laſt. Anſw. The meaning of the text is, that they dranke liberally, or that they dranke of the beſt together. For the word (ſhakar) ſignifies not onely to be drunke in drinking, but alſo to drink liberally, or to drink of the beſt drinke, Hag.1.6.

Obiect. III. Learned Phyſitians, as Raſis, Auicenna, and others teach, that it is greatly for health, to bee drunke once or twice in a moneth. Anſw. As learned as they, teach the contrary. And we may not do any euill, or ſin againſt God, for any good to our ſelues.

Obiect. IV. It is ſaid to be neighbourhood and good fellowſhip. Anſw. It is drunken fellowſhip. The right fellowſhip is in the doctrine of the Apoſtles, prayer, Sacraments, and the workes of mercy.

Thus much of the workes of the fleſh. Now followes the puniſhment of them, of which I conſider three things. Firſt, a Premonition, in theſe words, whereof I tell you before, as I alſo haue tolde you before. Secondly, the deſignment of the puniſhment, in theſe words, ſhall not inherit the kingdome of God. Thirdly, the deſignment of the perſons, in theſe words, They which do ſuch things.

In the premonition, is ſet downe the office of al miniſters: and that is, often to forewarne the people of the future iudgements of God for their ſinnes, Mich.3.8. Iſa.58.1. And this may eaſily be done. For they may know the ſinnes of men by experience, and the iudgements of God due to euery ſinne, they may finde in the word of God.

Againe, all people are warned by this, often to meditate of the future iudgements of God. Thus did Dauid, Pſalme 119.120. and Paul, who knowing the terrour of the Lord, was mooued to doe his duty, 2. Corin.5.11. The olde world neuer ſo much as dreamed of Gods iudgements, before they came vpon them, and ſo they periſhed, Mat.24.39.

The puniſhment of theſe ſinnes is, not to inherit Gods kingdome. Gods kingdome ſometime ſignifies the regiment of God, whereby he rules all things, in heauen & earth. More ſpecially, it ſignifies a ſtate or condition in heauen, whereby God and Chriſt is al things to all the Elect, 1.Cor.15.28. And thus it is taken in this place. And an entrance or beginning to this happy eſtate, is in this life, when men in their conſciences and liues are ruled by Gods Word, and Spirit. It muſt here further bee obſerued, that not to inioy the kingdome of God, is to be in torment, in hell: becauſe there are no more but two eſtates after this life: and therefore to bee out of heauen, is to be in hell.

The vſe. I. This muſt teach vs aboue all things to ſeeke Gods kingdome, and to eſta-

A bliſh it in our hearts: and that we ſhall doe, if we know the will of God, and yeeld ſubiection to it, in the duties of repentance, faith, new obedience.

II. The kingdome of God comes by inheritance: therfore there is no merit of good workes.

The perſons which are puniſhed, are ſuch as are doers and practiſers of the workes of the fleſh. Marke the words, not ſuch as haue bin doers, but ſuch as are doers. The word ſignifies a preſent and a continued act of doing amiſſe.

The vſe. Here is the difference betweene the godly man, and the vngodly. The godly man fals into the workes of the fleſh, and be-
B ing admoniſhed thereof, hee repents and recouers himſelfe, he doth not ſtand in the way of ſinners, though ſometime he enter into it, Pſal.1.1. The vngodly man, when he fals, lies ſtill in his ſinne, and heapes ſinne vpon ſinne, and makes a practiſe of euill.

I. Warning. They which are priuie to themſelues of any of the former workes of the fleſh, muſt bewaile their offences, and vtterly forſake them. For if we be found doers of any one work of the fleſh, there is no hope of ſaluation.

II. Warning. They which haue turned vnto God from the workes of the fleſh muſt be conſtant, and take heede of going backe, leſt they loſe the the kingdome of God.

C 22 But the fruit of the Spirit, is loue, ioy, peace, long-ſuffering, gentleneſſe, goodneſſe, faith, 23 Meekenes, temperance: againſt ſuch there is no law.

For the better obſeruing, and the more eaſie vnderſtanding of the rule in the 16.v. Walke in the Spirit, Paul here ſets downe a Catalogue of the workes of the Spirit. In the Catalogue, I conſider three things, the property of the workes of the Spirit, in theſe words, The fruite of the Spirit: the kindes of workes, and they are nine: the benefit that comes by them, in theſe words, Againſt ſuch there is no law.

D The fruite of the Spirit] It is the property of the works of Gods Spirit in vs, to bee called the fruits of the Spirit. And by this, much is ſignified: namely, that the Church is the garden of God, Cant.4.16. that teachers are planters & ſetters, 1.Cor.3.9. that beleeuers are trees of righteouſneſſe, Iſa.61.3. that the Spirit of God is the ſappe and life of them: and good workes and vertues, are the fruites which they beare.

In that the workes of the Spirit, are called fruites thereof, hence it followes, that there are no true vertues, & good affections, without the grace of regeneration. The vertues of the heathen, how excellent ſoeuer they ſeemed to be, were but ſhadowes of vertue, and ſerued onely to reſtraine the outward man, and no farther.

Againe, here wee ſee the efficacie of the Spirit, which makes men fruitfull or bearing trees of righteouſnes, Pſal. 1.3. yea trees that beare fruit in their olde age, Pſal. 92.14. Here we haue cauſe to caſt downe our ſelues. For the moſt of vs, are barren trees, that beare no fruit, but the bad fruits of the fleſh: and therfore wee may iuſtly feare the curſe that God laid vpon the fig-tree, Luk. 13.7. and looke euery day to be ſtocked vp, Mat. 3.10.

Againe, good workes are made acceptable to God euen by his grace, and therefore they are called the fruits of the ſpirit: and hence it is, that they are acceptable to God, Rom. 15.16. Wee that are by nature wilde branches, muſt be taken out of olde Adam, & ſet into Chriſt: and after our inſition draw a new ſap and life from Chriſt, namely his Spirit, and then our actions ſhall be fruits of the Spirit, and conſequently acceptable to God.

Laſtly, hence it followes, that free-will of it ſelfe is like a dead or rotten piece of wood, and that it beares no fruite, but as it is quickened by the Spirit, Ioh. 15.5.

Thus much of the property: now follow the kindes of the workes of the Spirit.

Loue] It may be demanded, how it is a fruit of the Spirit? Anſ. Firſt, the Spirit of God workes faith, then regeneration, then loue, 1. Tim. 1.5. Loue followes faith: becauſe wee muſt know firſt that wee are loued of God, before wee can loue God, 1. Ioh. 4.19. And loue followes regeneration: becauſe till the will and affections bee chaunged, there is no place for loue. The Papiſts then erre, who teach, that the firſt act of loue, that is, the inclination to loue God and man aright, is in nature: and that the ſecond act, namely, the exerciſe of loue is from the ſpirit. Again, they erre in that they teach, that charity or loue is the formall righteouſnes of a Chriſtian. For it is a fruite that followes regeneration.

The loue here mentioned, is either of God or of man. The loue of God, is an holy affection, whereby wee loue God in Chriſt for himſelfe. There are three ſpeciall ſignes, whereby it is diſcerned, I. a deſire of fellowſhip with God, and Chriſt, and the holy Spirit: and therefore to be much and frequent in the vſe of the word and prayer: becauſe in the word God ſpeakes to vs, and in prayer wee ſpeake to him. II. To loue the word of God aboue all earthly treaſure: and to treade our owne wils vnder foot, and to deſire that Gods will may be preferred in all things, 1. Ioh. 2.5. There are many houſes among vs, where the cards and tables are walking, but the Bible is ſeldome or neuer ſeene. And this argues the want of loue. III. The loue of them that loue God and Chriſt.

The loue of our neighbour, is to loue him ſimply, in, and for the Lord, and for no other by-reſpect. The ſigne of this loue is, to loue not in word, but in deede. And this is to loue in deede, to ſhew loue, and to doe good (when we are wronged and abuſed) to them A that wrong vs and abuſe vs.

Ioy] Ioy is two-folde, ioy of glory after this life, and the ioy of grace in this life: and it ſtands in three things. The firſt is, to reioyce in the true acknowledgement of God, that he is our God, and reconciled to vs in Chriſt. The ſecond is, to reioyce in the worke of our regeneration. The third is, to reioyce in the hope of eternall glory.

This ioy of grace hath a double fruit. Firſt, it moderates all our ſorrowes, & makes vs reioyce in the midſt of our afflictions, 1. Theſſ. 5.16. Secondly, it cauſeth men to reioyce at the good of their neighbours, Rom. 12.15. And this ioy is here meant ſpecially. For ioy B is here oppoſed to enuy, and emulations.

This fruite ſhewes, that wee are moſt of vs bad trees. For the ioyes of the world be for the moſt part in iniquity, and in the workes of the fleſh. And it is our common ſinne not to reioyce, but to pine away with griefe, as Cain did, when we ſee Gods bleſſing vpon our brother.

Peace] It is a care and deſire to maintaine concord, as much as may bee, if it lye in vs, Rom. 12.18. It is an excellent vertue. For the kingdome of God ſtands partly in peace, Rom. 14.17. For the maintenance of peace, obſerue two rules. I. Neither take offence, nor giue offence. Abraham choſe rather to loſe his right, then to offend Lot, Geneſ. 14. C and ſo did Chriſt, Matth. 17.27. II. Seeke to edifie one another, either do good, or take good, Rom. 14.19.

Long ſuffering] is to moderate our anger, and deſire of reuenge, when many and great wrongs are done to vs. It is an excellent fruit, but it takes very hardly in theſe parts. For our manner is, a word and a blow: a word and a ſtabbe: a word and a writte.

Set and ſowe this plant in the furrowes of your hearts, and that the weed of reuenge ouergrow it not, vſe theſe remedies: I. Gods commaundement forbids raſh anger, Iam. 1.19. for it is a degree of murder. II. The example of God, who is ſlow to anger: and of Chriſt, who is meeke and lowly, Matth. 11. III. All wrongs done to vs by men, come D by Gods prouidence, to which wee are to ſubiect our ſelues. IV. The goodneſſe of God, who forgiues more to vs, then wee can forgiue. V. There is danger of Gods anger. For vnleſſe wee forgiue, we are not forgiuen. And wee craue forgiueneſſe, as wee forgiue. VI. It is the duty of loue to ſuffer and beare, 1. Cor. 13. VII. It is a point of iniuſtice, to reuenge our ſelues, for then wee take to our ſelues the honour of God; and againſt all equity, we are both the parties, and iudge, and witneſſe, and all. VIII. We are often ignorant of the mindes of men, in their actions, and of the true circumſtances thereof: and ſo may eaſily be deceiued.

Obiect. 1. Anger is a ſudden affection: therefore it cannot be ruled. Anſ. Meanes are to be

A vſed before-hand, when we are quiet: then ſhall we better reſtraine it.

Obiect. II. It is hard for fleſh and blood to doe this. Anſ. We are more then fleſh and blood. For wee haue the Spirit of God, elſe we are but hypocrites.

Gentleneſſe] Gentleneſſe is to giue good ſpeech, and to ſhew good countenances, euen to them that wrong vs, and abuſe vs, without any minde, or deſire to reuenge, Rom. 12. 14. Eph. 4. 32.

The curteſie of the world, in the cap and the knee, and all the complements of humanity, is commonly ſeuered from good affection: and it is often the maske of enmity: and B therefore it is but a worke of the fleſh. Right curteſie is with an honeſt heart, to bleſſe when we are wronged.

Goodneſſe] It is a vertue, whereby we communicate to others, the good things that are in vs, for their good and benefit. It is preſcribed by Paul in other tearmes, when hee ſaith, Communicating to the neceſſities of the Saints, Rom. 12. 13.

Queſtion I. What are wee to communicate? Anſwer. The gifts of our minde, our temporall goods, yea our liues too, if neede be, 1. Ioh. 3. 16.

Queſtion II. Why are we ſo to do? Anſw. Wee are members all of one body; and wee are members one of another, Eph. 4. 25. And C it is Gods pleaſure, that men ſhall bee inſtruments of good mutually one to another.

Goodneſſe reſpects either the body, or the minde. Goodneſſe concerning the body, hath many actions: as to feede the hungry, to giue drinke to the thirſty, to harbour the harbourleſſe, to cloath the naked, to viſit the ſicke, and them that are in priſon, Matthew 25. 35, 36. to bury the dead, 2. Sam. 2. 5. Laſtly, to lend freely and liberally, to ſuch as be decaied and impoueriſhed, Deut. 15. verſ. 7.

Goodneſſe concerning the ſoule, is to endeauour, partly by counſel, and partly by example, to gaine the ſoule of our neighbour D to God: and it ſtands in foure actions: to admoniſh the vnruly, to comfort the diſtreſſed, to beare with them that are weake, and to be patient towards all, 1. Theſſ. 5. 14.

Goodneſſe is hard to bee found in theſe daies among men. The common practiſe is according to the common prouerb, Euery man for himſelfe, and God for vs all. The ſtudy of men is, how to gather goods, honours, riches, for themſelues, and for their children: and the common good is not aymed at. Good orders hardly take place, as namely, the order for the poore; and the reaſon is, the want of goodneſſe in vs. If any profeſſe any ſhew of goodneſſe more then the reſt, they are ſure to be deſpiſed and reproched at euery hand: and this ſhewes that there is little goodneſſe among men.

Faith] Firſt, we are here to vnderſtand faith A towards God, which is to beleeue the remiſſion of our ſinnes, and our reconciliation with God in Chriſt.

This faith is common to all among vs: yet is it but a falſe, dead, and ceremonial faith in many men. Reaſon I. Faith comes by the hearing of the word of God preached, Rom. 10. 14. but this faith in many is conceiued without preaching: for they ſay they beleeue their ſaluation by Chriſt, and withall they liue in the perpetuall neglect or contempt of the publike miniſterie. II. True faith is ioyned alwaies with the exerciſes of inuocation, and repentance: yet in many among vs, this faith is without any conuerſion or change of B heart & life: and therfore is but a dead faith. III. True faith is mixed with contrary vnbeleefe, ſo as they that beleeue, feele in themſelues a want of faith, and much vnbeleefe. But there are many among vs that ſay, they perfectly beleeue, & that they neuer ſo much as doubted in all their liues. Now ſuch a faith is a vaine perſwaſion. IV. Many that boaſt of their faith in Chriſt, want faith in the prouidence of God, touching food and raiment. And that is manifeſt, becauſe they vſe any vnlawfull meanes to helpe themſelues: now if their faith faile them in a ſmaller point, it cannot be found in the greateſt of all.

Secondly, by faith is meant faith towards men, and that ſtands in two things. One is, to ſpeake the truth from the heart: the other C is, to be faithful and iuſt in the keeping of our honeſt promiſe and word.

This faith is a rare vertue in theſe daies. For the common faſhion of them that liue by bargaining, is, to vſe gloſing, facing, ſoothing, lying, diſſembling, and all manner of ſhifts. And with many it is a confeſſed principle, that there is no liuing in the world, vnleſſe wee lye and diſſemble. They that deale with chapmen, ſhall hardly know what is truth, they haue ſo many wordes, and ſo many ſhifts. In this reſpect, Chriſtians come ſhort of the Turkes, who are ſaid to bee equall, open, and plain-dealing men, without fraud or D deceipt.

Our care therefore muſt be to cheriſh, and maintaine among vs, the vertue of faith and truth. Reaſons. I. Gods commandement, Put away lying, and let euery man ſpeake the truth to his neighbor, Eph. 4. 15. II. By truth we are like to God, whoſe waies are all truth: who hates a lying tongue, Prou. 6. 17. whoſe Spirit is the ſpirit of truth. III. Lyars beare the image of the diuell. He is the father of lies, Ioh. 8. 44. ſo oft then as thou lieſt, thou makeſt thy tongue the inſtrument of the diuell. IV. Eternal puniſhment in the lake that burns with fire and brimſtone, Reu. 22. 15. Here marke, that lyars are entertained at the ſame table with murderers and theeues: and the lyar neuer goes vnpuniſhed, Prou. 19. 5. V. To ſpeake the truth from the heart, is a mark of Gods childe, Pſal. 15. 2. And he whoſe faith failes towards men, ſhall much more faile toward God.

Meekeneſſe] The ſame in effect with long ſuffering. The difference is, that meekneſſe is more generall, and long-ſuffering is the higheſt degree of meekeneſſe.

Temperance] It is the moderation of luſt and appetite, in the vſe of the gifts and creatures of God. For the better practiſing of this vertue, remember theſe foure rules.

I. We muſt vſe moderation in meates and drinkes. This moderation is to eate & drinke with perpetuall abſtinence. And abſtinence is to take leſſe, then that which nature deſires, and not more. And that meaſure of meate and drinke, which ſerues to refreſh nature, & to make vs fit for the ſeruice of God & man, is allowed vs of God, and no more.

II. Wee muſt vſe moderation in our apparell. And that is, to apparell our ſelues according to our ſexe, according to the receiued faſhion of our country, according to our ability. Here the common fault is, to bee out of all order: for none almoſt know any meaſure. Euery meane perſon now adaies will bee a gentleman, or gentlewoman.

III. Wee muſt vſe moderation, in getting of goods: and that is, to reſt content, if we haue food and raiment for our ſelues, and them that belong vnto vs, 1. Tim. 6. 8. Here is our ſtint, we may not deſire to be rich, verſ. 9. The king himſelf muſt not multiply his gold and ſiluer, Deuteron. 17. 17. and yet hath hee more neede of golde and ſiluer, then any priuate man.

IV. There muſt bee a moderation in the ſpending of our goods: contrary to the faſhion of many that ſpend their ſubſtance in feaſting, and company, and keepe their wiues and children bare at home.

Againſt ſuch there is no law] Here Paul ſets downe the benefit that comes by the former vertues. The words carry this ſenſe: Againſt ſuch vertues, and againſt perſons indued with ſuch vertues, there is no law. And that for two cauſes. One, there is no law to condemne ſuch. Secondly, there is no law to compell them to obey: becauſe they freely obey God, as if there were no law.

Marke then the condition of ſpirituall men. They are a voluntary and free people, ſeruing God freely, without conſtraint. So as if Chriſt would not giue vnto them life euerlaſting, yet would they loue him, and deſire the aduancement of his kingdome. On the contrary, if there were no hell, and God would not puniſh adultery, drunkennes, blaſphemy, &c. with eternall death, yet would a Chriſtian man abſtaine from theſe things: becauſe he knowes that they diſpleaſe Chriſt, and hee is gouerned with another ſpirit, to which they are contrary.

Alſo theſe words are a reaſon of verſe 16. There is no law againſt them that do theſe things: therefore walke in the ſpirit.

A 24. For they that are Chriſts, haue crucified the fleſh, with the affections and luſts.

The ſcope. In theſe words, Paul prooues that which he ſaid immediatly before, namely, that there is no law againſt ſpirituall men. And of this hee giues a double reaſon. One is, ſpirituall men are Chriſts: therefore there is no law againſt them. The ſecond is this: That is crucified in ſpirituall men, which the law condemneth, namely, the fleſh, with the affections and luſts: therefore there is no law to condemne the ſpirituall man.

In the words I conſider three points. The firſt is: What is a Chriſtian? Anſ. A Chriſtian is one that is Chriſts, (ſaith Paul:) And he is Chriſts fiue waies. I. by the right of creation. B And ſo are all men. II. by right of redemption, 1. Corin. 6. 19. III. by the free gift and donation of God the Father, Ioh. 17. 11. this donation is begun in the eternall election of God, and it is accompliſhed in our effectuall vocation. IV. by propagation. For all true beleeuers ſpring out of the blood of Chriſt: and are of his bone, and of his fleſh, as Eue was of the bone and fleſh of Adam. V. by our donation in baptiſme, in which wee conſecrate our ſelues to God and to Chriſt.

The vſe. This muſt teach vs to reſigne our ſelues to Chriſt, and to ſuffer him to raigne in our hearts, and to take the yoake of the Goſpel vpon vs. But alas, it is far otherwiſe with C many of vs. For ſome liue in the tranſgreſſiō of the very law of nature, ſo far are they from obſeruing the Goſpel. Others thinke it ſufficient to follow the teaching of nature. If they worſhip God in ſome generall manner, if they liue peaceably, and hurt no man, and meane well (as they ſay) then all is well: and the doing of further duties, is reputed curious preciſenes. And ſuch perſons vſually reduce religion to the practiſe of nature. They will bee ſaued by faith: but their faith is nothing elſe but fidelity. They ſay they worſhip God, but this worſhip is nothing els, but their good meaning, and their good dealing. Theſe D men are content that Chriſt ſhall bee theirs: but they will not bee Chriſts, and ſuffer him to haue a Lordſhip ouer them.

II. If thou bee Chriſts, then commend thy ſoule, and life, and all that thou haſt, into the hands of Chriſt. This was the practiſe of Dauid, Pſal. 22. of Chriſt vpon the croſſe: of Paul, 2. Tim. 1. 12. And this practiſe is the onely way to obtaine ſafety and protection. For Chriſt no doubt will keepe his owne.

III. Comfort. If thou be Chriſts, he will care for thee, & nothing ſhall be wanting vnto thee that is for thy good, Ioh. 17. 24. Rom. 8. 33. Therefore remember this leſſon. Neuer greeue ouermuch, neuer care ouermuch, neuer reioyce ouermuch in the things of this world. If thou wert at thine owne diſpoſing and finding, it were ſomewhat: but there is one that cares for thee, namely Chriſt.

The ſecond point to bee conſidered, is, what is the fleſh? Anſ. It is the corruption of the whole nature of man. For the right conceiuing of this, wee muſt make a diſtinction of three things: Mans nature, the faculties of nature, and the corruption of both, which corruption hath two parts: the loſſe of the Image of God, and a pronenes to all wickedneſſe. Moreouer, this diſtinction muſt bee without ſeparation of nature from faculties, or of corruption from either: ſo as wee may ſay truely, that the nature, and the powers of the ſoule of man, are corrupted.

In the fleſh are two things. Affections, and Luſts. By affections, vnderſtand inordinate affections, which ſhew themſelues and beare ſway in carnall men, as anger in Cain, loue of pleaſures more then of God, in the men of the laſt times. 2. Tim. 3. 3. immoderate ſorrow in Ahab, when he could not obtaine Naboths vineyard, 1. Kin. 21. 4.

Luſts are inordinate and inſatiable deſires after the things of this world, as riches, honours, pleaſures, &c. of this ſort are couetouſneſſe, gluttony, pride, the luſt of the fleſh, &c.

The vſe. By this we ſee what a carnall man is, namely, one that is carried away with ſome inordinate affection, or ſome inordinate luſt. Herod did many good things at the aduice & motion of Iohn Baptiſt, whome hee reuerenced: yet was hee a carnall man. For hee was poſſeſſed with an inordinate loue of his brothers wife. Iudas a diſciple of Chriſt, yet a carnall man: becauſe hee was carried away with the inordinate luſt of couetouſnes.

The third point, is touching the office of a Chriſtian man. And that is, to crucifie the fleſh, with the affections & luſts. For the better conceiuing of this, Crucifying muſt be diſtinguiſhed. It is either the action of Chriſt, or our action. Crucifying, which is the action of Chriſt, is three-folde. The firſt is, vpon the croſſe, where Chriſt ſtood in our roome, and bare the burden of our ſinnes, and made an Expiation of them. In this reſpect we are ſaid to bee crucified with him, Gal. 2. 19. The ſecond is, in vs, when Chriſt conuaies the vertue of his death into the hearts of them that are ioyned to him, for the cauſing and effecting of the death of ſinne. The third is, in baptiſme, whereby Chriſt ſeales the two former to them that beleeue, Rom. 6. 3. 6.

The crucifying, which is our action, is nothing elſe but the imitation of Chriſt crucified, on this manner: He was firſt attached: ſo muſt we bring our ſelues into the preſence of God. He was arraigned: ſo muſt wee ſet our ſelues at the barre of Gods iudgment. He was accuſed: ſo muſt we indite & accuſe our ſelues of our owne ſins, at the barre of Gods iudgement. He was condemned: and ſo muſt wee iudge our ſelues, that we be not iudged of the Lord. After iudgement, we muſt proceede to execution of the fleſh: & that is, to vſe means to crucifie it: and they are three. The firſt is, by faith to apply to our ſelues Chriſt crucified: and that is to beleeue not only that Chriſt was crucified for vs, but that we alſo were crucified with him. Where this faith is, ſinne ſhal no more haue dominion. The ſecond is to beat downe the fleſh by the ſword of the ſpirit: and that is done, by a ſerious application of the commandements, and the threatnings of God, to our ſeuerall affections and luſts. The third is, to flie the occaſions of euery ſin, and to cut off the firſt beginnings of euill.

The vſe. This doctrine ſerues to condemne the drowſie Proteſtants of our time, who profeſſe Chriſt without making any change in life and conuerſation. For they are Saints in the Church, but in their common dealings they are as worldlings.

II. Secondly, they are here reprooued, that haue many good gifts of God in them, and yet neuer proceede to a thorow reformation. For they vſe to cheriſh in themſelues naughty affections, & damnable luſts. There is ſome one ſweete ſinne or other, that they cannot abide to crucifie.

III. They alſo are to be blamed that cannot abide to heare their owne particular ſins, to be noted, and reprooued. They are vncrucified & vnmortified perſons. And the word of God is the ſword of the ſpirit that ſerues to kill and deſtroy the fleſh.

IV. In afflictions be content, and quiet. For wee ought to crucifie the affections, and luſts of our fleſh: and becauſe we faile in this duty, therfore God himſelfe takes the worke in hand: and he will crucifie our corruption by his chaſtiſements.

Further, of this duty of crucifying the fleſh, there are three points to bee conſidered. I. The time when this action muſt beginne; namely, in our baptiſme, or firſt conuerſion. Therefore Paul ſaith, they that are Chriſts, haue crucified, &c. II. What muſt be crucified? Anſ. The whole fleſh, with euery inordinate affection and luſt. This makes againſt them that fly and deteſt ſome few ſinnes, and run headlong into others. III. What is crucifying? Anſ. In it are two things, the reſtraint of the exerciſe of ſinne, (which is in part in ciuill men,) and the killing of originall corruption, in al the parts and branches thereof. And that is done when wee doe not onely mourne for our corruptions, but alſo hate and deteſt them in our ſelues.

25 If we liue in the Spirit, let vs alſo walke in the Spirit.

In theſe words is contained the laſt reaſon of the rule of good life before mentioned, in the 16. verſ. For the vnderſtanding whereof, two things are to bee conſidered, what it is to liue in the Spirit? and what to walke in the Spirit? Touching the firſt. Life is two-folde: created, or vncreated. Vncreated life, is the life of God. Created is that which pertaines to the creature. And this is either naturall, or ſpirituall. Naturall life, is lead by naturall cauſes and meanes, as by meate, drinke, clothing, breathing, and ſuch like. Spirituall life, is by, and from the Spirit. Of this there be two degrees. The firſt is, when the Spirit of God takes vp his habitation in man, & withall gouerneth all the powers of his ſoule, by putting into the minde, a new light of knowledge, into the will and affections, new motions, & inclinations, whereby they are made conformable to the will of God. The ſecond degree of ſpirituall life is, when the ſpirit dwelleth in man, and gouerneth the powers of the ſoule, and further doth ſuſtaine the body, immediately without naturall meanes, 1. Corinth. 15. 44. It riſeth againe a ſpirituall bodie, that is, a body liuing in the ſecond degree of ſpirituall life, not being ſuſtained by meanes, but immediately by the eternall ſuſtentation of the ſpirit. The firſt of theſe degrees is in this life, the ſecond after this life, in, and after the laſt iudgement, when body and ſoule ſhall be reunited. And of the former, this place is to be vnderſtood.

To walke in the Spirit, is, firſt, to ſauour the things of the Spirit, Roman. 8.5,7. And that is, to minde, wiſh, like, deſire, and affect them; or, in a word, to ſubiect a mans ſelfe to the law of God, in all the powers and faculties of the ſoule. For the things reuealed in the law, are the things of the ſpirit, which ſpirit muſt at no hand be ſeuered frō the word. Secondly, to walke in the path-way of righteouſneſſe, without offence either of God or man, Pſalme 143. 10. Thirdly, to walke not ſtragglingly, but orderly by rule, by line, and by meaſure. For ſo much the word [walke] importeth, in the original, as if Paul ſhould haue ſaid, Let vs (whileſt we liue in this world) not only indeauour to do ſome one, or ſome fewe good actions, but in the courſe of our liues & callings, order our ſelues according to the rule and line of the word of God.

The vſe. This text in the firſt place, cuts off the ſhifts and excuſes of ſundry perſons in theſe daies, who profeſſe themſelues to be the children of God, and yet for their liues are much to be blamed, becauſe they lead them not according to the ſpirit, but according to the fleſh. And theſe perſons, whatſoeuer they ſay, doe in deede and in truth, deceiue themſelues, and are quite deſtitute of Gods Spirit. For if they liued in the Spirit, they would alſo walke in the Spirit; It is not an idle ſpirit in any, but it will ſhew and manifeſt it ſelfe, in a holy and orderly conuerſation. You will ſay, If ſuch perſons haue not the Spirit of God, what other Spirit haue they? Anſ. If their life bee naught, they haue an vncleane ſpirit dwelling in them: and the God of this world hath blinded their eies, and makes them that they cannot ſee the right way wherein they ſhould walke, 2. Cor. 4.4.

Againe, wee learne from hence, a true and a pregnant ſigne, whereby to diſcerne, whether any man hath Gods Spirit in his heart, or no? The life of a man will diſcouer & proclaime to all the world, before God, men, and angels, what himſelf is. If a man in the courſe of his life and calling be godly and vertuous, leading his life according to the will & word of God, in an honeſt and carefull endeauour, though he faile in ſome particulars: what euer the world thinkes of him, hee is the man that is endued with the Spirit of God.

Laſtly, this teacheth, what is the office of all Chriſtian people, namely, to walke in the Spirit, that is, to frame & order the whole courſe and tenour of their liues, according to the line and ſquare of Gods word and Spirit. A motiue to which duty may bee that fearefull threat pronounced vpon thoſe that turne aſide, and walke in their owne crooked waies, Pſal. 125.5.

26 Let vs not bee deſirous of vaine-glory, prouoking one another, enuying one another.

The ſcope. From this 26. verſe, to the 11. verſe of the chapter following, S. Paul handles the ſecond rule, which hee had propounded in the 13. verſe of this chapter: By loue ſerue one another. In the handling whereof, he firſt laboures to take away the impediments of loue: and then hee ſets downe the manner, how the rule is to be obſerued. This 26. verſe is a rule, the ende whereof, is to remooue the impediments of loue.

In this verſe foure points are eſpecially to be conſidered. Firſt, what the deſire of vaine-glory is? Anſ. It is a branch of pride, which makes men to referre all they haue, or can do, to their owne priuate glory, and aduancement. For better vnderſtanding wherof, conſider a little the excuſes that men haue, for the defence or excuſe of this ſinne.

I. Excuſe. Vain-glory in effect is no more but the ſeeking of mens approbation, which may lawfully be done. Anſ. To ſeeke the approbation of men, is no fault, ſo that it bee ſought in a good manner. The right manner of ſeeking the praiſe of men, is this: A man muſt in this life paſſe through three iudgements; the iudgement of God, of his owne conſcience, and of his neighbour: and the order of going through thē, is, in the firſt place, he muſt ſeeke for the iudgement and approbation of God: in the next, his owne: and in the laſt, his neighbors. Now the vain-glorious man takes another courſe, firſt & principally aiming at the glory and good liking of man, hauing ſmall or no regard of the two other.

II. Excuſe. There is a good boaſting, which Dauid vſed, and that we may lawfully vſe, Pſal. 7.8. Anſ. Boaſting is either lawfull, or vnlawfull. Lawful boaſting is in the Lord, when being vrged and compelled, wee confeſſe the good things that are in vs, to Gods glorie. Of this reade at large, 2. Cor. 11. Vnlawfull is, when men aſcribe the gifts that they haue of God, vnto themſelues: or hauing gifts, do arrogate more vnto thēſelues, then indeede they haue: or in a word, doe ſo eſteeme of their gifts, as if they had not receiued them from God. And this is a damnable boaſting.

III. Excuſe. Gods bleſſings we may ſeek for: and what are glory and honour, but the bleſſings and gifts of God? Anſ. There are two degrees of honour. The firſt is, the honour that euery man hath in his place and calling. For euery calling ordained by God, hath a glory annexed vnto it: which beeing the gift of God, it may be both ſought for, and enioyed. The other degree, is that which is aboue a mans place and calling, and that ought not to be ſought for. Euery perſon muſt content himſelfe with the honour which is ſorted vnto his calling. Neuertheleſſe, if God giue greater honour, hee may accept it, but where God giues it not, there it muſt not be deſired. It remaineth therefore, that vaine-glorie is a braunch of pride, wherein men principally referre al their ſtudies, counſells, indeauours, and gifts, to the honouring and aduauncing of themſelues.

The next point to be conſidered, is, why he admoniſheth the Galatians of vaine-glorie? Anſ. The Galatians were men of vnderſtanding and knowledge, and were adorned with many excellent gifts. Now, they that haue receiued good gifts of God, many times are moſt vaine-glorious. 2. Corint. 12. 7. Matth. 6. 5. And whereas all other vices feede vpon that which is euill, this vice of vaine-glorie, feeds vpon good things. For a man ſometimes wil be prowd, euen becauſe he is not prowd.

A third point to be conſidered, is, where vain-glorie is to be found? Anſ. It is no rare matter: for it is a common vice, and ſpreads it ſelfe farre and wide. Some there are, which neuer lift vp heart nor hand vnto God at home, and yet the ſame perſons in the publike aſſemblies, will make as though they prayed with great deuotion. And what is the reaſon hereof but this, that they are carried with a ſpirit of pride and arrogancie, ſeeking the commendation of men that behold them, rather then to approoue their hearts and conſciences vnto God. Of another ſort are thoſe, that haue beene old and auncient hearers of the word, who notwithſtanding doe little, or not at all profit, either in knowledge, or in good life: and the cauſe is not in the Goſpel, or in the diſpenſers of it, but in themſelues: becauſe they receiue not the Goſpel for it ſelfe, but for the praiſe & commendation of men, and for the credit and account they are in, by reaſon of Chriſtian profeſſion.

A The laſt thing, is the remedie of pride and vain-glory; which is the rather to be thought vpon, becauſe it is a great impediment of Chriſtian loue. This remedie conſiſts partly in meditation, and partly in practiſe.

Remedies in meditation, are theſe. 1. God reſiſteth all proud perſons, and giues grace to the humble, 1. Pet. 5. 5. the reaſon is, becauſe the vain-glorious man, ſeeking himſelfe and not God, robs God of his honour. Thus the proud Phariſie exalting himſelfe aboue the poore Publican, went away leſſe iuſtified, that is, not approoued of God, as the Publican was. 2. It is the worke of the diuell, to puffe vp the mind with ſelfe-liking, and conceit, B that thereby he may worke mans perdition, Gen. 3. 5. But God worketh contrarily: for hee therefore abaſeth men, that hee might in his good time, the more exalt them. 3. There is no religion in that heart, that is wholly bent to ſeeke the praiſe of men, Ioh. 5. 44. And the man that deſires to be talked of, and admired by others, doth thereby in effect giue notice vnto all the world, that his heart is not ſound in the ſight of God.

Remedies conſiſting in practiſe, are: firſt, an indeauour to acknowledge the great Maieſtie of God, and withall our owne baſeneſſe and vileneſſe before him. 2. We ought to aſC cribe all good things we haue, or can doe, to God alone, and nothing to our ſelues. For in all that befall vs, God is the principall agent, our ſelues are but tooles and inſtruments in his hand; by right therefore the commendation belongs vnto him, and not to vs. 3. In all actions and duties of religion, firſt wee muſt indeauour to approue our ſelues to God, and the next place is to be giuen to man, not contrariwiſe. 4. When we are reuiled we muſt reſt content; when wee are praiſed to our faces or otherwiſe, we muſt take heed. For then Satan ſtands at our right hand to puffe vs vp, and conſequently to ouerthrow vs. It is a true ſaying, that temptations on the right hand D are farre more dangerous, then thoſe on the left. In the fift place, Pauls reaſon to diſſwade from this ſinne, is taken from two euill fruits of it, Contention, and Enuie, prouoking one another, enuying one another. Men that are ambitious, if they be croſſed in their courſes, grow contentious, if they proſper in the world, then are they enuied by others. Reade for this purpoſe the hiſtorie of Samuel and Saul, 1. Sam. 15. Seeing then vaine-glorie hath ſo bad fruits iſſuing from it, it muſt teach vs to abhorre and deteſt it with all our hearts, and on the contrarie to ſeeke by all meanes poſſible to preſerue and maintaine loue in the whole courſe of our liues.

RIGHT Worſhipfull, hauing beene licenſed ſome yeare agoe (according to the ancient laudable cuſtome of the Vniuerſitie) to interpret S. Pauls Epiſtles: and then earneſtly intreated by M. Perkins his Executor, and others his friends, (which had ſome intereſt in me) to ſupply that which was defectiue in his Commentarie vpon the Galatians: ouercome at the laſt by their importunitie, I undertooke the buſineſſe, making triall of my ſimple facultie in this ſhort Chapter, which I haue here according to my poore talent, finiſhed: Yet not daring to publiſh it to the view of the world, without premiſing ſomewhat in way of excuſe for my boldneſſe. For if Hirtius, or (as others thinke) Oppius, beeing importuned by his friend to continue the Commentaries which Cæſar left vnfiniſhed, durſt not preſume to make a Supply, without making firſt an Apologie for himſelfe, for attempting to take in hand ſo great a taske, ſeeming therein to compare with him who was incomparable: Iuſt cauſe haue I to excuſe my ſelfe for this my bold attempt, in vndertaking to equall him, who in the iudgement of all (ſaue ſuch, as eſteeme of Writers by tale and not by touch) is ſo ſubſtantiall, conciſe, exact, methodicall, that (as it is ſaid of Cæſar) he hath diſcouraged wiſe men from writing. But ſeeing I doe not in the vaine confidence of mine owne ſufficiencie, or exactnes of the worke, proclaime a challenge to all mens cenſures: nor yet take vpon me (as (a) ſome haue done in other writers) ſo to carrie the Author along, that the Reader ſhall not perceiue but that he is ſtill reading him, nor know where he endeth, or where I begin (for that beeing impoſſible to attaine, were folly to attempt:) but onely to finiſh that which otherwiſe ſhould haue beene imperfect, to ſatisfie the requeſt of my friends, aed to helpe forward the Lords building, though not as a maſter builder with hewen ſtones, or poliſhed Saphirs: yet as a ſeruer and vnderlabourer as it were with a handfull of rubbiſh. I hope I ſhall obtaine (at leaſt) this fauourable conſtruction, to be thought as farre from vanitie herein, as my conſcience doth witneſſe with me I did it in ſimplicitie, and without affectation of ſingularitie. And if it were no preſumption in Gillebertus to finiſh Bernards Sermons vpon the Canticles, nor in Clichtoueus to ſupply (b) foure bookes which were wanting in Cyrils Commentaries vpon Iohn, nor in Wolfius, Reuterus, and other moderne writers, to continue the Commentaries of Martyr, Zanchius, &c. but rather workes worthie of great commendation, and deſeruing well of the Church of God: I truſt it will not be imputed to me as a vice, which in others is accounted as a vertue. Further, if I ſhall ſeeme to any with the vnskilfull limmer to haue ioyned humano capiti, ceruicem equinam, in that I exceede as much the other part in prolixitie, as I come ſhort of it in dexteritie, I hope I ſhall the more eaſily obtaine pardon, conſidering it was my firſt draught, not hauing taken penſill in hand before: and ſeeing the worke I was to finiſh, was capur Veneris, the faire face of Venus, I choſe rather (becauſe I could not hit of the iuſt proportion which I aimed at) to exceede meaſure a little, then to be defectiue: thinking thereby to ſute them the better, ſeeing beautie or faires (to ſpeake more properly) conſiſts onely in greatnes, as the Philoſopher ſaith. And ſome perhaps may thinke that it falleth out well, in that I haue giuen it more bodie, becauſe it had leſſe ſpirit. But what others thinke or ſay (for as in other things, ſo in this, lookers on will haue their words) it skilleth not, ſo I may haue the approbation of the godly and well affected Reader: eſpecially your VVorſhipfull Patronage, to whome I humbly commend it, as the firſt fruits of my labours, a ſimple flower growing in a ſchollers garden: deſiring it may be ſuffered to grow either in the ſhadow or ſunneſhine of your protection, that ſo of the godly it may be better accepted and of the caterpiller the leſſe touched: (thoſe I meane which will correct the Verbe before they vnderſtand the Nowne, condemning that which they ought rather to commend, at leaſt which they cannot amend.) Vouchſafe therefore Right Worſhipful, to receiue this poore preſent, as a pledge of my vnfained loue, & humble duty: and a teſtimonie of my thankefulneſſe to God for his manifold graces of prudence, iuſtice, ſobrietie, meekeneſſe, humilitie, liberalitie, beſtowed vpon you, eſpecially your loue of his truth, and continuall meditation in his word: which was the thing that mooued me (all by-reſpects ſet aſide) to offer this Commentarie to your view, and to haue it graced with your countenance: that by this meanes I might the more ſtirre vp and kindle (if it were poſſible) your loue and liking of the word, by adding fewel to the fire, and oyle to the flame. It is recorded of Theodoſius the ſecond, that he writ the New Teſtament ouer with his owne hand: and of Alphonſus King of Spaine and Naples: that he read the Bible 14. times ouer with the ordinarie Gloſſe (the beſt helpe he had in thoſe daies.) And I doubt not but that you will peruſe this expoſition at your leiſure, and ſtill continue to reade the holy Scripture as hitherto you haue done, and ſo be anſwerable to that which is voiced of you, and to that extraordinarie commendation which your faithfull Paſtour hath often giuen of your diligence and dexteritie in that behalfe. Now let me adde this one thing, that though there be not the like efficacie

And this guide is either the outward, or the inward guide: the outward guide (I ſpeake of reading onely) is a Commentarie, eſpecially ſuch a one as a ſanctified ſpirit hath much breathed vpon: ſeeing it is the beſt learning the Theoricke of him which is ſkilfull in the Practicke. The inward guide, is the ſpirit of Reuelation, which dwelleth onely in an humble, docible, and obedient heart, which whoſoeuer bringeth, hath a promiſe that he ſhall know the truth, Ioh. 7.17. and vnderſtand the ſecrets of God, Pſal. 25.14. and without which the Scriptures are but as a Riddle or a claſped booke. But I forget my ſelfe very much in taking vpon me to read a lecture to ſuch an exerciſed ſcholler in the booke of God. CHAP. VI.

1. Brethren, if a man be fallen by occaſion into any fault, ye which are ſpirituall, reſtore ſuch a one with the ſpirit of meekenes, conſidering thy ſelfe, leſt thou alſo be tempted.

THE Apoſtle hauing finiſhed the firſt part of the Inſtruction, touching the faith of the Galatians in the 12. ver. of the 5. Chap. in the 13. verſe he comes to the ſecond part, touching good life, which continues to the 11. verſe of the 6. Chapter, in which he firſt propounds the ſumme of his doctrine, v. 13. Secondly, hee makes particular declaration thereof. In the ſumme of his doctrine, firſt, he ſets downe the ground of all good duties, which is, their calling to Chriſtian libertie. Secondly, two rules of good life. The firſt, that we muſt not vſe our libertie as an occaſion to the fleſh; which is illuſtrated and handled in particular, from the 16. v. to the 26. The ſecond, that we muſt ſerue one another in loue, which is amplified from the 26. to the 11. verſe of this Chapter. In handling whereof, he firſt remooues the impediments of loue, as vaine-glorie, enuie, &c. verſ. 26. Secondly, hee preſcribes the manner, how it is to be obſerued, and practiſed, by ſundrie ſpeciall rules: the firſt wherof is contained in this 1. verſe: where wee may obſerue theſe two generall points. Firſt, the dutie preſcribed. Secondly, the reaſons to vrge the performance thereof. The duty is, the reſtoring of our brethren: where we are to conſider foure things. Firſt, the duty it ſelfe, reſtore. Secondly, the perſons who are to be reſtored, they that are ouertaken by any offence. Thirdly, the perſons that muſt reſtore, thoſe that are ſpirituall. Fourthly, the manner how, in the ſpirit of meekeneſſe.

καταρτίζειν. For the firſt, the duty is ſet downe in the word reſtore, which in the Originall ſignifies, to ſet a ioynt, or bone that is broken; ſo as it may become as ſtrong and ſound, as euer it was: ſo the word is vſed, Matth. 21. 16.

By this we learne ſundrie things. Firſt, that it is the nature of ſinne, to ſet all things out of order. It was the ſinne of Achan that troubled the Iewes, Ioſ. 7. 25. It was the ſinne of Ahab that troubled Iſrael, 1. King. 18. 18. the ſinne of falſe Apoſtles that troubled the Galatians. Gal. 5. 10. Nay, it driues men beſide themſelues, as appeares in the example of the prodigall ſonne, who repenting of his ſinne, is ſaid to haue come to himſelfe. Luk. 15. 17. Small A ſinnes are like to ſlips and ſlidings, whereby men fall and hurt themſelues, but great ſins are like downefals: for as they wound, lame, diſioynt, or breake ſome member of the bodie; ſo theſe doe wound and waſt the conſcience. Therefore as we are carefull for our bodies, to auoid downfalles; ſo ought we to be as carefull, nay a thouſand times more carefull for our ſoules, to take heede of the downefall of ſinne, or falling away from grace. And as we ſhunne an yce or ſlipperie place, for feare of ſliding and falling: ſo ought we to ſhunne the ſmalleſt ſinnes and the leaſt occaſions of B ſinne, for feare of making a breach in conſcience. Secondly, I gather hence, that ſinners are not to deferre their repentance: nor thoſe that are to admoniſh, their reproofes: for ſinning, is the breaking of a bone, or diſioynting of a member: and reproofe, is the ſetting of it in order againe. Now the ſooner a bone newly broken, or out of ioynt, is ſet, the ſooner it is reſtored to his right frame, and cured: So, the ſooner a man after his fall is admoniſhed, the ſooner and more eaſily ſhall he be able to recouer himſelfe. Thirdly, this ſhewes, that it is a point of great skill, to bring a ſoule in or- C der and frame againe. There is great dexteritie required in ſetting a bone, and Chirurgians finde it a matter of great difficultie, to ſet a ioynt; much more difficultie is there in the ſoule: and therfore as it is not for euery horſleach to meddle with ſetting of bones: no more is it for vnskilfull workmen to temper with mens ſoules. This is one ſpeciall reaſon why Paul ſaith, They that are ſpirituall ought to reſtore them that are fallen. Fourthly, hence we are taught, not to wonder, though ſinners be ſo loath to be reprooued, and account it ſo D painefull a thing to bee reſtored, and thinke thoſe offenſiue vnto them, and skarſe their friends, which labour to reclaime them: conſidering the ſame is to be ſeene in the bodie: for hee that hath a bone broken, or out of ioynt, can hardly endure to haue it touched, or pointed at. Laſtly, in that Saint Paul commands thoſe that are ſpiritual to reſtore them that are fallen, and preſcribes not how often, but ſpeakes indefinitely: we learne that as often, as our brother falleth, wee muſt reſtore him; for as we are not to forgiue our brother once or twiſe, or ſeauen times, (which Peter thought very much) but euen ſeauentie times ſeauen times, that is, as often as he ſinneth againſt vs, Matth. 18. ſo wee may not reſtore our brother, twiſe, or thriſe onely, but toties, quoties: as often as hee ſhall ſinne againſt vs. Matth. 18. If he ſinne againſt thee, goe and tell him of his fault, &c. Therefore it were to bee wiſhed, that as men haue a care to reſtore their decaied limmes, ſo they would reſtore their brethren beeing fallen into any ſinne, euen becauſe they are fellow members of the ſame myſticall bodie.

The ſecond thing to be conſidered, is the perſon to be reſtored, and that is, euery one that is preuented and ouertaken, either by the ſleight of Sathan, or allurement of the world, or ſuggeſtions of his owne fleſh: (ſo he ſinne not againſt the holy Ghoſt, nor openly ſkorne religion, and diſcipline,) as Peter who fell beeing ouertaken with ouermuch feare, and Dauid with ouermuch pleaſure. Hence we ſee the ſubtilty of Sathan; who is alwaies tripping at the heele, labouring to ſupplant vs; as alſo the deceitfulneſſe of ſinne, preuenting and ouertaking vs, before we be aware. We are therefore to be circumſpect & carefull, leſt we be ſupplanted. The Apoſtle admoniſheth vs to take heede leſt we be hardened through the deceitfulnes of ſinne. Heb.3.13. and, that we walke circumſpectly, not as fooles, but as wiſe. Eph.5.15. that we walke with a right foote. Gal. 2. 14. and, make ſtraight ſteppes vnto our feete, leſt that which is halting be turned out of the way. Heb.12.12. For as thoſe that wraſtle and trie maſteries, looke warily to themſelues, leſt they be ſupplanted by their aduerſaries: ſo ought we much more, conſidering, we wraſtle not againſt fleſh and blood, but againſt principalities and powers. Eph.6.12.

Againe whereas it is ſaid, if a man be ouertaken by any ſinne, he teacheth that no man is exempted from falling, or being ouertaken and ſupplanted by ſinne: for hee ſpeakes indefinitely, if a man, as S. Iohn doth: if any man ſinne, we haue an aduocate. 1.Ioh.2.1. This makes againſt the Catharists or Puritanes, who auouch, they neither haue ſinne, nor can ſinne: becauſe they be trees of righteouſneſſe, and a good tree cannot bring forth euill fruit.
